

BYRON

POETICAL WORKS

Byron's Complete Poetical and Dramatic Works were included in 'The Oxford Poets' in 1896. An edition printed from the same plates was included in the 'Oxford Standard Authors' in 1904 and many times reprinted. In 1945 the book was reset in larger and more attractive type and the text corrected where necessary.

HOURS OF IDLENESS

A SERIES OF POEMS ORIGINAL AND TRANSLATED

[First published in 1807]

'Virginibus puerisque canto.'—HORACE, lib. iii, Ode 1.

'Μήτ' ἄρ' με μάλ' αἶνεε, μήτε τι νείκει.'—HOMER, Iliad, x. 249.

'He whistled as he went, for want of thought.'—DRYDEN.

PREFACE TO THE FIRST EDITION

IN submitting to the public eye the following collection, I have not only to combat the difficulties that writers of verse generally encounter, but may incur the charge of presumption for obtruding myself on the world, when, without doubt, I might be, at my age, more usefully employed.

These productions are the fruits of the lighter hours of a young man who has lately completed his nineteenth year. As they bear the internal evidence of a boyish mind, this is, perhaps, unnecessary information. Some few were written during the disadvantages of illness and depression of spirits: under the former influence, 'CHILDISH RECOLLECTIONS,' in particular, were composed. This consideration, though it cannot excite the voice of praise, may at least arrest the arm of censure. A considerable portion of these poems has been privately printed, at the request and for the perusal of my friends. I am sensible that the partial and frequently injudicious admiration of a social circle is not the criterion by which poetical genius is to be estimated, yet 'to do greatly' we must 'dare greatly'; and I have hazarded my reputation and feelings in publishing this volume. I have 'passed the Rubicon,' and must stand or fall by the 'cast of the die.' In the latter event I shall submit without a murmur; for, though not without solicitude for the fate of these effusions, my expectations are by no means sanguine. It is probable that I may have dared much and done little; for, in the words of Cowper, 'it is one thing to write what may please our friends, who, because they are such, are apt to be a little biassed in our favour, and another to write what may please everybody; because they who have no connexion, or even knowledge of the author, will be sure to find fault if they can.' To the truth of this, however, I do not wholly subscribe; on the contrary, I feel convinced that these trifles will not be treated with injustice. Their merit, if they possess any, will be liberally allowed; their numerous faults, on the other hand, cannot expect that favour which has been denied to others of maturer years, decided character, and far greater ability.

I have not aimed at exclusive originality, still less have I studied any particular model for imitation; some translations are given, of which many are paraphrastic. In the original pieces there may appear a casual coincidence with authors whose works I have been accustomed to read; but I have not been guilty of intentional plagiarism. To produce anything entirely new, in an age so fertile in rhyme, would be a Herculean task, as every subject has already been treated to its utmost extent. Poetry, however, is not my primary vocation; to divert the dull moments of indisposition, or the monotony of a vacant hour, urged me 'to this sin': little can be expected from so unpromising a muse. My breath, scanty as it must be, is all I shall derive from these productions; and I shall never attempt to replace its fading leaves, or pluck a single additional sprig from groves where I am, at best, an intruder. Though accustomed, in my younger days, to rove a careless mountaineer on the Highlands of Scotland, I have not, of late years, had the benefit of such pure air, or so elevated a residence, as might enable me to enter the lists with genuine bards, who have enjoyed both these advantages. But they derive considerable fame, and a few not less profit, from their productions; while I shall expiate my rashness as an interloper, certainly without the latter, and in all probability with a very slight share of the former. I leave to others 'virum volitare per ora.' I look to the few who will hear with patience, 'dulce est desipere in loco.' To the former worthies I resign, without repining, the hope of immortality, and content myself with the not very magnificent prospect of ranking amongst 'the mob of gentlemen who write';—my readers must determine whether I dare say 'with ease,' or the honour of a posthumous page in 'The Catalogue of Royal and Noble Authors,'—a work to which the Peerage is under infinite obligations, inasmuch as many names of considerable length, sound, and antiquity, are thereby rescued from the obscurity which unluckily overshadows several voluminous productions of their illustrious bearers.

With slight hopes, and some fears, I publish this first and last attempt. To the dictates of young ambition may be ascribed many actions more criminal and equally absurd. To a few of my own age the contents may afford amusement; I trust they will, at least, be found harmless. It is highly improbable, from my situation and pursuits hereafter, that I should ever obtrude myself a second time on the public; nor even, in the very doubtful event of present indulgence, shall I be tempted to commit a future trespass of the same nature. The opinion of Dr. Johnson on the poems of a noble relation of mine*, 'That when a man of rank appeared in the character of an author, he deserved to have his merit handsomely allowed,' can have little weight with verbal, and still less with periodical, censors; but were it otherwise, I should be loth to avail myself of the privilege, and would rather incur the bitterest censure of anonymous criticism, than triumph in honours granted solely to a title.

* The Earl of Carlisle, whose works have long received the meed of public applause, to which, by their intrinsic worth, they were well entitled.

TO

THE RIGHT HONOURABLE FREDERICK, EARL OF CARLISLE,

KNIGHT OF THE GARTER, ETC., ETC.,

THE SECOND EDITION OF THESE POEMS IS INSCRIBED,

BY HIS OBLIGED WARD AND AFFECTIONATE KINSMAN,

THE AUTHOR.

ON THE DEATH OF A YOUNG LADY

Cousin to the Author, and very dear to him.

HUSH'D are the winds, and still the evening gloom,

Not e'en a zephyr wanders through the grove,

Whilst I return, to view my Margaret's tomb,

And scatter flowers on the dust I love.

Within this narrow cell reclines her clay,
That clay, where once such animation beam'd;

The King of Terrors seized her as his prey,

Not worth nor beauty have her life redeem'd.

Oh! could that King of Terrors pity feel,
Or Heaven reverse the dread decrees of fate,

Not here the mourner would his grief reveal,

Not here the muse her virtues would relate.

But wherefore weep? Her matchless spirit soars

Beyond where splendid shines the orb of day;

And weeping angels lead her to those bowers

Where endless pleasures virtue's deeds repay.

And shall presumptuous mortals Heaven arraign,

And, madly, godlike Providence accuse?

Ah! no, far fly from me attempts so vain;—

I'll ne'er submission to my God refuse.

Yet is remembrance of those virtues dear,
Yet fresh the memory of that beauteous face;

Still they call forth my warm affection's tear,

Still in my heart retain their wonted place.

TO E—

LET Folly smile, to view the names
Of thee and me in friendship twined;
Yet Virtue will have greater claims
To love, than rank with vice combined.

And though unequal is thy fate,
Since title deck'd my higher birth!

Yet envy not this gaudy state;
Thine is the pride of modest worth.

Our souls at least congenial meet,
Nor can thy lot my rank disgrace;

Our intercourse is not less sweet,
Since worth of rank supplies the place.

November 1802.

TO D—

IN thee I fondly hoped to clasp
A friend whom death alone could sever;
Till envy, with malignant grasp,
Detach'd thee from my breast for ever.

True, she has forced thee from my breast,

Yet in my heart thou keep'st thy seat;
There, there thine image still must rest,
Until that heart shall cease to beat.

And when the grave restores her dead,
When life again to dust is given,

On thy dear breast I'll lay my head—
Without thee where would be my heaven?

February 1803.

EPITAPH ON A FRIEND

Ἀσπὴρ πρὶν μὲν ἑλαμπες ἐνὶ ζωοῖσιν ἔφθος.

LAERT.

OH, Friend! for ever loved, for ever dear!
What fruitless tears have bathed thy honour'd bier!

What sighs re-echo'd to thy parting breath,
Whilst thou wast struggling in the pangs of death!

Could tears retard the tyrant in his course;

Could sighs avert his dart's relentless
force;

Could youth and virtue claim a short delay,

Or beauty charm the spectre from his
prey;

Thou still hadst lived to bless my aching
sight,

Thy comrade's honour and thy friend's delight.

If yet thy gentle spirit hover nigh
The spot where now thy mouldering ashes lie,

Here wilt thou read, recorded on my
heart,

A grief too deep to trust the sculptor's art.
No marble marks thy couch of lowly
sleep,

But living statues there are seen to weep;
Affliction's semblance bends not o'er thy
tomb,

Affliction's self deplores thy youthful doom.

What though thy sire lament his failing
line,

A father's sorrows cannot equal mine!
Though none, like thee, his dying hour will cheer,

Yet other offspring soothe his anguish
here:

But who with me shall hold thy former
place?

Thine image what new friendship can efface?

Ah, none!—a father's tears will cease to
flow,

Time will assuage an infant brother's woe;
To all, save one, is consolation known,
While solitary friendship sighs alone.

1803.

A FRAGMENT

WHEN, to their airy hall, my fathers' voice
Shall call my spirit, joyful in their choice;

When, poised upon the gale, my form shall ride,

Or, dark in mist, descend the mountain's
side;

Oh! may my shade behold no sculptured
urns,

To mark the spot where earth to earth returns!

No lengthen'd scroll, no praise-encumber'd stone;

My epitaph shall be my name alone:

If that with honour fail to crown my clay,
Oh! may no other fame my deeds repay!

That, only that, shall single out the spot;
By that remember'd, or with that forgot.

ON LEAVING NEWSTEAD
ABBEY

'Why dost thou build the hall, son of the winged days? Thou lookest from thy tower to-day: yet a few years, and the blast of the desert comes, it howls in thy empty court.'—OSSIAN.

THROUGH thy battlements, Newstead,
the hollow winds whistle;

Thou, the hall of my fathers, art gone to decay;

In thy once smiling garden, the hemlock and thistle

Have choked up the rose which late bloom'd in the way.

Of the mail-cover'd Barons, who proudly to battle

Led their vassals from Europe to Palestine's plain,

The escutcheon and shield, which with every blast rattle,

Are the only sad vestiges now that remain.

No more doth old Robert, with harp-stringing numbers,

Raise a flame in the breast for the warlaurell'd wreath;

Near Askalon's towers, John of Horistan
slumbers,

Unnerved is the hand of his minstrel by
death.

Paul and Hubert, too, sleep in the valley of Cressy;

For the safety of Edward and England
they fell:

My fathers! the tears of your country redress ye;

How you fought, how you died, still her annals can tell.

On Marston, with Rupert, 'gainst traitors contending,

Four brothers enrich'd with their blood
the bleak field;

For the rights of a monarch their country defending,

Till death their attachment to royalty seal'd.

Shades of heroes, farewell! your descendant, departing

From the seat of his ancestors, bids you
adieu!

HOURS OF IDLENESS

Abroad, or at home, your remembrance imparting
New courage, he'll think upon glory
and you.

Though a tear dim his eye at this sad separation,²⁵
'Tis nature, not fear, that excites his regret;
Far distant he goes, with the same emula-
tion,
The fame of his fathers he ne'er can forget.

That fame, and that memory, still will he cherish;
He vows that he ne'er will disgrace your renown:³⁰
Like you will he live, or like you will he perish;
When decay'd, may he mingle his dust with your own!

hearts,

Exist but in imagination,—
Mere phantoms of thine own creation;
For he who views that witching grace,⁵
That perfect form, that lovely face,
With eyes admiring, oh! believe me,
He never wishes to deceive thee:
Once in thy polish'd mirror glance,
Thou'lt there descry that elegance¹⁰
Which from our sex demands such praises,
But envy in the other raises:
Then he who tells thee of thy beauty,
Believe me, only does his duty:
Ah! fly not from the candid youth;¹⁵
It is not flattery,—'tis truth.

ADRIAN'S ADDRESS TO HIS SOUL WHEN DYING

[ANIMULA! vagula, blandula, Hospes comesque corporis,
Quæ nunc abibis in loca—
Pallidula, rigida, nudula,
Nec, ut soles, dabis jocos?]

AH! gentle, fleeting, wav'ring sprite,
Friend and associate of this clay!
To what unknown region borne,

Wilt thou now wing thy distant flight?
No more with wonted humour gay,⁵
But pallid, cheerless, and forlorn.

TRANSLATION FROM CATULLUS

AD LESBIAM

EQUAL to Jove that youth must be—Greater than Jove he seems to me—
Who, free from Jealousy's alarms, Securely views thy matchless charms.
That cheek, which ever dimpling glows,⁵
That mouth, from whence such music
flows,

To him, alike, are always known,
Reserved for him, and him alone.
Ah! Lesbia! though 'tis death to me,
I cannot choose but look on thee;¹⁰
But, at the sight, my senses fly;
I needs must gaze, but, gazing, die;
Whilst trembling with a thousand fears,
Parch'd to the throat my tongue adheres,
My pulse beats quick, my breath heaves¹⁵
short,

My limbs deny their slight support,
Cold dews my pallid face o'erspread,
With deadly languor droops my head,
My ears with tingling echoes ring,
And life itself is on the wing;²⁰
My eyes refuse the cheering light,
Their orbs are veil'd in starless night:
Such pangs my nature sinks beneath,
And feels a temporary death.

TRANSLATION OF THE EPITAPH ON VIRGIL AND TIBULLUS

BY DOMITIUS MARSUS

HE who sublime in epic numbers roll'd,
And he who struck the softer lyre of
love,
By Death's unequal hand alike controll'd,
Fit comrades in Elysian regions move!

IMITATION OF TIBULLUS

'Sulpicia ad Cerinthus.'—Lib. iv.

CRUEL Cerinthus! does the fell disease Which racks my breast your fickle bosom
please?

Alas! I wish'd but to o'ercome the pain,
That I might live for love and you again;
But now I scarcely shall bewail my fate:
By death alone I can avoid your hate.

[Lugete, Veneres, Cupidinesque, &c.]

YE Cupids, droop each little head,
Nor let your wings with joy be spread;
My Lesbia's favourite bird is dead,
Whom dearer than her eyes she loved:

For he was gentle, and so true,
Obedient to her call he flew,
No fear, no wild alarm he knew,
But lightly o'er her bosom moved:

And softly fluttering here and there,
He never sought to cleave the air,
But chirrup'd oft, and, free from care,
Tuned to her ear his grateful strain.
Now having pass'd the gloomy bourne
From whence he never can return,
His death and Lesbia's grief I mourn,
Who sighs, alas! but sighs in vain.

Oh! curst be thou, devouring grave!
Whose jaws eternal victims crave,
From whom no earthly power can save,
For thou hast ta'en the bird away:
From thee my Lesbia's eyes o'erflow,
Her swollen cheeks with weeping glow;
Thou art the cause of all her woe,
Receptacle of life's decay.

IMITATED FROM CATULLUS

TO ELLEN

Oh! might I kiss those eyes of fire,
A million scarce would quench desire:
Still would I steep my lips in bliss,
And dwell an age on every kiss:
Nor then my soul should sated be;
Still would I kiss and cling to thee:
Nought should my kiss from thine dis-sever;
Still would we kiss and kiss for ever;
E'en though the numbers did exceed
The yellow harvest's countless seed.
To part would be a vain endeavour:
Could I desist?—ah! never—never!

TRANSLATION FROM HORACE

[Justum et tenacem propositi virum, &c.]

THE man of firm and noble soul
No factious clamours can control;
No threat'ning tyrant's darkling brow
Can swerve him from his just intent:
Gales the warring waves which plough,
By Auster on the billows spent,
To curb the Adriatic main,
Would awe his fix'd, determined mind in
vain.

Ay, and the red right arm of Jove,
Hurling his lightnings from above,
With all his terrors there unfurl'd,
He would unmoved, unawed, behold.
The flames of an expiring world,
Again in crashing chaos roll'd,
In vast promiscuous ruin hurl'd,
Might light his glorious funeral pile:
Still dauntless 'midst the wreck of earth he'd smile.

[Θέλω λέγειν Ἀτρείδας, κ. τ. λ.]

I WISH to tune my quivering lyre
To deeds of fame and notes of fire;
To echo, from its rising swell,
How heroes fought and nations fell,
When Atreus' sons advanced to war,
Or Tyrian Cadmus roved afar;
But still, to martial strains unknown,
My lyre recurs to love alone.
Fired with the hope of future fame,
I seek some nobler hero's name;
The dying chords are strung anew,
To war, to war, my harp is due:
With glowing strings, the epic strain
To Jove's great son I raise again;
Alcides and his glorious deeds,
Beneath whose arm the Hydra bleeds.
All, all in vain; my wayward lyre
Wakes silver notes of soft desire.
Adieu, ye chiefs renown'd in arms!
Adieu the clang of war's alarms!
To other deeds my soul is strung,
And sweeter notes shall now be sung;
My harp shall all its powers reveal,
To tell the tale my heart must feel;
Love, love alone, my lyre shall claim,
In songs of bliss and sighs of flame.

[Μεσονυκτίοις ποθ' ὄραις, κ. τ. λ.]

'Twas now the hour when Night had driven
Her car half round yon sable heaven;
Boötes, only, seem'd to roll
His arctic charge around the pole;
While mortals, lost in gentle sleep,
Forgot to smile, or ceased to weep:
At this lone hour the Paphian boy,
Descending from the realms of joy,
Quick to my gate directs his course,
And knocks with all his little force.
My visions fled, alarm'd I rose,—
'What stranger breaks my blest repose?'
'Alas!' replies the wily child,
In faltering accents sweetly mild,
'A hapless infant here I roam,
Far from my dear maternal home.
Oh! shield me from the wintry blast!
The nightly storm is pouring fast.
No prowling robber lingers here.
A wandering baby who can fear?'
I heard his seeming artless tale,
I heard his sighs upon the gale:
My breast was never pity's foe,
But felt for all the baby's woe.
I drew the bar, and by the light
Young Love, the infant, met my sight;
His bow across his shoulders flung,
And thence his fatal quiver hung (Ah! little did I think the dart Would rankle soon within my heart).

HOURS OF IDLENESS

With care I tend my weary guest,
His little fingers chill my breast;
His glossy curls, his azure wing,
Which droop with nightly showers,
I wring; 34
His shivering limbs the embers warm;
And now reviving from the storm,
Scarce had he felt his wonted glow,
Than swift he seized his slender bow:—
'I fain would know, my gentle host,'
He cried, 'if this its strength has lost; 40
I fear, relax'd with midnight dews,
The strings their former aid refuse.'
With poison tipt, his arrow flies,
Deep in my tortured heart it lies; 44
Then loud the joyous urchin laugh'd:—
'My bow can still impel the shaft:
'Tis firmly fix'd, thy sighs reveal it;
Say, courteous host, canst thou not feel
it?'

FROM THE PROMETHEUS VINCTUS OF ÆSCHYLUS

[Μηδῆμ' ὁ πάντα νέμων, κ. τ. λ.]

GREAT Jove, to whose almighty throne
Both gods and mortals homage pay,
Ne'er may my soul thy power disown,
Thy dread behests ne'er disobey.
Off shall the sacred victim fall 5
In sea-girt Ocean's mossy hall;
My voice shall raise no impious strain
'Gainst him who rules the sky and azure
main.

How different now thy joyless fate,
Since first Hesiote thy bride, 10
When placed aloft in godlike state,
The blushing beauty by thy side,
Thou sat'st, while reverend Ocean
smiled,
And mirthful strains the hours beguiled;
The Nymphs and Tritons danced
around, 15
Nor yet thy doom was fix'd, nor Jove relentless frown'd.

HARROW, Dec. 1, 1804.

TO EMMA

SINCE now the hour is come at last,
When you must quit your anxious lover;
Since now our dream of bliss is past,
One pang, my girl, and all is over.
Alas! that pang will be severe, 5
Which bids us part to meet no more;
Which tears me far from one so dear,
Departing for a distant shore.
Well! we have pass'd some happy hours,
And joy will mingle with our tears; 10
When thinking on these ancient towers,
The shelter of our infant years;

Where from this Gothic casement's
height,
We view'd the lake, the park, the dell,
And still, though tears obstruct our sight,
We lingering look a last farewell, 16
O'er fields through which we used to run,
And spend the hours in childish play;
O'er shades where, when our race was
done,
Reposing on my breast you lay; 20
Whilst I, admiring, too remiss,
Forgot to scare the hovering flies,
Yet envied every fly the kiss
It dared to give your slumbering eyes:
See still the little painted bark, 25
In which I row'd you o'er the lake;
See there, high waving o'er the park,
The elm I clamber'd for your sake.

These times are past—our joys are gone,
You leave me, leave this happy vale;
These scenes I must retrace alone: 31
Without thee what will they avail?

Who can conceive, who has not proved,
The anguish of a last embrace?
When, torn from all you fondly loved,
You bid a long adieu to peace. 36

This is the deepest of our woes,
For this these tears our cheeks bedew;
This is of love the final close,
Oh, God! the fondest, last adieu! 40

TO M. S. G.

WHENE'ER I view those lips of thine,
Their hue invites my fervent kiss;
Yet I forego that bliss divine,
Alas! it were unhallow'd bliss.

Whene'er I dream of that pure breast, 5
How could I dwell upon its snows!
Yet is the daring wish repress,
For that—would banish its repose.

A glance from thy soul-searching eye
Can raise with hope, depress with fear;
Yet I conceal my love,—and why? 11
I would not force a painful tear.

I ne'er have told my love, yet thou
Hast seen my ardent flame too well;
And shall I plead my passion now, 15
To make thy bosom's heaven a hell?

No! for thou never canst be mine,
United by the priest's decree:
By any ties but those divine,
Mine, my beloved, thou ne'er shalt be.

Then let the secret fire consume, 21
Let it consume, thou shalt not know:
With joy I court a certain doom,
Rather than spread its guilty glow.

I will not ease my tortured heart 25
 By driving dove-eyed peace from thine;
 Rather than such a sting impart,
 Each thought presumptuous I resign.

Yes! yield those lips, for which I'd brave
 More than I here shall dare to tell; 30
 Thy innocence and mine to save,—
 I bid thee now a last farewell.

Yes! yield that breast, to seek despair,
 And hope no more thy soft embrace;
 Which to obtain my soul would dare 35
 All, all reproach, but thy disgrace.

At least from guilt shalt thou be free,
 No matron shall thy shame reprove;
 Though cureless pangs may prey on me,
 No martyr shalt thou be to love. 40

TO CAROLINE

THINK'ST thou I saw thy beauteous eyes,
 Suffused in tears, implore to stay;
 And heard unmoved thy plenteous sighs,
 Which said far more than words can say?

Though keen the grief thy tears exprest, 5
 When love and hope lay both o'er-
 thrown,
 Yet still, my girl, this bleeding breast
 Throbb'd with deep sorrow as thine
 own.

But when our cheeks with anguish glow'd,
 When thy sweet lips were join'd to mine,
 The tears that from my eyelids flow'd 11
 Were lost in those which fell from thine.

Thou couldst not feel my burning cheek, Thy gushing tears had quench'd its
 flame;
 And as thy tongue essay'd to speak, 15
 In signs alone it breathed my name.

And yet, my girl, we weep in vain,
 In vain our fate in sighs deplore;
 Remembrance only can remain,—
 But that will make us weep the more.

Again, thou best beloved, adieu! 21
 Ah! if thou canst, o'ercome regret;
 Nor let thy mind past joys review,—
 Our only hope is to forget!

TO CAROLINE

WHEN I hear you express an affection so
 warm,
 Ne'er think, my beloved, that I do not believe;
 For your lip would the soul of suspicion disarm,
 And your eye beams a ray which can never deceive.

Yet still this fond bosom regrets, while adoring, 5
 That love, like the leaf, must fall into the sere;
 That age will come on, when remembrance, deploring, Contemplates the scenes of her youth with a tear;

That the time must arrive, when, no longer retaining Their auburn, those locks must wave thin to the breeze, 10
 When a few silver hairs of those tresses remaining,
 Prove nature a prey to decay and disease.

'Tis this, my beloved, which spreads
 gloom o'er my features, Though I ne'er shall presume to arraign the decree
 Which God has proclaim'd as the fate of his creatures, 15
 In the death which one day will deprive you of me.

Mistake not, sweet sceptic, the cause of emotion,
 No doubt can the mind of your lover invade;
 He worships each look with such faithful devotion,
 A smile can enchant, or a tear can dissuade. 20

But as death, my beloved, soon or late shall o'ertake us,
 And our breasts, which alive with such sympathy glow,
 Will sleep in the grave till the blast shall awake us,
 When calling the dead, in earth's bosom laid low,—

Oh! then let us drain, while we may, draughts of pleasure, 25
 Which from passion like ours may unceasingly flow;
 Let us pass round the cup of love's bliss
 in full measure,
 And quaff the contents as our nectar
 below.

1805.

Oh! when shall the grave hide for ever my sorrow?
 Oh! when shall my soul wing her flight
 from this clay?
 The present is hell, and the coming tomorrow
 But brings, with new torture, the curse of to-day.

HOURS OF IDLENESS

From my eye flows no tear, from my lips flow no curses,
 I blast not the fiends who have hurl'd⁵
 me from bliss;
 For poor is the soul which bewailing rehearses
 Its querulous grief, when in anguish like this.

Was my eye, 'stead of tears, with red fury
 flakes bright'ning, Would my lips breathe a flame which no stream could assuage,¹⁰
 On our foes should my glance launch in vengeance its lightning, With transport my tongue give a loose to its rage.

But now tears and curses, alike unavailing,
 Would add to the souls of our tyrants
 delight;
 Could they view us our sad separation bewailing,¹⁵
 Their merciless hearts would rejoice at the sight.

Yet still, though we bend with a feign'd resignation,
 Life beams not for us with one ray that can cheer;
 Love and hope upon earth bring no more consolation;
 In the grave is our hope, for in life is our fear.²⁰

Oh! when, my adored, in the tomb will they place me,
 Since, in life, love and friendship for ever are fled?
 If again in the mansion of death I embrace thee,
 Perhaps they will leave unmolested the
 dead.^{1805.}

STANZAS TO A LADY, WITH THE POEMS OF CAMOËNS

THIS votive pledge of fond esteem,
 Perhaps, dear girl! for me thou'lt prize;
 It sings of Love's enchanting dream,
 A theme we never can despise.

Who blames it but the envious fool,⁵
 The old and disappointed maid;
 Or pupil of the prudish school,
 In single sorrow doom'd to fade?

Then read, dear girl! with feeling read,
 For thou wilt ne'er be one of those;
 To thee in vain I shall not plead¹¹
 In pity for the poet's woes.

He was in sooth a genuine bard;
 His was no faint, fictitious flame.
 Like his, may love be thy reward,¹⁵
 But not thy hapless fate the same.

THE FIRST KISS OF LOVE

*'Α βάρβυτος δὲ χορδαῖς
 "Ἐρῶτα μῶνον ἤχει.—ANACREON.*

AWAY with your fictions of flimsy romance;
 Those tissues of falsehood which folly has wove!
 Give me the mild beam of the soul-
 breathing glance,
 Or the rapture which dwells on the first kiss of love.

Ye rhymers, whose bosoms with phantasy
 glow,⁵ Whose pastoral passions are made for
 the grove;
 From what blest inspiration your sonnets
 would flow,
 Could you ever have tasted the first kiss
 of love!

If Apollo should e'er his assistance refuse,
 Or the Nine be disposed from your service to rove,¹⁰
 Invoke them no more, bid adieu to the
 muse,
 And try the effect of the first kiss of
 love.

I hate you, ye cold compositions of art!
 Though prudes may condemn me, and bigots reprove,
 I court the effusions that spring from the heart,¹⁵
 Which throbs with delight to the first kiss of love.

Your shepherds, your flocks, those fantastical themes,
 Perhaps may amuse, yet they never can
 move:
 Arcadia displays but a region of dreams:
 What are visions like these to the first kiss of love?²⁰

Oh! cease to affirm that man, since his
 birth,
 From Adam till now, has with wretchedness strove,
 Some portion of paradise still is on earth,
 And Eden revives in the first kiss of
 love.

When age chills the blood, when our pleasures are past—²⁵
 For years fleet away with the wings of the dove—
 The dearest remembrance will still be the
 last,
 Our sweetest memorial the first kiss of
 love.

ON A CHANGE OF MASTERS
AT A GREAT PUBLIC SCHOOL

WHERE are those honours, Ida! once your
own,
When Probus fill'd your magisterial
throne?

As ancient Rome, fast falling to disgrace,
Hail'd a barbarian in her Cæsar's place,
So you, degenerate, share as hard a fate,
And seat Pomposus where your Probus
sate. 6

Of narrow brain, yet of a narrower soul,
Pomposus holds you in his harsh control;
Pomposus, by no social virtue sway'd,
With florid jargon, and with vain parade;
With noisy nonsense, and new-fangled rules, 11

Such as were ne'er before enforced in schools.

Mistaking pedantry for learning's laws,
He governs, sanction'd but by self-applause;
With him the same dire fate attending
Rome, 15

Ill-fated Ida! soon must stamp your doom;
Like her o'erthrown, for ever lost to fame,
No trace of science left you, but the name.

July 1805.

TO THE DUKE OF DORSET

DORSET! whose early steps with mine have stray'd,

Exploring every path of Ida's glade;
Whom still affection taught me to defend,
And made me less a tyrant than a friend,
Though the harsh custom of our youthful band 5

Bade thee obey, and gave me to command;
Thee, on whose head a few short years will shower

The gift of riches and the pride of power;
E'en now a name illustrious is thine own, Renown'd in rank, nor far beneath the
throne. 10

Yet, Dorset, let not this seduce thy soul
To shun fair science, or evade control,
Though passive tutors, fearful to dispraise
The titled child, whose future breath may raise, 14

View ducal errors with indulgent eyes,
And wink at faults they tremble to chastise.

When youthful parasites, who bend the knee

To wealth, their golden idol, not to thee,—
And even in simple boyhood's opening dawn
Some slaves are found to flatter and to fawn,— 20

When these declare, 'that pomp alone should wait

On one by birth predestined to be great;
That books were only meant for drudging
fools,

That gallant spirits scorn the common rules;'

Believe them not;—they point the path to
shame, 25

And seek to blast the honours of thy
name.

Turn to the few in Ida's early throng, Whose souls disdain not to condemn the
wrong;

Or if, amidst the comrades of thy youth, None dare to raise the sterner voice of
truth, 30

Ask thine own heart; 'twill bid thee, boy,
forbear;

For well I know that virtue lingers there.
Yes! I have mark'd thee many a passing
day,

But now new scenes invite me far away;
Yes! I have mark'd within that generous
mind 35

A soul, if well matured, to bless mankind.
Ah! though myself by nature haughty,
wild,

Whom Indiscretion hail'd her favourite
child;

Though every error stamps me for her
own,

And dooms my fall, I fain would fall
alone; 40

Though my proud heart no precept now
can tame,

I love the virtues which I cannot claim.
'Tis not enough, with other sons of
power,

To gleam the lambent meteor of an hour;
To swell some peerage page in feeble
pride, 45

With long-drawn names that grace no page beside;

Then share with titled crowds the common lot—

In life just gazed at, in the grave forgot;
While nought divides thee from the vulgar
dead,

Except the dull cold stone that hides thy
head, 50

The mouldering 'scutcheon, or the herald's roll,

That well-emblazon'd but neglected scroll,
Where lords, unhonour'd, in the tomb may find

One spot, to leave a worthless name
behind.

There sleep, unnoticed as the gloomy
vaults 55

That veil their dust, their follies, and their faults,

A race, with old armorial lists o'erspread,
In records destined never to be read.

Fain would I view thee, with prophetic
eyes,

Exalted more among the good and wise,
A glorious and a long career pursue, 61

As first in rank, the first in talent too:

HOURS OF IDLENESS

Spurn every vice, each little meanness
 shun;
 Not Fortune's minion, but her noblest son.
 Turn to the annals of a former day; 65
 Bright are the deeds thine earlier sires display.
 One, though a courtier, lived a man of
 worth,
 And call'd, proud boast! the British drama forth.
 Another view, not less renown'd for wit;
 Alike for courts, and camps, or senates fit; 70
 Bold in the field, and favour'd by the Nine;
 In every splendid part ordain'd to shine;
 Far, far distinguish'd from the glittering
 throng,
 The pride of princes, and the boast of song.
 Such were thy fathers; thus preserve their
 name; 75
 Not heir to titles only, but to fame.
 The hour draws nigh, a few brief days will close,
 To me, this little scene of joys and woes;
 Each knell of Time now warns me to resign Shades where Hope, Peace, and Friendship all were mine: 80
 Hope, that could vary like the rainbow's
 hue,
 And gild their pinions as the moments flew;
 Peace, that reflection never frown'd away,
 By dreams of ill to cloud some future day;
 Friendship, whose truth let childhood only
 tell; 85
 Alas! they love not long, who love so well.
 To these adieu! nor let me linger o'er Scenes hail'd, as exiles hail their native
 shore,
 Receding slowly through the dark-blue
 deep, Beheld by eyes that mourn, yet cannot
 weep. 90
 Dorset, farewell! I will not ask one part
 Of sad remembrance in so young a heart;
 The coming morrow from thy youthful
 mind
 Will sweep my name, nor leave a trace behind.
 And yet, perhaps, in some maturer year,
 Since chance has thrown us in the self-same sphere, 96
 Since the same senate, nay, the same debate,
 May one day claim our suffrage for the
 state,
 We hence may meet, and pass each other
 by,
 With faint regard, or cold and distant
 eye. 100
 For me, in future, neither friend nor foe,
 A stranger to thyself, thy weal or woe,
 With thee no more again I hope to trace

The recollection of our early race;
 No more, as once, in social hours rejoice,
 Or hear, unless in crowds, thy well-known
 voice: 106
 Still, if the wishes of a heart untaught
 To veil those feelings which perchance it ought,
 If these—but let me cease the lengthen'd
 strain,— Oh! if these wishes are not breathed in
 vain, 110
 The guardian seraph who directs thy fate
 Will leave thee glorious, as he found thee
 great.
 1805.

FRAGMENT

WRITTEN SHORTLY AFTER THE MARRIAGE OF MISS CHAWORTH

HILLS of Annesley, bleak and barren,
 Where my thoughtless childhood stray'd,
 How the northern tempests, warring,
 Howl above thy tufted shade!
 Now no more, the hours beguiling, 5
 Former favourite haunts I see;
 Now no more my Mary smiling
 Makes ye seem a heaven to me.
 1805.

GRANTA

A MEDLEY

Ἀργυρέαις λόγχαισι μάχου καὶ πάντα κρατήσῃς.

Oh! could Le Sage's demon's gift
 Be realized at my desire,
 This night my trembling form he'd lift
 To place it on St. Mary's spire.
 Then would, unroof'd, old Granta's halls
 Pedantic inmates full display; 6
 Fellows who dream on lawn or stalls,
 The price of venal votes to pay.
 Then would I view each rival wight,
 Petty and Palmerston survey; 10
 Who canvass there with all their might,
 Against the next elective day.
 Lo! candidates and voters lie
 All lull'd in sleep, a goodly number;
 A race renown'd for piety, 15 Whose conscience won't disturb their slumber.
 Lord H——, indeed, may not demur:
 Fellows are sage, reflecting men:
 They know preferment can occur
 But very seldom,—now and then. 20
 They know the Chancellor has got
 Some pretty livings in disposal:
 Each hopes that one may be his lot,
 And therefore smiles on his proposal.

- Now from the soporific scene 25
 I'll turn mine eye, as night grows later,
 To view, unheeded and unseen,
 The studious sons of Alma Mater.
- There, in apartments small and damp,
 The candidate for college prizes 30
 Sits poring by the midnight lamp;
 Goes late to bed, yet early rises.
- He surely well deserves to gain them,
 With all the honours of his college,
 Who, striving hardly to obtain them, 35
 Thus seeks unprofitable knowledge:
- Who sacrifices hours of rest
 To scan precisely metres Attic;
 Or agitates his anxious breast
 In solving problems mathematic: 40
- Who reads false quantities in Seale,
 Or puzzles o'er the deep triangle;
 Deprived of many a wholesome meal;
 In barbarous Latin doom'd to wrangle:
- Renouncing every pleasing page 45
 From authors of historic use;
 Preferring to the letter'd sage
 The square of the hypotenuse.
- Still, harmless are these occupations,
 That hurt none but the hapless student,
 Compared with other recreations, 51
 Which bring together the imprudent;
- Whose daring revels shock the sight,
 When vice and infamy combine,
 When drunkenness and dice invite, 55
 As every sense is steep'd in wine.
- Not so the methodistic crew,
 Who plans of reformation lay:
 In humble attitude they sue,
 And for the sins of others pray: 60
- Forgetting that their pride of spirit,
 Their exultation in their trial,
 Detracts most largely from the merit
 Of all their boasted self-denial. 64
- 'Tis morn:—from these I turn my sight.
 What scene is this which meets the eye?
 A numerous crowd, array'd in white,
 Across the green in numbers fly.
- Loud rings in air the chapel bell;
 'Tis hush'd:—what sounds are these I 70
 hear?
 The organ's soft celestial swell
 Rolls deeply on the list'ning ear.
- To this is join'd the sacred song,
 The royal minstrel's hallow'd strain;
 Though he who hears the music long 75
 Will never wish to hear again.
- Our choir would scarcely be excused,
 Even as a band of raw beginners;
 All mercy now must be refused
 To such a set of croaking sinners. 80
- If David, when his toils were ended,
 Had heard these blockheads sing
 before him,
 To us his psalms had ne'er descended,—
 In furious mood he would have tore 'em.
- The luckless Israelites, when taken 85
 By some inhuman tyrant's order,
 Were ask'd to sing, by joy forsaken,
 On Babylonian river's border.
- Oh! had they sung in notes like these,
 Inspired by stratagem or fear, 90
 They might have set their hearts at ease,
 The devil a soul had stay'd to hear.
- But if I scribble longer now,
 The deuce a soul will stay to read;
 My pen is blunt, my ink is low; 95
 'Tis almost time to stop, indeed.
- Therefore, farewell, old Granta's spires!
 No more, like Cleofas, I fly;
 No more thy theme my muse inspires;
 The reader's tired, and so am I. 100

ON A DISTANT VIEW OF THE VILLAGE AND SCHOOL OF HARROW ON THE HILL

Oh! mihi præteritos referat si Jupiter annos.—
 VIRGIL.

- YE scenes of my childhood, whose loved recollection Embitters the present, compared with the past;
 Where science first dawn'd on the powers of reflection,
 And friendships were form'd, too
 romantic to last;
- Where fancy yet joys to trace the resemblance 5
 Of comrades, in friendship and mischief
 allied;
 How welcome to me your ne'er fading remembrance,
 Which rests in the bosom, though hope is denied!
- Again I revisit the hills where we sported,
 The streams where we swam, and the fields where we fought; 10
 The school where, loud warn'd by the bell, we resorted,
 To pore o'er the precepts by pedagogues taught.

HOURS OF IDLENESS

Again I behold where for hours I have
ponder'd,
As reclining, at eve, on yon tombstone
I lay;
Or round the steep brow of the churchyard I wander'd,
To catch the last gleam of the sun's setting ray.

I once more view the room, with spectators surrounded,
Where, as Zanga, I trod on Alonzo
o'erthrown;
While, to swell my young pride, such ap-
plauses resounded,
I fancied that Mossop himself was out-
shone: 20

Or, as Lear, I pour'd forth the deep impre-cation,
By my daughters of kingdom and reason deprived;
Till, fired by loud plaudits and self-adula-
tion,
I regarded myself as a Garrick revived.

Ye dreams of my boyhood, how much I regret you! 25
Unfaded your memory dwells in my
breast;
Though sad and deserted, I ne'er can forget you:
Your pleasures may still be in fancy
possest.

To Ida full oft may remembrance restore
me,
While fate shall the shades of the future
unroll! 30
Since darkness o'er shadows the prospect before me,
More dear is the beam of the past to my
soul!

But if, through the course of the years
which await me,
Some new scene of pleasure should open to view,
I will say, while with rapture the thought shall elate me, 35
'Oh! such were the days which my infancy knew.'

1806.

TO M—

OH! did those eyes, instead of fire,
With bright but mild affection shine,
Though they might kindle less desire,
Love, more than mortal, would be thine.

For thou art form'd so heavenly fair, 5
Howe'er those orbs may wildly beam,
We must admire, but still despair;
That fatal glance forbids esteem.

When Nature stamp'd thy beauteous birth,
So much perfection in thee shone, 10
She fear'd that, too divine for earth,
The skies might claim thee for their own:

Therefore, to guard her dearest work,
Lest angels might dispute the prize,
She bade a secret lightning lurk 15
Within those once celestial eyes.

These might the boldest sylph appal,
When gleaming with meridian blaze;
Thy beauty must enrapture all;
But who can dare thine ardent gaze? 20

'Tis said that Berenice's hair
In stars adorns the vault of heaven;
But they would ne'er permit thee there,
Thou wouldst so far outshine the seven.

For did those eyes as planets roll, 25
Thy sister-lights would scarce appear:
E'en suns, which systems now control,
Would twinkle dimly through their sphere.

1806.

TO WOMAN

WOMAN! experience might have told me
That all must love thee who behold thee:
Surely experience might have taught
Thy firmest promises are nought;
But, placed in all thy charms before me,
All I forget, but to adore thee. 6
Oh memory! thou choicest blessing
When join'd with hope, when still possessing;

But how much cursed by every lover
When hope is fled and passion's over, 10
Woman, that fair and fond deceiver,
How prompt are striplings to believe her!
How throbs the pulse when first we view
The eye that rolls in glossy blue,
Or sparkles black, or mildly throws 15
A beam from under hazel brows!
How quick we credit every oath,
And hear her plight the willing troth!
Fondly we hope 'twill last for aye,
When, lo! she changes in a day. 20
This record will for ever stand,
'Woman, thy vows are traced in sand.'

TO M. S. G.

WHEN I dream that you love me, you'll surely forgive;
Extend not your anger to sleep;
For in visions alone your affection can live,—
I rise, and it leaves me to weep.

Then, Morpheus! envelope my faculties
fast, 5
Shed o'er me your languor benign;
Should the dream of to-night but resemble the last,
What rapture celestial is mine!

They tell us that slumber, the sister of
 death,
 Mortality's emblem is given; 10
 To fate how I long to resign my frail breath
 If this be a foretaste of heaven!

Ah! frown not, sweet lady, unbend your soft brow,
 Nor deem me too happy in this; 14
 If I sin in my dream, I atone for it now,
 Thus doom'd but to gaze upon bliss.
 Though in visions, sweet lady, perhaps you may smile,
 Oh! think not my penance deficient!
 When dreams of your presence my slumbers beguile,
 To awake will be torture sufficient. 20

TO MARY

THIS faint resemblance of thy charms,
 Though strong as mortal art could give,
 My constant heart of fear disarms,
 Revives my hopes, and bids me live.

Here I can trace the locks of gold 5
 Which round thy snowy forehead wave,
 The cheeks which sprung from beauty's
 mould,
 The lips which made me beauty's slave.

Here I can trace—ah, no! that eye,
 Whose azure floats in liquid fire, 10
 Must all the painter's art defy,
 And bid him from the task retire.

Here I behold its beauteous hue;
 But where's the beam so sweetly stray-
 ing,
 Which gave a lustre to its blue, 15
 Like Luna o'er the ocean playing?

Sweet copy! far more dear to me,
 Lifeless, unfeeling as thou art,
 Than all the living forms could be,
 Save her who placed thee next my heart.

She placed it, sad, with needless fear, 21
 Lest time might shake my wavering
 soul,

Unconscious that her image there
 Held every sense in fast control.

Through hours, through years, through time, 'twill cheer; 25
 My hope, in gloomy moments, raise;
 In life's last conflict 'twill appear,
 And meet my fond expiring gaze.

TO LESBIA

LESBIA! since far from you I've ranged,
 Our souls with fond affection glow not;
 You say 'tis I, not you, have changed.
 I'd tell you why,—but yet I know not.

Your polish'd brow no cares have crost;
 And, Lesbia! we are not much older
 Since, trembling, first my heart I lost,
 Or told my love, with hope grown bolder.

Sixteen was then our utmost age,
 Two years have lingering pass'd away,
 love! 10
 And now new thoughts our minds engage,
 At least I feel disposed to stray, love!

'Tis I that am alone to blame,
 I, that am guilty of love's treason;
 Since your sweet breast is still the same, 15
 Caprice must be my only reason.

I do not, love! suspect your truth,
 With jealous doubt my bosom heaves
 not;
 Warm was the passion of my youth,
 One trace of dark deceit it leaves not.

No, no, my flame was not pretended; 21
 For, oh! I loved you most sincerely;
 And—though our dream at last is ended—
 My bosom still esteems you dearly.

No more we meet in yonder bowers; 25
 Absence has made me prone to roving;
 But older, firmer hearts than ours,
 Have found monotony in loving.

Your cheek's soft bloom is unimpaired,
 New beauties still are daily bright'ning,
 Your eye for conquest beams prepared,
 The forge of love's resistless lightning.

Arm'd thus, to make their bosoms bleed,
 Many will throng to sigh like me, love!
 More constant they may prove, indeed;
 Fonder, alas! they ne'er can be, love!

LINES ADDRESSED TO A YOUNG LADY

[As the author was discharging his pistols in a garden, two ladies passing near the spot were alarmed by the sound of a bullet hissing near them; to one of whom the following stanzas were addressed the next morning.]

DOUBTLESS, sweet girl! the hissing lead,
 Wafting destruction o'er thy charms,
 And hurtling o'er thy lovely head,
 Has fill'd that breast with fond alarms.

Surely some envious demon's force, 5
 Vex'd to behold such beauty here,
 Impell'd the bullet's viewless course,
 Diverted from its first career.

Yes! in that nearly fatal hour 9
 The ball obey'd some hell-born guide;
 But Heaven, with interposing power,
 In pity turn'd the death aside.

HOURS OF IDLENESS

Yet, as perchance one trembling tear
Upon that thrilling bosom fell;
Which I, th' unconscious cause of fear, 15
Extracted from its glistening cell:

Say, what dire penance can atone
For such an outrage done to thee?
Arraign'd before thy beauty's throne,
What punishment wilt thou decree?

Might I perform the judge's part, 21
The sentence I should scarce deplore;
It only would restore a heart
Which but belong'd to thee before.

The least atonement I can make 25
Is to become no longer free;
Henceforth I breathe but for thy sake,
Thou shalt be all in all to me.

But thou, perhaps, may'st now reject
Such expiation of my guilt; 30
Come then, some other mode elect;
Let it be death, or what thou wilt.

Choose then, relentless! and I swear
Nought shall thy dread decree prevent;

Yet hold—one little word forbear! 35
Let it be aught but banishment.

LOVE'S LAST ADIEU

'Ael ô' del me φεύγει.—ANACREON.

THE roses of love glad the garden of life,
Though nurtured 'mid weeds dropping pestilent dew,
Till time crops the leaves with unmerciful knife,
Or prunes them for ever, in love's last
adieu!

In vain with endearments we soothe the sad heart, 5
In vain do we vow for an age to be true;
The chance of an hour may command us
to part,
Or death disunite us in love's last adieu!

Still Hope, breathing peace through the grief-swollen breast,
Will whisper, 'Our meeting we yet may renew.' 10
With this dream of deceit half our sorrow's repress,
Nor tastew the poison of love's last adieu!

Oh! mark you yon pair: in the sunshine of youth
Love twined round their childhood his flowers as they grew; 14
They flourish awhile in the season of truth,
Till chill'd by the winter of love's last
adieu!

Sweet lady! why thus doth a tear steal its
way Down a cheek which outrivals thy bosom in hue?
Yet why do I ask?—to distraction a prey,
Thy reason has perish'd with love's last
adieu! 20

Oh! who is yon misanthrope, shunning
mankind?
From cities to caves of the forest he flew:
There, raving, he howls his complaint to
the wind;
The mountains reverberate love's last
adieu!

Now hate rules a heart which in love's easy chains 25
Once passion's tumultuous blandishments knew;
Despair now inflames the dark tide of his veins;
He ponders in frenzy on love's last
adieu!

How he envies the wretch with a soul
wrapt in steel!
His pleasures are scarce, yet his troubles are few, 30
Who laughs at the pang which he never can feel,
And dreads not the anguish of love's last adieu!

Youth flies, life decays, even hope is
o'ercast;
No more with love's former devotion
we sue:
He spreads his young wing, he retires with the blast; 35
The shroud of affection is love's last
adieu!

In this life of probation for rapture divine, Astrea declares that some penance is
due;
From him who has worshipp'd at love's
gentle shrine,
The atonement is ample in love's last
adieu! 40

Who kneels to the god, on his altar of
light
Must myrtle and cypress alternately
strew:
His myrtle, an emblem of purest delight;
His cypress, the garland of love's last
adieu!

DAMÆTAS

In law an infant, and in years a boy,
In mind a slave to every vicious joy;
From every sense of shame and virtue wean'd;
In lies an adept, in deceit a fiend;

Versed in hypocrisy, while yet a child; 5
 Fickle as wind, of inclinations wild;
 Woman his dupe, his heedless friend a tool;
 Old in the world, though scarcely broke from school;
 Dametas ran through all the maze of sin,
 And found the goal when others just begin: 10
 Even still conflicting passions shake his
 soul,
 And bid him drain the dregs of pleasure's
 bowl;
 But, pall'd with vice, he breaks his former
 chain,
 And what was once his bliss appears his bane.

TO MARION

MARION! why that pensive brow?
 What disgust to life hast thou?
 Change that discontented air;
 Frowns become not one so fair.
 'Tis not love disturbs thy rest, 5
 Love's a stranger to thy breast;
 He in dimpling smiles appears,
 Or mourns in sweetly timid tears,
 Or bends the languid eyelid down,
 But shuns the cold forbidding frown. 10
 Then resume thy former fire,
 Some will love, and all admire;
 While that icy aspect chills us,
 Nought but cool indifference thrills us.
 Wouldst thou wandering hearts beguile,
 Smile at least, or seem to smile. 16
 Eyes like thine were never meant
 To hide their orbs in dark restraint.
 Spite of all thou fain wouldst say,
 Still in truant beams they play. 20
 Thy lips—but here my modest Muse
 Her impulse chaste must needs refuse:
 She blushes, curt'sies, frowns,—in short
 she Dreads lest the subject should transport
 me;
 And flying off in search of reason, 25
 Brings prudence back in proper season.
 All I shall therefore say (what'er
 I think, is neither here nor there)
 Is, that such lips, of looks endearing,
 Were form'd for better things than sneer-
 ing: 30
 Of soothing compliments divested,
 Advice at least's disinterested;
 Such is my artless song to thee,
 From all the flow of flattery free;
 Counsel like mine is like a brother's, 35
 My heart is given to some others;
 That is to say, unskill'd to cozen,
 It shares itself among a dozen.

Marion, adieu! oh, pr'ythee slight not
 This warning, though it may delight not;

And, lest my precepts be displeasing 41
 To those who think remonstrance teasing:
 At once I'll tell thee our opinion
 Concerning woman's soft dominion:
 Howe'er we gaze with admiration 45
 On eyes of blue or lips carnation,
 Howe'er the flowing locks attract us,
 Howe'er those beauties may distract us,
 Still fickle, we are prone to rove,
 These cannot fix our souls to love; 50
 It is not too severe a stricture
 To say they form a pretty picture;
 But wouldst thou see the secret chain
 Which binds us in your humble train,
 To hail you queens of all creation, 55
 Know, in a word, 'tis ANIMATION.

TO A LADY

WHO PRESENTED TO THE AUTHOR A LOCK OF HAIR BRAIDED WITH HIS OWN, AND APPOINTED A NIGHT IN DECEMBER TO MEET HIM IN THE GARDEN

THESE locks, which fondly thus entwine,
 In firmer chains our hearts confine,
 Than all th' unmeaning protestations,
 Which swell with nonsense love orations.
 Our love is fix'd, I think we've proved it;
 Nor time, nor place, nor art have moved it;
 Then wherefore should we sigh and whine,
 With groundless jealousy repine,
 With silly whims and fancies frantic,
 Merely to make our love romantic? 10
 Why should you weep like Lydia Languish,
 And fret with self-created anguish?
 Or doom the lover you have chosen,
 On winter nights to sigh half frozen;
 In leafless shades to sue for pardon, 15
 Only because the scene's a garden?
 For gardens seem, by one consent,
 Since Shakspeare set the precedent,
 Since Juliet first declared her passion,
 To form the place of assignation. 20
 Oh! would some modern muse inspire,
 And seat her by a sea-coal fire;
 Or had the bard at Christmas written,
 And laid the scene of love in Britain,
 He surely, in commiseration, 25
 Had changed the place of declaration.
 In Italy I've no objection;
 Warm nights are proper for reflection;
 But here our climate is so rigid,
 That love itself is rather frigid: 30
 Think on our chilly situation,
 And curb this rage for imitation;
 Then let us meet, as oft we've done,
 Beneath the influence of the sun;
 Or, if at midnight I must meet you, 35
 Within your mansion let me greet you:
 There we can love for hours together,
 Much better, in such snowy weather,
 Than placed in all th' Arcadian groves
 That ever witness'd rural loves; 40

HOURS OF IDLENESS

Then, if my passion fail to please,
Next night I'll be content to freeze;
No more I'll give a loose to laughter
But curse my fate for ever after.

OSCAR OF ALVA

A TALE

How sweetly shines through azure skies,
The lamp of heaven on Lora's shore;
Where Alva's hoary turrets rise,
And hear the din of arms no more!

But often has yon rolling moon 5
On Alva's casques of silver play'd;
And view'd, at midnight's silent noon,
Her chiefs in gleaming mail array'd:

And on the crimson'd rocks beneath,
Which scowl o'er ocean's sullen flow,
Pale in the scatter'd ranks of death, 11
She saw the gasping warrior low;

While many an eye which ne'er again
Could mark the rising orb of day,
Turn'd feebly from the gory plain, 15
Beheld in death her fading ray.

Once to those eyes the lamp of Love,
They blest her dear propitious light;
But now she glimmer'd from above,
A sad, funereal torch of night. 20

Faded is Alva's noble race,
And gray her towers are seen afar;
No more her heroes urge the chase,
Or roll the crimson tide of war.

But who was last of Alva's clan? 25
Why grows the moss on Alva's stone?
Her towers resound no steps of man,
They echo to the gale alone.

And when that gale is fierce and high,
A sound is heard in yonder hall; 30
It rises hoarsely through the sky,
And vibrates o'er the mould'ring wall.

Yes, when the eddying tempest sighs,
It shakes the shield of Oscar brave;
But there no more his banners rise, 35
No more his plumes of sable wave.

Fair shone the sun on Oscar's birth,
When Angus hail'd his eldest born;
The vassals round their chieftain's hearth
Crowd to applaud the happy morn. 40

They feast upon the mountain deer,
The pibroch raised its piercing note;
To gladden more their highland cheer,
The strains in martial numbers float:

And they who heard the war-notes wild
Hoped that one day the pibroch's strain
Should play before the hero's child
While he should lead the tartan train.

Another year is quickly past,
And Angus hails another son; 50
His natal day is like the last,
Nor soon the jocund feast was done.

Taught by their sire to bend the bow,
On Alva's dusky hills of wind, 54
The boys in childhood chased the roe,
And left their hounds in speed behind.

But ere their years of youth are o'er,
They mingle in the ranks of war;
They lightly wheel the bright claymore,
And send the whistling arrow far. 60

Dark was the flow of Oscar's hair,
Wildly it stream'd along the gale;
But Allan's locks were bright and fair,
And pensive seem'd his cheek, and pale.

But Oscar own'd a hero's soul, 65
His dark eye shone through beams of
truth;
Allan had early learn'd control,
And smooth his words had been from
youth.

Both, both were brave; the Saxon spear
Was shiver'd oft beneath their steel; 70
And Oscar's bosom scorn'd to fear,
But Oscar's bosom knew to feel;

While Allan's soul belied his form,
Unworthy with such charms to dwell:
Keen as the lightning of the storm, 75
On foes his deadly vengeance fell.

From high Southannon's distant tower Arrived a young and noble dame;
With Kenneth's lands to form her dower, Glenalvon's blue-eyed daughter came;

And Oscar claim'd the beauteous bride,
And Angus on his Oscar smiled: 82
It soothed the father's feudal pride
Thus to obtain Glenalvon's child.

Hark to the pibroch's pleasing note! 85
Hark to the swelling nuptial song!
In joyous strains the voices float,
And still the choral peal prolong.

See how the heroes' blood-red plumes
Assembled wave in Alva's hall; 90
Each youth his varied plaid assumes,
Attending on their chieftain's call.

It is not war their aid demands,
The pibroch plays the song of peace;
To Oscar's nuptials throng the bands, 95
Nor yet the sounds of pleasure cease.

But where is Oscar? sure 'tis late:
Is this a bridegroom's ardent flame?
While thronging guests and ladies wait,
Nor Oscar nor his brother came. 100

- At length young Allan join'd the bride;
 'Why comes not Oscar?' Angus said:
 'Is he not here?' the youth replied;
 'With me he roved not o'er the glade:
- 'Perchance, forgetful of the day, 105
 'Tis his to chase the bounding roe;
 Or ocean's waves prolong his stay;
 Yet Oscar's bark is seldom slow.'
- 'Oh, no!' the anguish'd sire rejoin'd,
 'Nor chase, nor wave, my boy delay;
 Would he to Mora seem unkind? 111
 Would aught to her impede his way?
- 'Oh, search, ye chiefs! oh, search around!
 Allan, with these through Alva fly;
 Till Oscar, till my son is found, 115
 Haste, haste, nor dare attempt reply.'
- All is confusion—through the vale
 The name of Oscar hoarsely rings,
 It rises on the murmuring gale,
 Till night expands her dusky wings;
- It breaks the stillness of the night, 121
 But echoes through her shades in vain;
 It sounds through morning's misty light,
 But Oscar comes not o'er the plain.
- Three days, three sleepless nights, the Chief 125
 For Oscar search'd each mountain cave:
 Then hope is lost; in boundless grief,
 His locks in gray-torn ringlets wave.
- 'Oscar! my son!—thou God of heaven,
 Restore the prop of sinking age! 130
 Or if that hope no more is given,
 Yield his assassin to my rage.
- 'Yes, on some desert rocky shore
 My Oscar's whiten'd bones must lie;
 Then grant, thou God! I ask no more,
 With him his frantic sire may die! 136
- 'Yet he may live,—away, despair!
 Be calm, my soul! he yet may live;
 T' arraign my fate, my voice forbear!
 O God! my impious prayer forgive.
- 'What, if he live for me no more, 141
 I sink forgotten in the dust,
 The hope of Alva's age is o'er:
 Alas! can pangs like these be just?'
- Thus did the hapless parent mourn, 145
 Till Time, which soothes severest woe,
 Had bade serenity return
 And made the tear-drop cease to flow.
- For still some latent hope survived 149
 That Oscar might once more appear;
 His hope now droop'd and now revived,
 Till Time had told a tedious year.
- Days roll'd along, the orb of light
 Again had run his destined race;
 No Oscar bless'd his father's sight, 155
 And sorrow left a fainter trace.
- For youthful Allan still remain'd,
 And now his father's only joy:
 And Mora's heart was quickly gain'd,
 For beauty crown'd the fair-hair'd boy.
- She thought that Oscar low was laid,
 And Allan's face was wondrous fair;
 If Oscar lived, some other maid
 Had claim'd his faithless bosom's care.
- And Angus said, if one year more 165
 In fruitless hope was pass'd away,
 His fondest scruples should be o'er,
 And he would name their nuptial day.
- Slow roll'd the moons, but blest at last Arrived the dearly destined morn: 170
 The year of anxious trembling past,
 What smiles the lovers' cheeks adorn!
- Hark to the pibroch's pleasing note!
 Hark to the swelling nuptial song!
 In joyous strains the voices float, 175
 And still the choral peal prolong.
- Again the clan, in festive crowd,
 Throng through the gate of Alva's hall;
 The sounds of mirth re-echo loud,
 And all their former joy recall. 180
- But who is he, whose darken'd brow
 Grooms in the midst of general mirth?
 Before his eyes' far fiercer glow
 The blue flames curdle o'er the hearth.
- Dark is the robe which wraps his form,
 And tall his plume of gory red; 186
 His voice is like the rising storm,
 But light and trackless is his tread.
- 'Tis noon of night, the pledge goes round,
 The bridegroom's health is deeply
 quaff'd; 190
 With shouts the vaulted roofs resound,
 And all combine to hail the draught.
- Sudden the stranger-chief arose,
 And all the clamorous crowd are hush'd; 194
 And Angus' cheek with wonder glows,
 And Mora's tender bosom blush'd.
- 'Old man!' he cried, 'this pledge is done;
 Thou saw'st 'twas duly drank by me;
 It hail'd the nuptials of thy son:
 Now will I claim a pledge from thee.
- 'While all around is mirth and joy, 201
 To bless thy Allan's happy lot,
 Say, hadst thou ne'er another boy?
 Say, why should Oscar be forgot?'

HOURS OF IDLENESS

- 'Alas!' the hapless sire replied, 205
The big tear starting as he spoke,
'When Oscar left my hall, or died,
This aged heart was almost broke.
- 'Thrice has the earth revolved her course
Since Oscar's form has bless'd my sight; 210
And Allan is my last resource,
Since martial Oscar's death or flight.'
- 'Tis well,' replied the stranger stern,
And fiercely flash'd his rolling eye;
'Thy Oscar's fate I fain would learn; 215
Perhaps the hero did not die.
- 'Perchance, if those whom most he loved
Would call, thy Oscar might return;
Perchance the chief has only roved;
For him thy beltane yet may ruin. 220
- 'Fill high the bowl the table round,
We will not claim the pledge by stealth;
With wine let every cup be crown'd;
Pledge me departed Oscar's health.'
- 'With all my soul,' old Angus said, 225
And fill'd his goblet to the brim:
'Here's to my boy! alive or dead,
I ne'er shall find a son like him.'
- 'Bravely, old man, this health has sped;
But why does Allan trembling stand?
Come, drink remembrance of the dead,
And raise thy cup with firmer hand.'
- The crimson glow of Allan's face
Was turn'd at once to ghastly hue;
The drops of death each other chase 235
Adown in agonizing dew.
- Thrice did he raise the goblet high,
And thrice his lips refused to taste;
For thrice he caught the stranger's eye
On his with deadly fury placed. 240
- 'And is it thus a brother hails
A brother's fond remembrance here?
If thus affection's strength prevails,
What might we not expect from fear?'
- Roused by the sneer, he raised the bowl,
'Would Oscar now could share our mirth!' 246
Internal fear appall'd his soul;
He said, and dash'd the cup to earth.
- 'Tis he! I hear my murderer's voice!
Loud shrieks a darkly gleaming form.
'A murderer's voice!' the roof replies,
And deeply swells the bursting storm.
- The tapers wink, the chieftains shrink,
The stranger's gone,—amidst the crew,
A form was seen in tartan green, 255
And tall the shade terrific grew.
- His waist was bound with a broad belt round,
His plume of sable stream'd on high;
But his breast was bare, with the red wounds there, 259
And fix'd was the glare of his glassy eye.
- And thrice he smiled, with his eye so wild,
On Angus bending low the knee;
And thrice he frown'd on a chief on the ground, 263
Whom shivering crowds with horror see.
- The bolts loud roll from pole to pole,
The thunders through the welkin ring,
And the gleaming form, through the mist of the storm,
Was borne on high by the whirlwind's wing.
- Cold was the feast, the revel ceased.
Who lies upon the stony floor? 270
Oblivion press'd old Angus' breast,
At length his life-pulse throbs once more.
- 'Away, away! let the leech essay
To pour the light on Allan's eyes:'
His sand is done,—his race is run,— 275
Oh! never more shall Allan rise!
- But Oscar's breast is cold as clay,
His locks are lifted by the gale;
And Allan's barbed arrow lay 279
With him in dark Glentanar's vale.
- And whence the dreadful stranger came,
Or who, no mortal wight can tell; 282
But no one doubts the form of flame,
For Alva's sons knew Oscar well.
- Ambition nerved young Allan's hand,
Exulting demons wing'd his dart;
While Envy waved her burning brand,
And pour'd her venom round his heart.
- Swift is the shaft from Allan's bow;
Whose streaming life-blood stains his side? 290
- Dark Oscar's sable crest is low,
The dart has drunk his vital tide.
- And Mora's eye could Allan move,
She bade his wounded pride rebel:
Alas! that eyes which beam'd with love
Should urge the soul to deeds of hell.
- Lo! seest thou not a lonely tomb 297
Which rises o'er a warrior dead?
It glimmers through the twilight gloom;
Oh! that is Allan's nuptial bed. 300
- Far, distant far, the noble grave
Which held his clan's great ashes stood;
And o'er his corse no banners wave,
For they were stain'd with kindred blood.

What minstrel gray, what hoary bard,
 Shall Allan's deeds on harp-strings
 raise?
 The song is glory's chief reward,
 But who can strike a murderer's praise?
 Unstrung, untouch'd, the harp must
 stand,
 No minstrel dare the theme awake;
 Guilt would benumb his palsied hand,
 His harp in shuddering chords would
 break.

No lyre of fame, no hallow'd verse,
 Shall sound his glories high in air;
 A dying father's bitter curse,
 A brother's death-groan echoes there.

THE EPISODE OF NISUS AND EURYALUS

A PARAPHRASE FROM THE ÆNEID, LIB. IX

NISUS, the guardian of the portal, stood,
 Eager to gild his arms with hostile blood;
 Well skill'd in fight the quivering lance to wield,
 Or pour his arrows through th' embattled
 field:
 From Ida torn, he left his sylvan cave,
 And sought a foreign home, a distant
 grave.
 To watch the movements of the Daunian
 host,
 With him Euryalus sustains the post;
 No lovelier mien adorn'd the ranks of Troy,
 And beardless bloom yet graced the gallant boy;
 Though few the seasons of his youthful
 life,
 As yet a novice in the martial strife,
 'Twas his, with beauty, valour's gifts to
 share—
 A soul heroic, as his form was fair:
 These burn with one pure flame of generous love;
 In peace, in war, united still they move;
 Friendship and glory form their joint reward;
 And now combined they hold their nightly guard.

'What god,' exclaim'd the first,
 'instils this fire?
 Or, in itself a god, what great desire?
 My labouring soul, with anxious thought
 oppress'd,
 Abhors this station of inglorious rest;
 The love of fame with this can ill accord,
 Be't mine to seek for glory with my sword.
 Seest thou yon camp, with torches twinkling dim,
 Where drunken slumbers wrap each lazy
 limb?

Where confidence and ease the watch disdain,
 And drowsy Silence holds her sable reign?
 Then hear my thought:—In deep and sullen grief
 Our troops and leaders mourn their absent chief:
 Now could the gifts and promised prize
 be thine
 (The deed, the danger, and the fame be
 mine),
 Were this decreed, beneath yon rising
 mound,
 Methinks, an easy path perchance were
 found;
 Which past, I speed my way to Pallas'
 walls,
 And lead Æneas from Evander's halls.'

With equal ardour fired, and warlike joy,
 His glowing friend address'd the Dardan
 boy:—
 'These deeds, my Nisus, shalt thou dare
 alone?
 Must all the fame, the peril, be thine
 own?
 Am I by thee despised, and left afar,
 As one unfit to share the toils of war?
 Not thus his son the great Opheltus
 taught;
 Not thus my sire in Argive combats
 fought;
 Not thus, when Ilion fell by heavenly hate,
 I track'd Æneas through the walks of
 fate:
 Thou know'st my deeds, my breast devoid
 of fear,
 And hostile life-drops dim my gory spear.
 Here is a soul with hope immortal burns,
 And life, ignoble life, for glory spurns.
 Fame, fame is cheaply earn'd by fleeting
 breath:
 The price of honour is the sleep of
 death.'

Then Nisus:—'Calm thy bosom's fond alarms:
 Thy heart beats fiercely to the din of arms.
 More dear thy worth and valour than my
 own,
 I swear by him who fills Olympus' throne!
 So may I triumph, as I speak the truth,
 And clasp again the comrade of my youth!
 But should I fall,—and he who dares
 advance
 Through hostile legions must abide by chance,—
 If some Rutulian arm, with adverse blow,
 Should lay the friend, who ever loved thee,
 low,
 Live thou, such beauties I would fain preserve,
 Thy budding years a lengthen'd term deserve.'

HOURS OF IDLENESS

When humbled in the dust, let some one
 be, 65
 Whose gentle eyes will shed one tear for
 me;
 Whose manly arm may snatch me back
 by force,
 Or wealth redeem from foes my captive corse;
 Or, if my destiny these last deny,
 If in the spoiler's power my ashes lie, 70
 Thy pious care may raise a simple tomb,
 To mark thy love, and signalize my doom.
 Why should thy doting wretched mother
 weep
 Her only boy, reclined in endless sleep?
 Who, for thy sake, the tempest's fury dared, 75
 Who, for thy sake, war's deadly peril shared;
 Who braved what woman never braved
 before,
 And left her native for the Latian shore.'

'In vain you damp the ardour of my
 soul,'
 Replied Euryalus; 'it scorns control! 80
 Hence, let us haste!'—their brother guards arose,
 Roused by their call, nor court again
 repose;
 The pair, buoy'd up on Hope's exulting
 wing,
 Their stations leave, and speed to seek the
 king.

Now o'er the earth a solemn stillness ran,
 And lull'd alike the cares of brute and
 man; 86
 Save where the Dardan leaders nightly
 hold Alternate converse, and their plans unfold.
 On one great point the council are agreed,
 An instant message to their prince decreed; 90
 Each lean'd upon the lance he well could wield,
 And poised with easy arm his ancient shield;
 When Nisus and his friend their leave request
 To offer something to their high behest.
 With anxious tremors, yet unawed by
 fear, 95
 The faithful pair before the throne appear:
 Iulus greets them; at his kind command,
 The elder first address'd the hoary band.

'With patience' (thus Hyrtacides began)
 'Attend, nor judge from youth our humble plan. 100
 Where yonder beacons half expiring beam,
 Our slumbering foes of future conquest
 dream,
 Nor heed that we a secret path have traced,
 Between the ocean and the portal placed.

Beneath the covert of the blackening
 smoke, 105
 Whose shade securely our design will cloak!
 If you, ye chiefs, and fortune will allow,
 We'll bend our course to yonder mountain's brow,
 Where Pallas' walls at distance meet the
 sight,
 Seen o'er the glade, when not obscured by
 night: 110
 Then shall Æneas in his pride return,
 When hostile matrons raise their off-spring's urn;
 And Latian spoils and purpled heaps of
 dead
 Shall mark the havoc of our hero's tread.
 Such is our purpose, not unknown the
 way; 115
 Where yonder torrent's devious waters
 stray,
 Oft have we seen, when hunting by the
 stream,
 The distant spires above the valleys gleam.'

Mature in years, for sober wisdom famed,
 Moved by the speech, Alethes here ex-
 claim'd,— 120
 'Ye parent gods! who rule the fate of Troy,
 Still dwells the Dardan spirit in the boy;
 When minds like these in striplings thus ye
 raise,
 Yours is the godlike act, be yours the
 praise;
 In gallant youth, my fainting hopes revive, 125
 And Ilion's wonted glories still survive.' Then in his warm embrace the boys he
 press'd,
 And, quivering, strain'd them to his aged
 breast;
 With tears the burning cheek of each be-dew'd,
 And, sobbing, thus his first discourse re-
 new'd: 130
 'What gift, my countrymen, what martial
 prize,
 Can we bestow, which you may not despise?
 Our deities the first best boon have
 given—
 Internal virtues are the gift of Heaven.
 What poor rewards can bless your deeds
 on earth, 135
 Doubtless await such young, exalted
 worth.
 Æneas and Ascanius shall combine
 To yield applause far, far surpassing mine.'

Iulus then:—'By all the powers above!
 By those Penates who my country love!

By hoary Vesta's sacred fane, I swear, 141
 My hopes are all in you, ye generous pair!
 Restore my father to my grateful sight,
 And all my sorrows yield to one delight.
 Nisus! two silver goblets are thine own,
 Saved from Arisba's stately domes o'er-
 thrown! 146

My sire secured them on that fatal day,
 Nor left such bowls an Argive robber's
 prey:

Two massy tripods, also, shall be thine;
 Two talents polish'd from the glittering
 mine; 150

An ancient cup, which Tyrian Dido gave,
 While yet our vessels press'd the Punic
 wave:

But when the hostile chiefs at length bow
 down,

When great Æneas wears Hesperia's
 crown,

The casque, the buckler, and the fiery steed Which Turnus guides with more than mortal speed, 156

Are thine; no envious lot shall then be
 cast,

I pledge my word, irrevocably past:
 Nay more, twelve slaves, and twice six captive dames,

To soothe thy softer hours with amorous flames, 160

And all the realms which now the Latins
 sway,

The labours of to-night shall well repay.
 But thou, my generous youth, whose tender years

Are near my own, whose worth my heart
 reveres,

Henceforth affection, sweetly thus begun, Shall join our bosoms and our souls in
 one; 166

Without thy aid, no glory shall be mine;
 Without thy dear advice, no great design;
 Alike through life esteem'd, thou godlike
 boy,

In war my bulwark, and in peace my joy.'

To him Euryalus:—'No day shall
 shame 171

The rising glories which from this I claim.
 Fortune may favour, or the skies may
 frown,

But valour, spite of fate, obtains renown.
 Yet, ere from hence our eager steps de-
 part, 175

One boon I beg, the nearest to my heart:
 My mother, sprung from Priam's royal
 line,

Like thine ennobled, hardly less divine,
 Nor Troy nor king Acestes' realms re-
 strain 179

Her feeble age from dangers of the main:
 Alone she came, all selfish fears above,
 A bright example of maternal love.

Unknown the secret enterprise I brave,

Lest grief should bend my parent to the
 grave;

From this alone no fond adieus I seek,
 No fainting mother's lips have press'd my cheek; 186

By gloomy night and thy right hand I vow
 Her parting tears would shake my purpose now:

Do thou, my prince, her failing age sustain,
 In thee her much-loved child may live
 again; 190

Her dying hours with pious conduct bless,
 Assist her wants, relieve her fond distress:
 So dear a hope must all my soul inflame,
 To rise in glory, or to fall in fame.'

Struck with a filial care so deeply felt, 195
 In tears at once the Trojan warriors melt;
 Faster than all, Iulus' eyes o'erflow!

Such love was his, and such had been his
 woe.

'All thou hast ask'd, receive,' the prince replied;

'Nor this alone, but many a gift beside.
 To cheer thy mother's years shall be my aim, 201

Creusa's style but wanting to the dame.
 Fortune an adverse wayward course may
 run,

But bless'd thy mother in so dear a son.
 Now, by my life!—my sire's most sacred oath— 205

To thee I pledge my full, my firmest troth,
 All the rewards which once to thee were
 vow'd,

If thou shouldst fall, on her shall be bestow'd.'

Thus spoke the weeping prince, then forth to view

A gleaming falchion from the sheath he
 drew; 210

Lycaon's utmost skill had graced the steel,
 For friends to envy and for foes to feel:
 A tawny hide, the Moorish lion's spoil,
 Slain 'midst the forest, in the hunter's toil, Mnestheus to guard the elder youth bestows, 215

And old Alethes' casque defends his brows.

Arm'd, thence they go, while all th' assembled train,

To aid their cause, implore the gods in vain.
 More than a boy, in wisdom and in grace,
 Iulus holds amidst the chiefs his place:

His prayer he sends; but what can prayers
 avail, 221

Lost in the murmurs of the sighing gale?

The trench is pass'd, and, favour'd by the night,

Through sleeping foes they wheel their wary flight.

When shall the sleep of many a foe be o'er?
 Alas! some slumber who shall wake no
 more! 226

HOURS OF IDLENESS

Chariots and bridles, mix'd with arms, are
seen;

And flowing flasks, and scatter'd troops
between:

Bacchus and Mars to rule the camp combine;

A mingled chaos this of war and wine.

'Now,' cries the first, 'for deeds of blood prepare, 231

With me the conquest and the labour share:
Here lies our path; lest any hand arise,
Watch thou, while many a dreaming
chieftain dies:

I'll carve our passage through the heedless foe, 235

And clear thy road with many a deadly blow.

His whispering accents then the youth re-
press'd,

And pierced proud Rhamnes through his panting breast:

Stretch'd at his ease, th' incautious king
reposed;

Debauch, and not fatigue, his eyes had closed: 240

To Turnus dear, a prophet and a prince,
His omens more than augur's skill evince;
But he, who thus foretold the fate of all,
Could not avert his own untimely fall.

Next Remus' armour-bearer, hapless, fell,
And three unhappy slaves the carnage
swell; 246

The charioteer along his courser's sides
Expires, the steel his sever'd neck divides;
And, last, his lord is number'd with the
dead:

Bounding convulsive, flies the gasping
head; 250

From the swoll'n veins the blackening torrents pour;

Stain'd is the couch and earth with clotting gore.

Young Lamyus and Lamus next expire,
And gay Serranus, fill'd with youthful fire;
Half the long night in childish games was
pass'd; 255

Lull'd by the potent grape, he slept at last:
Ah! happier far had he the morn survey'd,
And till Aurora's dawn his skill display'd.

In slaughter'd fold, the keepers lost in
sleep,

His hungry fangs a lion thus may steep;
'Mid the sad flock, at dead of night he prowls, 261

With murder glutted, and in carnage rolls:

Insatiate still, through teeming herds he roams;

In seas of gore the lordly tyrant foams.

Nor less the other's deadly vengeance
came, 265

But falls on feeble crowds without a name;

His wound unconscious Fadius scarce can
feel,

Yet wakeful Rhæsus sees the threatening
steel;

His coward breast behind a jar he hides,
And vainly in the weak defence confides;
Full in his heart, the falchion search'd his veins, 271

The reeking weapon bears alternate stains;
Through wine and blood, commingling as they flow,

One feeble spirit seeks the shades below.
Now where Messapus dwelt they bend
their way, 275

Whose fires emit a faint and trembling
ray;

There, unconfined, behold each grazing
steed,

Unwatch'd, unheeded, on the herbage
feed:

Brave Nisus here arrests his comrade's
arm,

Too flush'd with carnage, and with conquest warm: 280

'Hence let us haste, the dangerous path
is pass'd;

Full foes enough to-night have breathed their last:

Soon will the day those eastern clouds adorn;

Now let us speed, nor tempt the rising
morn.'

What silver arms, with various art emboss'd, 285

What bowls and mantles in confusion
toss'd,

They leave regardless! yet one glittering
prize

Attracts the younger hero's wandering
eyes;

The gilded harness Rhamnes' coursers
felt,

The gems which stud the monarch's golden belt: 290

This from the pallid corse was quickly
torn,

Once by a line of former chieftains worn.
Th' exulting boy the studded girdle wears,
Messapus' helm his head in triumph
bears;

Then from the tents their cautious steps
they bend, 295

To seek the vale where safer paths extend.

Just at this hour, a band of Latian
horse

To Turnus' camp pursue their destined
course:

While the slow foot their tardy march de-
lay,

The knights, impatient, spur along the
way: 300

Three hundred mail-clad men, by Volscens
 led,
 To Turnus with their master's promise
 sped:
 Now they approach the trench, and view
 the walls,
 When, on the left, a light reflection falls;
 The plunder'd helmet, through the waning night, 305
 Sheds forth a silver radiance, glancing
 bright.
 Volscens with question loud the pair alarms:—
 'Stand, stragglers! stand! why early thus in arms?
 From whence! to whom?'—He meets with no reply;
 Trusting the covert of the night, they fly:
 The thicket's depth with hurried pace
 they tread, 311
 While round the wood the hostile squadron spread.

With brakes entangled, scarce a path
 between,
 Dreary and dark appears the sylvan
 scene:
 Euryalus his heavy spoils impede, 315
 The boughs and winding turns his steps mislead;
 But Nisus scours along the forest's maze
 To where Latinus' steeds in safety graze,
 Then backward o'er the plain his eyes extend, 319
 On every side they seek his absent friend.
 'O God! my boy,' he cries, 'of me bereft,
 In what impending perils art thou left!
 Listening he runs—above the waving trees, Tumultuous voices swell the passing breeze;
 The war-cry rises, thundering hoofs
 around 325
 Wake the dark echoes of the trembling
 ground.
 Again he turns, of footsteps hears the noise;
 The sound elates, the sight his hope destroys:
 The hapless boy a ruffian train surround,
 While lengthening shades his weary way
 confound; 330
 Him with loud shouts the furious knights pursue,
 Struggling in vain, a captive to the crew.
 What can his friend 'gainst thronging numbers dare?
 Ah! must he rush his comrade's fate to
 share?
 What force, what aid, what stratagem
 essay, 335
 Back to redeem the Latian spoiler's prey?
 His life a votive ransom nobly give,
 Or die with him for whom he wish'd to
 live?

Poising with strength his lifted lance on
 high,
 On Luna's orb he cast his frenzied eye:—
 'Goddess serene, transcending every star!
 Queen of the sky, whose beams are seen
 afar! 342
 By night heaven owns thy sway, by day
 the grove,
 When, as chaste Dian, here thou deign'st to rove;
 If e'er myself, or sire, have sought to
 grace 345
 Thine altars with the produce of the chase,
 Speed, speed my dart to pierce yon vaunt-
 ing crowd,
 To free my friend, and scatter far the proud.'
 Thus having said, the hissing dart he
 flung;
 Through parted shades the hurtling weapon sung; 350
 The thirsty point in Sulmo's entrails lay, Transfix'd his heart, and stretch'd him on the clay:
 He sobs, he dies,—the troop in wild
 amaze,
 Unconscious whence the death, with horror gaze.
 While pale they stare, through Tagus' temples riven, 355
 A second shaft with equal force is driven:
 Fierce Volscens rolls around his lowering
 eyes;
 Veil'd by the night, secure the Trojan
 lies.
 Burning with wrath, he view'd his soldiers
 fall.
 'Thou youth accurst, thy life shall pay for
 all!' 360
 Quick from the sheath his flaming glaive
 he drew,
 And, raging, on the boy defenceless flew.
 Nisus no more the blackening shade conceals,
 Forth, forth he starts, and all his love reveals;
 Aghast, confused, his fears to madness
 rise, 365
 And pour these accents, shrieking as he
 flies:
 'Me, me,—your vengeance hurl on me
 alone;
 Here sheathe the steel, my blood is all your own,
 Ye starry spheres! thou conscious Heaven!
 attest!
 He could not—durst not—lo! the guile
 confess! 370
 All, all was mine,—his early fate suspend;
 He only loved too well his hapless friend:
 Spare, spare, ye chiefs! from him your rage remove;
 His fault was friendship, all his crime was
 love.'

HOURS OF IDLENESS

He pray'd in vain; the dark assassin's
 sword 375
 Pierced the fair side, the snowy bosom
 gored;
 Lowly to earth inclines his plume-clad
 crest,
 And sanguine torrents mantle o'er his
 breast:
 As some young rose, whose blossom
 scents the air,
 Languid in death, expires beneath the
 share; 380
 Or crimson poppy, sinking with the shower,
 Declining gently, falls a fading flower;
 Thus, sweetly drooping, bends his lovely
 head,
 And lingering beauty hovers round the
 dead.

But fiery Nisus stems the battle's tide,
 Revenge his leader, and despair his guide;
 Volscens he seeks amidst the gathering
 host, 387
 Volscens must soon appease his comrade's
 ghost;
 Steel, flashing, pours on steel, foe crowds
 on foe;
 Rage nerves his arm, fate gleams in every
 blow; 390
 In vain beneath unnumber'd wounds he bleeds,
 Nor wounds, nor death, distracted Nisus
 heeds;
 In viewless circles wheel'd, his falchion flies,
 Nor quits the hero's grasp till Volscens
 dies;
 Deep in his throat its end the weapon found,
 The tyrant's soul fled groaning through the wound. 396
 Thus Nisus all his fond affection proved—
 Dying, revenged the fate of him he loved;
 Then on his bosom sought his wonted
 place,
 And death was heavenly in his friend's embrace! 400

Celestial pair! if aught my verse can
 claim,
 Wafted on Time's broad pinion, yours is
 fame!
 Ages on ages shall your fate admire,
 No future day shall see your names
 expire,
 While stands the Capitol, immortal dome!
 And vanquish'd millions hail their empress, Rome! 406

TRANSLATION FROM THE MEDEA OF EURIPIDES

[Ἑρωτες ὑπὲρ μὲν ἄγαν, κ. τ. λ.]

WHEN fierce conflicting passions urge
 The breast where love is wont to glow,
 What mind can stem the stormy surge
 Which rolls the tide of human woe?

The hope of praise, the dread of shame,
 Can rouse the tortured breast no more;
 The wild desire, the guilty flame,
 Absorbs each wish it felt before.

But if affection gently thrills
 The soul by purer dreams possest, 10
 The pleasing balm of mortal ills
 In love can soothe the aching breast:
 If thus thou comest in disguise,
 Fair Venus! from thy native heaven,
 What heart unfeeling would despise 15
 The sweetest boon the gods have given?

But never from thy golden bow
 May I beneath the shaft expire!
 Whose creeping venom, sure and slow,
 Awakes an all-consuming fire; 20
 Ye racking doubts! ye jealous fears!
 With others wage internal war;
 Repentance, source of future tears,
 From me be ever distant far!

May no distracting thoughts destroy 25
 The holy calm of sacred love!
 May all the hours be wing'd with joy,
 Which hover faithful hearts above!
 Fair Venus! on thy myrtle shrine
 May I with some fond lover sigh, 30
 Whose heart may mingle pure with mine—
 With me to live, with me to die!

My native soil! beloved before,
 Now dearer as my peaceful home,
 Ne'er may I quit thy rocky shore, 35
 A hapless banish'd wretch to roam!
 This very day, this very hour,
 May I resign this fleeting breath!
 Nor quit my silent humble bower; 39
 A doom to me far worse than death.

Have I not heard the exile's sigh,
 And seen the exile's silent tear,
 Through distant climes condemn'd to fly,
 A pensive weary wanderer here?
 Ah! hapless dame! no sire bewails, 45
 No friend thy wretched fate deplores,
 No kindred voice with rapture hails
 Thy steps within a stranger's doors.

Perish the fiend whose iron heart,
 To fair affection's truth unknown, 50
 Bids her he fondly loved depart,
 Unpitied, helpless, and alone;
 Who ne'er unlocks with silver key
 The milder treasures of his soul,—
 May such a friend be far from me, 55
 And ocean's storms between us roll!

THOUGHTS SUGGESTED BY A COLLEGE EXAMINATION

HIGH in the midst, surrounded by his peers,
 MAGNUS his ample front sublime up-
 rears:

Placed on his chair of state, he seems a god, While Sophs and Freshmen tremble at his nod.
 As all around sit wrapt in speechless gloom,
 His voice in thunder shakes the sounding
 dome; 6
 Denouncing dire reproach to luckless
 fools,
 Unskill'd to plod in mathematic rules.

Happy the youth in Euclid's axioms
 tried,
 Though little versed in any art beside; 10
 Who, scarcely skill'd an English line to pen,
 Scans Attic metres with a critic's ken.
 What, though he knows not how his fathers bled,
 When civil discord piled the fields with
 dead,
 When Edward bade his conquering bands
 advance, 15
 Or Henry trampled on the crest of France, Though marvelling at the name of Magna Charta,
 Yet well he recollects the laws of Sparta;
 Can tell what edicts sage Lycurgus made,
 While Blackstone's on the shelf neglected
 laid; 20
 Of Grecian dramas vaunts the deathless
 fame,
 Of Avon's bard remembering scarce the
 name.

Such is the youth whose scientific pate
 Class-honours, medals, fellowships, await;
 Or even, perhaps, the declamation prize,
 If to such glorious height he lifts his
 eyes. 26
 But lo! no common orator can hope
 The envied silver cup within his scope.
 Not that our heads much eloquence require,
 Th' ATHENIAN's glowing style, or Tully's
 fire. 30
 A manner clear or warm is useless, since
 We do not try by speaking to convince.
 Be other orators of pleasing proud,—
 We speak to please ourselves, not move
 the crowd:
 Our gravity prefers the muttering tone.
 A proper mixture of the squeak and
 groan; 36
 No borrow'd grace of action must be seen;
 The slightest motion would displease the Dean;
 Whilst every staring graduate would
 prate
 Against what he could never imitate. 40

The man who hopes t' obtain the promised cup
 Must in one posture stand, and ne'er look up;

Nor stop, but rattle over every word—
 No matter what, so it can not be heard.
 Thus let him hurry on, nor think to rest:
 Who speaks the fastest's sure to speak the
 best; 46
 Who utters most within the shortest space
 May safely hope to win the wordy race.

The sons of science these, who, thus repaid,
 Linger in ease in Granta's sluggish shade;
 Where on Cam's sedgy banks supine they lie, 51
 Unknown, unhonour'd live, unwept-for
 die:
 Dull as the pictures which adorn their
 halls,
 They think all learning fix'd within their
 walls:
 In manners rude, in foolish forms precise, 55
 All modern arts affecting to despise;
 Yet prizing Bentley's, Brunck's, or Por-son's note,
 More than the verse on which the critic
 wrote:
 Vain as their honours, heavy as their
 ale,
 Sad as their wit, and tedious as their tale; 60
 To friendship dead, though not untaught
 to feel
 When Self and Church demand a bigot zeal.
 With eager haste they court the lord of
 power,
 Whether 'tis Pitt or Petty rules the hour;
 To him, with suppliant smiles, they bend
 the head, 65
 While distant mitres to their eyes are
 spread.
 But should a storm o'erwhelm him with disgrace,
 They'd fly to seek the next who fill'd his
 place.
 Such are the men who learning's treasures
 guard!
 Such is their practice, such is their reward!
 This much, at least, we may presume to
 say— 71
 The premium can't exceed the price they pay.

TO A BEAUTIFUL QUAKER

SWEET girl! though only once we met,
 That meeting I shall ne'er forget;
 And though we ne'er may meet again,
 Remembrance will thy form retain.
 I would not say, 'I love,' but still 5
 My senses struggle with my will:
 In vain, to drive thee from my breast,
 My thoughts are more and more repress;

HOURS OF IDLENESS

In vain I check the rising sighs,
Another to the last replies:
Perhaps this is not love, but yet
Our meeting I can ne'er forget.

What though we never silence broke,
Our eyes a sweeter language spoke;
The tongue in flattering falsehood deals,
And tells a tale it never feels: 16
Deceit the guilty lips impart,
And hush the mandates of the heart;
But soul's interpreters, the eyes,
Spurn such restraint, and scorn disguise.
As thus our glances oft conversed, 21
And all our bosoms felt rehearsed,
No spirit, from within, reproved us,
Say rather, 'twas the spirit moved us,
Though what they utter'd I repress, 25
Yet I conceive thou'lt partly guess;
For as on thee my memory ponders,
Perchance to me thine also wanders.
This for myself, at least, I'll say,
Thy form appears through night, through 30
day;

Awake, with it my fancy teems;
In sleep, it smiles in fleeting dreams;
The vision charms the hours away,
And bids me curse Aurora's ray
For breaking slumbers of delight 35
Which make me wish for endless night.
Since, oh! whate'er my future fate,
Shall joy or woe my steps await,
Tempted by love, by storms beset,
Thine image I can ne'er forget. 40

Alas! again no more we meet,
No more our former looks repeat;
Then let me breathe this parting prayer,
The dictate of my bosom's care:
'May Heaven so guard my lovely quaker,
That anguish never can o'ertake her; 46
That peace and virtue ne'er forsake her,
But bliss be aye her heart's partaker!
Oh! may the happy mortal, fated
To be, by dearest ties, related, 50
For her each hour new joys discover,
And lose the husband in the lover!
May that fair bosom never know
What 'tis to feel the restless woe
Which stings the soul, with vain regret, 55
Of him who never can forget!'

THE CORNELIAN

No specious splendour of this stone
Endears it to my memory ever;
With lustre only once it shone,
And blushes modest as the giver. 4

Some, who can sneer at friendship's ties,
Have, for my weakness, oft reproved
me;
Yet still the simple gift I prize,
For I am sure the giver loved me.

He offer'd it with downcast look,
As fearful that I might refuse it; 10
I told him, when the gift I took,
My only fear should be to lose it.

This pledge attentively I view'd,
And sparkling as I held it near,
Methought one drop the stone bedew'd,
And ever since I've loved a tear. 16

Still, to adorn his humble youth,
Nor wealth nor birth their treasures
yield;
But he who seeks the flowers of truth
Must quit the garden for the field. 20

'Tis not the plant uprear'd in sloth, Which beauty shows, and sheds perfume;
The flowers which yield the most of both
In Nature's wild luxuriance bloom.

Had Fortune aided Nature's care, 25
For once forgetting to be blind,
His would have been an ample share,
If well proportion'd to his mind.

But had the goddess clearly seen, 29
His form had fix'd her fickle breast;
Her countless hoards would his have been,
And none remain'd to give the rest.

AN OCCASIONAL PROLOGUE

DELIVERED PREVIOUS TO THE PERFOR-MANCE OF 'THE WHEEL OF FORTUNE' AT A PRIVATE THEATRE

SINCE the refinement of this polish'd age
Has swept immoral raiillery from the stage;
Since taste has now expunged licentious
wit,

Which stamp'd disgrace on all an author writ;

Since now to please with purer scenes we seek, 5

Nor dare to call the blush from Beauty's
cheek;

Oh! let the modest Muse some pity claim,
And meet indulgence, though she find not
fame.

Still, not for her alone we wish respect,
Others appear more conscious of defect;
To-night no veteran Roscii you behold,
In all the arts of scenic action old; 12
No Cooke, no Kemble, can salute you
here,

No Siddons draw the sympathetic tear;
To-night you throng to witness the début
Of embryo actors, to the Drama new:

Here, then, our almost unfledged wings we try; 17

Clip not our pinions ere the birds can fly:
Failing in this our first attempt to soar,
Drooping, alas! we fall to rise no more.

Not one poor trembler only fear betrays
 Who hopes, yet almost dreads, to meet your praise,
 But all our dramatis personæ wait
 In fond suspense this crisis of their fate.
 No venal views our progress can retard, 25
 Your generous plaudits are our sole reward.
 For these, each Hero all his power displays, Each timid Heroine shrinks before your gaze.
 Surely the last will some protection find;
 None to the softer sex can prove unkind:
 While Youth and Beauty form the female
 shield, 31
 The sternest censor to the fair must yield.
 Yet, should our feeble efforts nought avail,
 Should, after all, our best endeavours fail,
 Still let some mercy in your bosoms live,
 And, if you can't applaud, at least forgive.

ON THE DEATH OF MR. FOX

THE FOLLOWING ILLIBERAL IMPROMPTU APPEARED IN A MORNING PAPER

'OUR nation's foes lament on Fox's death,
 But bless the hour when PITT resign'd his
 breath:
 These feelings wide, let sense and truth
 unclue,
 We give the palm where Justice points its
 due.'

TO WHICH THE AUTHOR OF THESE PIECES
 SENT THE FOLLOWING REPLY

OH factious viper! whose envenom'd
 tooth
 Would mangle still the dead, perverting
 truth;
 What though our 'nation's foes' lament
 the fate,
 With generous feeling, of the good and great,
 Shall dastard tongues essay to blast the
 name 5
 Of him whose meed exists in endless fame?
 When PITT expired in plenitude of power,
 Though ill success obscured his dying hour,
 Pity her dewy wings before him spread,
 For noble spirits 'war not with the dead.'
 His friends, in tears, a last sad requiem
 gave, 11
 As all his errors slumber'd in the grave;
 He sunk, an Atlas bending 'neath the weight
 Of cares o'erwhelming our conflicting
 state:
 When, lo! a Hercules in Fox appear'd, 15
 Who for a time the ruin'd fabric rear'd:
 He, too, is fall'n, who Britain's loss
 supplied,
 With him our fast reviving hopes have
 died;
 Not one great people only raise his urn,
 All Europe's far-extended regions mourn.

'These feelings wide, let sense and truth
 unclue, 21
 To give the palm where Justice points its
 due;'
 Yet let not canker'd Calumny assail,
 Or round our statesman wind her gloomy veil.
 Fox! o'er whose corse a mourning world
 must weep, 25
 Whose dear remains in honour'd marble
 sleep;
 For whom, at last, e'en hostile nations
 groan,
 While friends and foes alike his talents own;
 Fox shall in Britain's future annals shine,
 Nor e'en to PITT the patriot's palm resign;
 Which Envy, wearing Candour's sacred mask, 31
 For PITT, and PITT alone, has dared to ask.

THE TEAR

'O lachrymarum fons, tenero sacros
 Ducentium ortus ex animo; quater
 Felix! in imo qui scatentem
 Pectore te, pia Nympha, sensit.'—GRAY.

WHEN Friendship or Love our sympathies
 move,
 When Truth in a glance should appear,
 The lips may beguile with a dimple or
 smile,
 But the test of affection's a Tear.
 Too oft is a smile but the hypocrite's wile,
 To mask detestation or fear; 6
 Give me the soft sigh, whilst the soul-telling eye
 Is dimm'd for a time with a Tear.
 Mild Charity's glow, to us mortals below,
 Shows the soul from barbarity clear; 10 Compassion will melt where this virtue is felt,
 And its dew is diffused in a Tear.
 The man doom'd to sail with the blast of the gale,
 Through billows Atlantic to steer,
 As he bends o'er the wave which may soon be his grave, 15
 The green sparkles bright with a Tear.
 The soldier braves death for a fanciful
 wreath
 In Glory's romantic career;
 But he raises the foe when in battle laid
 low,
 And bathes every wound with a Tear.
 If with high-bounding pride he return to his bride, 21
 Renouncing the gore-crimson'd spear,
 All his toils are repaid when, embracing the maid,
 From her eyelid he kisses the Tear.

HOURS OF IDLENESS

Sweet scene of my youth! seat of Friendship and Truth, 25
Where love chased each fast-fleeting
year,
Loth to leave thee, I mourn'd, for a last look I turn'd,
But thy spire was scarce seen through a
Tear.

Though my vows I can pour to my Mary
no more,
My Mary to Love once so dear, 30
In the shade of her bower I remember the
hour
She rewarded those vows with a Tear.

By another possest, may she live ever blest!
Her name still my heart must revere:
With a sigh I resign what I once thought was mine, 35
And forgive her deceit with a Tear.

Ye friends of my heart, ere from you I de-
part,
This hope to my breast is most near:
If again we shall meet in this rural retreat,
May we meet, as we part, with a Tear.

When my soul wings her flight to the regions of night, 41
And my corse shall recline on its bier,
As ye pass by the tomb where my ashes
consume,
Oh! moisten their dust with a Tear.

May no marble bestow the splendour of
woe 45
Which the children of vanity rear;
No fiction of fame shall blazon my name.
All I ask—all I wish—is a Tear.

REPLY TO SOME VERSES OF J. M. B. PIGOT, ESQ., ON THE CRUELTY OF HIS MISTRESS

WHY, Pigot, complain of this damsel's dis-
dain,
Why thus in despair do you fret?
For months you may try, yet, believe me,
a sigh
Will never obtain a coquette.

Would you teach her to love? for a time seem to rove; 5
At first she may frown in a pet;
But leave her awhile, she shortly will
smile,
And then you may kiss your coquette.

For such are the airs of these fanciful fairs,
They think all our homage a debt: 10
Yet a partial neglect soon takes an effect,
And humbles the proudest coquette.

Dissemble your pain, and lengthen your
chain,
And seem her hauteur to regret;
If again you shall sigh, she no more will deny, 15
That yours is the rosy coquette.

If still, from false pride, your pangs she
deride,
This whimsical virgin forget;
Some other admire, who will melt with your fire,
And laugh at the little coquette. 20

For me, I adore some twenty or more,
And love them most dearly; but yet,
Though my heart they enthrall, I'd abandon them all,
Did they act like your blooming coquette.

No longer repine, adopt this design, 25
And break through her slight-woven
net;
Away with despair, no longer forbear
To fly from the captious coquette.

Then quit her, my friend! your bosom defend,
Ere quite with her snares you're beset;
Lest your deep-wounded heart, when incensed by the smart, 31
Should lead you to curse the coquette.

October 27, 1806.

TO THE SIGHING STREPHON

YOUR pardon, my friend, if my rhymes did offend;
Your pardon, a thousand times o'er:
From friendship I strove your pangs to remove,
But, I swear, I will do so no more.

Since your beautiful maid your flame has repaid, 5
No more I your folly regret;
She's now most divine, and I bow at the shrine
Of this quickly reformed coquette.

Yet still, I must own, I should never have
known
From your verses what else she deserved; 10
Your pain seem'd so great, I pitied your
fate,
As your fair was so devilish reserved.

Since the balm-breathing kiss of this magical miss
Can such wonderful transports produce;
Since the 'world you forget, when your lips once have met,' 15
My counsel will get but abuse.

LACHIN Y GAIR

You say, when 'I rove, I know nothing
of love;
'Tis true, I am given to range;
If I rightly remember, I've loved a good
number,
Yet there's pleasure, at least, in a change.
I will not advance, by the rules of romance, 21
To humour a whimsical fair;
Though a smile may delight, yet a frown
won't affright,
Or drive me to dreadful despair.
While my blood is thus warm I ne'er shall reform, 25
To mix in the Platonists' school;
Of this I am sure, was my passion so pure,
Thy mistress would think me a fool.
And if I should shun every woman for one,
Whose image must fill my whole
breast— 30
Whom I must prefer, and sigh but for
her—
What an insult 'twould be to the rest!
Now, Strephon, good bye, I cannot deny
Your passion appears most absurd;
Such love as you plead is pure love indeed, 35
For it only consists in the word.

TO ELIZA

ELIZA, what fools are the Mussulman sect,
Who to woman deny the soul's future existence!
Could they see thee, Eliza, they'd own their defect,
And this doctrine would meet with a general resistance.
Had their prophet possess'd half an atom of sense, 5
He ne'er would have women from paradise driven;
Instead of his houris, a flimsy pretence,
With women alone he had peopled his
heaven.
Yet still, to increase your calamities more,
Not content with depriving your bodies of spirit, 10
He allots one poor husband to share amongst four!—
With souls you'd dispense; but this last, who could bear it?
His religion to please neither party is
made;
On husbands 'tis hard, to the wives
most uncivil;
Still I can't contradict, what so oft has been said, 15
'Though women are angels, yet wedlock's the devil.'

AWAY, ye gay landscapes, ye gardens of roses!
In you let the minions of luxury rove;
Restore me the rocks, where the snowflake reposes,
Though still they are sacred to freedom and love;
Yet, Caledonia, beloved are thy mountains, 5
Round their white summits though elements war;
Though cataracts foam 'stead of smooth-flowing fountains,
Isigh for the valley of dark Loch na Garr.
Ah! there my young footsteps in infancy
wander'd;
My cap was the bonnet, my cloak was the plaid; 10
On chieftains long perish'd my memory
ponder'd,
As daily I strode through the pine-cover'd glade;
I sought not my home till the day's dying
glory
Gave place to the rays of the bright polar star;
For fancy was cheer'd by traditional
story, 15
Disclosed by the natives of dark Loch na Garr.
'Shades of the dead! have I not heard your voices
Rise on the night-rolling breath of the gale?'
Surely the soul of the hero rejoices,
And rides on the wind, o'er his own Highland vale. 20
Round Loch na Garr while the stormy mist gathers,
Winter presides in his cold icy car;
Clouds there encircle the forms of my fathers;
They dwell in the tempests of dark Loch na Garr.
'Ill-starr'd, though brave, did no visions foreboding 25
Tell you that fate had forsaken your
cause?'
Ah! were you destined to die at Cullo-
den,
Victory crown'd not your fall with applause;
Still were you happy in death's earthly
slumber,
You rest with your clan in the caves of Braemar; 30
The pibroch resounds, to the piper's loud
number,
Your deeds on the echoes of dark Loch
na Garr.

HOURS OF IDLENESS

Years have roll'd on, Loch na Garr, since I left you,
 Years must elapse ere I tread you again:
 Nature of verdure and flow'rs has bereft
 you, 35
 Yet still are you dearer than Albion's
 plain.
 England! thy beauties are tame and domestic
 To one who has roved o'er the mountains
 afar:
 Oh for the crags that are wild and majestic!
 The steep frowning glories of dark Loch na Garr. 40

TO ROMANCE

PARENT of golden dreams, Romance!
 Auspicious queen of childish joys,
 Who lead'st along, in airy dance,
 Thy votive train of girls and boys;
 At length, in spells no longer bound, 5
 I break the fetters of my youth;
 No more I tread thy mystic round,
 But leave thy realms for those of Truth.

And yet 'tis hard to quit the dreams
 Which haunt the unsuspecting soul, 10
 Where every nymph a goddess seems,
 Whose eyes through rays immortal roll;
 While Fancy holds her boundless reign,
 And all assume a varied hue;
 When virgins seem no longer vain, 15
 And even woman's smiles are true.

And must we own thee but a name,
 And from thy hall of clouds descend?
 Nor find a sylph in every dame,
 A Pylades in every friend? 20
 But leave at once thy realms of air
 To mingling bands of fairy elves;
 Confess that woman's false as fair,
 And friends have feeling for—their-selves!

With shame I own I've felt thy sway; 25
 Repentant, now thy reign is o'er,
 No more thy precepts I obey,
 No more on fancied pinions soar.
 Fond fool! to love a sparkling eye,
 And think that eye to truth was dear;
 To trust a passing wanton's sigh, 31
 And melt beneath a wanton's tear!

Romance! disgusted with deceit,
 Far from thy motley court I fly,
 Where Affectation holds her seat, 35
 And sickly Sensibility;
 Whose silly tears can never flow
 For any pangs excepting thine;
 Who turns aside from real woe,
 To steep in dew thy gaudy shrine. 40

Now join with sable Sympathy,
 With cypress crown'd, array'd in weeds,
 Who heaves with thee her simple sigh,
 Whose breast for every bosom bleeds;
 And call thy sylvan female choir, 45
 To mourn a swain for ever gone,
 Who once could glow with equal fire,
 But bends not now before thy throne.

Ye genial nymphs, whose ready tears
 On all occasions swiftly flow; 50
 Whose bosoms heave with fancied fears,
 With fancied flames and phrensy glow;
 Say, will you mourn my absent name,
 Apostate from your gentle train?
 An infant bard at least may claim 55
 From you a sympathetic strain.

Adieu, fond race! a long adieu!
 The hour of fate is hovering nigh,
 E'en now the gulf appears in view,
 Where unlamented you must lie: 60
 Oblivion's blackening lake is seen,
 Convulsed by gales you cannot weather;
 Where you, and eke your gentle queen,
 Alas! must perish altogether.

ANSWER TO SOME ELEGANT VERSES SENT BY A FRIEND TO THE AUTHOR, COMPLAINING THAT ONE OF HIS DESCRIPTIONS WAS RATHER TOO WARMLY DRAWN

'But if any old lady, knight, priest, or physician, Should condemn me for printing a second edition;
 If good Madam Squintum my work should abuse,
 May I venture to give her a smack of my muse?'
New Bath Guide.

CANDOUR compels me, BECHER! to commend
 The verse which blends the censor with the friend.
 Your strong yet just reproof extorts applause
 From me, the heedless and imprudent
 cause.
 For this wild error which pervades my
 strain, 5
 I sue for pardon,—must I sue in vain?
 The wise sometimes from Wisdom's ways
 depart:
 Can youth then hush the dictates of the
 heart?
 Precepts of prudence curb, but can't
 control,
 The fierce emotions of the flowing soul. 10
 When Love's delirium haunts the glowing
 mind,
 Limping Decorum lingers far behind:
 Vainly the dotard mends her prudish pace, Outstript and vanquish'd in the mental chase.

The young, the old, have worn the chains
of love; 15
Let those they ne'er confined my lay re-
prove:
Let those whose souls condemn the pleasing power
Their censures on the hapless victim shower.
Oh! how I hate the nerveless, frigid song,
The ceaseless echo of the rhyming throng,
Whose labour'd lines in chilling numbers
flow, 21
To paint a pang the author ne'er can
know!
The artless Helicon I boast is youth;—
My lyre, the heart; my muse, the simple
truth.
Far be 't from me the 'virgin's mind' to
'taint': 25
Seduction's dread is here no slight restraint.
The maid whose virgin breast is void of
guile,
Whose wishes dimple in a modest smile,
Whose downcast eye disdains the wanton
leer,
Firm in her virtue's strength, yet not severe— 30
She whom a conscious grace shall thus refine Will ne'er be 'tainted' by a strain of
mine.
But for the nymph whose premature desires
Torment her bosom with unholy fires,
No net to snare her willing heart is
spread; 35
She would have fallen, though she ne'er had read.
For me, I fain would please the chosen
few,
Whose souls, to feeling and to nature true,
Will spare the childish verse, and not destroy
The light effusions of a heedless boy. 40
I seek not glory from the senseless crowd;
Of fancied laurels I shall ne'er be proud;
Their warmest plaudits I would scarcely
prize,
Their sneers or censures I alike despise.

ELEGY ON NEWSTEAD ABBEY

'It is the voice of years that are gone! they roll
before me with all their deeds.'—OSSIAN.

NEWSTEAD! fast-falling, once-resplendent
dome!
Religion's shrine! repentant HENRY'S
pride!
Of warriors, monks, and dames the clois-
ter'd tomb,
Whose pensive shades around thy ruins glide,

Hail to thy pile! more honour'd in thy
fall 5
Than modern mansions in their pillar'd
state;
Proudly majestic frowns thy vaulted hall,
Scowling defiance on the blasts of fate.
No mail-clad serfs, obedient to their lord,
In grim array the crimson cross demand; 10
Or gay assemble round the festive board
Their chief's retainers, an immortal
band:
Else might inspiring Fancy's magic eye Retrace their progress through the lapse of time,
Marking each ardent youth, ordain'd to
die, 15
A votive pilgrim in Judea's clime.
But not from thee, dark pile! departs the
chief;
His feudal realm in other regions lay:
In thee the wounded conscience courts
relief,
Retiring from the garish blaze of day.
Yes! in thy gloomy cells and shades pro-
found 21
The monk abjured a world he ne'er could view;
Or blood-stain'd guilt repenting solace
found,
Or innocence from stern oppression flew.
A monarch bade thee from that wild
arise, 25
Where Sherwood's outlaws once were wont to prowl;
And Superstition's crimes, of various
dyes,
Sought shelter in the priest's protecting
cowl.
Where now the grass exhales a murky
dew,
The humid pall of life-extinguish'd
clay, 30
In sainted fame the sacred fathers grew,
Nor raised their pious voices but to pray.
Where now the bats their wavering wings
extend Soon as the gloaming spreads her waning shade,
The choir did oft their mingling vespers
blend, 35
Or matin orisons to Mary paid.
Years roll on years; to ages, ages yield;
Abbots to abbots, in a line, succeed;
Religion's charter their protecting shield,
Till royal sacrilege their doom decreed.

HOURS OF IDLENESS

One holy HENRY rear'd the Gothic walls,
And bade the pious inmates rest in peace; 42
Another HENRY the kind gift recalls,
And bids devotion's hallow'd echoes
cease.

Vain is each threat or supplicating prayer;
He drives them exiles from their blest
abode, 46
To roam a dreary world in deep despair—
No friend, no home, no refuge, but their God.

Hark how the hall, resounding to the
strain,
Shakes with the martial music's novel
din! 50
The heralds of a warrior's haughty reign,
High crested banners wave thy walls
within.

Of changing sentinels the distant hum,
The mirth of feasts, the clang of burnish'd arms,
The braying trumpet and the hoarser
drum, 55
Unite in concert with increased alarms.

An abbey once, a regal fortress now,
Encircled by insulting rebel powers, War's dread machines o'erhang thy threat'ning brow,
And dart destruction in sulphureous
showers. 60

Ah vain defence! the hostile traitor's siege, Though oft repulsed, by guile o'er-comes the brave;
His thronging foes oppress the faithful
liege,
Rebellion's reeking standards o'er him
wave. 64

Not unavenged the raging baron yields;
The blood of traitors smears the purple
plain;
Unconquer'd still, his falchion there he wields,
And days of glory yet for him remain.

Still in that hour the warrior wish'd to strew
Self-gather'd laurels on a self-sought
grave; 70
But Charles' protecting genius hither flew,
The monarch's friend, the monarch's hope, to save.

Trembling, she snatch'd him from th'
unequal strife,
In other fields the torrent to repel;
For nobler combats, here, reserved his life,
To lead the band where godlike FALK-LAND fell. 76

From thee, poor pile! to lawless plunder
given,
While dying groans their painful requiem sound,
Far different incense now ascends to
heaven,
Such victims wallow on the gory
ground. 80

There many a pale and ruthless robber's
corse,
Noisome and ghast, defiles thy sacred sod;
O'er mingling man, and horse commix'd
with horse,
Corruption's heap, the savage spoilers
trod.

Graves, long with rank and sighing weeds
o'erspread, 85
Ransack'd, resign perforce their mortal
mould:
From ruffian fangs escape not e'en the
dead,
Raked from repose in search of buried
gold.

Hush'd is the harp, unstrung the warlike
lyre,
The minstrel's palsied hand reclines in
death; 90
No more he strikes the quivering chords
with fire,
Or sings the glories of the martial
wreath.

At length the sated murderers, gorged
with prey,
Retire: the clamour of the fight is o'er;
Silence again resumes her awful sway, 95
And sable Horror guards the massy
door.

Here Desolation holds her dreary court:
What satellites declare her dismal reign!
Shrieking their dirge, ill-omen'd birds
resort, 99
To fit their vigils in the hoary fane.

Soon a new morn's restoring beams dispel
The clouds of anarchy from Britain's
skies;
The fierce usurper seeks his native hell,
And Nature triumphs as the tyrant dies.

With storms she welcomes his expiring
groans; 105
Whirlwinds, responsive, greet his labouring breath;
Earth shudders as her caves receive his bones,
Loathing the offering of so dark a
death.

The legal ruler now resumes the helm,
 He guides through gentle seas the prow
 of state; 110
 Hope cheers, with wonted smiles, the peaceful realm,
 And heals the bleeding wounds of wearied hate.

The gloomy tenants, Newstead! of thy cells,
 Howling, resign their violated nest;
 Again the master on his tenure dwells, Enjoy'd, from absence, with enraptured zest. 116

Vassals, within thy hospitable pale,
 Loudly carousing, bless their lord's return;
 Culture again adorns the gladdening vale,
 And matrons, once lamenting, cease to mourn. 120

A thousand songs on tuneful echo float, Unwonted foliage mantles o'er the trees;
 And hark! the horns proclaim a mellow
 note,
 The hunters' cry hangs lengthening on the breeze.

Beneath their coursers' hoofs the valleys
 shake: 125
 What fears, what anxious hopes, attend
 the chase!
 The dying stag seeks refuge in the lake;
 Exulting shouts announce the finish'd
 race.

Ah happy days! too happy to endure!
 Such simple sports our plain forefathers
 knew: 130
 No splendid vices glitter'd to allure;
 Their joys were many, as their cares were few.

From these descending, sons to sires
 succeed;
 Time steals along, and Death uprears
 his dart;
 Another chief impels the foaming steed,
 Another crowd pursue the panting
 hart. 136

Newstead! what saddening change of scene is thine!
 Thy yawning arch betokens slow decay;
 The last and youngest of a noble line
 Now holds thy mouldering turrets in his sway. 140

Deserted now, he scans thy gray worn
 towers;
 Thy vaults, where dead of feudal ages
 sleep;

Thy cloisters, pervious to the wintry
 showers;
 These, these he views, and views them
 but to weep.

Yet are his tears no emblem of regret:
 Cherish'd affection only bids them
 flow. 146
 Pride, hope, and love forbid him to forget,
 But warm his bosom with impassion'd
 glow.

Yet he prefers thee to the gilded domes
 Or gewgaw grottos of the vainly great,
 Yet lingers 'mid thy damp and mossy
 tombs, 151
 Nor breathes a murmur 'gainst the will of fate.

Haply thy sun, emerging, yet may shine,
 Thee to irradiate with meridian ray;
 Hours splendid as the past may still be
 thine, 155
 And bless thy future as thy former day.

CHILDISH RECOLLECTIONS

'I cannot but remember such things were,
 And were most dear to me.'

WHEN slow Disease, with all her host of pains,
 Chills the warm tide which flows along
 the veins;
 When Health, affrighted, spreads her rosy
 wing,
 And flies with every changing gale of
 spring; 4
 Not to the aching frame alone confined, Unyielding pangs assail the drooping
 mind:
 What grisly forms, the spectre-train of woe,
 Bid shuddering Nature shrink beneath
 the blow,
 With Resignation wage relentless strife, While Hope retires appall'd, and clings to
 life! 10
 Yet less the pang when, through the tedious hour,
 Remembrance sheds around her genial
 power,
 Calls back the vanish'd days to rapture
 given,
 When love was bliss, and Beauty form'd
 our heaven;
 Or, dear to youth, portrays each childish
 scene, 15
 Those fairy bowers, where all in turn have
 been.
 As when through clouds that pour the summer storm
 The orb of day unveils his distant form, Gilds with faint beams the crystal dew of rain,
 And dimly twinkles o'er the watery plain;

HOURS OF IDLENESS

Thus, while the future dark and cheerless
gleams, 21
The sun of memory, glowing through my
dreams,
Though sunk the radiance of his former
blaze,
To scenes far distant points his paler rays;
Still rules my senses with unbounded sway,
The past confounding with the present day.

Oft does my heart indulge the rising
thought, 27
Which still recurs, unlook'd for and un-
sought;

My soul to Fancy's fond suggestion yields,
And roams romantic o'er her airy fields.
Scenes of my youth, developed, crowd to
view, 31

To which I long have bade a last adieu!
Seats of delight, inspiring youthful themes;
Friends lost to me for aye, except in
dreams; 34

Some who in marble prematurely sleep,
Whose forms I now remember but to weep;
Some who yet urge the same scholastic
course

Of early science, future fame the source;
Who, still contending in the studious race,
In quick rotation fill the senior place. 40
These with a thousand visions now unite,
To dazzle, though they please, my aching
sight.

IDA! blest spot, where Science holds her
reign,

How joyous once I join'd thy youthful train!

Bright in idea gleams thy lofty spire, 45
Again I mingle with thy playful quire;
Our tricks of mischief, every childish game, Unchanged by time or distance, seem the
same;

Through winding paths along the glade, I
trace

The social smile of every welcome face; 50
My wonted haunts, my scenes of joy and
woe,

Each early boyish friend, or youthful foe,
Our feuds dissolved, but not my friendship
past,—

I bless the former, and forgive the last.
Hours of my youth! when, nurtured in my
breast, 55

To love a stranger, friendship made me
blest,—

Friendship, the dear peculiar bond of
youth,

When every artless bosom throbs with
truth;

Untaught by worldly wisdom how to feign,
And check each impulse with prudential
rein; 60

When all we feel, our honest souls disclose—

In love to friends, in open hate to foes;

No varnish'd tales the lips of youth repeat,
No dear-bought knowledge purchased by deceit,

Hypocrisy, the gift of lengthen'd years, 65
Matured by age, the garb of prudence wears.

When now the boy is ripen'd into man,
His careful sire chalks forth some wary
plan;

Instructs his son from candour's path to shrink,

Smoothly to speak, and cautiously to think;
Still to assent, and never to deny— 71

A patron's praise can well reward the lie:
And who, when Fortune's warning voice is
heard,

Would lose his opening prospects for a word,
Although against that word his heart rebel,
And truth indignant all his bosom swell.

Away with themes like this! not mine
the task 77

From flattering friends to tear the hateful
mask;

Let keener bards delight in satire's sting;
My fancy soars not on Detraction's wing:
Once, and but once, she aim'd a deadly
blow, 81

To hurl defiance on a secret foe;
But when that foe, from feeling or from
shame,

The cause unknown, yet still to me the
same,

Warn'd by some friendly hint, perchance,
retired, 85

With this submission all her rage expired.
From dreaded pangs that feeble foe to save,
She hush'd her young resentment, and for-
gave;

Or, if my muse a pedant's portrait drew,
POMPOSUS' virtues are but known to few:
I never fear'd the young usurper's nod,
And he who wields must sometimes feel the
rod. 92

If since on Granta's failings, known to all
Who share the converse of a college hall,
She sometimes trifled in a lighter strain,
'Tis past, and thus she will not sin again;
Soon must her early song for ever cease,
And all may rail when I shall rest in peace.

Here first remember'd be the joyous
band,

Who hail'd me chief, obedient to command; 100

Who join'd with me in every boyish
sport—

Their first adviser, and their last resort;
Nor shrunk beneath the upstart pedant's
frown,

Or all the sable glories of his gown;
Who, thus transplanted from his father's school— 105

Unfit to govern, ignorant of rule—

Succeeded him, whom all unite to praise,
The dear preceptor of my early days!

PROBUS, the pride of science, and the boast,
To IDA now, alas! for ever lost, 110
With him, for years, we search'd the classic
page,

And fear'd the master, though we loved the sage:

Retired at last, his small yet peaceful seat
From learning's labour is the blest retreat.
POMPOSUS fills his magisterial chair; 115 POMPOSUS governs,—but, my muse, for-
bear:

Contempt, in silence, be the pedant's lot;
His name and precepts be alike forgot;
No more his mention shall my verse degrade,—

To him my tribute is already paid. 120

High through those elms, with hoary branches crown'd,
Fair IDA's bower adorns the landscape
round;

There Science, from her favour'd seat,
surveys

The vale where rural Nature claims her
praise;

To her awhile resigns her youthful train,
Who move in joy, and dance along the
plain; 126

In scatter'd groups each favour'd haunt pursue,

Repeat old pastimes, and discover new;
Flush IDA with his rays, beneath the noon-
tide sun,

In rival bands, between the wickets run,
Drive o'er the sward the ball with active
force, 131

Or chase with nimble feet its rapid course.
But these with slower steps direct their way,
Where Brent's cool waves in limpid currents stray;

While yonder few search out some green retreat 135

And arbours shade them from the summer
heat:

Others, again, a pert and lively crew,
Some rough and thoughtless stranger placed in view,

With frolic quaint their antic jests expose,
And tease the grumbling rustic as he goes;
Nor rest with this, but many a passing fray
Tradition treasures for a future day: 142

"Twas here the gather'd swains for vengeance fought,

And here we earn'd the conquest dearly
bought;

Here have we fled before superior might,
And here renew'd the wild tumultuous
fight.' 146

While thus our souls with early passions
swell,

In lingering tones resounds the distant
bell,

Th' allotted hour of daily sport is o'er,
And Learning beckons from her temple's
door. 150

No splendid tablets grace her simple hall,
But ruder records fill the dusky wall;
There, deeply carved, behold! each tyro's
name

Secures its owner's academic fame;
Here mingling view the names of sire and
son— 155

The one long graved, the other just begun:
These shall survive alike when son and sire
Beneath one common stroke of fate expire;
Perhaps their last memorial these alone,
Denied in death a monumental stone, 160
Whilst to the gale in mournful cadence

wave
The sighing weeds that hide their nameless
grave.

And here my name, and many an early
friend's,

Along the wall in lengthen'd line extends.
Though still our deeds amuse the youthful
race, 165

Who tread our steps, and fill our former
place,

Who young obey'd their lords in silent
awe,

Whose nod commanded, and whose voice
was law;

And now, in turn, possess the reins of
power,

To rule the little tyrants of an hour; 170
Though sometimes, with the tales of ancient day,

They pass the dreary winter's eve away—
'And thus our former rulers stemm'd the
tide,

And thus they dealt the combat side by
side;

Just in this place the mouldering walls
they scaled, 175

Nor bolts nor bars against their strength
avail'd;

Here PROBUS came, the rising fray to
quell,

And here he falter'd forth his last fare-
well;

And here one night abroad they dared to
roam,

While bold POMPOSUS bravely stay'd at
home;' 180

While thus they speak, the hour must soon arrive,

When names of these, like ours, alone
survive:

Yet a few years, one general wreck will whelm

The faint remembrance of our fairy realm.

Dear honest race! though now we meet
no more, 185

One last long look on what we were
before—

HOURS OF IDLENESS

Our first kind greetings, and our last
 adieu—
 Drew tears from eyes unused to weep with
 you.
 Through splendid circles, fashion's gaudy
 world,
 Where folly's glaring standard waves unfurled, 190
 I plunged to drown in noise my fond regret,
 And all I sought or hoped was to forget.
 Vain wish! if chance some well-remember'd
 face,
 Some old companion of my early race,
 Advanced to claim his friend with honest
 joy, 195
 My eyes, my heart, proclaim'd me still a
 boy;
 The glittering scene, the fluttering groups
 around,
 Were quite forgotten when my friend was
 found;
 The smiles of beauty—(for, alas! I've
 known
 What 'tis to bend before Love's mighty
 throne)— 200
 The smiles of beauty, though those smiles
 were dear,
 Could hardly charm me, when that friend was near;
 My thoughts bewilder'd in the fond surprise,
 The woods of IDA danced before my eyes;
 I saw the sprightly wand'ers pour along,
 I saw and join'd again the joyous throng;
 Panting, again I traced her lofty grove,
 And friendship's feelings triumph'd over
 love. 208

Yet why should I alone with such de-
 light
 Retrace the circuit of my former flight?
 Is there no cause beyond the common claim Endear'd to all in childhood's very name?
 Ah! sure some stronger impulse vibrates
 here,
 Which whispers friendship will be doubly
 dear
 To one who thus for kindred hearts must
 roam, 215
 And seek abroad the love denied at home.
 Those hearts, dear IDA, have I found in
 thee—
 A home, a world, a paradise to me.
 Stern Death forbade my orphan youth to
 share 219
 The tender guidance of a father's care.
 Can rank, or e'en a guardian's name supply
 The love which glistens in a father's eye?
 For this can wealth or title's sound atone,
 Made, by a parent's early loss, my own?
 What brother springs a brother's love to
 seek? 225
 What sister's gentle kiss has prest my
 cheek?

For me how dull the vacant moments rise,
 To no fond bosom link'd by kindred ties!
 Oft in the progress of some fleeting dream
 Fraternal smiles collected round me seem;
 While still the visions to my heart are
 prest, 231
 The voice of love will murmur in my rest:
 I hear—I wake—and in the sound rejoice;
 I hear again,—but, ah! no brother's voice.
 A hermit, 'midst of crowds, I fain must stray 235
 Alone, though thousand pilgrims fill the
 way;
 While these a thousand kindred wreaths entwine,
 I cannot call one single blossom mine:
 What then remains? in solitude to groan,
 To mix in friendship, or to sigh alone.
 Thus must I cling to some endearing hand,
 And none more dear than IDA's social
 band.

Alonzo! best and dearest of my friends,
 Thy name ennobles him who thus commends;
 From this fond tribute thou canst gain no
 praise; 245
 The praise is his who now that tribute pays.
 Oh! in the promise of thy early youth,
 If hope anticipate the words of truth,
 Some loftier bard shall sing thy glorious
 name, 249
 To build his own upon thy deathless fame.
 Friend of my heart, and foremost of the list
 Of those with whom I lived supremely
 blest,
 Oft have we drain'd the font of ancient lore;
 Though drinking deeply, thirsting still the
 more.
 Yet, when confinement's lingering hour
 was done, 255
 Our sports, our studies, and our souls were
 one:
 Together we impell'd the flying ball;
 Together waited in our tutor's hall;
 Together join'd in cricket's manly toil,
 Or shared the produce of the river's spoil;
 Or, plunging from the green declining
 shore, 261
 Our pliant limbs the buoyant billows bore;
 In every element, unchanged, the same,
 All, all that brothers should be, but the
 name.

Nor yet are you forgot, my jocund boy!
 DAVUS, the harbinger of childish joy;
 For ever foremost in the ranks of fun,
 The laughing herald of the harmless pun;
 Yet with a breast of such materials made—
 Anxious to please, of pleasing half afraid;
 Candid and liberal, with a heart of steel
 In danger's path, though not untaught to
 feel.

Still I remember, in the factious strife,
 The rustic's musket aim'd against my life:
 High pois'd in air the massy weapon
 hung, 275
 A cry of horror burst from every tongue;
 Whilst I, in combat with another foe,
 Fought on, unconscious of th' impending
 blow;
 Your arm, brave boy, arrested his career—
 Forward you sprung, insensible to fear;
 Disarm'd and baffled by your conquering
 hand, 281
 The grovelling savage roll'd upon the sand:
 An act like this, can simple thanks repay?
 Or all the labours of a grateful lay? 284
 Oh no! when'er my breast forgets the deed,
 That instant, DAVUS, it deserves to bleed.

LYCUS! on me thy claims are justly great:
 Thy milder virtues could my muse relate,
 To thee alone, unrivall'd, would belong
 The feeble efforts of my lengthen'd song.
 Well canst thou boast, to lead in senates
 fit, 291
 A Spartan firmness with Athenian wit:
 Though yet in embryo these perfections
 shine,
 LYCUS! thy father's fame will soon be
 thine.
 Where learning nurtures the superior
 mind, 295
 What may we hope from genius thus refined!
 When time at length matures thy growing
 years,
 How wilt thou tower above thy fellow
 peers!
 Prudence and sense, a spirit bold and free,
 With honour's soul, united beam in thee.

Shall fair EURYALUS pass by unsung?
 From ancient lineage, not unworthy
 sprung:
 What though one sad dissension bade us
 part?
 That name is yet embalm'd within my heart;
 Yet at the mention does that heart rebound, 305
 And palpitate, responsive to the sound.
 Envy dissolved our ties, and not our will:
 We once were friends,—I'll think we are so still.
 A form unmatch'd in nature's partial
 mould,
 A heart untainted, we in thee behold:
 Yet not the senate's thunder thou shalt
 wield, 311
 Nor seek for glory in the tented field;
 To minds of ruder texture these be given—Thy soul shall nearer soar its native
 heaven.
 Haply, in polish'd courts might be thy seat,
 But that thy tongue could never forge
 deceit: 316

The courtier's supple bow and sneering
 smile,
 The flow of compliment, the slippery
 wile,
 Would make that breast with indignation
 burn,
 And all the glittering snares to tempt thee
 spurn. 320
 Domestic happiness will stamp thy fate;
 Sacred to love, unclouded e'er by hate;
 The world admire thee, and thy friends
 adore;
 Ambition's slave alone would toil for
 more. 324

Now last, but nearest of the social band,
 See honest, open, generous CLEON stand;
 With scarce one speck to cloud the pleasing scene,
 No vice degrades that purest soul serene.
 On the same day our studious race begun,
 On the same day our studious race was
 run; 330
 Thus side by side we pass'd our first career,
 Thus side by side we strove for many a
 year;
 At last concluded our scholastic life,
 We neither conquer'd in the classic strife:
 As speakers each supports an equal name,
 And crowds allow to both a partial fame:
 To soothe a youthful rival's early pride,
 Though Cleon's candour would the palm
 divide,
 Yet candour's self compels me now to own
 Justice awards it to my friend alone. 340

Oh! friends regretted, scenes for ever
 dear,
 Remembrance hails you with her warmest
 tear!
 Drooping, she bends o'er pensive Fancy's
 urn,
 To trace the hours which never can return;
 Yet with the retrospection loves to dwell,
 And soothe the sorrows of her last fare-
 well! 346
 Yet greets the triumph of my boyish mind,
 As infant laurels round my head were
 twined,
 When PROBUS' praise repaid my lyric song,
 Or placed me higher in the studious
 throng; 350
 Or when my first harangue received
 applause,
 His sage instruction the primeval cause,
 What gratitude to him my soul possess,
 While hope of dawning honours fill'd my
 breast!
 For all my humble fame, to him alone
 The praise is due, who made that fame my
 own. 356
 Oh! could I soar above these feeble lays,
 These young effusions of my early days,

HOURS OF IDLENESS

To him my muse her noblest strain would give;
 The song might perish, but the theme might live. 360
 Yet why for him the needless verse essay?
 His honour'd name requires no vain display:
 By every son of grateful IDA blest,
 It finds an echo in each youthful breast;
 A fame beyond the glories of the proud,
 Or all the plaudits of the venal crowd.

IDA! not yet exhausted is the theme,
 Nor closed the progress of my youthful dream.
 How many a friend deserves the grateful strain!
 What scenes of childhood still unsung remain! 370
 Yet let me hush this echo of the past,
 This parting song, the dearest and the last;
 And brood in secret o'er those hours of joy,
 To me a silent and a sweet employ, 374
 While future hope and fear alike unknown,
 I think with pleasure on the past alone;
 Yes, to the past alone my heart confine,
 And chase the phantom of what once was mine.

IDA! still o'er thy hills in joy preside,
 And proudly steer through time's eventful tide; 380
 Still may thy blooming sons thy name revere,
 Smile in thy bower, but quit thee with a tear,—
 That tear, perhaps, the fondest which will flow,
 O'er their last scene of happiness below. 384
 Tell me, ye hoary few, who glide along,
 The feeble veterans of some former throng,
 Whose friends, like autumn leaves by tempests whirl'd,
 Are swept for ever from this busy world;
 Revolve the fleeting moments of your youth,
 While Care has yet withheld her venom'd tooth; 390
 Say if remembrance days like these endears
 Beyond the rapture of succeeding years?
 Say, can ambition's fever'd dream bestow
 So sweet a balm to soothe your hours of woe?
 Can treasures, hoarded for some thankless son, 395
 Can royal smiles, or wreaths by slaughter won,
 Can stars or ermine, man's maturer toys
 (For glittering baubles are not left to boys),
 Recall one scene so much beloved to view,
 As those where Youth her garland twined for you? 400

Ah, no! amidst the gloomy calm of age
 You turn with faltering hand life's varied page;
 Peruse the record of your days on earth,
 Unsullied only where it marks your birth;
 Still lingering pause above each chequer'd leaf, 405
 And blot with tears the sable lines of grief;
 Where Passion o'er the theme her mantle threw,
 Or weeping Virtue sigh'd a faint adieu;
 But bless the scroll which fairer words adorn,
 Traced by the rosy finger of the morn;
 When Friendship bow'd before the shrine of Truth, 411
 And Love, without his pinion, smiled on Youth.

ANSWER TO A BEAUTIFUL POEM

ENTITLED 'THE COMMON LOT'

MONTGOMERY! true, the common lot
 Of mortals lies in Lethe's wave;
 Yet some shall never be forgot,
 Some shall exist beyond the grave.
 'Unknown the region of his birth,' 5
 The hero rolls the tide of war;
 Yet not unknown his martial worth,
 Which glares a meteor from afar.
 His joy or grief, his weal or woe,
 Perchance may 'scape the page of fame;
 Yet nations now unborn will know 11
 The record of his deathless name.
 The patriot's and the poet's frame
 Must share the common tomb of all:
 Their glory will not sleep the same; 15
 That will arise, though empires fall.
 The lustre of a beauty's eye
 Assumes the ghastly stare of death;
 The fair, the brave, the good must die,
 And sink the yawning grave beneath.
 Once more the speaking eye revives, 21
 Still beaming through the lover's strain;
 For Petrarch's Laura still survives:
 She died, but ne'er will die again.
 The rolling seasons pass away, 25
 And Time, untiring, waves his wing;
 Whilst honour's laurels ne'er decay,
 But bloom in fresh, unfading spring.
 All, all must sleep in grim repose,
 Collected in the silent tomb; 30
 The old and young, with friends and foes,
 Fest'ring alike in shrouds, consume.
 The mouldering marble lasts its day,
 Yet falls at length an useless fane;
 To ruin's ruthless fangs a prey, 35
 The wrecks of pillar'd pride remain.

What, though the sculpture be destroy'd,
From dark oblivion meant to guard;
A bright renown shall be enjoy'd
By those whose virtues claim reward.

Then do not say the common lot
Of all lies deep in Lethe's wave;
Some few who ne'er will be forgot
Shall burst the bondage of the grave.

TO A LADY

WHO PRESENTED THE AUTHOR WITH THE VELVET BAND WHICH BOUND HER TRESSES
THIS Band, which bound thy yellow hair,
Is mine, sweet girl! thy pledge of love;
It claims my warmest, dearest care,
Like relics left of saints above.

Oh! I will wear it next my heart;
'Twill bind my soul in bonds to thee:
From me again 'twill ne'er depart,
But mingle in the grave with me.

5

The dew I gather from thy lip
Is not so dear to me as this;
That I but for a moment sip,
And banquet on a transient bliss:

10

This will recall each youthful scene,
E'en when our lives are on the wane;
The leaves of Love will still be green
When Memory bids them bud again.

15

Oh! little lock of golden hue,
In gently waving ringlet curl'd,
By the dear head on which you grew,
I would not lose you for a world.

20

Not though a thousand more adorn
The polish'd brow where once you shone,
Like rays which gild a cloudless morn,
Beneath Columbia's fervid zone.

LINES

ADDRESSED TO THE REV. J. T. BECHER, ON HIS ADVISING THE AUTHOR TO MIX MORE WITH SOCIETY

DEAR Becher, you tell me to mix with man-
kind;

I cannot deny such a precept is wise;
But retirement accords with the tone of my
mind:

I will not descend to a world I despise.

Did the senate or camp my exertions require,
Ambition might prompt me, at once, to go forth;

5

When infancy's years of probation expire, Perchance I may strive to distinguish my birth.

The fire in the cavern of Etna conceal'd
Still mantles unseen in its secret recess;
At length, in a volume terrific reveal'd,
No torrent can quench it, no bounds can repress.

12

Oh! thus, the desire in my bosom for fame
Bids me live but to hope for posterity's
praise.

Could I soar with the phoenix on pinions of flame,
With him I would wish to expire in the blaze.

15

For the life of a Fox, of a Chatham the
death,

What censure, what danger, what woe would I brave!

Their lives did not end when they yielded their breath;

Their glory illumines the gloom of their grave.

20

Yet why should I mingle in Fashion's full herd?

Why crouch to her leaders, or cringe to her rules?

Why bend to the proud, or applaud the absurd?

Why search for delight in the friendship of fools?

I have tasted the sweets and the bitters of
love;

25

In friendship I early was taught to
believe;

My passion the matrons of prudence reprove;
I have found that a friend may profess,
yet deceive.

To me what is wealth?—it may pass in an
hour,

If tyrants prevail, or if Fortune should frown:

30

To me what is title?—the phantom of
power;

To me what is fashion?—I seek but renown.

Deceit is a stranger as yet to my soul:
I still am unpractised to varnish the
truth;

Then why should I live in a hateful control?

35

Why waste upon folly the days of my youth?

1806.

REMEMBRANCE

'Tis done!—I saw it in my dreams;
No more with Hope the future beams;

My days of happiness are few:
Chill'd by misfortune's wintry blast,

My dawn of life is overcast;
Love, Hope, and Joy, alike adieu!

5

Would I could add Remembrance too?

HOURS OF IDLENESS

THE DEATH OF CALMAR AND ORLA

AN IMITATION OF MACPHERSON'S OSSIAN

DEAR are the days of youth! Age dwells on their remembrance through the mist of time. In the twilight he recalls the sunny hours of morn. He lifts his spear with trembling hand. 'Not thus feebly did I raise the steel before my fathers!' Past is the race of heroes. But their fame rises on the harp; their souls ride on the wings of the wind; they hear the sound through the sighs of the storm, and rejoice in their hall of clouds! Such is Calmar. The gray stone marks his narrow house. He looks down from eddying tempests: he rolls his form in the whirlwind, and hovers on the blast of the mountain.

In Morven dwelt the chief; a beam of war to Fingal. His steps in the field were marked in blood. Lochlin's sons had fled before his angry spear; but mild was the eye of Calmar; soft was the flow of his yellow locks: they streamed like the meteor of the night. No maid was the sigh of his soul: his thoughts were given to friendship,—to dark-haired Orla, destroyer of heroes! Equal were their swords in battle; but fierce was the pride of Orla:—gentle alone to Calmar. Together they dwelt in the cave of Oithona.

From Lochlin, Swaran bounded o'er the blue waves. Erin's sons fell beneath his might. Fingal roused his chiefs to combat. Their ships cover the ocean. Their hosts throng on the green hills. They come to the aid of Erin.

Night rose in clouds. Darkness veils the armies: but the blazing oaks gleam through the valley. The sons of Lochlin slept: their dreams were of blood. They lift the spear in thought, and Fingal flies. Not so the host of Morven. To watch was the post of Orla. Calmar stood by his side. Their spears were in their hands. Fingal called his chiefs: they stood around. The king was in the midst. Gray were his locks, but strong was the arm of the king. Age withered not his powers. 'Sons of Morven,' said the hero, 'to-morrow we meet the foe. But where is Cuthullin, the shield of Erin? He rests in the halls of Tura; he knows not of our coming. Who will speed through Lochlin to the hero, and call the chief to arms? The path is by the swords of foes; but many are my heroes. They are thunderbolts of war. Speak, ye chiefs! Who will arise?'

'Son of Trenmor! mine be the deed,' said dark-haired Orla, 'and mine alone. What is death to me? I love the sleep of the mighty, but little is the danger. The sons of Lochlin dream. I will seek car-

borne Cuthullin. If I fall, raise the song of bards; and lay me by the stream of Lubar.' —'And shalt thou fall alone?' said fair-haired Calmar. 'Wilt thou leave thy friend afar? Chief of Oithona! not feeble is my arm in fight. Could I see thee die, and not lift the spear? No, Orla! ours has been the chase of the roebuck, and the feast of shells; ours be the path of danger: ours has been the cave of Oithona; ours be the narrow dwelling on the banks of Lubar.' 'Calmar,' said the chief of Oithona, 'why should thy yellow locks be darkened in the dust of Erin? Let me fall alone. My father dwells in his hall of air: he will rejoice in his boy; but the blue-eyed Mora spreads the feast for her son in Morven. She listens to the steps of the hunter on the heath, and thinks it is the tread of Calmar. Let her not say, "Calmar has fallen by the steel of Lochlin: he died with gloomy Orla, the chief of the dark brow." Why should tears dim the azure eye of Mora? Why should her voice curse Orla, the destroyer of Calmar? Live, Calmar! Live to raise my stone of moss; live to revenge me in the blood of Lochlin. Join the song of bards above my grave. Sweet will be the song of death to Orla, from the voice of Calmar. My ghost shall smile on the notes of praise.' 'Orla,' said the son of Mora, 'could I raise the song of death to my friend? Could I give his fame to the winds? No, my heart would speak in sighs: faint and broken are the sounds of sorrow. Orla! our souls shall hear the song together. One cloud shall be ours on high: the bards will mingle the names of Orla and Calmar.'

They quit the circle of the chiefs. Their steps are to the host of Lochlin. The dying blaze of oak dim twinkles through the night. The northern star points the path to Tura. Swaran, the king, rests on his lonely hill. Here the troops are mixed: they frown in sleep; their shields beneath their heads. Their swords gleam at distance in heaps. The fires are faint; their embers fail in smoke. All is hushed; but the gale sighs on the rocks above. Lightly wheel the heroes through the slumbering band. Half the journey is past, when Mathon, resting on his shield, meets the eye of Orla. It rolls in flame, and glistens through the shade. His spear is raised on high. 'Why dost thou bend thy brow, chief of Oithona?' said fair-haired Calmar: 'we are in the midst of foes. Is this a time for delay?' 'It is a time for vengeance,' said Orla of the gloomy brow. 'Mathon of Lochlin sleeps: seest thou his spear? Its point is dim with the gore of my father. The blood of Mathon shall reek on mine; but shall I slay him sleeping, son of Mora?'

No! he shall feel his wound: my fame shall not soar on the blood of slumber. Rise, Mathon, rise! The son of Conna calls; thy life is his; rise to combat.' Mathon starts from sleep; but did he rise alone? No: the gathering chiefs bound on the plain. 'Fly! Calmar, fly!' said dark-haired Orla. 'Mathon is mine. I shall die in joy: but Lochlin crowds around. Fly through the shade of night.' Orla turns. The helm of Mathon is cleft; his shield falls from his arm: he shudders in his blood. He rolls by the side of the blazing oak. Strumon sees him fall: his wrath rises: his weapon glitters on the head of Orla: but a spear pierced his eye. His brain gushes through the wound, and foams on the spear of Calmar. As roll the waves of the Ocean on two mighty barks of the north, so pour the men of Lochlin on the chiefs. As, breaking the surge in foam, proudly steer the barks of the north, so rise the chiefs of Morven on the scattered crests of Lochlin. The din of arms came to the ear of Fingal. He strikes his shield; his sons throng around; the people pour along the heath. Ryno bounds in joy. Ossian stalks in his arms. Oscar shakes the spear. The eagle wing of Fillan floats on the wind. Dreadful is the clang of death! many are the widows of Lochlin! Morven prevails in its strength.

Morn glimmers on the hills: no living foe is seen; but the sleepers are many; grim they lie on Erin. The breeze of ocean lifts their locks; yet they do not awake. The hawks scream above their prey.

Whose yellow locks wave o'er the breast of a chief? Bright as the gold of the stranger, they mingle with the dark hair of his friend. 'Tis Calmar: he lies on the bosom of Orla. Theirs is one stream of blood. Fierce is the look of the gloomy Orla. He breathes not; but his eye is still a flame. It glares in death unclosed. His hand is grasped in Calmar's; but Calmar lives! he lives, though low. 'Rise,' said the king, 'rise, son of Mora: 'tis mine to heal the wounds of heroes. Calmar may yet bound on the hills of Morven.'

'Never more shall Calmar chase the deer of Morven with Orla,' said the hero. 'What were the chase to me alone? Who should share the spoils of battle with Calmar? Orla is at rest! Rough was thy soul, Orla! yet soft to me as the dew of morn. It glared on others in lightning: to me a silver beam of night. Bear my sword to blue-eyed Mora; let it hang in my empty hall. It is not pure from blood: but it could not save Orla. Lay me with my friend. Raise the song when I am dark!'

They are laid by the stream of Lubar. Four gray stones mark the dwelling of Orla and Calmar. When Swaran was bound, our sails rose on the blue waves. The winds gave our barks to Morven:—the bards raised the song.

'What form rises on the roar of clouds? Whose dark ghost gleams on the red streams of tempests? His voice rolls on the thunder. 'Tis Orla, the brown chief of Oithona. He was unmatched in war. Peace to thy soul, Orla! thy fame will not perish. Nor thine, Calmar! Lovely wast thou, son of blue-eyed Mora; but not harmless was thy sword. It hangs in thy cave. The ghosts of Lochlin shriek around its steel. Hear thy praise, Calmar! It dwells on the voice of the mighty. Thy name shakes on the echoes of Morven. Then raise thy fair locks, son of Mora. Spread them on the arch of the rainbow; and smile through the tears of the storm.'

L'AMITIÉ EST L'AMOUR SANS AILES

WHY should my anxious breast repine,
Because my youth is fled?
Days of delight may still be mine;
Affection is not dead.
In tracing back the years of youth, 5
One firm record, one lasting truth,
Celestial consolation brings;
Bear it, ye breezes, to the seat,
Where first my heart responsive beat,—
'Friendship is Love without his wings!'

Through few, but deeply chequer'd years,
What moments have been mine! 12
Now half obscured by clouds of tears,
Now bright in rays divine;
Howe'er my future doom be cast, 15
My soul, enraptured with the past,
To one idea fondly clings;
Friendship! that thought is all thine own,
Worth worlds of bliss, that thought alone—
'Friendship is Love without his wings!'

Where yonder yew-trees lightly wave 21
Their branches on the gale,
Unheeded heaves a simple grave,
Which tells the common tale;
Round this unconscious schoolboys stray,
Till the dull knell of childish play 26
From yonder studious mansion rings;
But here where'er my footsteps move,
My silent tears too plainly prove
'Friendship is Love without his wings!'

Oh, Love! before thy glowing shrine 31
My early vows were paid;
My hopes, my dreams, my heart was thine,
But these are now decay'd;
For thine are pinions like the wind, 35
No trace of thee remains behind,

HOURS OF IDLENESS

Except, alas! thy jealous stings.
Away, away! delusive power,
Thou shalt not haunt my coming hour;
Unless, indeed, without thy wings. 40

Seat of my youth! thy distant spire
Recalls each scene of joy;
My bosom glows with former fire,—
In mind again a boy.
Thy grove of elms, thy verdant hill, 45
Thy every path delights me still,
Each flower a double fragrance flings;
Again, as once, in converse gay,
Each dear associate seems to say,
'Friendship is Love without his wings!'

My Lycus! wherefore dost thou weep?
Thy falling tears restrain; 52
Affection for a time may sleep,
But, oh, 'twill wake again.
Think, think, my friend, when next we
meet, 55
Our long-wish'd interview, how sweet!
From this my hope of rapture springs;
While youthful hearts thus fondly swell,
Absence, my friend, can only tell,
'Friendship is Love without his wings!'

In one, and one alone deceived, 61
Did I my error mourn?
No—from oppressive bonds relieved,
I left the wretch to scorn.
I turn'd to those my childhood knew,
With feelings warm, with bosoms true, Twined with my heart's according
strings;
And till those vital chords shall break,
For none but these my breast shall wake Friendship, the power deprived of wings! 70

Ye few! my soul, my life is yours,
My memory and my hope;
Your worth a lasting love insures,
Unfetter'd in its scope; 74
From smooth deceit and terror sprung
With aspect fair and honey'd tongue,
Let Adulation wait on kings;
With joy elate, by snares beset,
We, we, my friends, can ne'er forget
'Friendship is Love without his wings!'

Fictions and dreams inspire the bard 81
Who rolls the epic song;
Friendship and truth be my reward—
To me no bays belong;
If laurel'd Fame but dwells with lies, 85
Me the enchantress ever flies,
Whose heart and not whose fancy sings;
Simple and young, I dare not feign;
Mine be the rude yet heartfelt strain, 89
'Friendship is Love without his wings!'

THE PRAYER OF NATURE

FATHER of Light! great God of Heaven!
Hear'st thou the accents of despair?
Can guilt like man's be e'er forgiven?
Can vice atone for crimes by prayer?

Father of Light, on thee I call! 5
Thou seest my soul is dark within;
Thou who canst mark the sparrow's fall,
Avert from me the death of sin.

No shrine I seek, to sects unknown;
Oh, point to me the path of truth! 10
Thy dread omnipotence I own;
Spare, yet amend, the faults of youth.

Let bigots rear a gloomy fane,
Let superstition hail the pile, 14
Let priests, to spread their sable reign,
With tales of mystic rites beguile.

Shall man confine his Maker's sway
To Gothic domes of mouldering stone?
Thy temple is the face of day;
Earth, ocean, heaven, thy boundless
throne. 20

Shall man condemn his race to hell,
Unless they bend in pompous form?
Tell us that all, for one who fell,
Must perish in the mingling storm?

Shall each pretend to reach the skies, 25
Yet doom his brother to expire,
Whose soul a different hope supplies,
Or doctrines less severe inspire?

Shall these, by creeds they can't expound,
Prepare a fancied bliss or woe? 30
Shall reptiles, grovelling on the ground,
Their great Creator's purpose know?

Shall those, who live for self alone,
Whose years float on in daily crime—
Shall they by Faith for guilt atone, 35
And live beyond the bounds of Time?

Father! no prophet's laws I seek,— Thy laws in Nature's works appear;—
I own myself corrupt and weak,
Yet will I pray, for thou wilt hear! 40

Thou, who canst guide the wandering star
Through trackless realms of æther's
space;
Who calm'st the elemental war,
Whose hand from pole to pole I trace:

Thou, who in wisdom placed me here,
Who, when thou wilt, canst take me
hence, 46

Ah! whilst I tread this earthly sphere,
Extend to me thy wide defence.

To Thee, my God, to thee I call!

Whatever weal or woe betide,
By thy command I rise or fall,
In thy protection I confide.

If, when this dust to dust's restored,
My soul shall float on airy wing,
How shall thy glorious name adored
Inspire her feeble voice to sing!

But, if this fleeting spirit share
With clay the grave's eternal bed,
While life yet throbs I raise my prayer, Though doom'd no more to quit the
dead.

To Thee I breathe my humble strain,
Grateful for all thy mercies past,
And hope, my God, to thee again
This erring life may fly at last.

TO EDWARD NOEL LONG, ESQ.

'Nil ego contulerim jucundo sanus amico.'—HOR.

DEAR LONG, in this sequester'd scene,
While all around in slumber lie,
The joyous days which ours have been Come rolling fresh on Fancy's eye;
Thus if amidst the gathering storm, 5
While clouds the darken'd noon deform,
Yon heaven assumes a varied glow,
I hail the sky's celestial bow,
Which spreads the sign of future peace,
And bids the war of tempests cease. 10
Ah! though the present brings but pain
I think those days may come again;
Or if, in melancholy mood,
Some lurking envious fear intrude,
To check my bosom's fondest thought, 16
And interrupt the golden dream,
I crush the fiend with malice fraught,
And still indulge my wonted theme.
Although we ne'er again can trace,
In Granta's vale, the pedant's lore; 20
Nor through the groves of Ida chase
Our raptured visions as before,
Though Youth has flown on rosy pinion,
And Manhood claims his stern dominion,
Age will not every hope destroy, 25
But yield some hours of sober joy.

Yes, I will hope that Time's broad wing
Will shed around some dews of spring:
But if his scythe must sweep the flowers
Which bloom among the fairy bowers,
Where smiling youth delights to dwell,
And hearts with early rapture swell;
If frowning Age, with cold control,
Confines the current of the soul,
Congeals the tear of Pity's eye, 35
Or checks the sympathetic sigh,
Or hears unmoved misfortune's groan,
And bids me feel for self alone;

Oh! may my bosom never learn
To soothe its wonted heedless flow, 40
Still, still despise the censor stern,
But ne'er forget another's woe.
Yes, as you knew me in the days
O'er which Remembrance yet delays,
Still may I rove, untutor'd, wild, 45
And even in age at heart a child.

Though now on airy visions borne,
To you my soul is still the same.
Oft has it been my fate to mourn,
And all my former joys are tame. 50
But, hence! ye hours of sable hue!
Your frowns are gone, my sorrows o'er:
By every bliss my childhood knew,
I'll think upon your shade no more.
Thus, when the whirlwind's rage is past,
And caves their sullen roar enclose,
We heed no more the wintry blast,
When lull'd by zephyr to repose.

Full often has my infant Muse
Attuned to love her languid lyre; 60
But now, without a theme to choose,
The strains in stolen sighs expire.
My youthful nymphs, alas! are flown;
E— is a wife, and C— a mother,
And Carolina sighs alone, 65
And Mary's given to another;
And Cora's eye, which roll'd on me,
Can now no more my love recall:
In truth, dear LONG, 'twas time to flee;
For Cora's eye will shine on all. 70

And though the sun, with genial rays,
His beams alike to all displays,
And every lady's eye's a sun,
These last should be confined to one. 74
The soul's meridian don't become her,
Whose sun displays a general summer!
Thus faint is every former flame,
And passion's self is now a name.
As, when the ebbing flames are low,
The aid which once improved their
light, 80
And bade them burn with fiercer glow,
Now quenches all their sparks in night;
Thus has it been with passion's fires,
As many a boy and girl remembers,
While all the force of love expires, 85
Extinguish'd with the dying embers.

But now, dear LONG, 'tis midnight's
noon,
And clouds obscure the watery moon,
Whose beauties I shall not rehearse,
Described in every stripling's verse; 90
For why should I the path go o'er,
Which every bard has trod before?
Yet ere yon silver lamp of night
Has thrice perform'd her stated round,
Has thrice retraced her path of light, 95
And chased away the gloom profound,

HOURS OF IDLENESS

I trust that we, my gentle friend,
Shall see her rolling orbit wend
Above the dear-loved peaceful seat,
Which once contain'd our youth's retreat; 100
And then with those our childhood knew
We'll mingle in the festive crew;
While many a tale of former day
Shall wing the laughing hours away;
And all the flow of souls shall pour 105
The sacred intellectual shower,
Nor cease till Luna's waning horn Scarce glimmers through the mist of morn.

TO A LADY

OH! had my fate been join'd with thine,
As once this pledge appear'd a token,
These follies had not then been mine,
For then my peace had not been broken.

To thee these early faults I owe, 5
To thee, the wise and old reproving:
They know my sins, but do not know
'Twas thine to break the bonds of loving.

For once my soul, like thine, was pure,
And all its rising fires could smother;
But now thy vows no more endure, 11
Bestow'd by thee upon another;

Perhaps his peace I could destroy,
And spoil the blisses that await him;
Yet let my rival smile in joy, 15
For thy dear sake I cannot hate him.

Ah! since thy angel form is gone,
My heart no more can rest with any;
But what it sought in thee alone,
Attempts, alas! to find in many. 20

Then fare thee well, deceitful maid!
'Twere vain and fruitless to regret thee;
Nor hope nor memory yield their aid,
But pride may teach me to forget thee.

Yet all this giddy waste of years, 25
This tiresome round of palling pleasures;
These varied loves, these matron's fears,
These thoughtless strains to passion's measures—

If thou wert mine, had all been hush'd:—
This cheek, now pale from early riot,
With passion's hectic ne'er had flushed,
But bloom'd in calm domestic quiet.

Yes, once the rural scene was sweet, 33
For Nature seem'd to smile before thee;
And once my breast abhorr'd deceit,—
For then it beat but to adore thee.

But now I seek for other joys: 37
To think would drive my soul to mad-
ness;
In thoughtless throngs and empty noise
I conquer half my bosom's sadness.

Yet, even in these a thought will steal
In spite of every vain endeavour,—
And fiends might pity what I feel,—
To know that thou art lost for ever.

I WOULD I WERE A CARELESS CHILD

I WOULD I were a careless child,
Still dwelling in my Highland cave,
Or roaming through the dusky wild,
Or bounding o'er the dark blue wave;
The cumbrous pomp of Saxon pride 5
Accords not with the freeborn soul,
Which loves the mountain's craggy side,
And seeks the rocks where billows
roll.

Fortune! take back these cultured lands,
Take back this name of splendid sound!
I hate the touch of servile hands, 11
I hate the slaves that cringe around.
Place me among the rocks I love,
Which sound to Ocean's wildest roar;
I ask but this—again to rove 15
Through scenes my youth hath known
before.

Few are my years, and yet I feel
The world was ne'er design'd for me:
Ah! why do dark'ning shades conceal
The hour when man must cease to be?
Once I beheld a splendid dream, 21
A visionary scene of bliss:
Truth!—wherefore did thy hated beam
Awake me to a world like this?

I loved—but those I loved are gone; 25
Had friends—my early friends are fled:
How cheerless feels the heart alone,
When all its former hopes are dead!
Though gay companions o'er the bowl
Dispel awhile the sense of ill; 30
Though pleasure stirs the maddening soul,
The heart—the heart—is lonely still.

How dull! to hear the voice of those Whom rank or chance, whom wealth or
power,
Have made, though neither friends nor
foes, 35
Associates of the festive hour.
Give me again a faithful few,
In years and feelings still the same.
And I will fly the midnight crew, 39
Where boist'rous joy is but a name.

And woman, lovely woman! thou,
 My hope, my comforter, my all!
 How cold must be my bosom now,
 When e'en thy smiles begin to pall!
 Without a sigh would I resign 45
 This busy scene of splendid woe,
 To make that calm contentment mine,
 Which virtue knows, or seems to
 know.

Fain would I fly the haunts of men—
 I seek to shun, not hate mankind; 50
 My breast requires the sullen glen,
 Whose gloom may suit a darken'd
 mind.
 Oh! that to me the wings were given
 Which bear the turtle to her nest!
 Then would I cleave the vault 45
 of
 heaven,
 To flee away, and be at rest.

WHEN I ROVED A YOUNG HIGHLANDER

WHEN I roved a young Highlander o'er the dark heath,
 And climb'd thy steep summit, oh
 Morven of snow!
 To gaze on the torrent that thunder'd
 beneath,
 Or the mist of the tempest that gather'd
 below, 4
 Untutor'd by science, a stranger to fear,
 And rude as the rocks where my infancy grew,
 No feeling, save one, to my bosom was
 dear;
 Need I say, my sweet Mary, 'twas centred in you?

Yet it could not be love, for I knew not the name,—
 What passion can dwell in the heart of a child? 10
 But still I perceive an emotion the same
 As I felt, when a boy, on the crag-cover'd wild:
 One image alone on my bosom impress'd,
 I loved my bleak regions, nor panted for new;
 And few were my wants, for my wishes were bless'd; 15
 And pure were my thoughts, for my soul was with you.

I arose with the dawn; with my dog as my
 guide,
 From mountain to mountain I bounded
 along;
 I breasted the billows of Dee's rushing
 tide,
 And heard at a distance the Highlander's song: 20

At eve, on my heath-cover'd couch of re-
 pose,
 No dreams, save of Mary, were spread to my view;
 And warm to the skies my devotions arose,
 For the first of my prayers was a blessing on you.

I left my bleak home, and my visions are
 gone; 25
 The mountains are vanish'd, my youth is no more;
 As the last of my race, I must wither alone,
 And delight but in days I have witness'd before:
 Ah! splendour has raised but embitter'd
 my lot;
 More dear were the scenes which my infancy knew: 30
 Though my hopes may have fail'd, yet
 they are not forgot;
 Though cold is my heart, still it lingers
 with you.

When I see some dark hill point its crest
 to the sky,
 I think of the rocks that o'ershadow
 Colbleen;
 When I see the soft blue of a love-speaking
 eye, 35
 I think of those eyes that endear'd the rude scene;
 When, haply, some light-waving locks I
 behold,
 That faintly resemble my Mary's in hue,
 I think on the long, flowing ringlets of
 gold,
 The locks that were sacred to beauty,
 and you. 40

Yet the day may arrive when the mountains once more Shall rise to my sight in their mantles of
 snow:
 But while these soar above me, unchanged
 as before,
 Will Mary be there to receive me?—ah,
 no!
 Adieu, then, ye hills, where my childhood was bred! 45
 Thou sweet flowing Dee, to thy waters
 adieu!
 No home in the forest shall shelter my
 head,— Ah! Mary, what home could be mine but with you?

TO GEORGE, EARL DELAWARR
 Oh! yes, I will own we were dear to each other;
 The friendships of childhood, though fleeting, are true;
 The love which you felt was the love of a
 brother,
 Nor less the affection I cherish'd for you.

HOURS OF IDLENESS

But Friendship can vary her gentle dominion;
 The attachment of years in a moment expires:
 Like Love, too, she moves on a swift-waving pinion,
 But glows not, like Love, with unquenchable fires.

Full oft have we wander'd through Ida together,
 And blest were the scenes of our youth, I allow:
 In the spring of our life, how serene is the weather!
 But winter's rude tempests are gathering now.

No more with affection shall memory blending,
 The wonted delights of our childhood retrace:
 When pride steels the bosom, the heart is unbending,
 And what would be justice appears a disgrace.

However, dear George, for I still must esteem you;
 The few whom I love I can never upbraid:
 The chance which has lost may in future redeem you,
 Repentance will cancel the vow you have made.

I will not complain, and though chill'd is affection,
 With me no corroding resentment shall live:
 My bosom is calm'd by the simple reflection,
 That both may be wrong, and that both should forgive.

You knew that my soul, that my heart, my existence,
 If danger demanded, were wholly your own;
 You knew me unalter'd by years or by distance,
 Devoted to love and to friendship alone.

You knew,—but away with the vain retrospection!
 The bond of affection no longer endures;
 Too late you may droop o'er the fond recollection,
 And sigh for the friend who was formerly yours.

For the present, we part,—I will hope not for ever;
 For time and regret will restore you at last:

To forget our dissension we both should endeavour,
 I ask no atonement, but days like the past.

TO THE EARL OF CLARE

'Tu semper amoris
 Sis memor, et cari comitis ne abscedat imago.'
 VAL FLAC.

FRIEND of my youth! when young we roved,
 Like striplings, mutually beloved,
 With friendship's purest glow,
 The bliss which wing'd those rosy hours
 Was such as pleasure seldom showers
 On mortals here below.

The recollection seems alone
 Dearer than all the joys I've known,
 When distant far from you:
 Though pain, 'tis still a pleasing pain,
 To trace those days and hours again,
 And sigh again, adieu!

My pensive memory lingers o'er
 Those scenes to be enjoy'd no more,
 Those scenes regretted ever;
 The measure of our youth is full,
 Life's evening dream is dark and dull,
 And we may meet—ah! never!

As when one parent spring supplies
 Two streams which from one fountain rise,
 Together join'd in vain;
 How soon, diverging from their source,
 Each, murmuring, seeks another course,
 Till mingled in the main!

Our vital streams of weal or woe,
 Though near, alas! distinctly flow,
 Nor mingle as before:
 Now swift or slow, now black or clear,
 Till death's unfathom'd gulf appear,
 And both shall quit the shore.

Our souls, my friend! which once supplied
 One wish, nor breathed a thought beside,
 Now flow in different channels:
 Disdaining humbler rural sports,
 'Tis yours to mix in polish'd courts,
 And shine in fashion's annals;

'Tis mine to waste on love my time,
 Or vent my reveries in rhyme,
 Without the aid of reason;
 For sense and reason (critics know it)
 Have quitted every amorous poet,
 Nor left a thought to seize on.

Poor LITTLE! sweet, melodious bard!
 Of late esteem'd it monstrous hard
 That he, who sang before all,—
 He who the lore of love expanded,—
 By dire reviewers should be branded
 As void of wit and moral.

And yet, while Beauty's praise is thine,
 Harmonious favourite of the Nine! 50
 Repine not at thy lot.
 Thy soothing lays may still be read,
 When Persecution's arm is dead,
 And critics are forgot.

Still I must yield those worthies merit, 55
 Who chasten, with unsparing spirit,
 Bad rhymes, and those who write them;
 And though myself may be the next
 By criticism to be vexed,
 I really will not fight them. 60

Perhaps they would do quite as well
 To break the rudely sounding shell
 Of such a young beginner:
 He who offends at pert nineteen,
 Ere thirty may become, I ween,
 A very harden'd sinner.

Now, Clare, I must return to you;
 And, sure, apologies are due:
 Accept, then, my concession.
 In truth, dear Clare, in fancy's flight 70
 I soar along from left to right;
 My muse admires digression.

I think I said 'twould be your fate
 To add one star to royal state;—
 May regal smiles attend you!
 And should a noble monarch reign,
 You will not seek his smiles in vain,
 If worth can recommend you.

Yet since in danger courts abound,
 Where specious rivals glitter round, 80
 From snares may saints preserve you;
 And grant your love or friendship ne'er
 From any claim a kindred care,
 But those who best deserve you!

Not for a moment may you stray
 From truth's secure, unerring way!
 May no delights decoy!
 O'er roses may your footsteps move,
 Your smiles be ever smiles of love,
 Your tears be tears of joy!

Oh! if you wish that happiness
 Your coming days and years may bless,
 And virtues crown your brow;
 Be still as you were wont to be,
 Spotless as you've been known to me,—
 Be still as you are now. 96

And though some trifling share of praise,
 To cheer my last declining days,
 To me were doubly dear;
 Whilst blessing your beloved name 100
 I'd waive at once a poet's fame,
 To prove a prophet here.

LINES WRITTEN BENEATH AN ELM IN THE CHURCHYARD OF HARROW

SPOT of my youth! whose hoary branches
 sigh,
 Swept by the breeze that fans thy cloudless sky;
 Where now alone I muse, who oft have trod,
 With those I loved, thy soft and verdant sod;
 With those who, scatter'd far, perchance deplore, 5
 Like me, the happy scenes they knew before:
 Oh! as I trace again thy winding hill,
 Mine eyes admire, my heart adores thee
 still,
 Thou drooping Elm! beneath whose boughs I lay, 65
 And frequent mused the twilight hours
 away; 10
 Where, as they once were wont, my limbs
 recline,
 But, ah! without the thoughts which then were mine: 70
 How do thy branches, moaning to the blast,
 Invite the bosom to recall the past,
 And seem to whisper, as they gently swell,
 'Take, while thou canst, a lingering, last
 farewell!' 16

When fate shall chill, at length, this fever'd breast,
 And calm its cares and passions into rest, Oft have I thought, 'twould soothe my dying hour,—
 If aught may soothe when life resigns her
 power,— 20
 To know some humble grave, some narrow cell,
 Would hide my bosom where it loved to
 dwell;
 With this fond dream, methinks 'twere
 sweet to die—
 And here it linger'd, here my heart might
 lie;
 Here might I sleep where all my hopes arose, 25
 Scene of my youth, and couch of my re-
 pose;
 For ever stretch'd beneath this mantling
 shade,
 Press'd by the turf where once my childhood play'd;
 Wrapt by the soil that veils the spot I loved,
 Mix'd with the earth o'er which my footsteps moved; 30
 Blest by the tongues that charm'd my youthful ear,
 Mourn'd by the few my soul acknowledged here;
 Deplored by those in early days allied,
 And unremember'd by the world beside.

THE ADIEU

WRITTEN UNDER THE IMPRESSION THAT THE AUTHOR WOULD SOON DIE

ADIEU, thou Hill! where early joy
Spread roses o'er my brow;
Where Science seeks each loitering boy
With knowledge to endow.
Adieu, my youthful friends or foes, 5
Partners of former bliss or woes;
No more through Ida's paths we stray;
Soon must I share the gloomy cell,
Whose ever-slumbering inmates dwell
Unconscious of the day. 10

Adieu, ye hoary Regal Fanes,
Ye spires of Granta's vale,
Where Learning robed in sable reigns,
And Melancholy pale.
Ye comrades of the jovial hour, 15
Ye tenants of the classic bower,
On Cama's verdant margin placed,
Adieu! while memory still is mine,
For, offerings on Oblivion's shrine,
These scenes must be effaced. 20

Adieu, ye mountains of the clime
Where grew my youthful years;
Where Loch na Garr in snows sublime
His giant summit rears.
Why did my childhood wander forth 25
From you, ye regions of the North,
With sons of pride to roam?
Why did I quit my Highland cave,
Mar's dusky heath, and Dee's clear wave,
To seek a Sotheron home! 30

Hall of my Sires! a long farewell—
Yet why to thee adieu?
Thy vaults will echo back my knell,
Thy towers my tomb will view:
The faltering tongue which sung thy fall,
And former glories of thy Hall, 36
Forgets its wonted simple note—
But yet the Lyre retains the strings,
And sometimes, on Æolian wings,
In dying strains may float. 40

Fields, which surround yon rustic cot,
While yet I linger here,
Adieu! you are not now forgot,
To retrospection dear. 44
Streamlet! along whose rippling surge
My youthful limbs were wont to urge,
At noontide heat, their pliant course;
Plunging with ardour from the shore,
Thy springs will lave these limbs no more,
Deprived of active force. 50

And shall I here forget the scene,
Still nearest to my breast?
Rocks rise and rivers roll between
The spot which passion blest;
Yet, Mary, all thy beauties seem 55
Fresh as in Love's bewitching dream,
To me in smiles display'd;
Till slow disease resigns his prey
To Death, the parent of decay,
Thine image cannot fade. 60

And thou, my Friend! whose gentle love
Yet thrills my bosom's chords,
How much thy friendship was above
Description's power of words!
Still near my breast thy gift I wear 65
Which sparkled once with Feeling's tear,
Of Love the pure, the sacred gem;
Our souls were equal, and our lot
In that dear moment quite forgot;
Let Pride alone condemn! 70

All, all is dark and cheerless now!
No smile of Love's deceit
Can warm my veins with wonted glow,
Can bid Life's pulses beat:
Not e'en the hope of future fame 75
Can wake my faint, exhausted frame,
Or crown with fancied wreaths my
head.
Mine is a short inglorious race,—
To humble in the dust my face,
And mingle with the dead. 80

Oh Fame! thou goddess of my heart;
On him who gains thy praise,
Pointless must fall the Spectre's dart,
Consumed in Glory's blaze;
But me she beckons from the earth, 85
My name obscure, unmark'd my birth,
My life a short and vulgar dream:
Lost in the dull, ignoble crowd,
My hopes recline within a shroud,
My fate is Lethe's stream. 90

When I repose beneath the sod,
Unheeded in the clay,
Where once my playful footsteps trod,
Where now my head must lay,
The meed of Pity will be shed 95
In dew-drops o'er my narrow bed,
By nightly skies, and storms alone;
No mortal eye will deign to steep
With tears the dark sepulchral deep
Which hides a name unknown. 100

Forget this world, my restless sprite,
 Turn, turn thy thoughts to Heaven:
 There must thou soon direct thy flight,
 If errors are forgiven.
 To bigots and to sects unknown, 105
 Bow down beneath the Almighty's Throne;
 To Him address thy trembling prayer:
 He, who is merciful and just,
 Will not reject a child of dust,
 Although his meanest care.

Father of Light! to Thee I call;
 My soul is dark within:
 Thou who canst mark the sparrow's fall,
 Avert the death of sin.
 Thou, who canst guide the wandering star,
 Who calm'st the elemental war, 116
 Whose mantle is yon boundless sky,
 My thoughts, my words, my crimes forgive:
 And, since I soon must cease to live,
 Instruct me how to die. 120

TO A VAIN LADY

Ah! heedless girl! why thus disclose
 What ne'er was meant for other ears:
 Why thus destroy thine own repose
 And dig the source of future tears?

Oh, thou wilt weep, imprudent maid, 5
 While lurking envious foes will smile,
 For all the follies thou hast said
 Of those who spoke but to beguile.

Vain girl! thy ling'ring woes are nigh,
 If thou believ'st what striplings say:
 Oh, from the deep temptation fly, 11
 Nor fall the specious spoiler's prey.

Dost thou repeat, in childish boast,
 The words man utters to deceive?
 Thy peace, thy hope, thy all is lost, 15
 If thou canst venture to believe.

While now amongst thy female peers
 Thou tell'st again the soothing tale,
 Canst thou not mark the rising sneers
 Duplicity in vain would veil? 20

These tales in secret silence hush,
 Nor make thyself the public gaze:
 What modest maid without a blush
 Recounts a flattering coxcomb's praise?

Will not the laughing boy despise 25
 Her who relates each fond conceit—
 Who, thinking Heaven is in her eyes,
 Yet cannot see the slight deceit?

For she who takes a soft delight
 These amorous nothings in revealing,
 Must credit all we say or write, 31
 While vanity prevents concealing.

Cease, if you prize your beauty's reign!
 No jealousy bids me reprove:
 One, who is thus from nature vain, 35
 I pity, but I cannot love.

TO ANNE

OH, Anne, your offences to me have been grievous:
 I thought from my wrath no atonement could save you:
 But woman is made to command and deceive us—
 I look'd in your face, and I almost forgave you.
 I vow'd I could ne'er for a moment respect you, 5
 Yet thought that a day's separation was
 long;
 When we met, I determin'd again to suspect you—
 Your smile soon convinced me suspicion was wrong.

I swore, in a transport of young indigna-
 tion,
 With fervent contempt evermore to disdain you: 10
 I saw you—my anger became admiration;
 And now, all my wish, all my hope's to regain you.

With beauty like yours, oh, how vain the contention!
 Thus lowly I sue for forgiveness before
 you;
 At once to conclude such a fruitless dissension, 15
 Be false, my sweet Anne, when I cease to adore you!

 [First published, 1832.]

TO THE SAME

OH, say not, sweet Anne, that the Fates
 have decreed
 The heart which adores you should wish to disserve;
 Such Fates were to me most unkind ones
 indeed,—
 To bear me from love and from beauty
 for ever.

Your frowns, lovely girl, are the Fates which alone 5
 Could bid me from fond admiration
 refrain;
 By these, every hope, every wish were
 o'erthrown,
 Till smiles should restore me to rapture
 again.

OCCASIONAL PIECES

As the ivy and oak, in the forest entwined,
The rage of the tempest united must weather;
My love and my life were by nature design'd
To flourish alike, or to perish together.

Then say not, sweet Anne, that the Fates
have decreed
Your lover should bid you a lasting
adieu;
Till Fate can ordain that his bosom shall
bleed,
His soul, his existence, are centred in
you.

TO THE AUTHOR OF A SONNET

BEGINNING "SAD IS MY VERSE," YOU SAY,
"AND YET NO TEAR,"

THY verse is 'sad' enough, no doubt:
A devilish deal more sad than witty!
Why we should weep I can't find out,
Unless for thee we weep in pity.

Yet there is one I pity more;
And much, alas! I think he needs it;
For he, I'm sure, will suffer sore,
Who, to his own misfortune, reads it.

Thy rhymes, without the aid of magic,
May once be read—but never after:
Yet their effect's by no means tragic, 11
Although by far too dull for laughter.

But would you make our bosoms bleed,
And of no common pang complain—
If you would make us weep indeed, 15
Tell us, you'll read them o'er again.

ON FINDING A FAN

In one who felt as once he felt,
This might, perhaps, have fann'd the
flame;
But now his heart no more will melt,
Because that heart is not the same.

As when the ebbing flames are low, 5
The aid which once improved their
light,
And bade them burn with fiercer glow,
Now quenches all their blaze in night.

Thus has it been with passion's fires—
As many a boy and girl remembers—
While every hope of love expires, 11
Extinguish'd with the dying embers.

The first, though not a spark survive,
Some careful hand may teach to burn;
The last, alas! can ne'er survive; 15
No touch can bid its warmth return.

Or, if it chance to wake again,
Not always doom'd its heat to smother,
It sheds (so wayward fates ordain)
Its former warmth around another. 20

FAREWELL TO THE MUSE

THOU Power! who hast ruled me through infancy's days,
Young offspring of fancy, 'tis time we should part;
Then rise on the gale this the last of my lays,
The coldest effusion which springs from
my heart.

This bosom, responsive to rapture no
more, 5
Shall hush thy wild notes, nor implore thee to sing;
The feelings of childhood, which taught thee to soar,
Are wafted far distant on Apathy's
wing.

Though simple the themes of my rude flowing Lyre,
Yet even these themes are departed for
ever; 10
No more beam the eyes which my dream
could inspire,
My visions are flown, to return,—alas!
never.

When drain'd is the nectar which gladdens
the bowl,
How vain is the effort delight to pro-
long!
When cold is the beauty which dwelt in my soul, 15
What magic of Fancy can lengthen my
song?

Can the lips sing of Love in the desert
alone,
Of kisses and smiles which they now must resign?
Or dwell with delight on the hours that are flown?
Ah, no! for those hours can no longer be mine. 20

Can they speak of the friends that I lived but to love?
Ah, surely affection ennobles the strain!
But how can my numbers in sympathy
move,
When I scarcely can hope to behold them again?

Can I sing of the deeds which my Fathers
have done, 25
And raise my loud harp to the fame of my Sires?

For glories, like theirs, oh, how faint is my tone!
For Heroes' exploits how unequal my fires!

'Untouch'd, then, my Lyre shall reply to the blast—
'Tis hush'd; and my feeble endeavours are o'er;
And those who have heard it will pardon the past,
When they know that its murmurs shall vibrate no more.

And soon shall its wild erring notes be forgot,
Since early affection and love are o'er-cast:
Oh! blest had my fate been, and happy my lot,
Had the first strain of love been the dearest, the last.

Farewell, my young Muse! since we now can ne'er meet;
If our songs have been languid, they surely are few;
Let us hope that the present at least will be sweet—
The present—which seals our eternal Adieu.

TO AN OAK AT NEWSTEAD

YOUNG Oak! when I planted thee deep in the ground,
I hoped that thy days would be longer than mine;
That thy dark-waving branches would flourish around,
And ivy thy trunk with its mantle entwined.

Such, such was my hope, when in infancy's years,
On the land of my fathers I rear'd thee with pride;
They are past, and I water thy stem with my tears,—
Thy decay not the weeds that surround thee can hide.

I left thee, my Oak, and, since that fatal hour,
A stranger has dwelt in the hall of my sire;
Till manhood shall crown me, not mine is the power,
But his, whose neglect may have bade thee expire.

Oh! hardy thou wert—even now little care
Might revive thy young head, and thy wounds gently heal:

But thou wert not fated affection to share—
For who could suppose that a stranger would feel!

Ah, droop not, my Oak! lift thy head for a while;
Ere twice round yon Glory this planet shall run,
The hand of thy Master will teach thee to smile,
When Infancy's years of probation are done.

Oh, live then, my Oak! tow'r aloft from the weeds,
That clog thy young growth, and assist thy decay,
For still in thy bosom are life's early seeds,
And still may thy branches their beauty display.

Oh! yet, if maturity's years may be thine,
Though I shall lie low in the cavern of death,
On thy leaves yet the day-beam of ages may shine,
Uninjured by time, or the rude winter's breath.

For centuries still may thy boughs lightly wave
O'er the corse of thy lord in thy canopy laid;
While the branches thus gratefully shelter his grave,
The chief who survives may recline in thy shade.

And as he, with his boys, shall revisit this spot,
He will tell them in whispers more softly to tread.

Oh! surely, by these I shall ne'er be forgot;
Remembrance still hallows the dust of the dead.

And here, will they say, when in life's glowing prime,
Perhaps he has pour'd forth his young simple lay,
And here must he sleep, till the moments of time
Are lost in the hours of Eternity's day.

ON REVISITING HARROW

HERE once engaged the stranger's view
Young Friendship's record simply traced;
Few were her words,—but yet, though few,
Resentment's hand the line defaced.

OCCASIONAL PIECES

Deeply she cut—but not erased,
The characters were still so plain,
That Friendship once return'd, and gazed,—
Till Memory hail'd the words again.

Repentance placed them as before;
Forgiveness join'd her gentle name;
So fair the inscription seem'd once more,
That Friendship thought it still the
same.

Thus might the Record now have been;
But, ah, in spite of Hope's endeavour,
Or Friendship's tears, Pride rush'd between,
And blotted out the line for ever.

EPITAPH ON JOHN ADAMS, OF SOUTHWELL

A CARRIER, WHO DIED OF DRUNKENNESS

JOHN ADAMS lies here, of the parish of Southwell,

A Carrier who carried his can to his mouth
well:

He carried so much, and he carried so fast,
He could carry no more—so was carried
at last;

For, the liquor he drank, being too much for one,

He could not carry off,—so he's now
carri-on.

September 1807.

TO MY SON

THOSE flaxen locks, those eyes of blue,
Bright as thy mother's in their hue;
Those rosy lips, whose dimples play
And smile to steal the heart away,
Recall a scene of former joy,
And touch thy father's heart, my Boy!

And thou canst lisp a father's name—
Ah, William, were thine own the same,—
No self-reproach—but, let me cease—
My care for thee shall purchase peace; 10
Thy mother's shade shall smile in joy,
And pardon all the past, my Boy!

Her lowly grave the turf has prest,
And thou hast known a stranger's breast;
Derision sneers upon thy birth, 15
And yields thee scarce a name on earth;
Yet shall not these one hope destroy,—
A Father's heart is thine, my Boy!

Why, let the world unfeeling frown,
Must I fond Nature's claim disown? 20
Ah, no—though moralists reprove,
I hail thee, dearest child of love,
Fair cherub, pledge of youth and joy—
A Father guards thy birth, my Boy!

Oh, 'twill be sweet in thee to trace, 25
Ere age has wrinkled o'er my face,
Ere half my glass of life is run,
At once a brother and a son;
And all my wane of years employ
In justice done to thee, my Boy! 30

Although so young thy heedless sire,
Youth will not damp parental fire;
And, wert thou still less dear to me,
While Helen's form revives in thee,
The breast which beat to former joy, 35
Will ne'er desert its pledge, my Boy!

1807. [First published, 1830.]

FAREWELL! IF EVER FONDEST PRAYER

FAREWELL! if ever fondest prayer
For other's weal avail'd on high,
Mine will not all be lost in air,
But waft thy name beyond the sky. 4
'Twere vain to speak, to weep, to sigh:
Oh! more than tears of blood can tell,
When wrung from guilt's expiring eye,
Are in that word—Farewell!—Fare-
well!

These lips are mute, these eyes are dry;
But in my breast and in my brain, 10
Awake the pangs that pass not by,
The thought that ne'er shall sleep again.
My soul nor deigns nor dares complain,
Though grief and passion there rebel;
I only know we loved in vain— 15
I only feel—Farewell!—Farewell!

1808.

BRIGHT BE THE PLACE OF THY SOUL

BRIGHT be the place of thy soul!
No lovelier spirit than thine
E'er burst from its mortal control
In the orbs of the blessed to shine.

On earth thou wert all but divine, 5
As thy soul shall immortally be;
And our sorrow may cease to repine,
When we know that thy God is with
thee.

Light be the turf of thy tomb!
May its verdure like emeralds be: 10
There should not be the shadow of gloom
In aught that reminds us of thee.

Young flowers and an evergreen tree
May spring from the spot of thy rest:
But nor cypress nor yew let us see; 15
For why should we mourn for the blest!

1808.

WHEN WE TWO PARTED

WHEN we two parted
In silence and tears,
Half broken-hearted
To sever for years,
Pale grew thy cheek and cold,
Colder thy kiss;
Truly that hour foretold
Sorrow to this.

The dew of the morning
Sunk chill on my brow—
It felt like the warning
Of what I feel now.
Thy vows are all broken,
And light is thy fame:
I hear thy name spoken,
And share in its shame.

They name thee before me,
A knell to mine ear;
A shudder comes o'er me—
Why wert thou so dear?
They know not I knew thee,
Who knew thee too well:—
Long, long shall I rue thee,
Too deeply to tell.

In secret we met—
In silence I grieve,
That thy heart could forget,
Thy spirit deceive.
If I should meet thee
After long years,
How should I greet thee?
With silence and tears.

1808.

TO A YOUTHFUL FRIEND

Few years have pass'd since thou and I
Were firmest friends, at least in name,
And childhood's gay sincerity
Preserved our feelings long the same.

But now, like me, too well thou know'st
What trifles oft the heart recall; 6
And those who once have loved the most
Too soon forget they loved at all.

And such the change the heart displays,
So frail is early friendship's reign, 10
A month's brief lapse, perhaps a day's,
Will view thy mind estranged again.

If so, it never shall be mine
To mourn the loss of such a heart; 14
The fault was Nature's fault, not thine,
Which made thee fickle as thou art.

As rolls the ocean's changing tide,
So human feelings ebb and flow;
And who would in a breast confide
Where stormy passions ever glow? 20

It boots not that, together bred,
Our childish days were days of joy:
My spring of life has quickly fled;
Thou, too, hast ceased to be a boy.

And when we bid adieu to youth, 25
Slaves to the specious world's control,
We sigh a long farewell to truth;
That world corrupts the noblest soul.

Ah, joyous season! when the mind
Dares all things boldly but to lie; 30
When thought ere spoke is unconfined,
And sparkles in the placid eye.

Not so in Man's maturer years,
When Man himself is but a tool; 34
When interest sways our hopes and fears,
And all must love and hate by rule.

With fools in kindred vice the same,
We learn at length our faults to blend;
20 And those, and those alone, may claim
The prostituted name of friend. 40

Such is the common lot of man:
Can we then 'scape from folly free?
Can we reverse the general plan,
25 Nor be what all in turn must be?

No; for myself, so dark my fate 45
Through every turn of life hath been;
Man and the world so much I hate,
30 I care not when I quit the scene.

But thou, with spirit frail and light,
Wilt shine awhile, and pass away; 50
As glow-worms sparkle through the night,
But dare not stand the test of day.

Alas! whenever folly calls
Where parasites and princes meet (For cherish'd first in royal halls, 55
The welcome vices kindly greet),

Ev'n now thou'rt nightly seen to add
One insect to the fluttering crowd;
And still thy trifling heart is glad 59
To join the vain and court the proud.

There dost thou glide from fair to fair,
Still simpering on with eager haste,
As flies along the gay parterre
That taint the flowers they scarcely taste.

But say, what nymph will prize the flame
Which seems, as marshy vapours move,
To flit along from dame to dame, 67
An ignis-fatuus gleam of love?

What friend for thee, howe'er inclined,
Will deign to own a kindred care? 70
Who will debase his manly mind,
For friendship every fool may share?

OCCASIONAL PIECES

In time forbear; amidst the throng
No more so base a thing be seen;
No more so idly pass along; 75
Be something, anything, but—mean.
1808.

LINES INSCRIBED UPON A CUP FORMED FROM A SKULL

START not—nor deem my spirit fled;
In me behold the only skull,
From which, unlike a living head,
Whatever flows is never dull.
I lived, I loved, I quaff'd, like thee: 5
I died: let earth my bones resign;
Fill up—thou canst not injure me;
The worm hath fouler lips than thine.

Better to hold the sparkling grape,
Than nurse the earth-worm's slimy brood; 10

And circle in the goblet's shape
The drink of gods, than reptile's food.

Where once my wit, perchance, hath shone,
In aid of others' let me shine;
And when, alas! our brains are gone, 15
What nobler substitute than wine?

Quaff while thou canst: another race,
When thou and thine, like me, are sped,
May rescue thee from earth's embrace,
And rhyme and revel with the dead.

Why not? since through life's little day
Our heads such sad effects produce;
Redeem'd from worms and wasting clay,
This chance is theirs, to be of use.

Newstead Abbey, 1808.

WELL! THOU ART HAPPY

WELL! thou art happy, and I feel
That I should thus be happy too;
For still my heart regards thy weal
Warmly, as it was wont to do. 4

Thy husband's blest—and 'twill impart
Some pangs to view his happier lot:
But let them pass—Oh! how my heart
Would hate him if he loved thee not!

When late I saw thy favourite child, 9
I thought my jealous heart would break;
But when the unconscious infant smiled,
I kiss'd it for its mother's sake. 12

I kiss'd it,—and repress'd my sighs
Its father in its face to see;
But then it had its mother's eyes, 15
And they were all to love and me.

Mary, adieu! I must away:
While thou art blest I'll not repine;
But near thee I can never stay;
My heart would soon again be thine.

I deem'd that time, I deem'd that pride,
Had quench'd at length my boyish
flame;
Nor knew, till seated by thy side,
My heart in all,—save hope,—the same.

Yet was I calm: I knew the time 25
My breast would thrill before thy look;
But now to tremble were a crime—
We met,—and not a nerve was shook.

I saw thee gaze upon my face,
Yet meet with no confusion there: 30
One only feeling could'st thou trace;
The sullen calmness of despair.

Away! away! my early dream
Remembrance never must awake:
Oh! where is Lethe's fabled stream? 35
My foolish heart, be still, or break.

INSCRIPTION ON THE MONU- MENT OF A NEWFOUNDLAND DOG

WHEN some proud son of man returns to
earth,

Unknown to glory, but upheld by birth,
The sculptor's art exhausts the pomp of
woe,

And storied urns record who rest below:
When all is done, upon the tomb is seen,
Not what he was, but what he should have been: 6

But the poor dog, in life the firmest friend,
The first to welcome, foremost to defend,
Whose honest heart is still his master's
own,

Who labours, fights, lives, breathes for him alone. 10

Unhonour'd falls, unnoticed all his worth,
Denied in heaven the soul he held on earth, While man, vain insect! hopes to be for-
given,

And claims himself a sole exclusive heaven.
Oh man! thou feeble tenant of an hour,
Debased by slavery, or corrupt by power,
Who knows thee well must quit thee with disgust, 17

Degraded mass of animated dust!
Thy love is lust, thy friendship all a cheat,
Thy smiles hypocrisy, thy words deceit!
By nature vile, ennobled but by name,
Each kindred brute might bid thee blush
for shame.

Ye! who perchance behold this simple urn, Pass on—it honours none you wish to
mourn:

To mark a friend's remains these stones
arise; 25

19 I never knew but one,—and here he lies.

Newstead Abbey, November 30, 1808.

TO A LADY

WHEN BEING ASKED MY REASON FOR QUITTING ENGLAND IN THE SPRING

WHEN Man, expell'd from Eden's bowers,
A moment linger'd near the gate,
Each scene recall'd the vanish'd hours,
And bade him curse his future fate.

But, wandering on through distant climes,
He learnt to bear his load of grief; 6
Must gave a sigh to other times,
And found in busier scenes relief.

Thus, lady! will it be with me,
And I must view thy charms no more;
For, while I linger near to thee, 11
I sigh for all I knew before.

In flight I shall be surely wise,
Escaping from temptation's snare;
I cannot view my paradise 15
Without the wish of dwelling there.

December 2, 1808.

REMINDE ME NOT, REMINDE ME
NOT

REMINDE me not, remind me not,
Of those beloved, those vanish'd hours,
When all my soul was given to thee;
Hours that may never be forgot,
Till time unnerves our vital powers, 5
And thou and I shall cease to be.

Can I forget—canst thou forget,
When playing with thy golden hair,
How quick thy fluttering heart did
move?

Oh! by my soul, I see thee yet, 10
With eyes so languid, breast so fair,
And lips, though silent, breathing
love.

When thus reclining on my breast,
Those eyes threw back a glance so sweet,
As half reproach'd yet raised desire,
And still we near and nearer prest, 16
And still our glowing lips would meet,
As if in kisses to expire.

And then those pensive eyes would close,
And bid their lids each other seek, 20
Veiling the azure orbs below;
While their long lashes' darken'd gloss
Seem'd stealing o'er thy brilliant cheek,
Like raven's plumage smooth'd on
snow.

I dreamt last night our love return'd, 25
And, sooth to say, that very dream
Was sweeter in its phantasy,
Than if for other hearts I burn'd,
For eyes that ne'er like thine could beam
In rapture's wild reality. 30

Then tell me not, remind me not,
Of hours which, though for ever gone,
Can still a pleasing dream restore,
Till thou and I shall be forgot, 34
And senseless, as the mouldering stone
Which tells that we shall be no more.

THERE WAS A TIME, I NEED NOT
NAME

THERE was a time, I need not name,
Since it will ne'er forgotten be,
When all our feelings were the same
As still my soul hath been to thee.

And from that hour when first thy tongue
Confess'd a love which equall'd mine, Though many a grief my heart hath wrung, 7
Unknown, and thus unfelt, by thine,

None, none hath sunk so deep as this—
To think how all that love hath flown;
Transient as every faithless kiss, 11
But transient in thy breast alone.

And yet my heart some solace knew,
When late I heard thy lips declare,
In accents once imagined true, 15
Remembrance of the days that were.

Yes! my adored, yet most unkind!
Though thou wilt never love again,
To me 'tis doubly sweet to find
Remembrance of that love remain. 20

Yes! 'tis a glorious thought to me,
Nor longer shall my soul repine,
Whate'er thou art or e'er shalt be,
Thou hast been dearly, solely mine.

AND WILT THOU WEEP WHEN I AM LOW?

AND wilt thou weep when I am low?
Sweet lady! speak those words again
Yet if they grieve thee, say not so—
I would not give that bosom pain.

My heart is sad, my hopes are gone, 5
My blood runs coldly through my
breast;
And when I perish, thou alone
Wilt sigh above my place of rest.

And yet, methinks, a gleam of peace
Doth through my cloud of anguish
shine: 10

And for a while my sorrows cease,
To know thy heart hath felt for mine.

Oh lady! blessed be that tear—
It falls for one who cannot weep;
Such precious drops are doubly dear 15
To those whose eyes no tear may steep.

OCCASIONAL PIECES

Sweet lady! once my heart was warm
 With every feeling soft as thine;
 But beauty's self hath ceased to charm
 A wretch created to repine. 20

Yet wilt thou weep when I am low?
 Sweet lady! speak those words again:
 Yet if they grieve thee, say not so—
 I would not give that bosom pain.

FILL THE GOBLET AGAIN

A SONG

FILL the goblet again! for I never before Felt the glow which now gladdens my heart to its core;
 Let us drink!—who would not?—since,
 through life's varied round,
 In the goblet alone no deception is found.

I have tried in its turn all that life can supply; 5
 I have bask'd in the beam of a dark rolling
 eye;
 I have loved!—who has not?—but what heart can declare That pleasure existed while passion was
 there?

In the days of my youth, when the heart's in its spring,
 And dreams that affection can never take
 wing, 10
 I had friends!—who has not?—but what tongue will avow,
 That friends, rosy wine! are so faithful as
 thou?

The heart of a mistress some boy may estrange,
 Friendship shifts with the sunbeam—thou never canst change;
 Thou grow'st old—who does not?—but on earth what appears, 15
 Whose virtues, like thine, still increase with its years?

Yet if blest to the utmost that love can bestow,
 Should a rival bow down to our idol
 below,
 We are jealous!—who's not?—thou hast
 no such alloy;
 For the more that enjoy thee, the more we enjoy. 20

Then the season of youth and its vanities
 past,
 For refuge we fly to the goblet at last;
 There we find—do we not?—in the flow of the soul,
 That truth, as of yore, is confined to the bowl.

When the box of Pandora was opened on
 earth, 25
 And Misery's triumph commenced over
 Mirth,
 Hope was left,—was she not?—but the
 goblet we kiss,
 And care not for Hope, who are certain of bliss.

Long life to the grape! for when summer
 is flown,
 The age of our nectar shall gladden our
 own: 30
 We must die—who shall not?—May our sins be forgiven,
 And Hebe shall never be idle in heaven.

STANZAS TO A LADY, ON LEAVING ENGLAND

'Tis done—and shivering in the gale
 The bark unfurls her snowy sail;
 And whistling o'er the bending mast,
 Loud sings on high the fresh'ning blast;
 And I must from this land be gone, 5
 Because I cannot love but one.

But could I be what I have been,
 And could I see what I have seen—
 Could I repose upon the breast
 Which once my warmest wishes blest—
 I should not seek another zone 10
 Because I cannot love but one.

'Tis long since I beheld that eye
 Which gave me bliss or misery;
 And I have striven, but in vain, 15
 Never to think of it again:
 For though I fly from Albion,
 I still can only love but one.

As some lone bird, without a mate,
 My weary heart is desolate; 20
 I look around, and cannot trace
 One friendly smile or welcome face,
 And ev'n in crowds am still alone,
 Because I cannot love but one.

And I will cross the whitening foam, 25
 And I will seek a foreign home;
 Till I forget a false fair face,
 I ne'er shall find a resting-place;
 My own dark thoughts I cannot shun,
 But ever love, and love but one. 30

The poorest, veriest wretch on earth
 Still finds some hospitable hearth,
 Where friendship's or love's softer glow
 May smile in joy or soothe in woe;
 But friend or leman I have none, 35
 Because I cannot love but one.

go—but wheresoe'er I flee
 There's not an eye will weep for me;
 There's not a kind congenial heart,
 Where I can claim the meanest part; 40
 For thou, who hast my hopes undone,
 Wilt sigh, although I love but one.

To think of every early scene,
 Of what we are, and what we've been,
 Would overwhelm some softer hearts with
 woe— 45

But mine, alas! has stood the blow:
 Yet still beats on as it begun,
 And never truly loves but one.

And who that dear loved one may be,
 Is not for vulgar eyes to see; 50
 And why that early love was cross'd,
 Thou know'st the best, I feel the most:
 But few that dwell beneath the sun
 Have loved so long, and loved but one.

I've tried another's fetters too, 55
 With charms perchance as fair to view;
 And I would fain have loved as well,
 But some unconquerable spell
 Forbade my bleeding breast to own
 A kindred care for aught but one. 60

'Twould soothe to take one lingering view,
 And bless thee in my last adieu;
 Yet wish I not those eyes to weep
 For him that wanders o'er the deep; 64
 His home, his hope, his youth are gone,
 Yet still he loves, and loves but one.

LINES TO MR. HODGSON

WRITTEN ON BOARD THE LISBON PACKET

HUZZA! Hodgson, we are going,
 Our embargo's off at last;
 Favourable breezes blowing
 Bend the canvas o'er the mast.
 From aloft the signal's streaming, 5
 Hark! the farewell gun is fired;
 Women screeching, tars blaspheming,
 Tell us that our time's expired.
 Here's a rascal
 Come to task all, 10
 Prying from the custom-house,
 Trunks unpacking,
 Cases cracking,
 Not a corner for a mouse
 Scapes unsearch'd amid the racket, 15
 Ere we sail on board the Packet.

Now our boatmen quit their mooring,
 And all hands must ply the oar;
 Baggage from the quay is lowering,
 We're impatient, push from shore. 20
 Have a care! that case holds liquor—
 Stop the boat—I'm sick—oh Lord!"

'Sick, ma'am, damme, you'll be sicker
 Ere you've been an hour on board.'
 Thus are screaming 25
 Men and women,
 Gemmen, ladies, servants, Jacks;
 Here entangling,
 All are wrangling,
 Stuck together close as wax.— 30
 Such the general noise and racket,
 Ere we reach the Lisbon Packet.

Now we've reach'd her, lo! the captain,
 Gallant Kidd, commands the crew;
 Passengers their berths are clapt in, 35
 Some to grumble, some to spew.
 'Heyday! call you that a cabin?
 Why 'tis hardly three feet square:
 Not enough to stow Queen Mab in—
 Who the deuce can harbour there?' 40
 'Who, sir? plenty—Nobles twenty
 Did at once my vessel fill.'—
 'Did they? Jesus,
 How you squeeze us! 45
 Would to God they did so still:
 Then I'd scape the heat and racket
 Of the good ship, Lisbon Packet.'

Fletcher! Murray! Bob! where are you?
 Stretch'd along the deck like logs—
 Bear a hand, you jolly tar, you! 51
 Here's a rope's end for the dogs.
 Hobhouse muttering fearful curses,
 As the hatchway down he rolls,
 Now his breakfast, now his verses, 55
 Vomits forth—and damns our souls.
 'Here's a stanza
 On Braganza—
 Help!'—'A couplet?'—'No, a cup
 Of warm water—' 60
 'What's the matter?'
 'Zounds! my liver's coming up:
 I shall not survive the racket
 Of this brutal Lisbon Packet.'

Now at length we're off for Turkey, 65
 Lord knows when we shall come back!
 Breezes foul and tempests murky
 May unship us in a crack.
 But, since life at most a jest is, 70
 As philosophers allow,
 Still to laugh by far the best is,
 Then laugh on—as I do now.
 Laugh at all things,
 Great and small things, 75
 Sick or well, at sea or shore;
 While we're quaffing,
 Let's have laughing—
 Who the devil cares for more?—
 Some good wine! and who would lack it,
 Ev'n on board the Lisbon Packet? 80

OCCASIONAL PIECES

TO FLORENCE

OH Lady! when I left the shore,
The distant shore which gave me birth,
I hardly thought to grieve once more
To quit another spot on earth:

Yet here, amidst this barren isle, ⁵
Where panting Nature droops the head,
Where only thou art seen to smile,
I view my parting hour with dread.

Though far from Albin's craggy shore,
Divided by the dark-blue main; ¹⁰
A few, brief, rolling seasons o'er,
Perchance I view her cliffs again:

But wheresoe'er I now may roam,
Through scorching clime, and varied ¹⁴
sea,
Though Time restore me to my home,
I ne'er shall bend mine eyes on thee:

On thee, in whom at once conspire
All charms which heedless hearts can ¹⁹
move,
Whom but to see is to admire,
And, oh! forgive the word—to love.

Forgive the word, in one who ne'er
With such a word can more offend;
And since thy heart I cannot share,
Believe me, what I am, thy friend.

And who so cold as look on thee, ²⁵
Thou lovely wand'rer, and be less?
Nor be, what man should ever be,
The friend of Beauty in distress?

Ah! who would think that form had past
Through Danger's most destructive ³⁰
path,
Had braved the death-wing'd tempest's
blast,
And 'scaped a tyrant's fiercer wrath?

Lady! when I shall view the walls
Where free Byzantium once arose, ³⁵
And Stamboul's Oriental halls
The Turkish tyrants now enclose;

Though mightiest in the lists of fame,
That glorious city still shall be;
On me 'twill hold a dearer claim,
As spot of thy nativity: ⁴⁰

And though I bid thee now farewell,
When I behold that wondrous scene,
Since where thou art I may not dwell,
'Twill soothe to be where thou hast ⁴⁵
been.

LINES WRITTEN IN AN ALBUM, AT MALTA

As o'er the cold sepulchral stone
Some name arrests the passer-by;
Thus, when thou view'st this page alone,
May mine attract thy pensive eye!

And when by thee that name is read, ⁵
Perchance in some succeeding year,
Reflect on me as on the dead,
And think my heart is buried here.

STANZAS COMPOSED DURING A THUNDER-STORM

CHILL and mirk is the nightly blast,
Where Pindus' mountains rise,
And angry clouds are pouring fast
The vengeance of the skies.

Our guides are gone, our hope is lost, ⁵
And lightnings, as they play,
But show where rocks our path have crost,
Or gild the torrent's spray.

Is yon a cot I saw, though low?
When lightning broke the gloom— ¹⁰
How welcome were its shade!—ah, no!
'Tis but a Turkish tomb.

Through sounds of foaming waterfalls,
I hear a voice exclaim—
My way-worn countryman, who calls ¹⁵
On distant England's name.

A shot is fired—by foe or friend?
Another—'tis to tell
The mountain-peasants to descend,
And lead us where they dwell. ²⁰

Oh! who in such a night will dare
To tempt the wilderness?
And who 'mid thunder-peals can hear
Our signal of distress?

And who that heard our shouts would ²⁵
rise
To try the dubious road?
Nor rather deem from nightly cries
That outlaws were abroad.

Clouds burst, skies flash, oh, dreadful
hour!
More fiercely pours the storm! ³⁰
Yet here one thought has still the power
To keep my bosom warm.

While wandering through each broken
path,
O'er brake and craggy brow;
While elements exhaust their wrath, ³⁵
Sweet Florence, where art thou?

Not on the sea, not on the sea,
Thy bark hath long been gone:
Oh, may the storm that pours on me
Bow down my head alone!

Full swiftly blew the swift Siroc,
When last I press'd thy lip;
And long ere now, with foaming shock
Impell'd thy gallant ship.

Now thou art safe; nay, long ere now
Hast trod the shore of Spain;
'Twere hard if aught so fair as thou
Should linger on the main.

And since I now remember thee
In darkness and in dread,
As in those hours of revelry
Which mirth and music sped;

Do thou, amid the fair white walls,
If Cadiz yet be free,
At times from out her latticed halls
Look o'er the dark blue sea;

Then think upon Calypso's isles,
Endear'd by days gone by;
To others give a thousand smiles,
To me a single sigh.

And when the admiring circle mark
The paleness of thy face,
A half-form'd tear, a transient spark
Of melancholy grace,

Again thou'lt smile, and blushing shun
Some coxcomb's raillery;
Nor own for once thou thought'st on one,
Who ever thinks on thee.

Though smile and sigh alike are vain,
When sever'd hearts repine,
My spirit flies o'er mount and main,
And mourns in search of thine.

STANZAS WRITTEN IN PASSING 'THE AMBRACIAN GULF'

THROUGH cloudless skies, in silvery sheen, Full beams the moon on Actium's
coast:
And on these waves, for Egypt's queen,
The ancient world was won and lost.

And now upon the scene I look,
The azure grave of many a Roman;
Where stern Ambition once forsook
His wavering crown to follow woman.

Florence! whom I will love as well
As ever yet was said or sung (Since Orpheus sang his spouse from hell),
Whilst thou art fair and I am young;

Sweet Florence! those were pleasant times,
When worlds were staked for ladies'
eyes:
Had bards as many realms as rhymes,
Thy charms might raise new Antonies.
Though Fate forbids such things to be,
Yet, by thine eyes and ringlets curl'd!
I cannot lose a world for thee,
But would not lose thee for a world.

THE SPELL IS BROKE, THE CHARM IS FLOWN!

WRITTEN AT ATHENS, JANUARY 16, 1810

THE spell is broke, the charm is flown!
Thus is it with life's fitful fever:
We madly smile when we should groan:
Delirium is our best deceiver.

Each lucid interval of thought Recalls the woes of Nature's charter;
And he that acts as wise men ought,
But lives, as saints have died, a martyr.

WRITTEN AFTER SWIMMING FROM SESTOS TO ABYDOS

If, in the month of dark December,
Leander, who was nightly wont
(What maid will not the tale remember?)
To cross thy stream, broad Hellespont!

If, when the wintry tempest roar'd,
He sped to Hero, nothing loth,
And thus of old thy current pour'd,
Fair Venus! how I pity both!

For me, degenerate modern wretch,
Though in the genial month of May,
My dripping limbs I faintly stretch,
And think I've done a feat to-day.

But since he cross'd the rapid tide,
According to the doubtful story,
To woo,—and—Lord knows what be-
side,
And swam for Love, as I for Glory;

'Twere hard to say who fared the best:
Sad mortals! thus the gods still plague
you!

He lost his labour, I my jest;
For he was drown'd, and I've the ague.

LINES IN THE TRAVELLERS' BOOK AT ORCHOMENUS

IN THIS BOOK A TRAVELLER HAD WRITTEN:—

'FAIR Albion, smiling, sees her son depart
To trace the birth and nursery of art:
Noble his object, glorious is his aim;
He comes to Athens, and he writes his
name.'

OCCASIONAL PIECES

BENEATH WHICH LORD BYRON INSERTED
THE FOLLOWING:—

THE modest bard, like many a bard unknown,
Rhymes on our names, but wisely hides his own;
But yet, whoe'er he be, to say no worse,
His name would bring more credit than his verse.

MAID OF ATHENS, ERE WE PART

Ζωή μου, σὰς ἀγαπῶ.

MAID of Athens, ere we part,
Give, oh give me back my heart!
Or, since that has left my breast,
Keep it now, and take the rest!
Hear my vow before I go,
Ζωή μου, σὰς ἀγαπῶ.

By those tresses unconfined,
Woo'd by each Ægean wind;
By those lids whose jetty fringe
Kiss thy soft cheeks' blooming tinge;
By those wild eyes like the roe,
Ζωή μου, σὰς ἀγαπῶ.

By that lip I long to taste;
By that zone-encircled waist;
By all the token-flowers that tell
What words can never speak so well;
By love's alternate joy and woe,
Ζωή μου, σὰς ἀγαπῶ.

Maid of Athens! I am gone:
Think of me, sweet! when alone.
Though I fly to Istambol,
Athens holds my heart and soul:
Can I cease to love thee? No!
Ζωή μου, σὰς ἀγαπῶ.

TRANSLATION OF THE NURSE'S DOLE IN THE MEDEA OF EURI- PIDES

OH how I wish that an embargo
Had kept in port the good ship Argo!
Who, still unlaunch'd from Grecian docks,
Had never pass'd the Azure rocks;
But now I fear her trip will be a Damn'd business for my Miss Medea,
&c. &c.

LINES WRITTEN BENEATH A PICTURE

DEAR object of defeated care!
Though now of Love and thee bereft,
To reconcile me with despair,
Thine image and my tears are left.

'Tis said with Sorrow Time can cope; 5
But this I feel can ne'er be true:
For by the death-blow of my Hope
My Memory immortal grew.

TRANSLATION OF THE FAMOUS GREEK WAR SONG

Δεῦτε παῖδες τῶν Ἑλλήνων.

SONS of the Greeks, arise!
The glorious hour's gone forth,
And, worthy of such ties,
Display who gave us birth.

CHORUS.

Sons of Greeks! let us go 5
In arms against the foe,
Till their hated blood shall flow
In a river past our feet.

Then manfully despising
The Turkish tyrant's yoke, 10
Let your country see you rising,
And all her chains are broke.
Brave shades of chiefs and sages,
Behold the coming strife!
Hellenes of past ages, 15
Oh, start again to life!
At the sound of my trumpet, breaking
Your sleep, oh, join with me!
And the seven-hill'd city seeking,
Fight, conquer, till we're free. 20
Sons of Greeks, &c.

Sparta, Sparta, why in slumbers
Lethargic dost thou lie?
Awake, and join thy numbers
With Athens, old ally!
Leonidas recalling, 25
That chief of ancient song,
Who saved ye once from falling,
The terrible! the strong!

Who made that bold diversion
 In old Thermopylæ,
 And warring with the Persian
 To keep his country free;
 With his three hundred waging
 The battle, long he stood,
 And like a lion raging,
 Expired in seas of blood.
 Sons of Greeks, &c.

TRANSLATION OF THE ROMAIC SONG

"Μπένω μες τὸ περιβόλι Ὁραιστάτη Χαϊδέη," κ.τ.λ.

ENTER thy garden of roses,
 Beloved and fair Haidée,
 Each morning where Flora reposes,
 For surely I see her in thee.
 Oh, Lovely! thus low I implore thee, Receive this fond truth from my
 tongue,
 Which utters its song to adore thee,
 Yet trembles for what it has sung;
 As the branch, at the bidding of Nature,
 Adds fragrance and fruit to the tree,
 Through her eyes, through her every feature,
 Shines the soul of the young Haidée.

But the loveliest garden grows hateful
 When Love has abandon'd the bowers;
 Bring me hemlock—since mine is ungrateful,
 That herb is more fragrant than flowers.
 The poison, when pour'd from the chalice,
 Will deeply embitter the bowl;
 But when drunk to escape from thy malice,
 The draught shall be sweet to my soul.
 Too cruel! in vain I implore thee
 My heart from these horrors to save:
 Will nought to my bosom restore thee?
 Then open the gates of the grave.

As the chief who to combat advances
 Secure of his conquest before,
 Thus thou, with those eyes for thy lances, Hast pierced through my heart to its core.
 Ah, tell me, my soul! must I perish
 By pangs which a smile would dispel?
 Would the hope, which thou once bad'st
 me cherish,
 For torture repay me too well?
 Now sad is the garden of roses,
 Beloved but false Haidée!
 There Flora all wither'd reposes,
 And mourns o'er thine absence with me.

ON PARTING

THE kiss, dear maid! thy lip has left
 Shall never part from mine,
 Till happier hours restore the gift
 Untainted back to thine.

Thy parting glance, which fondly beams,
 An equal love may see:
 The tear that from thine eyelid streams
 Can weep no change in me.

I ask no pledge to make me blest
 In gazing when alone;
 Nor one memorial for a breast,
 Whose thoughts are all thine own.

Nor need I write—to tell the tale
 My pen were doubly weak:
 Oh! what can idle words avail,
 Unless the heart could speak?

By day or night, in weal or woe,
 That heart, no longer free,
 Must bear the love it cannot show,
 And silent ache for thee.

March 1811.

EPITAPH FOR JOSEPH BLACKETT, LATE POET AND SHOEMAKER

STRANGER! behold, interr'd together,
 The souls of learning and of leather.
 Poor Joe is gone, but left his all:
 You'll find his relics in a stall.
 His works were neat, and often found
 Well stitch'd, and with morocco bound.
 Tread lightly—where the bard is laid
 He cannot mend the shoe he made;
 Yet is he happy in his hole,
 With verse immortal as his sole.
 But still to business he held fast,
 And stuck to Phœbus to the last.
 Then who shall say so good a fellow
 Was only 'leather and prunella?'
 For character—he did not lack it;
 And if he did, 'twere shame to 'Black it.'

Malta, May 16, 1811.

FAREWELL TO MALTA

ADIEU, ye joys of La Valette!
 Adieu, sirocco, sun, and sweat!
 Adieu, thou palace rarely enter'd!
 Adieu, ye mansions where—I've ventured!
 Adieu, ye cursed streets of stairs!
 (How surely he who mounts you swears!)
 Adieu, ye merchants often failing!
 Adieu, thou mob for ever railing!
 Adieu, ye packets—without letters!
 Adieu, ye fools—who ape your betters!
 Adieu, thou damned'st quarantine,
 That gave me fever, and the spleen!
 Adieu, that stage which makes us yawn,
 Sirs,
 Adieu, his Excellency's dancers!
 Adieu to Peter—whom no fault's in,
 But could not teach a colonel waltzing;
 Adieu, ye females fraught with graces!
 Adieu, red coats, and redder faces!
 Adieu, the supercilious air
 Of all that strut 'en militaire'!

OCCASIONAL PIECES

I go—but God knows when, or why,
To smoky towns and cloudy sky,
To things (the honest truth to say)
As bad—but in a different way.

Farewell to these, but not adieu, 25
Triumphant sons of truest blue!
While either Adriatic shore,
And fallen chiefs, and fleets no more,
And nightly smiles, and daily dinners,
Proclaim you war and woman's winners.
Pardon my Muse, who apt to prate is,
And take my rhyme—because 'tis 'gratis.'

And now I've got to Mrs. Fraser,
Perhaps you think I mean to praise her—
And were I vain enough to think 35
My praise was worth this drop of ink,
A line—or two—were no hard matter,
As here, indeed, I need not flatter:
But she must be content to shine
In better praises than in mine, 40
With lively air, and open heart,
And fashion's ease, without its art;
Her hours can gaily glide along,
Nor ask the aid of idle song.

And now, O Malta! since thou'st got us,
Thou little military hothouse! 46
I'll not offend with words uncivil,
And wish thee rudely at the Devil,
But only stare from out my casement,
And ask, for what is such a place meant?
Then, in my solitary nook, 51
Return to scribbling, or a book,
Or take my physic while I'm able (Two spoonfuls hourly by the label),
Prefer my nightcap to my beaver,
And bless the gods I've got a fever.

TO DIVES

A FRAGMENT

UNHAPPY DIVES! in an evil hour
'Gainst Nature's voice seduced to deeds
accurst!
Once Fortune's minion, now thou feel'st
her power;
Wrath's vial on thy lofty head hath burst. 4
In Wit, in Genius, as in Wealth the first,
How wondrous bright thy blooming morn
arose!
But thou wert smitten with th' unhallow'd thirst
Of crime un-named, and thy sad noon must close
In scorn, and solitude unsought, the worst of woes.

ON MOORE'S LAST OPERATIC FARCE, OR FARCICAL OPERA

Good plays are scarce,
So Moore writes farce:
The poet's fame grows brittle—
We knew before
That Little's Moore, 5
But now 'tis Moore that's little.

EPISTLE TO A FRIEND

IN ANSWER TO SOME LINES EXHORTING THE AUTHOR TO BE CHEERFUL, AND TO 'BAN-ISH CARE'

'OH! banish care'—such ever be
The motto of thy revelry!
Perchance of mine, when wassail nights
Renew those riotous delights,
Wherewith the children of Despair 5
Lull the lone heart, and 'banish care.' 5
But not in morn's reflecting hour,
When present, past, and future lower,
When all I loved is changed or gone, 9
Mock with such taunts the woes of one,
Whose every thought—but let them pass—
Thou know'st I am not what I was.
But, above all, if thou wouldst hold
Place in a heart that ne'er was cold,
By all the powers that men revere, 15
By all unto thy bosom dear,
Thy joys below, thy hopes above,
Speak—speak of anything but love.

'Twere long to tell, and vain to hear,
The tale of one who scorns a tear; 20
And there is little in that tale
Which better bosoms would bewail.
But mine has suffer'd more than well
'Twould suit philosophy to tell.
I've seen my bride another's bride,— 25
Have seen her seated by his side,—
Have seen the infant, which she bore,
Wear the sweet smile the mother wore,
When she and I in youth have smiled, 30
As fond and faultless as her child; 30
Have seen her eyes, in cold disdain,
Ask if I felt no secret pain;
And I have acted well my part,
And made my cheek belie my heart,
Return'd the freezing glance she gave,
Yet felt the while that woman's slave;—
Have kiss'd, as if without design,
The babe which ought to have been mine,
And show'd, alas! in each caress
Time had not made me love the less. 40

But let this pass—I'll whine no more,
Nor seek again an eastern shore;
The world befits a busy brain,—
I'll hie me to its haunts again.

But if, in some succeeding year,
 When Britain's 'May is in the sere,' Thou hear'st of one whose deepening crimes
 Suit with the sablest of the times,
 Of one, whom love nor pity sways,
 Nor hope of fame, nor good men's praise;
 One, who in stern ambition's pride,
 Perchance not blood shall turn aside;
 One rank'd in some recording page
 With the worst anarchs of the age,
 Him wilt thou know—and knowing pause,
 Nor with the effect forget the cause. 56

TO THYRZA

WITHOUT a stone to mark the spot,
 And say, what Truth might well have
 said,
 By all, save one, perchance forgot,
 Ah! wherefore art thou lowly laid?

By many a shore and many a sea 5
 Divided, yet beloved in vain;
 The past, the future fled to thee,
 To bid us meet—no—ne'er again!

Could this have been—a word, a look,
 That softly said, 'We part in peace,'
 Had taught my bosom how to brook, 11
 With fainter sighs, thy soul's release.

And didst thou not, since Death for thee
 Prepared a light and pangsless dart,
 Once long for him thou ne'er shalt see,
 Who held, and holds thee in his heart?

Oh! who like him had watch'd thee here?
 Or sadly mark'd thy glazing eye,
 In that dread hour ere death appear,
 When silent sorrow fears to sigh, 20

Till all was past? But when no more
 'Twas thine to reck of human woe,
 Affection's heart-drops, gushing o'er,
 Had flow'd as fast—as now they flow.

Shall they not flow, when many a day
 In these, to me, deserted towers, 26
 Ere call'd but for a time away,
 Affection's mingling tears were ours?

Ours too the glance none saw beside;
 The smile none else might understand;
 The whisper'd thought of hearts allied,
 The pressure of the thrilling hand; 32

The kiss, so guiltless and refined,
 That Love each warmer wish forbore;
 Those eyes proclaim'd so pure a mind,
 Even Passion blush'd to plead for more.

The tone, that taught me to rejoice,
 When prone, unlike thee, to repine;
 The song, celestial from thy voice,
 But sweet to me from none but thine;
 The pledge we wore—I wear it still, 41
 But where is thine?—Ah! where art
 thou?
 Oft have I borne the weight of ill,
 But never bent beneath till now!
 Well hast thou left in life's best bloom
 The cup of woe for me to drain. 46
 If rest alone be in the tomb,
 I would not wish thee here again.
 But if in worlds more blest than this Thy virtues seek a fitter sphere, 50
 Impart some portion of thy bliss,
 To wean me from mine anguish here.
 Teach me—too early taught by thee!
 To bear, forgiving and forgiven:
 On earth thy love was such to me; 55
 It fain would form my hope in heaven!

 AWAY, AWAY, YE NOTES OF WOE!
 AWAY, away, ye notes of woe!
 Be silent, thou once soothing strain,
 Or I must flee from hence—for, oh!
 I dare not trust those sounds again.
 To me they speak of brighter days— 5
 But lull the chords, for now, alas!
 I must not think, I may not gaze,
 On what I am—on what I was.
 The voice that made those sounds more
 sweet
 Is hush'd, and all their charms are fled
 And now their softest notes repeat 11
 A dirge, an anthem o'er the dead!
 Yes, Thyrza! yes, they breathe of thee,
 Beloved dust! since dust thou art;
 And all that once was harmony 15
 Is worse than discord to my heart!
 'Tis silent all!—but on my ear
 The well remember'd echoes thrill;
 I hear a voice I would not hear, 19
 A voice that now might well be still:
 Yet oft my doubting soul 'twill shake;
 Even slumber owns its gentle tone,
 Till consciousness will vainly wake
 To listen, though the dream be flown.
 Sweet Thyrza! waking as in sleep, 25
 Thou art but now a lovely dream;
 A star that trembled o'er the deep,
 Then turn'd from earth its tender beam.
 But he who through life's dreary way Must pass, when heaven is veil'd in wrath, 30
 Will long lament the vanish'd ray
 That scatter'd gladness o'er his path.

OCCASIONAL PIECES

ONE STRUGGLE MORE, AND I AM FREE

ONE struggle more, and I am free
 From pangs that rend my heart in twain;
 One last long sigh to love and thee,
 Then back to busy life again.
 It suits me well to mingle now 5
 With things that never pleased before!
 Though every joy is fled below,
 What future grief can touch me more?

Then bring me wine, the banquet bring;
 Man was not form'd to live alone: 10
 I'll be that light, unmeaning thing
 That smiles with all, and weeps with none.

It was not thus in days more dear,
 It never would have been, but thou Hast fled, and left me lonely here; 15
 Thou'rt nothing—all are nothing now.

In vain my lyre would lightly breathe!
 The smile that sorrow fain would wear
 But mocks the woe that lurks beneath,
 Like roses o'er a sepulchre. 20
 Though gay companions o'er the bowl
 Dispel awhile the sense of ill:
 Though pleasure fires the maddening soul,
 The heart,—the heart is lonely still!

On many a lone and lovely night 25
 It sooth'd to gaze upon the sky;
 For then I deem'd the heavenly light
 Shone sweetly on thy pensive eye:
 And oft I thought at Cynthia's noon,
 When sailing o'er the Ægean wave,
 'Now Thyrsa gazes on that moon'—
 Alas, it gleam'd upon her grave! 32

When stretch'd on fever's sleepless bed,
 And sickness shrunk my throbbing veins,

'Tis comfort still,' I faintly said, 35
 'That Thyrsa cannot know my pains.'
 Like freedom to the time-worn slave,
 A boon 'tis idle then to give,
 Relenting Nature vainly gave
 My life, when Thyrsa ceased to live!

My Thyrsa's pledge in better days, 41
 When love and life alike were new!
 How different now thou meet'st my gaze!
 How tinged by time with sorrow's hue!
 The heart that gave itself with thee 45
 Is silent—ah, were mine as still!
 Though cold as e'en the dead can be,
 It feels, it sickens with the chill.

Thou bitter pledge! thou mournful token!
 Though painful, welcome to my breast!
 Still, still preserve that love unbroken,
 Or break the heart to which thou'rt
 press'd.

Time tempers love, but not removes,
 More hallow'd when its hope is fled:
 Oh! what are thousand living loves 55
 To that which cannot quit the dead?

EUTHANASIA

WHEN Time, or soon or late, shall bring
 The dreamless sleep that lulls the dead,
 Oblivion! may thy languid wing
 Wave gently o'er my dying bed!

No band of friends or heirs be there, 5
 To weep, or wish, the coming blow;
 No maiden, with dishevelled hair,
 To feel, or feign, decorous woe.

But silent let me sink to earth,
 With no officious mourners near: 10
 I would not mar one hour of mirth,
 Nor startle friendship with a tear.

Yet Love, if Love in such an hour
 Could nobly check its useless sighs,
 Might then exert its latest power 15
 In her who lives, and him who dies.

'Twere sweet, my Psyche! to the last Thy features still serene to see:
 Forgetful of its struggles past,
 E'en Pain itself should smile on thee.

But vain the wish—for Beauty still 21
 Will shrink, as shrinks the ebbing
 breath;
 And women's tears, produced at will,
 Deceive in life, unman in death.

Then lonely be my latest hour, 25
 Without regret, without a groan;
 For thousands Death hath ceas'd to lower,
 And pain been transient or unknown.

'Ay, but to die, and go,' alas!
 Where all have gone, and all must go!
 To be the nothing that I was 31
 Ere born to life and living woe!

Count o'er the joys thine hours have seen,
 Count o'er thy days from anguish free,
 And know, whatever thou hast been, 35
 'Tis something better not to be.

AND THOU ART DEAD, AS YOUNG AND FAIR

'Heu, quanto minus est cum reliquis versari
 quam tui meminisse!'

AND thou art dead, as young and fair
 As aught of mortal birth;
 And form so soft, and charms so rare,
 Too soon return'd to Earth!

Though Earth received them in her bed 5
And o'er the spot the crowd may tread
In carelessness or mirth,
There is an eye which could not brook
A moment on that grave to look.

Will not ask where thou liest low, 10
Nor gaze upon the spot;
There flowers or weeds at will may grow,
So I behold them not:
It is enough for me to prove
That what I loved, and long must love,
Like common earth can rot; 16
To me there needs no stone to tell,
'Tis Nothing that I loved so well.

Yet did I love thee to the last
As fervently as thou, 20
Who didst not change through all the past,
And canst not alter now.
The love where Death has set his seal,
Nor age can chill, nor rival steal,
Nor falsehood disavow: 25
And, what were worse, thou canst not see
Or wrong, or change, or fault in me.

The better days of life were ours;
The worst can be but mine:
The sun that cheers, the storm that lowers,
Shall never more be thine. 31
The silence of that dreamless sleep
Envy now too much to weep;
Nor need I to repine,
That all those charms have pass'd away;
I might have watch'd through long decay.

The flower in ripen'd bloom unmatch'd
Must fall the earliest prey;
Though by no hand untimely snatch'd,
The leaves must drop away: 40
And yet it were a greater grief
To watch it withering, leaf by leaf,
Than see it pluck'd to-day;
Since earthly eye but ill can bear
To trace the change to foul from fair.

I know not if I could have borne 46
To see thy beauties fade;
The night that follow'd such a morn
Had worn a deeper shade:
Thy day without a cloud hath pass'd, 50
And thou wert lovely to the last;
Extinguish'd, not decay'd;
As stars that shoot along the sky
Shine brightest as they fall from high.

As once I wept, if I could weep, 55
My tears might well be shed,
To think I was not near to keep
One vigil o'er thy bed;
To gaze, how fondly! on thy face,
To fold thee in a faint embrace,
Uphold thy drooping head;
And show that love, however vain,
Nor thou nor I can feel again.

Yet how much less it were to gain,
Though thou hast left me free, 65
The loveliest things that still remain,
Than thus remember thee!
The all of thine that cannot die
Through dark and dread Eternity
Returns again to me, 70
And more thy buried love endears
Than aught except its living years.

February 1812.

IF SOMETIMES IN THE HAUNTS OF MEN

If sometimes in the haunts of men
Thine image from my breast may fade,
The lonely hour presents again
The semblance of thy gentle shade:
And now that sad and silent hour 5
Thus much of thee can still restore,
And sorrow unobserved may pour
The plaint she dare not speak before.

Oh, pardon that in crowds awhile
I waste one thought I owe to thee, 10
And self-condemn'd, appear to smile,
Unfaithful to thy memory:
Nor deem that memory less dear,
That then I seem not to repine;
I would not fools should overhear 15
One sigh that should be wholly thine.

If not the goblet pass unquaff'd,
It is not drain'd to banish care;
The cup must hold a deadlier draught,
That brings a Lethe for despair. 20
And could Oblivion set my soul
From all her troubled visions free,
I'd dash to earth the sweetest bowl
That drown'd a single thought of thee.

For wert thou vanish'd from my mind, 25
Where could my vacant bosom turn?
And who would then remain behind
To honour thine abandon'd Urn?
No, no—it is my sorrow's pride
That last dear duty to fulfil: 30
Though all the world forget beside,
'Tis meet that I remember still.

For well I know, that such had been Thy gentle care for him, who now 34
Unmourn'd shall quit this mortal scene,
Where none regarded him, but thou:
And, oh! I feel in that was given
A blessing never meant for me;
Thou wert too like a dream of Heaven
For earthly Love to merit thee. 40

OCCASIONAL PIECES

ON A CORNELIAN HEART WHICH WAS BROKEN

ILL-FATED Heart! and can it be,
That thou should'st thus be rent in twain?

Have years of care for thine and thee
Alike been all employ'd in vain?

Yet precious seems each shatter'd part,
And every fragment dearer grown, 6
Since he who wears thee feels thou art
A fitter emblem of his own.

LINES TO A LADY WEeping

WEep, daughter of a royal line,
A Sire's disgrace, a realm's decay;
Ah! happy if each tear of thine
Could wash a father's fault away!

Weep—for thy tears are Virtue's tears—
Auspicious to these suffering isles; 6
And be each drop in future years
Repaid thee by thy people's smiles!

March 1812.

THE CHAIN I GAVE

FROM THE TURKISH

THE chain I gave was fair to view,
The lute I added sweet in sound;
The heart that offer'd both was true,
And ill deserved the fate it found.

These gifts were charm'd by secret spell,
Thy truth in absence to divine; 6
And they have done their duty well,—
Alas! they could not teach thee thine.

That chain was firm in every link,
But not to bear a stranger's touch; 10
That lute was sweet—till thou could'st think

In other hands its notes were such.

Let him who from thy neck unbound
The chain which shiver'd in his grasp,
Who saw that lute refuse to sound, 15
Restraining the chords, renew the clasp.

When thou wert changed, they alter'd too;
The chain is broke, the music mute.
'Tis past—to them and thee adieu—
False heart, frail chain, and silent lute.

LINES WRITTEN ON A BLANK LEAF OF 'THE PLEASURES OF MEMORY'

ABSENT or present, still to thee,
My friend, what magic spells belong!
As all can tell, who share, like me,
In turn thy converse and thy song. 4

But when the dreaded hour shall come
By Friendship ever deem'd too nigh,
And 'MEMORY' o'er her Druid's tomb
Shall weep that aught of thee can die,

How fondly will she then repay
Thy homage offer'd at her shrine, 10
And blend, while ages roll away,
Her name immortally with thine!

ADDRESS, SPOKEN AT THE OPENING OF DRURY-LANE THEATRE

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 10, 1812

In one dread night our city saw, and sigh'd, Bow'd to the dust, the Drama's tower of
pride;
In one short hour beheld the blazing fane, Apollo sink, and Shakspeare cease to
reign.

Ye who beheld, (oh! sight admired and
mourn'd,
Whose radiance mock'd the ruin it
adorn'd!)

Through clouds of fire the massy fragments riven,
Like Israel's pillar, chase the night from
heaven;

Saw the long column of revolving flames
Shake its red shadow o'er the startled
Thames,

While thousands, throng'd around the burning dome,
Shrank back appall'd, and trembled for
their home,

As glared the volumed blaze, and ghastly
shone

The skies, with lightnings awful as their
own, 10

Till blackening ashes and the lonely wall Usurp'd the Muse's realm, and mark'd
her fall;

Say—shall this new, nor less aspiring pile Rear'd where once rose the mightiest in our isle,

Know the same favour which the former
knew,

A shrine for Shakspeare—worthy him
and you? 20

Yes—it shall be—the magic of that
name
Defies the scythe of time, the torch of
flame;

On the same spot still consecrates the
scene,
And bids the Drama be where she hath
been:

This fabric's birth attests the potent
spell— 25

Indulge our honest pride, and say, How
well!

As soars this fane to emulate the last,
 Oh! might we draw our omens from the
 past,
 Some hour propitious to our prayers may boast Names such as hallow still the dome we lost.
 On Drury first your Siddons' thrilling art O'erwhelm'd the gentlest, storm'd the sternest heart.
 On Drury, Garrick's latest laurels grew;
 Here your last tears retiring Roscius drew,
 Sigh'd his last thanks, and wept his last
 adieu:
 But still for living wit the wreaths may bloom,
 That only waste their odours o'er the
 tomb.
 Such Drury claim'd and claims—nor you refuse
 One tribute to revive his slumbering
 muse;
 With garlands deck your own Menander's
 head,
 Nor hoard your honours idly for the dead.
 Dear are the days which made our annals
 bright,
 Ere Garrick fled, or Brinsley ceased to write.
 Heirs to their labours, like all high-born
 heirs,
 Vain of our ancestry as they of theirs;
 While thus Remembrance borrows Banquo's glass
 To claim the sceptred shadows as they
 pass,
 And we the mirror hold, where imaged
 shine
 Immortal names, emblazon'd on our line,
 Pause—ere their feebler offspring you condemn,
 Reflect how hard the task to rival them!

Friends of the stage! to whom both Players and Plays
 Must sue alike for pardon or for praise,
 Whose judging voice and eye alone direct
 The boundless power to cherish or reject;
 If e'er frivolity has led to fame,
 And made us blush that you forbore to blame;
 If e'er the sinking stage could condescend
 To soothe the sickly taste it dare not mend,
 All past reproach may present scenes refute,
 And censure, wisely loud, be justly mute!
 Oh! since your fiat stamps the Drama's
 laws,
 Forbear to mock us with misplaced ap-
 plause;
 So pride shall doubly nerve the actor's
 powers,
 And reason's voice be echo'd back by ours!

This greeting o'er, the ancient rule
 obey'd,
 The Drama's homage by her herald paid, Receive our welcome too, whose every tone
 Springs from our hearts, and fain would win your own.
 The curtain rises—may our stage unfold
 Scenes not unworthy Drury's days of old!
 Britons our judges, Nature for our guide,
 Still may we please—long, long may you preside.

PARENTHETICAL ADDRESS

BY DR. PLAGIARY

Half stolen, with acknowledgments, to be spoken in an inarticulate voice by Master P. at the opening of the next new theatre. Stolen parts marked with the inverted commas of quotation—thus
 '—'.

'WHEN energising objects men pursue,'
 Then Lord knows what is writ by Lord knows who.
 'A modest monologue you here survey,'
 Hiss'd from the theatre the 'other day,'
 As if Sir Fretful wrote 'the slumberous',
 verse,
 And gave his son 'the rubbish' to rehearse.
 'Yet at the thing you'd never be amazed,' Knew you the rumpus which the author raised,
 'Nor even here your smiles would be re-
 prest,'
 Knew you these lines—the badness of the
 best,
 'Flame! fire! and flame!' (words borrowed from Lucretius),
 'Dread metaphors which open wounds'
 like issues!
 'And sleeping pangs awake—and—but
 away'
 (Confound me if I know what next to say).
 'Lo Hope reviving re-expands her wings,'
 And Master G—— recites what Dr. Busby sings!—
 'If mighty things with small we may compare,' (Translated from the grammar for the fair!)
 Dramatic 'spirit drives a conquering car,'
 And burn'd poor Moscow like a tub of
 'tar.'
 'This spirit Wellington has shown in Spain,'
 To furnish melodrames for Drury Lane.
 'Another Marlborough points to Blen-heim's story,'
 And George and I will dramatise it for ye.
 'In arts and sciences our isle hath
 shone'
 (This deep discovery is mine alone).

OCCASIONAL PIECES

'Oh British poesy, whose powers inspire'
 My verse—or I'm a fool—and Fame's a liar,
 'Thee we invoke, your sister arts implore'
 With 'smiles,' and 'lyres,' and 'pencils,' and much more.³⁰
 These, if we win the Graces, too, we gain
Disgraces, too! 'inseparable train!'
 'Three who have stolen their witching airs from Cupid'
 (You all know what I mean, unless you're stupid):
 'Harmonious throng' that I have kept in petto³⁵
 Now to produce in a 'divine sestetto!'³⁵
 'While Poesy,' with these delightful doxies,
 'Sustains her part' in all the 'upper'
 boxes!
 'Thus lifted gloriously, you'll soar along,'
 Borne in the vast balloon of Busby's song;⁴⁰
 'Shine in your farce, masque, scenery, and play'
 (For this last line George had a holiday).
 'Old Drury never, never soar'd so high,'
 So says the manager, and so say I.
 'But hold, you say, this self-complacent boast,'⁴⁵
 Is this the poem which the public lost?
 'True—true—that lowers at once our mounting pride;'
 But lo:—the papers print what you
 deride.
 "'Tis ours to look on you—you hold the
 prize,'
 'Tis twenty guineas, as they advertise! ⁵⁰
 'A double blessing your rewards impart'—
 I wish I had them, then, with all my heart.
 'Our twofold feeling owns its twofold
 cause,'
 Why son and I both beg for your applause.
 'When in your fostering beams you bid us live,'⁵⁵
 My next subscription list shall say how much you give!

VERSES FOUND IN A SUMMER- HOUSE AT HALES-OWEN

WHEN Dryden's fool, 'unknowing what he sought,'
 His hours in whistling spent, 'for want of
 thought,'
 This guiltless oaf his vacancy of sense
 Supplied, and amply too, by innocence;
 Did modern swains, possess'd of Cymon's powers,⁵
 In Cymon's manner waste their leisure
 hours,
 Th' offended guests would not, with blushing, see These fair green walks disgraced by infamy.

Severe the fate of modern fools, alas!
 When vice and folly mark them as they pass.¹⁰
 Like noxious reptiles o'er the whiten'd
 wall,
 The filth they leave still points out where they crawl.

REMEMBER THEE! REMEMBER THEE!

REMEMBER thee! remember thee!
 Till Lethe quench life's burning stream
 Remorse and shame shall cling to thee,
 And haunt thee like a feverish dream!
 Remember thee! Ay, doubt it not. ⁵
 Thy husband too shall think of thee!
 By neither shalt thou be forgot,
 Thou false to him, thou fiend to me!

TO TIME

TIME! on whose arbitrary wing
 The varying hours must flag or fly,
 Whose tardy winter, fleeting spring,
 But drag or drive us on to die—
 Hail thou! who on my birth bestow'd
 Those boons to all that know thee known;⁶
 Yet better I sustain thy load,
 For now I bear the weight alone.
 I would not one fond heart should share
 The bitter moments thou hast given;
 And pardon thee, since thou could'st
 spare¹¹
 All that I loved, to peace or heaven.

To them be joy or rest, on me
 Thy future ills shall press in vain;
 I nothing owe but years to thee,¹⁵
 A debt already paid in pain.

Yet even that pain was some relief,
 It felt, but still forgot thy power:
 The active agony of grief¹⁹
 Retards, but never counts the hour.

In joy I've sigh'd to think thy flight Would soon subside from swift to
 slow;
 Thy cloud could overcast the light,
 But could not add a night to woe;

For then, however drear and dark,²⁵
 My soul was suited to thy sky;
 One star alone shot forth a spark
 To prove thee—not Eternity.

That beam hath sunk, and now thou art
 A blank; a thing to count and curse,
 Through each dull tedious trifling part,
 Which all regret, yet all rehearse. ³²

One scene even thou canst not deform;
 The limit of thy sloth or speed
 When future wanderers bear the storm Which we shall sleep too sound to heed: 36

And I can smile to think how weak
 Thine efforts shortly shall be shown,
 When all the vengeance thou canst wreak
 Must fall upon—a nameless stone.

TRANSLATION OF A ROMAIC LOVE SONG

Ah! Love was never yet without
 The pang, the agony, the doubt,
 Which rends my heart with ceaseless sigh,
 While day and night roll darkling by.

Without one friend to hear my woe, 5
 I faint, I die beneath the blow.
 That Love had arrows well I knew;
 Alas! I find them poison'd too.

Birds, yet in freedom, shun the net
 Which Love around your haunts hath set;
 Or, circled by his fatal fire, 11
 Your hearts shall burn, your hopes expire.

A bird of free and careless wing
 Was I through many a smiling spring;
 But caught within the subtle snare, 15
 I burn, and feebly flutter there.

Who ne'er have loved, and loved in vain,
 Can neither feel nor pity pain,
 The cold repulse, the look askance,
 The lightning of Love's angry glance. 20

In flattering dreams I deem'd thee mine;
 Now hope, and he who hoped, decline;
 Like melting wax, or withering flower,
 I feel my passion, and thy power.

My light of life! ah, tell me why 25
 That pouting lip, and alter'd eye?
 My bird of love! my beauteous mate!
 And art thou changed, and canst thou
 hate?

Mine eyes like wintry streams o'erflow:
 What wretch with me would barter woe?
 My bird! relent: one note could give
 A charm to bid thy lover live. 32

My curdling blood, my madd'ning brain,
 In silent anguish I sustain;
 And still thy heart, without partaking
 One pang, exults—while mine is breaking.

Pour me the poison; fear not thou!
 Thou canst not murder more than now:
 I've lived to curse my natal day,
 And Love, that thus can lingering slay.

My wounded soul, my bleeding breast,
 Can patience preach thee into rest? 42
 Alas! too late, I dearly know
 That joy is harbinger of woe.

THOU ART NOT FALSE, BUT THOU ART FICKLE

THOU art not false, but thou art fickle,
 To those thyself so fondly sought;
 The tears that thou hast forced to trickle
 Are doubly bitter from that thought:
 'Tis this which breaks the heart thou grieve'st, 5
 Too well thou lov'st—too soon thou leavest.

The wholly false the heart despises,
 And spurns deceiver and deceit;
 But she who not a thought disguises,
 Whose love is as sincere as sweet,—
 When she can change who loved so truly,
 It feels what mine has felt so newly. 12

To dream of joy and wake to sorrow
 Is doom'd to all who love or live;
 And if, when conscious on the morrow,
 We scarce our fancy can forgive, 16
 That cheated us in slumber only,
 To leave the waking soul more lonely,

What must they feel whom no false vision,
 But truest, tenderest passion warm'd?
 Sincere, but swift in sad transition; 21
 As if a dream alone had charm'd?
 Ah! sure such grief is fancy's scheming,
 And all thy change can be but dreaming!

ON BEING ASKED WHAT WAS THE 'ORIGIN OF LOVE'

THE 'Origin of Love!'—Ah, why
 That cruel question ask of me,
 When thou may'st read in many an eye
 He starts to life on seeing thee?

And should'st thou seek his end to
 know: 5
 My heart forebodes, my fears foresee,
 He'll linger long in silent woe;
 But live—until I cease to be.

REMEMBER HIM WHOM PASSION'S POWER

REMEMBER him whom passion's power
 Severely, deeply, vainly proved:
 Remember thou that dangerous hour,
 When neither fell, though both were loved. 4

That yielding breast, that melting eye,
 Too much invited to be bless'd:
 That gentle prayer, that pleading sigh,
 The wilder wish reprov'd, repress'd.

Oh! let me feel that all I lost
 But saved thee all that conscience
 fears; 10
 And blush for every pang it cost
 To spare the vain remorse of years.

OCCASIONAL PIECES

Yet think of this when many a tongue,
Whose busy accents whisper blame,
Would do the heart that loved thee
wrong,
And brand a nearly blighted name. 15

Think that, whate'er to others, thou
Hast seen each selfish thought subdued:
I bless thy purer soul even now,
Even now, in midnight solitude. 20

Oh, God! that we had met in time,
Our hearts as fond, thy hand more free;
When thou hadst loved without a crime,
And I been less unworthy thee!

Far may thy days, as heretofore, 25
From this our gaudy world be past!
And that too bitter moment o'er,
Oh! may such trial be thy last.

This heart, alas! perverted long, 29
Itself destroy'd might there destroy;
To meet thee in the glittering throng,
Would wake Presumption's hope of
joy.

Then to the things whose bliss or woe,
Like mine, is wild and worthless all,
That world resign—such scenes forego,
Where those who feel must surely fall.

Thy youth, thy charms, thy tenderness,
Thy soul from long seclusion pure;
From what even here hath pass'd, may guess
What there thy bosom must endure.

Oh! pardon that imploring tear, 41
Since not by Virtue shed in vain,
My frenzy drew from eyes so dear;
For me they shall not weep again.

Though long and mournful must it be,
The thought that we no more may
meet; 46

Yet I deserve the stern decree,
And almost deem the sentence sweet.

Still, had I loved thee less, my heart
Had then less sacrificed to thine; 50
It felt not half so much to part
As if its guilt had made thee mine. 1813.

ON LORD THURLOW'S POEMS

WHEN Thurlow this damn'd nonsense sent (I hope I am not violent),
Nor men nor gods knew what he meant.

And since not even our Rogers' praise
To common sense his thoughts could
raise— 5
Why would they let him print his lays?

To me, divine Apollo, grant—O!
Hermilda's first and second canto,
I'm fitting up a new portmanteau;

And thus to furnish decent lining, 10
My own and others' bays I'm twining,—
So, gentle Thurlow, throw me thine in.

TO LORD THURLOW

'I lay my branch of laurel down,
Then thus to form Apollo's crown,
Let every other bring his own.'

Lord Thurlow's lines to Mr. Rogers

'I lay my branch of laurel down.'

THOU 'lay thy branch of laurel down!' 1
Why, what thou'st stole is not enow;
And, were it lawfully thine own,
Does Rogers want it most, or thou?
Keep to thyself thy wither'd bough, 5
Or send it back to Doctor Donne:
Were justice done to both, I trow,
He'd have but little, and thou—none.

'Then thus to form Apollo's crown.'

A crown! why, twist it how you will,
Thy chaplet must be foolscap still. 10
When next you visit Delphi's town,
Inquire amongst your fellow-lodgers,
They'll tell you Phæbus gave his crown,
Some years before your birth, to Rogers.

'Let every other bring his own.'

When coals to Newcastle are carried,
And owls sent to Athens, as wonders,
From his spouse when the Regent's unmarried, 17
Or Liverpool weeps o'er his blunders;
When Tories and Whigs cease to quarrel,
When Castlereagh's wife has an heir,
Then Rogers shall ask us for laurel,
And thou shalt have plenty to spare.

TO THOMAS MOORE

WRITTEN THE EVENING BEFORE HIS VISIT
TO MR. LEIGH HUNT IN HORSEMONGER
LANE GAOL, MAY 19, 1813

OH you, who in all names can tickle the town,
Anacreon, Tom Little, Tom Moore, or Tom Brown,
For hang me if I know of which you may most brag,
Your Quarto two-pounds, or your Two-penny Post Bag;

But now to my letter—to yours 'tis an
answer— 5

To-morrow be with me, as soon as you can, sir,

All ready and dress'd for proceeding to spunge on

(According to compact) the wit in the dungeon—

Pray Phœbus at length our political malice
 May not get us lodgings within the same
 palace! 10
 I suppose that to-night you're engaged with some codgers,
 And for Sotheby's Blues have deserted
 Sam Rogers;
 And I, though with cold I have nearly my death got,
 Must put on my breeches, and wait on the Heathcote;
 But to-morrow, at four, we will both play the Scurra, 15
 And you'll be Catullus, the Regent Mamurra.

IMPROMPTU, IN REPLY TO A FRIEND

WHEN, from the heart where Sorrow sits,
 Her dusky shadow mounts too high,
 And o'er the changing aspect flits,
 And clouds the brow, or fills the eye;
 Heed not that gloom, which soon shall sink: 5
 My thoughts their dungeon know too
 well;
 Back to my breast the wanderers shrink,
 And droop within their silent cell.

SONNET, TO GENEVRA

THINE eyes' blue tenderness, thy long fair hair,
 And the wan lustre of thy features—
 caught
 From contemplation—where serenely
 wrought,
 Seems Sorrow's softness charm'd from its despair—
 Have thrown such speaking sadness in thine air, 5
 That—but I know thy blessed bosom fraught
 With mines of unalloy'd and stainless
 thought—
 I should have deem'd thee doom'd to earthly care.
 With such an aspect, by his colours blent,
 When from his beauty-breathing pencil born 10
 (Except that thou hast nothing to repent),
 The Magdalen of Guido saw the
 morn—
 Such seem'st thou—but how much more excellent!
 With nought Remorse can claim—nor Virtue scorn.

December 17, 1813.

SONNET, TO THE SAME

THY cheek is pale with thought, but not from woe,
 And yet so lovely, that if Mirth could flush
 Its rose of whiteness with the brightest blush,
 My heart would wish away that ruder
 glow:
 And dazzle not thy deep-blue eyes—but,
 oh! 5
 While gazing on them sterner eyes will gush,
 And into mine my mother's weakness
 rush,
 Soft as the last drops round heaven's airy bow.
 For, through thy long dark lashes low depending,
 The soul of melancholy Gentleness Gleams like a seraph from the sky descending, 11
 Above all pain, yet pitying all distress;
 At once such majesty with sweetness blending,
 I worship more, but cannot love thee
 less.

FROM THE PORTUGUESE

'TU MI CHAMAS'

IN moments to delight devoted,
 'My life!' with tenderest tone, you cry;
 Dear words! on which my heart had doted,
 If youth could neither fade nor die.
 To death even hours like these must roll,
 Ah! then repeat those accents never;
 Or change 'my life!' into 'my soul!'
 Which, like my love, exists for ever.

ANOTHER VERSION

You call me still your life.—Oh! change
 the word—
 Life is as transient as the inconstant
 sigh:
 Say rather I'm your soul; more just that
 name,
 For, like the soul, my love can never die.

THE DEVIL'S DRIVE

AN UNFINISHED RHAPSODY

THE Devil return'd to hell by two,
 And he stay'd at home till five;
 When he dined on some homicides done
 in ragoût,
 And a rebel or so in an Irish stew,
 And sausages made of a self-slain Jew—
 And bethought himself what next to do,
 'And,' quoth he, 'I'll take a drive. 7
 I walk'd in the morning, I'll ride to-night;
 In darkness my children take most delight,
 And I'll see how my favourites thrive.

OCCASIONAL PIECES

'And what shall I ride in?' quoth Lucifer
then—

'If I follow'd my taste, indeed,
I should mount in a waggon of wounded
men,

And smile to see them bleed.
But these will be furnish'd again and
again,

And at present my purpose is speed;
To see my manor as much as I may,
And watch that no souls shall be poach'd
away.

'I have a state-coach at Carlton House,
A chariot in Seymour Place;
But they're lent to two friends, who make me amends,

By driving my favourite pace:
And they handle their reins with such a grace,
I have something for both at the end of their race.

'So now for the earth to take my chance:'
Then up to the earth sprang he;
And making a jump from Moscow to France,

He stepp'd across the sea,
And rested his hoof on a turnpike road,
No very great way from a bishop's
abode.

But first as he flew, I forgot to say
That he hover'd a moment upon his way,
To look upon Leipsic plain;
And so sweet to his eye was its sulphury
glare,

And so soft to his ear was the cry of
despair,
That he perch'd on a mountain of
slain;

And he gazed with delight from its growing height,
Nor often on earth had he seen such a
sight,

Nor his work done half as well:
For the field ran so red with the blood of the dead,

That it blush'd like the waves of hell!
Then loudly, and wildly, and long laugh'd
he:

'Methinks they have here little need of
me!'

But the softest note that soothed his ear
Was the sound of a widow sighing;
And the sweetest sight was the icy tear,
Which horror froze in the blue eye clear
Of a maid by her lover lying—

As round her fell her long fair hair;
And she look'd to heaven with that frenzied air,
Which seem'd to ask if a God were there!
And, stretch'd by the wall of a ruin'd hut,

With its hollow cheek, and eyes half shut,
A child of famine dying:
And the carnage begun, when resistance is done,
And the fall of the vainly flying!

But the Devil has reach'd our cliffs so
white,
And what did he there, I pray?
If his eyes were good, he but saw by
night

What we see every day:
But he made a tour, and kept a journal
Of all the wondrous sights nocturnal,
And he sold it in shares to the Men of the Row,
Who bid pretty well—but they cheated
him, though!

The Devil first saw, as he thought, the Mail,

Its coachman and his cock;
So instead of a pistol he cock'd his tail,
And seized him by the throat:
'Aha!' quoth he, 'what have we here?'
'Tis a new barouche, and an ancient peer!'

So he sat him on his box again,
And bade him have no fear,
But be true to his club, and stanch to his rein,
His brothel, and his beer;
'Next to seeing a lord at the council board,
I would rather see him here.'

The Devil gat next to Westminster,
And he turn'd to 'the room' of the Commons;
But he heard, as he purposed to enter in
there,

That 'the Lords' had received a summons;
And he thought, as a 'quondam aristocrat,'
He might peep at the peers, though to hear them were flat;
And he walk'd up the house so like one of our own,
That they say that he stood pretty near the throne.

He saw the Lord Liverpool seemingly
wise,

The Lord Westmoreland certainly silly,
And Johnny of Norfolk—a man of some size—

And Chatham, so like his friend Billy;
And he saw the tears in Lord Eldon's
eyes,
Because the Catholics would not rise,
In spite of his prayers and his prophecies;

And he heard—which set Satan himself a staring—
A certain Chief Justice say something like swearing.
And the Devil was shock'd—and quoth
he, 'I must go,
For I find we have much better manners
below:
If thus he harangues when he passes my⁹⁵
border,
I shall hint to friend Moloch to call him to order.'

WINDSOR POETICS

Lines composed on the occasion of His Royal Highness the Prince Regent being seen standing between the coffins of Henry VIII and Charles I,
in the royal vault at Windsor.

FAMED for contemptuous breach of sacred ties,
By headless Charles see heartless Henry
lies;
Between them stands another sceptred
thing—
It moves, it reigns—in all but name, a⁴
king:

Charles to his people, Henry to his wife,
—In him the double tyrant starts to life:
Justice and death have mix'd their dust
in vain,
Each royal vampire wakes to life again.
Ah, what can tombs avail!—since these disgorge
The blood and dust of both—to mould¹⁰ a George.

ODE TO NAPOLEON
BUONAPARTE

'Expende Annibalem:—quot libras in duce summo Invenies?'—JUVENAL, Sat. x.

'The Emperor Nepos was acknowledged by the Senate, by the Italians, and by the Provincials of Gaul; his moral virtues, and military talents, were loudly celebrated; and those who derived any private benefit from his government announced in prophetic strains the restoration of public felicity. . . . By this shameful abdication, he protracted his life a few years, in a very ambiguous state, between an Emperor and an Exile, till ———.'—GIBBON'S Decline and Fall,
vol. vi, p. 220.

I

'Tis done—but yesterday a King!
And arm'd with Kings to strive—
And now thou art a nameless thing:
So abject—yet alive!
Is this the man of thousand thrones,
Who strew'd our earth with hostile bones,
And can he thus survive?
Since he, miscall'd the Morning Star,
Nor man nor fiend hath fallen so far.

II

Ill-minded man! why scourge thy kind
Who bow'd so low the knee?
By gazing on thyself grown blind,
Thou taught'st the rest to see.
With might unquestion'd,—power to save,— Thine only gift hath been the grave
To those that worshipp'd thee;
Nor till thy fall could mortals guess
Ambition's less than littleness!

III

Thanks for that lesson—It will teach
To after-warriors more Than high Philosophy can preach,
And vainly preach'd before.
That spell upon the minds of men
Breaks never to unite again,
That led them to adore
Those Pagod things of sabre sway
With fronts of brass, and feet of clay.

IV

The triumph and the vanity,
The rapture of the strife—
The earthquake voice of Victory,
To thee the breath of life;
The sword, the sceptre, and that sway
Which man seem'd made but to obey,
Wherewith renown was rife—
All quell'd!—Dark Spirit! what must be
The madness of thy memory!

V

The Desolator desolate!
The Victor overthrown!
The Arbiter of others' fate
A Suppliant for his own!
Is it some yet imperial hope
That with such change can calmly cope?
Or dread of death alone?
To die a prince—or live a slave—
Thy choice is most ignobly brave!

VI

He who of old would rend the oak,
Dream'd not of the rebound:
Chain'd by the trunk he vainly broke—
Alone—how look'd he round?
Thou, in the sternness of thy strength,
An equal deed hast done at length,
And darker fate hast found:
He fell, the forest prowlers' prey;
But thou must eat thy heart away!

VII

The Roman, when his burning heart
Was slaked with blood of Rome,
Threw down the dagger—dared depart,
In savage grandeur, home—

OCCASIONAL PIECES

He dared depart in utter scorn
Of men that such a yoke had borne,
Yet left him such a doom!
His only glory was that hour
Of self-upheld abandon'd power.

VIII

The Spaniard, when the lust of sway
Had lost its quickening spell,
Cast crowns for rosaries away,
An empire for a cell;
A strict accountant of his beads,
A subtle disputant on creeds,
His dotage trifled well:
Yet better had he neither known
A bigot's shrine, nor despot's throne.

IX

But thou—from thy reluctant hand
The thunderbolt is wrung—
Too late thou leav'st the high command
To which thy weakness clung;
All Evil Spirit as thou art,
It is enough to grieve the heart
To see thine own unstrung;
To think that God's fair world hath been
The footstool of a thing so mean;

X

And Earth hath spilt her blood for him,
Who thus can hoard his own!
And Monarchs bow'd the trembling limb,
And thank'd him for a throne!
Fair Freedom! we may hold thee dear,
When thus thy mightiest foes their fear
In humblest guise have shown.
Oh! ne'er may tyrant leave behind
A brighter name to lure mankind!

XI

Thine evil deeds are writ in gore,
Nor written thus in vain—
Thy triumphs tell of fame no more,
Or deepen every stain:
If thou hadst died as honour dies,
Some new Napoleon might arise,
To shame the world again—
But who would soar the solar height,
To set in such a starless night?

XII

Weigh'd in the balance, hero dust
Is vile as vulgar clay;
Thy scales, Mortality! are just
To all that pass away:
But yet methought the living great
Some higher sparks should animate,
To dazzle and dismay:
Nor deem'd Contempt could thus make
mirth
Of these, the Conquerors of the earth.

XIII

And she, proud Austria's mournful
flower,
Thy still imperial bride;
How bears her breast the torturing hour?
Still clings she to thy side?
Must she too bend, must she too share
Thy late repentance, long despair,
Thou throneless Homicide?
If still she loves thee, hoard that gem,—
'Tis worth thy vanish'd diadem!

XIV

Then haste thee to thy sullen Isle,
And gaze upon the sea;
That element may meet thy smile—
It ne'er was ruled by thee!
Or trace with thine all idle hand
In loitering mood upon the sand
That Earth is now as free!
That Corinth's pedagogue hath now
Transferr'd his by-word to thy brow.

XV

Thou Timour! in his captive's cage
What thoughts will there be thine,
While brooding in thy prison'd rage?
But one—'The world was mine!'—
Unless, like he of Babylon,
All sense is with thy sceptre gone,
Life will not long confine
That spirit pour'd so widely forth—
So long obey'd—so little worth!

XVI

Or, like the thief of fire from heaven,
Wilt thou withstand the shock?
And share with him, the unforgiven,
His vulture and his rock!
Foredoom'd by God—by man accurst,
And that last act, though not thy worst,
The very Fiend's arch mock;
He in his fall preserved his pride,
And, if a mortal, had as proudly died!

XVII

There was a day—there was an hour,
While earth was Gaul's—Gaul thine—
When that immeasurable power
Unsated to resign
Had been an act of purer fame
Than gathers round Marengo's name,
And gilded thy decline,
Through the long twilight of all time,
Despite some passing clouds of crime.

XVIII

But thou forsooth must be a king,
And don the purple vest,
As if that foolish robe could wring Remembrance from thy breast.

Where is that faded garment? where
 The gewgaws thou wert fond to wear,
 The star, the string, the crest?
 Vain froward child of empire! say,
 Are all thy playthings snatched away?

XIX

Where may the wearied eye repose
 When gazing on the Great;
 Where neither guilty glory glows,
 Nor despicable state?
 Yes—one—the first—the last—the best—
 The Cincinnatus of the West,
 Whom envy dared not hate,
 Bequeath'd the name of Washington,
 To make man blush there was but one!

STANZAS FOR MUSIC

I SPEAK not, I trace not, I breathe not thy name,
 There is grief in the sound, there is guilt
 in the fame:
 But the tear which now burns on my cheek may impart
 The deep thoughts that dwell in that silence of heart.

Too brief for our passion, too long for our peace,
 Were those hours—can their joy or their bitterness cease?
 We repent, we abjure, we will break from our chain,—
 We will part, we will fly to—unite it
 again!

Oh! thine be the gladness, and mine be the guilt!
 Forgive me, adored one!—forsake, if thou wilt;—
 But the heart which is thine shall expire
 undebased,
 And man shall not break it—whatever thou mayst.

And stern to the haughty, but humble to
 thee,
 This soul, in its bitterest blackness, shall
 be;
 And our days seem as swift, and our moments more sweet,
 With thee by my side, than with worlds
 at our feet,

One sigh of thy sorrow, one look of thy
 love,
 Shall turn me or fix, shall reward or re-
 prove;
 And the heartless may wonder at all I
 resign—
 Thy lip shall reply, not to them, but to
 mine.

ADDRESS INTENDED TO BE RE-CITED AT THE CALEDONIAN
MEETING

WHO hath not glow'd above the page where fame
 Hath fix'd high Caledon's unconquer'd
 name;
 The mountain-land which spurn'd the Roman chain,
 And baffled back the fiery-crested Dane,
 Whose bright claymore and hardihood of hand
 No foe could tame—no tyrant could command?
 That race is gone—but still their children
 breathe,
 And glory crowns them with redoubled
 wreath:
 O'er Gael and Saxon mingling banners
 shine,
 And, England! add their stubborn strength to thine.
 The blood which flow'd with Wallace flows as free,
 But now 'tis only shed for fame and thee!
 Oh! pass not by the northern veteran's
 claim,
 But give support—the world hath given him fame!

The humbler ranks, the lowly brave, who bled
 While cheerly following where the mighty
 led—
 Who sleep beneath the undistinguish'd sod
 Where happier comrades in their triumph trod,
 To us bequeath—'tis all their fate allows—
 The sireless offspring and the lonely
 spouse:
 She on high Albyn's dusky hills may raise
 The tearful eye in melancholy gaze,
 Or view, while shadowy auguries disclose
 The Highland Seer's anticipated woes,
 The bleeding phantom of each martial
 form
 Dim in the cloud, or darkling in the
 storm;
 While sad, she chants the solitary song,
 The soft lament for him who tarries
 long—
 For him, whose distant relics vainly crave
 The Coronach's wild requiem to the brave!

'Tis Heaven—not man—must charm
 away the woe,
 Which bursts when Nature's feelings
 newly flow;
 Yet tenderness and time may rob the tear
 Of half its bitterness for one so dear;
 A nation's gratitude perchance may
 spread
 A thornless pillow for the widow'd head;

OCCASIONAL PIECES

May lighten well her heart's maternal
care,
And wean from penury the soldier's heir.

FRAGMENT OF AN EPISTLE TO THOMAS MOORE

'WHAT say I?'—not a syllable further in prose;
I'm your man 'of all measures,' dear
Tom,—so here goes!
Here goes, for a swim on the stream of old Time,
On those buoyant supporters, the bladders of rhyme.
If our weight breaks them down, and we sink in the flood,
We are smother'd, at least, in respectable
mud,
Where the Divers of Bathos lie drown'd
in a heap,
And Southey's last Pæan has pillow'd his
sleep;—
That 'Felo de se,' who, half drunk with his malmsey,
Walk'd out of his depth and was lost in a calm sea,
Singing 'Glory to God' in a spick and span stanza,
The like (since Tom Sternhold was choked) never man saw.

The papers have told you, no doubt,
of the fusses,
The fêtes, and the gapings to get at these Russes,—
Of his Majesty's suite, up from coachman to Hetman,
And what dignity decks the flat face of the great man.
I saw him, last week, at two balls and a party,—
For a prince, his demeanour was rather too hearty.
You know we are used to quite different graces,

The Czar's look, I own, was much brighter and brisker,
But then he is sadly deficient in whisker;
And wore but a starless blue coat, and in kersey-
-mere breeches whisk'd round, in a waltz
with the Jersey,
Who lovely as ever, seem'd just as delighted
With Majesty's presence as those she invited.

CONDOLATORY ADDRESS TO SARAH, COUNTESS OF JERSEY ON THE PRINCE REGENT'S RETURNING HER PICTURE TO MRS. MEE

WHEN the vain triumph of the imperial
lord,
Whom servile Rome obey'd, and yet
abhorr'd,
Gave to the vulgar gaze each glorious
bust,
That left a likeness of the brave or
just;
What most admired each scrutinising eye
Of all that deck'd that passing pageantry?
What spread from face to face that wondering air?
The thought of Brutus—for his was not
there!
That absence proved his worth,—that absence fix'd
His memory on the longing mind, un-
mix'd;
And more decreed his glory to endure,
Than all a gold Colossus could secure.
If thus, fair Jersey, our desiring gaze Search for thy form, in vain and mute
amaze,
Amidst those pictured charms, whose loveliness,
Bright though they be, thine own had render'd less:
If he, that vain old man, whom truth admits
Heir of his father's crown, and of his wits,
If his corrupted eye, and wither'd heart,
Could with thy gentle image bear depart;
That tasteless shame be his, and ours the
grief,
To gaze on Beauty's band without its
chief:
Yet comfort still one selfish thought imparts,
We lose the portrait, but preserve our hearts.
What can his vaulted gallery now disclose?
A garden with all flowers—except the rose;—
A fount that only wants its living stream;
A night, with every star, save Dian's
beam.
Lost to our eyes the present forms shall
be,
That turn from tracing them to dream of
thee;
And more on that recall'd resemblance
pause,
Than all he shall not force on our
applause.
Long may thy yet meridian lustre
shine,
With all that Virtue asks of Homage
thine:

The symmetry of youth, the grace of
mien, 35
The eye that gladdens, and the brow
serene;
The glossy darkness of that clustering
hair,
Which shades, yet shows that forehead
more than fair!
Each glance that wins us, and the life that throws
A spell which will not let our looks re-
pose, 40
But turn to gaze again, and find anew
Some charm that well rewards another
view.
These are not lessen'd, these are still as
bright,
Albeit too dazzling for a dotard's sight;
And those must wait till ev'ry charm is
gone, 45
To please the paltry heart that pleases
none;—
That dull cold sensualist, whose sickly eye
In envious dimness pass'd thy portrait by;
Who rack'd his little spirit to combine Its hate of Freedom's loveliness, and
thine. 50

ELEGIAC STANZAS ON THE DEATH OF SIR PETER PARKER, BART.

THERE is a tear for all that die,
A mourner o'er the humblest grave;
But nations swell the funeral cry,
And Triumph weeps above the brave.
For them is Sorrow's purest sigh 5
O'er Ocean's heaving bosom sent:
In vain their bones unburied lie,
All earth becomes their monument!
A tomb is theirs on every page,
An epitaph on every tongue: 10
The present hours, the future age,
For them bewail, to them belong.

For them the voice of festal mirth Grows hush'd, their name the only
sound;
While deep Remembrance pours to 15
Worth.
The goblet's tributary round.

A theme to crowds that knew them not,
Lamented by admiring foes,
Who would not share their glorious lot?
Who would not die the death they chose? 20

And, gallant Parker! thus enshrined
Thy life, thy fall, thy fame shall be;
And early valour, glowing, find
A model in thy memory.

But there are breasts that bleed with
thee 25
In woe, that glory cannot quell;
And shuddering hear of victory,
Where one so dear, so dauntless, fell.
Where shall they turn to mourn thee less?
When cease to hear thy cherish'd name?
Time cannot teach forgetfulness, 31
While Grief's full heart is fed by Fame.

Alas! for them, though not for thee,
They cannot choose but weep the more;
Deep for the dead the grief must be, 35
Who ne'er gave cause to mourn before.

TO BELSHAZZAR

BELSHAZZAR! from the banquet turn,
Nor in thy sensual fluness fall;
Behold! while yet before thee burn
The graven words, the glowing wall,
Many a despot men miscall 5
Crown'd and anointed from on high;
But thou, the weakest, worst of all—
Is it not written, thou must die?
Go! dash the roses from thy brow—
Grey hairs but poorly wreath with 10
them;
Youth's garlands misbecome thee now,
More than thy very diadem,
Where thou hast tarnish'd every gem:—
Then throw the worthless bauble by,
Which, worn by thee, ev'n slaves con- 15
temn;
And learn like better men to die!
Oh! early in the balance weigh'd,
And ever light of word and worth,
Whose soul expired ere youth decay'd,
And left thee but a mass of earth. 20
To see thee moves the scorner's mirth:
But tears in Hope's averted eye
Lament that even thou hadst birth—
Unfit to govern, live, or die.

HEBREW MELODIES

THE subsequent poems were written at the request of my friend, the Hon. Douglas Kinnaird, for a Selection of Hebrew Melodies, and have been published, with the music, arranged by Mr. Braham and Mr. Nathan.

SHE WALKS IN BEAUTY

I

SHE walks in beauty, like the night
Of cloudless climes and starry skies;
And all that's best of dark and bright
Meet in her aspect and her eyes:
Thus mellow'd to that tender light
Which heaven to gaudy day denies.

OCCASIONAL PIECES

II

One shade the more, one ray the less,
Had half impair'd the nameless grace
Which waves in every raven tress,
Or softly lightens o'er her face;
Where thoughts serenely sweet express
How pure, how dear their dwelling-
place.

III

And on that cheek, and o'er that brow,
So soft, so calm, yet eloquent,
The smiles that win, the tints that glow,
But tell of days in goodness spent,
A mind at peace with all below,
A heart whose love is innocent!

THE HARP THE MONARCH MINSTREL SWEPT

I

THE harp the monarch minstrel swept,
The King of men, the loved of Heaven,
Which Music hallow'd while she wept
O'er tones her heart of hearts had given, Redoubled be her tears, its chords are riven!
It soften'd men of iron mould,
It gave them virtues not their own;
No ear so dull, no soul so cold,
That felt not, fired not to the tone,
Till David's lyre grew mightier than his throne!

II

It told the triumphs of our King,
It wafted glory to our God;
It made our gladden'd valleys ring,
The cedars bow, the mountains nod;
Its sound aspired to heaven and there
abode!
Since then, though heard on earth no
more,
Devotion and her daughter Love
Still bid the bursting spirit soar
To sounds that seem as from above,
In dreams that day's broad light can not remove.

IF THAT HIGH WORLD

I

If that high world, which lies beyond
Our own, surviving Love endears;
If there the cherish'd heart be fond,
The eye the same, except in tears—
How welcome those untrodden spheres!
How sweet this very hour to die!
To soar from earth and find all fears
Lost in thy light—Eternity!

II

It must be so: 'tis not for self
That we so tremble on the brink;
And striving to o'erleap the gulf,
Yet cling to Being's severing link.
Oh! in that future let us think
To hold each heart the heart that shares;
With them the immortal waters drink,
And soul in soul grow deathless theirs!

THE WILD GAZELLE

I

THE wild gazelle on Judah's hills
Exulting yet may bound,
And drink from all the living rills
That gush on holy ground:
Its airy step and glorious eye
May glance in tameless transport by:—

II

A step as fleet, an eye more bright,
Hath Judah witness'd there;
And o'er her scenes of lost delight
Inhabitants more fair.
The cedars wave on Lebanon,
But Judah's statelier maids are gone!

III

More blest each palm that shades those plains
Than Israel's scatter'd race;
For, taking root, it there remains
In solitary grace:
It cannot quit its place of birth,
It will not live in other earth.

IV

But we must wander witheringly,
In other lands to die;
And where our fathers' ashes be,
Our own may never lie:
Our temple hath not left a stone,
And Mockery sits on Salem's throne.

OH! WEEP FOR THOSE

I

OH! weep for those that wept by Babel's
stream,
Whose shrines are desolate, whose land a
dream;
Weep for the harp of Judah's broken
shell;
Mourn—where their God hath dwelt the godless dwell!

II

And where shall Israel lave her bleeding
feet?
And when shall Zion's songs again seem
sweet?
And Judah's melody once more rejoice
The hearts that leap'd before its heavenly voice?

III

Tribes of the wandering foot and weary
breast,
How shall ye flee away and be at rest!
The wild-dove hath her nest, the fox his
cave,
Mankind their country—Israel but the
grave!

ON JORDAN'S BANKS

I

ON Jordan's banks the Arab's camels
stray,
On Sion's hill the False One's votaries
pray,
The Baal-adorer bows on Sinai's steep—Yet there—even there—Oh God! thy thunders sleep:

II

There—where thy finger scorch'd the tablet stone!
There—where thy shadow to thy people
shone!
Thy glory shrouded in its garb of fire:
Thyself—none living see and not expire!

III

Oh! in the lightning let thy glance appear;
Sweep from his shiver'd hand the oppres-
sor's spear!
How long by tyrants shall thy land be trod?
How long thy temple worshipless, Oh God?

JEPHTHA'S DAUGHTER

I

SINCE our Country, our God—Oh, my
Sire!
Demand that thy Daughter expire;
Since thy triumph was bought by thy vow—
Strike the bosom that's bared for thee now!

II

And the voice of my mourning is o'er,
And the mountains behold me no more:
If the hand that I love lay me low,
There cannot be pain in the blow!

III

And of this, oh, my Father! be sure—
That the blood of thy child is as pure
As the blessing I beg ere it flow,
And the last thought that soothes me below.

IV

Though the virgins of Salem lament,
Be the judge and the hero unbent!
I have won the great battle for thee,
And my Father and Country are free!

V

When this blood of thy giving hath gush'd,
When the voice that thou lovest is hush'd,
Let my memory still be thy pride,
And forget not I smiled as I died!

OH! SNATCH'D AWAY IN BEAUTY'S BLOOM

I

Oh! snatch'd away in beauty's bloom,
On thee shall press no ponderous tomb;
But on thy turf shall roses rear
Their leaves, the earliest of the year;
And the wild cypress wave in tender gloom:

II

And oft by yon blue gushing stream
Shall Sorrow lean her drooping head,
And feed deep thought with many a
dream,
And lingering pause and lightly tread;
Fond wretch! as if her step disturb'd
the dead!

III

Away! we know that tears are vain,
That death nor heeds nor hears distress:
Will this unteach us to complain?
Or make one mourner weep the less?
And thou—who tell'st me to forget,
Thy looks are wan, thine eyes are wet.

MY SOUL IS DARK

I

My soul is dark—Oh! quickly string
The harp I yet can brook to hear;
And let thy gentle fingers fling
Its melting murmurs o'er mine ear.
If in this heart a hope be dear,
That sound shall charm it forth again:
If in these eyes there lurk a tear,
'Twill flow, and cease to burn my brain.

II

But bid the strain be wild and deep,
Nor let thy notes of joy be first:
I tell thee, minstrel, I must weep,
Or else this heavy heart will burst;
For it hath been by sorrow nursed,
And ached in sleepless silence long;
And now 'tis doom'd to know the worst,
And break at once—or yield to song.

I SAW THEE WEEP

I

I SAW thee weep—the big bright tear
Came o'er that eye of blue;
And then methought it did appear
A violet dropping dew;

OCCASIONAL PIECES

I saw thee smile—the sapphire's blaze
Beside thee ceased to shine;
It could not match the living rays
That fill'd that glance of thine.

II

As clouds from yonder sun receive
A deep and mellow dye,
Which scarce the shade of coming eve
Can banish from the sky,
Those smiles unto the moodiest mind
Their own pure joy impart;
Their sunshine leaves a glow behind
That lightens o'er the heart.

THY DAYS ARE DONE

I

Thy days are done, thy fame begun;
Thy country's strains record
The triumphs of her chosen Son,
The slaughters of his sword!
The deeds he did, the fields he won,
The freedom he restored!

II

Though thou art fall'n, while we are free
Thou shalt not taste of death!
The generous blood that flow'd from thee
Disdain'd to sink beneath:
Within our veins its currents be,
Thy spirit on our breath!

III

Thy name, our charging hosts along,
Shall be the battle-word!
Thy fall, the theme of choral song
From virgin voices pour'd!
To weep would do thy glory wrong:
Thou shalt not be deplored.

SAUL

I

THOU whose spell can raise the dead,
Bid the prophet's form appear.
'Samuel, raise thy buried head!
King, behold the phantom seer!' 5 Earth yawn'd; he stood the centre of a
cloud:
Light changed its hue, retiring from his shroud.
Death stood all glassy in his fixed eye;
His hand was wither'd, and his veins were
dry;
His foot, in bony whiteness, glitter'd there,
Shrunk and sinewless, and ghastly bare;
From lips that moved not and unbreath-ing frame, 11
Like cavern'd winds, the hollow accents
came.
Saul saw, and fell to earth, as falls the oak,
At once, and blasted by the thunder-stroke.

II

'Why is my sleep disquieted? 15
Who is he that calls the dead?
Is it thou, O King? Behold,
Bloodless are these limbs, and cold:
Such are mine; and such shall be Thine to-morrow, when with me:
Ere the coming day is done, 21
Such shalt thou be, such thy son.
Fare thee well, but for a day,
Then we mix our mouldering clay.
Thou, thy race, lie pale and low, 25
Pierced by shafts of many a bow;
And the falchion by thy side
To thy heart thy hand shall guide:
Crownless, breathless, headless fall,
Son and sire, the house of Saul!' 30

SONG OF SAUL BEFORE HIS LAST BATTLE

I

WARRIORS and chiefs! should the shaft or
the sword
Pierce me in leading the host of the Lord, Heed not the corse, though a king's, in your path:
Bury your steel in the bosoms of Gath!

II

Thou who art bearing my buckler and bow, Should the soldiers of Saul look away from the foe,
Stretch me that moment in blood at thy feet!
Mine be the doom which they dared not to meet.

III

Farewell to others, but never we part,
Heir to my royalty, son of my heart!
Bright is the diadem, boundless the sway,
Or kingly the death, which awaits us to-day!

'ALL IS VANITY, SAITH THE PREACHER'

I

FAME, wisdom, love, and power were mine,
And health and youth possess'd me;
My goblets blush'd from every vine,
And lovely forms caress'd me;
I sunn'd my heart in beauty's eyes,
And felt my soul grow tender;
All earth can give, or mortal prize,
Was mine of regal splendour.

II

I strive to number o'er what days
Remembrance can discover,
Which all that life or earth displays
Would lure me to live over.
There rose no day, there roll'd no hour
Of pleasure unembitter'd;
And not a trapping deck'd my power
That gall'd not while it glitter'd.

III

The serpent of the field, by art
And spells, is won from harming;
But that which coils around the heart,
Oh! who hath power of charming?
It will not list to wisdom's lore,
Nor music's voice can lure it;
But there it stings for evermore
The soul that must endure it.

WHEN COLDNESS WRAPS THIS SUFFERING CLAY

I

WHEN coldness wraps this suffering clay,
Ah! whither strays the immortal mind?
It cannot die, it cannot stay,
But leaves its darken'd dust behind.
Then, unembodied, doth it trace
By steps each planet's heavenly way?
Or fill at once the realms of space,
A thing of eyes, that all survey?

II

Eternal, boundless, undecay'd,
A thought unseen, but seeing all,
All, all in earth or skies display'd,
Shall it survey, shall it recall:
Each fainter trace that memory holds
So darkly of departed years,
In one broad glance the soul beholds,
And all, that was, at once appears.

III

Before Creation peopled earth,
Its eye shall roll through chaos back;
And where the furthest heaven had birth,
The spirit trace its rising track.
And where the future mars or makes,
Its glance dilate o'er all to be,
While sun is quench'd or system breaks,
Fix'd in its own eternity.

IV

Above or Love, Hope, Hate, or Fear,
It lives all passionless and pure:
An age shall fleet like earthly year;
Its years as moments shall endure.
Away, away, without a wing,
O'er all, through all, its thought shall fly,
A nameless and eternal thing,
Forgetting what it was to die.

VISION OF BELSHAZZAR

I

THE King was on his throne,
The Satraps throng'd the hall:
A thousand bright lamps shone
O'er that high festival.

A thousand cups of gold,
In Judah deem'd divine—Jehovah's vessels hold
The godless Heathen's wine!

II

In that same hour and hall,
The fingers of a hand
Came forth against the wall,
And wrote as if on sand:
The fingers of a man;—
A solitary hand
Along the letters ran,
And traced them like a wand.

III

The monarch saw, and shook,
And bade no more rejoice;
All bloodless wax'd his look,
And tremulous his voice.
'Let the men of lore appear,
The wisest of the earth,
And expound the words of fear,
Which mar our royal mirth.'

Chaldea's seers are good,
But here they have no skill;
And the unknown letters stood Untold and awful still.
And Babel's men of age
Are wise and deep in lore;
But now they were not sage,
They saw—but knew no more.

V

A captive in the land,
A stranger and a youth,
He heard the king's command,
He saw that writing's truth.
The lamps around were bright.
The prophecy in view;
He read it on that night,—
The morrow proved it true.

VI

'Belshazzar's grave is made,
His kingdom pass'd away,
He, in the balance weigh'd,
Is light and worthless clay;
The shroud his robe of state,
His canopy the stone;
The Mede is at his gate!
The Persian on his throne!'

SUN OF THE SLEEPLESS!

SUN of the sleepless! melancholy star!
Whose tearful beam glows tremulously
far,
That show'st the darkness thou canst not dispel,
How like art thou to joy remember'd well!

OCCASIONAL PIECES

So gleams the past, the light of other
days,
Which shines, but warms not with its powerless rays;
A night-beam Sorrow watcheth to behold, Distinct, but distant—clear—but, oh how cold!

WERE MY BOSOM AS FALSE AS THOU DEEM'ST IT TO BE

I

WERE my bosom as false as thou deem'st
it to be,
I need not have wander'd from far Galilee;
It was but abjuring my creed to efface
The curse which, thou say'st, is the crime of my race.

II

If the bad never triumph, then God is with
thee!
If the slave only sin, thou art spotless
and free!
If the Exile on earth is an Outcast on high,
Live on in thy faith, but in mine I will die.

III

I have lost for that faith more than thou canst bestow,
As the God who permits thee to prosper
doth know;
In his hand is my heart and my hope—
and in thine
The land and the life which for him I
resign.

HEROD'S LAMENT FOR MARIAMNE

I

OH, Mariamne! now for thee
The heart for which thou bled'st is bleeding;
Revenge is lost in agony,
And wild remorse to rage succeeding.
Oh, Mariamne! where art thou?
Thou canst not hear my bitter pleading:
Ah! could'st thou—thou would'st pardon
now,
Though Heaven were to my prayer unheeding.

II

And is she dead?—and did they dare
Obey my frenzy's jealous raving?
My wrath but doom'd my own despair:
The sword that smote her's o'er me waving.—
But thou art cold, my murder'd love!
And this dark heart is vainly craving
For her who soars alone above,
And leaves my soul unworthy saving.

III

She's gone, who shared my diadem;
She sunk, with her my joys entombing;
I swept that flower from Judah's stem,
Whose leaves for me alone were bloom-
ing;
And mine's the guilt, and mine the hell,
This bosom's desolation dooming;
And I have earn'd those tortures well,
Which unconsumed are still consum-
ing!

ON THE DAY OF THE DESTRUC- TION OF JERUSALEM BY TITUS

I

FROM the last hill that looks on thy once holy dome,
I beheld thee, oh Sion! when render'd to Rome:
'Twas thy last sun went down, and the flames of thy fall
Flash'd back on the last glance I gave to thy wall.

II

I look'd for thy temple, I look'd for my
home,
And forgot for a moment my bondage to
come;
I beheld but the death-fire that fed on thy
fane,
And the fast-fetter'd hands that made vengeance in vain.

III

On many an eve, the high spot whence I gazed
Had reflected the last beam of day as it blazed;
While I stood on the height, and beheld the decline
Of the rays from the mountain that shone on thy shrine.

IV

And now on that mountain I stood on
that day,
But I mark'd not the twilight beam melting away;
Oh! would that the lightning had glared
in its stead,
And the thunderbolt burst on the con-queror's head!

V

But the gods of the Pagan shall never profane
The shrine where Jehovah disdain'd not to reign;
And scatter'd and scorn'd as thy people
may be,
Our worship, oh Father! is only for thee.

BY THE RIVERS OF BABYLON WE SAT DOWN AND WEPT

I

We sat down and wept by the waters
Of Babel, and thought of the day
When our foe, in the hue of his slaughters,
Made Salem's high places his prey;
And ye, oh her desolate daughters!
Were scatter'd all weeping away.

II

While sadly we gazed on the river
Which roll'd on in freedom below,
They demanded the song: but, oh never
That triumph the stranger shall know!
May this right hand be wither'd for ever,
Ere it string our high harp for the foe!

III

On the willow that harp is suspended,
Oh Salem! its sound should be free;
And the hour when thy glories were ended
But left me that token of thee:
And ne'er shall its soft tones be blended
With the voice of the spoiler by me!

THE DESTRUCTION OF SENNACHERIB

I

THE Assyrian came down like the wolf on the fold,
And his cohorts were gleaming in purple
and gold;
And the sheen of their spears was like stars on the sea,
When the blue wave rolls nightly on deep Galilee.

II

Like the leaves of the forest when Summer is green,
That host with their banners at sunset
were seen:
Like the leaves of the forest when Autumn
hath blown,
That host on the morrow lay wither'd and strown.

III

For the Angel of Death spread his wings
on the blast,
And breathed in the face of the foe as he
pass'd;
And the eyes of the sleepers wax'd deadly and chill,
And their hearts but once heaved, and for ever grew still!

IV

And there lay the steed with his nostril
all wide,
But through it there roll'd not the breath
of his pride;

And the foam of his gasping lay white on
the turf,
And cold as the spray of the rock-beating surf.

V

And there lay the rider distorted and pale,
With the dew on his brow, and the rust
on his mail:
And the tents were all silent, the banners
alone,
The lances unlifted, the trumpet unblown.

VI

And the widows of Ashur are loud in their wail,
And the idols are broke in the temple of Baal;
And the might of the Gentile, unsmote
by the sword,
Hath melted like snow in the glance of the Lord!

A SPIRIT PASS'D BEFORE ME

FROM JOB

I

A SPIRIT pass'd before me: I beheld
The face of immortality unveil'd—Deep sleep came down on every eye save
mine—
And there it stood,—all formless—but
divine:
Along my bones the creeping flesh did
quake;
And as my damp hair stiffen'd, thus it spake:

II

'Is man more just than God? Is man more pure
Than he who deems even Seraphs insecure?
Creatures of clay—vain dwellers in the
dust!
The moth survives you, and are ye more
just?
Things of a day! you wither ere the night,
Heedless and blind to Wisdom's wasted
light!'

STANZAS FOR MUSIC

THERE be none of Beauty's daughters
With a magic like thee;
And like music on the waters
Is thy sweet voice to me:
When, as if its sound were causing
The charmed ocean's pausing,
The waves lie still and gleaming
And the lull'd winds seem dreaming:

OCCASIONAL PIECES

And the midnight moon is weaving
Her bright chain o'er the deep; 10
Whose breast is gently heaving,
As an infant's asleep:
So the spirit bows before thee,
To listen and adore thee;
With a full but soft emotion,
Like the swell of Summer's ocean.

STANZAS FOR MUSIC

'O Lachrymarum fons, tenero sacros
Ducentium ortus ex animo: quater
Felix! in imo qui scatentem
Pectore te, pia Nympha, sensit.'
GRAY'S Poemata.

THERE'S not a joy the world can give like that it takes away,
When the glow of early thought declines in feeling's dull decay;
'Tis not on youth's smooth cheek the blush alone, which fades so fast,
But the tender bloom of heart is gone, ere youth itself be past.

Then the few whose spirits float above the wreck of happiness 5
Are driven o'er the shoals of guilt or ocean of excess:
The magnet of their course is gone, or only points in vain
The shore to which their shiver'd sail shall never stretch again.

Then the mortal coldness of the soul like death itself comes down;
It cannot feel for others' woes, it dare not dream its own; 10
That heavy chill has frozen o'er the fountain of our tears,
And though the eye may sparkle still, 'tis where the ice appears.

Though wit may flash from fluent lips,
and mirth distract the breast,
Through midnight hours that yield no more their former hope of rest;
'Tis but as ivy-leaves around the ruin'd turret wreath, 15
All green and wildly fresh without, but worn and grey beneath.

Oh could I feel as I have felt,—or be what I have been,
Or weep as I could once have wept o'er
many a vanish'd scene;
As springs in deserts found seem sweet,
all brackish though they be,
So, midst the wither'd waste of life, those tears would flow to me. 20

ON NAPOLEON'S ESCAPE FROM ELBA

ONCE fairly set out on his party of pleasure, Taking towns at his liking, and crowns
at his leisure,
From Elba to Lyons and Paris he goes, 15 Making balls for the ladies, and bows to his foes.

March 27, 1815.

ODE FROM THE FRENCH

I

WE do not curse thee, Waterloo!
Though Freedom's blood thy plain bedew;
There 'twas shed, but is not sunk—
Rising from each gory trunk,
Like the water-spout from ocean, 5
With a strong and growing motion—
It soars, and mingles in the air,
With that of lost Labedoyère—
With that of him whose honour'd grave
Contains the 'bravest of the brave.' 10
A crimson cloud it spreads and glows,
But shall return to whence it rose;
When 'tis full 'twill burst asunder—
Never yet was heard such thunder
As then shall shake the world with wonder— 15
Never yet was seen such lightning
As o'er heaven shall then be bright'ning!
Like the Wormwood Star foretold
By the sainted Seer of old,
Show'ring down a fiery flood, 20
Turning rivers into blood.

II

The Chief has fallen, but not by you,
Vanquishers of Waterloo!
When the soldier citizen
Sway'd not o'er his fellow-men— 25
Save in deeds that led them on Where Glory smiled on Freedom's son—
Who, of all the despots banded,
With that youthful chief competed?
Who could boast o'er France defeated,
Till lone Tyranny commanded? 31
Till, goaded by ambition's sting,
The Hero sunk into the King?
Then he fell:—so perish all,
Who would men by man enthrall! 35

III

And thou, too, of the snow-white plume!
Whose realm refused thee ev'n a tomb;
Better hadst thou still been leaping
France o'er hosts of hirelings bleeding,
Than sold thyself to death and shame
For a meanly royal name; 41
Such as he of Naples wears,
Who thy blood-bought title bears.
Little didst thou deem, when dashing
On thy war-horse through the ranks,
Like a stream which burst its banks,
While helmets cleft, and sabres clashing,

FROM THE FRENCH

I

Shone and shiver'd fast around thee—
Of the fate at last which found thee:
Was that haughty plume laid low 50
By a slave's dishonest blow?
Once—as the moon sways o'er the tide,
It roll'd in air, the warrior's guide;
Through the smoke-created night
Of the black and sulphurous fight, 55
The soldier raised his seeking eye
To catch that crest's ascendancy,—
And, as it onward rolling rose,
So moved his heart upon our foes.
There, where death's brief pang was quickest, 60

And the battle's wreck lay thickest,
Strew'd beneath the advancing banner
Of the eagle's burning crest—
(There with thunder-clouds to fan her,
Who could then her wing arrest— 65
Victory beaming from her breast?)
While the broken line enlarging Fell, or fled along the plain;
There be sure was Murat charging!
There he ne'er shall charge again! 70

IV

O'er glories gone the invaders march,
Weeps Triumph o'er each levell'd arch—
But let Freedom rejoice,
With her heart in her voice;
But, her hand on her sword, 75
Doubly shall she be adored;
France hath twice too well been taught
The 'moral lesson' dearly bought—
Her safety sits not on a throne,
With Capet or Napoleon!
But in equal rights and laws,
Hearts and hands in one great cause—
Freedom, such as God hath given Unto all beneath his heaven,
With their breath, and from their birth, Though guilt would sweep it from the
earth; 86

With a fierce and lavish hand
Scattering nations' wealth like sand;
Pouring nations' blood like water,
In imperial seas of slaughter! 90

V

But the heart and the mind,
And the voice of mankind,
Shall arise in communion—
And who shall resist that proud union?
The time is past when swords subdued—
Man may die—the soul's renew'd: 96
Even in this low world of care
Freedom ne'er shall want an heir;
Millions breathe but to inherit
Her for ever bounding spirit—
When once more her hosts assemble,
Tyrants shall believe and tremble—
Smile they at this idle threat?
Crimson tears will follow yet.

MUST thou go, my glorious Chief,
Sever'd from thy faithful few?
Who can tell thy warrior's grief,
Maddening o'er that long adieu?
Woman's love, and friendship's zeal, 55
Dear as both have been to me—
What are they to all I feel,
With a soldier's faith for thee?

II

Idol of the soldier's soul!
First in fight, but mightiest now;
Many could a world control;
Thee alone no doom can bow.
By thy side for years I dared
Death; and envied those who fell,
When their dying shout was heard,
Blessing him they served so well.

III

Would that I were cold with those,
Since this hour I live to see;
When the doubts of coward foes
Scarce dare trust a man with thee,
Dreading each should set thee free!
Oh! although in dungeons pent,
All their chains were light to me,
Gazing on thy soul unbent. 75

IV

Would the sycophants of him
Now so deaf to duty's prayer,
Were his borrow'd glories dim,
In his native darkness share?
Were that world this hour his own,
All thou calmly dost resign,
Could he purchase with that throne
Hearts like those which still are thine?

V

My chief, my king, my friend, adieu!
Never did I droop before;
Never to my sovereign sue,
As his foes I now implore:
All I ask is to divide
Every peril he must brave;
Sharing by the hero's side
His fall, his exile, and his grave.

ON THE STAR OF 'THE LEGION OF HONOUR'

[FROM THE FRENCH]

STAR of the brave!—whose beam hath shed
Such glory o'er the quick and dead—
Thou radiant and adored deceit!
Which millions rush'd in arms to greet,
Wild meteor of immortal birth; 5
Why rise in Heaven to set on Earth?

OCCASIONAL PIECES

Souls of slain heroes form'd thy rays;
Eternity flash'd through thy blaze;
The music of thy martial sphere
Was fame on high and honour here; 10
And thy light broke on human eyes,
Like a volcano of the skies.

Like lava roll'd thy stream of blood,
And swept down empires with its flood;
Earth rock'd beneath thee to her base,
As thou didst lighten through all space;
And the shorn Sun grew dim in air,
And set while thou wert dwelling there.

Before thee rose, and with thee grew,
A rainbow of the loveliest hue 20
Of three bright colours, each divine,
And fit for that celestial sign;
For Freedom's hand had blended them,
Like tints in an immortal gem.

One tint was of the sunbeam's dyes; 25
One, the blue depth of Seraph's eyes;
One, the pure Spirit's veil of white
Had robed in radiance of its light:
The three so mingled did besem
The texture of a heavenly dream. 30

Star of the brave! thy ray is pale,
And darkness must again prevail!
But, oh thou Rainbow of the free!
Our tears and blood must flow for thee.
When thy bright promise fades away, 35
Our life is but a load of clay.

And Freedom hallows with her tread
The silent cities of the dead;
For beautiful in death are they
Who proudly fall in her array; 40
And soon, oh Goddess! may we be
For evermore with them or thee!

NAPOLEON'S FAREWELL

[FROM THE FRENCH]

I

FAREWELL to the Land where the gloom of my Glory
Arose and o'ershadow'd the earth with her name—
She abandons me now—but the page of her story,
The brightest or blackest, is fill'd with my
fame.
I have warr'd with a world which vanquish'd me only
When the meteor of conquest allured me
too far;
I have coped with the nations which dread
me thus lonely,
The last single Captive to millions in war.

II

Farewell to thee, France! when thy dia-dem crown'd me,
I made thee the gem and the wonder of
earth,
But thy weakness decrees I should leave
as I found thee,
Decay'd in thy glory, and sunk in thy
worth.
Oh! for the veteran hearts that were wasted
In strife with the storm, when their battles were won—
Then the Eagle, whose gaze in that moment was blasted,
Had still soar'd with eyes fix'd on victory's sun!

III

Farewell to thee, France!—but when Liberty rallies
Once more in thy regions, remember me
then,—
The violet still grows in the depth of thy valleys;
Though wither'd, thy tear will unfold it
again—
Yet, yet, I may baffle the hosts that surround us,
And yet may thy heart leap awake to my
voice—
There are links which must break in the chain that has bound us, Then turn thee and call on the Chief of thy choice!

FARE THEE WELL

*Alas! they had been friends in youth;
But whispering tongues can poison truth;
And constancy lives in realms above;
And life is thorny; and youth is vain;
And to be wroth with one we love,
Doth work like madness in the brain;

But never either found another
To free the hollow heart from paining—
They stood aloof, the scars remaining,
Like cliffs which had been rent asunder;
A dreary sea now flows between,
But neither heat, nor frost, nor thunder,
Shall wholly do away, I ween,
The marks of that which once hath been.
COLERIDGE'S Christabel.

FARE thee well! and if for ever,
Still for ever, fare thee well:
Even though unforgiving, never
'Gainst thee shall my heart rebel.

Would that breast were bared before thee
Where thy head so oft hath lain. 6
While that placid sleep came o'er thee
Which thou ne'er canst know again:

A SKETCH

Would that breast, by thee glanced over,
Every inmost thought could show! 10
Then thou wouldst at last discover
'Twas not well to spurn it so.

Though the world for this commend
thee—

Though it smile upon the blow,
Even its praises must offend thee, 15
Founded on another's woe:

Though my many faults defaced me,
Could no other arm be found,
Than the one which once embraced me,
To inflict a cureless wound? 20

Yet, oh yet, thyself deceive not;
Love may sink by slow decay,
But by sudden wrench, believe not Hearts can thus be torn away:

Still thine own life retaineth, 25
Still must mine, though bleeding, beat;
And the undying thought which paineth
Is—that we no more may meet.

These are words of deeper sorrow
Than the wail above the dead; 30
Both shall live, but every morrow
Wake us from a widow'd bed.

And when thou wouldst solace gather,
When our child's first accents flow,
Wilt thou teach her to say 'Father!' 35
Though his care she must forego?

When her little hands shall press thee,
When her lip to thine is press'd,
Think of him whose prayer shall bless
thee,
Think of him thy love had bless'd! 40

Should her lineaments resemble
Those thou never more may'st see,
Then thy heart will softly tremble
With a pulse yet true to me. 44

All my faults perchance thou knowest,
All my madness none can know;
All my hopes, where'er thou goest,
Wither, yet with thee they go.

Every feeling hath been shaken; 49
Pride, which not a world could bow,
Bows to thee—by thee forsaken,
Even my soul forsakes me now:

But 'tis done—all words are idle—
Words from me are vainer still;
But the thoughts we cannot bridle 55
Force their way without the will.

Fare thee well! thus disunited,
Torn from every nearer tie,
Sear'd in heart, and lone, and blighted,
More than this I scarce can die. 60

March 17, 1816.

'Honest—honest Iago!
If that thou be'st a devil, I cannot kill thee.'

SHAKESPEARE.

BORN in the garret, in the kitchen bred,
Promoted thence to deck her mistress' head;
Next—for some gracious service un-
express'd,

And from its wages only to be guess'd—
Raised from the toilette to the table,—
where 5

Her wondering betters wait behind her chair.

With eye unmoved, and forehead un-
abash'd,
She dines from off the plate she lately
wash'd.

Quick with the tale, and ready with the lie,
The genial confidante, and general spy,
Who could, ye gods! her next employment guess— 11

An only infant's earliest governess!
She taught the child to read, and taught
so well,

That she herself, by teaching, learn'd to spell.

An adept next in penmanship she grows,
As many a nameless slander deftly shows:
What she had made the pupil of her art,
None know—but that high Soul secured
the heart,

And panted for the truth it could not hear,
With longing breast and undeluded ear.
Foil'd was perversion by that youthful
mind, 21

Which Flattery fool'd not, Baseness could not blind,

Deceit infect not, near Contagion soil,
Indulgence weaken, nor Example spoil,
Nor master'd Science tempt her to look
down 25

On humbler talents with a pitying frown,
Nor Genius swell, nor Beauty render vain,
Nor Envy ruffle to retaliate pain,
Nor Fortune change, Pride raise, nor Passion bow,

Nor virtue teach austerity—till now. 30
Serenely purest of her sex that live,
But wanting one sweet weakness—to forgive,

Too shock'd at faults her soul can never
know,
She deems that all could be like her be-
low:

Foe to all vice, yet hardly Virtue's friend,
For Virtue pardons those she would amend. 36

But to the theme, now laid aside too
long,
The baleful burthen of this honest song,
Though all her former functions are no
more,

She rules the circle which she served before.

OCCASIONAL PIECES

If mothers—none know why—before her
quake; 41
If daughters dread her for the mothers'
sake;
If early habits—those false links, which bind
At times the loftiest to the meanest
mind—
Have given her power too deeply to instil
The angry essence of her deadly will; 46
If like a snake she steal within your
walls,
Till the black slime betray her as she crawls;
If like a viper to the heart she wind,
And leave the venom there she did not find; 50
What marvel that this hag of hatred works
Eternal evil latent as she lurks,
To make a Pandemonium where she dwells,
And reign the Hecate of domestic hells?
Skill'd by a touch to deepen scandal's
tints 55
With all the kind mendacity of hints,
While mingling truth with falsehood,
sneers with smiles,
A thread of candour with a web of
wiles:
A plain blunt show of briefly-spoken seeming,
To hide her bloodless heart's soulharden'd scheming; 60
A lip of lies; a face form'd to conceal,
And, without feeling, mock at all who
feel:
With a vile mask the Gorgon would dis-
own,—
A cheek of parchment, and an eye of stone.
Mark, how the channels of her yellow
blood 65
Ooze to her skin, and stagnate there to mud,
Cased like the centipede in saffron mail,
Or darker greenness of the scorpion's scale—
(For drawn from reptiles only may we
trace
Congenial colours in that soul or face)—
Look on her features! and behold her
mind 71
As in a mirror of itself defined:
Look on the picture! deem it not o'er-charged—
There is no trait which might not be enlarged:
Yet true to 'Nature's journeymen,' who
made 75
This monster when their mistress left off
trade—
This female dog-star of her little sky,
Where all beneath her influence droop or
die.

Oh! wretch without a tear—without a
thought,
Save joy above the ruin thou hast
wrought— 80
The time shall come, nor long remote,
when thou Shalt feel far more than thou inflict
now;
Feel for thy vile self-loving self in vain,
And turn thee howling in unpitied pain.
May the strong curse of crush'd affections
light 85
Back on thy bosom with reflected blight!
And make thee in thy leprosy of mind
As loathsome to thyself as to mankind!
Till all thy self-thoughts curdle into hate,
Black—as thy will for others would create: 90
Till thy hard heart be calcined into dust,
And thy soul welter in its hideous crust.
Oh, may thy grave be sleepless as the bed,
The widow'd couch of fire, that thou hast
spread!
Then, when thou fain wouldst weary
Heaven with prayer, 95
Look on thine earthly victims—and despair!
Down to the dust!—and, as thou rott'st
away,
Even worms shall perish on thy poisonous
clay.
But for the love I bore, and still must bear,
To her thy malice from all ties would
tear— 100
Thy name—thy human name—to every eye
The climax of all scorn should hang on
high,
Exalted o'er thy less abhorr'd compeers—
And festering in the infamy of years.

ENDORSEMENT TO THE DEED OF SEPARATION

IN THE APRIL OF 1816

A YEAR ago, you swore, fond she!
'To love, to honour,' and so forth:
Such was the vow you pledged to me,
And here 's exactly what 'tis worth.

STANZAS TO AUGUSTA

I

WHEN all around grew drear and dark,
And reason half withheld her ray—
And hope but shed a dying spark
Which more misled my lonely way;

II

In that deep midnight of the mind,
And that internal strife of heart,
When dreading to be deem'd too kind,
The weak despair—the cold depart;

III

When fortune changed—and love fled far,
And hatred's shafts flew thick and fast,
Thou wert the solitary star
Which rose and set not to the last.

IV

Oh! blest be thine unbroken light!
That watch'd me as a seraph's eye,
And stood between me and the night,
For ever shining sweetly nigh.

V

And when the cloud upon us came,
Which strove to blacken o'er thy ray—
Then purer spread its gentle flame,
And dash'd the darkness all away.

VI

Still may thy spirit dwell on mine,
And teach it what to brave or brook—
There's more in one soft word of thine
Than in the world's defied rebuke.

VII

Thou stood'st, as stands a lovely tree,
That still unbroke, though gently bent,
Still waves with fond fidelity
Its boughs above a monument.

VIII

The winds might rend—the skies might pour,
But there thou wert—and still wouldst
be Devoted in the stormiest hour
To shed thy weeping leaves o'er me.

IX

But thou and thine shall know no blight,
Whatever fate on me may fall;
For heaven in sunshine will requite
The kind—and thee the most of all.

X

Then let the ties of baffled love
Be broken—thine will never break;
Thy heart can feel—but will not move;
Thy soul, though soft, will never shake.

XI

And these, when all was lost beside,
Were found and still are fix'd in thee;—
And bearing still a breast so tried,
Earth is no desert—ev'n to me.

STANZAS TO AUGUSTA

I

THOUGH the day of my destiny's over,
And the star of my fate hath declined,
Thy soft heart refused to discover
The faults which so many could find;

Though thy soul with my grief was acquainted,
It shrunk not to share it with me,
And the love which my spirit hath painted
It never hath found but in thee.

II

Then when nature around me is smiling,
The last smile which answers to mine,
I do not believe it beguiling,
Because it reminds me of thine;
And when winds are at war with the
ocean,
As the breasts I believed in with me,
If their billows excite an emotion,
It is that they bear me from thee.

III

Though the rock of my last hope is shiver'd,
And its fragments are sunk in the wave,
Though I feel that my soul is deliver'd
To pain—it shall not be its slave.
There is many a pang to pursue me:
They may crush, but they shall not con-
temn;
They may torture, but shall not subdue
me;
'Tis of thee that I think—not of them.

IV

Though human, thou didst not deceive me,
Though woman, thou didst not forsake,
Though loved, thou forborest to grieve me,
Though slander'd, thou never couldst
shake;
Though trusted, thou didst not disclaim me,
Though parted, it was not to fly,
Though watchful, 'twas not to defame me,
Nor, mute, that the world might belie.

V

Yet I blame not the world, nor despise it,
Nor the war of the many with one;
If my soul was not fitted to prize it,
'Twas folly not sooner to shun:
And if dearly that error hath cost me,
And more than I once could foresee,
I have found that, whatever it lost me,
It could not deprive me of thee.

VI

From the wreck of the past, which hath
perish'd,
Thus much I at least may recall,
It hath taught me that what I most cherish'd
Deserved to be dearest of all:
In the desert a fountain is springing,
In the wide waste there still is a tree,
And a bird in the solitude singing,
Which speaks to my spirit of thee.

OCCASIONAL PIECES

EPISTLE TO AUGUSTA

I

My sister! my sweet sister! if a name Dearer and purer were, it should be
thine;
Mountains and seas divide us, but I
claim
No tears, but tenderness to answer
mine:
Go where I will, to me thou art the
same—
A loved regret which I would not resign,
There yet are two things in my destiny,—
A world to roam through, and a home with thee.

II

The first were nothing—had I still the
last,
It were the haven of my happiness;
But other claims and other ties thou
hast,
And mine is not the wish to make them less.
A strange doom is thy father's son's,
and past
Recalling, as it lies beyond redress;
Reversed for him our grandsire's fate
of yore,—
He had no rest at sea, nor I on shore.

III

If my inheritance of storms hath been
In other elements, and on the rocks
Of perils, overlook'd or unforeseen,
I have sustain'd my share of worldly shocks,
The fault was mine; nor do I seek to screen
My errors with defensive paradox;
I have been cunning in mine overthrow,
The careful pilot of my proper woe.

IV

Mine were my faults, and mine be their reward.
My whole life was a contest, since the
day
That gave me being, gave me that which marr'd
The gift,—a fate, or will, that walk'd
astray;
And I at times have found the struggle
hard,
And thought of shaking off my bonds
of clay:
But now I fain would for a time survive,
If but to see what next can well arrive.

V

Kingdoms and empires in my little day
I have outlived, and yet I am not old;
And when I look on this, the petty spray
Of my own years of trouble, which have roll'd
Like a wild bay of breakers, melts away:
Something—I know not what—does still uphold
A spirit of slight patience;—not in vain,
Even for its own sake, do we purchase
pain.

VI

Perhaps the workings of defiance stir
Within me—or perhaps a cold despair,
Brought on when ills habitually recur,—
Perhaps a kinder clime, or purer air, (For even to this may change of soul refer,
And with light armour we may learn to
bear.)
Have taught me a strange quiet, which was not
The chief companion of a calmer lot.

VII

I feel almost at times as I have felt
In happy childhood; trees, and flowers,
and brooks,
Which do remember me of where I dwelt Ere my young mind was sacrificed to books,
Come as of yore upon me, and can melt
My heart with recognition of their looks;
And even at moments I could think I see Some living thing to love—but none like thee.

VIII

Here are the Alpine landscapes which create
A fund for contemplation;—to admire
Is a brief feeling of a trivial date;
But something worthier do such scenes inspire:
Here to be lonely is not desolate,
For much I view which I could most desire,
And, above all, a lake I can behold
Lovelier, not dearer, than our own of old.

IX

Oh that thou wert but with me!—but I grow
The fool of my own wishes, and forget
The solitude which I have vaunted so
Has lost its praise in this but one regret;
There may be others which I less may
show;—
I am not of the plaintive mood, and yet
I feel an ebb in my philosophy,
And the tide rising in my alter'd eye.

X

I did remind thee of our own dear Lake,
By the old Hall which may be mine no
more.

Leman's is fair; but think not I forsake
The sweet remembrance of a dearer
shore;

Sad havoc Time must with my memory
make,

Ere that or thou can fade these eyes
before;

Though, like all things which I have loved, they are

Resign'd for ever, or divided far.

XI

The world is all before me; I but ask Of Nature that with which she will comply—

It is but in her summer's sun to bask,
To mingle with the quiet of her sky,
To see her gentle face without a mask,
And never gaze on it with apathy.

She was my early friend, and now shall
be

My sister—till I look again on thee.

XII

I can reduce all feelings but this one;
And that I would not;—for at length I
see

Such scenes as those wherein my life began.

The earliest—even the only paths for
me—

Had I but sooner learnt the crowd to
shun,

I had been better than I now can be;
The passions which have torn me would have slept;

I had not suffer'd, and thou hadst not wept.

XIII

With false Ambition what had I to do?
Little with Love, and least of all with
Fame;

And yet they came unsought, and with me grew,

And made me all which they can make —a name.

Yet this was not the end I did pursue;
Surely I once beheld a nobler aim.

But all is over—I am one the more
To baffled millions which have gone before.

XIV

And for the future, this world's future
may

From me demand but little of my care;
I have outlived myself by many a day;

Having survived so many things that
were;

My years have been no slumber, but the prey

Of ceaseless vigils; for I had the share
Of life which might have fill'd a century,

Before its fourth in time had pass'd me by.

XV

And for the remnant which may be to
come

I am content; and for the past I feel
Not thankless,—for within the crowded
sun

Of struggles, happiness at times would steal,

And for the present, I would not be-numb

My feelings further.—Nor shall I conceal

That with all this I still can look around,
And worship Nature with a thought profound.

XVI

For thee, my own sweet sister, in thy
heart

I know myself secure, as thou in mine;
We were and are—I am, even as thou
art—

Beings who ne'er each other can resign;
It is the same, together or apart,

From life's commencement to its slow decline

We are entwined—let death come slow
or fast,

The tie which bound the first endures the
last!

THE DREAM

I

OUR life is two-fold: Sleep hath its own
world,

A boundary between the things misnamed
Death and existence: Sleep hath its own
world,

And a wide realm of wild reality.

And dreams in their development have
breath,

And tears, and tortures, and the touch of
joy;

They leave a weight upon our waking
thoughts,

They take a weight from off our waking
toils,

They do divide our being; they become
A portion of ourselves as of our time,

And look like heralds of eternity; 11
They pass like spirits of the past,—they speak

Like Sibyls of the future: they have
power—

The tyranny of pleasure and of pain;

OCCASIONAL PIECES

They make us what we were not—what they will,¹⁵
 And shake us with the vision that's gone
 by,
 The dread of vanish'd shadows—Are they
 so?
 Is not the past all shadow?—What are
 they?
 Creations of the mind?—The mind can
 make
 Substance, and people planets of its own
 With beings brighter than have been, and give²¹
 A breath to forms which can outlive all flesh.
 I would recall a vision which I dream'd
 Perchance in sleep—for in itself a thought,
 A slumbering thought, is capable of years,
 And curdles a long life into one hour.

II

I saw two beings in the hues of youth
 Standing upon a hill, a gentle hill,
 Green and of mild declivity, the last
 As 'twere the cape of a long ridge of such,
 Save that there was no sea to lave its base,
 But a most living landscape, and the wave
 Of woods and corn-fields, and the abodes of men³³
 Scatter'd at intervals, and wreathing
 smoke
 Arising from such rustic roofs;—the hill
 Was crown'd with a peculiar diadem³⁶
 Of trees, in circular array, so fix'd,
 Not by the sport of nature, but of man:
 These two, a maiden and a youth, were there³⁹
 Gazing—the one on all that was beneath
 Fair as herself—but the boy gazed on her;
 And both were young, and one was beautiful:
 And both were young—yet not alike in
 youth.
 As the sweet moon on the horizon's verge,
 The maid was on the eve of womanhood;
 The boy had fewer summers, but his heart
 Had far outgrown his years, and to his eye⁴⁷
 There was but one beloved face on earth,
 And that was shining on him: he had look'd
 Upon it till it could not pass away;⁵⁰
 He had no breath, no being, but in hers;
 She was his voice; he did not speak to her,
 But trembled on her words; she was his
 sight,
 For his eye follow'd hers, and saw with
 hers,
 Which colour'd all his objects:—he had ceased⁵⁵
 To live within himself; she was his life,
 The ocean to the river of his thoughts,
 Which terminated all: upon a tone,

A touch of hers, his blood would ebb and
 flow,
 And his cheek change tempestuously—
 his heart⁶⁰
 Unknowing of its cause of agony.
 But she in these fond feelings had no share:
 Her sighs were not for him; to her he was Even as a brother—but no more; 'twas
 much,
 For brotherless she was, save in the name
 Her infant friendship had bestow'd on him;⁶⁶
 Herself the solitary scion left
 Of a time-honour'd race.—It was a name
 Which pleased him, and yet pleased him not—and why?
 Time taught him a deep answer—when she loved⁷⁰
 Another; even now she loved another,
 And on the summit of that hill she stood
 Looking afar if yet her lover's steed
 Kept pace with her expectancy, and flew.

III

A change came o'er the spirit of my dream.⁷⁵
 There was an ancient mansion, and be-
 fore
 Its walls there was a steed caparison'd;
 Within an antique Oratory stood
 The Boy of whom I spake;—he was alone,
 And pale, and pacing to and fro: anon
 He sat him down, and seized a pen, and traced⁸¹
 Words which I could not guess of; then he lean'd
 His bow'd head on his hands, and shook as 'twere
 With a convulsion—then arose again,
 And with his teeth and quivering hands did tear⁸⁵
 What he had written, but he shed no tears,
 And he did calm himself, and fix his brow
 Into a kind of quiet: as he paused,
 The Lady of his love re-entered there;
 She was serene and smiling then, and yet
 She knew she was by him beloved,—she knew,⁹¹
 For quickly comes such knowledge, that his heart
 Was darken'd with her shadow, and she saw
 That he was wretched, but she saw not all.
 He rose, and with a cold and gentle grasp
 He took her hand; a moment o'er his face
 A tablet of unutterable thoughts⁹⁷
 Was traced, and then it faded, as it came;
 He dropp'd the hand he held, and with slow steps
 Retired, but not as bidding her adieu,
 For they did part with mutual smiles; he pass'd¹⁰¹
 From out the massy gate of that old Hall,

And mounting on his steed he went his way;
And ne'er repass'd that hoary threshold more.

IV

A change came o'er the spirit of my dream. 105
The Boy was sprung to manhood: in the wilds
Of fiery climes he made himself a home,
And his soul drank their sunbeams: he was girt
With strange and dusky aspects; he was not 109
Himself like what he had been; on the sea
And on the shore he was a wanderer.
There was a mass of many images Crowded like waves upon me, but he was A part of all; and in the last he lay
Reposing from the noontide sultriness,
Couch'd among fallen columns, in the shade 116
Of ruin'd walls that had survived the names
Of those who rear'd them; by his sleeping side Stood camels grazing, and some goodly steeds 119
Were fasten'd near a fountain; and a man
Clad in a flowing garb did watch the while,
While many of his tribe slumber'd around:
And they were canopied by the blue sky,
So cloudless, clear, and purely beautiful,
That God alone was to be seen in heaven.

V

A change came o'er the spirit of my dream.
The Lady of his love was wed with One
Who did not love her better:—in her home,
A thousand leagues from his,—her native home, 129
She dwelt, begirt with growing Infancy,
Daughters and sons of Beauty,—but behold!
Upon her face there was the tint of grief,
The settled shadow of an inward strife,
And an unquiet drooping of the eye,
As if its lid were charged with unshed tears. 135
What could her grief be?—she had all she loved,
And he who had so loved her was not there
To trouble with bad hopes, or evil wish,
Or ill-repress'd affliction, her pure thoughts.
What could her grief be?—she had loved him not, 140
Nor given him cause to deem himself beloved,
Nor could he be a part of that which prey'd
Upon her mind—a spectre of the past.

VI

A change came o'er the spirit of my dream.
The Wanderer was return'd.—I saw him stand 145
Before an Altar—with a gentle bride;
Her face was fair, but was not that which made
The Starlight of his Boyhood;—as he stood Even at the altar, o'er his brow there came
The self-same aspect, and the quivering shock 150
That in the antique Oratory shook
His bosom in its solitude; and then—
As in that hour—a moment o'er his face
The tablet of unutterable thoughts
Was traced,—and then it faded as it came, 155
And he stood calm and quiet, and he spoke
The fitting vows, but heard not his own words,
And all things reel'd around him; he could see
Not that which was, nor that which should have been—
But the old mansion, and the accustomed hall, 160
And the remember'd chambers, and the place,
The day, the hour, the sunshine, and the shade,
All things pertaining to that place and hour,
And her who was his destiny,—came back
And thrust themselves between him and the light: 165
What business had they there at such a time?

VII

A change came o'er the spirit of my dream.
The Lady of his love:—Oh! she was changed
As by the sickness of the soul; her mind
Had wander'd from its dwelling, and her eyes 170
They had not their own lustre, but the look
Which is not of the earth; she was become
The queen of a fantastic realm; her thoughts
Were combinations of disjointed things;
And forms impalpable and unperceived
Of others' sight familiar were to hers. 176
And this the world calls frenzy; but the wise
Have a far deeper madness, and the glance
Of melancholy is a fearful gift;
What is it but the telescope of truth? 180
Which strips the distance of its fantasies,

OCCASIONAL PIECES

And brings life near in utter nakedness,
Making the cold reality too real!

VIII

A change came o'er the spirit of my
dream.

The Wanderer was alone as heretofore,
The beings which surrounded him were
gone, 186

Or were at war with him; he was a mark
For blight and desolation, compass'd
round

With Hatred and Contention; Pain was
mix'd 189

In all which was served up to him, until,
Like to the Pontic monarch of old days,
He fed on poisons, and they had no power,
But were a kind of nutriment; he lived Through that which had been death to many men,

And made him friends of mountains:
with the stars 195

And the quick Spirit of the Universe
He held his dialogues; and they did teach
To him the magic of their mysteries;
To him the book of Night was open'd
wide,

And voices from the deep abyss reveal'd
A marvel and a secret—Be it so. 201

IX

My dream was past; it had no further
change.

It was of a strange order, that the doom
Of these two creatures should be thus traced out

Almost like a reality—the one 205
To end in madness—both in misery.

LINES ON HEARING THAT LADY BYRON WAS ILL

AND thou wert sad—yet I was not with
thee;

And thou wert sick, and yet I was not
near;

Methought that joy and health alone could be

Where I was not—and pain and sorrow
here!

And is it thus?—it is as I foretold, 5
And shall be more so; for the mind recoils

Upon itself, and the wreck'd heart lies
cold,

While heaviness collects the shatter'd
spoils.

It is not in the storm nor in the strife
We feel benumb'd, and wish to be no
more, 10

But in the after-silence on the shore,
When all is lost, except a little life.

I am too well avenged!—but 'twas my right;
Whate'er my sins might be, thou wert not sent

To be the Nemesis who should requite—Nor did Heaven choose so near an instrument. 16

Mercy is for the merciful!—if thou
Hast been of such, 'twill be accorded now.
Thy nights are banish'd from the realms of sleep!—

Yes! they may flatter thee, but thou shalt feel 20

A hollow agony which will not heal,
For thou art pillow'd on a curse too deep;
Thou hast sown in my sorrow, and must reap

The bitter harvest in a woe as real!
I have had many foes, but none like thee;
For 'gainst the rest myself I could defend, 26

And be avenged, or turn them into
friend;

But thou in safe implacability Hadst nought to dread—in thy own weakness shielded,

And in my love, which hath but too much yielded, 30

And spared, for thy sake, some I should
not spare;

And thus upon the world—trust in thy
truth,

And the wild fame of my ungovern'd
youth—

On things that were not, and on things that are— 34

Even upon such a basis hast thou built A monument, whose cement hath been guilt!

The moral Clytemnestra of thy lord,
And hew'd down, with an unsuspected
sword,

Fame, peace, and hope—and all the better
life,

Which, but for this cold treason of thy
heart, 40

Might still have risen from out the grave
of strife,

And found a nobler duty than to part.
But of thy virtues didst thou make a vice,

Trafficking with them in a purpose cold,
For present anger, and for future
gold— 45

And buying other's grief at any price.
And thus once enter'd into crooked ways,

The earthly truth, which was thy proper
praise,

Did not still walk beside thee—but at times,

And with a breast unknowing its own
crimes, 50

Deceit, averments incompatible, Equivocations, and the thoughts which
dwell

In Janus-spirits—the significant eye

Which learns to lie with silence—the pretext⁵⁴
Of prudence, with advantages annex'd—
The acquiescence in all things which tend,
No matter how, to the desired end—
All found a place in thy philosophy.
The means were worthy, and the end is won—
I would not do by thee as thou hast done!

DARKNESS

I HAD a dream, which was not all a dream.
The bright sun was extinguish'd, and the stars
Did wander darkling in the eternal space,
Rayless, and pathless, and the icy earth
Swung blind and blackening in the moonless air;⁵
Morn came and went—and came, and brought no day,
And men forgot their passions in the dread
Of this their desolation; and all hearts
Were chill'd into a selfish prayer for light:
And they did live by watchfires—and the thrones,¹⁰
The palaces of crowned kings—the huts,
The habitations of all things which dwell,
Were burnt for beacons; cities were consumed,
And men were gather'd round their blazing homes
To look once more into each other's face; Happy were those who dwelt within the eye¹⁶
Of the volcanos, and their mountain-torch:
A fearful hope was all the world contain'd;
Forests were set on fire—but hour by hour
They fell and faded—and the crackling trunks²⁰
Extinguish'd with a crash—and all was black.
The brows of men by the despairing light
Wore an unearthly aspect, as by fits
The flashes fell upon them; some lay down
And hid their eyes and wept; and some did rest²⁵
Their chins upon their clenched hands,
and smiled;
And others hurried to and fro, and fed
Their funeral piles with fuel, and look'd up
With mad disquietude on the dull sky,²⁹
The pall of a past world; and then again
With curses cast them down upon the dust,
And gnash'd their teeth and howl'd: the wild birds shriek'd
And, terrified, did flutter on the ground,
And flap their useless wings; the wildest brutes
Came tame and tremulous; and vipers
crawl'd³⁵
And twined themselves among the multitude,

Hissing, but stingless—they were slain for food.
And War, which for a moment was no
more,
Did glut himself again:—a meal was
bought
With blood, and each sate sullenly apart Gorging himself in gloom: no love was left;⁴¹
All earth was but one thought—and that was death
Immediate and inglorious; and the pang
Of famine fed upon all entrails—men Died, and their bones were tombless as their flesh;⁴⁵
The meagre by the meagre were devour'd,
Even dogs assail'd their masters, all save
one,
And he was faithful to a corse, and kept
The birds and beasts and famish'd men at bay,
Till hunger clung them, or the dropping dead⁵⁰
Lured their lank jaws; himself sought out
no food,
But with a piteous and perpetual moan,
And a quick desolate cry, licking the hand
Which answer'd not with a caress—he
died.
The crowd was famish'd by degrees; but two⁵⁵
Of an enormous city did survive,
And they were enemies: they met beside
The dying embers of an altar-place Where had been heap'd a mass of holy
things
For an unholy usage; they raked up, ⁶⁰
And shivering scraped with their cold skeleton hands
The feeble ashes, and their feeble breath
Blew for a little life, and made a flame
Which was a mockery; then they lifted up
Their eyes as it grew lighter, and beheld
Each other's aspects—saw, and shriek'd, and died—⁶⁶
Even of their mutual hideousness they
died,
Unknowing who he was upon whose brow
Famine had written Fiend. The world was void,
The populous and the powerful was a lump,⁷⁰
Seasonless, herbless, treeless, manless,
lifeless,
A lump of death—a chaos of hard clay.
The rivers, lakes, and ocean all stood still,
And nothing stirr'd within their silent
depths;
Ships sailorless lay rotting on the sea, ⁷⁵
And their masts fell down piecemeal: as they dropp'd
They slept on the abyss without a surge—
The waves were dead; the tides were in
their grave,

MONODY ON THE DEATH OF

THE RIGHT HON. R. B. SHERIDAN

SPOKEN AT DRURY-LANE THEATRE

WHEN the last sunshine of expiring day
In summer's twilight weeps itself away,
Who hath not felt the softness of the hour
Sink on the heart, as dew along the flower?
With a pure feeling which absorbs and awes
While Nature makes that melancholy
pause,
Her breathing moment on the bridge
where Time
Of light and darkness forms an arch sub-
lime,
Who hath not shared that calm, so still
and deep,
The voiceless thought which would not speak but weep,
A holy concord, and a bright regret,
A glorious sympathy with suns that set?
'Tis not harsh sorrow, but a tenderer woe,
Nameless, but dear to gentle hearts below,
Felt without bitterness, but full and clear,
A sweet dejection, a transparent tear,
Unmix'd with worldly grief or selfish stain, Shed without shame, and secret without
pain.

Even as the tenderness that hour instils
When Summer's day declines along the hills,
So feels the fulness of our heart and eyes
When all of Genius which can perish dies.
A mighty Spirit is eclipsed—a Power Hath pass'd from day to darkness—to whose hour
Of light no likeness is bequeath'd—no
name,
Focus at once of all the rays of Fame!
The flash of Wit, the bright Intelligence,
The beam of Song, the blaze of Eloquence, Set with their Sun, but still have left behind
The enduring produce of immortal Mind;
Fruits of a genial morn, and glorious noon,
A deathless part of him who died too soon.
But small that portion of the wondrous
whole,
These sparkling segments of that circling
soul,

Which all embraced, and lighten'd over
all,
To cheer, to pierce, to please, or to appal.
From the charm'd council to the festive
board,
Of human feelings the unbounded lord;
In whose acclaim the loftiest voices vied,
The praised, the proud, who made his praise their pride.
When the loud cry of trampled Hindostan
Arose to Heaven in her appeal from man,
His was the thunder, his the avenging rod,
The wrath—the delegated voice of God!
Which shook the nations through his lips,
and blazed
Till vanquish'd senates trembled as they praised.

And here, oh! here, where yet all young and warm,
The gay creations of his spirit charm,
The matchless dialogue, the deathless wit,
Which knew not what it was to intermit;
The glowing portraits, fresh from life, that bring Home to our hearts the truth from which they spring;
These wondrous beings of his fancy,
wrought
To fulness by the fiat of his thought,
Here in their first abode you still may
meet,
Bright with the hues of his Promethean
heat;
A halo of the light of other days,
Which still the splendour of its orb betrays.

But should there be to whom the fatal blight
Of failing Wisdom yields a base delight, Men who exult when minds of heavenly
tone
Jar in the music which was born their own, Still let them pause—ah! little do they
know
That what to them seem'd Vice might be but Woe.
Hard is his fate on whom the public gaze
Is fix'd for ever to detract or praise;
Repose denies her requiem to his name,
And Folly loves the martyrdom of Fame.
The secret enemy whose sleepless eye
Stands sentinel, accuser, judge, and spy,
The foe, the fool, the jealous, and the vain,
The envious who but breathe in others'
pain,
Behold the host! delighting to deprave,
Who track the steps of Glory to the grave,
Watch every fault that daring Genius owes Half to the ardour which its birth bestows,
Distort the truth, accumulate the lie,
And pile the pyramid of Calumny!

CHURCHILL'S GRAVE

A FACT LITERALLY RENDERED

These are his portion—but if join'd to these Gaunt Poverty should league with deep
Disease, 80
If the high Spirit must forget to soar,
And stoop to strive with Misery at the
door,
To soothe Indignity—and face to face
Meet sordid Rage, and wrestle with Dis-
grace,
To find in Hope but the renew'd caress,
The serpent-fold of further Faithless-
ness:— 86
If such may be the ills which men assail,
What marvel if at last the mightiest fail?
Breasts to whom all the strength of feeling
given Bear hearts electric—charged with fire from Heaven, 90
Black with the rude collision, inly torn,
By clouds surrounded, and on whirlwinds borne,
Driven o'er the lowering atmosphere that nurst
Thoughts which have turn'd to thunder—scorch, and burst.

But far from us and from our mimic
scene 95
Such things should be—if such have ever
been;
Ours be the gentler wish, the kinder task,
To give the tribute Glory need not ask,
To mourn the vanish'd beam, and add our mite 99
Of praise in payment of a long delight.
Ye Orators! whom yet our councils yield,
Mourn for the veteran Hero of your field!
The worthy rival of the wondrous Three!
Whose words were sparks of Immortality!
Ye Bards! to whom the Drama's muse is
dear, 105
He was your Master—emulate him here!
Ye men of wit and social eloquence!
He was your brother—bear his ashes
hence!
While Powers of mind almost of boundless range,
Complete in kind, as various in their
change, 110
While Eloquence, Wit, Poesy, and Mirth,
That humbler Harmonist of care on
Earth,
Survive within our souls—while lives our
sense
Of pride in Merit's proud pre-eminence, Long shall we seek his likeness, long in
vain, 115
And turn to all of him which may remain, Sighing that nature form'd but one such
man,
And broke the die—in moulding Sheridan!

Diodati, July 17, 1816.

I STOOD beside the grave of him who blazed
The comet of a season, and I saw
The humblest of all sepulchres, and gazed
With not the less of sorrow and of awe
On that neglected turf and quiet stone,
With name no clearer than the names un-
known, 6
Which lay unread around it; and I ask'd
The Gardener of that ground, why it might be
That for this plant strangers his memory
task'd,
Through the thick deaths of half a century? 10
And thus he answer'd—'Well, I do not
know
Why frequent travellers turn to pilgrims
so;
He died before my day of Sextonship,
And I had not the digging of this grave.'
And is this all? I thought—and do we rip
The veil of Immortality, and crave
I know not what of honour and of light Through unborn ages, to endure this blight, 18
So soon, and so successless? As I said,
The Architect of all on which we tread,
For Earth is but a tombstone, did essay,
To extricate remembrance from the clay, Whose minglings might confuse a Newton's thought,
Were it not that all life must end in one,
Of which we are but dreamers;—as he
caught, 25
As 'twere the twilight of a former Sun, Thus spoke he,—'I believe the man of whom
You wot, who lies in this selected tomb,
Was a most famous writer in his day,
And therefore travellers step from out
their way 30
To pay him honour,—and myself whate'er Your honour pleases:—then most pleased I shook
From out my pocket's avaricious nook
Some certain coins of silver, which as
'twere
Perforce I gave this man, though I could
spare 35
So much but inconveniently:—Ye smile,
I see ye, ye profane ones! all the while,
Because my homely phrase the truth would tell.
You are the fools, not I—for I did dwell
With a deep thought, and with a soften'd
eye, 40
On that Old Sexton's natural homily,
In which there was Obscurity and Fame—
The Glory and the Nothing of a Name.

Diodati, 1816.

OCCASIONAL PIECES

PROMETHEUS

I

TITAN! to whose immortal eyes
The sufferings of mortality,
Seen in their sad reality,
Were not as things that gods despise;
What was thy pity's recompense?
A silent suffering, and intense;
The rock, the vulture, and the chain,
All that the proud can feel of pain,
The agony they do not show,
The suffocating sense of woe,
Which speaks but in its loneliness,
And then is jealous lest the sky
Should have a listener, nor will sigh
Until its voice is echoless.

II

Titan! to thee the strife was given Between the suffering and the will,
Which torture where they cannot kill;
And the inexorable Heaven,
And the deaf tyranny of Fate,
The ruling principle of Hate,
Which for its pleasure doth create
The things it may annihilate,
Refused thee even the boon to die:
The wretched gift eternity
Was thine—and thou hast borne it well.
All that the Thunderer wrung from thee
Was but the menace which flung back
On him the torments of thy rack;
The fate thou didst so well foresee,
But would not to appease him tell;
And in thy Silence was his Sentence,
And in his Soul a vain repentance,
And evil dread so ill dissembled,
That in his hand the lightnings trembled.

III

Thy Godlike crime was to be kind,
To render with thy precepts less
The sum of human wretchedness,
And strengthen Man with his own mind;
But baffled as thou wert from high,
Still in thy patient energy,
In the endurance, and repulse
Of thine impenetrable Spirit,
Which Earth and Heaven could not convulse,
A mighty lesson we inherit:
Thou art a symbol and a sign
To Mortals of their fate and force;
Like thee, Man is in part divine,
A troubled stream from a pure source;
And Man in portions can foresee
His own funereal destiny;
His wretchedness, and his resistance,
And his sad unalied existence:
To which his Spirit may oppose Itself—and equal to all woes,
And a firm will, and a deep sense,

Which even in torture can descry
Its own concentr'd recompense,
Triumphant where it dares defy,
And making Death a Victory.

Diodati, July 1816.

A FRAGMENT

COULD I remount the river of my years
To the first fountain of our smiles and
tears,
I would not trace again the stream of
hours
Between their outworn banks of wither'd
flowers,
But bid it flow as now—until it glides
Into the number of the nameless tides.

What is this Death?—a quiet of the heart?
The whole of that of which we are a part?
For life is but a vision—what I see
Of all which lives alone is life to me,
And being so—the absent are the dead,
Who haunt us from tranquillity, and
spread
A dreary shroud around us, and invest
With sad remembrances our hours of rest.
The absent are the dead—for they are
cold,
And ne'er can be what once we did behold;
And they are changed, and cheerless,— or if yet
The unforgotten do not all forget,
Since thus divided—equal must it be
If the deep barrier be of earth, or sea; 20
It may be both—but one day end it must
In the dark union of insensate dust.

The under-earth inhabitants—are they
But mingled millions decomposed to clay?
The ashes of a thousand ages spread
Wherever man has trodden or shall tread?
Or do they in their silent cities dwell
Each in his incommunicative cell?
Or have they their own language? and a
sense
Of breathless being?—darken'd and intense
As midnight in her solitude?—Oh Earth!
Where are the past?—and wherefore had they birth?
The dead are thy inheritors—and we But bubbles on thy surface; and the key
Of thy profundity is in the grave,
The ebon portal of thy peopled cave,
Where I would walk in spirit, and behold
Our elements resolved to things untold,
And fathom hidden wonders, and explore
The essence of great bosoms now no
more.

Diodati, July 1816.

SONNET TO LAKE LEMAN

ROUSSEAU—Voltaire—our Gibbon—and De Staël—
 Leman! these names are worthy of thy
 shore,
 Thy shore of names like these! wert thou no more
 Their memory thy remembrance would recall:
 To them thy banks were lovely as to all,
 But they have made them lovelier, for the lore
 Of mighty minds doth hallow in the core
 Of human hearts the ruin of a wall
 Where dwell the wise and wondrous;
 but by thee
 How much more, Lake of Beauty! do we
 feel,
 In sweetly gliding o'er thy crystal sea,
 The wild glow of that not ungentle zeal,
 Which of the heirs of immortality
 Is proud, and makes the breath of glory
 real!

Diodati, July 1816.

STANZAS FOR MUSIC

I

BRIGHT be the place of thy soul!
 No lovelier spirit than thine
 E'er burst from its mortal control,
 In the orbs of the blessed to shine.
 On earth thou wert all but divine,
 As thy soul shall immortally be;
 And our sorrow may cease to repine
 When we know that thy God is with
 thee.

II

Light be the turf of thy tomb!
 May its verdure like emeralds be!
 There should not be the shadow of gloom
 In aught that reminds us of thee.
 Young flowers and an evergreen tree
 May spring from the spot of thy rest:
 But nor cypress nor yew let us see;
 For why should we mourn for the blest?

A VERY MOURNFUL BALLAD ON THE SIEGE AND CONQUEST OF ALHAMA

Which, in the Arabic language, is to the following purport

I

THE Moorish King rides up and down,
 Through Granada's royal town;
 From Elvira's gate to those Of Bivarambla on he goes.

Woe is me, Alhama!

Letters to the monarch tell
 How Alhama's city fell:
 In the fire the scroll he threw,
 And the messenger he slew.
 Woe is me, Alhama!

III

He quits his mule, and mounts his horse,
 And through the street directs his course;
 Through the street of Zacatin
 To the Alhambra spurring in.
 Woe is me, Alhama!

IV

When the Alhambra walls he gain'd,
 On the moment he ordain'd
 That the trumpet straight should sound
 With the silver clarion round.
 Woe is me, Alhama!

V

And when the hollow drums of war
 Beat the loud alarm afar,
 That the Moors of town and plain Might answer to the martial strain.
 Woe is me, Alhama!

VI

Then the Moors, by this aware,
 That bloody Mars recall'd them there,
 One by one, and two by two,
 To a mighty squadron grew.
 Woe is me, Alhama!

VII

Out then spake an aged Moor
 In these words the king before,
 'Wherefore call on us, oh King?
 What may mean this gathering?'
 Woe is me, Alhama!

VIII

'Friends! ye have, alas! to know
 Of a most disastrous blow;
 That the Christians, stern and bold,
 Have obtain'd Alhama's hold.'
 Woe is me, Alhama!

IX

Out then spake old Alfaqui,
 With his beard so white to see,
 'Good King! thou art justly served,
 Good King! this thou hast deserved.
 Woe is me, Alhama!

OCCASIONAL PIECES

X

'By thee were slain, in evil hour,
The Abencerrage, Granada's flower;
And strangers were received by thee
Of Cordova the Chivalry.
Woe is me, Alhama!

XI

'And for this, oh King! is sent
On thee a double chastisement:
Thee and thine, thy crown and realm,
One last wreck shall overwhelm.
Woe is me, Alhama!

XII

'He who holds no laws in awe,
He must perish by the law;
And Granada must be won,
And thyself with her undone.'
Woe is me, Alhama!

XIII

Fire flash'd from out the old Moor's eyes,
The Monarch's wrath began to rise,
Because he answer'd, and because He spake exceeding well of laws.
Woe is me, Alhama!

XIV

'There is no law to say such things
As may disgust the ear of kings:'—
Thus, snorting with his choler, said
The Moorish King, and doom'd him dead.
Woe is me, Alhama!

XV

Moor Alfaqui! Moor Alfaqui!
Though thy beard so hoary be,
The King hath sent to have thee seized,
For Alhama's loss displeased.
Woe is me, Alhama!

XVI

And to fix thy head upon
High Alhambra's loftiest stone;
That this for thee should be the law,
And others tremble when they saw.
Woe is me, Alhama!

XVII

'Cavalier, and man of worth!
Let these words of mine go forth!
Let the Moorish Monarch know,
That to him I nothing owe.
Woe is me, Alhama!

XVIII

'But on my soul Alhama weighs,
And on my inmost spirit preys;

And if the King his land hath lost,
Yet others may have lost the most.
Woe is me, Alhama!

XIX

'Sires have lost their children, wives
Their lords, and valiant men their lives!
One what best his love might claim
Hath lost, another wealth, or fame.
Woe is me, Alhama!

XX

'I lost a damsel in that hour,
Of all the land the loveliest flower;
Doubloons a hundred I would pay,
And think her ransom cheap that day.'
Woe is me, Alhama!

XXI

And as these things the old Moor said,
They sever'd from the trunk his head;
And to the Alhambra's wall with speed
'Twas carried, as the King decreed.
Woe is me, Alhama!

XXII

And men and infants therein weep
Their loss, so heavy and so deep;
Granada's ladies, all she rears
Within her walls, burst into tears.
Woe is me, Alhama!

XXIII

And from the windows o'er the walls
The sable web of mourning falls;
The King weeps as a woman o'er
His loss, for it is much and sore.
Woe is me, Alhama!

STANZAS FOR MUSIC

I

THEY say that Hope is happiness;
But genuine Love must prize the past,
And Memory wakes the thoughts that bless:
They rose the first—they set the last;

II

And all that Memory loves the most
Was once our only Hope to be,
And all that Hope adored and lost
Hath melted into Memory.

III

Alas! it is delusion all:
The future cheats us from afar,
Nor can we be what we recall,
Nor dare we think on what we are.

TRANSLATION FROM VITTORELLI

ON A NUN

Sonnet composed in the name of a father, whose daughter had recently died shortly after her marriage; and addressed to the father of her who had lately taken the veil.

OF two fair virgins, modest, though admired,
Heaven made us happy; and now,
wretched sires,
Heaven for a nobler doom their worth desires,
And gazing upon either, both required.
Mine, while the torch of Hymen newly fired⁵
Becomes extinguish'd, soon—too soon
—expires:
But thine, within the closing grate retired,
Eternal captive, to her God aspires.
But thou at least from out the jealous door,
Which shuts between your never-meeting eyes,¹⁰
May'st hear her sweet and pious voice
once more:
I to the marble, where my daughter lies,
Rush,—the swoln flood of bitterness
I pour,
And knock, and knock, and knock—but none replies.

ON THE BUST OF HELEN BY CANOVA

In this beloved marble view,
Above the works and thoughts of man,
What Nature could, but would not, do,
And Beauty and Canova can!
Beyond imagination's power,⁵
Beyond the Bard's defeated art,
With immortality her dower,
Behold the Helen of the heart!

SONG FOR THE LUDDITES

I

As the Liberty lads o'er the sea Bought their freedom, and cheaply, with
blood,
So we, boys, we
Will die fighting, or live free,
And down with all kings but King Ludd!

II

When the web that we weave is complete,
And the shuttle exchanged for the sword,
We will fling the winding sheet
O'er the despot at our feet,
And dye it deep in the gore he has pour'd.

III

Though black as his heart its hue,
Since his veins are corrupted to mud,
Yet this is the dew
Which the tree shall renew
Of Liberty, planted by Ludd!

VERSICLES

I READ the 'Christabel';
Very well:
I read the 'Missionary';
Pretty—very
I tried at 'Ilderim';⁵
Ahem!
I read a sheet of 'Marg'ret of Anjou';
Can you?
I turn'd a page of Scott's 'Waterloo';
Pooh! pooh!¹⁰
I look'd at Wordsworth's milk-white
'Rylstone Doe';
Hillo!

SO, WE'LL GO NO MORE A ROVING

I

So, we'll go no more a roving
So late into the night,
Though the heart be still as loving,
And the moon be still as bright.

II

For the sword outwears its sheath,
And the soul wears out the breast,
And the heart must pause to breathe,
And love itself have rest.

III

Though the night was made for loving,
And the day returns too soon,
Yet we'll go no more a roving
By the light of the moon.

TO THOMAS MOORE

WHAT are you doing now,
Oh Thomas Moore?
What are you doing now,
Oh Thomas Moore?
Sighing or suing now,⁵ Rhyming or wooing now,
Billing or cooing now,
Which, Thomas Moore?

But the Carnival's coming,
Oh Thomas Moore!
The Carnival's coming,
Oh Thomas Moore!

Masking and humming,

Guitarring and strumming, 15
Oh Thomas Moore!

TO MR. MURRAY

To hook the reader, you, John Murray,
Have publish'd 'Anjou's Margaret,
Which won't be sold off in a hurry
(At least, it has not been as yet);
And then, still further to bewilder 'em, 5
Without remorse, you set up 'Ilderim';
So mind you don't get into debt,
Because as how, if you should fail,
These books would be but baddish bail.

And mind you do not let escape 10
These rhymes to Morning Post or Perry,
Which would be very treacherous—very,

And get me into such a scrape!
For, firstly, I should have to sally,
All in my little boat, against a Galley;
And, should I chance to slay the Assyrian
wight, 16
Have next to combat with the female knight.

TO THOMAS MOORE

I

My boat is on the shore,
And my bark is on the sea;
But, before I go, Tom Moore,
Here's a double health to thee!

II

Here's a sigh to those who love me,
And a smile to those who hate;
And, whatever sky's above me,
Here's a heart for every fate.

III

Though the ocean roar around me,
Yet it still shall bear me on;
Though a desert should surround me,
It hath springs that may be won.

IV

Were't the last drop in the well,
As I gasp'd upon the brink,
Ere my fainting spirit fell,
'Tis to thee that I would drink.

V

With that water, as this wine,
The libation I would pour
Should be—peace with thine and mine,
And a health to thee, Tom Moore.

EPISTLE FROM MR. MURRAY TO DR. POLIDORI

DEAR Doctor, I have read your play,
Which is a good one in its way,—
Purges the eyes and moves the bowels,
And drenches handkerchiefs like towels
With tears, that, in a flux of grief, 5
Afford hysterical relief
To shatter'd nerves and quicken'd pulses,
Which your catastrophe convulses.

I like your moral and machinery;
Your plot, too, has such scope for scenery: 10

Your dialogue is apt and smart:
The play's concoction full of art;
Your hero raves, your heroine cries,
All stab, and everybody dies.
In short, your tragedy would be 15
The very thing to hear and see:
And for a piece of publication,
If I decline on this occasion,
It is not that I am not sensible
To merits in themselves ostensible, 20
But—and I grieve to speak it—plays
Are drugs—mere drugs, sir—now-a-days.
I had a heavy loss by 'Manuel,'— Too lucky if it prove not annual,—
And Sotheby, with his 'Orestes,' 25 (Which, by the by, the author's best is,)
Has lain so very long on hand,
That I despair of all demand.
I've advertised, but see my books,
Or only watch my shopman's looks;—
Still Ivan, Ina, and such lumber, 31
My back-shop glut, my shelves encumber.

There's Byron too, who once did better,
Has sent me, folded in a letter,
A sort of—it's no more a drama 35
Than Darnley, Ivan, or Kehama:
So alter'd since last year his pen is,
I think he's lost his wits at Venice.
In short, sir, what with one and t'other,
I dare not venture on another. 40
I write in haste; excuse each blunder;
The coaches through the street so thunder!

My room's so full—we've Gifford here
Reading MS., with Hookham Frere,
Pronouncing on the nouns and particles
Of some of our forthcoming Articles. 46

The Quarterly—Ah, sir, if you
Had but the genius to review!—
A smart critique upon St. Helena,
Or if you only would but tell in a 50
Short compass what—but to resume:
As I was saying, sir, the room—
The room's so full of wits and bards, Crabbes, Campbells, Crokers, Freres, and Wards,

And others, neither bards nor wits:—
My humble tenement admits
All persons in the dress of gent,
From Mr. Hammond to Dog Dent.

A party dines with me to-day,
All clever men, who make their way;
Crabbe, Malcolm, Hamilton, and Chantrey,

Are all partakers of my pantry.
They're at this moment in discussion
On poor De Staël's late dissolution.
Her book, they say, was in advance—
Pray Heaven, she tell the truth of France!
Thus run our time and tongues away;—
But, to return, sir, to your play:
Sorry, sir, but I cannot deal,
Unless 'twere acted by O'Neill;
My hands so full, my head so busy,
I'm almost dead, and always dizzy;
And so, with endless truth and hurry,
Dear Doctor, I am yours,

JOHN MURRAY.
August 1817.

EPISTLE TO MR. MURRAY

My dear Mr. Murray,
You're in a damn'd hurry,
To set up this ultimate Canto;
But (if they don't rob us)
You'll see Mr. Hobhouse
Will bring it safe in his portmanteau.

For the Journal you hint of,
As ready to print off,
No doubt you do right to commend it;
But as yet I have writ off
The devil a bit of Our 'Beppo':—when copied, I'll send
it.

Then you've . . . 's Tour,—
No great things, to be sure,—
You could hardly begin with a less
work;
For the pompous rascallion,
Who don't speak Italian Nor French, must have scribbled by guess work.

You can make any loss up
With 'Spence' and his gossip,
A work which must surely succeed;
Then Queen Mary's Epistle-craft,
With the new 'Fytte' of 'Whistlecraft,'
Must make people purchase and read.

Then you've General Gordon,
Who girded his sword on,
To serve with a Muscovite master
And help him to polish
A nation so owlish,
They thought shaving their beards a disaster.

For the man, 'poor and shrewd,'
With whom you'd conclude
A compact without more delay,
Perhaps some such pen is Still extant in Venice;
But please, sir, to mention your pay.
Venice, January 8, 1818.

TO MR. MURRAY

STRAHAN, Tonson, Lintot of the times,
Patron and publisher of rhymes,
For thee the bard up Pindus climbs,
My Murray.

To thee, with hope and terror dumb,
The unfledged MS. authors come;
Thou printest all—and sellest some—
My Murray.

Upon thy table's baize so green
The last new Quarterly is seen,—
But where is thy new Magazine,
My Murray?

Along thy sprucest bookshelves shine
The works thou deemest most divine—
The 'Art of Cookery,' and mine,
My Murray.

Tours, Travels, Essays, too, I wist,
And Sermons, to thy mill bring grist;
And then thou hast the 'Navy List,'
My Murray.

And Heaven forbid I should conclude Without 'the Board of Longitude,' Although this narrow paper would,
My Murray.
Venice, March 25, 1818.

ON THE BIRTH OF JOHN WILLIAM RIZZO HOPPNER

His father's sense, his mother's grace,
In him, I hope, will always fit so;
With—still to keep him in good case—
The health and appetite of Rizzo.

ODE ON VENICE

I

OH Venice! Venice! when thy marble walls
Are level with the waters, there shall be
A cry of nations o'er thy sunken halls,
A loud lament along the sweeping sea!
If I, a northern wanderer, weep for thee,
What should thy sons do?—anything but
weep:
And yet they only murmur in their sleep.
In contrast with their fathers—as the slime,
The dull green ooze of the receding deep,
Is with the dashing of the spring-tide foam
That drives the sailor shipless to his home,

OCCASIONAL PIECES

Are they to those that were; and thus they creep, ¹²
 Crouching and crab-like, through their sapping streets.
 Oh! agony—that centuries should reap
 No mellow harvest! Thirteen hundred years ¹⁵
 Of wealth and glory turn'd to dust and
 tears;
 And every monument the stranger meets,
 Church, palace, pillar, as a mourner
 greets;
 And even the Lion all subdued appears,
 And the harsh sound of the barbarian drum, ²⁰
 With dull and daily dissonance, repeats
 The echo of thy tyrant's voice along
 The soft waves, once all musical to song,
 That heaved beneath the moonlight with
 the throng
 Of gondolas—and to the busy hum ²⁵
 Of cheerful creatures, whose most sinful
 deeds
 Were but the overbeating of the heart,
 And flow of too much happiness, which needs
 The aid of age to turn its course apart
 From the luxuriant and voluptuous flood Of sweet sensations, battling with the blood, ³¹
 But these are better than the gloomy
 errors,
 The weeds of nations in their last decay,
 When Vice walks forth with her unsoften'd
 terrors,
 And Mirth is madness, and but smiles to slay; ³⁵
 And Hope is nothing but a false delay,
 The sick man's lightning half an hour ere
 death,
 When Faintness, the last mortal birth of
 Pain,
 And apathy of limb, the dull beginning Of the cold staggering race which Death is winning, ⁴⁰
 Steals vein by vein and pulse by pulse away;
 Yet so relieving the o'er-tortured clay,
 To him appears renewal of his breath,
 And freedom the mere numbness of his chain; ⁴⁴
 And then he talks of life, and how again
 He feels his spirit soaring—albeit weak,
 And of the fresher air, which he would
 seek:
 And as he whispers knows not that he gasps,
 That his thin finger feels not what it clasps,
 And so the film comes o'er him, and the dizzy ⁵⁰
 Chamber swims round and round, and shadows busy,
 At which he vainly catches, flit and gleam,
 Till the last rattle chokes the strangled
 scream,

And all is ice and blackness,—and the
 earth
 That which it was the moment ere our birth. ⁵⁵

II

There is no hope for nations!—Search the
 page
 Of many thousand years—the daily
 scene,
 The flow and ebb of each recurring age,
 The everlasting to be which hath been,
 Hath taught us nought, or little: still we lean ⁶⁰
 On things that rot beneath our weight, and wear
 Our strength away in wrestling with the
 air:
 For 'tis our nature strikes us down: the beasts
 Slaughter'd in hourly hecatombs for feasts
 Are of as high an order—they must go Even where their driver goads them, though to slaughter. ⁶⁶
 Ye men, who pour your blood for kings
 as water,
 What have they given your children in return?
 A heritage of servitude and woes,
 A blindfold bondage, where your hire is blows. ⁷⁰
 What! do not yet the red-hot ploughshares burn,
 O'er which you stumble in a false ordeal,
 And deem this proof of loyalty the real;
 Kissing the hand that guides you to your scars,
 And glorying as you tread the glowing bars? ⁷⁵
 All that your sires have left you, all that
 Time
 Bequeaths of free, and History of sublime, Spring from a different theme! Ye see and
 read,
 Admire and sigh, and then succumb and
 bleed!
 Save the few spirits who, despite of all,
 And worse than all, the sudden crimes
 engender'd ⁸¹
 By the down-thundering of the prison-
 wall,
 And thirst to swallow the sweet waters
 tender'd,
 Gushing from Freedom's fountains, when
 the crowd,
 Madden'd with centuries of drought, are loud, ⁸⁵
 And trample on each other to obtain
 The cup which brings oblivion of a chain Heavy and sore, in which long yoked they plough'd
 The sand,—or if there sprung the yellow grain.

IV

'Twas not for them, their necks were too
much bow'd,⁹⁰
And their dead palates chew'd the cud of
pain:
Yes! the few spirits, who, despite of deeds
Which they abhor, confound not with the
cause
Those momentary starts from Nature's
laws,
Which, like the pestilence and earthquake,
smite⁹⁵
But for a term, then pass, and leave the
earth
With all her seasons to repair the blight
With a few summers, and again put forth
Cities and generations—fair, when free—
For, Tyranny, there blooms no bud for thee!¹⁰⁰

III

Glory and Empire! once upon these towers
With Freedom—godlike Triad! how ye
sate!
The league of mightiest nations, in those
hours
When Venice was an envy, might abate,
But did not quench her spirit; in her fate¹⁰⁵
All were enwrapp'd: the feasted monarchs
knew
And loved their hostess, nor could learn to hate,
Although they humbled—with the kingly
few
The many felt, for from all days and climes
She was the voyager's worship; even her crimes¹¹⁰
Were of the softer order—born of Love,
She drank no blood, nor fatten'd on the
dead,
But gladden'd where her harmless conquests spread;
For these restored the Cross, that from above
Hallow'd her sheltering banners, which incessant¹¹⁵
Flew between earth and the unholy Crescent,
Which, if it waned and dwindled, Earth may thank
The city it has clothed in chains, which clank
Now, creaking in the ears of those who owe
The name of Freedom to her glorious struggles;¹²⁰
Yet she but shares with them a common
woe,
And call'd the 'kingdom' of a conquering
foe,
But knows what all—and, most of all, we
know—
With what set gilded terms a tyrant juggles!

The name of Commonwealth is past and gone¹²⁵
O'er the three fractions of the groaning globe;
Venice is crush'd, and Holland deigns to
own
A sceptre, and endures the purple robe;
If the free Switzer yet bestrides alone
His chainless mountains, 'tis but for a time,¹³⁰
For tyranny of late is cunning grown,
And in its own good season tramples down
The sparkles of our ashes. One great
clime,
Whose vigorous offspring by dividing ocean
Are kept apart and nursed in the devotion
Of Freedom, which their fathers fought for, and¹³⁶
Bequeath'd—a heritage of heart and hand,
And proud distinction from each other
land,
Whose sons must bow them at a monarch's
motion,
As if his senseless sceptre were a wand
Full of the magic of exploded science—
Still one great clime, in full and free defiance,¹⁴²
Yet rears her crest, unconquer'd and sub-
lime,
Above the far Atlantic!—She has taught
Her Esau-brethren that the haughty flag,
The floating fence of Albion's feebler crag,
May strike to those whose red right hands have bought¹⁴⁷
Rights cheaply earn'd with blood. Still,
still, for ever,
Better, though each man's life-blood were
a river,
That it should flow, and overflow, than creep¹⁵⁰
Through thousand lazy channels in our
veins,
Damm'd like the dull canal with locks and
chains,
And moving, as a sick man in his sleep,
Three paces, and then faltering: better be Where the extinguish'd Spartans still are free,¹⁵⁵
In their proud charnel of Thermopylae, Than stagnate in our marsh,—or o'er the
deep
Fly, and one current to the ocean add,
One spirit to the souls our fathers had,
One freeman more, America, to thee!

STANZAS TO THE PO

RIVER, that rollest by the ancient walls, Where dwells the lady of my love, when
she Walks by thy brink, and there perchance recalls
A faint and fleeting memory of me;

OCCASIONAL PIECES

What if thy deep and ample stream should
be 5
A mirror of my heart, where she may
read
The thousand thoughts I now betray to thee, Wild as thy wave, and headlong as thy speed!

What do I say—a mirror of my heart?
Are not thy waters sweeping, dark, and
strong? 10
Such as my feelings were and are, thou art;
And such as thou art were my passions
long.

Time may have somewhat tamed them,—
not for ever;
Thou overflow'st thy banks, and not for aye 14
Thy bosom overboils, congenial river!
Thy floods subside, and mine have sunk
away:

But left long wrecks behind, and now again, Borne on our old unchanged career, we
move:
Thou tenderest wildly onwards to the main,
And I—to loving one I should not love.

The current I behold will sweep beneath Her native walls, and murmur at her
feet; 22
Her eyes will look on thee, when she shall
breathe
The twilight air, unharm'd by summer's
heat.

She will look on thee,—I have look'd on
thee, 25
Full of that thought: and, from that moment, ne'er
Thy waters could I dream of, name, or see
Without the inseparable sigh for her!

Her bright eyes will be imaged in thy
stream,
Yes! they will meet the wave I gaze on
now: 30
Mine cannot witness, even in a dream,
That happy wave repass me in its flow!

The wave that bears my tears returns no
more:
Will she return by whom that wave shall sweep?—

Both tread thy banks, both wander on thy shore, 35
I by thy source, she by the dark-blue
deep.

But that which keepeth us apart is not Distance, nor depth of wave, nor space
of earth,
But the distraction of a various lot,
As various as the climates of our birth.

A stranger loves the lady of the land, 41
Born far beyond the mountains, but his
blood
Is all meridian, as if never fann'd
By the black wind that chills the polar flood.

My blood is all meridian; were it not, 45
I had not left my clime, nor should I be,
In spite of tortures ne'er to be forgot,
A slave again of love,—at least of thee.

'Tis vain to struggle—let me perish
young— 49
Live as I lived, and love as I have loved;
To dust if I return, from dust I sprung,
And then, at least, my heart can ne'er be moved.

SONNET TO GEORGE THE FOURTH

ON THE REPEAL OF LORD EDWARD FITZGERALD'S FORFEITURE

To be the father of the fatherless,
To stretch the hand from the throne's height, and raise
His offspring, who expired in other days
To make thy sire's sway by a kingdom
less,—

This is to be a monarch, and repress 5
Envy into unutterable praise.
Dismiss thy guard, and trust thee to such traits,

For who would lift a hand, except to bless?
Were it not easy, sir, and is't not sweet
To make thyself beloved? and to be Omnipotent by mercy's means? for thus Thy sovereignty would grow but more complete: 12

A despot thou, and yet thy people free,
And by the heart, not hand, enslaving us.
Bologna, August 12, 1819.

STANZAS

COULD Love for ever
Run like a river,
And Time's endeavour
Be tried in vain—
No other pleasure
With this could measure; 5
And like a treasure
We'd hug the chain.

- But since our sighing
Ends not in dying,
And, form'd for flying,
Love plumes his wing;
Then for this reason
Let's love a season;
But let that season be only Spring.
- When lovers parted Feel broken-hearted,
And, all hopes thwarted,
Expect to die;
A few years older,
Ah! how much colder
They might behold her
For whom they sigh!
When link'd together,
In every weather,
They pluck Love's feather
From out his wing—
He'll stay for ever,
But sadly shiver
Without his plumage, when past the Spring.
- Your last embraces Leave no cold traces—
The same fond faces
As through the past:
And eyes, the mirrors
Of your sweet errors,
Reflect but rapture—not least though last.
- True, separations
Ask more than patience;
What desperations
From such have risen!
But yet remaining,
What is't but chaining
Hearts which, once waning,
Beat 'gainst their prison?
Time can but cloy love
And use destroy love:
The winged boy, Love,
Is but for boys—
You'll find it torture,
Though sharper, shorter,
To wean, and not wear out your joys.

- Like chiefs of Faction,
His life is action—
A formal paction
That curbs his reign,
Obscures his glory,
Despot no more, he Such territory
Quits with disdain.
Still, still advancing,
With banners glancing,
His power enhancing,
He must move on—
Repose but cloy's him,
Retreat destroys him,
Love brooks not a degraded throne.
- HERE'S a happy new year! but with reason
I beg you'll permit me to say—
Wish me many returns of the season,
But as few as you please of the day.
January 2, 1820.
- WITH death doom'd to grapple,
Beneath this cold slab, he Who lied in the Chapel
Now lies in the Abbey.
January 1820.

- Wait not, fond lover!
Till years are over,
And then recover
As from a dream.
While each bewailing
The other's failing,
With wrath and railing,
All hideous seem—
While first decreasing,
Yet not quite ceasing,
Wait not till teasing
All passion blight:
If once diminish'd,
Love's reign is finish'd—
Then part in friendship—and bid good-
night.
- IN digging up your bones, Tom Paine,
Will. Cobbett has done well:
You visit him on earth again,
He'll visit you in hell.
January 1820.
- WHEN a man hath no freedom to fight for at home,
Let him combat for that of his neighbours;
Let him think of the glories of Greece and
of Rome,
And get knock'd on the head for his labours.
To do good to mankind is the chivalrous
plan,
And is always as nobly requited;
Then battle for freedom wherever you can,
And, if not shot or hang'd, you'll get knighted.

THE CHARITY BALL

WHAT matter the pangs of a husband and
father,
If his sorrows in exile be great or be small,
So the Pharisee's glories around her she gather,
And the saint patronizes her 'charity

What matters—a heart which, though faulty, was feeling,
Be driven to excesses which once could
appal—
That the sinner should suffer is only fair dealing,
As the saint keeps her charity back for
'the ball!'

A superfluous pageant—for, by the Lord Harry!
They'll find where they're going much more than they carry.

EPIGRAM ON MY WEDDING-DAY

TO PENELOPE

THIS day, of all our days, has done
The worst for me and you:—
'Tis just six years since we were one,
And five since we were two.

January 2, 1821.

ON MY THIRTY-THIRD BIRTHDAY

JANUARY 22, 1821

THROUGH life's dull road, so dim and dirty,
I have dragg'd to three-and-thirty.
What have these years left to me?
Nothing—except thirty-three.

MARTIAL, LIB. I, EPIG. I

'Hic est, quem legis, ille, quem requiris,
Tota notus in orbe Martialis,' &c.

HE unto whom thou art so partial,
Oh, reader! is the well-known Martial,
The Epigrammatist: while living,
Give him the fame thou wouldst be giving;
So shall he hear, and feel, and know it—
Post obits rarely reach a poet.

BOWLES AND CAMPBELL

To the tune of 'Why, how now, saucy jade?'

WHY, how now, saucy Tom?
If you thus must ramble,
I will publish some Remarks on Mister Campbell.

ANSWER

WHY, how now, Billy Bowles? 5
Sure the priest is maudlin!
(To the public) How can you, d—n your souls!
Listen to his twaddling?

February 22, 1821.

EPIGRAMS

OH, Castlereagh! thou art a patriot now;
Cato died for his country, so didst thou:
He perish'd rather than see Rome enslaved,
Thou cutt'st thy throat that Britain may be saved!

So Castlereagh has cut his throat!—The worst
Of this is,—that his own was not the first.

So He has cut his throat at last!—He!
Who?
The man who cut his country's long ago.

EPITAPH

POSTERITY will ne'er survey
A nobler grave than this:
Here lie the bones of Castlereagh:
Stop, traveller—

JOHN KEATS

WHO kill'd John Keats?
'I,' says the Quarterly,
So savage and Tartarly;
''Twas one of my feats.'

WHO shot the arrow? 5
'The poet-priest Milman
(So ready to kill man),
Or Southey, or Barrow.'

July 1821.

THE CONQUEST

[This fragment was found amongst Lord Byron's papers after his departure from Genoa for Greece.]

THE Son of Love and Lord of War I sing; Him who bade England bow to Normandy,
And left the name of conqueror more than king
To his unconquerable dynasty.

Not fann'd alone by Victory's fleeting wing,⁵
He rear'd his bold and brilliant throne
on high:
The Bastard kept, like lions, his prey fast,
And Britain's bravest victor was the
last.

March 8-9, 1823.

TO MR. MURRAY

FOR Orford and for Waldegrave
You give much more than me you gave;
Which is not fairly to behave,
My Murray.

Because if a live dog, 'tis said,⁵
Be worth a lion fairly sped,
A live lord must be worth two dead,
My Murray.

And if, as the opinion goes,⁹
Verse hath a better sale than prose,— Certes, I should have more than those,
My Murray.

But now this sheet is nearly cramm'd,
So, if you will, I shan't be shamm'd,
And if you won't, you may be damn'd,¹⁶
My Murray.

THE IRISH AVATAR

'And Ireland, like a bastinadoed elephant,
kneeling to receive the paltry rider.'—CURRAN.

ERE the daughter of Brunswick is cold in her grave,
And her ashes still float to their home
o'er the tide,
Lo! George the triumphant speeds over
the wave,
To the long-cherish'd isle which he loved like his—bride!

True, the great of her bright and brief era are gone,⁵
The rainbow-like epoch where Freedom could pause
For the few little years, out of centuries
won,
Which betray'd not, or crush'd not, or wept not her cause.

True, the chains of the Catholic clank o'er
his rags,
The castle still stands, and the senate's no more,¹⁰
And the famine which dwelt on her freedomless crags
Is extending its steps to her desolate
shore.

To her desolate shore—where the emigrant stands
For a moment to gaze ere he flies from his hearth;

Tears fall on his chain, though it drops from his hands,¹⁵
For the dungeon he quits is the place of his birth.

But he comes! the Messiah of royalty comes!
Like a goodly Leviathan roll'd from the waves;
Then receive him as best such an advent becomes,
With a legion of cooks, and an army of slaves!²⁰

He comes in the promise and bloom of
threescore,
To perform in the pageant the sovereign's part—
But long live the shamrock, which shadows him o'er!
Could the green in his hat be transferr'd to his heart!

Could that long-wither'd spot but be verdant again,²⁵
And a new spring of noble affections
arise—
Then might freedom forgive thee this dance in thy chain,
And this shout of thy slavery which saddens the skies.

Is it madness or meanness which clings to thee now?
Were he God—as he is but the commonest clay,³⁰
With scarce fewer wrinkles than sins on his brow—
Such servile devotion might shame him
away.

Ay, roar in his train! let thine orators lash
Their fanciful spirits to pamper his
pride—
Not thus did thy Grattan indignantly flash
His soul o'er the freedom implored and denied.³⁶

Ever glorious Grattan! the best of the good!
So simple in heart, so sublime in the rest!
With all which Demosthenes wanted en-
dued,
And his rival or victor in all he possess'd.

Ere Tully arose in the zenith of Rome,
Though unequall'd, preceded, the task was begun—⁴²
But Grattan sprung up like a god from the
tomb
Of ages, the first, last, the saviour, the
one!

OCCASIONAL PIECES

With the skill of an Orpheus to soften the brute; 45

With the fire of Prometheus to kindle
mankind;

Even Tyranny listening sate melted or
mute,

And Corruption shrunk scorch'd from the glance of his mind.

But back to our theme! Back to despots and slaves!

Feasts furnish'd by Famine! rejoicings
by Pain! 50

True freedom but welcomes, while slavery
still raves,

When a week's saturnalia hath loosen'd her chain.

Let the poor squalid splendour thy wreck can afford

(As the bankrupt's profusion his ruin would hide),

Gild over the palace, Lo! Erin, thy lord!
Kiss his foot with thy blessing, his blessings denied! 56

Or if freedom past hope be extorted at last,
If the idol of brass find his feet are of
clay,

Must what terror or policy wring forth be class'd

With what monarchs ne'er give, but as wolves yield their prey? 60

Each brute hath its nature; a king's is to
reign—

To reign! in that word see, ye ages, comprised

The cause of the curses all annals contain,
From Cæsar the dreaded to George the despised!

Wear, Fingal, thy trapping! O'Connell, proclaim 65

His accomplishments! Hist!!! and thy country convince

Half an age's contempt was an error of
fame,

And that 'Hal is the rascaliest, sweetest young prince!'

Will thy yard of blue riband, poor Fingal,
recall

The fetters from millions of Catholic limbs? 70

Or, has it not bound thee the fastest of all
The slaves, who now hail their betrayer with hymns?

Ay! 'Build him a dwelling!' let each give his mite!

Till, like Babel, the new royal dome hath arisen!

Let thy beggars and helots their pittance
unite— 75

And a palace bestow for a poor-house and prison!

Spread—spread, for Vitellius, the royal repast,

Till the gluttonous despot be stuff'd to the gorge!

And the roar of his drunkards proclaim him at last

The fourth of the fools and oppressors
call'd 'George!' 80

Let the tables be loaded with feasts till they
groan!

Till they groan like thy people, through ages of woe!

Let the wine flow around the old Bacchanal's throne,

Like their blood which has flow'd, and which yet has to flow.

But let not his name be thine idol alone—
On his right hand behold a Sejanus appears! 86

Thine own Castlereagh! let him still be thine own!

A wretch never named but with curses and jeers!

Till now, when the isle which should blush
for his birth,

Deep, deep as the gore which he shed on her soil, 90

Seems proud of the reptile which crawl'd
from her earth,

And for murder repays him with shouts and a smile.

Without one single ray of her genius, without

The fancy, the manhood, the fire of her
race—

The miscreant who well might plunge Erin in doubt 95

If she ever gave birth to a being so base.

If she did—let her long-boasted proverb be hush'd,

Which proclaims that from Erin no
reptile can spring—

See the cold-blooded serpent, with venom
full flush'd,

Still warming its folds in the breast of a
king! 100

Shout, drink, feast, and flatter! Oh! Erin, how low

Wert thou sunk by misfortune and tyranny, till

Thy welcome of tyrants hath plunged thee
below

The depth of thy deep in a deeper gulf
still!

My voice, though but humble, was raised for thy right, 105
My vote, as a freeman's, still voted thee
free,
This hand, though but feeble, would arm
in thy fight,
And this heart, though outworn, had a throb still for thee!

Yes, I loved thee and thine, though thou art not my land,
I have known noble hearts and great souls in thy sons, 110
And I wept with the world, o'er the patriot
band
Who are gone, but I weep them no longer as once.

For happy are they now reposing afar,— Thy Grattan, thy Curran, thy Sheridan,
all
Who, for years, were the chiefs in the eloquent war, 115
And redeem'd, if they have not retarded, thy fall.

Yes, happy are they in their cold English
graves!

Their shades cannot start to thy shouts
of to-day—
Nor the steps of enslavers and chain-kissing slaves
Be stamp'd in the turf o'er their fetterless clay. 120

Till now I had envied thy sons and their
shore,
Though their virtues were hunted, their liberties fled;
There was something so warm and sublime in the core Of an Irishman's heart, that I envy—thy dead.

Or, if aught in my bosom can quench for an hour 125
My contempt for a nation so servile,
though sore,
Which though trod like the worm will not turn upon power,
'Tis the glory of Grattan, and genius of Moore!

STANZAS WRITTEN ON THE ROAD BETWEEN FLORENCE AND PISA

OH, talk not to me of a name great in
story;
The days of our youth are the days of our
glory;
And the myrtle and ivy of sweet two-and-twenty
Are worth all your laurels, though ever so plenty.

What are garlands and crowns to the brow that is wrinkled? 5
'Tis but as a dead flower with May-dew
besprinkled.
Then away with all such from the head
that is hoary!
What care I for the wreaths that can only give glory!

Oh FAME!—if I e'er took delight in thy praises,
'Twas less for the sake of thy high-sounding phrases, 10
Than to see the bright eyes of the dear one discover,
She thought that I was not unworthy to love her.

There chiefly I sought thee, there only I found thee;
Her glance was the best of the rays that surround thee;
When it sparkled o'er aught that was bright in my story, 15
I knew it was love, and I felt it was glory.
November, 1821.

STANZAS TO A HINDOO AIR

OH! my lonely—lonely—lonely—Pil-
low!
Where is my lover? where is my lover?
Is it his bark which my dreary dreams discover?
Far—far away! and alone along the billow?

Oh! my lonely—lonely—lonely—Pil-
low! 5
Why must my head ache where his gentle brow lay?
How the long night flags lovelessly and
slowly,
And my head droops over thee like the willow!

Oh! thou, my sad and solitary Pillow!
Send me kind dreams to keep my heart from breaking, 10
In return for the tears I shed upon thee
waking;
Let me not die till he comes back o'er the billow.

Then if thou wilt—no more my lonely
Pillow,
In one embrace let these arms again enfold
him,
And then expire of the joy—but to behold
him! 15
Oh! my lone bosom!—oh! my lonely
Pillow!

IMPROMPTU

BENEATH Blessington's eyes
 The reclaimed Paradise
 Should be free as the former from evil;
 But if the new Eve
 For an Apple should grieve, 5
 What mortal would not play the Devil? 1823.

TO THE COUNTESS OF BLESSINGTON

You have ask'd for a verse:—the request
 In a rhymers 'twere strange to deny;
 But my Hippocrene was but my breast,
 And my feelings (its fountain) are dry.

Were I now as I was, I had sung 5
 What Lawrence has painted so well;
 But the strain would expire on my tongue,
 And the theme is too soft for my shell.

I am ashes where once I was fire,
 And the bard in my bosom is dead;
 What I loved I now merely admire, 11
 And my heart is as grey as my head.

My life is not dated by years—
 There are moments which act as a plough;
 And there is not a furrow appears 15
 But is deep in my soul as my brow.

Let the young and the brilliant aspire
 To sing what I gaze on in vain;
 For sorrow has torn from my lyre 19
 The string which was worthy the strain.

ON THIS DAY I COMPLETE MY THIRTY-SIXTH YEAR

MISSOLONGHI, Jan. 22, 1824.

'Tis time this heart should be unmoved,
 Since others it hath ceased to move:
 Yet, though I cannot be beloved,
 Still let me love!

My days are in the yellow leaf; 5
 The flowers and fruits of love are gone;
 The worm, the canker, and the grief
 Are mine alone!

The fire that on my bosom preys
 Is lone as some volcanic isle; 10
 No torch is kindled at its blaze—
 A funeral pile.

The hope, the fear, the jealous care,
 The exalted portion of the pain
 And power of love, I cannot share, 15
 But wear the chain.

But 'tis not thus—and 'tis not here—
 Such thoughts should shake my soul,
 nor now,
 Where glory decks the hero's bier,
 Or binds his brow. 20

The sword, the banner, and the field,
 Glory and Greece, around me see!
 The Spartan, borne upon his shield,
 Was not more free.

Awake! (not Greece—she is awake!) 25
 Awake, my spirit! Think through whom
 Thy life-blood tracks its parent lake,
 And then strike home!

Tread those reviving passions down,
 Unworthy manhood!—unto thee 30
 Indifferent should the smile or frown
 Of beauty be.

If thou regrett'st thy youth, why live?
 The land of honourable death
 Is here:—up to the field, and give 35
 Away thy breath!

Seek out—less often sought than found—
 A soldier's grave, for thee the best;
 Then look around, and choose thy ground,
 And take thy rest. 40

SATIRES

ENGLISH BARDS AND SCOTCH REVIEWERS

A SATIRE

'I had rather be a kitten, and cry mew!
Than one of these same metre ballad-mongers.'
SHAKESPEARE.
'Such shameless bards we have; and yet 'tis true,
There are as mad, abandon'd critics too.'—POPE.

PREFACE*

ALL my friends, learned and unlearned, have urged me not to publish this Satire with my name. If I were to be 'turned from the career of my humour by quibbles quick, and paper bullets of the brain,' I should have complied with their counsel. But I am not to be terrified by abuse, or bullied by reviewers, with or without arms. I can safely say that I have attacked none personally, who did not commence on the offensive. An author's works are public property: he who purchases may judge, and publish his opinion if he pleases; and the authors I have endeavoured to commemorate may do by me as I have done by them. I dare say they will succeed better in condemning my scribbings, than in mending their own. But my object is not to prove that I can write well, but, if possible, to make others write better.

As the poem has met with far more success than I expected, I have endeavoured in this edition to make some additions and alterations, to render it more worthy of public perusal.

In the first edition of this satire, published anonymously, fourteen lines on the subject of Bowles's Pope were written by, and inserted at the request of, an ingenious friend of mine†, who has now in the press a volume of poetry. In the present edition they are erased, and some of my own substituted in their stead; my only reason for this being that which I conceive would operate with any other person in the same manner,—a determination not to publish with my name any production which was not entirely and exclusively my own composition.

With regard to the real talents of many of the poetical persons whose performances are mentioned or alluded to in the following pages, it is presumed by the author that there can be little difference of opinion in the public at large; though, like other sectaries, each has his separate tabernacle of proselytes, by whom his abilities are over-rated, his faults overlooked, and his metrical canons received without scruple and without consideration. But the unquestionable possession of considerable genius by several of the writers here censured renders their mental prostitution more to be regretted. Imbecility may be pitied, or, at worst, laughed at and forgotten: perverted powers demand the most decided reprehension. No one can wish more than the author that some known and able writer had undertaken their exposure; but Mr. Gifford has devoted himself to Massinger, and, in the absence of the regular physician, a country practitioner may, in cases of absolute necessity, be allowed to prescribe his nostrum to prevent the extension of so deplorable an epidemic, provided there be no quackery in his treatment of the malady. A caustic is here offered; as it is to be feared nothing short of actual cautery can recover the numerous patients afflicted with the present prevalent and distressing rabies for rhyming.—As to the Edinburgh Reviewers, it would indeed require an Hercules to crush the Hydra; but if the author succeeds in merely 'bruising one of the heads of the serpent,' though his own hand should suffer in the encounter, he will be amply satisfied.

STILL must I hear?—shall hoarse Fitzgerald bawl
His creaking couplets in a tavern hall,
And I not sing, lest, haply, Scotch reviews Should dub me scribbler, and denounce
my muse?

Prepare for rhyme—I'll publish, right or
wrong:
Fools are my theme, let satire be my song.

Oh! nature's noblest gift—my grey goose-quill!
Slave of my thoughts, obedient to my will,
Torn from thy parent bird to form a pen,
That mighty instrument of little men!

The pen! foredoom'd to aid the mental throes
Of brains that labour, big with verse or
prose,
Though nymphs forsake, and critics may
deride,
The lover's solace, and the author's pride.
What wits, what poets dost thou daily
raise!
How frequent is thy use, how small thy
praise!
Condemn'd at length to be forgotten
quite,
With all the pages which 'twas thine to write.

* This preface was written for the second edition, and printed with it. The noble author had left this country previous to the publication of that edition, and is not yet returned.—Note to the fourth edition, 1811.

† [Mr. Hobhouse.]

‡ [Here the preface to the first edition commenced.]

ENGLISH BARDS AND SCOTCH REVIEWERS

But thou, at least, mine own especial pen!
 Once laid aside, but now assumed again,
 Our task complete, like Hamet's shall be
 free; 21
 Though spurn'd by others, yet beloved by
 me:
 Then let us soar to-day; no common theme,
 No eastern vision, no distemper'd dream Inspires—our path, though full of thorns, is plain; 25
 Smooth be the verse, and easy be the
 strain.

When Vice triumphant holds her sov'- reign sway,
 Obey'd by all who nought beside obey;
 When Folly, frequent harbinger of crime,
 Bedecks her cap with bells of every clime;
 When knaves and fools combined o'er all prevail, 31
 And weigh their justice in a golden scale;
 E'en then the boldest start from public
 sneers,
 Afraid of shame, unknown to other fears,
 More darkly sin, by satire kept in awe,
 And shrink from ridicule, though not from law. 36

Such is the force of wit! but not belong
 To me the arrows of satiric song;
 The royal vices of our age demand
 A keener weapon, and a mightier hand.
 Still there are follies, e'en for me to chase,
 And yield at least amusement in the race:
 Laugh when I laugh, I seek no other fame;
 The cry is up, and scribblers are my game.
 Speed, Pegasus!—ye strains of great and small, 45
 Ode, epic, elegy, have at you all!
 I too can scrawl, and once upon a time
 I pour'd along the town a flood of rhyme,
 A schoolboy freak, unworthy praise or
 blame;
 I printed—older children do the same. 50
 'Tis pleasant, sure, to see one's name in print;
 A book's a book, although there's nothing
 in't.
 Not that a title's sounding charm can save
 Or scrawl or scribbler from an equal
 grave:
 This Lambe must own, since his patrician
 name 55
 Fail'd to preserve the spurious farce from
 shame.
 No matter, George continues still to write,
 Though now the name is veil'd from public sight.
 Moved by the great example, I pursue
 The self-same road, but make my own review: 60
 Not seek great Jeffrey's, yet, like him, will be
 Self-constituted judge of poesy.

A man must serve his time to every trade
 Save censure—critics all are ready made.
 Take hackney'd jokes from Miller, got by rote, 65
 With just enough of learning to misquote;
 A mind well skill'd to find or forge a fault;
 A turn for punning, call it Attic salt;
 To Jeffrey go, be silent and discreet,
 His pay is just ten sterling pounds per sheet: 70
 Fear not to lie, 'twill seem a sharper hit; Shrink not from blasphemy, 'twill pass for
 wit;
 Care not for feeling—pass your proper
 jest,
 And stand a critic, hated yet caress'd.

And shall we own such judgment? no
 —as soon 75
 Seek roses in December—ice in June;
 Hope constancy in wind, or corn in chaff;
 Believe a woman or an epitaph,
 Or any other thing that's false, before You trust in critics, who themselves are sore; 80
 Or yield one single thought to be misled
 By Jeffrey's heart, or Lambe's Bæotian
 head.
 To these young tyrants, by themselves
 misplaced,
 Combined usurpers on the throne of taste;
 To these, when authors bend in humble
 awe, 85
 And hail their voice as truth, their word as law—
 While these are censors, 'twould be sin to
 spare;
 While such are critics, why should I for-
 bear?
 But yet, so near all modern worthies run,
 'Tis doubtful whom to seek, or whom to
 shun; 90
 Nor know we when to spare, or where to
 strike,
 Our bards and censors are so much alike.

Then should you ask me, why I venture
 o'er
 The path which Pope and Gifford trod be-
 fore;
 If not yet sicken'd, you can still proceed:
 Go on; my rhyme will tell you as you read.
 'But hold!' exclaims a friend, 'here's some neglect: 97
 This—that—and t'other line seem incorrect.'
 What then? the self-same blunder Pope has got,
 And careless Dryden—'Ay, but Pye has
 not:— 100
 Indeed!—'tis granted, faith!—but what care I?
 Better to err with Pope, than shine with Pye.

Time was, ere yet in these degenerate
 days
 Ignoble themes obtain'd mistaken praise,
 When sense and wit with poesy allied,
 No fabled graces, flourish'd side by side;
 From the same fount their inspiration
 drew, 107
 And, rear'd by taste, bloom'd fairer as they grew.
 Then, in this happy isle, a Pope's pure
 strain
 Sought the rapt soul to charm, nor sought
 in vain; 110
 A polish'd nation's praise aspired to claim,
 And raised the people's, as the poet's
 fame.
 Like him great Dryden pour'd the tide of
 song,
 In stream less smooth, indeed, yet doubly
 strong.
 Then Congreve's scenes could cheer, or Otway's melt— 115
 For nature then an English audience felt.
 But why these names, or greater still, re-
 trace,
 When all to feebler bards resign their
 place?
 Yet to such times our lingering looks are
 cast,
 When taste and reason with those times are past. 120
 Now look around, and turn each trifling
 page,
 Survey the precious works that please the
 age;
 This truth at least let satire's self allow,
 No dearth of bards can be complain'd of
 now.
 The loaded press beneath her labour
 groans, 125
 And printers' devils shake their weary
 bones;
 While Southey's epics cram the creaking shelves,
 And Little's lyrics shine in hot-press'd twelves.
 Thus saith the Preacher: 'Nought beneath
 the sun
 Is new,' yet still from change to change
 we run: 130
 What varied wonders tempt us as they
 pass!
 The cow-pox, tractors, galvanism, and
 gas,
 In turns appear, to make the vulgar stare,
 Till the swoln bubble bursts—and all is
 air!
 Nor less new schools of Poetry arise, Where dull pretenders grapple for the
 prize: 136
 O'er taste awhile these pseudo-bards prevail;
 Each country book-club bows the knee to Baal,

And, hurling lawful genius from the
 throne,
 Erects a shrine and idol of its own; 140
 Some leaden calf—but whom it matters
 not,
 From soaring Southey down to grovelling Stott.
 Behold! in various throngs the scribbling crew,
 For notice eager, pass in long review:
 Each spurs his jaded Pegasus apace, 145
 And rhyme and blank maintain an equal
 race;
 Sonnets on sonnets crowd, and ode on ode;
 And tales of terror jostle on the road;
 Immeasurable measures move along;
 For simpering folly loves a varied song,
 To strange mysterious dulness still the
 friend, 151
 Admires the strain she cannot comprehend.
 Thus Lays of Minstrels—may they be the
 last!—
 On half-strung harps whine mournful to the blast.
 While mountain spirits prate to river
 sprites, 155
 That dames may listen to the sound at nights;
 And goblin brats, of Gilpin Horner's brood, Decoy young border-nobles through the
 wood,
 And skip at every step, Lord knows how
 high,
 And frighten foolish babes, the Lord knows why; 160
 While high-born ladies in their magic cell, Forbidding knights to read who cannot
 spell,
 Despatch a courier to a wizard's grave,
 And fight with honest men to shield a knave.
 Next view in state, proud prancing on his roan, 165
 The golden-crested haughty Marmion, Now forging scrolls, now foremost in the
 fight,
 Not quite a felon, yet but half a knight,
 The gibbet or the field prepared to grace;
 A mighty mixture of the great and base.
 And think'st thou, Scott! by vain conceit perchance, 171
 On public taste to foist thy stale romance,
 Though Murray with his Miller may combine
 To yield thy muse just half-a-crown per
 line?
 No! when the sons of song descend to trade, 175
 Their bays are sear, their former laurels fade.

ENGLISH BARDS AND SCOTCH REVIEWERS

Let such forego the poet's sacred name,
Who rack their brains for lucre, not for
fame:

Still for stern Mammon may they toil in
vain!

And sadly gaze on gold they cannot gain!
Such be their meed, such still the just reward

Of prostituted muse and hireling bard!
For this we spurn Apollo's venal son,
And bid a long 'good night to Marmion.'

These are the themes that claim our plaudits now;

These are the bards to whom the muse
must bow;

While Milton, Dryden, Pope, alike forgot,
Resign their hallow'd bays to Walter Scott.

The time has been, when yet the muse
was young,

When Homer swept the lyre, and Maro
sung,

An epic scarce ten centuries could claim,
While awe-struck nations hail'd the magic
name:

The work of each immortal bard appears
The single wonder of a thousand years.

Empires have moulder'd from the face of
earth,

Tongues have expired with those who gave them birth,

Without the glory such a strain can give,
As even in ruin bids the language live.

Not so with us, though minor bards, content
On one great work a life of labour spent:

With eagle pinion soaring to the skies,
Behold the ballad-monger Southey rise!

To him let Camoëns, Milton, Tasso yield, Whose annual strains, like armies, take
the field.

First in the ranks see Joan of Arc advance,
The scourge of England and the boast of France!

Though burnt by wicked Bedford for a witch,

Behold her statue placed in glory's niche;
Her fetters burst, and just released from prison,

A virgin phoenix from her ashes risen.
Next see tremendous Thalaba come on,
Arabia's monstrous, wild, and wondrous son:

Domdaniel's dread destroyer, who o'er-
threw

More mad magicians than the world e'er
knew.

Immortal hero! all thy foes o'ercome,
For ever reign—the rival of Tom Thumb!

Since startled metre fled before thy face,
Well wert thou doom'd the last of all thy
race!

Well might triumphant genii bear thee
hence,

Illustrious conqueror of common sense!

Now, last and greatest, Madoc spreads
his sails,

Cacique in Mexico, and prince in Wales;
Tells us strange tales, as other travellers
do,

More old than Mandeville's, and not so
true.

Oh! Southey! Southey! cease thy varied
song!

A bard may chant too often and too long:
As thou art strong in verse, in mercy,
spare!

A fourth, alas! were more than we could
bear.

But if, in spite of all the world can say,
Thou still wilt verseward plod thy weary
way;

If still in Berkley ballads most uncivil,
Thou wilt devote old women to the devil,

The babe unborn thy dread intent may rue:

'God help thee,' Southey, and thy readers
too.

Next comes the dull disciple of thy
school,

That mild apostate from poetic rule,
The simple Wordsworth, framer of a lay

As soft as evening in his favourite May,
Who warns his friend 'to shake off toil
and trouble,

And quit his books, for fear of growing double;'

Who, both by precept and example, shows That prose is verse, and verse is merely prose;

Convincing all, by demonstration plain,
Poetic souls delight in prose insane;

And Christmas stories tortured into
rhyme

Contain the essence of the true sublime.
Thus, when he tells the tale of Betty Foy,

The idiot mother of 'an idiot boy';
A moon-struck, silly lad, who lost his way,

And, like his bard, confounded night with
day;

So close on each pathetic part he dwells,
And each adventure so sublimely tells,

That all who view the 'idiot in his glory'
Conceive the bard the hero of the story.

Shall gentle Coleridge pass unnoticed
here,

To turgid ode and tumid stanza dear?
Though themes of innocence amuse him
best,

Yet still obscurity's a welcome guest.
If Inspiration should her aid refuse

To him who takes a pixy for a muse,
Yet none in lofty numbers can surpass

The bard who soars to elegise an ass.
So well the subject suits his noble mind,

He brays the laureat of the long-eared
kind.

Oh! wonder-working Lewis! monk, or bard,²⁶⁵
 Who fain wouldst make Parnassus a churchyard!
 Lo! wreaths of yew, not laurel, bind thy brow,
 Thy muse a sprite, Apollo's sexton thou!
 Whether on ancient tombs thou tak'st thy stand,
 By gibb'ring spectres hail'd, thy kindred band;²⁷⁰
 Or tracest chaste descriptions on thy page,
 To please the females of our modest age;
 All hail, M. P.! from whose infernal brain
 Thin-sheeted phantoms glide, a grisly train;
 At whose command 'grim women' throng in crowds,²⁷⁵
 And kings of fire, of water, and of clouds,
 With 'small gray men,' 'wild yagers,' and what not,
 To crown with honour thee and Walter Scott;
 Again all hail! if tales like thine may please,
 St. Luke alone can vanquish the disease;
 Even Satan's self with thee might dread to dwell,²⁸¹
 And in thy skull discern a deeper hell.

Who in soft guise, surrounded by a choir
 Of virgins melting, not to Vesta's fire,
 With sparkling eyes, and cheek by passion flush'd,²⁸⁵
 Strikes his wild lyre, whilst listening dames are hush'd?
 'Tis Little! young Catullus of his day,
 As sweet, but as immoral, in his lay!
 Grieved to condemn, the muse must still be just,
 Nor spare melodious advocates of lust.
 Pure is the flame which o'er her altar burns;²⁹¹
 From grosser incense with disgust she turns:
 Yet kind to youth, this expiation o'er,
 She bids thee 'mend thy line and sin no more.'

For thee, translator of the tinsel song,
 To whom such glittering ornaments belong,²⁹⁶
 Hibernian Strangford! with thine eyes of blue,
 And boasted locks of red or auburn hue,
 Whose plaintive strain each love-sick miss admires,
 And o'er harmonious fustian half expires,
 Learn, if thou canst, to yield thine author's sense,³⁰¹
 Nor vend thy sonnets on a false pretence.
 Think'st thou to gain thy verse a higher place,
 By dressing Camoëns in a suit of lace?

Mend, Strangford! mend thy morals and thy taste;³⁰⁵
 Be warm, but pure; be amorous, but be chaste;
 Cease to deceive; thy pilfer'd harp restore,
 Nor teach the Lusian bard to copy Moore.

Behold!—ye tarts!—one moment spare the text—
 Hayley's last work, and worst—until his next;³¹⁰
 Whether he spin poor couplets into plays,
 Or damn the dead with purgatorial praise,
 His style in youth or age is still the same,
 For ever feeble and for ever tame.
 Triumphant first see 'Temper's Triumphs' shine!³¹⁵
 At least I'm sure they triumph'd over mine.
 Of 'Music's Triumphs,' all who read may swear
 That luckless music never triumph'd there.

Moravians, rise! bestow some meet reward
 On dull devotion—Lo! the Sabbath bard,
 Sepulchral Grahame, pours his notes sublime³²¹
 In mangled prose, nor e'en aspires to rhyme;
 Breaks into blank the Gospel of St. Luke,
 And boldly pilfers from the Pentateuch;
 And, undisturb'd by conscientious qualms,
 Perverts the Prophets, and purloins the Psalms.³²⁶

Hail, Sympathy! thy soft idea brings
 A thousand visions of a thousand things,
 And shows, still whimpering through three-score of years,
 The maudlin prince of mournful sonnet-eers.³³⁰
 And art thou not their prince, harmonious Bowles!
 Thou first, great oracle of tender souls?
 Whether thou sing'st with equal ease, and grief,
 The fall of empires, or a yellow leaf;
 Whether thy muse most lamentably tells
 What merry sounds proceed from Oxford bells,³³⁶
 Or, still in bells delighting, finds a friend
 In every chime that jingled from Ostend;
 Ah! how much juster were thy muse's hap,
 If to thy bells thou wouldst but add a cap!
 Delightful Bowles! still blessing and still blest,³⁴¹
 All love thy strain, but children like it best.
 'Tis thine, with gentle Little's moral song,
 To soothe the mania of the amorous throng!
 With thee our nursery damsels shed their tears,³⁴⁵
 Ere miss as yet completes her infant years:

But in her teens thy whining powers are
vain;
She quits poor Bowles for Little's purer
strain.
Now to soft themes thou scornest to confine 349
The lofty numbers of a harp like thine;
'Awake a louder and a loftier strain,'
Such as none heard before, or will again!
Where all Discoveries jumble from the flood,
Since first the leaky ark reposed in mud,
By more or less, are sung in every book,
From Captain Noah down to Captain
Cook. 356
Nor this alone; but, pausing on the road,
The bard sighs forth a gentle episode;
And gravely tells—attend, each beauteous
miss!—
When first Madeira trembled to a kiss.
Bowles! in thy memory let this precept
dwell, 361
Stick to thy sonnets, man!—at least they sell.
But if some new-born whim, or larger
bribe,
Prompt thy crude brain, and claim thee for a scribe;
If chance some bard, though once by dunces fear'd, 365
Now, prone in dust, can only be revered;
If Pope, whose fame and genius, from the first,
Have foil'd the best of critics, needs the
worst,
Do thou essay: each fault, each failing scan;
The first of poets was, alas! but man.
Rake from each ancient dunghill every pearl, 371
Consult Lord Fanny, and confide in Curl;
Let all the scandals of a former age
Perch on thy pen, and flutter o'er thy page;
Affect a candour which thou canst not
feel, 375
Clothe envy in the garb of honest zeal; Write, as if St. John's soul could still inspire,
And do from hate what Mallet did for hire.
Oh! hadst thou lived in that congenial
time,
To rave with Dennis, and with Ralph to
rhyme; 380
Throng'd with the rest around his living
head,
Not raised thy hoof against the lion dead;
A meet reward had crown'd thy glorious gains,
And link'd thee to the Dunciad for thy pains.

Another epic! Who inflicts again 385
More books of blank upon the sons of
men?

Bœotian Cottle, rich Bristowa's boast,
Imports old stories from the Cambrian
coast,
And sends his goods to market—all alive!
Lines forty thousand, cantos twenty-five?
Fresh fish from Helicon! who'll buy, who'll buy? 391
The precious bargain's cheap—in faith,
not I.
Your turtle-feeder's verse must needs be flat,
Though Bristol bloat him with the verdant fat;
If Commerce fills the purse, she clogs the
brain, 395
And Amos Cottle strikes the lyre in vain.
In him an author's luckless lot behold, Condemn'd to make the books which once
he sold.
Oh, Amos Cottle!—Phœbus! what a name
To fill the speaking trump of future
fame!— 400
Oh, Amos Cottle! for a moment think
What meagre profits spring from pen and ink!
When thus devoted to poetic dreams,
Who will peruse thy prostituted reams?
Oh! pen perverted! paper misapplied!
Had Cottle still adorn'd the counter's side,
Bent o'er the desk, or, born to useful toils,
Been taught to make the paper which he soils, 408
Plough'd, delved, or plied the oar with lusty limb,
He had not sung of Wales, nor I of him.

As Sisyphus against the infernal steep Rolls the huge rock whose motions ne'er
may sleep,
So up thy hill, ambrosial Richmond,
heaves
Dull Maurice all his granite weight of leaves: 414
Smooth, solid monuments of mental pain!
The petrifications of a plodding brain,
That, ere they reach the top, fall lumbering back again.

With broken lyre, and cheek serenely
pale,
Lo! sad Alcæus wanders down the vale;
Though fair they rose, and might have bloom'd at last, 420
His hopes have perish'd by the northern
blast:
Nipp'd in the bud by Caledonian gales,
His blossoms wither as the blast prevails!
O'er his lost works let classic Sheffield
weep;
May no rude hand disturb their early
sleep! 425

Yet say! why should the bard at once
resign
His claim to favour from the sacred Nine?

For ever startled by the mingled howl
Of northern wolves, that still in darkness
prowl;
A coward brood, which mangle as they
prey, 430
By hellish instinct, all that cross their way;
Aged or young, the living or the dead,
No mercy find—these harpies must be fed.
Why do the injured unresisting yield
The calm possession of their native field?
Why tamely thus before their fangs retreat, 436
Nor hunt the blood-hounds back to Arthur's Seat?

Health to immortal Jeffrey! once, in
name,
England could boast a judge almost the
same;
In soul so like, so merciful, yet just, 440
Some think that Satan has resign'd his trust,
And given the spirit to the world again,
To sentence letters, as he sentenced men.
With hand less mighty, but with heart as
black,
With voice as willing to decree the rack;
Bred in the courts betimes, though all that law 446
As yet hath taught him is to find a flaw;
Since well instructed in the patriot school
To rail at party, though a party tool,
Who knows, if chance his patrons should restore 450
Back to the sway they forfeited before,
His scribbling toils some recompense may
meet,
And raise this Daniel to the judgment-seat?
Let Jeffreys' shade indulge the pious hope,
And greeting thus, present him with a rope: 455
'Heir to my virtues! man of equal mind!
Skill'd to condemn as to traduce mankind,
This cord receive, for thee reserved with
care,
To wield in judgment, and at length to wear.'

Health to great Jeffrey! Heaven preserve his life, 460
To flourish on the fertile shores of Fife,
And guard it sacred in its future wars,
Since authors sometimes seek the field of Mars!
Can none remember that eventful day,
That ever-glorious, almost fatal fray,
When Little's leadless pistol met his eye,
And Bow-street myrmidons stood laughing by?
Oh, day disastrous! on her firm-set rock,
Dunedin's castle felt a secret shock;
Dark roll'd the sympathetic waves of
Forth, 470
Low groan'd the startled whirlwinds of the north;

Tweed ruffled half his waves to form a tear,
The other half pursued its calm career;
Arthur's steep summit nodded to its base,
The surly Tolbooth scarcely kept her
place. 475
The Tolbooth felt—for marble sometimes
can,
On such occasions, feel as much as man—
The Tolbooth felt defrauded of his charms,
If Jeffrey died, except within her arms:
Nay last, not least, on that portentous
morn, 480
The sixteenth story, where himself was
born,
His patrimonial garret, fell to ground,
And pale Edina shudder'd at the sound:
Strew'd were the streets around with milk-
white reams,
Flow'd all the Canongate with inky
streams; 485
This of his candour seem'd the sable dew,
That of his valour show'd the bloodless
hue;
And all with justice deem'd the two combined
The mingled emblems of his mighty mind.
But Caledonia's goddess hover'd o'er
The field, and saved him from the wrath of Moore; 491
From either pistol snatch'd the vengeful lead,
And straight restored it to her favourite's
head;
That head, with greater than magnetic
power,
Caught it, as Danaë caught the golden
shower, 495
And, though the thickening dross will scarce refine,
Augments its ore, and is itself a mine.
'My son,' she cried, 'ne'er thirst for gore
again,
Resign the pistol and resume the pen;
O'er politics and poesy preside, 500
Boast of thy country, and Britannia's
guide!
For long as Albion's heedless sons submit,
Or Scottish taste decides on English wit,
So long shall last thine unmolested reign,
Nor any dare to take thy name in vain.
Behold, a chosen band shall aid thy plan,
And own thee chieftain of the critic clan.
First in the oat-fed phalanx shall be seen
The travell'd thane, Athenian Aberdeen.
Herbert shall wield Thor's hammer, and sometimes, 510
In gratitude, thou'lt praise his rugged
rhymes.
Smug Sidney too thy bitter page shall seek,
And classic Hallam, much renown'd for Greek;
Scott may perchance his name and influence lend, 514
And paltry Pillans shall traduce his friend;

ENGLISH BARDS AND SCOTCH REVIEWERS

While gay Thalia's luckless votary, Lambe, Damn'd like the devil, devil-like will damn.

Known be thy name, unbounded be thy
sway!

Thy Holland's banquets shall each toil re-
pay;

While grateful Britain yields the praise she owes 520

To Holland's hirelings and to learning's
foes.

Yet mark one caution ere thy next Review Spread its light wings of saffron and of
blue,

Beware lest blundering Brougham destroy the sale,

Turn beef to bannocks, cauliflowers to kail.' 525

Thus having said, the kilted goddess kiss'd
Her son, and vanish'd in a Scottish mist.

Then prosper, Jeffrey! pertest of the train Whom Scotland pampers with her fiery grain!

Whatever blessing wait a genuine Scot,
In double portion swells thy glorious lot;
For thee Edina culls her evening sweets,
And showers their odours on thy candid sheets,

Whose hue and fragrance to thy work adhere—

This scents its pages, and that gilds its rear.
Lo! blushing Itch, coy nymph, enamour'd
grown, 536

Forsakes the rest, and cleaves to thee
alone;

And, too unjust to other Pictish men,
Enjoys thy person, and inspires thy pen!

Illustrious Holland! hard would be his
lot, 540

His hirelings mention'd, and himself forgot!

Holland, with Henry Petty at his back,
The whipper-in and huntsman of the pack.
Elest be the banquets spread at Holland
House,

Where Scotchmen feed, and critics may
carouse! 545

Long, long beneath that hospitable roof Shall Grub-street dine, while duns are kept aloof.

See honest Hallam lay aside his fork, Resume his pen, review his Lordship's
work, 549

And, grateful for the dainties on his plate,
Declare his landlord can at least translate!
Dunedin! view thy children with delight,
They write for food—and feed because they write:

And lest, when heated with the unusual grape,

Some glowing thoughts should to the press
escape, 555

And tinge with red the female reader's
cheek,

My lady skims the cream of each critique;
Breathes o'er the page her purity of soul,
Reforms each error, and refines the whole.

Now to the Drama turn—Oh! motley
sight! 560

What precious scenes the wondering eyes invite!

Puns, and a prince within a barrel pent,
And Dibdin's nonsense yield complete content.

Though now, thank Heaven! the Roscio-mania's o'er,

And full-grown actors are endured once
more; 565

Yet what avail their vain attempts to
please,

While British critics suffer scenes like
these;

While Reynolds vents his 'dammes!'
'poohs!' and 'zounds!'

And common-place and common sense
confounds?

While Kenney's 'World'—ah! where is Kenney's wit?— 570

Tires the sad gallery, lulls the listless pit;
And Beaumont's pilfer'd Caratach affords
A tragedy complete in all but words?

Who but must mourn, while these are all the rage,

The degradation of our vaunted stage!
Heavens! is all sense of shame and talent
gone? 576

Have we no living bard of merit?—none!
Awake, George Colman! Cumberland,
awake!

Ring the alarum bell! let folly quake!
Oh, Sheridan! if aught can move thy
pen, 580

Let Comedy assume her throne again;
Abjure the mummery of the German
schools;

Leave new Pizarros to translating fools;
Give, as thy last memorial to the age,
One classic drama, and reform the stage.

Gods! o'er those boards shall Folly rear
her head, 586

Where Garrick trod, and Siddons lives to tread?

On those shall Farce display Buffoon'ry's
mask,

And Hook conceal his heroes in a cask?
Shall sapient managers new scenes produce 590

From Cherry, Skeffington, and Mother
Goose?

While Shakspeare, Otway, Massinger,
forgot,

On stalls must moulder, or in closets rot?
Lo! with what pomp the daily prints pro-
claim

The rival candidates for Attic fame! 595

In grim array though Lewis' spectres rise, Still Skeffington and Goose divide the
prize.
And sure great Skeffington must claim our
praise,
For skirtless coats and skeletons of plays Renown'd alike; whose genius ne'er confines 600
Her flight to garnish Greenwood's gay designs;
Nor sleeps with 'Sleeping Beauties,' but
anon
In five facetious acts comes thundering on, While poor John Bull, bewilder'd with the
scene
Stares, wondering what the devil it can mean; 605
But as some hands applaud, a venal few!
Rather than sleep, why John applauds it
too.

Such are we now. Ah! wherefore should we turn
To what our fathers were, unless to mourn? 609
Degenerate Britons! are ye dead to shame,
Or, kind to dulness, do you fear to blame?
Well may the nobles of our present race
Watch each distortion of a Naldi's face;
Well may they smile on Italy's buffoons,
And worship Catalani's pantaloons, 615
Since their own drama yields no fairer trace
Of wit than puns, of humour than grimace.

Then let Ausonia, skill'd in every art
To soften manners, but corrupt the heart,
Pour her exotic follies o'er the town,
To sanction Vice, and hunt Decorum
down; 621
Let wedded strumpets languish o'er Des-hayes,
And bless the promise which his form displays;
While Gayton bounds before th' enrap-
tured looks 624
Of hoary marquises and stripling dukes:
Let high-born lechers eye the lively Présle Twirl her light limbs, that spurn the needless veil;
Let Angiolini bare her breast of snow,
Wave the white arm, and point the pliant
toe;
Collini trill her love-inspiring song, 630 Strain her fair neck, and charm the listening throng!
Whet not your scythe, suppressors of our vice!
Reforming saints! too delicately nice!
By whose decrees, our sinful souls to save,
No Sunday tankards foam, no barbers shave; 635
And beer undrawn, and beards unmown,
display
Your holy reverence for the Sabbath-day.

Or hail at once the patron and the pile
Of vice and folly, Greville and Argyle!
Where yon proud palace, Fashion's hal-low'd fane, 640
Spreads wide her portals for the motley
train,
Behold the new Petronius of the day,
Our arbiter of pleasure and of play!
There the hired eunuch, the Hesperian choir, 644
The melting lute, the soft lascivious lyre,
The song from Italy, the step from France,
The midnight orgy, and the mazy dance,
The smile of beauty, and the flush of
wine,
For fops, fools, gamesters, knaves, and lords combine:
Each to his humour—Comus all allows;
Champaign, dice, music, or your neighbour's spouse. 651
Talk not to us, ye starving sons of trade!
Of piteous ruin, which ourselves have
made;
In plenty's sunshine Fortune's minions
bask,
Nor think of poverty, except 'en masque,'
When for the night some lately titled ass Appears the beggar which his grandsire
was. 657
The curtain dropp'd, the gay burletta o'er,
The audience take their turn upon the floor;
Now round the room the circling dow'gers
sweep, 660
Now in loose waltz the thin-clad daughters
leap;
The first in lengthen'd line majestic swim,
The last display the free unfetter'd limb!
Those for Hibernia's lusty sons repair With art the charms which nature could
not spare; 665
These after husbands wing their eager
flight,
Nor leave much mystery for the nuptial
night.

Oh! blest retreats of infamy and ease,
Where, all forgotten but the power to
please,
Each maid may give a loose to genial
thought, 670
Each swain may teach new systems, or be
taught:
There the blithe youngster, just return'd
from Spain,
Cuts the light pack, or calls the rattling
main;
The jovial caster's set, and seven's the nick,
Or—done!—a thousand on the coming trick! 675
If, mad with loss, existence 'gins to tire,
And all your hope or wish is to expire,

Here's Powell's pistol ready for your
life,
And, kinder still, two Pagets for your wife; 679
Fit consummation of an earthly race
Begun in folly, ended in disgrace;
While none but menials o'er the bed of
death,
Wash thy red wounds, or watch thy waver-
ing breath:
Traduced by liars, and forgot by all,
The mangled victim of a drunken brawl,
To live like Clodius, and like Falkland
fall. 686

Truth! rouse some genuine bard, and guide his hand
To drive this pestilence from out the land.
E'en I—least thinking of a thoughtless
throne,
Just skill'd to know the right and choose the wrong, 690
Freed at that age when reason's shield is
lost,
To fight my course through passion's countless host,
Whom every path of pleasure's flowery
way
Has lured in turn, and all have led astray—E'en I must raise my voice, e'en I must
feel 695
Such scenes, such men, destroy the public weal:
Although some kind, censorious friend
will say,
'What art thou better, meddling fool, than
they?'
And every brother rake will smile to see
That miracle, a moralist in me. 700
No matter—when some bard in virtue
strong,
Gifford perchance, shall raise the chasten-
ing song,
Then sleep my pen for ever! and my voice
Be only heard to hail him, and rejoice;
Rejoice, and yield my feeble praise, though
I 705
May feel the lash that Virtue must apply.

As for the smaller fry, who swarm in shoals,
From silly Hafiz up to simple Bowles,
Why should we call them from their dark
abode,
In broad St. Giles's or in Tottenhamroad? 710
Or (since some men of fashion nobly dare To scrawl in verse) from Bond-street or the Square?
If things of ton their harmless lays indite,
Most wisely doom'd to shun the public
sight, 714
What harm? in spite of every critic elf,
Sir T. may read his stanzas to himself;

Miles Andrews still his strength in couplets try,
And live in prologues, though his dramas
die:
Lords too are bards, such things at times
befall, 719
And 'tis some praise in peers to write at all.
Yet, did or taste or reason sway the times
Ah! who would take their titles with their
rhymes?
Roscommon! Sheffield! with your spirits
fled,
No future laurels deck a noble head;
No muse will cheer, with renovating smile,
The paralytic pining of Carlisle. 726
The puny schoolboy and his early lay
Men pardon, if his follies pass away;
But who forgives the senior's ceaseless
verse,
Whose hairs grow hoary as his rhymes grow worse? 730
What heterogeneous honours deck the
peer!
Lord, rhymester, petit-maitre, and pamphleteer!
So dull in youth, so drivelling in his
age,
His scenes alone had damn'd our sinking stage;
But managers for once cried, 'Hold,
enough!' 735
Nor drugg'd their audience with the tragic stuff.
Yet at their judgment let his lordship laugh,
And case his volumes in congenial calf;
Yes! doff that covering, where morocco
shines,
And hang a calf-skin on those recreant
lines. 740

With you, ye Druids! rich in native lead,
Who daily scribble for your daily bread;
With you I war not: Gifford's heavy hand
Has crush'd, without remorse, your numerous band. 744
On 'all the talents' vent your venal spleen;
Want is your plea, let pity be your screen.
Let monodies on Fox regale your crew,
And Melville's Mantle prove a blanket
too!
One common Lethe waits each hapless
bard,
And, peace be with you! 'tis you best reward. 750
Such damning fame as Dunciads only give Could bid your lines beyond a morning
live;
But now at once your fleeting labours
close,
With names of greater note in blest re-
pose. 754
Far be't from me unkindly to upbraid
The lovely Rosa's prose in masquerade,

Whose strains, the faithful echoes of her
mind,
Leave wondering comprehension far behind.
Though Crusca's bards no more our journals fill,
Some stragglers skirmish round the columns still; 760
Last of the howling host which once was Bell's,
Matilda snivels yet, and Hafiz yells;
And Merry's metaphors appear anew, Chain'd to the signature of O. P. Q.

When some brisk youth, the tenant of a stall, 765
Employs a pen less pointed than his awl,
Leaves his snug shop, forsakes his store
of shoes,
St. Crispin quits, and cobbles for the
muse,
Heavens! how the vulgar stare! how crowds applaud!
How ladies read, and literati laud! 770
If chance some wicked wag should pass
his jest,
'Tis sheer ill-nature—don't the world
know best?
Genius must guide when wits admire the
rhyme,
And Capel Lofft declares 'tis quite sub-
lime.
Hear, then, ye happy sons of needless
trade! 775
Swains! quit the plough, resign the useless spade!
Lo! Burns and Bloomfield, nay, a greater
far,
Gifford was born beneath an adverse
star,
Forsook the labours of a servile state,
Stemm'd the rude storm, and triumph'd over fate: 780
Then why no more? if Phœbus smiled on
you,
Bloomfield! why not on brother Nathan
too?
Him too the mania, not the muse, has seized;
Not inspiration, but a mind diseased:
And now no boor can seek his last abode,
No common be enclosed without an ode.
Oh! since increased refinement deigns to
smile
On Britain's sons, and bless our genial isle, 788
Let poesy go forth, pervade the whole,
Alike the rustic, and mechanic soul!
Ye tuneful cobblers! still your notes pro-
long,
Compose at once a slipper and a song;
So shall the fair your handywork peruse,
Your sonnets sure shall please—perhaps your shoes.

May Moorland weavers boast Pindaric
skill, 795
And tailors' lays be longer than their bill!
While punctual beaux reward the grateful
notes,
And pay for poems—when they pay for coats.

To the famed throng now paid the tribute due,
Neglected genius! let me turn to you.
Come forth, oh Campbell! give thy talents scope; 801
Who dares aspire if thou must cease to hope?
And thou, melodious Rogers! rise at
last,
Recall the pleasing memory of the
past;
Arise! let blest remembrance still in-
spire, 805
And strike to wonted tones thy hallow'd
lyre;
Restore Apollo to his vacant throne,
Assert thy country's honour and thine
own.
What! must deserted Poesy still weep
Where her last hopes with pious Cowper
sleep? 810
Unless, perchance, from his cold bier she turns,
To deck the turf that wraps her minstrel,
Burns!
No! though contempt hath mark'd the spurious brood,
The race who rhyme from folly, or for
food,
Yet still some genuine sons 'tis hers to
boast, 815
Who, least affecting, still affect the most:
Feel as they write, and write but as they
feel—
Bear witness Gifford, Sotheby, Macneil.

'Why slumbers Gifford?' once was ask'd in vain; 819
Why slumbers Gifford? let us ask again.
Are there no follies for his pen to purge?
Are there no fools whose backs demand
the scourge?
Are there no sins for satire's bard to greet?
Stalks not gigantic Vice in every street?
Shall peers or princes tread pollution's
path, 825
And 'scape alike the law's and muse's
wrath?
Nor blaze with guilty glare through future
time,
Eternal beacons of consummate crime?
Arouse thee, Gifford! be thy promise
claim'd, 829
Make bad men better, or at least ashamed.

Unhappy White! while life was in its
 spring,
 And thy young muse just waved her joyous wing,
 The spoiler swept that soaring lyre away,
 Which else had sounded an immortal lay.
 Oh! what a noble heart was here un-
 done, 835
 When Science' self destroy'd her favourite
 son!
 Yes, she too much indulged thy fond pursuit,
 She sow'd the seeds, but death has reap'd
 the fruit.
 'Twas thine own genius gave the final
 blow,
 And help'd to plant the wound that laid thee low: 840
 So the struck eagle, stretch'd upon the
 plain,
 No more through rolling clouds to soar
 again,
 View'd his own feather on the fatal dart,
 And wing'd the shaft that quiver'd in his
 heart;
 Keen were his pangs, but keener far to
 feel 845
 He nursed the pinion which impell'd the
 steel;
 While the same plumage that had warm'd
 his nest
 Drank the last life-drop of his bleeding
 breast.

There be who say, in these enlighten'd
 days, 849
 That splendid lies are all the poet's praise;
 That strain'd invention, ever on the wing,
 Alone impels the modern bard to sing:
 'Tis true, that all who rhyme—nay, all who
 write,
 Shrink from that fatal word to genius—trite;
 Yet Truth sometimes will lend her noblest
 fires, 855
 And decorate the verse herself inspires:
 This fact in Virtue's name let Crabbe
 attest;
 Though nature's sternest painter, yet the
 best.

And here let Shee and Genius find a
 place,
 Whose pen and pencil yield an equal
 grace; 860
 To guide whose hand the sister arts combine,
 And trace the poet's or the painter's line;
 Whose magic touch can bid the canvas
 glow,
 Or pour the easy rhyme's harmonious
 flow; 864
 While honours, doubly merited, attend
 The poet's rival, but the painter's friend.

Blest is the man who dares approach the bower
 Where dwelt the muses at their natal hour;
 Whose steps have press'd, whose eye has mark'd afar,
 The clime that nursed the sons of song and
 war, 870
 The scenes which glory still must hover
 o'er,
 Her place of birth, her own Achaian shore.
 But doubly blest is he whose heart expands
 With hallow'd feelings for those classic
 lands; 874
 Who rends the veil of ages long gone by,
 And views their remnants with a poet's eye!
 Wrought! 'twas thy happy lot at once to view
 Those shores of glory, and to sing them
 too;
 And sure no common muse inspired thy
 pen 879
 To hail the land of gods and godlike men.

And you, associate bards! who snatch'd to light
 Those gems too long withheld from modern sight;
 Whose mingling taste combined to cull the
 wreath
 Where Attic flowers Aonian odours
 breathe, 884
 And all their renovated fragrance flung
 To grace the beauties of your native
 tongue;
 Now let those minds, that nobly could transfuse
 The glorious spirit of the Grecian muse, Though soft the echo, scorn a borrow'd
 tone:
 Resign Achaia's lyre, and strike your own.

Let these, or such as these, with just
 applause, 891
 Restore the muse's violated laws;
 But not in flimsy Darwin's pompous
 chime,
 That mighty master of unmeaning rhyme, Whose gilded cymbals, more adorn'd than
 clear, 895
 The eye delighted, but fatigued the ear;
 In show the simple lyre could once sur-
 pass,
 But now, worn down, appear in native
 brass;
 While all his train of hovering sylphs
 around
 Evaporate in similes and sound: 900
 Him let them shun, with him let tinsel
 die:
 False glare attracts, but more offends the
 eye.

Yet let them not to vulgar Wordsworth
 stoop,
 The meanest object of the lowly group,

Whose verse, of all but childish prattle void, 905
Seems blessed harmony to Lamb and Lloyd:
Let them—but hold, my muse, nor dare to teach
A strain far, far beyond thy humble reach:
The native genius with their being given Will point the path, and peal their notes to
heaven. 910

And thou, too, Scott! resign to minstrels
rude
The wilder slogan of a border feud:
Let others spin their meagre lines for hire;
Enough for genius, if itself inspire!
Let Southey sing, although his teeming
muse, 915
Prolific every spring, be too profuse;
Let simple Wordsworth chime his childish
verse,
And brother Coleridge lull the babe at nurse;
Let spectre-mongering Lewis aim, at most,
To rouse the galleries, or to raise a ghost;
Let Moore still sigh; let Strangford steal from Moore, 921
And swear that Camoëns sang such notes
of yore;
Let Hayley hobble on, Montgomery rave,
And godly Grahame chant a stupid
stave:
Let sonneteering Bowles his strains refine, 925
And whine and whimper to the fourteenth
line;
Let Stott, Carlisle, Matilda, and the
rest
Of Grub Street, and of Grosvenor Place
the best,
Scrawl on, till death release us from the
strain,
Or Common Sense assert her rights
again. 930
But thou, with powers that mock the aid of praise,
Shouldst leave to humbler bards ignoble
lays:
Thy country's voice, the voice of all the
nine,
Demand a hallow'd harp—that harp is
thine.
Say! will not Caledonia's annals yield
The glorious record of some nobler
field, 936
Than the wild foray of a plundering clan,
Whose proudest deeds disgrace the name
of man?
Or Marmion's acts of darkness, fitter
food
For Sherwood's outlaw tales of Robin
Hood? 940

Scotland! still proudly claim thy native
bard,
And be thy praise his first, his best reward!
Yet not with thee alone his name should
live,
But own the vast renown a world can
give:
Be known, perchance, when Albion is no
more, 945
And tell the tale of what she was before;
To future times her faded fame recall,
And save her glory, though his country
fall.

Yet what avails the sanguine poet's
hope,
To conquer ages, and with time to cope? 950
New eras spread their wings, new nations
rise,
And other victors fill the applauding skies;
A few brief generations fleet along,
Whose sons forget the poet and his song:
E'en now, what once-loved minstrels scarce may claim 955
The transient mention of a dubious name!
When fame's loud trump hath blown its noblest blast,
Though long the sound, the echo sleeps
at last;
And glory, like the phoenix midst her
fires, 959
Exhales her odours, blazes, and expires.

Shall hoary Granta call her sable sons, Expert in science, more expert at puns?
Shall these approach the muse? ah, no!
she flies,
Even from the tempting ore of Seaton's
prize;
Though printers condescend the press to
soil 965
With rhyme by Hoare, and epic blank by Hoyle:
Not him whose page, if still upheld by whist,
Requires no sacred theme to bid us list.
Ye! who in Granta's honours would sur-
pass,
Must mount her Pegasus, a full-grown ass; 970
A foal well worthy of her ancient dam,
Whose Helicon is duller than her Cam.

There Clarke, still striving piteously 'to
please,'
Forgetting doggerel leads not to degrees,
A would-be satirist, a hired buffoon, 975
A monthly scribbler of some low lampoon,

Condemn'd to drudge, the meanest of the
mean,
And furbish falsehoods for a magazine,
Devotes to scandal his congenial mind;
Himself a living libel on mankind. 980

Oh! dark asylum of a Vandal race!
At once the boast of learning, and disgrace!
So lost to Phæbus, that nor Hodgson's
verse
Can make thee better, nor poor Hewson's
worse.
But where fair Isis rolls her purer wave,
The partial muse delighted loves to
lave; 986
On her green banks a greener wreath she wove,
To crown the bards that haunt her classic
grove:
Where Richards wakes a genuine poet's
fires,
And modern Britons glory in their sires.

For me, who, thus unask'd, have dared to tell 991
My country what her sons should know too well,
Zeal for her honour bade me here engage
The host of idiots that infest her age;
No just applause her honour'd name shall lose, 995
As first in freedom, dearest to the muse.
Oh! would thy bards but emulate thy
fame,
And rise more worthy, Albion, of thy
name!
What Athens was in science, Rome in
power,
What Tyre appear'd in her meridian
hour, 1000
'Tis thine at once, fair Albion! to have
been—
Earth's chief dictatress, ocean's lovely queen:

But Rome decay'd, and Athens strew'd the
plain,
And Tyre's proud piers lie shatter'd in the
main;
Like these, thy strength may sink, in ruin
hurl'd, 1005
And Britain fall, the bulwark of the
world.
But let me cease, and dread Cassandra's
fate,
With warning ever scoff'd at, till too late;
To themes less lofty still my lay con-
fine,
And urge thy bards to gain a name like
thine. 1010

Then, hapless Britain! be thy rulers
blest,
The senate's oracles, the people's jest!

Still hear thy motley orators dispense
The flowers of rhetoric, though not of
sense,
While Canning's colleagues hate him for his wit, 1015
And old dame Portland fills the place of Pitt.

Yet once again, adieu! ere this the sail
That wafts me hence is shivering in the
gale;
And Africa's coast and Calpe's adverse
height,
And Stamboul's minarets must greet my
sight: 1020
Thence shall I stray through beauty's native clime,
Where Kaff is clad in rocks, and crown'd with snows sublime.
But should I back return, no tempting
press
Shall drag my journal from the desk's recess;
Let coxcombs, printing as they come from
far, 1025
Snatch his own wreath of ridicule from Carr;
Let Aberdeen and Elgin still pursue
The shade of fame through regions of virtù;
Waste useless thousands on their Phidian
freaks,
Misshapen monuments and maim'd antiques; 1030
And make their grand saloons a general mart
For all the mutilated blocks of art:
Of Dardan tours let dilettanti tell,
I leave topography to rapid Gell;
And, quite content, no more shall inter-
pose 1035
To stun the public ear—at least with prose.

Thus far I've held my undisturb'd career,
Prepared for rancour, steel'd 'gainst selfish
fear:
This thing of rhyme I ne'er disdain'd to
own—
Though not obtrusive, yet not quite un-
known: 1040
My voice was heard again, though not so
loud,
My page, though nameless, never dis-
avow'd;
And now at once I tear the veil away:— Cheer on the pack! the quarry stands at
bay,
Unscared by all the din of Melbourne
House, 1045
By Lambe's resentment, or by Holland's
spouse,

By Jeffrey's harmless pistol, Hallam's
 rage,
 Edina's brawny sons and brimstone
 page.
 Our men in buckram shall have blows
 enough,
 And feel they too are 'penetrable
 stuff': 1050
 And though I hope not hence unscathed
 to go,
 Who conquers me shall find a stubborn
 foe.
 The time hath been, when no harsh sound would fall
 From lips that now may seem imbued with gall;
 Nor fools nor follies tempt me to despise 1055
 The meanest thing that crawl'd beneath
 my eyes:
 But now, so callous grown, so changed
 since youth,
 I've learn'd to think, and sternly speak the
 truth;
 Learn'd to deride the critic's starch decree,
 And break him on the wheel he meant for
 me; 1060
 To spurn the rod a scribbler bids me
 kiss,
 Nor care if courts and crowds applaud or
 hiss:
 Nay more, though all my rival rhymesters
 frown,
 I too can hunt a poetaster down;
 And, arm'd in proof, the gauntlet cast at
 once 1065
 To Scotch marauder, and to southern dunce.
 Thus much I've dared; if my incondite
 lay Hath wrong'd these righteous times, let others say;
 This, let the world, which knows not how to spare, 1069
 Yet rarely blames unjustly, now declare.

POSTSCRIPT TO THE SECOND EDITION

I HAVE been informed, since the present edition went to the press, that my trusty and well-beloved cousins, the Edinburgh Reviewers, are preparing a most vehement critique on my poor, gentle, unre- sisting Muse, whom they have already so bedevilled with their ungodly ribaldry:

'Tantæne animis cœlestibus iræ!'

I suppose I must say of Jeffrey as Sir Andrew Aguecheek saith, 'An I had known he was so cunning of fence, I had seen him damned ere I had fought him.' What a pity it is that I shall be beyond the Bosphorus before the next number has passed the Tweed! But I yet hope to light my pipe with it in Persia.

My northern friends have accused me, with justice, of personality towards their great literary anthropophagus, Jeffrey; but what else was to be done with him and his dirty pack, who feed by 'lying and slandering,' and slake their thirst by 'evil speaking'? I have adduced facts already well known, and of Jeffrey's mind I have stated my free opinion, nor has he thence sustained any injury;
 —what scavenger was ever soiled by being pelted with mud? It may be said that I quit England because I have censured there 'persons of honour and wit about town'; but I am coming back again,
 and their vengeance will keep hot till my return.
 Those who know me can testify that my motives for leaving England are very different from fears, literary or personal: those who do not, may one day be convinced. Since the publication of this thing, my name has not been concealed; I have been mostly in London, ready to answer for my transgressions, and in daily expectation of sundry cartels; but, alas! 'the age of chivalry is over,' or, in the vulgar tongue, there is no spirit now-a-days.

There is a youth ycleped Hewson Clarke (subaudi esquire), a sizer of Emanuel College, and, I believe, a denizen of Berwick-upon-Tweed, whom I have introduced in these pages to much better company than he has been accustomed to meet;
 he is, notwithstanding, a very sad dog, and for no reason that I am to discover, except a personal quarrel with a bear, kept by me at Cambridge to sit for a fellowship, and whom the jealousy of his Trinity contemporaries prevented from success, has been abusing me, and, what is worse, the defenceless innocent above mentioned, in 'The Satirist,' for one year and some months. I am utterly unconscious of having given him any provocation; indeed, I am guiltless of having heard his name, till coupled with 'The Satirist.' He has therefore no reason to complain, and I dare say that, like Sir Fretful Plagiary, he is rather pleased than otherwise. I have now mentioned all who have done me the honour to notice me and mine, that is, my bear and my book, except the editor of 'The Satirist,' who, it seems, is a gentleman—God wot! I wish he could impart a little of his gentility to his subordinate scribblers. I hear that Mr.
 Jerminham is about to take up the cudgels for his Mæcenas, Lord Carlisle. I hope not: he was one of the few, who, in the very short intercourse I had with him, treated me with kindness when a boy;
 and whatever he may say or do, 'pour on, I will endure.' I have nothing further to add, save a general note of thanksgiving to readers, purchasers, and publishers, and, in the words of Scott, I wish

'To all and each a fair good night,
 And rosy dreams and slumbers light.'

HINTS FROM HORACE

BEING AN ALLUSION IN ENGLISH VERSE TO THE EPISTLE 'AD PISONES, DE ARTE POETICA,' AND INTENDED AS A SEQUEL TO 'ENGLISH BARDS AND SCOTCH REVIEWERS'

—'Ergo fungar vice cotis, acutum
Reddere quae ferrum valet, exsors ipsa secandi'

HOR. De Arte Poet.

'Rhymes are difficult things—they are stubborn things, sir.'

FIELDING'S Amelia.

ATHENS: CAPUCHIN CONVENT,
March 12, 1811.

Who would not laugh, if Lawrence, hired to grace

His costly canvas with each flatter'd face,
Abused his art, till Nature, with a blush, Saw cits grow centaurs underneath his brush?

Or, should some limner join, for show or sale,

A maid of honour to a mermaid's tail?
Or low Dubost—as once the world has
seen—

Degrade God's creatures in his graphic spleen?

Not all that forced politeness, which defends

Fools in their faults, could gag his grinning friends.

Believe me, Moschus, like that picture seems

The book which, sillier than a sick man's
dreams,

Displays a crowd of figures incomplete,
Poetic nightmares, without head or feet.

Poets and painters, as all artists know,
May shoot a little with a lengthen'd bow;
We claim this mutual mercy for our task,
And grant in turn the pardon which we
ask;

But make not monsters spring from gentle dams—

Birds breed not vipers, tigers nurse not lambs.

Humano capiti cervicem pictor equinam
Iungere si velit, et varias inducere plumas,
Undique collatis membris, ut turpiter atrum
Desinat in piscem mulier formosa superne:
Spectatum admissi risum teneatis, amici? 5
Credite, Pisones, isti tabulae fore librum
Persimilem, cuius, velut aegri somnia, vanae
Finguntur species; ut nec pes nec caput uni
Reddatur formae. Pictoribus atque poetis Quidlibet audendi semper fuit aequa potestas.
Scimus, et hanc veniam petimusque damusque
vicissim; 11

Sed non ut placidis coeant immitia; non ut
Serpentes avibus geminentur, tigribus agni.

Incoepis gravibus plerumque et magna professis,

A labour'd, long exordium, sometimes tends

(Like patriot speeches) but to paltry ends;
And nonsense in a lofty note goes down,
As pertness passes with a legal gown:

Thus many a bard describes in pompous
strain 25

The clear brook babbling through the goodly plain:

The groves of Granta, and her Gothic
halls,

King's Coll., Cam's stream, stain'd windows, and old walls:

Or, in advent'rous numbers, neatly aims
To paint a rainbow, or—the river Thames.

You sketch a tree, and so perhaps may
shine— 31

But daub a shipwreck like an alehouse
sign;

You plan a vase—it dwindles to a pot;
Then glide down Grub-street—fasting and
forgot;

Laugh'd into Lethe by some quaint Review, 35

Whose wit is never troublesome till—true.

In fine, to whatsoever you aspire,
Let it at least be simple and entire.

The greater portion of the rhyming tribe

(Give ear, my friend, for thou hast been a scribe) 40

Are led astray by some peculiar lure.
I labour to be brief—become obscure;

Purpureus, late qui splendeat, unus et alter 15
Assuitur pannus; cum lucus et ara Dianae, Et properantis aquae per amoenos ambitus

agros,
Aut flumen Rhenum, aut pluvius describitur arcus.

Sed nunc non erat his locus: et fortasse cupres-
sum 19

Scis simulare: quid hoc, si fractis enatat expses
Navibus, aere dato qui pingitur? amphora

coept
Institui; currente rota cur urceus exit?

Denique sit quod vis, simplex duntaxat et unum.
Maxima pars vatum, pater et iuvenes patre
digni,

Decipimur specie recti. Brevis esse laboro, 25

One falls while following elegance too fast;
 Another soars, inflated with bombast;
 Too low a third crawls on, afraid to fly,
 He spins his subject to satiety; 46
 Absurdly varying, he at last engraves
 Fish in the woods, and boars beneath the waves!

Unless your care's exact, your judgment nice,
 The flight from folly leads but into vice;
 None are complete, all wanting in some part, 51
 Like certain tailors, limited in art.
 For galligaskins Slowshears is your man;
 But coats must claim another artisan.
 Now this to me, I own, seems much the same 55
 As Vulcan's feet to bear Apollo's frame;
 Or, with a fair complexion, to expose
 Black eyes, black ringlets, but—a bottle nose!

Dear authors! suit your topics to your strength,
 And ponder well your subject and its length; 60
 Nor lift your load before you're quite aware
 What weight your shoulders will, or will not, bear.
 But lucid Order, and Wit's siren voice,
 Await the poet, skilful in his choice;
 With native eloquence he soars along,
 Grace in his thoughts, and music in his song. 66

Let judgment teach them wisely to combine
 With future parts the now omitted line:
 This shall the author choose, or that reject, 69
 Precise in style, and cautious to select;

Obscurus fio: sectantem leviam, nervi
 Deficient animique: professus grandia, turget:
 Serpit humi, tutus nimium, timidusque procellae:

Qui variare cupit rem prodigialiter unam,
 Delphinum sylvis appingit, fluctibus aprum. 30
 In vitium ducit culpae fuga, si caret arte.
 Aemilium circa ludum faber unus et ungues
 Exprimet, et molles imitabitur aere capillos;
 Infelix operis summa, quia ponere totum Nesciet. Hunc ego me, si quid componere curem, 35

Non magis esse velim, quam pravo vivere naso,
 Spectandum nigris oculis nigroque capillo.

Sumite materiam vestris, qui scribitis, aequam
 Viribus; et versate diu quid ferre recusent 39
 Quid valeant humeri. Cui lecta potenter erit res,
 Nec facundia deseret hunc nec lucidus ordo.

Ordinis haec virtus erit et venus, aut ego fallor,
 Ut iam nunc dicat, iam nunc debentia dici
 Pleraque differat, et praesens in tempus omittat;

In amet etiam tenuis cautiusque serendis: 45
 Hoc verbit, hoc spernat promissi carminis auctor.
 Dixeris egregie, notum si callida verbum

Nor slight applause will candid pens afford
 To him who furnishes a wanting word.
 Then fear not, if 'tis needful, to produce
 Some term unknown, or obsolete in use,
 (As Pitt has furnish'd us a word or two,
 Which lexicographers declined to do;)
 So you indeed, with care,—(but be content

To take this license rarely)—may invent.

New words find credit in these latter days,
 If neatly grafted on a Gallic phrase. 80
 What Chaucer, Spenser did, we scarce refuse

To Dryden's or to Pope's maturer muse.
 If you can add a little, say why not,
 As well as William Pitt, and Walter Scott?
 Since they, by force of rhyme and force of lungs, 85
 Enrich'd our island's ill-united tongues;
 'Tis then—and shall be—lawful to present
 Reform in writing, as in parliament.

As forests shed their foliage by degrees,
 So fade expressions which in season please; 90

And we and ours, alas! are due to fate,
 And works and words but dwindle to a date.

Though as a monarch nods, and commerce calls,

Impetuous rivers stagnate in canals;
 Though swamps subdued, and marshes drain'd, sustain 95

The heavy ploughshare and the yellow grain,

And rising ports along the busy shore

Protect the vessel from old Ocean's roar,
 All, all, must perish; but, surviving last,

The love of letters half preserves the past.
 True, some decay, yet not a few revive;

Though those shall sink, which now appear to thrive, 102

Reddiderit iunctura novum. Si forte necesse est
 Indiciis monstrare recentibus abdita rerum,

Fingere cinctutis non exaudita Cethegis 50
 Continget; dabiturque licentia sumpta pudenter;

Et nova fictaque nuper habebunt verba fidem,
 Si Graeco fonte cadant, parce detorta. Quid autem

Caecilio Plautoque dabit Romanus, ademptum
 Virgilio Varioque? ego cur, acquirere pauca 55

Si possum, invideor; cum lingua Catonis et Enni
 Sermonem patrium ditaverit, et nova rerum

Nomina protulerit? Licuit, semperque licebit, Signatum praesente nota producere nomen. 59

Ut silvae foliis pronos mutantur in annos;
 Prima cadunt: ita verborum vetus interit aetas,

Et iuvenum ritu florent modo nata, vigentque.
 Debemur morti nos, nostraque: sive receptus

Terra Neptunus classes Aquilonibus arcet,
 Regis opus; sterilisque diu palus, aptaque remis

Vicinas urbes alit, et grave sentit atratum: 66
 Seu cursum mutavit iniquum frugibus annis,

Doctus iter melius; mortalia facta peribunt:
 Nedium sermonum stet honos, et gratia vivax.

Multa renascentur, quae iam cecidere; cadentque, 70

Are they not shown in Milton's sacred
page?
His strain will teach what numbers best belong
To themes celestial: told in epic song.

The slow, sad stanza will correctly
paint
The lover's anguish, or the friend's complaint.¹¹⁰
But which deserves the laurel—rhyme or blank?
Which holds on Helicon the higher rank?
Let squabbling critics by themselves dispute
This point, as puzzling as a Chancery
suit.

Satiric rhyme first sprang from selfish spleen.¹¹⁵
You doubt—see Dryden, Pope, St. Patrick's dean.

Blank verse is now, with one consent,
allied
To Tragedy, and rarely quits her side.
Though mad Almanzor rhymed in Dryden's days,¹¹⁹
No sing-song hero rants in modern plays;
While modest Comedy her verse fore-goes
For jest and pun in very middling prose.
Not that our Bens or Beaumonts show the
worse,
Or lose one point, because they wrote in
verse.
But so Thalia pleases to appear,¹²⁵
Poor virgin! damn'd some twenty times a year!

Quae nunc sunt in honore vocabula, si volet usus.

Quem penes arbitrium est, et ius, et norma loquendi.

Res gestae regumque ducumque et tristia bella,
Quo scribi possent numero, monstravit Ho-merus.

Versibus impariter iunctis querimonia primum:⁷⁵

Post etiam inclusa est voti sententia compos.
Quis tamen exiguis elegos emisit auctor,
Grammatici certant, et adhuc sub iudice lis est.

Archilochum proprio rabies armavit iambo;
Hunc socci cepere pedem grandaeque cothurni,
Alternis aptum sermonibus, et populares⁸¹
Vicentium strepitus, et natum rebus agendis.

Musa dedit fidibus divos, puerosque deorum,
Et pugilem victorem, et equum certamine primum,

Et iuvenum curas, et libera vina referre.⁸⁵

Descriptas servare vices, operumque colores,
Cur ego, si nequeo ignoroque, poeta salutor?

Whate'er the scene, let this advice have
weight:—

Adapt your language to your hero's state.
At times Melpomene forgets to groan,
And brisk Thalia takes a serious tone;
Nor unregarded will the act pass by¹³¹
Where angry Townly lifts his voice on
high.

Again our Shakspeare limits verse to
kings,

When common prose will serve for common things;

And lively Hal resigns heroic ire,¹³⁵
To 'hollowing Hotspur' and the sceptred
sire.

'Tis not enough, ye bards, with all your
art,

To polish poems; they must touch the
heart:

Where'er the scene be laid, whate'er the
song,

Still let it bear the hearer's soul along;
Command your audience or to smile or weep,¹⁴¹

Whiche'er may please you—anything but
sleep.

The poet claims our tears; but, by his
leave,

Before I shed them, let me see him grieve.

If banish'd Romeo feign'd nor sigh nor tear,¹⁴⁵

Lull'd by his languor, I should sleep or sneer.

Sad words, no doubt, become a serious
face,

And men look angry in the proper place.
At double meanings folks seem wondrous sly,

And sentiment prescribes a pensive eye;
For nature form'd at first the inward man,¹⁵¹

And actors copy nature—when they can.

Cur nescire, pudens prave, quam discere malo?

Versibus exponi tragicis res comica non vult;

Indignatur item privatis, ac prope socco⁹⁰

Dignis carminibus narrari coena Thyestae.

Singula quaeque locum teneant sortita decenter

Interdum tamen et vocem comoedia tollit,

Iratusque Chremes tumido deligitur ore:

Et tragicus plerumque dolet sermone pedestri.

Telephus et Peleus, cum pauper et exul, uterque

Proicit ampullas, et sesquipedalia verba,⁹⁷

Si curat cor spectantis tetigisse querela.

Non satis est pulchra esse poemata; dulcia
sunt,

Et quocunque volent, animum auditoris agunto.

Ut identibus ardent, ita flentibus adsunt¹⁰¹

Humani vultus; si vis me flere dolendum est

Primum ipsi tibi; tunc tua me infortunia laedent,

Telephe, vel Peleu; male si mandata loqueris

Aut dormitabo, aut ridebo: tristitia moestum

Vultum verba decent; iratum, plena minarum;

Ludentem, lasciva; severum, seria dictu.¹⁰⁷

Format enim natura prius nos intus ad omnem

She bids the beating heart with rapture bound,
 Raised to the stars, or levell'd with the ground; 154
 And for expression's aid, 'tis said, or sung,
 She gave our mind's interpreter—the tongue,
 Who, worn with use, of late would fain dispense (At least in theatres) with common sense;
 O'erwhelm with sound the boxes, gallery, pit, 159
 And raise a laugh with anything—but wit.

To skilful writers it will much import,
 Whence spring their scenes, from common life or court;
 Whether they seek applause by smile or tear,
 To draw a 'Lying Valet,' or a 'Lear,'
 A sage, or rakish youngster wild from school, 165
 A wandering 'Peregrine,' or plain 'John Bull';
 All persons please when nature's voice prevails,
 Scottish or Irish, born in Wilts or Wales.

Or follow common fame, or forge a plot; 169
 Who cares if mimic heroes lived or not?
 One precept serves to regulate the scene:—
 Make it appear as if it might have been.

If some Drawcansir you aspire to draw,
 Present him raving, and above all law:
 If female furies in your scheme are plann'd, 175
 Macbeth's fierce dame is ready to your hand;
 For tears and treachery, for good and evil,
 Constance, King Richard, Hamlet, and the Devil!
 But if a new design you dare essay, 179
 And freely wander from the beaten way,

Fortunarum habitum; iuvat, aut impellit ad iram;

Aut ad humum moerore gravi deducit, et angit;
 Post effert animi motus interprete lingua. 111
 Si dicentes erunt fortunis absona dicta,
 Romani tollent equites, peditesque cachinnum.

Interit multum, Davusne loquatur an heros;
 Maturusne senex, an adhuc florente iuventa
 Fervidus; an matrona potens, an sedula nutrix;
 Mercatorne vagus, cultorne virentis agelli;
 Colchus an Assyrius; Thebis nutritus, an Argis.

Aut famam sequere, aut sibi convenientia fingere, 119

Scriptor. Honoratum si forte reponis Achillem; Impiger, iracundus, inexorabilis, acer,
 Iura neget sibi nata, nihil non arroget armis.
 Sit Medea ferox invictaque; flebilis Ino;
 Perfidus Ixion; Io vaga; tristis Orestes. 124
 Si quid inexpertum scenae committis, et audes
 Personam formare novam: servetur ad imum
 Qualis ab incepto processerit, et sibi constet.

Difficile est proprie communia dicere: tuque
 Rectius Iliacum carmen deducis in actus,

True to your characters, till all be past,
 Preserve consistency from first to last.

'Tis hard to venture where our betters fail,
 Or lend fresh interest to a twice-told tale;
 And yet, perchance, 'tis wiser to prefer
 A hackney'd plot, than choose a new, and err; 186
 Yet copy not too closely, but record,
 More justly, thought for thought than word for word;
 Nor trace your prototype through narrow ways,
 But only follow where he merits praise.

For you, young bard! whom luckless fate may lead 191
 To tremble on the nod of all who read,
 Ere your first score of cantos time unrolls,
 Beware—for God's sake, don't begin like Bowles!

'Awake a louder and a loftier strain,'—
 And pray, what follows from his boiling brain?— 196

He sinks to Southey's level in a trice,
 Whose epic mountains never fail in mice!
 Not so of yore awoke your mighty sire
 The temper'd warblings of his master-lyre; 200

Soft as the gentle breathing of the lute,
 'Of man's first disobedience and the fruit'
 He speaks, but, as his subject swells along,
 Earth, Heaven, and Hades echo with the song.

Still to the midst of things he hastens on,
 As if we witness'd all already done; 206
 Leaves on his path whatever seems too mean

To raise the subject, or adorn the scene;
 Gives, as each page improves upon the sight,

Not smoke from brightness, but from darkness—light; 210

Quam si proferres ignota indictaque primus.

Publica materies privati iuris erit, si 131

Nec circa vilem patulumque moraberis orbem;

Nec verbum verbo curabis reddere fidus

Interpres, nec desilies imitator in arctum

Unde pedem proferre pudor vetet, aut operis lex.

Nec sis incipies, ut scriptor Cyclicus olim: 136

'Fortunam Priami cantabo, et nobile bellum.'

Quid dignum tanto feret hic promissor hiatu?

Parturiunt montes; nascetur ridiculus mus.

Quanto rectius hic, qui nil molitur inepte! 140

'Dic mihi, Musa, virum, captae post tempora

Troiae,

Qui mores hominum multorum vidit, et urbes.'

Non fumum ex fulgore, sed ex fumo dare lucem

Cogitat, ut speciosa dehinc miracula promat,

Antiphaten, Scyllamque, et cum Cyclope Cha-ryb- 145

din.

Nec reditum Diomedis ab interitu Meleagris,

Nec gemino bellum Troianum orditur ab ovo.

Semper ad eventum festinat; et in medias res

Non secus ac notas, auditorem rapit, et quae

Desperat tractata nitescere posse, relinquit: 150

HINTS FROM HORACE

And truth and fiction with such art compounds,
 We know not where to fix their several bounds.
 If you would please the public, deign to hear
 What soothes the many-headed monster's ear:
 If your heart triumph when the hands of all
 Applaud in thunder at the curtain's fall,
 Deserve those plaudits—study nature's page,
 And sketch the striking traits of every age;
 While varying man and varying years unfold
 Life's little tale, so oft, so vainly told; 220
 Observe his simple childhood's dawning days,
 His pranks, his prate, his playmates, and his plays;
 Till time at length the mannish tyro weans,
 And prurient vice outstrips his tardy teens!

Behold him Freshman! forced no more to groan 225
 O'er Virgil's devilish verses and his own;
 Prayers are too tedious, lectures too abstruse,
 He flies from Tavell's frown to 'Fordham's Mews'; (Unlucky Tavell! doom'd to daily cares
 By pugilistic pupils, and by bears,) 230
 Fines, tutors, tasks, conventions threat in vain,
 Before hounds, hunters, and Newmarket plain.
 Rough with his elders, with his equals rash,
 Civil to sharpeners, prodigal of cash;
 Constant to nought—save hazard and a whore, 235
 Yet cursing both—for both have made him sore;
 Unread (unless, since books beguile disease,
 The p—x becomes his passage to degrees);
 Foo'd, pillaged, dunn'd, he wastes his term away,
 And unexpell'd, perhaps, retires M.A.;

Atque ita mentitur, sic veris falsa remiscet,
 Primo ne medium, medio ne discrepet inum.

Tu, quid ego et populus mecum desideret, audi.

Si plausoris eges aulaea manentis, et usque
 Sessuri, donec cantor, Vos plaudite, dicat; 155
 Aetatis cuiusque notandi sunt tibi mores,
 Mobilibusque decor naturis dandus et annis.
 Reddere qui voces iam scit puer, et pede certo
 Signat humum: gestit paribus colludere, et iram
 Colligit ac ponit temere, et mutatur in horas.

Imberbus iuvenis, tandem custode remoto,
 Gaudet equis canibusque, et aprici gramine campi;

Cereus in vitium flecti, monitoribus asper,
 Utillum tardus provisor, prodigus aeris,

Master of arts! as hells and clubs proclaim, 241
 Where scarce a blackleg bears a brighter name!

Launch'd into life, extinct his early fire,
 He apes the selfish prudence of his sire;
 Marries for money, chooses friends for rank, 245
 Buys land, and shrewdly trusts not to the Bank;
 Sits in the Senate; gets a son and heir;
 Sends him to Harrow, for himself was there.
 Mute, though he votes, unless when call'd to cheer,
 His son's so sharp—he'll see the dog a peer! 250

Manhood declines—age palsies every limb;
 He quits the scene—or else the scene quits him;
 Scrapes wealth, o'er each departing penny grieves,
 And avarice seizes all ambition leaves;
 Counts cent. per cent., and smiles, or vainly frets, 255
 O'er hoards diminish'd by young Hopeful's debts;
 Weighs well and wisely what to sell or buy,
 Complete in all life's lessons—but to die;
 Peevish and spiteful, doting, hard to please,
 Commending every time, save times like these; 260
 Crazed, querulous, forsaken, half forgot,
 Expires unwept—is buried—let him rot!

But from the Drama let me not digress,
 Nor spare my precepts, though they please you less.
 Though woman weep, and hardest hearts are stirr'd, 265
 When what is done is rather seen than heard,
 Yet many deeds preserved in history's page
 Are better told than acted on the stage;

Sublimis, cupidusque, et amata relinquere pernix. 165

Conversis studiis, aetas animusque virilis
 Quaerit opes et amicitias, inservit honori;
 Commisisse cavet quod mox mutare labore.

Multa senem circumveniunt incommoda; vel quod 169

Quaerit, et inventis miser abstinet, ac timet uti;
 Vel quod res omnes timide gelideque ministrat,
 Dilator, spe longus, iners, avidusque futuri,
 Difficilis, querulus, laudator temporis acti

Se puero, castigator censorque minorum. 174
 Multa ferunt anni venientes commoda secum, Multa recedentes adimunt. Ne forte seniles Mandentur iuveni partes, pueroque viriles,
 Semper in adiunctis, aevoque morabimur aptis.

The ear sustains what shocks the timid eye,
And horror thus subsides to sympathy.
True Briton all beside, I here am French—
Bloodshed 'tis surely better to retrench;
The gladiatorial gore we teach to flow
In tragic scene disgusts, though but in
show;

We hate the carnage while we see the
trick, 275

And find small sympathy in being sick.
Not on the stage the regicide Macbeth
Appeals an audience with a monarch's death;
To gaze when sable Hubert threatens to sear Young Arthur's eyes, can ours or nature
bear? 280

A halter'd heroine Johnson sought to slay—
We saved Irene, but half damn'd the play,
And (Heaven be praised!) our tolerating
times

Stint metamorphoses to pantomimes;
And Lewis' self, with all his sprites, would
quake 285

To change Earl Osmond's negro to a snake!
Because, in scenes exciting joy or grief,
We loathe the action which exceeds belief:
And yet, God knows! what may not authors do,

Whose postscripts prate of dyeing
'heroines blue?' 290

Above all things, Dan Poet, if you can,
Eke out your acts, I pray, with mortal man,
Nor call a ghost, unless some cursed scrape
Must open ten trap-doors for your escape.
Of all the monstrous things I'd fain forbid, 295

I loathe an opera worse than Dennis did;
Where good and evil persons, right or
wrong,

Rage, love, and aught but moralise, in
song.

Hail, last memorial of our foreign friends,
Which Gaul allows, and still Hesperia lends! 300

Napoleon's edicts no embargo lay
On whores, spies, singers, wisely shipp'd
away.

Our giant capital, whose squares are
spread

Where rustics earn'd, and now may beg,
their bread,

In all iniquity is grown so nice, 305
It scorns amusements which are not of price.

Aut agitur res in scenis, aut acta refertur.
Segnius irritant animos demissa per aures 180
Quam quae sunt oculis subiecta fidelibus, et quae
Ipse sibi tradit spectator. Non tamen intus Digna geri promes in scenam; multaque tolles
Ex oculis, quae mox narret facundia praesens.
Ne pueros coram populo Medea trucidet; 185
Aut humana palam coquat exta nefarius Atræus;
Aut in avem Progne vertatur, Cadmus in anguem.
Quodcunque ostendis mihi sic, incredulus odi.

Hence the pert shopkeeper, whose throbbing ear

Aches with orchestras which he pays to
hear,

Whom shame, not sympathy, forbids to
snore,

His anguish doubling by his own 'encore'; Squeezed in 'Fop's Alley,' jostled by the beaux, 311

Teased with his hat, and trembling for his toes;

Scarce wrestles through the night, nor tastes of ease,

Till the dropp'd curtain gives a glad release:
Why this, and more, he suffers—can ye
guess?— 315

Because it costs him dear, and makes him
dress!

So prosper eunuchs from Etruscan
schools;

Give us but fiddlers, and they're sure of fools!

Ere scenes were play'd by many a reverend clerk,

(What harm, if David danced before the ark?) 320

In Christmas revels, simple country folks Were pleased with morrice-mumm'ry and coarse jokes.

Improving years, with things no longer
known,

Produced blithe Punch and merry Madame Joan, 324

Who still frisk on with feats so lewdly low,
'Tis strange Benvolio suffers such a show;
Suppressing peer! to whom each vice gives
place,

Oaths, boxing, begging,—all, save rout and race.

Farce follow'd Comedy, and reach'd her prime,

In ever-laughing Foote's fantastic time:
Mad wag! who pardon'd none, nor spared
the best, 331

And turn'd some very serious things to jest.
Nor church nor state escaped his public
sneers,

Arms nor the gown, priests, lawyers, volunteers:

'Alas, poor Yorick!' now for ever mute!
Whoever loves a laugh must sigh for Foote. 336

Neve minor, neu sit quinto production actu
Fabula, quae posci vult, et spectata reponi. 190
Nec deus intersit, nisi dignus vindice nodus Inciderit,
Ex noto fictum carmen sequar, ut sibi
quavis 240
Speret idem: sudet multum frustra laboret
Ausus idem: tantum series iuncturae pollet;
Tantum de medio sumtis accedit honoris.
Silvis deducti caveant, me iudice, Fauni,

HINTS FROM HORACE

We smile, perforce, when histrionic
scenes
Ape the swoln dialogue of kings and queens,
When 'Chrononhotonthologos must die,'
And Arthur struts in mimic majesty.

Moschus! with whom once more I hope to sit, 341
And smile at folly, if we can't at wit;
Yes, friend! for thee I'll quit my cynic cell,
And bear Swift's motto, 'Vive la bagatelle!'
Which charm'd our days in each Aegean
clime, 345
As oft at home, with revelry and rhyme,
Then may Euphrosyne, who sped the past, Soothe thy life's scenes, nor leave thee in
the last;
But find in thine, like pagan Plato's bed,
Some merry manuscript of mimes, when
dead. 350

Now to the Drama let us bend our eyes, Where fetter'd by whig Walpole low she
lies;
Corruption foil'd her, for she fear'd her
glance;
Decorum left her for an opera dance!
Yet Chesterfield, whose polished pen inveighs 355
'Gainst laughter, fought for freedom to
our plays;
Uncheck'd by megrims of patrician brains,
And damning dulness of lord chamberlains.
Repeat that act! again let Humour roam
Wild o'er the stage—we've time for tears at home. 360
Let 'Archer' plant the horns on 'Sullen's'
brows,
And 'Estifania' gull her 'Copper' spouse;
The moral's scant—but that may be excused,
Men go not to be lectured, but amused.
He whom our plays dispose to good or ill
Must wear a head in want of Willis' skill;
Ay, but Macheath's example—psa!—no
more! 367
It form'd no thieves—the thief was form'd
before;
And, spite of puritans and Collier's curse, Plays make mankind no better, and no
worse. 370
Then spare our stage, ye methodistic men,
Nor burn damn'd Drury if it rise again.

Ne, velut innati triviis, ac pene forenses, 245
Aut nimum teneris iuvenentur versibus unquam,
Aut immunda crepent, ignominiosaque dicta.
Offenduntur enim, quibus est equus, et pater, et res:
Nec, si quid fricti ciceris probat et nucus emtor,
Aequis accipiunt animis, donantve corona.
Syllaba longa brevi subiecta vocatur iambus,
Pes citus: unde etiam trimetris accrescere iussit

But why to brain-scorch'd bigots thus appeal?
Can heavenly mercy dwell with earthly zeal? 374
For times of fire and faggot let them hope!
Times dear alike to puritan or pope.
As pious Calvin saw Servetus blaze,
So would new sects on newer victims gaze.
E'en now the songs of Solyma begin; 379
Faith cants, perplex'd apologist of sin!
While the Lord's servant chastens whom he loves,
And Simeon kicks, where Baxter only
'shoves.'

Whom nature guides, so writes, that every dunce,
Enraptured, thinks to do the same at once;
But after inky thumbs and bitten nails,
And twenty scatter'd quires, the coxcomb fails. 386

Let Pastoral be dumb; for who can hope
To match the youthful eclogues of our Pope?
Yet his and Phillips' faults, of different
kind, 389
For art too rude, for nature too refined,
Instruct how hard the medium 'tis to hit
'Twixt too much polish and too coarse a
wit.

A vulgar scribbler, certes, stands disgraced
In this nice age, when all aspire to taste;
The dirty language, and the noisome jest,
Which pleased in Swift of yore, we now
detest; 396
Proscribed not only in the world polite,
But even too nasty for a city knight!

Peace to Swift's faults! his wit hath made them pass,
Unmatch'd by all, save matchless Hudibras! 400
Whose author is perhaps the first we meet,
Who from our couplet lopp'd two final
feet;
Nor less in merit than the longer line,
This measure moves a favourite of the Nine.
Though at first view eight feet may seem
in vain 405
Form'd, save in ode, to bear a serious
strain,

Nomen iambeis, cum senos redderet ictus,
Primus ad extremum similis sibi: non ita pridem,
Tardior ut paulo graviorque veniret ad aures,
Spondeos stabiles in iura paterna recepit 256
Commodus et patiens; non ut de sede secunda
Cederet aut quarta socialiter. Hic et in Acci Nobilibus trimetris apparet rarus, et Enni.
In scenam missos magno cum pondere versus,
Aut operae celeris nimium, curaque carentis,
Aut ignoratae premit artis crimine turpi. 262

Yet Scott has shown our wondering isle of late
This measure shrinks not from a theme of weight,
And, varied skilfully, surpasses far 409
Heroic rhyme, but most in love and war,
Whose fluctuations, tender or sublime,
Are curb'd too much by long-recurring rhyme.

But many a skilful judge abhors to see,
What few admire—irregularity.
This some vouchsafe to pardon; but 'tis hard 415
When such a word contents a British bard.

And must the bard his glowing thoughts confine,
Lest censure hover o'er some faulty line?
Remove whate'er a critic may suspect,
To gain the paltry suffrage of 'correct'?
Or prune the spirit of each daring phrase,
To fly from error, not to merit praise?

Ye, who seek finish'd models, never cease,
By day and night, to read the works of Greece.
But our good fathers never bent their brains 425
To heathen Greek, content with native strains.

The few who read a page, or used a pen,
Were satisfied with Chaucer and old Ben;
The jokes and numbers suited to their taste
Were quaint and careless, anything but chaste; 430
Yet whether right or wrong the ancient rules,

It will not do to call our fathers fools!
Though you and I, who eruditely know
To separate the elegant and low, 434
Can also, when a hobbling line appears,
Detect with fingers, in default of ears.

In sooth I do not know, or greatly care
To learn, who our first English strollers were;

Or if, till roofs received the vagrant art,
Our Muse, like that of Thespis, kept a cart; 440
But this is certain, since our Shakspeare's days,
There's pomp enough, if little else, in plays;
Nor will Melpomene ascend her throne
Without high heels, white plume, and Bristol stone.

Old comedies still meet with much applause, 445
Though too licentious for dramatic laws;
At least, we moderns, wisely, 'tis confest,
Curtail, or silence, the lascivious jest.

Whate'er their follies, and their faults beside,
Our enterprising bards pass nought untold; 450
Nor do they merit slight applause who choose
An English subject for an English muse,
And leave to minds which never dare invent
French flippancy and German sentiment.
Where is that living language which could claim 455
Poetic more, as philosophic, fame,
If all our bards, more patient of delay,
Would stop, like Pope, to polish by the way?

Lords of the quill, whose critical assaults
O'erthrow whole quartos with their quires of faults, 460
Who soon detect, and mark where'er we fail,
And prove our marble with too nice a nail!
Democritus himself was not so bad;
He only thought, but you would make, us mad!

But truth to say, most rhymers rarely guard 465
Against that ridicule they deem so hard;
In person negligent, they wear, from sloth,
Beards of a week, and nails of annual growth;

Aeschylus, et modicis instravit pulpita tignis,
Et docuit magnumque loqui, nitique cothurno.
Successit vetus his comedia, non sine multa
Laude; sed in vitium libertas excidit, et vim
Dignam lege regi; lex est accepta; chorusque
Turpiter obtulit, sublato iure nocendi.

Nil intentatum nostri liquere poetæ; 285
Nec minimum meruer decus, vestigia Graeca
Ausi deserere, et celebrare domestica facta;
Vel qui praetextas, vel qui docuere togatas.
Nec virtute foret clarisve potentius armis,
Quam lingua, Latium, si non offenderet unumquemque poetarum limae labor, et mora. Vos, o Pompilius sanguis, carmen reprehendite, quod non 292
Multa dies et multa litura coercuit, atque
Praeseptum decies non castigavit ad unguem.

Non quivis videt immodulata poemata iudex;
Et dicit Romanis venia est indigna poetis.
Idcircone vager, scribamque licenter? an omnes
Visuiros peccata putem mea; tutus, et intra Spem veniae cautus? vitavi denique culpam,
Non laudem merui. Vos exemplaria Graeca
Nocturna versate manu, versate diurna.
At vestri proavi Plautinos et numeros et 270
Laudavere sales; nimium patienter utrumque,
Ne dicam stulte, mirati; si modo ego et vos
Scimus inurbanum lepido seponere dicto,
Legitimumque sonum digitis callemus et aure.
Ignotum tragicæ genus invenisse Camoena
Dicitur, et plaustris vexisse poemata Thespis,
Quæ canerent agerentque peruncti faecibus ora. 277
Post hunc personæ pallæque repertor honestæ

HINTS FROM HORACE

Reside in garrets, fly from those they
meet,
And walk in alleys, rather than the street.

With little rhyme, less reason, if you
please,
The name of poet may be got with ease,
So that not tuns of helleboric juice
Shall ever turn your head to any use;
Write but like Wordsworth, live beside a Lake,
And keep your bushy locks a year from Blake;
Then print your book, once more return
to town,
And boys shall hunt your bardship up and
down.

Am I not wise, if such some poets' plight,
To purge in spring—like Bayes—before
I write?
If this precaution soften'd not my bile,
I know no scribbler with a madder style;
But since (perhaps my feelings are too nice)
I cannot purchase fame at such a price,
I'll labour gratis as a grinder's wheel,
And, blunt myself, give edge to others'
steel,
Nor write at all, unless to teach the art
To those rehearsing for the poet's part;
From Horace show the pleasing paths of
song,
And from my own example—what is
wrong.

Though modern practice sometimes differs quite,
'Tis just as well to think before you write;
Let every book that suits your theme be
read,
So shall you trace it to the fountain-head.

He who has learn'd the duty which he owes

Ingenium misera quia fortunatius arte
Credit, et excludit sanos Helicone poetas Democritus; bona pars non unguis ponere
curat,
Non barbam; secreta petit loca, balnea vitat.
Nanciscetur enim pretium nomenque poetae,
Si tribus Anticyris caput insanabile nunquam
Tonsori Licino commiserit. O ego laevis, 301
Qui purgor bilem sub verni temporis horam!
Non alius faceret meliora poemata: verum
Nil tanti est: ergo fungar vice cotis, acutum
Reddere quae ferrum valet, exsors ipsa secandi:
Munus et officium, nil scribens ipse, docebo;
Unde parentur opes; quid alat formetque
poetam;
Quid deceat, quid non; quo virtus, quo ferat error.
Scribendi recte sapere est et principium et fons.
Rem tibi Socraticae poterunt ostendere chartae:
Verbaque provisam rem non invita sequentur:
Qui didicit patriae quid debeat, et quid amicis;

To friends and country, and to pardon foes;
Who models his deportment as may best
Accord with brother, sire, or stranger guest;
Who takes our laws and worship as they are,
Nor roars reform for senate, church, and bar;
In practice, rather than loud precept, wise,
Bids not his tongue, but heart, philosophise:
Such is the man the poet should rehearse,
As joint exemplar of his life and verse.

Sometimes a sprightly wit, and tale well
told,
Without much grace, or weight, or art,
will hold
A longer empire o'er the public mind
Than sounding trifles, empty, though refined.

Unhappy Greece! thy sons of ancient
days
The muse may celebrate with perfect
praise,
Whose generous children narrow'd not their hearts
With commerce, given alone to arms and arts.
Our boys (save those whom public schools compel
To 'long and short' before they're taught to spell)
From frugal fathers soon imbibe by rote,
'A penny saved, my lad, 's a penny got.'
Babe of a city birth! from sixpence take
The third, how much will the remainder
make?—
'A groat.'—'Ah, bravo! Dick hath done
the sum!
He'll swell my fifty thousand to a plum.'

They whose young souls receive this rust betimes,
'Tis clear, are fit for anything but rhymes;

Quo sic amore parens, quo frater amandus, et hospes;
Quod sit conscripti, quod iudicis officium; quae
Partes in bellum missi ducis; ille profecto
Reddere personae scit convenientia cuique.
Respicere exemplar vitae morumque iubebo
Doctum imitatore, et vivas hinc ducere voces.
Interdum speciosa locis morataque recte
Fabula, nullius veneris, sine pondere et arte,
Valdius oblectat populum, meliusque moratur,
Quam versus inopes rerum, nugaeque canorae.
Grais ingenium, Grahis dedit ore rotundo
Musa loqui, praeter laudem nullius avaris.
Romani pueri longis rationibus assem
Discunt in partes centum deducere: dicat
Filius Albini, Si de quincunce remota est
Uncia, quid superat? poteras dixisse—Triens. En!

And Locke will tell you, that the father's right
Who hides all verses from his children's
sight; 524
For poets (says this sage, and many more,)
Make sad mechanics with their lyric lore;
And Delphi now, however rich of old,
Discovers little silver, and less gold,
Because Parnassus, though a mount divine,
Is poor as Irus, or an Irish mine. 530

Two objects always should the poet
move,
Or one or both,—to please or to improve.
Whate'er you teach, be brief, if you design
For our remembrance your didactic line;
Redundance places memory on the rack,
For brains may be o'erloaded, like the
back. 536

Fiction does best when taught to look like truth,
And fairy fables bubble none but youth:
Expect no credit for too wondrous tales, Since Jonas only springs alive from whales! 540

Young men with aught but elegance dispense;
Maturer years require a little sense.
To end at once:—that bard for all is fit
Who mingles well instruction with his wit;
For him reviews shall smile, for him o'er-
flow 545
The patronage of Paternoster-row;
His book, with Longman's liberal aid, shall pass
(Who ne'er despises books that bring him brass);
Through three long weeks the taste of London lead,
And cross St. George's Channel and the Tweed. 550

Posse linenda cedro, et levi servanda cupresso?
Aut prodesset volunt, aut delectare poetæ;
Aut simul et iucunda et idonea dicere vitæ. 334
Quidquid præcipies, esto brevis: ut cito dicta
Percipiant animi dociles, teneantque fideles.
Omne supervacuum pleno de pectore manat.
Ficta voluptatis causa sint proxima veris:
Nec, quodcunque volet, poscat sibi fabula credi:
Neu prorsus Lamiæ vivum puerum extrahat alvo. 340

Centuriæ seniorum agitant expertia frugis:
Celsi prætereunt austerâ poemata Rhamnes.
Omne tulit punctum, qui miscuit utile dulci:
Lectorem delectando pariterque monendo. 344
Hic meret æra liber Sostiis; hic et mare transit,
Et longum noto scriptori prorogat ævum.

Sunt delicta tamen, quibus ignovisse velimus:
Nam neque chorda sonum reddit quem vult manus et mens,
Poscentique gravem persæpe remittit acutum;
Nec semper feriet quodcunque minabitur arcus.

But everything has faults, nor is 't un-
known
That harps and fiddles often lose their tone,
And wayward voices, at their owner's call,
With all his best endeavours, only squall;
Dogs blink their covey, flints withhold the spark, 555
And double-barrels (damn them!) miss their mark.

Where frequent beauties strike the reader's view,
We must not quarrel for a blot or two;
But pardon equally to books or men,
The slips of human nature, and the pen.

Yet if an author, spite of foe or friend,
Despises all advice too much to mend,
But ever twangs the same discordant string,
Give him no quarter, howsoe'er he sing.
Let Havard's fate o'ertake him, who, for
once, 565
Produced a play too dashing for a dunce:
At first none deem'd it his; but when his
name
Announced the fact—what then?—it lost its fame.
Though all deplore when Milton deigns to doze,
In a long work 'tis fair to steal repose.

As pictures, so shall poems be; some
stand 571
The critic eye, and please when near at
hand;
But others at a distance strike the sight;
This seeks the shade, but that demands
the light,
Nor dreads the connoisseur's fastidious
view, 575
But, ten times scrutinised, is ten times new.

Parnassian pilgrims! ye whom chance or choice
Hath led to listen to the Muse's voice,

Verum ubi plura nitent in carmine, non ego paucis 351
Offendar maculis, quas aut incuria fudit,
Aut humana parum cavit natura. Quid ergo est?
Ut scriptor si peccat idem librarius usque,
Quamvis est monitus, venia caret; ut citharoedus
Ridetur, chorda qui semper oberrat eadem:
Sic mihi, qui multum cessat, fit Choerilus ille,
Quem bis terve bonum cum risu miror; et idem
Indignor, quandoque bonus dormitat Homerus.
Verum operi longo fas est obrepere somnum.

Ut pictura, poësis: erit quæ, si propius stes,
Te capiat magis; et quædam, si longius abstes:
Hæc amat obscurum; volet hæc sub luce videri,
Iudicis argutum quæ non formidat acumen:
Hæc placuit semel; hæc decies repetita placebit.

O maior juvenum, quamvis et voce paterna Fingeris ad rectum, et per te sapis, hoc tibi dictum 367
Tolle memor; certis medium et tolerabile rebus
Recte concedi: consultus iuris, et actor

HINTS FROM HORACE

Receive this counsel, and be timely wise;
Few reach the summit which before you
lies. 580

Our church and state, our courts and camps, concede

Reward to very moderate heads indeed!
In these plain common sense will travel
far;

All are not Erskines who mislead the bar:
But poesy between the best and worst No medium knows; you must be last or
first; 586

For middling poets' miserable volumes Are damn'd alike by gods, and men, and columns.

Again, my Jeffrey!—as that sound inspires, 589

How wakes my bosom to its wonted fires!
Fires, such as gentle Caledonians feel When Southrons writhe upon their critic wheel,

Or mild Eclectics, when some, worse than Turks,

Would rob poor Faith to decorate 'good works.'

Such are the genial feelings thou canst
claim— 595

My falcon flies not at ignoble game.
Mightiest of all Dunedin's beasts of chase!
For thee my Pegasus would mend his pace.
Arise, my Jeffrey! or my inkless pen 599
Shall never blunt its edge on meaner men;
Till thee or thine mine evil eye discerns,
Alas! 'I cannot strike at wretched kernes.'
Inhuman Saxon! wilt thou then resign
A muse and heart by choice so wholly
thine?

Dear d——d contemner of my schoolboy songs, 605

Hast thou no vengeance for my man-hood's wrongs?

If unprovoked thou once could bid me
bleed,

Hast thou no weapon for my daring deed?
What! not a word!—and am I then so low?
Wilt thou forbear, who never spared a
foe? 610

Hast thou no wrath, or wish to give it vent?
No wit for nobles, dunces by descent?
No jest on 'minors,' quibbles on a name,
Nor one facetious paragraph of blame?

Causarum mediocris abest virtute disertis 370

Messalae, nec scit quantum Cascellius Aulus:

Sed tamen in pretio est: mediocribus esse poetis

Non homines, non di, non concessere columnae.

Ut gratas inter mensas symphonia discors,

Et crassum unguentum, et Sardo cum melle

papaver 375

Offendunt, poterat duci quia coena sine istis;

Sic animis natum inventumque poema iuvandis,

Si paulum a summo decessit, vergit ad imum.

Ludere qui nescit, campestribus abstinet

armis,

Is it for this on Ilion I have stood, 615
And thought of Homer less than Holy-hood!

On shore of Euxine or Aegean sea,
My hate, untravell'd, fondly turn'd to thee.

Ah! let me cease: in vain my bosom burns,
From Corydon unkind Alexis turns: 620

Thy rhymes are vain; thy Jeffrey then
forego,

Nor woo that anger which he will not
show.

What then?—Edina starves some lanker
son,

To write an article thou canst not shun;
Some less fastidious Scotchman shall be
found, 625

As bold in Billingsgate, though less re-nown'd.

As if at table some discordant dish Should shock our optics, such as frogs for fish;

As oil in lieu of butter men decry, 629
And poppies please not in a modern pie;

If all such mixtures then be half a crime,
We must have excellence to relish rhyme.

Mere roast and boil'd no epicure invites;
Thus poetry disgusts, or else delights.

Who shoot not flying rarely touch a gun: 635

Will he who swims not to the river run?
And men unpractised in exchanging knocks

Must go to Jackson ere they dare to box.
Whate'er the weapon, cudgel, fist, or foil,

None reach expertness without years of
toil; 640

But fifty dunces can, with perfect ease, Tag twenty thousand couplets, when they
please.

Why not?—shall I, thus qualified to sit
For rotten boroughs, never show my wit?

Shall I, whose fathers with the quorum
sate, 645

And lived in freedom on a fair estate;
Who left me heir, with stables, kennels,

packs,
To all their income, and to—twice its tax;

Whose form and pedigree have scarce a fault,

Shall I, I say, suppress my Attic salt? 650

Indoctusque pilae, discive, trochive, quiescit,
Ne spissae risum tollant impune coronae: 381

Qui nescit, versus tamen audet fingere!—Quidni?

Liber et ingenuus praesertim census equestrem Summam nummorum, vitioque remotus ab omni.

Tu nihil invita dices faciesve Minerva: 385

Id tibi iudicium est, ea mens: si quid tamen olim

Scripseris, in Metii descendat iudicis aures,

Et patris, et nostras, numumque prematur in annum,

Thus think 'the mob of gentlemen;' but
 you, 651
 Besides all this, must have some genius
 too.
 Be this your sober judgment, and a rule,
 And print not piping hot from Southey's
 school,
 Who (ere another Thalaba appears) 655
 I trust will spare us for at least nine
 years.
 And hark 'ye, Southey! pray—but don't be vex'd—
 Burn all your last three works—and half the next.
 But why this vain advice? once published,
 books
 Can never be recall'd—from pastry-cooks! 660
 Though 'Madoc,' with 'Pucelle,' instead of punk,
 May travel back to Quito—on a trunk!

Orpheus, we learn from Ovid and Lem-priere,
 Led all wild beasts but women by the
 ear;
 And had he fiddled at the present hour,
 We'd seen the lions waltzing in the Tower; 666
 And old Amphion, such were minstrels
 then,
 Had built St. Paul's without the aid of Wren.
 Verse too was justice, and the bards of
 Greece
 Did more than constables to keep the
 peace; 670
 Abolish'd cuckoldom with much ap-
 plause,
 Call'd county meetings, and enforced the
 laws,
 Cut down crown influence with reforming scythes,
 And served the church—without demanding tithes;
 And hence, throughout all Hellas and the East, 675
 Each poet was a prophet and a priest, Whose old-establish'd board of joint controls
 Included kingdoms in the cure of souls.

Next rose the martial Homer, Epic's
 prince,
 And fighting's been in fashion ever since;
 And old Tyrtæus, when the Spartans warr'd, 681
 (A limping leader, but a lofty bard,)
 Though wall'd Ithome had resisted long,
 Reduced the fortress by the force of song.

When oracles prevail'd, in times of old,
 In song alone Apollo's will was told.
 Then if your verse is what all verse should
 be,
 And gods were not ashamed on't, why should we?

The Muse, like mortal females, may be
 woo'd; 689
 In turns she'll seem a Paphian, or a prude;
 Fierce as a bride when first she feels af-
 fright,
 Mild as the same upon the second night;
 Wild as the wife of alderman or peer,
 Now for his grace, and now a grenadier!
 Her eyes beseem, her heart belies, her zone, 695
 Ice in a crowd, and lava when alone.

If verse be studied with some show of
 art,
 Kind Nature always will perform her part;
 Though without genius, and a native vein
 Of wit, we loathe an artificial strain, 700
 Yet art and nature join'd will win the prize,
 Unless they act like us and our allies.

The youth who trains to ride, or run a
 race,
 Must bear privations with unruffled face,
 Be call'd to labour when he thinks to dine, 705
 And, harder still, leave wenching and his
 wine.
 Ladies who sing, at least who sing at sight,
 Have follow'd music through her farthest
 flight;
 But rhymers tell you neither more nor less,
 'I've got a pretty poem for the press';
 And that's enough; then write and print so
 fast;— 711
 If Satan take the hindmost, who'd be last?

HINTS FROM HORACE

They storm the types, they publish, one
and all,
They leap the counter, and they leave the stall.
Provincial maidens, men of high command, 715
Yea, baronets have ink'd the bloody hand!
Cash cannot quell them; Pollio play'd this prank,
(Then Phœbus first found credit in a bank!)
Not all the living only, but the dead,
Fool on, as fluent as an Orpheus' head;
Damn'd all their days, they posthumously thrive, 721
Dug up from dust, though buried when alive!
Reviews record this epidemic crime,
Those Books of Martyrs to the rage for
rhyme, 724
Alas! woe worth the scribbler! often seen
In Morning Post or Monthly Magazine.
There lurk his earlier lays; but soon, hot
press'd,
Behold a quarto!—Tarts must tell the rest.
Then leave, ye wise, the lyre's precarious chords 729
To muse-mad baronets, or madder lords, Or country Crispins, now grown somewhat stale,
Twin Doric minstrels, drunk with Doric
ale!
Hark to those notes, narcotically soft!
The cobbler-laureats sing to Capel Lofft!
Till, lo! that modern Midas, as he hears,
Adds an ell growth to his egregious ears!
There lives one druid, who prepares in
time 737
'Gainst future feuds his poor revenge of
rhyme;
Racks his dull memory, and his duller
muse,
To publish faults which friendship should excuse. 740
If friendship's nothing, self-regard might teach
More polish'd usage of his parts of speech.
But what is shame, or what is aught to
him?
He vents his spleen, or gratifies his whim.
Some fancied slight has roused his lurking hate, 745
Some folly cross'd, some jest, or some debate;
Up to his den Sir Scribbler hies, and soon
The gather'd gall is voided in lampoon.

Occupet extremum scabies; mihi turpe relinqui
est, 407

Et, quod non didici, sane nescire fateri.

— Si carmina condes, 436

Nunquam te fallant animi sub vulpe latentes.
Quintilio si quid recitares, Corrige, sodes,
Hoc (aiebat) et hoc: melius te posse negares,
Bis terque expertum frustra, delere iubebat,

Perhaps at some pert speech you've dared to frown,
Perhaps your poem may have pleased the town: 750
If so, alas! 'tis nature in the man—
May Heaven forgive you, for he never can!
Then be it so; and may his withering bays Bloom fresh in satire, though they fade in
praise!
While his lost songs no more shall steep and stink, 755
The dullest, fattest weeds on Lethe's brink,
But springing upwards from the sluggish
mould,
Be (what they never were before) be—sold!
Should some rich bard (but such a monster now, 759
In modern physics, we can scarce allow),
Should some pretending scribbler of the court,
Some rhyming peer—there's plenty of the sort—
All but one poor dependent priest withdrawn,
(Ah! too regardless of his chaplain's yawn!) 764
Condemn the unlucky curate to recite
Their last dramatic work by candle-light,
How would the preacher turn each rueful
leaf,
Dull as his sermons, but not half so brief!
Yet, since 'tis promised at the rector's
death,
He'll risk no living for a little breath.
Then spouts and foams, and cries at every
line, 771
(The Lord forgive him!) 'Bravo! grand!
divine!'
Hoarse with those praises (which, by flatt'ry fed, Dependence barter for her bitter bread),
He strides and stamps along with creaking boot; 775
Till the floor echoes his emphatic foot,
Then sits again, then rolls his pious eye,
As when the dying vicar will not die!
Nor feels, forsooth, emotion at his
heart;— 779
But all dissemblers overact their part.
Ye, who aspire to 'build the lofty rhyme,'
Believe not all who laud your false 'sub-
lime!'
But if some friend shall hear your work,
and say,
'Expunge that stanza, lop that line away,'

Et male tornatos incudi reddere versus. 441
Si defendere delictum quam vertere malles, Nullum ultra verbum, aut operam insumebat
inanem,

Quin sine rivali teque et tua solus amares.
Vir bonus et prudens versus reprehendit inertes; 445
Culpabit duos; incompitis allinet atrum
Transverso calamo signum; ambitiosa recidet

And, after fruitless efforts, you return
 Without amendment, and he answers,
 'Burn!' 786
 That instant throw your paper in the fire,
 Ask not his thoughts, or follow his desire;
 But if (true bard!) you scorn to con-
 descend,
 And will not alter what you can't defend,
 If you will breed this bastard of your brains, 791
 We'll have no words—I've only lost my pains.

Yet, if you only prize your favourite
 thought,
 As critics kindly do, and authors ought;
 If your cool friend annoy you now and
 then, 795
 And cross whole pages with his plaguy
 pen;
 No matter, throw your ornaments aside,—
 Better let him than all the world deride.
 Give light to passages too much in shade,
 Nor let a doubt obscure one verse you've
 made; 800
 Your friend's a 'Johnson,' not to leave
 one word,
 However trifling, which may seem absurd;
 Such erring trifles lead to serious ills,
 And furnish food for critics, or their quills.

As the Scotch fiddle, with its touching tune, 805
 Or the sad influence of the angry moon,
 All men avoid bad writers' ready tongues,
 As yawning waiters fly Fitzscribble's lungs;
 Yet on he mouths—ten minutes—tedious
 each 809
 As prelate's homily, or placeman's speech;
 Long as the last years of a lingering lease,
 When riot pauses until rents increase,
 While such a minstrel, muttering fustian, strays
 O'er hedge and ditch, through unfrequented ways,

Ornamenta; parum claris lucem dare coget;
 Arguet ambigue dictum; mutanda notabit;
 Fiet Aristarchus; nec dicet, Cur ego amicum
 Offendam in nugis? hae nugae seria ducent
 In mala derisum semel exceptumque sinistre.
 Ut mala quem scabies aut morbus regius
 urget,
 Aut fanaticus error et iracunda Diana, 454
 Vesanus tetigisse timent fugiuntque poetam,
 Qui sapiunt; agitant pueri, incautique sequuntur.
 Hic, dum sublimis versus ructatur, et errat,
 Si veluti merulis intentus decidit auceps
 In puteum, foveamve; licet, Succurrite, longum
 Clamet, Io cives! non sit qui tollere curet. 460
 Si quis curet opem ferre, et demittere funem,
 Qui scis an prudens huc se deiecerit, atque

If by some chance he walks into a well,
 And shouts for succour with stentorian
 yell, 816
 'A rope! help, Christians, as ye hope for
 grace!'
 Nor woman, man, nor child will stir a pace;
 For there his carcass he might freely fling,
 From frenzy, or the humour of the thing.
 Though this has happen'd to more bards than one; 821
 I'll tell you Budgell's story,—and have
 done.

Budgell, a rogue and rhymester, for no
 good,
 (Unless his case be much misunderstood,) 825
 When teased with creditors' continual claims,
 'To die like Cato,' leapt into the Thames!
 And therefore be it lawful through the town
 For any bard to poison, hang, or drown.
 Who saves the intended suicide receives Small thanks from him who loathes the life he leaves; 830
 And, sooth to say, mad poets must not lose
 The glory of that death they freely choose.

Nor is it certain that some sorts of verse
 Prick not the poet's conscience as a curse; Dosed with vile drams on Sunday he was
 found, 835
 Or got a child on consecrated ground!
 And hence is haunted with a rhyming
 rage—
 Fear'd like a bear just bursting from his cage.
 If free, all fly his versifying fit,
 Fatal at once to simpleton or wit: 840
 But him, unhappy! whom he seizes,—him
 He flays with recitation limb by limb;
 Probes to the quick where'er he makes his breach,
 And gorges like a lawyer—or a leech.

Servari nolit? dicam: Siculique poetæ
 Narrabo interitum. Deus immortalis haberi Dum cupit Empedocles, ardentem frigidus Aetnam 465
 Insiluit. Sit ius liceatque perire poetis:
 Invitum qui servat, idem facit occidenti.
 Nec semel hoc fecit; nec, si retractus erit,
 iam
 Fiet homo, et ponet famosæ mortis amorem.
 Nec satis apparet cur versus facitet; utrum
 Minxerit in patrios cineres, an triste bidental
 Moverit incestus: certe furit, ac velut ursus,
 Obiectos caveae valuit si frangere clathros, 473
 Indoctum doctumque fugat recitator acerbus.
 Quem vero arripuit, tenet, occiditque legendo,
 Non missura cutem, nisi plena cruoris, hirudo.

THE CURSE OF MINERVA

—'Pallas te hoc vulnere, Pallas
Immolat, et poenam scelerato ex sanguine sumit.'
Aeneid, lib. xii.

ATHENS: CAPUCHIN CONVENT,
March 17, 1811.

SLOW sinks, more lovely ere his race be
run,
Along Morea's hills the setting sun;
Not, as in northern climes, obscurely
bright,
But one unclouded blaze of living light;
O'er the hush'd deep the yellow beam he
throws, 5
Gilds the green wave that trembles as it
glows;
On old Aegina's rock and Hydra's isle
The god of gladness sheds his parting smile;
O'er his own regions lingering loves to
shine,
Though there his altars are no more divine. 10
Descending fast, the mountain-shadows
kiss
Thy glorious gulf, unconquer'd Salamis!
Their azure arches through the long ex-
panse,
More deeply purpled, meet his mellowing
glance,
And tenderest tints, along their summits
driven, 15
Mark his gay course, and own the hues of
heaven;
Till, darkly shaded from the land and
deep,
Behind his Delphian rock he sinks to
sleep.

On such an eve his palest beam he cast
When, Athens! here thy wisest look'd his
last, 20
How watch'd thy better sons his farewell
ray,
That closed their murder'd sage's latest
day!
Not yet—not yet—Sol pauses on the hill,
The precious hour of parting lingers still;
But sad his light to agonising eyes, 25
And dark the mountain's once delightful
dyes;
Gloom o'er the lovely land he seem'd to
pour,
The land where Phoebus never frown'd
before;
But ere he sunk below Cithaeron's head,
The cup of woe was quaff'd—the spirit
fled; 30
The soul of him that scorn'd to fear or fly,
Who lived and died as none can live or die.

But, lo! from high Hymettus to the plain
The queen of night asserts her silent reign;
No murky vapour, herald of the storm,
Hides her fair face, or girds her glowing
form, 36
With cornice glimmering as the moon-
beams play,
There the white column greets her grateful
ray,
And bright around, with quivering beams
beset,
Her emblem sparkles o'er the minaret:
The groves of olive scatter'd dark and
wide, 41
Where meek Cephissus sheds his scanty
tide,
The cypress saddening by the sacred mosque,
The gleaming turret of the gay kiosk,
And sad and sombre 'mid the holy calm,
Near Theseus' fane, yon solitary palm; 46
All, tinged with varied hues, arrest the eye;
And dull were his that pass'd them heedless by.

Again the Aegean, heard no more afar, Lulls his chafed breast from elemental
war: 50
Again his waves in milder tints unfold
Their long expanse of sapphire and of
gold,
Mix'd with the shades of many a distant isle
That frown, where gentler ocean deigns to
smile. 54

As thus, within the walls of Pallas' fane,
I mark'd the beauties of the land and main,
Alone, and friendless, on the magic shore,
Whose arts and arms but live in poets' lore;
Oft as the matchless dome I turn'd to scan,
Sacred to gods, but not secure from man,
The past return'd, the present seem'd to
cease, 61
And Glory knew no clime beyond her
Greece!

Hours roll'd along, and Dian's orb on
high
Had gain'd the centre of her softest sky;
And yet unwearied still my footsteps trod
O'er the vain shrine of many a vanish'd
god: 66
But chiefly, Pallas! thine, when Hecate's
glare,
Check'd by thy columns, fell more sadly fair

O'er the chill marble, where the startling
tread
Thrills the lone heart like echoes from the
dead. 70
Long had I mused, and treasured every
trace
The wreck of Greece recorded of her race,
When, lo! a giant form before me strode,
And Pallas hail'd me in her own abode!

Yes, 'twas Minerva's self; but, ah! how changed, 75
Since o'er the Dardan field in arms she ranged!
Not such as erst, by her divine command,
Her form appear'd from Phidias' plastic
hand:
Gone were the terrors of her awful brow,
Her idle aegis bore no Gorgon now; 80
Her helm was dinted, and the broken lance Seem'd weak and shaftless e'en to mortal
glance;
The olive branch, which still she deign'd to clasp,
Shrunk from her touch, and wither'd in her grasp;
And, ah! though still the brightest of the sky, 85
Celestial tears bedimm'd her large blue
eye:
Round the rent casque her owlet circled
slow,
And mourn'd his mistress with a shriek of
woe!

'Mortal!'—'twas thus she spake—'that blush of shame 89
Proclaims thee Briton, once a noble name;
First of the mighty, foremost of the free,
Now honour'd less by all, and least by me:
Chief of thy foes shall Pallas still be found, Seek'st thou the cause of loathing?—look
around. 94
Lo! here, despite of war and wasting fire,
I saw successive tyrannies expire,
'Scaped from the ravage of the Turk and Goth,
Thy country sends a spoiler worse than
both.
Survey this vacant, violated fane; 99
Recount the relics torn that yet remain:
These Cecrops placed, this Pericles
adorn'd,
That Adrian rear'd when drooping Science mourn'd.
What more I owe let gratitude attest—
Know, Alaric and Elgin did the rest.
That all may learn from whence the plunderer came, 105
The insulted wall sustains his hated name:
For Elgin's fame thus grateful Pallas
pleads,
Below, his name—above, behold his
deeds!

Be ever hail'd with equal honour here
The Gothic monarch and the Pictish peer:
Arms gave the first his right, the last had
none, 111
But basely stole what less barbarians won.
So when the lion quits his fell repast,
Next prowls the wolf, the filthy jackal last:
Flesh, limbs, and blood the former make their own, 115
The last poor brute securely gnaws the bone.
Yet still the gods are just, and crimes are cross'd:
See here what Elgin won, and what he lost!
Another name with his pollutes my shrine:
Behold where Dian's beams disdain to
shine! 120
Some retribution still might Pallas claim,
When Venus half avenged Minerva's
shame.'

She ceased awhile, and thus I dared
reply,
To soothe the vengeance kindling in her
eye:
'Daughter of Jove! in Britain's injured
name, 125
A true-born Briton may the deed disclaim.
Frown not on England; England owns him not:
Athena, no! thy plunderer was a Scot.
Ask'st thou the difference? From fair Phyle's towers
Survey Bæotia;—Caledonia's ours. 130
And well I know within that bastard land Hath Wisdom's goddess never held command;
A barren soil, where Nature's germs, confined
To stern sterility, can stint the mind;
Whose thistle well betrays the niggard
earth, 135
Emblem of all to whom the land gives
birth;
Each genial influence nurtured to resist;
A land of meanness, sophistry, and mist.
Each breeze from foggy mount and marshy plain
Dilutes with drivel every drizzly brain,
Till, burst at length, each wat'ry head o'er-
flows, 141
Foul as their soil, and frigid as their snows.
Then thousand schemes of petulance and
pride
Despatch her scheming children far and
wide:
Some east, some west, some everywhere
but north, 145
In quest of lawless gain, they issue forth.
And thus—accursed be the day and year!
She sent a Pict to play the felon here.
Yet Caledonia claims some native worth,
As dull Bæotia gave a Pindar birth; 150

THE CURSE OF MINERVA

So may her few, the letter'd and the brave,
Bound to no clime, and victors of the grave,
Shake off the sordid dust of such a land,
And shine like children of a happier
strand;

As once, of yore, in some obnoxious
place, 155

Ten names (if found) had saved a wretched
race.'

'Mortal!' the blue-eyed maid resumed.
'once more

Bear back my mandate to thy native shore.
Though fallen, alas! this vengeance yet is
mine,

To turn my counsels far from lands like
thine. 160

Hear then in silence Pallas' stern behest;
Hear and believe, for time will tell the rest.

'First on the head of him who did this
deed

My curse shall light,—on him and all his seed: 164

Without one spark of intellectual fire,
Be all the sons as senseless as the sire:

If one with wit the parent brood disgrace,
Believe him bastard of a brighter race:

Still with his hireling artists let him prate,
And Folly's praise repay for Wisdom's
hate; 170

Long of their patron's gusto let them tell,
Whose noblest, native gusto is—to sell:

To sell, and make—may shame record the
day!—

The state receiver of his pilfer'd prey.
Meantime, the flattering, feeble dotard,

West, 175
Europe's worst dauber, and poor Britain's
best,

With palsied hand shall turn each model
o'er,

And own himself an infant of fourscore.
Be all the bruisers cull'd from all St. Giles',

That art and nature may compare their styles; 180

While brawny brutes in stupid wonder
stare,

And marvel at his lordship's "stone shop"
there.

Round the throng'd gate shall sauntering
coxcombs creep,

To lounge and lucubrate, to prate and
peep;

While many a languid maid, with longing
sigh, 185

On giant statues casts the curious eye;
The room with transient glance appears to skim

Yet marks the mighty back and length of
limb;

Mourns o'er the difference of now and then;
Exclaims, "These Greeks indeed were proper men!" 190

Draws slight comparisons of these with
those,

And envies Laïs all her Attic beaux.
When shall a modern maid have swains like these!

Alas! Sir Harry is no Hercules! 194

And last of all, amidst the gaping crew,
Some calm spectator, as he takes his view,

In silent indignation mix'd with grief,
Admires the plunder, but abhors the thief.

Oh, loath'd in life, nor pardon'd in the
dust,

May hate pursue his sacrilegious lust!
Link'd with the fool that fired the Ephe-
sian dome, 201

Shall vengeance follow far beyond the
tomb,

And Eratostratus and Elgin shine
In many a branding page and burning line;

Alike reserved for aye to stand accursed, Perchance the second blacker than the
first. 206

'So let him stand, through ages yet un-
born,

Fix'd statue on the pedestal of Scorn;
Though not for him alone revenge shall
wait,

But fits thy country for her coming fate:
Hers were the deeds that taught her lawless son 211

To do what oft Britannia's self had done.
Look to the Baltic—blazing from afar,

Your old ally yet mourns perfidious war.
Not to such deeds did Pallas lend her aid,

Or break the compact which herself had
made; 216

Far from such councils, from the faithless
field

She fled—but left behind her Gorgon
shield;

A fatal gift that turn'd your friends to
stone,

And left lost Albion hated and alone.

'Look to the East, where Ganges' swarthy race 221

Shall shake your tyrant empire to its base;
Lo! there Rebellion rears her ghastly head,

And glares the Nemesis of native dead;
Till Indus rolls a deep purpureal flood

And claims his long arrear of northern
blood. 226

So may ye perish! Pallas, when she gave Your free-born rights, forbade ye to en-slave.

'Look on your Spain!—she clasps the hand she hates,

But boldly clasps, and thrusts you from her gates. 230

Bear witness, bright Barossa! thou canst tell Whose were the sons that bravely fought and fell.

But Lusitania, kind and dear ally, 233
Can spare a few to fight, and sometimes fly.
Oh glorious field! by Famine fiercely won,
The Gaul retires for once, and all is done!
But when did Pallas teach, that one retreat
Retrieved three long olympiads of defeat?

'Look last at home—ye love not to look
there; 239
On the grim smile of comfortless despair:
Your city saddens: loud though Revel
howls,
Here Famine faints, and yonder Rapine
prowls.
See all alike of more or less bereft;
No misers tremble when there's nothing left.
"Blest paper credit;" who shall dare to sing? 245
It clogs like lead Corruption's weary wing.
Yet Pallas pluck'd each premier by the ear,
Who gods and men alike disdain'd to hear;
But one, repentant o'er a bankrupt state,
On Pallas calls,—but calls, alas! too late:
Then raves for ; to that Mentor bends, Though he and Pallas never yet were
friends. 252
Him senates hear, whom never yet they
heard,
Contemptuous once, and now no less absurd.
So, once of yore, each reasonable frog
Swore faith and fealty to his sovereign
"log". 256
Thus hail'd your rulers their patrician
clod,
As Egypt chose an onion for a god.

'Now fare ye well! enjoy your little hour;
Go, grasp the shadow of your vanish'd
power; 260
Gloss o'er the failure of each fondest scheme;
Your strength a name, your bloated wealth
a dream.
Gone is that gold, the marvel of mankind,
And pirates barter all that's left behind.
No more the hirelings, purchased near and
far, 265
Crowd to the ranks of mercenary war.
The idle merchant on the useless quay
Droops o'er the bales no bark may bear
away;
Or, back returning, sees rejected stores
Rot piecemeal on his own encumber'd shores: 270
The starved mechanic breaks his rusting
loom,
And desperate mans him 'gainst the coming doom.
Then in the senate of your sinking state Show me the man whose counsels may have weight.

Vain is each voice where tones could once
command; 275
E'en factions cease to charm a factious
land:
Yet jarring sects convulse a sister isle,
And light with maddening hands the mutual pile.

'Tis done, 'tis past, since Pallas warns
in vain;
The Furies seize her abdicated reign:
Wide o'er the realm they wave their kind-ling brands, 281
And wring her vitals with their fiery hands.
But one convulsive struggle still remains,
And Gaul shall weep ere Albion wear her
chains.
The banner'd pomp of war, the glittering files, 285
O'er whose gay trappings stern Bellona
smiles;
The brazen trump, the spirit-stirring drum,
That bid the foe defiance ere they come;
The hero bounding at his country's call,
The glorious death that consecrates his
fall, 290
Swell the young heart with visionary
charms,
And bid it antedate the joys of arms.
But know, a lesson you may yet be taught,
With death alone are laurels cheaply
bought:
Not in the conflict Havoc seeks delight,
His day of mercy is the day of fight. 296
But when the field is fought, the battle
won,
Though drench'd with gore, his woes are but begun:
His deeper deeds as yet ye know by name;
The slaughter'd peasant and the ravish'd dame, 300
The rifled mansion and the foe-reap'd
field,
Ill suit with souls at home, untaught to yield.
Say with what eye along the distant down
Would flying burghers mark the blazing
town?
How view the column of ascending flames
Shake his red shadow o'er the startled
Thames? 306
Nay, frown not, Albion! for the torch was
thine
That lit such pyres from Tagus to the Rhine:
Now should they burst on thy devoted
coast,
Go, ask thy bosom who deserves them
most. 310
The law of heaven and earth is life for
life,
And she who raised, in vain regrets, the strife.'

THE WALTZ

AN APOSTROPHIC HYMN

'Qualis in Eurotae ripis, aut per iuga Cynthi, Exercet Diana choros.'—VIRGIL.

'Such on Eurota's banks, or Cynthia's height,
Diana seems: and so she charms the sight,
When in the dance the graceful goddess leads
The quire of nymphs, and overtops their heads.'
DRYDEN'S VIRGIL.

TO THE PUBLISHER

SIR,

I AM a country gentleman of a midland county. I might have been a parliament man for a certain borough; having had the offer of as many votes as General T. at the general election in 1812*. But I was all for domestic happiness; as, fifteen years ago, on a visit to London, I married a middle-aged maid of honour. We lived happily at Hornem Hall till last season, when my wife and I were invited by the Countess of Waltzaway (a distant relation of my spouse) to pass the winter in town. Thinking no harm, and our girls being come to a marriageable (or, as they call it, marketable) age, and having besides a Chancery suit inveterately entailed upon the family estate, we came up in our old chariot,—of which, by the by, my wife grew so much ashamed in less than a week, that I was obliged to buy a second-hand barouche, of which I might mount the box, Mrs. H. says, if I could drive, but never see the inside—that place being reserved for the Honourable Augustus Tiptoe, her partner-general and opera-knight. Hearing great praises of Mrs. H.'s dancing (she was famous for birthnight minuets in the latter end of the last century). I unbooted, and went to a ball at the Countess's, expecting to see a country dance, or at most, cotillions, reels, and all the old paces to the newest tunes. But, judge of my surprise, on arriving, to see poor dear Mrs. Hornem with her arms half round the loins of a huge hussar-looking gentleman I never set eyes on before; and his, to say truth, rather more than half round her waist, turning round and round to a d—d see-saw up-and-down sort of tune, that reminded me of the 'Black Joke,' only more 'affettuoso,' till it made me quite giddy with wondering they were not so. By-and-by they stopped a bit, and I thought they would sit or fall down:—but no; with Mrs. H.'s hand on his shoulder, 'quam familiariter!' (as Terence said, when I was at school,) they walked about a minute, and then at it again, like two cock-chafers spitted on the same bodkin. I asked what all this meant, when, with a loud laugh, a child no older than our Wilhelmina (a name I never heard but in the Vicar of Wakefield, though her mother would call her after the Princess of Swappenbach,) said, 'Lord! Mr. Hornem, can't you see they're valtzing?' or waltzing (I forget which); and then up she got, and her mother and sister, and away they went, and round-about it till supper-time. Now that I know what it is, I like it of all things, and so does Mrs. H. (though I have broken my shins, and four times overthrown Mrs. Hornem's maid, in practising the preliminary steps in a morning). Indeed, so much do I like it, that having a turn for rhyme, tastily displayed in some election ballads, and songs in honour of all the victories (but till lately I have had little practice in that way), I sat down, and with the aid of William Fitzgerald, Esq., and a few hints from Dr. Busby, (whose recitations I attend, and am monstrous fond of Master Busby's manner of delivering his father's late successful 'Drury Lane Address,') I composed the following hymn, wherewithal to make my sentiments known to the public; whom, nevertheless, I heartily despise, as well as the critics.

I am, Sir, yours, &c. &c., HORACE HORNEM.

MUSE of the many-twinkling feet! whose charms	Thy legs must move to conquer as they fly,
Are now extended up from legs to arms;	If but thy coats are reasonably high; 10
Terpsichore!—too long misdeem'd a maid—	Thy breast—if bare enough—requires no shield;
Reproachful term—bestow'd but to upbraid—	Dance forth— sans armour thou shalt take the field,
Henceforth in all the bronze of brightness shine, 5	And own—impregnable to most assaults,
The least a vestal of the virgin Nine.	Thy not too lawfully begotten 'Waltz.'
Far be from thee and thine the name of prude:	Hail, nimble nymph! to whom the young hussar, 15
Mock'd, yet triumphant; sneer'd at, unsubdued;	The whisker'd votary of waltz and war,
	His sight devotes, despite of spur and boots;
	A sight unmatch'd since Orpheus and his brutes:

* State of the poll (last day) 5.

† My Latin is all forgotten, if a man can be said to have forgotten what he never remembered; but I bought my title-page motto of a Catholic priest for a three-shilling bank token, after much haggling for the even sixpence. I grudged the money to a Papist, being all for the memory of Perceval and 'No Popery,' and quite regretting the downfall of the pope, because we can't burn him any more.

Hail, spirit-stirring Waltz!—beneath whose banners
A modern hero fought for modish manners; 20
On Hounslow's heath to rival Wellesley's
fame, Cock'd, fired, and miss'd his man—but gain'd his aim;
Hail, moving muse! to whom the fair one's
breast
Gives all it can, and bids us take the rest.
Oh! for the flow of Busby, or of Fitz, 25
The latter's loyalty, the former's wits,
To 'energise the object I pursue,'
And give both Belial and his dance their
due!

Imperial Waltz! imported from the
Rhine (Famed for the growth of pedigrees and wine), 30
Long be thine import from all duty free,
And hock itself be less esteem'd than thee;
In some few qualities alike—for hock Improves our cellar—thou our living stock.
The head to hock belongs—thy subtler
art 35
Intoxicates alone the heedless heart:
Through the full veins thy gentler poison
swims,
And wakes to wantonness the willing limbs.

Oh, Germany! how much to thee we owe,
As heaven-born Pitt can testify below,
Ere cursed confederation made thee
France's, 41
And only left us thy d—d debts and dances!
Of subsidies and Hanover bereft,
We bless thee still—for George the Third is left!
Of kings the best—and last, not least in
worth, 45
For graciously begetting George the Fourth.
To Germany, and highnesses serene,
Who owe us millions—don't we owe the queen?
To Germany, what owe we not besides?
So oft bestowing Brunswickers and brides;
Who paid for vulgar, with her royal blood,
Drawn from the stem of each Teutonic stud: 52
Who sent us—so be pardon'd all her faults—
A dozen dukes, some kings, a queen—and Waltz.

But peace to her—her emperor and diet,
Though now transferr'd to Buonaparte's
'fiat!' 56

Back to my theme—O Muse of motion!
say,
How first to Albion found thy Waltz her
way!

Borne on the breath of hyperborean
gales,
From Hamburg's port (while Hamburg yet had mails), 60
Ere yet unlucky Fame—compell'd to creep
To snowy Gottenburg—was chill'd to
sleep;
Or, starting from her slumbers, deign'd
arise,
Heligoland! to stock thy mart with lies;
While unburnt Moscow yet had news to send, 65
Nor owed her fiery exit to a friend,
She came—Waltz came—and with her certain sets
Of true despatches, and as true gazettes:
Then flamed of Austerlitz the blest despatch,
Which 'Moniteur' nor 'Morning Post' can match; 70
And—almost crush'd beneath the glorious news—
Ten plays, and forty tales of Kotzebue's;
One envoy's letters, six composers' airs,
And loads from Frankfort and from Leipsic fairs; 74
Meiner's four volumes upon womankind,
Like Lapland witches to insure a wind;
Brunck's heaviest tome for ballast, and,
to back it,
Of Heyné, such as should not sink the packet.

Fraught with this cargo—and her fairest freight, 79
Delightful Waltz, on tiptoe for a mate,
The welcome vessel reach'd the genial
strand,
And round her flock'd the daughters of the
land.
Not decent David, when, before the ark,
His grand pas-seul excited some remark;
Not love-lorn Quixote, when his Sancho
thought 85
The knight's fandango friskier than it
ought;
Not soft Herodias, when, with winning
tread,
Her nimble feet danced off another's
head;
Not Cleopatra on her galley's deck, Display'd so much of leg, or more of neck, 90
Than thou, ambrosial Waltz, when first
the moon
Beheld thee twirling to a Saxon tune!

To you, ye husbands of ten years! whose
brows
Ache with the annual tributes of a spouse;

THE WALTZ

To you of nine years less, who only bear
 The budding sprouts of those that you shall wear, 96
 With added ornaments around them roll'd
 Of native brass, or law-awarded gold;
 To you, ye matrons, ever on the watch
 To mar a son's, or make a daughter's match; 100
 To you, ye children of—whom chance accords—
Always the ladies, and sometimes their lords;
 To you, ye single gentlemen, who seek Torments for life, or pleasures for a week;
 As Love or Hymen your endeavours
 guide, 105
 To gain your own, or snatch another's
 bride:—
 To one and all the lovely stranger came,
 And every ball-room echoes with her
 name.

Endearing Waltz!—to thy more melting
 tune
 Bow Irish jig and ancient rigadoon. 110
 Scotch reels, avaunt! and country-dance,
 forego
 Your future claims to each fantastic toe!
 Waltz—Waltz alone—both legs and arms
 demands,
 Liberal of feet, and lavish of her hands;
 Hands which may freely range in public
 sight 115
 Where ne'er before—but—pray 'put out
 the light.'
 Methinks the glare of yonder chandelier Shines much too far—or I am much too
 near;
 And true, though strange—Waltz whispers this remark, 119
 'My slippery steps are safest in the dark!'
 But here the Muse with due decorum halts,
 And lends her longest petticoat to Waltz.

Observant travellers of every time! 123
 Ye quartos publish'd upon every clime!
 O say, shall dull Romaika's heavy round,
 Fandango's wriggles, or Bolero's bound;
 Can Egypt's Almas—tantalising group—Columbia's caperers to the warlike whoop—
 Can aught from cold Kamschatka to Cape
 Horn
 With Waltz compare, or after Waltz be borne? 130
 Ah, no! from Morier's pages down to Galt's,
 Each tourist pens a paragraph for 'Waltz.'

Shades of those belles whose reign began of yore,
 With George the Third's—and ended long
 before!—
 Though in your daughters' daughters yet
 you thrive, 135

Burst from your lead, and be yourselves
 alive!
 Back to the ball-room speed your spectred
 host,
 Fool's Paradise is dull to that you lost.
 No treacherous powder bids conjecture
 quake;
 No stiff-starched stays make meddling fingers ache; 140 (Transferr'd to those ambiguous things that ape
 Goats in their visage, women in their shape;)
 No damsel faints when rather closely
 press'd,
 But more caressing seems when most ca-
 ress'd;
 Superfluous hartshorn, and reviving salt,
 Both banish'd by the sovereign cordial
 'Waltz.' 146

Seductive Waltz!—though on thy native
 shore
 Even Werter's self proclaim'd thee half a whore;
 Werter—to decent vice though much inclined,
 Yet warm, not wanton; dazzled, but not blind— 150
 Though gentle Genlis, in her strife with Staël,
 Would even proscribe thee from a Paris
 ball;
 The fashion hails—from countesses to
 queens,
 And maids and valets waltz behind the scenes;
 Wide and more wide thy witching circle
 spreads, 155
 And turns—if nothing else—at least our heads;
 With thee even clumsy cits attempt to bounce,
 And cockneys practise what they can't pronounce.
 Gods! how the glorious theme my strain
 exalts,
 And rhyme finds partner rhyme in praise of 'Waltz!' 160

Blest was the time Waltz chose for her
 début;
 The court, the Regent, like herself were
 new;
 New face for friends, for foes some new rewards;
 New ornaments for black and royal guards;
 New laws to hang the rogues that roar'd for bread; 165
 New coins (most new) to follow those that
 fled;
 New victories—nor can we prize them less,
 Though Jenky wonders at his own success;
 New wars, because the old succeed so well,

That most survivors envy those who fell;
New mistresses—no, old—and yet 'tis
true, 171

Though they be old, the thing is something
new;

Each new, quite new—(except some ancient tricks),

New white-sticks, gold-sticks, broom-sticks, all new sticks!

With vests or ribands—deck'd alike in hue,
New troopers strut, new turncoats blush
in blue:

So saith the muse: my ———, what say you?
Such was the time when Waltz might best maintain

Her new preferments in this novel reign;
Such was the time, nor ever yet was such;

Hoops are no more, and petticoats *not
much*; 181

Morals and minuets, virtue and her stays,
And tell-tale powder—all have had their
days.

The ball begins—the honours of the house
First duly done by daughter or by spouse,
Some potentate—or royal or serene—
With Kent's gay grace, or sapient Gloster's mien,

Leads forth the ready dame, whose rising
flush

Might once have been mistaken for a blush.
From where the garb just leaves the bosom free, 190

That spot where hearts were once supposed to be;

Round all the confines of the yielded waist,
The strangest hand may wander undisplaced;

The lady's in return may grasp as much
As princely paunches offer to her touch.
Pleased round the chalky floor how well
they trip, 196

One hand reposing on the royal hip;
The other to the shoulder no less royal Ascending with affection truly loyal!

Thus front to front the partners move or
stand, 200

The foot may rest, but none withdraw the
hand;

And all in turn may follow in their rank,
The Earl of—Asterisk—and Lady—
Blank;

Sir—Such-a-one—with those of fashion's
host,

For whose blest surnames—vide 'Morning Post.' 205

(Or if for that impartial print too late, Search Doctors' Commons six months from my date)—

Thus all and each, in movement swift or
slow,

The genial contact gently undergo;
Till some might marvel, with the modest
Turk, 210

If 'nothing follows all this palming work?'

True, honest Mirza!—you may trust my
rhyme—

Something does follow at a fitter time;
The breast thus publicly resign'd to man,
In private may resist him—if it can. 215

O ye who loved our grandmothers of
yore,

Fitzpatrick, Sheridan, and many more!
And thou, my prince! whose sovereign taste and will

It is to love the lovely beldames still!
Thou ghost of Queensberry! whose judging sprite 220

Satan may spare to peep a single night,
Pronounce—if ever in your days of bliss
Asmodeus struck so bright a stroke as this;
To teach the young ideas how to rise,
Flush in the cheek, and languish in the
eyes; 225

Rush to the heart, and lighten through the frame,

With half-told wish, and ill-dissembled
flame,

For prurient nature still will storm the
breast—

Who, tempted thus, can answer for the
rest? 229

But ye—who never felt a single thought
For what our morals are to be, or ought;
Who wisely wish the charms you view to
reap,

Say—would you make those beauties
quite so cheap?

Hot from the hands promiscuously applied,

Round the slight waist, or down the glowing side, 235

Where were the rapture then to clasp the
form

From this lewd grasp and lawless contact
warm?

At once love's most endearing thought
resign,

To press the hand so press'd by none but
thine; 239

To gaze upon that eye which never met
Another's ardent look without regret;

Approach the lip which all, without restraint,

Come near enough—if not to touch—to
taint;

If such thou lovest—love her then no
more,

Or give—like her—caresses to a score;
Her mind with these is gone, and with it
go 246

The little left behind it to bestow.

Voluptuous Waltz! and dare I thus blaspheme?

Thy bard forgot thy praises were his theme.

THE WALTZ

Terpsichore, forgive!—at every ball 250
 My wife now waltzes—and my daughters
shall;
 My son—(or stop—'tis needless to inquire—
 These little accidents should ne'er tran-
 spire;

Some ages hence our genealogic tree
 Will wear as green a bough for him as
me—
 Waltzing shall rear, to make our name
amends,
 Grandsons for me—in heirs to all his friends.

THE BLUES

A LITERARY ECLOGUE

'Nimium ne crede colori.'—VIRGIL.

O trust not, ye beautiful creatures, to hue,
 Though your hair were as red as your stockings are blue.

ECLOGUE THE FIRST

London.—Before the Door of a Lecture Room.

Enter TRACY, meeting INKEL.

Ink. YOU'RE too late.

Tra. Is it over?

Ink. Nor will be this hour.

But the benches are cramm'd like a garden
 in flower,

With the pride of our belles, who have made it the fashion;

So, instead of 'beaux arts,' we may say 'la belles passion'

For learning, which lately has taken the lead in 5

The world, and set all the fine gentlemen
 reading.

Tra. I know it too well, and have worn out my patience

With studying to study your new publications.

There's Vamp, Scamp, and Mouthy, and Wordswords and Co.

With their damnable——

Ink. Hold, my good friend, do you
 know 10

Whom you speak to?

Tra. Right well, boy, and so does
 'the Row:'

You're an author—a poet—

Ink. And think you that I Can stand tamely in silence, to hear you decry

The Muses?

Tra. Excuse me: I meant no offence
 To the Nine; though the number who make some pretence 15

To their favours is such—but the subject to drop,

I am just piping hot from a publisher's shop,

(Next door to the pastry-cook's; so that when I

Cannot find the new volume I wanted to buy

On the bibliopole's shelves, it is only two paces, 20

As one finds every author in one of those places:)

Where I just had been skimming a charming critique,

So studded with wit, and so sprinkled with Greek!

Where your friend—you know who—has just got such a thrashing,

That it is, as the phrase goes, extremely 'refreshing.' 25

What a beautiful word!

Ink. Very true; 'tis so soft
 And so cooling—they use it a little too
 oft;

And the papers have got it at last—but no
 matter.

So they've cut up our friend then?

Tra. Not left him a tatter—
 Not a rag of his present or past reputation, 30

Which they call a disgrace to the age and the nation.

Ink. I'm sorry to hear this! for friendship, you know——

Our poor friend!—but I thought it would terminate so.

Our friendship is such, I'll read nothing to shock it.

You don't happen to have the Review in your pocket? 35

Tra. No; I left a round dozen of authors and others

(Very sorry, no doubt, since the cause is a brother's)

All scrambling and jostling, like so many imps,

And on fire with impatience to get the next glimpse.

Ink. Let us join them.

Tra. What, won't you return to the lecture? 40

Ink. Why the place is so cramm'd, there's no room for a spectre.

Besides, our friend Scamp is to-day so absurd—

Tra. How can you know that till you hear him?

Ink. I heard
Quite enough; and, to tell you the truth, my retreat

Was from his vile nonsense, no less than the heat. 45

Tra. I have had no great loss then?

Ink. Loss!—such a palaver!
I'd inoculate sooner my wife with the slaver

Of a dog when gone rabid, than listen two
hours

To the torrent of trash which around him
he pours,

Pump'd up with such effort, disgorged with such labour, 50

That—come—do not make me speak ill of one's neighbour.

Tra. I make you!

Ink. Yes, you! I said nothing until You compell'd me, by speaking the
truth—

Tra. To speak ill!
Is that your deduction?

Ink. When speaking of Scamp ill,
I certainly follow, not set an example. 55
The fellow's a fool, an impostor, a zany.

Tra. And the crowd of to-day shows that one fool makes many.

But we two will be wise.

Ink. Pray, then, let us retire.

Tra. I would, but—

Ink. There must be attraction much higher

Than Scamp, or the Jew's harp he nicknames his lyre, 60

To call you to this hotbed.

Tra. I own it—'tis true—
A fair lady—

Ink. A spinster?

Tra. Miss Lilac.

Ink. The Blue!
The heiress!

Tra. The angel!

Ink. The devil! why, man,
Pray get out of this hobble as fast as you
can.

You wed with Miss Lilac! 'twould be your perdition: 65

She's a poet, a chymist, a mathematician.

Tra. I say she's an angel.

Ink. Say rather an angle.
If you and she marry, you'll certainly wrangle.

I say she's a Blue, man, as blue as the ether.

Tra. And is that any cause for not coming together? 70

Ink. Humph! I can't say I know any happy alliance

Which has lately sprung up from a wedlock with science.

She's so learned in all things, and fond of concerning

Herself in all matters connected with learning,

That—

Tra. What?

Ink. I perhaps may as well hold my
tongue; 75

But there's five hundred people can tell you you're wrong.

Tra. You forget Lady Lilac's as rich as a Jew.

Ink. Is it miss or the cash of mamma you pursue?

Tra. Why, Jack, I'll be frank with you —something of both.

The girl's a fine girl.

Ink. And you feel nothing loth
To her good lady-mother's reversion; and 81

Her life is as good as your own, I will bet.

Tra. Let her live, and as long as she likes; I demand

Nothing more than the heart of her daughter and hand.

Ink. Why that heart's in the ink-stand—that hand on the pen. 85

Tra. A propos—Will you write me a song now and then?

Ink. To what purpose?

Tra. You know, my dear friend, that in prose

My talent is decent, as far as it goes;

But in rhyme—

Ink. You're a terrible stick, to be sure.

Tra. I own it: and yet, in these times, there's no lure 90

For the heart of the fair like a stanza or
two;

And so, as I can't, will you furnish a few?

Ink. In your name?

Tra. In my name. I will copy
them out,

To slip into her hand at the very next rout.

Ink. Are you so far advanced as to hazard this?

Tra. Why,

Do you think me subdued by a Bluestocking's eye, 96

So far as to tremble to tell her in rhyme
What I've told her in prose, at the least,

as sublime?

Ink. As sublime! If it be so, no need of my Muse.

Tra. But consider, dear Ink, she's one of the 'Blues.' 100

Ink. As sublime!—Mr. Tracy—I've nothing to say.

Stick to prose—As sublime!!—but I wish you good day.

Tra. Nay, stay, my dear fellow—consider—I'm wrong;
 I own it; but, prithee, compose me the song.
Ink. As sublime!!
Tra. I but used the expression in haste.
Ink. That may be, Mr. Tracy, but shows damn'd bad taste. 106 Tra. I own it—I know it—acknowledge it—what Can I say to you more?
Ink. I see what you'd be at: You disparage my parts with insidious abuse,
 Till you think you can turn them best to your own use. 110
Tra. And is that not a sign I respect them?
Ink. Why that To be sure makes a difference.
Tra. I know what is what: And you, who're a man of the gay world no less Than a poet of t'other, may easily guess That I never could mean, by a word, to offend 115
 A genius like you, and moreover, my friend.
Ink. No doubt; you by this time should know what is due To a man of—but come—let us shake hands.
Tra. You knew, And you know, my dear fellow, how heartily I Whatever you publish, am ready to buy.
Ink. That's my bookseller's business; I care not for sale; 121
 Indeed the best poems at first rather fail. There were Renegade's epics, and Botherby's plays,
 And my own grand romance—
Tra. Had its full share of praise.
 I myself saw it puff'd in the 'Old Girl's Review.' 125
Ink. What Review?
Tra. 'Tis the English 'Journal de Trevoux';
 A clerical work of our Jesuits at home. Have you never yet seen it?
Ink. That pleasure's to come.
Tra. Make haste then.
Ink. Why so?
Tra. I have heard people say That it threaten'd to give up the ghost t'other day. 130
Ink. Well, that is a sign of some spirit.
Tra. No doubt.
 Shall you be at the Countess of Fiddlecome's rout?
Ink. I've a card, and shall go: but at present, as soon
 As friend Scamp shall be pleased to step down from the moon

(Where he seems to be soaring in search of his wits), 135
 And an interval grants from his lecturing fits,
 I'm engaged to the Lady Bluebottle's collation,
 To partake of a luncheon and learn'd conversation:
 'Tis a sort of reunion for Scamp, on the days Of his lecture, to treat him with cold tongue and praise. 140
 And I own, for my own part, that 'tis not unpleasant.
 Will you go? There's Miss Lilac will also be present.
Tra. That 'metal's attractive.'
Ink. No doubt—to the pocket.
Tra. You should rather encourage my passion than shock it.
 But let us proceed; for I think by the hum— 145
Ink. Very true; let us go, then, before they can come,
 Or else we'll be kept here an hour at their levee,
 On the rack of cross questions, by all the blue bevy.
 Hark! Zounds, they'll be on us; I know by the drone
 Of old Botherby's spouting ex-cathedrâ tone. 150
 Ay! there he is at it. Poor Scamp! better join
 Your friends, or he'll pay you back in your own coin.
Tra. All fair; 'tis but lecture for lecture.
Ink. That's clear.
 But for God's sake let's go, or the Bore will be here.
 Come, come: nay, I'm off. [Exit INKEL.
Tra. You are right, and I'll follow;
 'Tis high time for a 'Sic me servavit Apollo.' 156
 And yet we shall have the whole crew on our kibes,
 Blues, dandies, and dowagers, and second-hand scribes,
 All flocking to moisten their exquisite throttles
 With a glass of Madeira at Lady Bluebottle's. [Exit TRACY.

ECLOGUE THE SECOND

An Apartment in the House of LADY BLUEBOTTLE.—A Table prepared.

SIR RICHARD BLUEBOTTLE solus.

Was there ever a man who was married so sorry?
 Like a fool, I must needs do the thing in a hurry.
 My life is reversed, and my quiet destroy'd;

My days, which once pass'd in so gentle a void,
 Must now, every hour of the twelve, be employ'd;
 The twelve, do I say?—of the whole ⁵
 twenty-four,
 Is there one which I dare call my own any
 more?
 What with driving and visiting, dancing,
 and dining,
 What with learning, and teaching, and scribbling, and shining
 In science and art, I'll be cursed if I know ¹⁰
 Myself from my wife; for although we are two,
 Yet she somehow contrives that all things shall be done
 In a style which proclaims us eternally
 one.
 But the thing of all things which distresses me more Than the bills of the week (though they trouble me sore) ¹⁵
 Is the numerous, humorous, backbiting
 crew
 Of scribblers, wits, lecturers, white, black,
 and blue,
 Who are brought to my house as an inn, to my cost—
 For the bill here, it seems, is defray'd by the host—
 No pleasure! no leisure! no thought for my pains, ²⁰
 But to hear a vile jargon which addles my
 brains;
 A smatter and chatter, glean'd out of reviews,
 By the rag, tag, and bobtail, of those they call 'BLUES';
 A rabble who know not—But soft, here
 they come!
 Would to God I were deaf! as I'm not,
 I'll be dumb. ²⁵

Enter LADY BLUEBOTTLE, MISS LILAC, LADY BLUEMOUNT, MR. BOTHERBY, IN-KEL, TRACY, MISS MAZARINE, and others, with SCAMP the Lecturer, &c. &c.

Lady Blueb. Ah! Sir Richard, good morning: I've brought you some
 friends.

Sir Rich. [bows, and afterwards aside.]
 If friends, they're the first.

Lady Blueb. But the luncheon attends.
 I pray ye be seated, 'sans cérémonie.'

Mr. Scamp, you're fatigued; take your chair there next me. [They all sit.]

Sir Rich. [aside.] If he does, his fatigue is to come.

Lady Blueb. Mr. Tracy— ³⁰

Lady Bluemount—Miss Lilac—be pleased, pray, to place ye;

And you, Mr. Botherby—

Both.

Oh, my dear Lady,

I obey.

Lady Blueb. Mr. Inkel, I ought to upbraid ye:

You were not at the lecture.

Ink.

Excuse me, I was;

But the heat forced me out in the best part—alas! ³⁵

And when—

Lady Blueb. To be sure it was broiling;
 but then

You have lost such a lecture!

Both.

The best of the ten.

Tra. How can you know that? there are two more.

Both.

Because

I defy him to beat this day's wondrous applause.

The very walls shook.

Ink.

Oh, if that be the test,

I allow our friend Scamp has this day done his best. ⁴¹

Miss Lilac, permit me to help you;—a
 wing?

Miss Lil. No more, sir, I thank you.
 Who lectures next spring?

Both. Dick Dunder.

Ink.

That is, if he lives.

Miss Lil.

And why not?

Ink. No reason whatever, save that he's a sot. ⁴⁵

Lady Bluemount! a glass of Madeira?

Lady Bluem.

With pleasure.

Ink. How does your friend Words-words, that Windermere treasure?

Does he stick to his lakes, like the leeches
 he sings,

And their gatherers, as Homer sung warriors and kings?

Lady Bluem. He has just got a place.

Ink.

As a footman?

Lady Bluem.

For shame!

Nor profane with your sneers so poetic a name. ⁵¹

Ink. Nay, I meant him no evil, but pitied his master;

For the poet of pedlars 'twere, sure, no
 disaster

To wear a new livery; the more, as 'tis
 not

The first time he has turn'd both his creed and his coat. ⁵⁵

Lady Bluem. For shame! I repeat. If Sir George could but hear—

Lady Blueb. Never mind our friend
 Inkel; we all know, my dear,

'Tis his way.

Sir Rich. But this place—

Ink. Is perhaps like friend Scamp's,
 A lecturer's.

Lady Bluem. Excuse me—'tis one in the 'Stamps':

He is made a collector.

THE BLUES

- Tra.* Collector!
Sir Rich. How?
Miss Lil. What?
Ink. I shall think of him oft when I buy a new hat: 61
 There his works will appear—— Lady Bluem. Sir, they reach to the Ganges.
Ink. I shan't go so far—I can have them at Grange's.
Lady Bluem. Oh fie!
Miss Lil. And for shame!
Lady Bluem. You're too bad.
Both. Very good!
Lady Bluem. How good?
Lady Blueb. He means nought—'tis his phrase.
Lady Bluem. He grows rude.
Lady Blueb. He means nothing; nay, ask him. 66
Lady Bluem. Pray, Sir! did you mean what you say?
Ink. Never mind if he did: 'twill be seen That whatever he means won't alloy what he says.
Both. Sir?
Ink. Pray be content with your portion of praise; 69
 'Twas in your defence.
Both. If you please, with submission, I can make out my own.
Ink. It would be your perdition. While you live, my dear Botherby, never defend Yourself or your works; but leave both to a friend.
 A propos—Is your play then accepted at last?
Both. At last?
Ink. Why I thought—that 's to say—there had pass'd 75
 A few green-room whispers, which hinted, —you know
 That the taste of the actors at best is so so.
Both. Sir, the green-room's in rapture, and so's the Committee.
Ink. Ay—yours are the plays for exciting our 'pity And fear,' as the Greek says: for 'purging the mind,' 80
 I doubt if you'll leave us an equal behind.
Both. I have written the prologue, and meant to have pray'd
 For a spice of your wit in an epilogue's aid.
Ink. Well, time enough yet, when the play's to be play'd. 84
 Is it cast yet?
Both. The actors are fighting for parts, As is usual in that most litigious of arts.
Lady Blueb. We'll all make a party, and go the first night.
- Tra.* And you promised the epilogue, Inkel.
Ink. Not quite.
 However, to save my friend Botherby trouble,
 I'll do what I can, though my pains must be double. 90
Tra. Why so?
Ink. To do justice to what goes before.
Both. Sir, I'm happy to say, I've no fears on that score.
 Your parts, Mr. Inkel, are——
Ink. Never mind mine; Stick to those of your play, which is quite your own line.
Lady Bluem. You're a fugitive writer, I think, sir, of rhymes? 95
Ink. Yes, ma'am; and a fugitive reader sometimes.
 On Wordswords, for instance, I seldom alight,
 Or on Mouthey, his friend, without taking to flight.
Lady Bluem. Sir, your taste is too common; but time and posterity Will right these great men, and this age's severity 100 Become its reproach.
Ink. I've no sort of objection, So I'm not of the party to take the infection.
Lady Blueb. Perhaps you have doubts that they ever will take?
Ink. Not at all; on the contrary, those of the lake
 Have taken already, and still will continue 105
 To take—what they can, from a groat to a guinea,
 Of pension or place;—but the subject's a bore.
Lady Bluem. Well, sir, the time's coming.
Ink. Scamp! don't you feel sore? What say you to this?
Scamp. They have merit, I own; Though their system's absurdity keeps it unknown. 110
Ink. Then why not unearth it in one of your lectures?
Scamp. It is only time past which comes under my strictures.
Lady Blueb. Come, a truce with all tartness;—the joy of my heart
 Is to see Nature's triumph o'er all that is art.
 Wild Nature!—Grand Shakspeare!
Both. And down Aristotle! 115
Lady Bluem. Sir George thinks exactly with Lady Bluebottle:
 And my Lord Seventy-four, who protects our dear Bard,
 And who gave him his place, has the greatest regard

For the poet, who, singing of pedlars and asses,
 Has found out the way to dispense with Parnassus. 120
Tra. And you, Scamp!—
Scamp. I needs must confess I'm embarrass'd.
Ink. Don't call upon Scamp, who's already so harass'd
 With old schools, and new schools, and no schools, and all schools.
Tra. Well, one thing is certain, that some must be fools.
 I should like to know who.
Ink. And I should not be sorry 125
 To know who are not:—it would save us some worry.
Lady Blueb. A truce with remark, and let nothing control
 This 'feast of our reason, and flow of the soul.'
 Oh! my dear Mr. Botherby! sympathise! —I
 Now feel such a rapture, I'm ready to fly, 130
 I feel so elastic—'so buoyant—so buoyant!'
Ink. Tracy! open the window.
Tra. I wish her much joy on't.
Both. For God's sake, my Lady Blue-bottle, check not
 This gentle emotion, so seldom our lot
 Upon earth. Give it way: 'tis an impulse which lifts 135
 Our spirits from earth; the sublimest of gifts;
 For which poor Prometheus was chain'd to his mountain:
 'Tis the source of all sentiment—feeling's true fountain;
 'Tis the Vision of Heaven upon Earth: 'tis the gas
 Of the soul: 'tis the seizing of shades as they pass, 140
 And making them substance: 'tis something divine:—
Ink. Shall I help you, my friend, to a little more wine?

Both. I thank you; not any more, sir, till I dine.
Ink. A propos—Do you dine with Sir Humphry to-day?
Tra. I should think with Duke Humphry was more in your way. 145
Ink. It might be of yore; but we authors now look
 To the Knight, as a landlord, much more than the Duke.
 The truth is, each writer now quite at his ease is,
 And (except with his publisher) dines where he pleases.
 But 'tis now nearly five, and I must to the Park. 150
Tra. And I'll take a turn with you there till 'tis dark.
 And you, Scamp—
Scamp. Excuse me! I must to my notes, For my lecture next week.
Ink. He must mind whom he quotes Out of 'Elegant Extracts.'
Lady Blueb. Well, now we break up;
 But remember Miss Diddle invites us to sup. 155
Ink. Then at two hours past midnight we all meet again,
 For the sciences, sandwiches, hock, and champagne!
Tra. And the sweet lobster salad!
Both. I honour that meal;
 For 'tis then that our feelings most genuinely—feel.
Ink. True; feeling is truest then, far beyond question. 160
 I wish to the gods 'twas the same with digestion!
Lady Blueb. Pshaw!—never mind that; for one moment of feeling Is worth—God knows what.
Ink. 'Tis at least worth concealing
 For itself, or what follows—But here comes your carriage.
Sir Rich. [aside.] I wish all these people were d—d with my marriage! 165
 [Exeunt.]

THE VISION OF JUDGMENT

BY

QUEVEDO REDIVIVUS

SUGGESTED BY THE COMPOSITION SO ENTITLED BY THE AUTHOR OF 'WAT TYLER'

'A Daniel come to judgment! yea, a Daniel!
I thank thee, Jew, for teaching me that word.'

PREFACE

It hath been wisely said, that 'One fool makes many;' and it hath been poetically observed—
'That fools rush in where angels fear to tread.'—POPE.

If Mr. Southey had not rushed in where he had no business, and where he never was before, and never will be again, the following poem would not have been written. It is not impossible that it may be as good as his own, seeing that it cannot, by any species of stupidity, natural or acquired, be worse. The gross flattery, the dull impudence, the renegade intolerance, and impious cant, of the poem by the author of 'Wat Tyler,' are something so stupendous as to form the sublime of himself—containing the quintessence of his own attributes.

So much for his poem—a word on his preface. In this preface it has pleased the magnanimous Laureate to draw the picture of a supposed 'Satanic School,' the which he doth recommend to the notice of the legislature; thereby adding to his other laurels the ambition of those of an informer. If there exists anywhere, except in his imagination, such a School, is he not sufficiently armed against it by his own intense vanity? The truth is, that there are certain writers whom Mr. S. imagines, like Scrub, to have 'talked of him;' for they laughed consumedly.'

I think I know enough of most of the writers to whom he is supposed to allude, to assert, that they, in their individual capacities, have done more good, in the charities of life, to their fellow-creatures, in any one year, than Mr. Southey has done harm to himself by his absurdities in his whole life; and this is saying a great deal. But I have a few questions to ask.

1stly, Is Mr. Southey the author of 'Wat Tyler'?

2ndly, Was he not refused a remedy at law by the highest judge of his beloved England, because it was a blasphemous and seditious publication?

3rdly, Was he not entitled by William Smith, in full parliament, 'a rancorous renegade'?

4thly, Is he not poet laureate, with his own lines on Martin the regicide staring him in the face?

And, 5thly, Putting the four preceding items together, with what conscience dare he call the attention of the laws to the publications of others, be they what they may?

I say nothing of the cowardice of such a proceeding, its meanness speaks for itself; but I wish to touch upon the motive, which is neither more nor less than that Mr. S. has been laughed at a little in some recent publications, as he was of yore in the 'Anti-jacobin,' by his present patrons. Hence all this 'skimble-scamble stuff' about 'Satanic,' and so forth. However, it is worthy of him—'qualis ab incepto.'

If there is anything obnoxious to the political opinions of a portion of the public in the following poem, they may thank Mr. Southey. He might have written hexameters, as he has written everything else, for aught that the writer cared—had they been upon another subject. But to attempt to canonise a monarch, who, whatever were his household virtues, was neither a successful nor a patriot king,—inasmuch as several years of his reign passed in war with America and Ireland, to say nothing of the aggression upon France,—like all other exaggeration, necessarily begets opposition. In whatever manner he may be spoken of in this new 'Vision,' his public career will not be more favourably transmitted by history. Of his private virtues (although a little expensive to the nation) there can be no doubt.

With regard to the supernatural personages treated of, I can only say that I know as much about them, and (as an honest man) have a better right to talk of them than Robert Southey. I have also treated them more tolerantly. The way in which that poor insane creature, the Laureate, deals about his judgments in the next world, is like his own judgment in this. If it was not completely ludicrous, it would be something worse. I don't think that there is much more to say at present.

QUEVEDO REDIVIVUS.

P.S.—It is possible that some readers may object, in these objectionable times, to the freedom with which saints, angels, and spiritual persons discourse in this 'Vision.' But, for precedents upon such points, I must refer him to Fielding's 'Journey from this World to the next,' and to the Visions of myself, the said Quevedo, in Spanish or translated. The reader is also requested to observe, that no doctrinal tenets are insisted upon or discussed; that the person of the Deity is carefully withheld from sight, which is more than can be said for the Laureate, who hath thought proper to make him talk, not 'like a school-divine,' but like the unscholarlike Mr. Southey. The whole action passes on the outside of heaven; and Chaucer's 'Wife of Bath,' Pulci's 'Morgante Maggiore,' Swift's 'Tale of a Tub,'

THE VISION OF JUDGMENT

and the other works above referred to, are cases in point of the freedom with which saints, &c. may be permitted to converse in works not intended to be serious.

Q. R.

* * Mr. Southey being, as he says, a good Christian and vindictive, threatens, I understand, a reply to this our answer. It is to be hoped that his visionary faculties will in the mean time have acquired a little more judgment, properly so called; otherwise he will get himself into new dilemmas. These apostate jacobins furnish rich rejoinders. Let him take a specimen. Mr. Southey laudeth grievously 'one Mr. Landor,' who cultivates much private renown in the shape of Latin verses; and not long ago, the poet laureate dedicated to him, it appeareth, one of his fugitive lyrics, upon the strength of a poem called 'Gebir.' Who could suppose, that in this same Gebir the aforesaid Savage Landor (for such is his grim cognomen) putteth into the infernal regions no less a person than the hero of his friend Mr. Southey's heaven,—yea, even George the Third! See also how personal Savage becometh, when he hath a mind. The following is his portrait of our late gracious sovereign:

(Prince Gebir having descended into the infernal regions, the shades of his royal ancestors are, at his request, called up to his view; and he exclaims to his ghostly guide)—

'Aroar, what wretch that nearest us? what wretch
Is that with eyebrows white and slanting brow?
Listen! him yonder who, bound down supine,
Shrinks yelling from that sword there, engine-hung.
He too amongst my ancestors! I hate
The despot, but the dastard I despise.
Was he our countryman?'

'Alas, O king!

Iberia bore him, but the breed accurst
Inclement winds blew blighting from north-east.'
'He was a warrior then, nor fear'd the gods?'
'Gebir, he fear'd the demons, not the gods,
Though them indeed his daily face adored;
And was no warrior, yet the thousand lives
Squander'd, as stones to exercise a sling,
And the tame cruelty and cold caprice—
Oh madness of mankind! address'd, adored!'

Gebir, p. 28.

I omit noticing some edifying Ithyphallics of Savagius, wishing to keep the proper veil over them, if his grave but somewhat indiscreet worshippinger will suffer it; but certainly these teachers of 'great moral lessons' are apt to be found in strange company.

I

SAINT PETER sat by the celestial gate:

His keys were rusty, and the lock was dull,

So little trouble had been given of late;

Not that the place by any means was full,
But since the Gallic era 'eighty-eight'

The devils had ta'en a longer, stronger pull,

And 'a pull altogether,' as they say

At sea—which drew most souls another way.

II

The angels all were singing out of tune,

And hoarse with having little else to do,
Excepting to wind up the sun and moon,

Or curb a runaway young star or two,
Or break colt of a comet, which too soon

Broke out of bounds o'er th' ethereal
blue,

Splitting some planet with its playful tail,
As boats are sometimes by a wanton whale.

III

The guardian seraphs had retired on high,
Finding their charges past all care

below;

Terrestrial business fill'd nought in the sky

Save the recording angel's black bureau;
Who found, indeed, the facts to multiply

With such rapidity of vice and woe,
That he had stripp'd off both his wings in quills,

And yet was in arrear of human ills.

IV

His business so augmented of late years,
That he was forced, against his will no
doubt,

(Just like those cherubs, earthly ministers.)
For some resource to turn himself

about,
And claim the help of his celestial peers,

To aid him ere he should be quite worn
out

By the increased demand for his remarks:
Six angels and twelve saints were named his clerks.

V

This was a handsome board—at least for
heaven;

And yet they had even then enough to do,
So many conquerors' cars were daily

driven,
So many kingdoms fitted up anew;

THE VISION OF JUDGMENT

Each day too slew its thousands six or seven,
Till at the crowning carnage, Waterloo,
They threw their pens down in divine disgust—
The page was so besmear'd with blood and dust.

VI

This by the way; 'tis not mine to record
What angels shrink from: even the very devil
On this occasion his own work abhorr'd,
So surfeited with the infernal revel:
Though he himself had sharpen'd every sword,
It almost quench'd his innate thirst of evil.
(Here Satan's sole good work deserves insertion—
'Tis, that he has both generals in reversion.)

VII

Let's skip a few short years of hollow peace,
Which peopled earth no better, hell as wont,
And heaven none—they form the tyrant's lease,
With nothing but new names subscribed upon 't;
'Twill one day finish: meantime they increase,
'With seven heads and ten horns,' and all in front,
Like Saint John's foretold beast; but ours are born Less formidable in the head than horn.

VIII

In the first year of freedom's second dawn
Died George the Third; although no tyrant, one Who shielded tyrants, till each sense withdrawn
Left him nor mental nor external sun:
A better farmer ne'er brush'd dew from lawn,
A worse king never left a realm undone!
He died—but left his subjects still behind,
One half as mad—and t'other no less blind.

IX

He died! his death made no great stir on earth:
His burial made some pomp; there was profusion
Of velvet, gilding, brass, and no great dearth
Of aught but tears—save those shed by collusion.

For these things may be bought at their true worth;
Of elegy there was the due infusion—
Bought also; and the torches, cloaks, and banners,
Heralds, and relics of old Gothic manners,

X

Form'd a sepulchral melodrame. Of all
The fools who flock'd to swell or see the show,
Who cared about the corpse? The funeral
Made the attraction, and the black the woe.
There throbb'd not there a thought which pierced the pall;
And when the gorgeous coffin was laid low,
It seem'd the mockery of hell to fold
The rottenness of eighty years in gold.

XI

So mix his body with the dust! It might Return to what it must far sooner, were
The natural compound left alone to fight
Its way back into earth, and fire, and air;
But the unnatural balsams merely blight
What nature made him at his birth, as bare
As the mere million's base unummied clay—
Yet all his spices but prolong decay.

XII

He's dead—and upper earth with him has done;
He's buried; save the undertaker's bill,
Or lapidary scrawl, the world is gone
For him, unless he left a German will:
But where's the proctor who will ask his son?
In whom his qualities are reigning still,
Except that household virtue, most uncommon,
Of constancy to a bad, ugly woman.

XIII

'God save the king!' It is a large economy
In God to save the like; but if he will Be saving, all the better; for not one am I
Of those who think damnation better still:
I hardly know too if not quite alone am I
In this small hope of bettering future ill
By circumscribing, with some slight restriction,
The eternity of hell's hot jurisdiction.

XIV

I know this is unpopular; I know
'Tis blasphemous; I know one may be damn'd
For hoping no one else may e'er be so;

THE VISION OF JUDGMENT

I know my catechism; I know we're cramm'd
With the best doctrines till we quite o'er-
flow;
I know that all save England's church
have sham'm'd,
And that the other twice two hundred churches
And synagogues have made a damn'd bad purchase.

XV

God help us all! God help me too! I am, God knows, as helpless as the devil can wish,
And not a whit more difficult to damn,
Than is to bring to land a late-hook'd
fish,
Or to the butcher to purvey the lamb;
Not that I'm fit for such a noble dish,
As one day will be that immortal fry
Of almost everybody born to die.

XVI

Saint Peter sat by the celestial gate,
And nodded o'er his keys; when, lo!
there came
A wondrous noise he had not heard of late—
A rushing sound of wind, and stream,
and flame;
In short, a roar of things extremely great,
Which would have made aught save a saint exclaim;
But he, with first a start and then a wink,
Said, 'There's another star gone out, I think!'

XVII

But ere he could return to his repose,
A cherub flapp'd his right wing o'er his
eyes—
At which St. Peter yawn'd, and rubb'd his nose:
'Saint porter,' said the angel, 'prithee
rise!'
Waving a goodly wing, which glow'd, as glows
An earthly peacock's tail, with heavenly
dyes:
To which the saint replied, 'Well, what's the matter?
'Is Lucifer come back with all this clatter?'

XVIII

'No,' quoth the cherub; 'George the Third is dead.'
'And who is George the Third?' replied
the apostle:
'What George? what Third?' 'The king of England,' said
the angel. 'Well! he won't find kings to jostle

Him on his way; but does he wear his
head?
Because the last we saw here had a tustle,
And ne'er would have got into heaven's good graces,
Had he not flung his head in all our faces.

XIX

'He was, if I remember, king of France;
That head of his, which could not keep a crown
On earth, yet ventured in my face to
advance
A claim to those of martyrs—like my
own:
If I had had my sword, as I had once
When I cut ears off, I had cut him down;
But having but my keys, and not my
brand,
I only knock'd his head from out his hand.

XX

'And then he set up such a headless howl,
That all the saints came out and took him in;
And there he sits by St. Paul, cheek by jowl;
That fellow Paul—the parvenu! The skin
Of St. Bartholomew, which makes his
cowl
In heaven, and upon earth redeem'd
his sin,
So as to make a martyr, never sped Better than did this weak and wooden head.

XXI

'But had it come up here upon its shoulders,
There would have been a different tale
to tell:
The fellow-feeling in the saint's beholders
Seems to have acted on them like a spell,
And so this very foolish head heaven
solders
Back on its trunk: it may be very well,
And seems the custom here to overthrow Whatever has been wisely done below.'

XXII

The angel answer'd, 'Peter! do not pout:
The king who comes has head and all entire,
And never knew much what it was about—
He did as doth the puppet—by its wire,
And will be judged like all the rest, no
doubt:
My business and your own is not to inquire
Into such matters, but to mind our cue—
Which is to act as we are bid to do.'

THE VISION OF JUDGMENT

XXIII

While thus they spake, the angelic caravan,
 Arriving like a rush of mighty wind,
 Cleaving the fields of space, as doth the swan
 Some silver stream (say Ganges, Nile, or Inde,
 Or Thames, or Tweed), and 'midst them an old man
 With an old soul, and both extremely
 blind,
 Halted before the gate, and in his shroud
 Seated their fellow traveller on a cloud.

XXIV

But bringing up the rear of this bright host
 A Spirit of a different aspect waved His wings, like thunder-clouds above some coast
 Whose barren beach with frequent wrecks is paved;
 His brow was like the deep when tempest-
 toss'd;
 Fierce and unfathomable thoughts engraved
 Eternal wrath on his immortal face,
 And where he gazed a gloom pervaded space.

XXV

As he drew near, he gazed upon the gate
 Ne'er to be enter'd more by him or Sin,
 With such a glance of supernatural hate,
 As made Saint Peter wish himself with-
 in;
 He patter'd with his keys at a great rate,
 And sweated through his apostolic skin:
 Of course his perspiration was but ichor,
 Or some such other spiritual liquor.

XXVI

The very cherubs huddled all together,
 Like birds when soars the falcon; and they felt
 A tingling to the tip of every feather,
 And form'd a circle like Orion's belt Around their poor old charge; who scarce knew whither
 His guards had led him, though they gently dealt
 With royal manes (for by many stories,
 And true, we learn the angels all are Tories).

XXVII

As things were in this posture, the gate flew Asunder, and the flashing of its hinges Flung over space an universal hue
 Of many-colour'd flame, until its tinges Reach'd even our speck of earth, and made a new Aurora borealis spread its fringes

O'er the North Pole; the same seen, when ice-bound,
 By Captain Parry's crew, in 'Melville's Sound.'

XXVIII

And from the gate thrown open issued beaming
 A beautiful and mighty Thing of Light, Radiant with glory, like a banner stream-
 ing
 Victorious from some world-o'erthrow-
 ing fight:
 My poor comparisons must needs be teeming
 With earthly likenesses, for here the
 night
 Of clay obscures our best conceptions, saving Johanna Southcote, or Bob Southey raving.

XXIX

'Twas the archangel Michael; all men
 know
 The make of angels and archangels,
 since
 There's scarce a scribbler has not one to
 show,
 From the fiends' leader to the angels'
 prince;
 There also are some altar-pieces, though
 I really can't say that they much evince
 One's inner notions of immortal spirits;
 But let the connoisseurs explain their merits.

XXX

Michael flew forth in glory and in good;
 A goodly work of him from whom all
 glory
 And good arise; the portal past—he stood;
 Before him the young cherubs and saints hoary—
 (I say young, begging to be understood By looks, not years; and should be very sorry
 To state, they were not older than St.
 Peter,
 But merely that they seem'd a little sweeter).

XXXI

The cherubs and the saints bow'd down
 before
 That arch-angelic hierarch, the first
 Of essences angelical, who wore
 The aspect of a god; but this ne'er nursed
 Pride in his heavenly bosom, in whose core No thought, save for his Master's service, durst
 Intrude, however glorified and high;
 He knew him but the viceroy of the sky.

THE VISION OF JUDGMENT

XXXII

He and the sombre, silent Spirit met—
They knew each other both for good and ill;
Such was their power, that neither could
forget

His former friend and future foe; but still
There was a high, immortal, proud regret
In either's eye, as if 'twere less their will Than destiny to make the eternal years
Their date of war, and their 'champ clos' the spheres.

XXXIII

But here they were in neutral space: we
know

From Job, that Satan hath the power to
pay

A heavenly visit thrice a year or so;
And that the 'sons of God', like those
of clay,

Must keep him company; and we might
show

From the same book, in how polite a
way

The dialogue is held between the Powers
Of Good and Evil—but 'twould take up
hours.

XXXIV

And this is not a theologic tract,
To prove with Hebrew and with Arabic,
If Job be allegory or a fact,

But a true narrative; and thus I pick From out the whole but such and such an act

As sets aside the slightest thought of trick.

'Tis every tittle true, beyond suspicion,
And accurate as any other vision.

XXXV

The spirits were in neutral space, before
The gate of heaven; like eastern threshholds is

The place where Death's grand cause is argued o'er,

And souls despatch'd to that world or
to this;

And therefore Michael and the other wore
A civil aspect: though they did not kiss,

Yet still between his Darkness and his Brightness

There pass'd a mutual glance of great politeness.

XXXVI

The Archangel bow'd, not like a modern beau,

But with a graceful Oriental bend,
Pressing one radiant arm just where below

The heart in good men is supposed to tend;

He turn'd as to an equal, not too low,

But kindly; Satan met his ancient friend
With more hauteur, as might an old Castilian
Poor noble meet a mushroom rich civilian.

XXXVII

He merely bent his diabolic brow
An instant; and then raising it, he stood

In act to assert his right or wrong, and show Cause why King George by no means could or should Make out a case to be exempt from woe

Eternal, more than other kings, endued With better sense and hearts, whom history mentions,

Who long have 'paved hell with their good intentions.'

XXXVIII

Michael began: 'What wouldst thou with this man,

Now dead, and brought before the Lord? What ill

Hath he wrought since his mortal race began,
That thou canst claim him? Speak! and do thy will,

If it be just: if in this earthly span

He hath been greatly failing to fulfil
His duties as a king and mortal, say,

And he is thine; if not, let him have way.'

XXXIX

'Michael!' replied the Prince of Air, 'even
here,

Before the Gate of him thou servest,
must

I claim my subject: and will make appear
That as he was my worshipper in dust,

So shall he be in spirit, although dear
To thee and thine, because nor wine nor lust

Were of his weaknesses; yet on the throne

He reign'd o'er millions to serve me alone.

XL

'Look to our earth, or rather mine; it was,
Once, more thy master's: but I triumph

not
In this poor planet's conquest; nor, alas!

Need he thou servest envy me my lot:
With all the myriads of bright worlds which pass

In worship round him, he may have

forgot
Yon weak creation of such paltry things:

I think few worth damnation save their kings,—

XLI

'And these but as a kind of quit-rent, to Assert my right as lord: and even had

I such an inclination, 'twere (as you Well know) superfluous; they are grown

so bad,

THE VISION OF JUDGMENT

That hell has nothing better left to do
 Than leave them to themselves: so much more mad
 And evil by their own internal curse, Heaven cannot make them better, nor I worse.

XLII

'Look to the earth, I said, and say again:
 When this old, blind, mad, helpless, weak, poor worm
 Began in youth's first bloom and flush to
 reign,
 The world and he both wore a different
 form,
 And much of earth and all the watery plain
 Of ocean call'd him king: through many a storm
 His isles had floated on the abyss of time;
 For the rough virtues chose them for their clime.

XLIII

'He came to his sceptre young; he leaves
 it old:
 Look to the state in which he found his realm,
 And left it; and his annals too behold,
 How to a minion first he gave the helm;
 How grew upon his heart a thirst for gold,
 The beggar's vice, which can but overwhelm
 The meanest hearts; and for the rest, but
 glance
 Thine eye along America and France.

XLIV

'Tis true, he was a tool from first to last (I have the workmen safe); but as a tool
 So let him be consumed. From out the
 past
 Of ages, since mankind have known the rule
 Of monarchs—from the bloody rolls
 amass'd
 Of sin and slaughter—from the Cæsar's
 school,
 Take the worst pupil; and produce a reign
 More drench'd with gore, more cumber'd with the slain.

XLV

'He ever warr'd with freedom and the
 free:
 Nations as men, home subjects, foreign
 foes,
 So that they utter'd the word "Liberty!"
 Found George the Third their first opponent. Whose History was ever stain'd as his will be
 With national and individual woes?
 I grant his household abstinence; I grant
 His neutral virtues, which most monarchs want;

XLVI

'I know he was a constant consort;
 own
 He was a decent sire, and middling
 lord.
 All this is much, and most upon a throne;
 As temperance, if at Apicius' board,
 Is more than at an anchorite's supper
 shown.
 I grant him all the kindest can accord;
 And this was well for him, but not for
 those Millions who found him what oppression chose.

XLVII

'The New World shook him off; the Old yet groans Beneath what he and his prepared, if
 not Completed: he leaves heirs on many thrones
 To all his vices, without what begot Compassion for him—his tame virtues;
 drones
 Who sleep, or despots who have now
 forgot
 A lesson which shall be re-taught them,
 wake
 Upon the thrones of earth; but let them
 quake!

XLVIII

'Five millions of the primitive, who hold
 The faith which makes ye great on earth, implored
 A part of that vast all they held of old,— Freedom to worship—not alone your
 Lord,
 Michael, but you, and you, Saint Peter!
 Cold
 Must be your souls, if you have not abhorr'd
 The foe to Catholic participation
 In all the license of a Christian nation.

XLIX

'True! he allow'd them to pray God; but as
 A consequence of prayer, refused the
 law
 Which would have placed them upon the same base
 With those who did not hold the saints in awe.
 But here Saint Peter started from his
 place,
 And cried, 'You may the prisoner withdraw:
 Ere heaven shall ope her portals to this Guelph, While I am guard, may I be damn'd myself!

L

'Sooner will I with Cerberus exchange
My office (and his is no sinecure)
Than see this royal Bedlam bigot range
The azure fields of heaven, of that be sure!'
'Saint!' replied Satan, 'you do well to avenge
The wrongs he made your satellites
endure;
And if to this exchange you should be
given,
I'll try to coax our Cerberus up to heaven!'

LI

Here Michael interposed: 'Good saint!
and devil!
Pray, not so fast; you both outrun discretion.
Saint Peter! you were wont to be more civil!
Satan! excuse this warmth of his expression,
And condescension to the vulgar's level:
Even saints sometimes forget themselves in session.
Have you got more to say?'—'No.'—'If you please,
I'll trouble you to call your witnesses.'

LII

Then Satan turn'd and waved his swarthy
hand,
Which stirr'd with its electric qualities
Clouds farther off than we can understand, Although we find him sometimes in our
skies;
Infernal thunder shook both sea and land
In all the planets, and hell's batteries
Let off the artillery, which Milton men-
tions
As one of Satan's most sublime inventions.

LIII

This was a signal unto such damn'd souls
As have the privilege of their damnation
Extended far beyond the mere controls
Of worlds past, present, or to come; no
station
Is theirs particularly in the rolls
Of hell assign'd; but where their inclina-
tion
Or business carries them in search of game,
They may range freely—being damn'd the
same.

LIV

They're proud of this—as very well they
may,
It being a sort of knighthood, or gilt key
Stuck in their loins; or like to an 'entré'
Up the back stairs, or such freemasonry.

I borrow my comparisons from clay,
Being clay myself. Let not those spirits
be Offended with such base low likenesses;
We know their posts are nobler far than these.

LV

When the great signal ran from heaven to hell—
About ten million times the distance
reckon'd
From our sun to its earth, as we can tell How much time it takes up, even to a second,
For every ray that travels to dispel
The fogs of London, through which,
dimly beacon'd,
The weathercocks are gilt some thrice a
year,
If that the summer is not too severe:

LVI

I say that I can tell—'twas half a minute;
I know the solar beams take up more
time
Ere, pack'd up for their journey, they begin it;
But then their telegraph is less sublime,
And if they ran a race, they would not win
it
'Gainst Satan's couriers bound for their own clime.
The sun takes up some years for every ray
To reach its goal—the devil not half a day.

LVII

Upon the verge of space, about the size
Of half-a-crown, a little speck appear'd
(I've seen a something like it in the skies
In the Ægean, ere a squall); it near'd,
And, growing bigger, took another guise;
Like an aerial ship it tack'd, and steer'd, Or was steer'd (I am doubtful of the grammar
Of the last phrase, which makes the stanza stammer;—

LVIII

But take your choice): and then it grew a
cloud;
And so it was—a cloud of witnesses.
But such a cloud! No land e'er saw a
crowd
Of locusts numerous as the heavens saw
these;
They shadow'd with their myriads space;
their loud
And varied cries were like those of wild geese
(If nations may be liken'd to a goose),
And realised the phrase of 'hell broke loose.'

THE VISION OF JUDGMENT

LIX

Here crash'd a sturdy oath of stout John Bull,
Who damn'd away his eyes as heretofore:
There Paddy brogued 'By Jasus!'—
'What's your wull?'
The temperate Scot exclaim'd: the French ghost swore
In certain terms I shan't translate in full,
As the first coachman will; and 'midst the war,
The voice of Jonathan was heard to express,
'Our president is going to war, I guess.'

LX

Besides there were the Spaniard, Dutch, and Dane;
In short, an universal shoal of shades,
From Otaheite's isle to Salisbury Plain,
Of all climes and professions, years and trades,
Ready to swear against the good king's reign,
Bitter as clubs in cards are against spades:
All summon'd by this grand 'subpœna,'
to Try if kings mayn't be damn'd like me or you.

LXI

When Michael saw this host, he first grew pale,
As angels can; next, like Italian twilight,
He turn'd all colours—as a peacock's tail,
Or sunset streaming through a Gothic skylight
In some old abbey, or a trout not stale,
Or distant lightning on the horizon by night,
Or a fresh rainbow, or a grand review
Of thirty regiments in red, green, and blue.

LXII

Then he address'd himself to Satan:
'Why—
My good old friend, for such I deem you, though
Our different parties make us fight so shy,
I ne'er mistake you for a personal foe;
Our difference is political, and I Trust that, whatever may occur below,
You know my great respect for you: and this Makes me regret whate'er you do amiss—

LXIII

'Why, my dear Lucifer, would you abuse
My call for witnesses? I did not mean That you should half of earth and hell
produce;

'Tis even superfluous, since two honest,
clean,
True testimonies are enough: we lose
Our time, nay, our eternity, between
The accusation and defence: if we Hear both, 'twill stretch our immortality.'

LXIV

Satan replied, 'To me the matter is Indifferent, in a personal point of view:
I can have fifty better souls than this
With far less trouble than we have gone
through Already; and I merely argued his Late majesty of Britain's case with you Upon a point of form: you may dispose Of him; I've kings enough below, God knows!'

LXV

Thus spoke the Demon (late call'd 'multi-faced'
By multo-scribbling Southey). 'Then we'll call
One or two persons of the myriads placed Around our congress, and dispense with
all
The rest,' quoth Michael: 'Who may be so graced
As to speak first? there's choice enough—who shall
It be?' Then Satan answer'd, 'There are many;
But you may choose Jack Wilkes as well as any.'

LXVI

A merry, cock-eyed, curious-looking sprite
Upon the instant started from the
throng,
Dress'd in a fashion now forgotten quite;
For all the fashions of the flesh stick
long
By people in the next world; where unite
All the costumes since Adam's, right or
wrong,
From Eve's fig-leaf down to the petticoat,
Almost as scanty, of days less remote.

LXVII

The spirit look'd around upon the crowds Assembled, and exclaim'd, 'My friends
of all
The spheres, we shall catch cold amongst these clouds;
So let's to business: why this general
call?
If those are freeholders I see in shrouds,
And 'tis for an election that they bawl,
Behold a candidate with unturn'd coat!
Saint Peter, may I count upon your vote?'

LXVIII

'Sir,' replied Michael, 'you mistake; these things
Are of a former life, and what we do
Above is more august; to judge of kings
Is the tribunal met: so now you know.'
'Then I presume those gentlemen with
wings,'
Said Wilkes, 'are cherubs; and that soul
below
Looks much like George the Third, but to my mind
A good deal older—Bless me! is he blind?'

LXIX

'He is what you behold him, and his doom
Depends upon his deeds,' the Angel
said;
'If you have aught to arraign in him, the
tomb
Gives licence to the humblest beggar's
head
To lift itself against the loftiest.'—'Some,'
Said Wilkes, 'don't wait to see them laid in lead,
For such a liberty—and I, for one,
Have told them what I thought beneath
the sun.'

LXX

'Above the sun repeat, then, what thou hast
To urge against him,' said the Archangel. 'Why,' Replied the spirit, 'since old scores are
past,
Must I turn evidence? In faith, not I.
Besides, I beat him hollow at the last,
With all his Lords and Commons: in the sky
I don't like ripping up old stories, since
His conduct was but natural in a prince.'

LXXI

'Foolish, no doubt, and wicked, to oppress
A poor unlucky devil without a shilling;
But then I blame the man himself much less Than Bute and Grafton, and shall be unwilling
To see him punish'd here for their excess,
Since they were both damn'd long ago,
and still in
Their place below: for me, I have forgiven,
And vote his "habeas corpus" into heaven.'

LXXII

'Wilkes,' said the Devil, 'I understand all
this;
You turn'd to half a courtier ere you
died,
And seem to think it would not be amiss
To grow a whole one on the other side

Of Charon's ferry; you forget that his Reign is concluded; whatsoe'er betide,
He won't be sovereign more: you've lost your labour,
For at the best he will but be your neighbour.

LXXIII

'However, I knew what to think of it,
When I beheld you in your jesting way, Flitting and whispering round about the spit
Where Belial, upon duty for the day,
With Fox's lard was basting William Pitt,
His pupil; I knew what to think, I say:
That fellow even in hell breeds farther ills;
I'll have him gagg'd—'twas one of his own bills.

LXXIV

'Call Junius!' From the crowd a shadow
stalk'd,
And at the name there was a general
squeeze,
So that the very ghosts no longer walk'd
In comfort, at their own aerial ease,
But were all ramm'd, and jamm'd (but to be balk'd,
As we shall see), and jostled hands and knees,
Like wind compress'd and pent within a bladder,
Or like a human colic, which is sadder.

LXXV

The shadow came—a tall, thin, greyhair'd figure,
That look'd as it had been a shade on
earth;
Quick in its motions, with an air of vigour,
But nought to mark its breeding or its
birth;
Now it wax'd little, then again grew bigger,
With now an air of gloom, or savage
mirth;
But as you gazed upon its features, they Changed every instant—to what, none could say.

LXXVI

The more intently the ghosts gazed, the less Could they distinguish whose the features were;
The Devil himself seem'd puzzled even to
guess;
They varied like a dream—now here,
now there;
And several people swore from out the
press,
They knew him perfectly; and one could swear
He was his father: upon which another Was sure he was his mother's cousin's
brother:

THE VISION OF JUDGMENT

LXXVII

Another, that he was a duke, or knight,
An orator, a lawyer, or a priest,
A nabob, a man-midwife; but the wight Mysterious changed his countenance at least
As oft as they their minds; though in full
sight

He stood, the puzzle only was increased;
The man was a phantasmagoria in Himself—he was so volatile and thin.

LXXVIII

The moment that you had pronounced him one,

Presto! his face changed, and he was another;

And when that change was hardly well put
on,

It varied, till I don't think his own
mother

(If that he had a mother) would her son Have known, he shifted so from one to t'other;

Till guessing from a pleasure grew a task,
At this epistolary 'Iron Mask.'

LXXIX

For sometimes he like Cerberus would seem—

'Three gentlemen at once' (as sagely says

Good Mrs. Malaprop); then you might deem

That he was not even one; now many rays

Were flashing round him; and now a thick steam

Hid him from sight—like fogs on London days:

Now Burke, now Tooke, he grew to people's fancies,

And certes often like Sir Philip Francis.

LXXX

I've an hypothesis—'tis quite my own;

I never let it out till now, for fear

Of doing people harm about the throne,

And injuring some minister or peer,
On whom the stigma might perhaps be blown;

It is—my gentle public, lend thine ear!
'Tis, that what Junius we are wont to call

Was really, truly, nobody at all.

LXXXI

I don't see wherefore letters should not be Written without hands, since we daily
view

Them written without heads; and books,
we see,

Are fill'd as well without the latter too:
And really till we fix on somebody

For certain sure to claim them as his
due,
Their author, like the Niger's mouth, will bother
The world to say if there be mouth or author.

LXXXII

'And who and what art thou?' the Archangel said.

'For that you may consult my title-
page,

Replied this mighty shadow of a shade:

'If I have kept my secret half an age,
I scarce shall tell it now.'—'Canst thou
upbraid,'

Continued Michael, 'George Rex, or allege

Aught further?' Junius answer'd, 'You had better

First ask him for his answer to my letter:

LXXXIII

'My charges upon record will outlast

The brass of both his epitaph and tomb.'
'Repent'st thou not,' said Michael, 'of some past

Exaggeration? something which may
doom

Thyself if false, as him if true? Thou wast
Too bitter—is it not so?—in thy gloom

Of passion?'—'Passion!' cried the phantom dim,

'I loved my country, and I hated him.

LXXXIV

'What I have written, I have written: let
The rest be on his head or mine!' So spoke

Old 'Nominis Umbra'; and while speaking yet,

Away he melted in celestial smoke.

Then Satan said to Michael, 'Don't forget
To call George Washington, and John

Horne Tooke,
And Franklin;—but at this time there was heard

A cry for room, though not a phantom stirr'd.

LXXXV

At length with jostling, elbowing, and the aid

Of cherubim appointed to that post,
The devil Asmodeus to the circle made

His way, and look'd as if his journey
cost

Some trouble. When his burden down he
laid,

'What's this?' cried Michael; 'why,
'tis not a ghost?'

'I know it,' quoth the incubus; 'but he Shall be one, if you leave the affair to me.

LXXXVI

'Confound the renegado! I have sprain'd My left wing, he's so heavy; one would think
Some of his works about his neck were chain'd.

But to the point; while hovering o'er the brink
Of Skiddaw (where as usual it still rain'd),
I saw a taper, far below me, wink,
And stooping, caught this fellow at a libel—
No less on history than the Holy Bible.

LXXXVII

'The former is the devil's scripture, and
The latter yours, good Michael: so the affair

Belongs to all of us, you understand.
I snatch'd him up just as you see him
there,
And brought him off for sentence out of
hand:

I've scarcely been ten minutes in the
air—
At least a quarter it can hardly be:
I dare say that his wife is still at tea.'

LXXXVIII

Here Satan said, 'I know this man of old,
And have expected him for some time
here;

A sillier fellow you will scarce behold,
Or more conceited in his petty sphere:
But surely it was not worth while to fold
Such trash below your wing, Asmodeus
dear:

We had the poor wretch safe (without being bored
With carriage) coming of his own accord.

LXXXIX

'But since he's here, let's see what he has
done.'

'Done!' cried Asmodeus, 'he anticipates

The very business you are now upon,
And scribbles as if head clerk to the Fates.

Who knows to what his ribaldry may run,
When such an ass as this, like Balaam's, prates?'

'Let's hear,' quoth Michael, 'what he has
to say:

You know we're bound to that in every way.'

XC

Now the bard, glad to get an audience,
which

By no means often was his case below, Began to cough, and hawk, and hem, and pitch

His voice into that awful note of woe

To all unhappy hearers within reach Of poets when the tide of rhyme's in
flow;
But stuck fast with his first hexameter,
Not one of all whose gouty feet would stir.

XCII

But ere the spavin'd dactyls could be spurr'd

Into recitative, in great dismay
Both cherubim and seraphim were heard
To murmur loudly through their long array;

And Michael rose ere he could get a word
Of all his founder'd verses under way,
And cried, 'For God's sake stop, my friend! 'twere best—

Non Di, non homines—you know the rest.'

XCIII

A general bustle spread throughout the
throng,

Which seem'd to hold all verse in detes-
tation;

The angels had of course enough of song
When upon service; and the generation
Of ghosts had heard too much in life, not
long

Before, to profit by a new occasion:
The monarch, mute till then, exclaim'd,
'What! what!

Pye come again? No more—no more of that!'

XCIII

The tumult grew; an universal cough
Convulsed the skies, as during a debate,
When Castlereagh has been up long
enough

(Before he was first minister of state,
I mean—the slaves hear now); some cried
'Off, off!'

As at a farce; till, grown quite desperate,
The bard Saint Peter pray'd to interpose (Himself an author) only for his prose.

XCIV

The varlet was not an ill-favour'd knave;
A good deal like a vulture in the face,
With a hook nose and a hawk's eye, which
gave

A smart and sharper-looking sort of
grace

To his whole aspect, which, though rather
grave,

Was by no means so ugly as his case;
But that, indeed, was hopeless as can be,
Quite a poetic felony 'de se.'

XCIV

Then Michael blew his trump, and still'd
the noise

With one still greater, as is yet the mode
On earth besides; except some grumbling
voice,

THE VISION OF JUDGMENT

Which now and then will make a slight inroad
Upon decorous silence, few will twice Lift up their lungs when fairly over-
crow'd;
And now the bard could plead his own bad
cause,
With all the attitudes of self-applause.

XCVI

He said—(I only give the heads)—he said,
He meant no harm in scribbling; 'twas his way
Upon all topics; 'twas, besides, his bread,
Of which he butter'd both sides; 'twould
delay Too long the assembly (he was pleased to dread),
And take up rather more time than a
day,
To name his works—he would but cite a
few—
'Wat Tyler'—'Rhymes on Blenheim'—
'Waterloo.'

XCVII

He had written praises of a regicide;
He had written praises of all kings what-
ever;
He had written for republics far and wide,
And then against them bitterer than ever;
For pantisocracy he once had cried Aloud, a scheme less moral than 'twas clever;
Then grew a hearty anti-jacobin—
Had turn'd his coat—and would have turn'd his skin.

XCVIII

He had sung against all battles, and again
In their high praise and glory; he had call'd
Reviewing 'the ungentle craft,' and then Become as base a critic as e'er crawl'd—
Fed, paid, and pamper'd by the very men
By whom his muse and morals had been maul'd:
He had written much blank verse, and blanker prose,
And more of both than anybody knows.

XCIX

He had written Wesley's life:—here turning round
To Satan, 'Sir, I'm ready to write yours,
In two octavo volumes, nicely bound,
With notes and preface, all that most allures
The pious purchaser; and there's no
ground
For fear, for I can choose my own reviewers:
So let me have the proper documents,
That I may add you to my other saints.'

C

Satan bow'd, and was silent. 'Well, if you,
With amiable modesty, decline
My offer, what says Michael? There are few Whose memoirs could be render'd more
divine.
Mine is a pen of all work; not so new
As it was once, but I would make you
shine
Like your own trumpet. By the way, my
own
Has more of brass in it, and is as well blown.

CI

'But talking about trumpets, here's my Vision!
Now you shall judge, all people; yes,
you shall Judge with my judgment, and by my decision
Be guided who shall enter heaven or fall.
I settle all these things by intuition,
Times present, past, to come, heaven,
hell, and all,
Like King Alfonso. When I thus see
double,
I save the Deity some worlds of trouble.'

CII

He ceased, and drew forth an MS.; and no
Persuasion on the part of devils, saints,
Or angels, now could stop the torrent; so
He read the first three lines of the contents;
But at the fourth, the whole spiritual show
Had vanish'd, with variety of scents, Ambrosial and sulphureous, as they sprang,
Like lightning, off from his 'melodious twang.'

CIII

Those grand heroics acted as a spell:
The angels stopp'd their ears and plied
their pinions;
The devils ran howling, deafen'd, down to
hell;
The ghosts fled, gibbering, for their own dominions—
(For 'tis not yet decided where they dwell,
And I leave every man to his opinions);
Michael took refuge in his trump—but, lo!
His teeth were set on edge, he could not blow!

CIV

Saint Peter, who has hitherto been known For an impetuous saint, upraised his keys,
And at the fifth line knock'd the poet
down;
Who fell like Phaeton, but more at ease,

Into his lake, for there he did not drown;
 A different web being by the Destinies Woven for the Laureate's final wreath, whene'er
 Reform shall happen either here or there.

CV

He first sank to the bottom—like his works,
 But soon rose to the surface—like himself;
 For all corrupted things are buoy'd like corks,
 By their own rottenness, light as an elf,
 Or wisp that flits o'er a morass: he lurks,
 It may be, still, like dull books on a shelf,

In his own den, to scrawl some 'Life' or
 'Vision,'
 As Welborn says—'the devil turn'd precisian.'

CVI

As for the rest, to come to the conclusion
 Of this true dream, the telescope is gone
 Which kept my optics free from all delusion,
 And show'd me what I in my turn have
 shown;
 All I saw farther, in the last confusion,
 Was, that King George slipp'd into heaven for one;
 And when the tumult dwindled to a calm,
 I left him practising the hundredth psalm.

THE AGE OF BRONZE

OR,

CARMEN SECULARE ET ANNUS HAUD MIRABILIS

'Impar Congressus Achilli.'

I

THE 'good old times'—all times when old are good—
 Are gone; the present might be if they would;
 Great things have been, and are, and greater still Want little of mere mortals but their will:
 A wider space, a greener field, is given
 To those who play their 'tricks before high
 heaven.'
 I know not if the angels weep, but men
 Have wept enough—for what?—to weep
 again!

II

All is exploded—be it good or bad.
 Reader! remember when thou wert a lad,
 Then Pitt was all; or, if not all, so much,
 His very rival almost deem'd him such.
 We, we have seen the intellectual race
 Of giants stand, like Titans, face to face—
 Athos and Ida, with a dashing sea
 Of eloquence between, which flow'd all free,
 As the deep billows of the Ægean roar Betwixt the Hellenic and the Phrygian
 shore.
 But where are they—the rivals! a few feet
 Of sullen earth divide each winding sheet.
 How peaceful and how powerful is the
 grave,
 Which hushes all! a calm, unstormy wave,
 Which oversweeps the world. The theme is old
 Of 'dust to dust;' but half its tale untold:

Time tempers not its terrors—still the worm
 Winds its cold folds, the tomb preserves its form,
 Varied above, but still alike below;
 The urn may shine, the ashes will not glow,
 Though Cleopatra's mummy cross the sea O'er which from empire she lured Anthony;
 Though Alexander's urn a show be grown
 On shores he wept to conquer, though unknown—
 How vain, how worse than vain, at length appear
 The madman's wish, the Macedonian's
 tear!
 He wept for worlds to conquer—half the
 earth
 Knows not his name, or but his death, and
 birth,
 And desolation; while his native Greece
 Hath all of desolation, save its peace.
 He 'wept for worlds to conquer'! he who ne'er
 Conceived the globe, he panted not to
 spare!
 With even the busy Northern Isle un-
 known,
 Which holds his urn, and never knew his throne.

III

But where is he, the modern, mightier far,
 Who, born no king, made monarchs draw his car;

THE AGE OF BRONZE

The new Sesostris, whose unharness'd kings, ⁴⁵
 Freed from the bit, believe themselves with wings,
 And spurn the dust o'er which they crawl'd
 of late,
 Chain'd to the chariot of the chieftain's
 state?
 Yes! where is he, the champion and the
 child
 Of all that's great or little, wise or wild;
 Whose game was empires, and whose stakes were thrones; ⁵¹
 Whose table earth—whose dice were human bones?
 Behold the grand result in yon lone isle,
 And, as thy nature urges, weep or smile.
 Sigh to behold the eagle's lofty rage ⁵⁵
 Reduced to nibble at his narrow cage;
 Smile to survey the queller of the nations
 Now daily squabbling o'er disputed rations;
 Weep to perceive him mourning, as he dines, O'er curtail'd dishes and o'er stinted wines; ⁶⁰
 O'er petty quarrels upon petty things.
 Is this the man who scourged or feasted
 kings?
 Behold the scales in which his fortune
 hangs,
 A surgeon's statement, and an earl's
 harangues! ⁶⁴
 A bust delayed, a book refused, can shake
 The sleep of him who kept the world
 awake.
 Is this indeed the tamer of the great,
 Now slave of all could tease or irritate—
 The paltry gaoler and the prying spy,
 The staring stranger with his note-book nigh? ⁷⁰
 Plunged in a dungeon he had still been
 great;
 How low, how little was this middle state,
 Between a prison and a palace, where How few could feel for what he had to
 bear!
 Vain his complaint,—my lord presents his bill, ⁷⁵
 His food and wine were doled out duly still;
 Vain was his sickness, never was a clime
 So free from homicide—to doubt's a
 crime;
 And the stiff surgeon, who maintain'd his
 cause,
 Hath lost his place, and gain'd the world's applause. ⁸⁰
 But smile—though all the pangs of brain
 and heart
 Disdain, defy, the tardy aid of art; Though, save the few fond friends and imaged face
 Of that fair boy his sire shall ne'er embrace,

None stand by his low bed—though even
 the mind ⁸⁵
 Be wavering, which long awed and awes
 mankind:
 Smile—for the fetter'd eagle breaks his
 chain,
 And higher worlds than this are his again.

IV

How, if that soaring spirit still retain
 A conscious twilight of his blazing reign, How must he smile, on looking down, to see ⁹¹
 The little that he was and sought to be!
 What though his name a wider empire
 found
 Than his ambition, though with scarce a bound; ⁹⁴
 Though first in glory, deepest in reverse,
 He tasted empire's blessings and its curse;
 Though kings, rejoicing in their late escape
 From chains, would gladly be their tyrant's ape;
 How must he smile, and turn to yon lone
 grave,
 The proudest sea-mark that o'ertops the wave! ¹⁰⁰
 What though his gaoler, duteous to the
 last,
 Scarce deem'd the coffin's lead could keep him fast,
 Refusing one poor line along the lid,
 To date the birth and death of all it hid;
 That name shall hallow the ignoble shore,
 A talisman to all save him who bore: ¹⁰⁶
 The fleets that sweep before the eastern
 blast
 Shall hear their sea-boys hail it from the mast;
 When Victory's Gallic column shall but rise, ¹⁰⁹
 Like Pompey's pillar, in a desert's skies,
 The rocky isle that holds or held his dust,
 Shall crown the Atlantic like the hero's
 bust,
 And mighty nature o'er his obsequies
 Do more than niggard envy still denies.
 But what are these to him? Can glory's lust ¹¹⁵
 Touch the freed spirit or the fetter'd dust?
 Small care hath he of what his tomb consists;
 Nought if he sleeps—nor more if he exists:
 Alike the better-seeing shade will smile
 On the rude cavern of the rocky isle, ¹²⁰
 As if his ashes found their latest home
 In Rome's Pantheon or Gaul's mimic
 dome.
 He wants not this; but France shall feel the want
 Of this last consolation, though so scant:
 Her honour, fame, and faith demand his bones, ¹²⁵
 To rear above a pyramid of thrones;

Or carried onward in the battle's van,
To form, like Guesclin's dust, her talisman.
But be it as it is—the time may come
His name shall beat the alarm, like Ziska's drum. 130

Oh heaven! of which he was in power a feature;
Oh earth! of which he was a noble creature;
Thou isle! to be remember'd long and well,
That saw'st the unfledged eaglet chip his shell!

Ye Alps, which view'd him in his dawning flights 135
Hover, the victor of a hundred fights!
Thou Rome, who saw'st thy Cæsar's deeds outdone!

Alas! why pass'd he too the Rubicon—
The Rubicon of man's awaken'd rights,
To herd with vulgar kings and parasites?
Egypt! from whose all dateless tombs arose 141

Forgotten Pharaohs from their long repose,

And shook within their pyramids to hear
A new Cambyzes thundering in their ear;
While the dark shades of forty ages stood
Like startled giants by Nile's famous flood; 146

Or from the pyramid's tall pinnacle
Beheld the desert peopled, as from hell,
With clashing hosts, who strew'd the barren sand,

To re-manure the uncultivated land!
Spain! which, a moment mindless of the Cid, 151

Beheld his banner flouting thy Madrid!
Austria! which saw thy twice-ta'en capital

Twice spared to be the traitress of his fall!
Ye race of Frederic!—Frederics but in name 155

And falsehood—heirs to all except his fame:

Who, crush'd at Jena, crouch'd at Berlin, fell

First, and but rose to follow! Ye who dwell

Where Kosciusko dwelt, remembering yet
The unpaid amount of Catherine's bloody debt! 160

Poland! o'er which the avenging angel pass'd,

But left thee as he found thee, still a waste,
Forgetting all thy still enduring claim,
Thy lotted people and extinguish'd name,
Thy sigh for freedom, thy long-flowing tear, 165

That sound that crashes in the tyrant's ear—

Kosciusko! On—on—on—the thirst of war

Gasps for the gore of serfs and of their Czar.

The half barbaric Moscow's minarets
Gleam in the sun, but 'tis a sun that sets!
Moscow! thou limit of his long career,
For which rude Charles had wept his frozen tear 172

To see in vain—he saw thee—how? with spire

And palace fuel to one common fire.
To this the soldier lent his kindling match,

To this the peasant gave his cottage thatch, 176

To this the merchant flung his hoarded store,

The prince his hall—and Moscow was no more!

Sublimest of volcanos! Etna's flame
Pales before thine, and quenchless Hecla's tame; 180

Vesuvius shows his blaze, an usual sight
For gaping tourists, from his hackney'd height:

Thou stand'st alone unrivall'd, till the fire
To come, in which all empires shall expire!

Thou other element! as strong and stern,
To teach a lesson conquerors will not learn!— 186

Whose icy wing flapp'd o'er the faltering foe,
Till fell a hero with each flake of snow:
How did thy numbing beak and silent fang
Pierce, till hosts perish'd with a single pang! 190

In vain shall Seine look up along his banks
For the gay thousands of his dashing ranks!

In vain shall France recall beneath her vines
Her youth—their blood flows faster than her wines; 194

Or stagnant in their human ice remains
In frozen mummies on the Polar plains.

In vain will Italy's broad sun awaken
Her offspring chill'd; its beams are now forsaken.

Of all the trophies gather'd from the war,
What shall return? the conqueror's broken car! 200

The conqueror's yet unbroken heart! Again

The horn of Roland sounds, and not in vain.

Lutzen, where fell the Swede of victory,
Beholds him conquer, but, alas! not die:
Dresden surveys three despots fly once more 205

Before their sovereign,—sovereign as before;

But there exhausted Fortune quits the field,

And Leipsic's treason bids the unvanquish'd yield;

THE AGE OF BRONZE

The Saxon jackal leaves the lion's side
To turn the bear's, and wolf's, and fox's
grave;
And backward to the den of his despair
The forest monarch shrinks, but finds no lair!

Oh ye! and each, and all! Oh France!
who found
Thy long fair fields plough'd up as hostile
ground,
Disputed foot by foot, till treason, still
His only victor, from Montmartre's hill Look'd down o'er trampled Paris! and thou Isle,
Which seest Etruria from thy ramparts
smile,
Thou momentary shelter of his pride,
Till woo'd by danger, his yet weeping
bride!
Oh, France! retaken by a single march,
Whose path was through one long triumphal arch!
Oh, bloody and most bootless Waterloo!
Which proves how fools may have their fortune too,
Won half by blunder, half by treachery:
Oh, dull Saint Helen! with thy gaoler
nigh—
Hear! hear Prometheus from his rock
appeal
To earth, air, ocean, all that felt or feel
His power and glory, all who yet shall hear
A name eternal as the rolling year;
He teaches them the lesson taught so long,
So oft, so vainly—learn to do no wrong!
A single step into the right had made This man the Washington of worlds be-
tray'd:
A single step into the wrong has given His name a doubt to all the winds of
heaven;
The reed of Fortune, and of thrones the
rod,
Of Fame the Moloch or the demigod;
His country's Caesar, Europe's Hannibal,
Without their decent dignity of fall.
Yet Vanity herself had better taught
A surer path even to the fame he sought,
By pointing out on history's fruitless page
Ten thousand conquerors for a single sage.
While Franklin's quiet memory climbs to
heaven,
Calming the lightning which he thence hath
riven,
Or drawing from the no less kindled earth
Freedom and peace to that which boasts
his birth;
While Washington's a watchword, such as ne'er
Shall sink while there's an echo left to air:
While even the Spaniard's thirst of gold and war
Forgets Pizarro to shout Bolivar!

Alas! why must the same Atlantic wave
Which wafted freedom gird a tyrant's
grave—
The king of kings, and yet of slaves the
slave,
Who burst the chains of millions to renew
The very fetters which his arm broke
through,
And crush'd the rights of Europe and his
own,
To flit between a dungeon and a throne?

VI

But 'twill not be—the spark's awaken'd—lo!
The swarthy Spaniard feels his former
glow;
The same high spirit which beat back the Moor
Through eight long ages of alternate gore Revives—and where? in that avenging
clime
Where Spain was once synonymous with
crime,
Where Cortes and Pizarro's banner flew,
The infant world redeems her name of
'New.'
'Tis the old aspiration breathed afresh,
To kindle souls within degraded flesh,
Such as repulsed the Persian from the
shore
Where Greece was—No! she still is Greece
once more.
One common cause makes myriads of one
breast,
Slaves of the East, or helots of the West:
On Andes' and on Athos' peaks un-
furl'd,
The self-same standard streams o'er either
world:
The Athenian wears again Harmodius'
sword;
The Chili chief abjures his foreign lord;
The Spartan knows himself once more a
Greek,
Young Freedom plumes the crest of each cacique;
Debating despots, hemm'd on either
shore,
Shrink vainly from the roused Atlantic's
roar;
Through Calpe's strait the rolling tides
advance,
Sweep slightly by the half-tamed land of France,
Dash o'er the old Spaniard's cradle, and would fain
Unite Ausonia to the mighty main:
But driven from thence awhile, yet not for
aye,
Break o'er th' Ægean, mindful of the day
Of Salamis!—there, there the waves arise,
Not to be lull'd by tyrant victories.

Lone, lost, abandon'd in their utmost
 need 290
 By Christians, unto whom they gave their
 creed,
 The desolated lands, the ravaged isle,
 The foster'd feud encouraged to beguile,
 The aid evaded, and the cold delay, Prolong'd but in the hope to make a
 prey;— 295
 These, these shall tell the tale, and Greece can show
 The false friend worse than the infuriate
 foe.
 But this is well: Greeks only should free
 Greece,
 Not the barbarian, with his mask of peace.
 How should the autocrat of bondage be
 The king of serfs, and set the nations free?
 Better still serve the haughty Mussulman,
 Than swell the Cossaque's prowling caravan;
 Better still toil for masters, than await,
 The slave of slaves, before a Russian gate,— 305
 Number'd by hordes, a human capital,
 A live estate, existing but for thrall,
 Lotted by thousands, as a meet reward
 For the first courtier in the Czar's regard;
 While their immediate owner never tastes
 His sleep, sans dreaming of Siberia's wastes: 311
 Better succumb even to their own despair,
 And drive the camel than purvey the bear.

VII

But not alone within the hoariest clime
 Where Freedom dates her birth with that of Time, 315
 And not alone where, plunged in night, a
 crowd
 Of Incas darken to a dubious cloud,
 The dawn revives: renown'd, romantic
 Spain
 Holds back the invader from her soil
 again.
 Not now the Roman tribe nor Punic
 horde 320
 Demand her fields as lists to prove the
 sword;
 Not now the Vandal or the Visigoth
 Pollute the plains, alike abhorring both;
 Nor old Pelayo on his mountain rears
 The warlike fathers of a thousand years.
 That seed is sown and reap'd, as oft the Moor 326
 Sighs to remember on his dusky shore.
 Long in the peasant's song or poet's page
 Has dwelt the memory of Abencerrage;
 The Zegri, and the captive victors, flung Back to the barbarous realm from whence they sprung. 331
 But these are gone—their faith, their swords, their sway,
 Yet left more anti-christian foes than they;

The bigot monarch, and the butcher priest,
 The Inquisition, with her burning feast,
 The faith's red 'auto,' fed with human fuel, 336
 While save the catholic Moloch, calmly
 cruel,
 Enjoying, with inexorable eye,
 That fiery festival of agony!
 The stern or feeble sovereign, one or both
 By turns; the haughtiness whose pride was sioth; 341
 The long degenerate noble; the debased
 Hidalgo, and the peasant less disgraced,
 But more degraded; the unpeopled realm;
 The once proud navy which forgot the helm; 345
 The once impervious phalanx disarray'd;
 The idle forge that form'd Toledo's blade;
 The foreign wealth that flow'd on ev'ry
 shore,
 Save hers who earn'd it with the natives'
 gore;
 The very language which might vie with Rome's, 350
 And once was known to nations like their homes,
 Neglected or forgotten:—such was Spain;
 But such she is not, nor shall be again.
 These worst, these home invaders, felt and
 feel
 The new Numantine soul of old Castile;
 Up! up again! undaunted Tauridor! 356
 The bull of Phalaris renews his roar;
 Mount, chivalrous Hidalgo! not in vain
 Revive the cry!—'Iago! and close Spain!'
 Yes, close her with your armed bosoms
 round, 360
 And form the barrier which Napoleon
 found,—
 The exterminating war, the desert plain,
 The streets without a tenant, save the slain;
 The wild sierra, with its wilder troop
 Of vulture-plumed guerrillas, on the stoop
 For their incessant prey; the desperate
 wall 366
 Of Saragossa, mightiest in her fall;
 The man nerved to a spirit, and the maid
 Waving her more than Amazonian blade;
 The knife of Arragon, Toledo's steel; 370
 The famous lance of chivalrous Castile:
 The unerring rifle of the Catalan;
 The Andalusian courser in the van;
 The torch to make a Moscow of Madrid;
 And in each heart the spirit of the Cid:—
 Such have been, such shall be, such are.
 Advance, 376
 And win—not Spain! but thine own freedom, France!

VIII

But lo! a Congress! What! that hallow'd
 name
 Which freed the Atlantic! May we hope
 the same

THE AGE OF BRONZE

For outworn Europe? With the sound
 arise, 380
 Like Samuel's shade to Saul's monarchic
 eyes,
 The prophets of young Freedom, sum-mon'd far
 From climes of Washington and Bolivar;
 Henry, the forest-born Demosthenes, Whose thunder shook the Philp of the seas; 385
 And stoic Franklin's energetic shade,
 Robed in the lightnings which his hand
 allay'd;
 And Washington, the tyrant-tamer, wake,
 To bid us blush for these old chains, or
 break.
 But who compose this senate of the few That should redeem the many? Who
 renew 391
 This consecrated name, till now assign'd
 To councils held to benefit mankind?
 Who now assemble at the holy call?
 The blest Alliance, which says three are
 all! 395
 An earthly trinity! which wears the shape
 Of heaven's, as man is mimick'd by the ape.
 A pious unity! in purpose one—
 To melt three fools to a Napoleon.
 Why, Egypt's gods were rational to these;
 Their dogs and oxen knew their own degrees, 401
 And, quiet in their kennel or their shed,
 Cared little, so that they were duly fed;
 But these, more hungry, must have something more—
 The power to bark and bite, to toss and
 gore. 405
 Ah, how much happier were good Æsop's frogs
 Than we! for ours are animated logs,
 With ponderous malice swaying to and fro,
 And crushing nations with a stupid blow;
 All duly anxious to leave little work 410
 Unto the revolutionary stork.

IX

Thrice blest Verona! since the holy three With thy imperial presence shine on
 thee!
 Honour'd by them, thy treacherous site forgets
 The vaunted tomb of 'all the Capulets';
 Thy Scaligers—for what was 'Dog the
 Great,' 416
 'Can Grande,' (which I venture to translate,)
 To these sublimer pugs? Thy poet too, Catullus, whose old laurels yield to new;
 Thine amphitheatre, where Romans sate;
 And Dante's exile shelter'd by thy gate;
 Thy good old man, whose world was all
 within
 Thy wall, nor knew the country held him in;

Would that the royal guests it girds about
 Were so far like, as never to get out! 425 Ay, shout! inscribe! rear monuments of
 shame,
 To tell Oppression that the world is tame!
 Crowd to the theatre with loyal rage,
 The comedy is not upon the stage;
 The show is rich in ribandry and stars,
 Then gaze upon it through thy dungeon bars; 431
 Clap thy permitted palms, kind Italy,
 For thus much still thy fetter'd hands are free!

X

Resplendent sight! Behold the coxcomb
 Czar,
 The autocrat of waltzes and of war! 435
 As eager for a plaudit as a realm,
 And just as fit for flirting as the helm;
 A Calmuck beauty with a Cossack wit,
 And generous spirit, when 'tis not frost-
 bit;
 Now half dissolving to a liberal thaw, 440
 But harden'd back whene'er the morning's raw;
 With no objection to true liberty,
 Except that it would make the nations
 free.
 How well the imperial dandy prates of
 peace!
 How fain, if Greeks would be his slaves,
 free Greece! 445
 How nobly gave he back the Poles their Diet,
 Then told pugnacious Poland to be quiet!
 How kindly would he send the mild Ukraine,
 With all her pleasant Pulks, to lecture
 Spain!
 How royally show off in proud Madrid
 His goodly person, from the South long hid! 451
 A blessing cheaply purchased, the world
 knows,
 By having Muscovites for friends or foes.
 Proceed, thou namesake of great Philip's
 son!
 La Harpe, thine Aristotle, beckons on;
 And that which Scythia was to him of
 yore 456
 Find with thy Scythians on Iberia's shore.
 Yet think upon, thou somewhat aged
 youth,
 Thy predecessor on the banks of Pruth;
 Thou hast to aid thee, should his lot be
 thine, 460
 Many an old woman, but no Catherine.
 Spain, too, hath rocks, and rivers, and defiles—
 The bear may rush into the lion's toils.
 Fatal to Goths are Xeres' sunny fields;
 Think'st thou to thee Napoleon's victor yields? 465

Better reclaim thy deserts, turn thy swords
 To ploughshares, shave and wash thy Bashkir hordes, Redeem thy realms from slavery and the knout,
 Than follow headlong in the fatal route,
 To infest the clime whose skies and laws are pure 470
 With thy foul legions. Spain wants no manure:
 Her soil is fertile, but she feeds no foe:
 Her vultures, too, were gorged not long ago;
 And wouldst thou furnish them with fresher prey? 474
 Alas! thou wilt not conquer, but purvey.
 I am Diogenes, though Russ and Hun Stand between mine and many a myriad's
 sun;
 But were I not Diogenes, I'd wander
 Rather a worm than such an Alexander!
 Be slaves who will, the cynic shall be
 free; 480
 His tub hath tougher walls than Sinopé:
 Still will he hold his lantern up to scan
 The face of monarchs for an 'honest man.'

XI

And what doth Gaul, the all-prolific land
 Of ne plus ultra ultras and their band
 Of mercenaries? and her noisy chambers
 And tribune, which each orator first clammers
 Before he finds a voice, and when 'tis
 found,
 Hears 'the lie' echo for his answer round?
 Our British Commons sometimes deign to
 'hear!' 490
 A Gallic senate hath more tongue than ear;
 Even Constant, their sole master of debate,
 Must fight next day his speech to vindicate.
 But this costs little to true Franks, who'd rather 494
 Combat than listen, were it to their father.
 What is the simple standing of a shot,
 To listening long, and interrupting not?
 Though this was not the method of old
 Rome,
 When Tully fulminated o'er each vocal
 dome,
 Demosthenes has sanction'd the transaction, 500
 In saying eloquence meant 'Action, action!'

XII

But where's the monarch? hath he dined?
 or yet
 Groans beneath indigestion's heavy debt?
 Have revolutionary pâtés risen,
 And turn'd the royal entrails to a prison?
 Have discontented movements stirr'd the troops? 506
 Or have no movements follow'd traitorous soups?

Have Carbonaro cooks not carbonadoed
 Each course enough! or doctors dire dissuaded 509
 Repletion? Ah! in thy dejected looks
 I read all France's treason in her cooks!
 Good classic Louis! is it, canst thou say,
 Desirable to be the 'Desiré'?
 Why wouldst thou leave calm Hartwell's
 green abode,
 Apician table, and Horatian ode, 515
 To rule a people who will not be ruled,
 And love much rather to be scourged than school'd?
 Ah! thine was not the temper or the taste
 For thrones; the table sees thee better
 placed:
 A mild Epicurean, form'd, at best, 520
 To be a kind host and as good a guest,
 To talk of letters, and to know by heart
 One half the poet's, all the gourmand's
 art:
 A scholar always, now and then a wit,
 And gentle when digestion may permit;—
 But not to govern lands enslaved or free;
 The gout was martyrdom enough for thee.

XIII

Shall noble Albion pass without a phrase
 From a bold Briton in her wonted praise?
 'Arts, arms, and George, and glory, and the isles, 530
 And happy Britain, wealth, and Freedom's smiles,
 White cliffs, that held invasion far aloof,
 Contented subjects, all alike tax-proof,
 Proud Wellington, with eagle beak so curl'd,
 That nose, the hook where he suspends
 the world! 535
 And Waterloo, and trade, and—(hush!
 not yet
 A syllable of imposts or of debt)—
 And ne'er (enough) lamented Castlereagh, Whose penknife slit a goose-quill t' other
 day—
 And "pilots who have weather'd every
 storm"— 540
 (But, no, not even for rhyme's sake, name Reform).'
 These are the themes thus sung so oft
 before,
 Methinks we need not sing them any more;
 Found in so many volumes far and
 near,
 There's no occasion you should find them
 here. 545
 Yet something may remain perchance to
 chime
 With reason, and what's stranger still,
 with rhyme.
 Even this thy genius, Canning! may permit,
 Who, bred a statesman, still wast born a
 wit,

THE AGE OF BRONZE

And never, even in that dull House,
 couldst tame 550
 To unleave'n'd prose thine own poetic
 flame;
 Our last, our best, our only orator,
 Even I can praise thee—Tories do no
 more:
 Nay, not so much;—they hate thee, man,
 because
 Thy spirit less upholds them than it awes.
 The hounds will gather to their huntsman's hollo, 556
 And where he leads the duteous pack will follow;
 But not for love mistake their yelling cry;
 Their yelp for game is not an eulogy;
 Less faithful far than the four-footed pack, 560
 A dubious scent would lure the bipeds
 back,
 Thy saddle-girths are not yet quite secure,
 Nor royal stallion's feet extremely sure;
 The unwieldy old white horse is apt at last
 To stumble, kick, and now and then stick
 fast 565
 With his great self and rider in the mud;
 But what of that? the animal shows blood.

XIV

Alas, the country! how shall tongue or pen
 Bewail her now uncountry gentlemen?
 The last to bid the cry of warfare cease,
 The first to make a malady of peace. 571
 For what were all these country patriots
 born?
 To hunt, and vote, and raise the price of corn?
 But corn, like every mortal thing, must fall, Kings, conquerors, and markets most of
 all. 575
 And must ye fall with every ear of grain?
 Why would you trouble Buonaparté's
 reign?
 He was your great Triptolemus; his vices Destroy'd but realms, and still maintain'd your prices; 579
 He amplified to every lord's content
 The grand agrarian alchymy, high rent.
 Why did the tyrant stumble on the Tartars,
 And lower wheat to such desponding quarters?
 Why did you chain him on yon isle so lone?
 The man was worth much more upon his
 throne. 585
 True, blood and treasure boundlessly were
 spilt,
 But what of that? the Gaul may bear the
 guilt;
 But bread was high, the farmer paid his
 way,
 And acres told upon the appointed day.
 But where is now the goodly audit ale?
 The purse-proud tenant, never known to fail? 591

The farm which never yet was left on
 hand?
 The marsh reclaim'd to most improving
 land?
 The impatient hope of the expiring lease?
 The doubling rental? What an evil's
 peace! 595
 In vain the prize excites the ploughman's
 skill,
 In vain the Commons pass their patriot
 bill;
 The landed interest—(you may understand
 The phrase much better leaving out the
land)—
 The land self-interest groans from shore to
 shore, 600
 For fear that plenty should attain the poor.
 Up, up again, ye rents! exalt your notes,
 Or else the ministry will lose their votes,
 And patriotism, so delicately nice,
 Her loaves will lower to the market price;
 For ah! 'the loaves and fishes,' once so
 high, 606
 Are gone—their oven closed, their ocean
 dry,
 And nought remains of all the millions spent,
 Excepting to grow moderate and content.
 They who are not so, had their turn—and
 turn 610
 About still flows from Fortune's equal
 urn;
 Now let their virtue be its own reward,
 And share the blessings which themselves
 prepared.
 See these inglorious Cincinnati swarm,
 Farmers of war, dictators of the farm;
 Their ploughshare was the sword in hireling hands, 616
 Their fields manured by gore of other
 lands;
 Safe in their barns, these Sabine tillers sent Their brethren out to battle—why? for rent!
 Year after year they voted cent. per cent.,
 Blood, sweat, and tear-wrung millions—
 why? for rent! 621
 They roar'd, they dined, they drank, they swore they meant
 To die for England—why then live?—for rent!
 The peace has made one general malcon-
 tent
 Of these high-market patriots; war was rent! 625
 Their love of country, millions all mis-
 spent,
 How reconcile? by reconciling rent!
 And will they not repay the treasures lent?
 No: down with everything, and up with rent!
 Their good, ill, health, wealth, joy, or discontent, 630
 Being, end, aim, religion—rent, rent, rent!

Thou sold'st thy birthright, Esau! for a mess;
Thou shouldst have gotten more, or eaten
less;
Now thou hast swill'd thy pottage, thy demands
Are idle; Israel says the bargain stands.
Such, landlords! was your appetite for
war, 636
And gorged with blood, you grumble at a scar!
What! would they spread their earthquake
even o'er cash?
And when land crumbles, bid firm paper
crash?
So rent may rise, bid bank and nation
fall, 640
And found on 'Change a Fundling Hospital?
Lo, Mother Church, while all religion
writhes,
Like Niobe, weeps o'er her offspring,
Tithes;
The prelates go to—where the saints have
gone, 644
And proud pluralities subside to one;
Church, state, and faction wrestle in the dark,
Toss'd by the deluge in their common ark.
Shorn of her bishops, banks, and dividends,
Another Babel soars—but Britain ends.
And why? to pamper the self-seeking wants, 650
And prop the hill of these agrarian ants.
'Go to these ants, thou sluggard, and be
wise;'
Admire their patience through each sacrifice,
Till taught to feel the lesson of their pride,
The price of taxes and of homicide; 655
Admire their justice, which would fain
deny
The debt of nations:—pray, who made it
high?

XV

Or turn to sail between those shifting
rocks,
The new Symplegades—the crushing
Stocks,
Where Midas might again his wish be-
hold 660
In real paper or imagined gold.
That magic palace of Alcina shows
More wealth than Britain ever had to lose,
Were all her atoms of unleaven'd ore,
And all her pebbles from Pactolus' shore.
There Fortune plays, while Rumour holds the stake, 666
And the world trembles to bid brokers
break.
How rich is Britain! not indeed in mines,
Or peace or plenty, corn or oil, or wines;

No land of Canaan, full of milk and honey, 670
Nor (save in paper shekels) ready money:
But let us not to own the truth refuse,
Was ever Christian land so rich in Jews?
Those parted with their teeth to good King John,
And now, ye kings! they kindly draw your
own; 675
All states, all things, all sovereigns they
control,
And waft a loan 'from Indus to the pole.'
The banker, broker, baron, brethren,
speed
To aid these bankrupt tyrants in their need.
Nor these alone; Columbia feels no less
Fresh speculations follow each success;
And philanthropic Israel deigns to drain
Her mild per-centage from exhausted
Spain.
Not without Abraham's seed can Russia
march;
'Tis gold, not steel, that rears the con-queror's arch. 685
Two Jews, a chosen people, can command
In every realm their scripture-promised
land:—
Two Jews keep down the Romans, and up-
hold
The accursed Hun, more brutal than of
old: 689
Two Jews—but not Samaritans—direct
The world, with all the spirit of their sect.
What is the happiness of earth to them?
A congress forms their 'New Jerusalem,' Where baronies and orders both invite—Oh, holy Abraham! dost thou see the
sight? 695
Thy followers mingling with these royal swine,
Who spit not 'on their Jewish gaberdine,'
But honour them as portion of the show—(Where now, oh Pope! is thy forsaken toe?
Could it not favour Judah with some kicks? 700
Or has it ceased to 'kick against the pricks?')
On Shylock's shore behold them stand afresh,
To cut from nations' hearts their 'pound of flesh.'

XVI

Strange sight this Congress! destined to unite 704
All that's incongruous, all that's opposite.
I speak not of the sovereigns—they're alike,
A common coin as ever mint could strike;
But those who sway the puppets, pull the
strings,
Have more of motley than their heavy
kings.

THE AGE OF BRONZE

Jews, authors, generals, charlatans, combine,
 While Europe wonders at the vast design:
 There Metternich, power's foremost parasite,
 Cajoles; there Wellington forgets to fight;
 There Chateaubriand forms new books of martyrs;
 And subtle Greeks intrigue for stupid Tartars;
 There Montmorenci, the sworn foe to charters,
 Turns a diplomatist of great éclat,
 To furnish articles for the 'Débats,'
 Of war so certain—yet not quite so sure
 As his dismissal in the 'Moniteur.'
 Alas! how could his cabinet thus err!
 Can peace be worth an ultra-minister?
 He falls indeed, perhaps to rise again,
 'Almost as quickly as he conquer'd Spain.'

XVII

Enough of this—a sight more mournful woos
 The averted eye of the reluctant muse.
 The imperial daughter, the imperial bride,
 The imperial victim—sacrifice to pride;
 The mother of the hero's hope, the boy,
 The young Astyanax of modern Troy;
 The still pale shadow of the loftiest queen
 That earth has yet to see, or e'er hath seen;
 She flits amidst the phantoms of the hour,
 The theme of pity, and the wreck of power.
 Oh, cruel mockery! Could not Austria
 spare
 A daughter? What did France's widow
 there?
 Her fitter place was by St. Helen's wave,
 Her only throne is in Napoleon's grave.
 But, no—she still must hold a petty reign,
 Flank'd by her formidable chamberlain;
 The martial Argus, whose not hundred
 eyes
 Must watch her through these paltry pageantries.
 What though she share no more, and shared in vain,
 A sway surpassing that of Charlemagne,
 Which swept from Moscow to the southern seas!
 Yet still she rules the pastoral realm of cheese,

Where Parma views the traveller resort,
 To note the trappings of her mimic court.
 But she appears! Verona sees her shorn Of all her beams—while nations gaze and
 mourn—
 Ere yet her husband's ashes have had time
 To chill in their inhospitable clime;
 (If e'er those awful ashes can grow cold;—
 But no,—their embers soon will burst the mould;)
 She comes!—the Andromache (but not Racine's, Nor Homer's,)—Lo! on Pyrrhus' arm she leans!
 Yes! the right arm, yet red from Waterloo,
 Which cut her lord's half-shatter'd sceptre
 through,
 Is offer'd and accepted? Could a slave
 Do more? or less?—and he in his new
 grave!
 Her eye, her cheek, betray no inward
 strife,
 And the ex-empress grows as ex a wife!
 So much for human ties in royal breasts!
 Why spare men's feelings, when their own are jests?

XVIII

But, tired of foreign follies, I turn home,
 And sketch the group—the picture's yet
 to come,
 My muse 'gan weep, but, ere a tear was
 spilt,
 She caught Sir William Curtis in a kilt!
 While throng'd the chiefs of every Highland clan
 To hail their brother, Vich Ian Alder-
 man!
 Guildhall grows Gael, and echoes with Erse roar,
 While all the Common Council cry 'Clay-
 more!'
 To see proud Albyn's tartans as a belt
 Gird the gross sirloin of a city Celt,
 She burst into a laughter so extreme,
 That I awoke—and lo! it was no dream!
 Here, reader, will we pause:—if there's no harm in
 This first—you'll have, perhaps, a second 'Carmen.'

CHILDE HAROLD'S PILGRIMAGE

A ROMAUNT

L'UNIVERS est une espèce de livre, dont on n'a lu que la première page quand on n'a vu que son pays. J'en ai feuilleté un assez grand nombre, que j'ai trouvé également mauvaises. Cet examen ne m'a point été infructueux. Je haïssais ma patrie. Toutes les impertinences des peuples divers, parmi lesquels j'ai vécu, m'ont réconcilié avec elle. Quand je n'aurais tiré d'autre bénéfice de mes voyages que celui-là, je n'en regretterais ni les frais ni les fatigues.—LE COSMOPOLITE.

PREFACE TO THE FIRST AND SECOND CANTOS

THE following poem was written, for the most part, amidst the scenes which it attempts to describe. It was begun in Albania; and the parts relative to Spain and Portugal were composed from the author's observations in those countries. Thus much it may be necessary to state for the correctness of the descriptions. The scenes attempted to be sketched are in Spain, Portugal, Epirus, Acarnania, and Greece. There, for the present, the poem stops; its reception will determine whether the author may venture to conduct his readers to the capital of the East, through Ionia and Phrygia: these two cantos are merely experimental.

A fictitious character is introduced for the sake of giving some connexion to the piece; which, however, makes no pretension to regularity. It has been suggested to me by friends, on whose opinions I set a high value, that in this fictitious character, 'Childe Harold,' I may incur the suspicion of having intended some real personage. This I beg leave, once for all, to disclaim—Harold is the child of imagination, for the purpose I have stated. In some very trivial particulars, and those merely local, there might be grounds for such a notion; but in the main points, I should hope, none whatever.

It is almost superfluous to mention that the appellation 'Childe,' as 'Childe Waters,' 'Childe Childers,' &c., is used as more consonant with the old structure of versification which I have adopted. The 'Good Night,' in the beginning of the first canto, was suggested by 'Lord Maxwell's Good Night,' in the Border Minstrelsy, edited by Mr. Scott.

With the different poems which have been published on Spanish subjects, there may be found some slight coincidence in the first part, which treats of the Peninsula, but it can only be casual; as, with the exception of a few concluding stanzas, the whole of this poem was written in the Levant.

The stanza of Spenser, according to one of our most successful poets, admits of every variety. Dr. Beattie makes the following observation:—"Not long ago, I began a poem in the style and stanza of Spenser, in which I propose to give full scope to my inclination, and be either droll or pathetic, descriptive or sentimental, tender or satirical, as the humour strikes me; for, if I mistake not, the measure which I have adopted admits equally of all these kinds of composition."*—Strengthened in my opinion by such authority, and by the example of some in the highest order of Italian poets, I shall make no apology for attempts at similar variations in the following composition; satisfied that if they are unsuccessful, their failure must be in the execution, rather than in the design, sanctioned by the practice of Ariosto, Thomson, and Beattie.

ADDITION TO THE PREFACE

I HAVE now waited till almost all our periodical journals have distributed their usual portion of criticism. To the justice of the generality of their criticisms I have nothing to object: it would ill become me to quarrel with their very slight degree of censure, when, perhaps, if they had been less kind they had been more candid. Returning, therefore, to all and each my best thanks for their liberality, on one point alone shall I venture an observation. Amongst the many objections justly urged to the very indifferent character of the 'vagrant Childe' (whom, notwithstanding many hints to the contrary, I still maintain to be a fictitious personage), it has been stated, that, besides the anachronism, he is very unknightly, as the times of the Knights were times of Love, Honour, and so forth. Now, it so happens that the good old times, when 'l'amour du bon vieux tems, l'amour antique,' flourished, were the most profligate of all possible centuries. Those who have any doubts on this subject may consult Sainte-Palaye, passim, and more particularly vol. ii. p. 69. The vows of chivalry were no better kept than any other vows whatsoever; and the songs of the Troubadours were not more decent, and certainly were much less refined, than those of Ovid. The 'Cours d'amour, parlemens d'amour, ou de courtesie et de gentillesse' had much more of love than of courtesy or gentleness. See Roland on the same subject with Sainte-Palaye. Whatever other objection may be urged to that most unamiable personage Childe Harold, he was so far perfectly knightly in his attributes—"No waiter, but a knight templar." By the by, I fear that Sir Tristrem and Sir Lancelot were no better than they should be, although very poetical personages and true knights 'sans peur,' though not 'sans reproche.' If the story of the institution of the 'Garter' be not a fable, the knights of that order have for several centuries borne the badge of a Countess of Salisbury, of indifferent memory. So much for chivalry. Burke need not have regretted that its days are over, though Marie-Antoinette was quite as chaste as most of those in whose honour lances were shivered, and knights unhorsed.

Before the days of Bayard, and down to those of Sir Joseph Banks (the most chaste and celebrated of ancient and modern times), few exceptions will be found to this statement; and I fear a little investigation will teach us not to regret these monstrous mummeries of the middle ages.

I now leave 'Childe Harold' to live his day, such as he is; it had been more agreeable, and certainly more easy, to have drawn an amiable character. It had been easy to varnish over his faults, to make him do more and express less, but he never was intended as an example, further than to show, that early perversion of mind and morals leads to satiety of past pleasures and disappointment in new ones, and that even the beauties of nature and the stimulus of travel (except ambition, the most powerful of all excitements) are lost on a soul so constituted, or rather misdirected. Had I proceeded with the poem, this character would have deepened as he drew to the close; for the outline which I once meant to fill up for him was, with some exceptions, the sketch of a modern Timon, perhaps a poetical Zeluco.

TO IANTHE

NOT in those climes where I have late been straying, Though Beauty long hath there been matchless deem'd;
Not in those visions to the heart displaying Forms which it sighs but to have only dream'd,
Hath aught like thee in truth or fancy
seem'd:
Nor, having seen thee, shall I vainly seek To paint those charms which varied as they beam'd—
To such as see thee not my words were
weak;
To those who gaze on thee what language could they speak?

Ah! may'st thou ever be what now thou
art,
Nor unbecome the promise of thy spring,
As fair in form, as warm yet pure in
heart,
Love's image upon earth without his
wing,
And guileless beyond Hope's imagining!
And surely she who now so fondly rears
Thy youth, in thee, thus hourly brightening,
Beholds the rainbow of her future years,
Before whose heavenly hues all sorrow disappears.

Young Peri of the West!—'tis well for me
My years already doubly number thine;
My loveless eye unmoved may gaze on
thee,
And safely view thy ripening beauties
shine;

Happy, I ne'er shall see them in decline; Happier, that while all younger hearts
shall bleed,
Mine shall escape the doom thine eyes assign
To those whose admiration shall succeed,
But mix'd with pangs to Love's even loveliest hours decreed.

Oh! let that eye, which, wild as the Gazelle's,
Now brightly bold or beautifully shy,
Wins as it wanders, dazzles where it
dwells,
Glance o'er this page, nor to my verse
deny
That smile for which my breast might vainly sigh
Could I to thee be ever more than friend:
This much, dear maid, accorded; nor question why
To one so young my strain I would commend,
But bid me with my wreath one matchless
lily blend.

Such is thy name with this my verse
entwined;
And long as kinder eyes a look shall cast
On Harold's page, Ianthé's here enshrined
Shall thus be first beheld, forgotten last:
My days once number'd, should this homage past
Attract thy fairy fingers near the lyre
Of him who hail'd thee, loveliest as thou wast,
Such is the most my memory may desire;
Though more than Hope can claim, could Friendship less require?

CHILDE HAROLD'S PILGRIMAGE

CANTO THE FIRST

I

Oh, thou! in Hellas deem'd of heavenly
birth,
Muse! form'd or fabled at the minstrel's
will!
Since shamed full oft by later lyres on
earth,
Mine dares not call thee from thy sacred hill:

Yet there I've wander'd by thy vaunted
rill;
Yes! sigh'd o'er Delphi's long deserted
shrine,
Where, save that feeble fountain, all is
still;
Nor mote my shell awake the weary
Nine
To grace so plain a tale—this lowly lay of mine.

II

Whilome in Albion's isle there dwelt a
youth,
Who ne in virtue's ways did take de-
light;
But spent his days in riot most uncouth,
And vex'd with mirth the drowsy ear of
Night.
Ah me! in sooth he was a shameless
wight,
Sore given to revel and ungodly glee;
Few earthly things found favour in his
sight
Save concubines and carnal companie,
And flaunting wassailers of high and low degree.

III

Childe Harold was he hight:—but whence his name
And lineage long, it suits me not to say; Suffice it, that perchance they were of
fame,
And had been glorious in another day;
But one sad losel soils a name for aye,
However mighty in the olden time;
Nor all that heralds rake from coffin'd
clay,
Nor florid prose, nor honeyed lies of
rhyme,
Can blazon evil deeds, or consecrate a
crime.

IV

Childe Harold bask'd him in the noon-
tide sun,
Disporting there like any other fly;
Nor deem'd before his little day was
done
One blast might chill him into misery.
But long ere scarce a third of his pass'd
by,
Worse than adversity the Childe befell;
He felt the fulness of satiety:
Then loathed he in his native land to
dwell,
Which seem'd to him more lone than Eremit's sad cell.

V

For he through Sin's long labyrinth had
run,
Nor made atonement when he did
amiss,
Had sigh'd to many though he loved but
one,
And that loved one, alas! could ne'er be his.
Ah, happy she! to 'scape from him whose kiss
Had been pollution unto aught so chaste;
Who soon had left her charms for vulgar bliss,

CHILDE HAROLD'S PILGRIMAGE

And spoil'd her goodly lands to gild his
waste,
Nor calm domestic peace had ever deign'd to taste.

VI

And now Childe Harold was sore sick
at heart,
And from his fellow bacchanals would
flee;
'Tis said, at times the sullen tear would
start,
But Pride congeal'd the drop within his eye:
Apart he stalk'd in joyless reverie,
And from his native land resolved to go,
And visit scorching climes beyond the
sea;
With pleasure drugg'd, he almost long'd
for woe,
And e'en for change of scene would seek the shades below.

VII

The Childe departed from his father's
hall:
It was a vast and venerable pile;
So old, it seem'd only not to fall,
Yet strength was pillar'd in each massy aisle.
Monastic dome! condemn'd to uses vile!
Where Superstition once had made her
den
Now Paphian girls were known to sing and smile;
And monks might deem their time was come agen,
If ancient tales say true, nor wrong these holy men.

VIII

Yet oft-times in his maddest mirthful
mood
Strange pangs would flash along Childe
Harold's brow
As if the memory of some deadly feud
Or disappointed passion lurk'd below:
But this none knew, nor haply cared to
know;
For his was not that open, artless soul
That feels relief by bidding sorrow flow, Nor sought he friend to counsel or condole, Whate'er this grief mote be, which he could not control.

IX

And none did love him: though to hall
and bower
He gather'd revellers from far and near;
He knew them flatt'ers of the festa
hour;
The heartless parasites of present cheer.

Yea! none did love him—not his lemans
 dear—
 But pomp and power alone are woman's
 care,
 And where these are light Eros finds a feere;
 Maidens, like moths, are ever caught by
 glare,
 And Mammon wins his way where Seraphs might despair.

X

Childe Harold had a mother—not forgot,
 Though parting from that mother he did shun;
 A sister whom he loved, but saw her not
 Before his weary pilgrimage begun:
 If friends he had, he bade adieu to
 none.
 Yet deem not thence his breast a breast
 of steel:
 Ye, who have known what 'tis to dote
 upon
 A few dear objects, will in sadness feel Such partings break the heart they fondly hope to heal.

XI

His house, his home, his heritage, his
 lands,
 The laughing dames in whom he did
 delight,
 Whose large blue eyes, fair locks, and snowy hands,
 Might shake the saintship of an anchorite,
 And long had fed his youthful appetite;
 His goblets brimm'd with every costly
 wine,
 And all that mote to luxury invite,
 Without a sigh he left, to cross the brine,
 And traverse Paynim shores, and pass
 Earth's central line.

XII

The sails were fill'd, and fair the light winds blew,
 As glad to waft him from his native
 home;
 And fast the white rocks faded from his
 view,
 And soon were lost in circumambient
 foam:
 And then, it may be, of his wish to roam
 Repented he, but in his bosom slept
 The silent thought, nor from his lips did
 come
 One word of wail, whilst others sate and
 wept,
 And to the reckless gales unmanly moaning kept.

XIII

But when the sun was sinking in the sea
 He seized his harp, which he at times could string,
 And strike, albeit with untaught melody,
 When deem'd he no strange ear was listening:
 And now his fingers o'er it he did fling,
 And tuned his farewell in the dim twilight.
 While flew the vessel on her snowy wing,
 And fleeting shores receded from his
 sight,
 Thus to the elements he pour'd his last
 'Good Night.'

1

ADIEU, adieu! my native shore
 Fades o'er the waters blue;
 The night-winds sigh, the breakers roar,
 And shrieks the wild sea-mew.
 Yon sun that sets upon the sea
 We follow in his flight;
 Farewell awhile to him and thee,
 My native Land—Good Night!

2

A few short hours and he will rise
 To give the morrow birth;
 And I shall hail the main and skies,
 But not my mother earth.
 Deserted is my own good hall,
 Its hearth is desolate;
 Wild weeds are gathering on the wall;
 My dog howls at the gate.

3

'Come hither, hither, my little page!
 Why dost thou weep and wail?
 Or dost thou dread the billows' rage,
 Or tremble at the gale?
 But dash the tear-drop from thine eye;
 Our ship is swift and strong:
 Our fleetest falcon scarce can fly
 More merrily along.'

4

'Let winds be shrill, let waves roll high,
 I fear not wave nor wind:
 Yet marvel not, Sir Childe, that I Am sorrowful in mind;
 For I have from my father gone,
 A mother whom I love,
 And have no friend, save these alone,
 But thee—and one above.

5

'My father bless'd me fervently,
 Yet did not much complain;
 But sorely will my mother sigh
 Till I come back again.'
 'Enough, enough, my little lad!
 Such tears become thine eye;
 If I thy guileless bosom had,
 Mine own would not be dry.

6

'Come hither, hither, my staunch yeoman,
 Why dost thou look so pale?
 Or dost thou dread a French foeman?
 Or shiver at the gale?'—
 'Deem'st thou I tremble for my life?
 Sir Childe, I'm not so weak;
 But thinking on an absent wife
 Will blanch a faithful cheek.

7

'My spouse and boys dwell near thy hall,
 Along the bordering lake,
 And when they on their father call,
 What answer shall she make?'—
 'Enough, enough, my yeoman good,
 Thy grief let none gainsay;
 But I, who am of lighter mood,
 Will laugh to flee away.'

8

For who would trust the seeming sighs
 Of wife or paramour?
 Fresh feeres will dry the bright blue eyes
 We late saw streaming o'er.
 For pleasures past I do not grieve,
 Nor perils gathering near;
 My greatest grief is that I leave
 No thing that claims a tear.

9

And now I'm in the world alone,
 Upon the wide, wide sea:
 But why should I for others groan,
 When none will sigh for me?
 Perchance my dog will whine in vain,
 Till fed by stranger hands;
 But long ere I come back again
 He'd tear me where he stands.

10

With thee, my bark, I'll swiftly go
 Athwart the foaming brine;
 Nor care what land thou bear'st me to,
 So not again to mine.
 Welcome, welcome, ye dark-blue waves!
 And when you fail my sight,
 Welcome, ye deserts and ye caves!
 My native Land—Good Night!

XIV

On, on the vessel flies, the land is gone,
 And winds are rude in Biscay's sleepless
 bay.
 Four days are sped, but with the fifth,
 anon,
 New shores descried make every bosom
 gay;
 And Cintra's mountain greets them on
 their way,
 And Tagus dashing onward to the deep,
 His fabled golden tribute bent to pay;

CHILDE HAROLD'S PILGRIMAGE

And soon on board the Lusian pilots
 leap,
 And steer 'twixt fertile shores where yet few rustics reap.

XV

Oh, Christ! it is a goodly sight to see What Heaven hath done for this delicious land:
 What fruits of fragrance blush on every
 tree!
 What goodly prospects o'er the hills
 expand!
 But man would mar them with an im-
 pious hand:
 And when the Almighty lifts his fiercest scourge
 'Gainst those who most transgress his high command,
 With treble vengeance will his hot shafts urge Gaul's locust host, and earth from fellest foemen purge.

XVI

What beauties doth Lisboa first unfold!
 Her image floating on that noble tide,
 Which poets vainly pave with sands of
 gold,
 But now whereon a thousand keels did ride
 Of mighty strength, since Albion was
 allied,
 And to the Lusians did her aid afford:
 A nation swoln with ignorance and
 pride,
 Who lick yet loathe the hand that waves
 the sword
 To save them from the wrath of Gaul's unsparing lord.

XVII

But whoso entereth within this town,
 That, sheening far, celestial seems to be,
 Disconsolate will wander up and down,
 'Mid many things unsightly to strange ee;
 For hut and palace show like filthily:
 The dingy denizens are rear'd in dirt;
 Ne personage of high or mean degree Doth care for cleanness of surtout or shirt;
 Though shent with Egypt's plague, unkempt, unwash'd, unhurt.

XVIII

Poor, paltry slaves! yet born 'midst noblest scenes—
 Why, Nature, waste thy wonders on such men?
 Lo! Cintra's glorious Eden intervenes
 In variegated maze of mount and glen.

Ah me! what hand can pencil guide, or
pen,
To follow half on which the eye dilates Through views more dazzling unto mortal ken
Than those whereof such things the bard relates,
Who to the awe-struck world unlock'd
Elysium's gates?

XIX

The horrid crags, by toppling convent
crown'd,
The cork-trees hoar that clothe the shaggy steep,
The mountain-moss by scorching skies
imbrown'd,
The sunken glen, whose sunless shrubs
must weep,
The tender azure of the unruffled deep,
The orange tints that gild the greenest
bough,
The torrents that from cliff to valley leap,
The vine on high, the willow branch
below,
Mix'd in one mighty scene, with varied beauty glow.

XX

Then slowly climb the many-winding
way,
And frequent turn to linger as you go,
From loftier rocks new loveliness survey,
And rest ye at 'Our Lady's house of
woe;'
Where frugal monks their little relics
show,
And sundry legends to the stranger tell:
Here impious men have punish'd been,
and lo!
Deep in yon cave Honorius long did
dwell,
In hope to merit Heaven by making earth
a Hell.

XXI

And here and there, as up the crags you
spring,
Mark many rude-carved crosses near
the path:
Yet deem not these devotion's offer-
ing—
These are memorials frail of murderous
wrath:
For wheresoe'er the shrieking victim hath Pour'd forth his blood beneath the assassin's knife,
Some hand erects a cross of mouldering
lath;
And grove and glen with thousand such
are rife
Throughout this purple land, where law secures not life.

XXII

On sloping mounds, or in the vale beneath,
Are domes where whilome kings did make repair;
But now the wild flowers round them
only breathe;
Yet ruin'd splendour still is lingering
there.
And yonder towers the Prince's palace
fair:
There thou too, Vathek! England's wealthiest son,
Once form'd thy Paradise, as not aware When wanton Wealth her mightiest deeds hath done,
Meek Peace voluptuous lures was ever wont to shun.

XXIII

Here didst thou dwell, here schemes of pleasure plan,
Beneath yon mountain's ever beauteous
brow:
But now, as if a thing unblest by
Man,
Thy fairy dwelling is as lone as thou!
Here giant weeds a passage scarce allow
To halls deserted, portals gaping wide:
Fresh lessons to the thinking bosom,
how Vain are the pleasaunces on earth supplied;
Swept into wrecks anon by Time's un-gentle tide!

XXIV

Behold the hall where chiefs were late convened!
Oh! dome displeasing unto British
eye!
With diadem hight foolscap, lo! a fiend,
A little fiend that scoffs incessantly,
There sits in parchment robe array'd, and by
His side is hung a seal and sable scroll, Where blazon'd glare names known to chivalry,
And sundry signatures adorn the roll,
Whereat the Urchin points and laughs with all his soul.

XXV

Convention is the dwarfish demon
styled
That foil'd the knights in Marialva's
dome:
Of brains (if brains they had) he them
beguiled,
And turned a nation's shallow joy to
gloom.
Here Folly dash'd to earth the victor's
plume,

And Policy regain'd what arms had lost:
For chiefs like ours in vain may laurels
bloom!

Woe to the conqu'ring, not the con-quer'd host,
Since baffled Triumph droops on Lusitania's coast!

XXVI

And ever since that martial synod met,
Britannia sickens, Cintra! at thy name;
And folks in office at the mention fret,
And fain would blush, if blush they could, for shame.

How will posterity the deed proclaim!
Will not our own and fellow nations sneer,
To view these champions cheated of their fame,

By foes in fight o'erthrown, yet victors
here,

Where Scorn her finger points through many a coming year?

XXVII

So deem'd the Childe, as o'er the mountains he

Did take his way in solitary guise:

Sweet was the scene, yet soon he thought
to flee,

More restless than the swallow in the
skies:

Though here awhile he learn'd to mora-lize,

For Meditation fix'd at times on him;
And conscious Reason whisper'd to despise

His early youth, misspent in maddest
whim;

But as he gazed on truth his aching eyes grew dim.

XXVIII

To horse! to horse! he quits, for ever quits

A scene of peace, though soothing to his soul:

Again he rouses from his moping fits,
But seeks not now the harlot and the bowl.

Onward he flies, nor fix'd as yet the goal
Where he shall rest him on his pilgrim-
age;

And o'er him many changing scenes must roll

Ere toil his thirst for travel can assuage,
Or he shall calm his breast, or learn experience sage.

XXIX

Yet Mafra shall one moment claim delay,
Where dwelt of yore the Lusians' luck-less queen;

And church and court did mingle their
array,

And mass and revel were alternate seen;

CHILDE HAROLD'S PILGRIMAGE

Lordlings and freres—ill-sorted fry I ween!

But here the Babylonian whore hath built

A dome, where flaunts she in such glorious sheen,

That men forget the blood which she hath spilt,

And bow the knee to Pomp that loves to varnish guilt.

XXX

O'er vales that teem with fruits, romantic hills,

(Oh, that such hills upheld a free-born
race!)

Whereon to gaze the eye with joyaunce fills,

Childe Harold wends through many a pleasant place.

Though sluggards deem it but a foolish
chase,

And marvel men should quit their easy
chair,

The toilsome way, and long, long league to trace,

Oh! there is sweetness in the mountain
air,

And life, that bloated Ease can never hope to share.

XXXI

More bleak to view the hills at length
recede,

And, less luxuriant, smoother vales extend;

Immense horizon-bounded plains succeed!
Far as the eye discerns, withouten end,

Spain's realms appear whereon her shepherds tend

Flocks, whose rich fleece right well the trader knows—

Now must the pastor's arm his lambs defend:

For Spain is compass'd by unyielding
foes,

And all must shield their all, or share Sub-jection's woes.

XXXII

Where Lusitania and her Sister meet, Deem ye what bounds the rival realms
divide?

Or ere the jealous queens of nations
greet,

Doth Tayo interpose his mighty tide?
Or dark Sierras rise in craggy pride?

Or fence of art, like China's vasty
wall?—

Ne barrier wall, ne river deep and wide,
Ne horrid crags, nor mountains dark and tall,

Rise like the rocks that part Hispania's land from Gaul:

XXXIII

But these between a silver streamlet
glides,
And scarce a name distinguisheth the
brook,
Though rival kingdoms press its verdant
sides.
Here leans the idle shepherd on his crook,
And vacant on the rippling waves doth
look,
That peaceful still 'twixt bitterest foe-
men flow;
For proud each peasant as the noblest
duke:
Well doth the Spanish hind the difference know
"Twixt him and Lusian slave, the lowest of the low.

XXXIV

But ere the mingling bounds have far been pass'd,
Dark Guadiana rolls his power along
In sullen billows, murmuring and vast,
So noted ancient roundelays among.
Whilome upon his banks did legions
throng
Of Moor and Knight, in mailèd splen-dour drest:
Here ceased the swift their race, here
sunk the strong;
The Paynim turban and the Christian crest
Mix'd on the bleeding stream, by floating hosts oppress'd.

XXXV

Oh, lovely Spain! renown'd, romantic
land!
Where is that standard which Pelagio
bore,
When Cava's traitor-sire first call'd the
band
That dyed thy mountain streams with Gothic gore?
Where are those bloody banners which
of yore
Waved o'er thy sons, victorious to the
gale,
And drove at last the spoilers to their
shore?
Red gleam'd the cross, and waned the crescent pale,
While Afric's echoes thrill'd with Moorish matrons' wail.

XXXVI

Teems not each ditty with the glorious
tale?
Ah! such, alas! the hero's amplest fate!
When granite moulders and when records fail,
A peasant's plaint prolongs his dubious
date.

Pride! bend thine eye from heaven to thine estate,
See how the Mighty shrink into a song!
Can Volume, Pillar, Pile preserve thee
great?
Or must thou trust tradition's simple
tongue,
When Flattery sleeps with thee, and History does thee wrong?

XXXVII

Awake, ye sons of Spain! awake! advance!
Lo! Chivalry, your ancient goddess,
cries,
But wilds not, as of old, her thirstylance, Nor shakes her crimson plumage in the
skies:
Now on the smoke of blazing bolts she
flies,
And speaks in thunder through yon engine's roar:
In every peal she calls—'Awake! arise!'
Say, is her voice more feeble than of
yore,
When her war-song was heard on Andalusia's shore?

XXXVIII

Hark! heard you not those hoofs of dreadful note?
Sounds not the clang of conflict on the heath?
Saw ye not whom the reeking sabre
smote,
Nor saved your brethren ere they sank
beneath
Tyrants and tyrants' slaves? the fires of
death,
The bale-fires flash on high:—from rock
to rock
Each volley tells that thousands cease to breathe;
Death rides upon the sulphury Siroc,
Red Battle stamps his foot, and nations feel the shock.

XXXIX

Lo! where the Giant on the mountain
stands,
His blood-red tresses deep'ning in the
sun,
With death-shot glowing in his fiery
hands,
And eye that scorcheth all it glares
upon;
Restless it rolls, now fix'd, and now anon
Flashing afar,—and at his iron feet Destruction cowers, to mark what deeds are done;
For on this morn three potent nations
meet,
To shed before his shrine the blood he deems most sweet.

XL

By Heaven! it is a splendid sight to see (For one who hath no friend, no brother
 there)
 Their rival scarfs of mix'd embroidery,
 Their various arms that glitter in the air!
 What gallant war-hounds rouse them
 from their lair,
 And gnash their fangs, loud yelling for
 the prey!
 All join the chase, but few the triumph
 share;
 The Grave shall bear the chiefest prize
 away,
 And Havoc scarce for joy can number their array.

XLI

Three hosts combine to offer sacrifice;
 Three tongues prefer strange orisons
 on high;
 Three gaudy standards flout the pale blue skies;
 The shouts are France, Spain, Albion,
 Victory!
 The foe, the victim, and the fond ally
 That fights for all, but ever fights in vain,
 Are met—as if at home they could not
 die—
 To feed the crow on Talavera's plain,
 And fertilize the field that each pretends to gain.

XLII

There shall they rot—Ambition's honour'd fools!
 Yes, Honour decks the turf that wraps their clay!
 Vain Sophistry! in these behold the tools,
 The broken tools, that tyrants cast away
 By myriads, when they dare to pave their
 way
 With human hearts—to what?—a dream alone.
 Can despots compass aught that hails their sway?
 Or call with truth one span of earth their
 own,
 Save that wherein at last they crumble bone by bone?

XLIII

Oh, Albuera! glorious field of grief!
 As o'er thy plain the Pilgrim prick'd his
 steed,
 Who could foresee thee, in a space so
 brief,
 A scene where mingling foes should boast and bleed!
 Peace to the perish'd! may the warrior's meed
 And tears of triumph their reward pro-
 long!

CHILDE HAROLD'S PILGRIMAGE

Till others fall where other chieftains
 lead
 Thy name shall circle round the gaping
 throng,
 And shine in worthless lays the theme of transient song.

XLIV

Enough of battle's minions! let them
 play
 Their game of lives, and barter breath
 for fame:
 Fame that will scarce reanimate their
 clay,
 Though thousands fall to deck some single name.
 In sooth 'twere sad to thwart their noble
 aim
 Who strike, blest hirelings! for their country's good,
 And die, that living might have proved her shame;
 Perish'd, perchance, in some domestic feud,
 Or in a narrower sphere wild Rapine's path pursued.

XLV

Full swiftly Harold wends his lonely
 way
 Where proud Sevilla triumphs unsub-
 dued:
 Yet is she free—the spoiler's wish'd-for
 prey!
 Soon, soon shall Conquest's fiery foot
 intrude,
 Blackening her lovely domes with traces
 rude.
 Inevitable hour! 'Gainst fate to strive Where Desolation plants her famish'd
 brood
 Is vain, or Ilion, Tyre, might yet survive,
 And Virtue vanquish all, and murder cease to thrive.

XLVI

But all unconscious of the coming
 doom,
 The feast, the song, the revel here abounds;
 Strange modes of merriment the hours
 consume,
 Nor bleed these patriots with their country's wounds;
 Nor here War's clarion, but Love's re-
 beck sounds;
 Here Folly still his votaries intrals;
 And young-eyed Lewdness walks her midnight rounds;
 Girt with the silent crimes of Capitals, Still to the last kind Vice clings to the tott'ring walls.

XLVII

Not so the rustic—with his trembling mate
He lurks, nor casts his heavy eye afar,
Lest he should view his vineyard desolate,
Blasted below the dun hot breath of war.
No more beneath soft Eve's consenting
star
Fandango twirls his jocund castanet:
Ah, monarchs! could ye taste the mirth
ye mar,
Not in the toils of Glory would ye fret;
The hoarse dull drum would sleep, and Man be happy yet!

XLVIII

How carols now the lusty muleteer?
Of love, romance, devotion is his lay,
As whilome he was wont the leagues to cheer,
His quick bells wildly jingling on the
way?
No! as he speeds, he chants 'Vivā el Rey!'
And checks his song to execrate Godoy,
The royal wittol Charles, and curse the
day
When first Spain's queen beheld the black-eyed boy,
And gore-faced Treason sprung from her adulterate joy.

XLIX

On yon long, level plain, at distance
crown'd
With crags, whereon those Moorish turrets rest,
Wide scatter'd hoof-marks dint the wounded ground;
And, scathed by fire, the greensward's
darken'd vest
Tells that the foe was Andalusia's guest:
Here was the camp, the watch-flame,
and the host,
Here the bold peasant storm'd the
dragon's nest;
Still does he mark it with triumphant
boast;
And points to yonder cliffs, which oft were won and lost.

L

And whomso'er along the path you
meet
Bears in his cap the badge of crimson
hue,
Which tells you whom to shun and whom to greet.
Woe to the man that walks in public
view
Without of loyalty this token true:
Sharp is the knife, and sudden is the
stroke;

And sorely would the Gallic foeman rue,
If subtle poniards, wrapt beneath the cloke,
Could blunt the sabre's edge, or clear the cannon's smoke.

LI

At every turn Morena's dusky height
Sustains aloft the battery's iron load;
And, far as mortal eye can compass
sight,
The mountain-howitzer, the broken
road,
The bristling palisade, the fosse o'er-
flow'd,
The station'd bands, the never-vacant
watch,
The magazine in rocky durance stow'd,
The holster'd steed beneath the shed of thatch,
The ball-piled pyramid, the ever-blazing
match,

LII

Portend the deeds to come:—but he whose nod
Has tumbled feebler despots from their
sway,
A moment pauseth ere he lifts the rod;
A little moment deigneth to delay:
Soon will his legions sweep through these their way;
The West must own the Scourger of the
world.
Ah! Spain! how sad will be thy reckoning day,
When soars Gaul's Vulture, with his wings unfurl'd,
And thou shalt view thy sons in crowds to Hades hurl'd.

LIII

And must they fall? the young, the proud, the brave,
To swell one bloated Chief's unwholesome reign?
No step between submission and a grave?
The rise of rapine and the fall of Spain?
And doth the Power that man adores ordain
Their doom, nor heed the suppliant's
appeal?
Is all that desperate Valour acts in vain?
And Counsel sage, and patriotic Zeal,
The Veteran's skill, Youth's fire, and Manhood's heart of steel?

LIV

Is it for this the Spanish maid, aroused,
Hangs on the willow her unstrung guitar,
And, all unsex'd, the Anlace hath espoused,
Sung the loud song, and dared the deed
of war?

And she, whom once the semblance of a scar
 Appall'd, an owlet's 'larum chill'd with
 dread,
 Now views the column-scattering bay'-
 net jar,
 The falchion flash, and o'er the yet warm
 dead
 Stalks with Minerva's step where Mars might quake to tread.

LV

Ye who shall marvel when you hear her
 tale,
 Oh! had you known her in her softer
 hour,
 Mark'd her black eye that mocks her coal-black veil,
 Heard her light, lively tones in Lady's bower,
 Seen her long locks that foil the painter's power,
 Her fairy form, with more than female
 grace,
 Scarce would you deem that Saragoza's
 tower
 Beheld her smile in Danger's Gorgon
 face,
 Thin the closed ranks, and lead in Glory's fearful chase.

LVI

Her lover sinks—she sheds no ill-timed
 tear;
 Her chief is slain—she fills his fatal post;
 Her fellows flee—she checks their base
 career;
 The foe retires—she heads the sallying
 host:
 Who can appease like her a lover's
 ghost?
 Who can avenge so well a leader's fall?
 What maid retrieve when man's flush'd hope is lost?
 Who hang so fiercely on the flying Gaul,
 Foil'd by a woman's hand, before a bat-ter'd wall?

LVII

Yet are Spain's maids no race of Amazons,
 But form'd for all the witching arts of
 love:
 Though thus in arms they emulate her sons,
 And in the horrid phalanx dare to move,
 'Tis but the tender fierceness of the dove,
 Pecking the hand that hovers o'er her
 mate:
 In softness as in firmness far above
 Remoter females, famed for sickening
 prate;
 Her mind is nobler sure, her charms perchance as great.

LVIII

The seal Love's dimpling finger hath impress'd
 Denotes how soft that chin which bears
 his touch:
 Her lips, whose kisses pout to leave their nest,
 Bid man be valiant ere he merit such:
 Her glance how wildly beautiful! how
 much Hath Phœbus woo'd in vain to spoil
 her cheek,
 Which glows yet smoother from his amorous clutch!
 Who round the North for paler dames
 would seek?
 How poor their forms appear! how languid, wan, and weak!

LIX

Match me, ye climes! which poets love
 to laud;
 Match me, ye harems of the land! where
 now
 I strike my strain, far distant, to applaud
 Beauties that ev'n a cynic must avow;
 Match me those Houries, whom ye scarce allow
 To taste the gale lest Love should ride
 the wind,
 With Spain's dark-glancing daughters—deign to know,
 There your wise Prophet's paradise we
 find,
 His black-eyed maids of Heaven, an-gelically kind.

LX

Oh, thou Parnassus! whom I now survey,
 Not in the phrensy of a dreamer's eye,
 Not in the fabled landscape of a lay,
 But soaring snow-clad through thy native sky,
 In the wild pomp of mountain majesty!
 What marvel if I thus essay to sing?
 The humblest of thy pilgrims passing by Would gladly woo thine Echoes with his string,
 Though from thy heights no more one
 Muse will wave her wing.

LXI

Oft have I dream'd of Thee! whose glorious name
 Who knows not, knows not man's di-vinest lore:
 And now I view thee, 'tis, alas! with
 shame
 That I in feeblest accents must adore.
 When I recount thy worshippers of yore

I tremble, and can only bend the knee;
Nor raise my voice, nor vainly dare to soar,
But gaze beneath thy cloudy canopy
In silent joy to think at last I look on Thee!

LXII

Happier in this than mightiest bards
have been,
Whose fate to distant homes confined
their lot,
Shall I unmoved behold the hallow'd
scene,
Which others rave of, though they know
it not?
Though here no more Apollo haunts his grot,
And thou, the Muses' seat, art now their
grave,
Some gentle spirit still pervades the spot,
Sighs in the gale, keeps silence in the cave,
And glides with glassy foot o'er yon melodious wave.

LXIII

Of thee hereafter.—Ev'n amidst my
strain
I turn'd aside to pay my homage here;
Forgot the land, the sons, the maids of Spain;
Her fate, to every freeborn bosom dear;
And hail'd thee, not perchance without a tear.
Now to my theme—but from thy holy haunt
Let me some remnant, some memorial
bear;
Yield me one leaf of Daphne's deathless plant,
Nor let thy votary's hope be deem'd an idle vaunt.

LXIV

But ne'er didst thou, fair Mount, when Greece was young,
See round thy giant base a brighter choir,
Nor e'er did Delphi, when her priestess
sung
The Pythian hymn with more than mortal fire,
Behold a train more fitting to inspire
The song of love, than Andalusia's maids,
Nurst in the glowing lap of soft desire:
Ah! that to these were given such peaceful shades
As Greece can still bestow, though Glory fly her glades.

LXV

Fair is proud Seville; let her country
boast
Her strength, her wealth, her site of ancient days;

But Cadiz, rising on the distant coast,
Calls forth a sweeter, though ignoble
praise.
Ah, Vice! how soft are thy voluptuous
ways!
While boyish blood is mantling, who can 'scape
The fascination of thy magic gaze?
A Cherub-hydra round us dost thou gape,
And mould to every taste thy dear delusive shape.

LXVI

When Paphos fell by Time—accursed
Time!
The Queen who conquers all must yield to thee—
The Pleasures fled, but sought as warm
a clime;
And Venus, constant to her native sea,
To nought else constant, hither deign'd
to flee,
And fix'd her shrine within these walls
of white;
Though not to one dome circumscribeth
she
Her worship, but, devoted to her rite,
A thousand altars rise, for ever blazing
bright.

LXVII

From morn till night, from night till startled Morn
Peeps blushing on the revel's laughing
crew,
The song is heard, the rosy garland
worn;
Devices quaint, and frolics ever new,
Tread on each other's kibes. A long
adieu
He bids to sober joy that here sojourns:
Nought interrupts the riot, though in lieu
Of true devotion monkish incense
burns,
And love and prayer unite, or rule the hour
by turns.

LXVIII

The Sabbath comes, a day of blessed
rest:
What hallows it upon this Christian
shore?
Lo! it is sacred to a solemn feast:
Hark! heard you not the forest-mon-arch's roar?
Crashing the lance, he snuffs the spouting gore
Of man and steed, o'erthrown beneath his horn;
The throng'd arena shakes with shouts
for more;

Yells the mad crowd o'er entrails freshly torn,
Nor shrinks the female eye, nor ev'n affects to mourn.

LXIX

The seventh day this; the jubilee of man.
London! right well thou know'st the day of prayer:
Then thy spruce citizen, wash'd artisan,
And smug apprentice gulp their weekly air:
Thy coach of hackney, whiskey, one-horse chair,
And humblest gig through sundry suburbs whirl;
To Hampstead, Brentford, Harrow make repair;
Till the tired jade the wheel forgets to hurl,
Provoking envious gibe from each pedestrian churl.

Some o'er thy Thamis row the ribbon'd fair,
Others along the safer turnpike fly;
Some Richmond-hill ascend, some scud to Ware,
And many to the steep of Highgate hie.
Ask ye, Bœotian shades! the reason why?
'Tis to the worship of the solemn Horn,
Grasp'd in the holy hand of Mystery,
In whose dread name both men and maids are sworn,
And consecrate the oath with draught, and dance till morn.

LXXI

All have their fooleries—not alike are thine,
Fair Cadiz, rising o'er the dark blue sea!
Soon as the matin bell proclaimeth nine,
Thy Saint-adorers count the rosary:
Much is the VIRGIN teased to shrive them free
(Well do I ween the only virgin there)
From crimes as numerous as her beads—men be;
Then to the crowded circus forth they fare:
Young, old, high, low, at once the same diversion share.

LXXII

The lists are oped, the spacious arena clear'd,
Thousands on thousands piled are seated round;
Long ere the first loud trumpet's note is heard,
Ne vacant space for lated wight is found:

CHILDE HAROLD'S PILGRIMAGE

Here dons, grandees, but chiefly dames abound,
Skill'd in the ogle of a roguish eye,
Yet ever well inclined to heal the wound;
None through their cold disdain are doom'd to die,
As moon-struck bards complain, by Love's sad archery.

LXXIII

Hush'd is the din of tongues—on gallant steeds,
With milk-white crest, gold spur, and light-poised lance,
Four cavaliers prepare for venturous deeds,
And lowly bending to the lists advance;
Rich are their scarfs, their chargers featly prance:
If in the dangerous game they shine to-day,
The crowd's loud shout and ladies' lovely glance,
Best prize of better acts, they bear away,
And all that kings or chiefs e'er gain their toils repay.

LXXIV

In costly sheen and gaudy cloak array'd,
But all afoot, the light-limb'd Matadore
Stands in the centre, eager to invade
The lord of lowing herds; but not before
The ground, with cautious tread, is traversed o'er,
Lest aught unseen should lurk to thwart his speed:
His arms a dart, he fights aloof, nor more
Can man achieve without the friendly steed—
Alas! too oft condemn'd for him to bear and bleed.

LXXV

Thrice sounds the clarion; lo! the signal falls,
The den expands, and Expectation mute
Gapes round the silent circle's peopled walls.
Bounds with one lashing spring the mighty brute,
And, wildly staring, spurns, with sounding foot,
The sand, nor blindly rushes on his foe:
Here, there, he points his threatening front, to suit
His first attack, wide waving to and fro
His angry tail; red rolls his eye's dilated glow.

LXXVI

Sudden he stops; his eye is fix'd: away, Away, thou heedless boy! prepare the spear:
 Now is thy time to perish, or display
 The skill that ye may check his mad
 career.
 With well-timed croupe the nimble
 coursers veer;
 On foams the bull, but not unscathed
 he goes;
 Streams from his flank the crimson torrent clear:
 He flies, he wheels, distracted with his throes;
 Dart follows dart; lance, lance; loud bellowings speak his woes.

LXXVII

Again he comes; nor dart nor lance
 avail,
 Nor the wild plunging of the tortured
 horse;
 Though man and man's avenging arms
 assail,
 Vain are his weapons, vainer is his force.
 One gallant steed is stretch'd a mangled
 corse;
 Another, hideous sight! unseam'd appears,
 His gory chest unveils life's panting
 source;
 Though death-struck, still his feeble frame he rears;
 Staggering, but stemming all, his lord un-harm'd he bears.

LXXVIII

Foiled, bleeding, breathless, furious to
 the last,
 Full in the centre stands the bull at bay,
 Mid wounds, and clinging darts, and lances brast,
 And foes disabled in the brutal fray;
 And now the Matadores around him
 play,
 Shake the red cloak and poise the ready
 brand:
 Once more through all he bursts his thundering way—
 Vain rage! the mantle quits the conynge
 hand,
 Wraps his fierce eye—'tis past—he sinks upon the sand!

LXXIX

Where his vast neck just mingles with the spine,
 Sheathed in his form the deadly weapon
 lies.
 He stops—he starts—disdaining to decline:
 Slowly he falls, amidst triumphant cries,

Without a groan, without a struggle
 dies.

The decorated car appears—on high
 The corse is piled—sweet sight for vulgar eyes—
 Four steeds that spurn the rein, as swift as shy,
 Hurl the dark bulk along, scarce seen in dashing by.

LXXX

Such the ungentle sport that oft invites
 The Spanish maid, and cheers the Spanish swain.
 Nurtured in blood betimes, his heart
 delights
 In vengeance, gloating on another's
 pain.
 What private feuds the troubled village
 stain!
 Though now one phalanx'd host should meet the foe,
 Enough, alas! in humble homes remain,
 To meditate 'gainst friends the secret
 blow,
 For some slight cause of wrath whence life's warm stream must flow.

LXXXI

But Jealousy has fled: his bars, his bolts,
 His wither'd centinel, Duenna sage!
 And all whereat the generous soul revolts,
 Which the stern dotard deem'd he could encage,
 Have pass'd to darkness with the van-ish'd age.
 Who late so free as Spanish girls were
 seen
 (Ere War uprose in his volcanic rage), With braided tresses bounding o'er the
 green,
 While on the gay dance shone Night's lover-loving Queen?

LXXXII

Oh! many a time and oft, had Harold
 loved,
 Or dream'd he loved, since rapture is a
 dream;
 But now his wayward bosom was unmoved,
 For not yet had he drunk of Lethe's
 stream;
 And lately had he learn'd with truth to deem
 Love has no gift so grateful as his wings:
 How fair, how young, how soft soe'er
 he seem,
 Full from the fount of Joy's delicious
 springs
 Some bitter o'er the flowers its bubbling venom flings.

LXXXIII

Yet to the beauteous form he was not
blind,
Though now it moved him as it moves
the wise:
Not that Philosophy on such a mind
E'er deign'd to bend her chastely-awful
eyes:
But Passion raves itself to rest, or flies;
And Vice, that digs her own voluptuous
tomb,
Had buried long his hopes, no more to
rise: Pleasure's pall'd victim! life-abhorring
gloom
Wrote on his faded brow curst Cain's unresting doom.

LXXXIV

Still he beheld, nor mingled with the
throng;
But view'd them not with misanthropic
hate:
Fain would he now have join'd the dance, the song;
But who may smile that sinks beneath his fate:
Nought that he saw his sadness could abate:
Yet once he struggled 'gainst the de-
mon's sway,
And as in Beauty's bower he pensive
sate,
Pour'd forth this unpremeditated lay,
To charms as fair as those that soothed his happier day.

TO INEZ

1

NAY, smile not at my sullen brow;
Alas! I cannot smile again:
Yet Heaven avert that ever thou
Shouldst weep, and haply weep in vain.

2

And dost thou ask what secret woe
I bear, corroding joy and youth?
And wilt thou vainly seek to know
A pang, ev'n thou must fail to soothe?

3

It is not love, it is not hate,
Nor low Ambition's honours lost,
That bids me loathe my present state,
And fly from all I prized the most:

4

It is that weariness which springs
From all I meet, or hear, or see:
To me no pleasure Beauty brings;
Thine eyes have scarce a charm for me.

5

It is that settled, ceaseless gloom
The fabled Hebrew wanderer bore;
That will not look beyond the tomb,
But cannot hope for rest before.

6

What Exile from himself can flee?
To zones though more and more remote,
Still, still pursues, where'er I be,
The blight of life—the demon Thought.

7

Yet others rapt in pleasure seem,
And taste of all that I forsake;
Oh! may they still of transport dream,
And ne'er, at least like me, awake!

8

Through many a clime 'tis mine to go,
With many a retrospection curst;
And all my solace is to know,
Whate'er betides, I've known the worst.

9

What is the worst? Nay, do not ask—
In pity from the search forbear;
Smile on—nor venture to unmask Man's heart, and view the Hell that's
there.

LXXXV

Adieu, fair Cadiz! yea, a long adieu!
Who may forget how well thy walls have stood?
When all were changing, thou alone
wert true,
First to be free, and last to be subdued:
And if amidst a scene, a shock so rude,
Some native blood was seen thy streets to dye
A traitor only fell beneath the feud:
Here all were noble, save Nobility!
None hugg'd a conqueror's chain, save fallen Chivalry!

LXXXVI

Such be the sons of Spain, and strange her fate!
They fight for freedom who were never
free,
A Kingless people for a nerveless state;
Her vassals combat when their chieftains flee,
True to the veriest slaves of Treachery:
Fond of a land which gave them nought
but life,
Pride points the path that leads to Liberty;
Back to the struggle, baffled in the strife, War, war is still the cry, 'War even to the knife!'

LXXXVII

Ye, who would more of Spain and Spaniards know,
Go, read whate'er is writ of bloodiest strife:
Whate'er keen Vengeance urged on foreign foe
Can act, is acting there against man's life:
From flashing scimitar to secret knife,
War mouldeth there each weapon to his need—
So may he guard the sister and the wife,
So may he make each curst oppressor bleed—
So may such foes deserve the most remorseless deed!

LXXXVIII

Flows there a tear of pity for the dead?
Look o'er the ravage of the reeking plain;
Look on the hands with female slaughter red;
Then to the dogs resign the unburied slain,
Then to the vulture let each corse remain,
Albeit unworthy of the prey-bird's maw;
Let their bleach'd bones, and blood's unbleaching stain,
Long mark the battle-field with hideous awe:
Thus only may our sons conceive the scenes we saw!

LXXXIX

Nor yet, alas! the dreadful work is done;
Fresh legions pour adown the Pyrenees:
It deepens still, the work is scarce begun,
Nor mortal eye the distant end foresees.
Fall'n nations gaze on Spain; if freed, she frees
More than her fell Pizarros once enchain'd:
Strange retribution! now Columbia's ease
Repairs the wrongs that Quito's sons sustain'd, While o'er the parent clime prowls Murder unrestrain'd.

XC

Not all the blood at Talavera shed,
Not all the marvels of Barossa's fight,
Not Albuera lavish of the dead,
Have won for Spain her well-asserted right.
When shall her Olive-Branch be free from blight?
When shall she breathe her from the blushing toil?

How many a doubtful day shall sink in night,
Ere the Frank robber turn him from his spoil,
And Freedom's stranger-tree grow native of the soil!

XCI

And thou, my friend!—since unavailing woe
Bursts from my heart, and mingles with the strain—
Had the sword laid thee with the mighty low,
Pride might forbid e'en Friendship to complain:
But thus unlaurel'd to descend in vain,
By all forgotten, save the lonely breast,
And mix unbleeding with the boasted slain,
While Glory crowns so many a meaner crest!
What hadst thou done to sink so peacefully to rest?

XCII

Oh, known the earliest, and esteem'd the most!
Dear to a heart where nought was left so dear!
Though to my hopeless days for ever lost,
In dreams deny me not to see thee here!
And Morn in secret shall renew the tear
Of Consciousness awaking to her woes,
And Fancy hover o'er thy bloodless bier,
Till my frail frame return to whence it rose,
And mourn'd and mourner lie united in repose.

Here is one fyfte of Harold's pilgrimage:
Ye who of him may further seek to know,
Shall find some tidings in a future page,
If he that rhymeth now may scribble moe.
Is this too much? stern Critic! say not so:
Patience! and ye shall hear what he beheld
In other lands, where he was doom'd to go:
Lands that contain the monuments of Eld,
Ere Greece and Grecian arts by barbarous hands were quell'd.

CANTO THE SECOND

I

COME, blue-eyed maid of heaven!—but thou, alas!
 Didst never yet one mortal song inspire—
 Goddess of Wisdom! here thy temple
 was,
 And is, despite of war and wasting fire,
 And years, that bade thy worship to
 expire:
 But worse than steel, and flame, and ages slow,
 Is the dread sceptre and dominion dire
 Of men who never felt the sacred glow
 That thoughts of thee and thine on polish'd breasts bestow.

II

Ancient of days! august Athena! where,
 Where are thy men of might? thy grand in soul?
 Gone—glimmering through the dream of things that were:
 First in the race that led to Glory's goal,
 They won, and pass'd away—is this the
 whole?
 A schoolboy's tale, the wonder of an
 hour!
 The warrior's weapon and the sophist's stole
 Are sought in vain, and o'er each mouldering tower,
 Dim with the mist of years, gray flits the shade of power.

III

Son of the morning, rise! approach you
 here!
 Come—but molest not yon defenceless
 urn:
 Look on this spot—a nation's sepulchre!
 Abode of gods, whose shrines no longer
 burn.
 Even gods must yield—religions take their turn:
 'Twas Jove's—'tis Mahomet's—and other creeds
 Will rise with other years, till man shall learn Vainly his incense soars, his victim
 bleeds
 Poor child of Doubt and Death, whose hope is built on reeds.

Bound to the earth, he lifts his eye to
 heaven—
 Is't not enough, unhappy thing! to
 know Thou art? Is this a boon so kindly
 given,

CHILDE HAROLD'S PILGRIMAGE

That being, thou wouldst be again, and
 go,
 Thou know'st not, reck'st not, to what region, so
 On earth no more, but mingled with the
 skies?
 Still wilt thou dream on future joy and
 woe?
 Regard and weigh yon dust before it
 flies:
 That little urn saith more than thousand homilies.

V

Or burst the vanish'd Hero's lofty
 mound;
 Far on the solitary shore he sleeps:
 He fell, and falling nations mourn'd
 around;
 But now not one of saddening thousands weeps,
 Nor warlike worshipper his vigil keeps Where demi-gods appear'd, as records
 tell.
 Remove yon skull from out the scatter'd heaps:
 Is that a temple where a God may dwell?
 Why ev'n the worm at last disdains her shatter'd cell!

VI

Look on its broken arch, its ruin'd wall,
 Its chambers desolate, and portals foul:
 Yes, this was once Ambition's airy hall,
 The dome of Thought, the palace of the
 Soul:
 Behold through each lack-lustre, eyeless hole,
 The gay recess of Wisdom and of Wit,
 And Passion's host, that never brook'd
 control:
 Can all saint, sage, or sophist ever writ,
 People this lonely tower, this tenement refit?

VII

Well didst thou speak, Athena's wisest
 son!
 'All that we know is, nothing can be
 known.'
 Why should we shrink from what we cannot shun?
 Each hath his pang, but feeble sufferers
 groan
 With brain-born dreams of evil all their
 own.
 Pursue what Chance or Fate pro-
 claimeth best;
 Peace waits us on the shores of Acheron:
 There no forced banquet claims the sated guest,
 But Silence spreads the couch of ever welcome rest.

VIII

Yet if, as holiest men have deem'd, there be
A land of souls beyond that sable shore,
To shame the doctrine of the Sadducee
And sophists, madly vain of dubious
lore;
How sweet it were in concert to adore
With those who made our mortal labours
light!
To hear each voice we fear'd to hear no
more!
Behold each mighty shade reveal'd to
sight,
The Bactrian, Samian sage, and all who taught the right!

IX

There, thou!—whose love and life together fled,
Have left me here to love and live in
vain—
Twined with my heart, and can I deem thee dead
When busy Memory flashes on my
brain?
Well—I will dream that we may meet
again,
And woo the vision to my vacant breast:
If aught of young Remembrance then
remain,
Be as it may Futurity's behest,
For me 'twere bliss enough to know thy spirit blest!

X

Here let me sit upon this massy stone,
The marble column's yet unshaken
base;
Here, son of Saturn! was thy fav'rite
throne:
Mightiest of many such! Hence let me
trace
The latent grandeur of thy dwelling-
place.
It may not be; nor ev'n can Fancy's eye Restore what Time hath labour'd to de-
face.
Yet these proud pillars claim no passing
sigh;
Unmoved the Moslem sits, the light Greek carols by.

XI

But who, of all the plunderers of yon
fane
On high, where Pallas linger'd, loth to flee
The latest relic of her ancient reign;
The last, the worst, dull spoiler, who was
he?
Blush, Caledonia! such thy son could
be!

England! I joy no child he was of
thine:
Thy free-born men should spare what once was free;
Yet they could violate each saddening
shrine,
And bear these altars o'er the longreluctant brine.

XII

But most the modern Pict's ignoble
boast,
To rive what Goth, and Turk, and Time
hath spared:
Cold as the crags upon his native coast,
His mind as barren and his heart as
hard,
Is he whose head conceived, whose hand
prepared,
Aught to displace Athena's poor remains:
Her sons, too weak the sacred shrine to
guard,
Yet felt some portion of their mother's
pains,
And never knew, till then, the weight of Despot's chains.

XIII

What! shall it e'er be said by British
tongue,
Albion was happy in Athena's tears?
Though in thy name the slaves her bosom wrung,
Tell not the deed to blushing Europe's ears;
The ocean queen, the free Britannia,
bears
The last poor plunder from a bleeding
land:
Yes, she, whose gen'rous aid her name
endears,
Tore down those remnants with a
harpy's hand,
Which envious Eld forbore, and tyrants left to stand.

XIV

Where was thine Ægis, Pallas! that appall'd
Stern Alaric and Havoc on their way?
Where Peleus' son? whom Hell in vain
enthrall'd,
His shade from Hades upon that dread
day
Bursting to light in terrible array!
What! could not Pluto spare the chief
once more,
To scare a second robber from his prey?
Idly he wander'd on the Stygian shore, Nor now preserved the walls he loved to shield before.

XV

Cold is the heart, fair Greece! that looks on thee,
Nor feels as lovers o'er the dust they
loved;
Dull is the eye that will not weep to see Thy walls defaced, thy mouldering shrines removed
By British hands, which it had best behoved
To guard those relics ne'er to be restored.
Curst be the hour when from their isle
they roved,
And once again thy hapless bosom
gored,
And snatch'd thy shrinking Gods to northern climes abhorr'd!

XVI

But where is Harold? shall I then forget To urge the gloomy wanderer o'er the
wave?
Little reck'd he of all that men regret;
No loved-one now in feign'd lament
could rave;
No friend the parting hand extended
gave,
Ere the cold stranger pass'd to other climes:
Hard is his heart whom charms may not enslave;
But Harold felt not as in other times,
And left without a sigh the land of war and crimes.

XVII

He that has sail'd upon the dark blue
sea
Has view'd at times, I ween, a full fair
sight:
When the fresh breeze is fair as breeze
may be,
The white sail set, the gallant frigate tight;
Masts, spires, and strand retiring to the
right,
The glorious main expanding o'er the
bow,
The convoy spread like wild swans in their flight,
The dullest sailer wearing bravely now,
So gaily curl the waves before each dashing prow.

XVIII

And oh, the little warlike world within!
The well-reeved guns, the netted can-opy,
The hoarse command, the busy humming din,
When, at a word, the tops are mann'd
on high:

CHILDE HAROLD'S PILGRIMAGE

Hark, to the Boatswain's call, the cheering cry!
While through the seaman's hand the tackle glides;
Or schoolboy Midshipman that, standing by,
Strains his shrill pipe as good or ill be-
tides,
And well the docile crew that skilful urchin guides.

XIX

White is the glassy deck, without a stain,
Where on the watch the staid Lieutenant walks:
Look on that part which sacred doth remain
For the lone chieftain, who majestic stalks,
Silent and fear'd by all—not oft he talks With aught beneath him, if he would preserve
That strict restraint, which broken, ever balks Conquest and fame: but Britons rarely swerve
From law, however stern, which tends their strength to nerve.

XX

Blow! swiftly blow, thou keel-compelling gale!
Till the broad sun withdraws his lessen-
ing ray;
Then must the pennant-bearer slacken
sail,
That lagging barks may make their lazy
way.
Ah! grievance sore, and listless dull de-
lay,
To waste on sluggish hulks the sweetest
breeze!
What leagues are lost, before the dawn
of day,
Thus loitering pensive on the willing seas,
The flapping sail haul'd down to halt for logs like these!

XXI

The moon is up; by Heaven, a lovely eve!
Long streams of light o'er dancing
waves expand;
Now lads on shore may sigh, and maids
believe:
Such be our fate when we return to land!
Meantime some rude Arion's restless
hand
Wakes the brisk harmony that sailors
love;
A circle there of merry listeners stand,
Or to some well-known measure featly
move,
Thoughtless, as if on shore they still were free to rove.

XXII

Through Calpe's straits survey the steepy shore;
Europe and Afric on each other gaze!
Lands of the dark-eyed Maid and dusky Moor
Alike beheld beneath pale Hecate's blaze:
How softly on the Spanish shore she plays,
Disclosing rock, and slope, and forest brown,
Distinct, though darkening with her waning phase;
But Mauritania's giant shadows frown,
From mountain-cliff to coast descending sombre down.

XXIII

'Tis night, when Meditation bids us feel
We once have loved, though love is at an end:
The heart, lone mourner of its baffled zeal,
Though friendless now, will dream it had a friend.
Who with the weight of years would wish to bend,
When Youth itself survives young Love and Joy?
Alas! when mingling souls forget to blend,
Death hath but little left him to destroy!
Ah! happy years! once more who would not be a boy?

XXIV

Thus bending o'er the vessel's laving side,
To gaze on Dian's wave-reflected sphere,
The soul forgets her schemes of hope and pride,
And flies unconscious o'er each backward year.
None are so desolate but something dear,
Dearer than self, possesses or possess'd
A thought, and claims the homage of a tear;
A flashing pang! of which the weary breast
Would still, albeit in vain, the heavy heart divest.

XXV

To sit on rocks, to muse o'er flood and fell,
To slowly trace the forest's shady scene,
Where things that own not man's dominion dwell,
And mortal foot hath ne'er or rarely been;

To climb the trackless mountain all unseen,
With the wild flock that never needs a fold;
Alone o'er steeps and foaming falls to lean;
This is not solitude; 'tis but to hold
Converse with Nature's charms, and view her stores unroll'd.

XXVI

But midst the crowd, the hum, the shock of men,
To hear, to see, to feel, and to possess,
And roam along, the world's tired denizen,
With none who bless us, none whom we can bless;
Minions of splendour shrinking from distress!
None that, with kindred consciousness endued,
If we were not, would seem to smile the less,
Of all that flatter'd, follow'd, sought, and sued;
This is to be alone; this, this is solitude!

XXVII

More blest the life of godly eremite,
Such as on lonely Athos may be seen,
Watching at eve upon the giant height,
Which looks o'er waves so blue, skies so serene,
That he who there at such an hour hath been
Will wistful linger on that hallow'd spot;
Then slowly tear him from the 'witching scene,
Sigh forth one wish that such had been his lot,
Then turn to hate a world he had almost forgot.

XXVIII

Pass we the long, unvarying course, the track
Oft trod, that never leaves a trace behind;
Pass we the calm, the gale, the change, the tack,
And each well-known caprice of wave and wind;
Pass we the joys and sorrows sailors find,
Coop'd in their winged sea-girt citadel;
The foul, the fair, the contrary, the kind,
As breezes rise and fall and billows swell,
Till on some jocund morn—lo, land! and all is well.

XXIX

But not in silence pass Calypso's isles,
 The sister tenants of the middle deep;
 There for the weary still a haven smiles,
 Though the fair goddess long hath ceased to weep,
 And o'er her cliffs a fruitless watch to keep
 For him who dared prefer a mortal
 bride:
 Here, too, his boy essay'd the dreadful leap Stern Mentor urged from high to yonder tide;
 While thus of both bereft, the nymph-queen doubly sigh'd.

XXX

Her reign is past, her gentle glories gone:
 But trust not this: too easy youth, beware!
 A mortal sovereign holds her dangerous
 throne,
 And thou mayst find a new Calypso
 there.
 Sweet Florence! could another ever
 share
 This wayward, loveless heart, it would
 be thine:
 But check'd by every tie, I may not dare
 To cast a worthless offering at thy shrine,
 Nor ask so dear a breast to feel one pang for mine.

XXXI

Thus Harold deem'd, as on that lady's
 eye
 He look'd, and met its beam without a
 thought
 Save admiration glancing harmless by:
 Love kept aloof, albeit not far remote,
 Who knew his votary often lost and
 caught,
 But knew him as his worshipper no
 more,
 And ne'er again the boy his bosom
 sought:
 Since now he vainly urged him to adore,
 Well deem'd the little God his ancient sway was o'er.

XXXII

Fair Florence found, in sooth with some amaze,
 One who, 'twas said, still sigh'd to all he saw,
 Withstand, unmoved, the lustre of her
 gaze,
 Which others hail'd with real or mimic
 awe,
 Their hope, their doom, their punishment, their law;
 All that gay Beauty from her bondsmen
 claims:

CHILDE HAROLD'S PILGRIMAGE

And much she marvell'd that a youth so raw
 Nor felt, nor feign'd at least, the oft-told
 flames,
 Which, though sometimes they frown, yet rarely anger dames.

XXXIII

Little knew she that seeming marble
 heart,
 Now mask'd in silence or withheld by
 pride,
 Was not unskilful in the spoiler's art,
 And spread its snares licentious far and
 wide;
 Nor from the base pursuit had turn'd
 aside,
 As long as aught was worthy to pursue:
 But Harold on such arts no more relied;
 And had he doted on those eyes so blue,
 Yet never would he join the lover's whining crew.

XXXIV

Not much he kens, I ween, of woman's
 breast,
 Who thinks that wanton thing is won by
 sighs;
 What careth she for hearts when once possess'd?
 Do proper homage to thine idol's eyes;
 But not too humbly, or she will despise Thee and thy suit, though told in moving tropes:
 Disguise ev'n tenderness, if thou art
 wise;
 Brisk Confidence still best with woman
 copes:
 Pique her and soothe in turn, soon Passion crowns thy hopes.

XXXV

'Tis an old lesson; Time approves it
 true,
 And those who know it best deplore it
 most;
 When all is won that all desire to woo,
 The paltry prize is hardly worth the
 cost:
 Youth wasted, minds degraded, honour
 lost,
 These are thy fruits, successful Passion!
 these!
 If, kindly cruel, early hope is crost,
 Still to the last it rankles, a disease,
 Not to be cured when love itself forgets to please.

XXXVI

Away! nor let me loiter in my song,
 For we have many a mountain-path to
 tread,
 And many a varied shore to sail along,
 By pensive Sadness, not by Fiction,
 led—

Climes, fair withal as ever mortal head
Imagined in its little schemes of thought;
Or e'er in new Utopias were ared,
To teach man what he might be, or he
ought;
If that corrupted thing could ever such be taught.

XXXVII

Dear Nature is the kindest mother still,
Though always changing in her aspect mild;
From her bare bosom let me take my fill,
Her never-wean'd, though not her favour'd child.
Oh! she is fairest in her features wild,
Where nothing polish'd dares pollute
her path:
To me by day or night she ever smiled,
Though I have mark'd her when none other hath,
And sought her more and more, and loved her best in wrath.

XXXVIII

Land of Albania! where Iskander rose, Theme of the young, and beacon of the
wise,
And he his namesake, whose oft-baffled
foes
Shrunk from his deeds of chivalrous
emprise:
Land of Albania! let me bend mine eyes
On thee, thou rugged nurse of savage
men!
The cross descends, thy minarets arise,
And the pale crescent sparkles in the glen,
Through many a cypress grove within each city's ken.

XXXIX

Childe Harold sail'd, and pass'd the barren spot,
Where sad Penelope o'erlook'd the
wave;
And onward view'd the mount, not yet
forgot,
The lover's refuge, and the Lesbian's
grave.
Dark Sappho! could not verse immortal
save
That breast imbued with such immortal
fire?
Could she not live who life eternal gave?
If life eternal may await the lyre,
That only Heaven to which Earth's children may aspire.

XL

'Twas on a Grecian autumn's gentle eve
Childe Harold hail'd Leucadia's cape
afar;

A spot he longed to see, nor cared to
leave:
Oft did he mark the scenes of vanish'd
war,
Actium, Lepanto, fatal Trafalgar;
Mark them unmoved, for he would not
delight
(Born beneath some remote inglorious
star)
In themes of bloody fray, or gallant
fight,
But loathed the bravo's trade, and laughed at martial wight.

XLI

But when he saw the evening star above
Leucadia's far-projecting rock of woe,
And hail'd the last resort of fruitless
love,
He felt, or deem'd he felt, no common
glow:
And as the stately vessel glided slow Beneath the shadow of that ancient mount,
He watch'd the billows' melancholy
flow,
And, sunk albeit in thought as he was
wont,
More placid seem'd his eye, and smooth his pallid front.

XLII

Morn dawns: and with it stern Albania's
hills,
Dark Suli's rocks, and Pindus' inland peak,
Robed half in mist, bedew'd with snowy rills,
Array'd in many a dun and purple
streak,
Arise; and, as the clouds along them
break,
Disclose the dwelling of the mountaineer;
Here roams the wolf, the eagle whets his beak,
Birds, beasts of prey, and wilder men
appear,
And gathering storms around convulse the closing year.

XLIII

Now Harold found himself at length
alone,
And bade to Christian tongues a long
adieu;
Now he adventured on a shore unknown,
Which all admire, but many dread to
view:
His breast was arm'd 'gainst fate, his wants were few;

Peril he sought not, but ne'er shrank to meet;
The scene was savage, but the scene was new;
This made the ceaseless toil of travel sweet,
Beat back keen winter's blast, and welcomed summer's heat.

XLIV

Here the red cross, for still the cross is here,
Though sadly scoff'd at by the circumcised,
Forgets that pride to pamper'd priesthood dear;
Churchman and votary alike despised.
Foul Superstition! howsoe'er disguised,
Idol, saint, virgin, prophet, crescent, cross,
For whatsoever symbol thou art prized,
Thou sacerdotal gain, but general loss!
Who from true worship's gold can separate thy dross?

XLV

Ambracia's gulf behold, where once was lost
A world for woman, lovely, harmless thing!
In yonder rippling bay, their naval host
Did many a Roman chief and Asian king
To doubtful conflict, certain slaughter bring:
Look where the second Cæsar's trophies rose:
Now, like the hands that rear'd them, withering:
Imperial anarchs, doubling human woes!
God! was thy globe ordain'd for such to win and lose?

XLVI

From the dark barriers of that rugged clime,
Ev'n to the centre of Illyria's vales,
Childe Harold pass'd o'er many a mount sublime,
Through lands scarce noticed in historic tales;
Yet in famed Attica such lovely dales
Are rarely seen; nor can fair Tempe boast
A charm they know not; loved Parnassus fails, Though classic ground and consecrated most,
To match some spots that lurk within this lowering coast.

XLVII

He pass'd bleak Pindus, Acherusia's lake,
And left the primal city of the land,
And onwards did his further journey take
To greet Albania's chief, whose dread command
Is lawless law; for with a bloody hand
He sways a nation, turbulent and bold;
Yet here and there some daring mount-tain-band
Disdain his power, and from their rocky hold
Hurl their defiance far, nor yield, unless to gold.

XLVIII

Monastic Zitza! from thy shady brow,
Thou small but favour'd spot of holy ground!
Where'er we gaze, around, above, below,
What rainbow tints, what magic charms are found!
Rock, river, forest, mountain, all abound,
And bluest skies that harmonise the whole:
Beneath, the distant torrent's rushing sound
Tells where the volumed cataract doth roll Between those hanging rocks, that shock yet please the soul.

XLIX

Amidst the grove that crowns yon tufted hill,
Which, were it not for many a mountain nigh
Rising in lofty ranks, and loftier still,
Might well itself be deem'd of dignity,
The convent's white walls glisten fair on high:
Here dwells the caloyer, nor rude is he,
Nor niggard of his cheer; the passer by
Is welcome still; nor heedless will he flee
From hence, if he delight kind Nature's sheen to see.

L

Here in the sultriest season let him rest,
Fresh is the green beneath those aged trees;
Here winds of gentlest wing will fan his breast,
From heaven itself he may inhale the breeze:

The plain is far beneath—oh! let him seize Pure pleasure while he can; the scorching ray
Here pierceth not, impregnate with
disease:
Then let his length the loitering pilgrim
lay,
And gaze, untired, the morn, the noon,
the eve away.

LI

Dusky and huge, enlarging on the sight,
Nature's volcanic amphitheatre, Chimæra's alps extend from left to
right:
Beneath, a living valley seems to stir;
Flocks play, trees wave, streams flow,
the mountain-fir
Nodding above; behold black Acheron!
Once consecrated to the sepulchre.
Pluto! if this be hell I look upon,
Close shamed Elysium's gates, my shade shall seek for none.

LII

Ne city's towers pollute the lovely view;
Unseen is Yanina, though not remote,
Veil'd by the screen of hills: here men are few,
Scanty the hamlet, rare the lonely cot:
But, peering down each precipice, the goat
Browse; and, pensive o'er his scatter'd
flock,
The little shepherd in his white capote Doth lean his boyish form along the rock,
Or in his cave awaits the tempest's short-lived shock.

LIII

Oh! where, Dodona! is thine aged
grove,
Prophetic fount, and oracle divine?
What valley echoed the response of Jove?
What trace remaineth of the Thunder-er's shrine?
All, all forgotten—and shall man repine
That his frail bonds to fleeting life are broke?
Cease, fool! the fate of gods may well
be thine:
Wouldst thou survive the marble or the oak?
When nations, tongues, and worlds must sink beneath the stroke!

LIV

Epirus' bounds recede, and mountains
fail;
Tired of up-gazing still, the wearied eye
Reposes gladly on as smooth a vale

As ever Spring yclad in grassy dye:
Ev'n on a plain no humble beauties lie,
Where some bold river breaks the long expanse,
And woods along the banks are waving
high,
Whose shadows in the glassy waters
dance,
Or with the moonbeam sleep in midnight's solemn trance.

LV

The sun had sunk behind vast Tomerit,
And Laos wide and fierce came roaring
by;
The shades of wonted night were gathering yet,
When, down the steep banks winding warily,
Childe Harold saw, like meteors in the
sky,
The glittering minarets of Tepalen, Whose walls o'erlook the stream; and drawing nigh,
He heard the busy hum of warrior-men Swelling the breeze that sigh'd along the lengthening glen.

LVI

He pass'd the sacred Haram's silent
tower,
And underneath the wide o'erarching
gate
Survey'd the dwelling of this chief of
power,
Where all around proclaim'd his high
estate.
Amidst no common pomp the despot
sate, While busy preparation shook the
court,
Slaves, eunuchs, soldiers, guests, and santons wait;
Within, a palace, and, without, a fort:
Here men of every clime appear to make resort.

LVII

Richly caparison'd, a ready row
Of armed horse, and many a warlike
store,
Circl'd the wide-extending court below;
Above, strange groups adorn'd the corridore;
And oft-times through the area's echoing door,
Some high-capp'd Tartar spurr'd his steed away:
The Turk, the Greek, the Albanian, and the Moor,
Here mingled in their many-hued array, While the deep war-drum's sound announced the close of day.

LVIII

The wild Albanian kirtled to his knee,
With shawl-girt head and ornamented
gun,
And gold-embroider'd garments, fair to
see;

The crimson-scarf'd men of Macedon;
The Delhi with his cap of terror on,
And crooked glaive; the lively, supple
Greek;
And swarthy Nubia's mutilated son;
The bearded Turk, that rarely deigns to
speak,
Master of all around, too potent to be meek,

LIX

Are mix'd conspicuous; some recline in groups,
Scanning the motley scene that varies
round;
There some grave Moslem to devotion
stoops,
And some that smoke, and some that play, are found;
Here the Albanian proudly treads the
ground;
Half whispering there the Greek is heard to prate;
Hark! from the mosque the nightly
solemn sound,
The Muezzin's call doth shake the minaret,
'There is no god but God!—to prayer—lo! God is great!'

LX

Just at this season Ramazani's fast
Through the long day its penance did
maintain:
But when the lingering twilight hour
was past,
Revel and feast assumed the rule again:
Now all was bustle, and the menial train
Prepared and spread the plenteous board within;
The vacant gallery now seem'd made in
vain,
But from the chambers came the mingling din,
As page and slave anon were passing out and in.

LXI

Here woman's voice is never heard:
apart,
And scarce permitted, guarded, veil'd,
to move,
She yields to one her person and her
heart,
Tamed to her cage, nor feels a wish to rove:
For, not unhappy in her master's love,

CHILDE HAROLD'S PILGRIMAGE

And joyful in a mother's gentlest cares,
Blest cares! all other feelings far above!
Herself more sweetly rears the babe she
bears,
Who never quits the breast, no meaner passion shares.

LXII

In marble-paved pavilion, where a
spring
Of living water from the centre rose,
Whose bubbling did a genial freshness
fling,
And soft voluptuous couches breathed
repose,
ALI reclined, a man of war and woes:
Yet in his lineaments ye cannot trace,
While Gentleness her milder radiance
throws
Along that aged venerable face,
The deeds that lurk beneath, and stain him with disgrace.

LXIII

It is not that yon hoary lengthening
beard Ill suits the passions which belong to
youth;
Love conquers age—so Hafiz hath
averr'd,
So sings the Teian, and he sings in
sooth—
But crimes that scorn the tender voice of ruth,
Besecming all men ill, but most the man
In years, have mark'd him with a tiger's
tooth;
Blood follows blood, and, through their mortal span,
In bloodier acts conclude those who with blood began.

LXIV

'Mid many things most new to ear and
eye
The pilgrim rested here his weary feet,
And gazed around on Moslem luxury, Till quickly wearied with that spacious seat
Of Wealth and Wantonness, the choice
retreat
Of sated Grandeur from the city's noise:
And were it humbler, it in sooth were
sweet;
But Peace abhorreth artificial joys,
And Pleasure, leagued with Pomp, the zest of both destroys.

LXV

Fierce are Albania's children, yet they lack
Not virtues, were those virtues more mature.

Where is the foe that ever saw their back?
 Who can so well the toil of war endure?
 Their native fastnesses not more secure
 Than they in doubtful time of troublous
 need:
 Their wrath how deadly! but their friendship sure,
 When Gratiotude or Valour bids them bleed Unshaken rushing on where'er their chief may lead.

LXVI

Childe Harold saw them in their chief-tain's tower
 Thronging to war in splendour and
 success;
 And after view'd them, when, within their power,
 Himself awhile the victim of distress;
 That saddening hour when bad men
 hotlier press:
 But these did shelter him beneath their roof,
 When less barbarians would have cheer'd him less,
 And fellow-countrymen have stood
 aloof—
 In aught that tries the heart how few withstand the proof!

LXVII

It chanced that adverse winds once drove his bark
 Full on the coast of Suli's shaggy shore,
 When all around was desolate and dark;
 To land was perilous, to sojourn more;
 Yet for a while the mariners forbore, Dubious to trust where treachery might lurk:
 At length they ventured forth, though doubting sore
 That those who loathe alike the Frank and Turk Might once again renew their ancient butcher-work.

LXVIII

Vain fear! the Suliotes stretch'd the welcome hand,
 Led them o'er rocks and past the dangerous swamp,
 Kinder than polish'd slaves, though not so bland,
 And piled the hearth, and wrung their garments damp,
 And fill'd the bowl, and trimm'd the cheerful lamp,
 And spread their fare; though homely,
 all they had:
 Such conduct bears Philanthropy's rare
 stamp:
 To rest the weary and to soothe the sad,
 Doth lesson happier men, and shames at least the bad.

LXIX

It came to pass, that when he did address Himself to quit at length this mountain-
 land,
 Combined marauders half-way barr'd
 egress,
 And wasted far and near with glaive and
 brand;
 And therefore did he take a trusty band
 To traverse Acarnania's forest wide,
 In war well season'd, and with labours
 tann'd,
 Till he did greet white Achelous' tide,
 And from his further bank Ætolia's wolds espied.

LXX

Where lone Utraikey forms its circling cove,
 And weary waves retire to gleam at
 rest,
 How brown the foliage of the green hill's
 grove,
 Nodding at midnight o'er the calm bay's
 breast,
 As winds come lightly whispering from the west,
 Kissing, not ruffling, the blue deep's
 serene:—
 Here Harold was received a welcome
 guest;
 Nor did he pass unmoved the gentle
 scene,
 For many a joy could he from Night's soft presence glean.

LXXI

On the smooth shore the night-fires brightly blazed,
 The feast was done, the red wine circling
 fast,
 And he that unawares had there ygazed
 With gaping wonderment had stared aghast;
 For ere night's midmost, stillest hour
 was past,
 The native revels of the troop began;
 Each Palikar his sabre from him cast,
 And bounding hand in hand, man link'd
 to man,
 Yelling their uncouth dirge, long daunced
 the kirtled clan.

LXXII

Childe Harold at a little distance stood And view'd, but not displeased, the revelrie,
 Nor hated harmless mirth, however
 rude:
 In sooth, it was no vulgar sight to
 see
 Their barbarous, yet their not indecent, glee;

And, as the flames along their faces
gleam'd,
Their gestures nimble, dark eyes flashing free,
The long wild locks that to their girdles
stream'd,
While thus in concert they this lay half sang, half screamed:—

1

TAMBOURGI! Tambourgi! thy 'larum afar Gives hope to the valiant, and promise of
war;
All the sons of the mountains arise at the
note,
Chimariot, Illyrian, and dark Suliote!

2

Oh! who is more brave than a dark Suliote,
In his snowy camese and his shaggy capote?
To the wolf and the vulture he leaves his wild flock,
And descends to the plain like the stream from the rock.

3

Shall the sons of Chimari, who never forgive
The fault of a friend, bid an enemy live?
Let those guns so unerring such vengeance
forego?
What mark is so fair as the breast of a foe?

4

Macedonia sends forth her invincible race;
For a time they abandon the cave and the
chase;
But those scarfs of blood-red shall be redder, before
The sabre is sheathed and the battle is o'er.

5

Then the pirates of Parga that dwell by the
waves,
And teach the pale Franks what it is to be slaves,
Shall leave on the beach the long galley
and oar,
And track to his covert the captive on shore.

6

I ask not the pleasures that riches supply,
My sabre shall win what the feeble must
buy;
Shall win the young bride with her long flowing hair,
And many a maid from her mother shall tear.

7

I love the fair face of the maid in her
youth,
Her caresses shall lull me, her music shall soothe;
Let her bring from the chamber her many-toned lyre,
And sing us a song on the fall of her sire.

8

Remember the moment when Previsa fell,
The shrieks of the conquer'd, the con-
queror's yell;
The roofs that we fired, and the plunder
we shared,
The wealthy we slaughter'd, the lovely we spared.

9

I talk not of mercy, I talk not of fear;
He neither must know who would serve the Vizier:
Since the days of our prophet the Crescent ne'er saw
A chief ever glorious like Ali Pashaw.

10

Dark Muchtar his son to the Danube is
sped,
Let the yellow-hair'd Giaours view his horse-tail with dread;
When his Delhis come dashing in blood
o'er the banks,
How few shall escape from the Muscovite ranks!

11

Selictar! unsheathe then our chief's scimi-
tar;
Tambourgi! thy 'larum gives promise of
war,
Ye mountains, that see us descend to the
shore,
Shall view us as victors, or view us no
more!

LXXXIII

Fair Greece! sad relic of departed worth!
Immortal, though no more; though fallen, great!
Who now shall lead thy scatter'd children forth,
And long accustom'd bondage un-
create?
Not such thy sons who whilome did await,
The hopeless warriors of a willing doom,
In bleak Thermopylæ's sepulchral strait—
Oh! who that gallant spirit shall resume,
Leap from Eurota's banks, and call thee from the tomb?

LXXIV

Spirit of freedom! when on Phyle's
brow
Thou sat'st with Thrasybulus and his
train,
Couldst thou forebode the dismal hour which now
Dims the green beauties of thine Attic
plain?
Not thirty tyrants now enforce the
chain,
But every carle can lord it o'er thy land;
Nor rise thy sons, but idly rail in vain,
Trembling beneath the scourge of Turkish hand;
From birth till death enslaved; in word, in deed, unmann'd.

LXXV

In all save form alone, how changed!
and who
That marks the fire still sparkling in each eye,
Who would but deem their bosoms
burn'd anew
With thy unquenchèd beam, lost
Liberty!
And many dream withal the hour is nigh
That gives them back their fathers'
heritage:
For foreign arms and aid they fondly
sigh,
Nor solely dare encounter hostile rage,
Or tear their name defiled from Slavery's mournful page.

LXXVI

Hereditary bondsmen! know ye not Who would be free themselves must strike the blow?
By their right arms the conquest must be wrought?
Will Gaul or Muscovite redress ye? no!
True, they may lay your proud despoilers low,
But not for you will Freedom's altars
flame.
Shades of the Helots! triumph o'er your
foe!
Greece! change thy lords, thy state is still the same;
Thy glorious day is o'er, but not thy years
of shame.

LXXVII

The city won for Allah from the Giaour,
The Giaour from Othman's race again
may wrest;
And the Serai's impenetrable tower Receive the fiery Frank, her former
guest;
Or Wahab's rebel brood, who dared divest

The prophet's tomb of all its pious spoil,
May wind their path of blood along the West;
But ne'er will freedom seek this fated
soil,
But slave succeed to slave through years of endless toil.

LXXVIII

Yet mark their mirth—ere lenten days
begin,
That penance which their holy rites
prepare
To strive from man his weight of mortal sin,
By daily abstinence and nightly prayer:
But ere his sackcloth garb Repentance
wear,
Some days of joyaunce are decreed to
all,
To take of pleasaunce each his secret
share,
In motley robe to dance at masking ball,
And join the mimic train of merry Carnival.

LXXIX

And whose more rife with merriment than thine,
Oh Stamboul! once the empress of their
reign?
Though turbans now pollute Sophia's
shrine,
And Greece her very altars eyes in vain: (Alas! her woes will still pervade my strain!)
Gay were her minstrels once, for free
her throng,
All felt the common joy they now must feign,
Nor oft I've seen such sight, nor heard such song,
As woo'd the eye, and thrill'd the Bos-phorus along.

LXXX

Loud was the lightsome tumult on the
shore,
Oft Music changed, but never ceased her
tone,
And timely echo'd back the measured
oar,
And rippling waters made a pleasant
moan:
The Queen of tides on high consenting
shone,
And when a transient breeze swept o'er
the wave,
'Twas, as if darting from her heavenly
throne,
A brighter glance her form reflected
gave,
Till sparkling billows seem'd to light the banks they lave.

LXXXI

Glanced many a light caique along the
foam,
Danced on the shore the daughters of the land,
No thought had man or maid of rest or
home,
While many a languid eye and thrilling
hand Exchanged the look few bosoms may withstand,
Or gently prest, return'd the pressure
still:
Oh Love! young Love! bound in thy rosy band,
Let sage or cynic prattle as he will,
These hours, and only these, redeem Life's years of ill!

LXXXII

But, midst the throng in merry masquerade,
Lurk there no hearts that throb with secret pain,
Even through the closest searment half
betray'd?
To such the gentle murmurs of the main
Seem to re-echo all they mourn in vain;
To such the gladness of the gamesome
crowd
Is source of wayward thought and stern
disdain:
How do they loathe the laughter idly
loud,
And long to change the robe of revel for the shroud!

LXXXIII

This must he feel, the true-born son of Greece,
If Greece one true-born patriot still can
boast:
Not such as prate of war, but skulk in
peace,
The bondsman's peace, who sighs for all he lost,
Yet with smooth smile his tyrant can accost,
And wield the slavish sickle, not the
sword:
Ah! Greece! they love thee least who owe thee most—
Their birth, their blood, and that sublime record
Of hero sires, who shame thy now degenerate horde!

LXXXIV

When riseth Lacedemon's hardihood,
When Thebes Epaminondas rears again,
When Athens' children are with hearts
endued,
When Grecian mothers shall give birth
to men,

CHILDE HAROLD'S PILGRIMAGE

Then may'st thou be restored; but not till then.
A thousand years scarce serve to form
a state;
An hour may lay it in the dust: and
when
Can man its shatter'd splendour renovate,
Recall its virtues back, and vanquish Time and Fate?

LXXXV

And yet how lovely in thine age of woe,
Land of lost gods and godlike men, art
thou!
Thy vales of evergreen, thy hills of snow,
Proclaim thee Nature's varied favourite
now:
Thy fanes, thy temples to thy surface
bow,
Commingle slowly with heroic earth,
Broke by the share of every rustic
plough:
So perish monuments of mortal birth,
So perish all in turn, save well-recorded
Worth;

LXXXVI

Save where some solitary column
mourns
Above its prostrate brethren of the
cave;
Save where Tritonia's airy shrine adorns Colonna's cliff, and gleams along the
wave;
Save o'er some warrior's half-forgotten
grave,
Where the gray stones and unmolested
grass
Ages, but not oblivion, feebly brave;
While strangers only not regardless
pass,
Lingering like me, perchance, to gaze, and sigh 'Alas!'

LXXXVII

Yet are thy skies as blue, thy crags as
wild;
Sweet are thy groves, and verdant are thy fields,
Thine olive ripe as when Minerva
smiled,
And still his honey'd wealth Hymettus
yields;
There the blithe bee his fragrant fortress builds,
The freeborn wanderer of thy mountain-air;
Apollo still thy long, long summer gilds,
Still in his beam Mendeli's marbles
glare;
Art, Glory, Freedom fail, but Nature still is fair.

LXXXVIII

Where'er we tread 'tis haunted, holy ground;
No earth of thine is lost in vulgar mould,
But one vast realm of wonder spreads around,
And all the Muse's tales seem truly told,
Till the sense aches with gazing to behold
The scenes our earliest dreams have dwelt upon;
Each hill and dale, each deepening glen and wold
Defies the power which crush'd thy temples gone:
Age shakes Athena's tower, but spares gray Marathon.

LXXXIX

The sun, the soil, but not the slave, the same;
Unchanged in all except its foreign lord;
Preserves alike its bounds and boundless fame
The Battle-field, where Persia's victim horde
First bow'd beneath the brunt of Hellas' sword,
As on the morn to distant Glory dear,
When Marathon became a magic word;
Which utter'd, to the hearer's eye appear
The camp, the host, the fight, the conqueror's career,

XC

The flying Mede, his shaftless broken bow;
The fiery Greek, his red pursuing spear;
Mountains above, Earth's, Ocean's plain below;
Death in the front, Destruction in the rear!
Such was the scene—what now remaineth here?
What sacred trophy marks the hallow'd ground,
Recording Freedom's smile and Asia's tear?
The rifled urn, the violated mound,
The dust thy courser's hoof, rude stranger! spurns around.

XCI

Yet to the remnants of thy splendour past
Shall pilgrims, pensive, but unwearied, throng;
Long shall the voyager, with th' Ionian blast,
Hail the bright clime of battle and of song;

Long shall thine annals and immortal tongue
Fill with thy fame the youth of many a shore;
Boast of the aged! lesson of the young!
Which sages venerate and bards adore,
As Pallas and the Muse unveil their awful lore.

XCII

The parted bosom clings to wonted home,
If aught that's kindred cheer the welcome hearth;
He that is lonely, hither let him roam,
And gaze complacent on congenial earth.
Greece is no lightsome land of social mirth:
But he whom Sadness sootheth may abide,
And scarce regret the region of his birth,
When wandering slow by Delphi's sacred side,
Or gazing o'er the plains where Greek and Persian died.

XCIII

Let such approach this consecrated land,
And pass in peace along the magic waste;
But spare its relics—let no busy hand
Deface the scenes, already how defaced!
Not for such purpose were these altars placed:
Revere the remnants nations once revered:
So may our country's name be undisgraced,
So may'st thou prosper where thy youth was rear'd,
By every honest joy of love and life endeared!

XCIV

For thee, who thus in too protracted song
Hast soothed thine idlesse with inglorious lays,
Soon shall thy voice be lost amid the throng
Of louder minstrels in these later days:
To such resign the strife for fading bays—
Ill may such contest now the spirit move
Which heeds nor keen reproach nor partial praise,
Since cold each kinder heart that might approve,
And none are left to please when none are left to love.

Thou too art gone, thou loved and lovely one!
 Whom youth and youth's affections bound to me;
 Who did for me what none beside have done,
 Nor shrank from one albeit unworthy thee.
 What is my being? thou hast ceased to be!
 Nor staid to welcome here thy wanderer home,
 Who mourns o'er hours which we no more shall see—
 Would they had never been, or were to come!
 Would he had ne'er return'd to find fresh cause to roam!

Oh! ever loving, lovely, and beloved!
 How selfish Sorrow ponders on the past,
 And clings to thoughts now better far removed!
 But Time shall tear thy shadow from me last.
 All thou couldst have of mine, stern Death! thou hast;
 The parent, friend, and now the more than friend;
 Ne'er yet for one thine arrows flew so fast,
 And grief with grief continuing still to blend,
 Hath snatch'd the little joy that life had yet to lend.

XCVII

Then must I plunge again into the crowd,
 And follow all that Peace disdains to seek?
 Where Revel calls, and Laughter, vainly loud,
 False to the heart, distorts the hollow cheek,
 To leave the flagging spirit doubly weak;
 Still o'er the features, which perforce they cheer,
 To feign the pleasure or conceal the pique?
 Smiles form the channel of a future tear,
 Or raise the writhing lip with ill-dissembled sneer.

XCVIII

What is the worst of woes that wait on age?
 What stamps the wrinkle deeper on the brow?
 To view each loved one blotted from life's page,
 And be alone on earth, as I am now.

CHILDE HAROLD'S PILGRIMAGE

Before the Chastener humbly let me bow,
 O'er hearts divided and o'er hopes destroy'd:
 Roll on, vain days! full reckless may ye flow,
 Since Time hath reft whate'er my soul enjoy'd,
 And with the ills of Eld mine earlier years alloy'd.

CANTO THE THIRD

'Afin que cette application vous forçât de penser à autre chose; il n'y a en vérité de remède que celui-là et le temps.'—Lettre du Roi de Prusse à D'Alembert, Sept. 7, 1776.

I

Is thy face like thy mother's, my fair child!
 ADA! sole daughter of my house and heart?
 When last I saw thy young blue eyes they smiled,
 And then we parted,—not as now we part,
 But with a hope.—
 Awaking with a start,
 The waters heave around me; and on high
 The winds lift up their voices: I depart, Whither I know not; but the hour's gone by,
 When Albion's lessening shores could grieve or glad mine eye.

II

Once more upon the waters! yet once more!
 And the waves bound beneath me as a steed
 That knows his rider. Welcome to their roar!
 Swift be their guidance, wheresoe'er it lead!
 Though the strain'd mast should quiver as a reed,
 And the rent canvas fluttering strew the gale,
 Still must I on; for I am as a weed,
 Flung from the rock, on Ocean's foam to sail
 Where'er the surge may sweep, the tempest's breath prevail.

III

In my youth's summer I did sing of One,
 The wandering outlaw of his own dark mind;
 Again I seize the theme, then but begun,
 And bear it with me, as the rushing wind
 Bears the cloud onwards: in that Tale I find

The furrows of long thought, and dried-up tears,
Which, ebbing, leave a sterile track behind,
O'er which all heavily the journeying years
Plod the last sands of life,—where not a flower appears.

IV

Since my young days of passion—joy, or pain,
Perchance my heart and harp have lost a string,
And both may jar: it may be, that in vain
I would essay as I have sung to sing.
Yet, though a dreary strain, to this I cling;
So that it wean me from the weary dream
Of selfish grief or gladness—so it fling
Forgetfulness around me—it shall seem
To me, though to none else, a not ungrateful theme.

V

He, who grown aged in this world of woe,
In deeds, not years, piercing the depths of life,
So that no wonder waits him; nor below
Can love or sorrow, fame, ambition, strife,
Cut to his heart again with the keen knife
Of silent, sharp endurance: he can tell
Why thought seeks refuge in lone caves, yet rife
With airy images, and shapes which dwell
Still unimpaired, though old, in the soul's haunted cell.

VI

'Tis to create, and in creating live
A being more intense, that we endow
With form our fancy, gaining as we give
The life we image, even as I do now.
What am I? Nothing: but not so art thou,
Soul of my thought! with whom I traverse earth,
Invisible but gazing, as I glow
Mix'd with thy spirit, blended with thy birth,
And feeling still with thee in my crush'd feelings' dearth.

VII

Yet must I think less wildly:—I have thought Too long and darkly, till my brain became,
In its own eddy boiling and o'erwrought,
A whirling gulf of phantasy and flame:

And thus, untaught in youth my heart to tame,
My springs of life were poison'd. 'Tis too late!
Yet am I changed; though still enough the same
In strength to bear what time cannot abate,
And feed on bitter fruits without accusing Fate.

VIII

Something too much of this:—but now 'tis past,
And the spell closes with its silent seal.
Long absent HAROLD re-appears at last;
He of the breast which fain no more would feel,
Wrung with the wounds which kill not, but ne'er heal;
Yet Time, who changes all, had alter'd him
In soul and aspect as in age: years steal
Fire from the mind as vigour from the limb;
And life's enchanted cup but sparkles near the brim.

IX

His had been quaff'd too quickly, and he found
The dregs were wormwood; but he fill'd again,
And from a purer fount, on holier ground,
And deem'd its spring perpetual; but in vain!
Still round him clung invisibly a chain
Which gall'd for ever, fettering though unseen,
And heavy though it clank'd not; worn with pain,
Which pined although it spoke not, and grew keen,
Entering with every step he took through many a scene.

X

Secure in guarded coldness, he had mix'd
Again in fancied safety with his kind,
And deem'd his spirit now so firmly fix'd
And sheath'd with an invulnerable mind,
That, if no joy, no sorrow lurk'd behind;
And he, as one, might 'midst the many stand
Unheeded, searching through the crowd to find
Fit speculation; such as in strange land
He found in wonder-works of God and Nature's hand.

XI

But who can view the ripen'd rose, nor seek
 To wear it? who can curiously behold
 The smoothness and the sheen of
 beauty's cheek,
 Nor feel the heart can never all grow
 old?
 Who can contemplate Fame through clouds unfold
 The star which rises o'er her steep, nor climb?
 Harold, once more within the vortex,
 roll'd
 On with the giddy circle, chasing Time,
 Yet with a nobler aim than in his youth's fond prime.

XII

But soon he knew himself the most unfit
 Of men to herd with Man; with whom he held
 Little in common; untaught to submit His thoughts to others, though his soul was quell'd
 In youth by his own thoughts; still un-
 compell'd,
 He would not yield dominion of his mind
 To spirits against whom his own rebell'd; Proud though in desolation; which could find
 A life within itself, to breathe without mankind.

XIII

Where rose the mountains, there to him
 were friends;
 Where roll'd the ocean, thereon was his
 home;
 Where a blue sky, and glowing clime,
 extends,
 He had the passion and the power to
 roam;
 The desert, forest, cavern, breaker's
 foam,
 Were unto him companionship; they
 spake
 A mutual language, clearer than the tome
 Of his land's tongue, which he would oft forsake
 For Nature's pages glass'd by sunbeams on the lake.

XIV

Like the Chaldean, he could watch the
 stars,
 Till he had peopled them with beings
 bright
 As their own beams; and earth, and earthborn jars,
 And human frailties, were forgotten
 quite:

CHILDE HAROLD'S PILGRIMAGE

Could he have kept his spirit to that
 flight
 He had been happy; but this clay will sink
 Its spark immortal, envying it the light
 To which it mounts, as if to break the link
 That keeps us from yon heaven which woos us to its brink.

XV

But in Man's dwellings he became a
 thing
 Restless and worn, and stern and wearisome,
 Droop'd as a wild-born falcon with clipt wing,
 To whom the boundless air alone were
 home:
 Then came his fit again, which to o'er-
 come,
 As eagerly the barr'd-up bird will beat
 His breast and beak against his wiry
 dome
 Till the blood tinge his plumage, so the
 heat
 Of his impeded soul would through his bosom eat.

XVI

Self-exiled Harold wanders forth again,
 With nought of hope left, but with less of gloom;
 The very knowledge that he lived in vain,
 That all was over on this side the tomb,
 Had made Despair a smilingness assume,
 Which, though 'twere wild,—as on the plunder'd wreck
 When mariners would madly meet their
 doom
 With draughts intemperate on the sinking deck,—
 Did yet inspire a cheer, which he forbore to check.

XVII

Stop!—for thy tread is on an Empire's
 dust!
 An Earthquake's spoil is sepulchred
 below!
 Is the spot mark'd with no colossal
 bust?
 Nor column trophied for triumphal
 show?
 None; but the moral's truth tells simpler
 so,
 As the ground was before, thus let it
 be;—
 How that red rain hath made the harvest grow!
 And is this all the world has gain'd by
 thee,
 Thou first and last of fields! king-making Victory?

XVIII

And Harold stands upon this place of skulls,
The grave of France, the deadly Waterloo!
How in an hour the power which gave annuls
Its gifts, transferring fame as fleeting
too!
In 'pride of place' here last the eagle
flew,
Then tore with bloody talon the rent
plain,
Pierced by the shaft of banded nations
through;
Ambition's life and labours all were
vain;
He wears the shatter'd links of the world's broken chain.

XIX

Fit retribution! Gaul may champ the
bit
And foam in fetters;—but is Earth
more free?
Did nations combat to make One submit;
Or league to teach all kings true sovereignty?
What! shall reviving Thraldom again be
The patch'd-up idol of enlighten'd days?
Shall we, who struck the Lion down, shall we Pay the Wolf homage? proffering lowly gaze
And servile knees to thrones? No; prove before ye praise!

XX

If not, o'er one fallen despot boast no
more!
In vain fair cheeks were furrow'd with hot tears
For Europe's flowers long rooted up
before
The trampler of her vineyards; in vain
years
Of death, depopulation, bondage, fears,
Have all been borne, and broken by the accord
Of roused-up millions; all that most endears
Glory, is when the myrtle wreathes a
sword
Such as Harmodius drew on Athens' tyrant lord.

XXI

There was a sound of revelry by night,
And Belgium's capital had gather'd then Her Beauty and her Chivalry, and
bright
The lamps shone o'er fair women and brave men;

A thousand hearts beat happily; and
when
Music arose with its voluptuous swell, Soft eyes look'd love to eyes which spake again,
And all went merry as a marriage bell;
But hush! hark! a deep sound strikes like a rising knell!

XXII

Did ye not hear it?—No; 'twas but the
wind,
Or the car rattling o'er the stony street;
On with the dance! let joy be uncon-
fined;
No sleep till morn, when Youth and Pleasure meet
To chase the glowing Hours with flying
feet—
But hark!—that heavy sound breaks in
once more,
As if the clouds its echo would repeat;
And nearer, clearer, deadlier than
before!
Arm! Arm! it is—it is—the cannon's opening roar!

XXIII

Within a window'd niche of that high hall Sate Brunswick's fated chieftain; he did hear
That sound the first amidst the festival,
And caught its tone with Death's prophetic ear;
And when they smiled because he deem'd it near,
His heart more truly knew that peal too
well
Which stretch'd his father on a bloody
bier,
And roused the vengeance blood alone
could quell;
He rush'd into the field, and, foremost fighting, fell.

XXIV

Ah! then and there was hurrying to and fro,
And gathering tears, and tremblings of distress,
And cheeks all pale, which but an hour
ago
Blush'd at the praise of their own loveliness;
And there were sudden partings, such as press
The life from out young hearts, and choking sighs
Which ne'er might be repeated; who could guess
If ever more should meet those mutual
eyes,
Since upon night so sweet such awful morn could rise!

XXV

And there was mounting in hot haste:
 the steed,
 The mustering squadron, and the clat-tering car,
 Went pouring forward with impetuous
 speed,
 And swiftly forming in the ranks of
 war;
 And the deep thunder peal on peal
 afar;
 And near, the beat of the alarming
 drum
 Roused up the soldier ere the morning
 star;
 While throng'd the citizens with terror
 dumb,
 Or whispering, with white lips—'The foe!
 they come! they come!'

XXVI

And wild and high the 'Cameron's gathering' rose!
 The war-note of Lochiel, which Albyn's
 hills
 Have heard, and heard, too, have her Saxon foes:—
 How in the noon of night that pibroch
 thrills,
 Savage and shrill! But with the breath which fills
 Their mountain-pipe, so fill the mountaineers
 With the fierce native daring which instils
 The stirring memory of a thousand
 years,
 And Evan's, Donald's fame rings in each clansman's ears!

And Ardennes waves above them her green leaves,
 Dewy with nature's tear-drops as they
 pass,
 Grieving, if aught inanimate e'er grieves,
 Over the unreturning brave,—alas!
 Ere evening to be trodden like the grass
 Which now beneath them, but above shall grow
 In its next verdure, when this fiery mass
 Of living valour, rolling on the foe
 And burning with high hope shall moulder cold and low.

XXVIII

Last noon beheld them full of lusty life,
 Last eve in Beauty's circle proudly gay,
 The midnight brought the signal-sound
 of strife,
 The morn the marshalling in arms,—
 the day
 Battle's magnificently stern array!

CHILDE HAROLD'S PILGRIMAGE

The thunder-clouds close o'er it, which when rent
 The earth is cover'd thick with other
 clay,
 Which her own clay shall cover, heap'd
 and pent,
 Rider and horse,—friend, foe,—in one red burial blent!

XXIX

Their praise is hymn'd by loftier harps than mine:
 Yet one I would select from that proud
 throng,
 Partly because they blend me with his
 line,
 And partly that I did his sire some
 wrong,
 And partly that bright names will hallow song;
 And his was of the bravest, and when shower'd
 The death-bolts deadliest the thinn'd files along,
 Even where the thickest of war's tempest lower'd,
 They reach'd no nobler breast than thine,
 young gallant Howard!

XXX

There have been tears and breaking hearts for thee,
 And mine were nothing had I such to
 give;
 But when I stood beneath the fresh green tree,
 Which living waves where thou didst
 cease to live,
 And saw around me the wide field revive
 With fruits and fertile promise, and the
 Spring
 Came forth her work of gladness to contrive,
 With all her reckless birds upon the
 wing,
 I turn'd from all she brought to those she could not bring.

XXXI

I turn'd to thee, to thousands, of whom each
 And one as all a ghastly gap did make
 In his own kind and kindred, whom to teach Forgetfulness were mercy for their sake;
 The Archangel's trump, not Glory's, must awake
 Those whom they thirst for; though the sound of Fame
 May for a moment soothe, it cannot slake
 The fever of vain longing, and the name
 So honour'd but assumes a stronger, bitterer claim.

XXXII

They mourn, but smile at length; and,
smiling, mourn;
The tree will wither long before it fall;
The hull drives on, though mast and sail be torn;
The roof-tree sinks, but moulders on the hall
In massy hoariness; the ruin'd wall Stands when its wind-worn battlements are gone;
The bars survive the captive they en-
thral;
The day drags through, though storms
keep out the sun;
And thus the heart will break, yet brokenly live on

XXXIII

Even as a broken mirror, which the glass
In every fragment multiplies; and makes
A thousand images of one that was,
The same, and still the more, the more
it breaks;
And thus the heart will do which not forsakes,
Living in shatter'd guise; and still, and
cold,
And bloodless, with its sleepless sorrow
aches,
Yet withers on till all without is old,
Showing no visible sign, for such things are untold.

XXXIV

There is a very life in our despair,
Vitality of poison,—a quick root Which feeds these deadly branches; for it were
As nothing did we die; but Life will suit
Itself to Sorrow's most detested fruit,
Like to the apples on the Dead Sea's
shore,
All ashes to the taste: Did man compute
Existence by enjoyment, and count o'er
Such hours 'gainst years of life,—say, would he name threescore?

XXXV

The Psalmist number'd out the years of
man:
They are enough: and if thy tale be true,
Thou, who didst grudge him even that fleeting span,
More than enough, thou fatal Waterloo!
Millions of tongues record thee, and anew
Their children's lips shall echo them,
and say—

'Here, where the sword united nations
drew,
Our countrymen were warring on that
day!'
And this is much, and all which will not pass away.

XXXVI

There sunk the greatest, nor the worst
of men,
Whose spirit, antithetically mixt,
One moment of the mightiest, and
again
On little objects with like firmness fixt; Extreme in all things! hadst thou been betwixt,
Thy throne had still been thine, or never been;
For daring made thy rise as fall: thou seek'st
Even now to re-assume the imperial
mien,
And shake again the world, the Thunderer of the scene!

XXXVII

Conqueror and captive of the earth art
thou!
She trembles at thee still, and thy wild
name
Was ne'er more bruited in men's minds than now
That thou art nothing, save the jest of
Fame,
Who woo'd thee once, thy vassal, and became
The flatterer of thy fierceness, till thou wert
A god unto thyself; nor less the same
To the astounded kingdoms all inert,
Who deem'd thee for a time whate'er thou didst assert.

XXXVIII

Oh, more or less than man—in high or
low,
Battling with nations, flying from the
field;
Now making monarchs' necks thy footstool, now
More than thy meanest soldier taught to yield;
An empire thou couldst crush, command, rebuild,
But govern not thy pettiest passion,
nor,
However deeply in men's spirits skill'd, Look through thine own, nor curb the lust of war,
Nor learn that tempted Fate will leave the loftiest star.

XXXIX

Yet well thy soul hath brook'd the turning tide
 With that untaught innate philosophy,
 Which, be it wisdom, coldness, or deep
 pride,
 Is gall and wormwood to an enemy.
 When the whole host of hatred stood hard by,
 To watch and mock thee shrinking,
 thou hast smiled
 With a sedate and all-enduring eye;—
 When Fortune fled her spoil'd and favourite child,
 He stood unbow'd beneath the ills upon him piled.

XL

Sager than in thy fortunes; for in them Ambition steel'd thee on too far to
 show
 That just habitual scorn, which could contemn
 Men and their thoughts; 'twas wise to feel, not so
 To wear it ever on thy lip and brow,
 And spurn the instruments thou wert to
 use
 Till they were turn'd unto thine overthrow:
 'Tis but a worthless world to win or
 lose;
 So hath it proved to thee, and all such lot who choose.

XLI

If, like a tower upon a headland rock,
 Thou hadst been made to stand or fall
 alone,
 Such scorn of man had help'd to brave
 the shock;
 But men's thoughts were the steps which paved thy throne,
 Their admiration thy best weapon
 shone;
 The part of Philip's son was thine, not
 then (Unless aside thy purple had been thrown)
 Like stern Diogenes to mock at men;
 For sceptred cynics earth were far too wide a den.

XLII

But quiet to quick bosoms is a hell,
 And there hath been thy bane; there is a fire
 And motion of the soul which will not
 dwell
 In its own narrow being, but aspire
 Beyond the fitting medium of desire;
 And, but once kindled, quenchless ever-
 more,
 Preys upon high adventure, nor can tire

CHILDE HAROLD'S PILGRIMAGE

Of aught but rest; a fever at the core,
 Fatal to him who bears, to all who ever
 bore.

XLIII

This makes the madmen who have made men mad
 By their contagion; Conquerors and
 Kings,
 Founders of sects and systems, to whom add Sophists, Bards, Statesmen, all un-quiet things Which stir too strongly the soul's secret springs,
 And are themselves the fools to those they fool;
 Envied, yet how unenviable! what stings
 Are theirs! One breast laid open were a school
 Which would unteach mankind the lust
 to shine or rule:

XLIV

Their breath is agitation, and their life
 A storm whereon they ride, to sink at
 last,
 And yet so nursed and bigoted to strife,
 That should their days, surviving perils
 past,
 Melt to calm twilight, they feel overcast
 With sorrow and supineness, and so die;
 Even as a flame unfed, which runs to
 waste
 With its own flickering, or a sword laid
 by,
 Which eats into itself, and rusts ingloriously.

XLV

He who ascends to mountain-tops, shall find
 The loftiest peaks most wrapt in clouds
 and snow;
 He who surpasses or subdues mankind, Must look down on the hate of those
 below.
 Though high above the sun of glory
 glow,
 And far beneath the earth and ocean
 spread,
 Round him are icy rocks, and loudly
 blow
 Contending tempests on his naked head,
 And thus reward the toils which to those summits led.

XLVI

Away with these! true Wisdom's world
 will be
 Within its own creation, or in thine, Maternal Nature! for who teems like
 thee,
 Thus on the banks of thy majestic Rhine?

There Harold gazes on a work divine,
A blending of all beauties; streams and dells,
Fruit, foliage, crag, wood, cornfield,
mountain, vine,
And chiefless castles breathing stern
farewells
From gray but leafy walls, where Ruin greenly dwells.

XLVII

And there they stand, as stands a lofty
mind,
Worn, but unstooping to the baser
crowd,
All tenantless, save to the crannying
wind,
Or holding dark communion with the
crowd.
There was a day when they were young and proud;
Banners on high, and battles pass'd
below;
But they who fought are in a bloody
shroud,
And those which waved are shredless dust ere now,
And the bleak battlements shall bear no future blow.

XLVIII

Beneath those battlements, within those
walls,
Power dwelt amidst her passions; in proud state
Each robber chief upheld his armed
halls,
Doing his evil will, nor less elate
Than mightier heroes of a longer date.
What want these outlaws conquerors should have
But history's purchased page to call them great?
A wider space, an ornamented grave?
Their hopes were not less warm, their souls were full as brave.

XLIX

In their baronial feuds and single fields,
What deeds of prowess unrecorded died!
And Love, which lent a blazon to their shields,
With emblems well devised by amorous
pride,
Through all the mail of iron hearts
would glide;
But still their flame was fierceness, and drew on Keen contest and destruction near allied,
And many a tower for some fair mischief
won,
Saw the discolour'd Rhine beneath its ruin run.

L

But Thou, exulting and abounding
river!
Making thy waves a blessing as they
flow
Through banks whose beauty would endure for ever Could man but leave thy bright creation
so,
Nor its fair promise from the surface
mow
With the sharp scythe of conflict,—then
to see
Thy valley of sweet waters, were to know Earth paved like Heaven; and to seem such to me,
Even now what wants thy stream?—that it should Lethe be.

LI

A thousand battles have assail'd thy banks,
But these and half their fame have pass'd
away,
And Slaughter heap'd on high his
weltering ranks;
Their very graves are gone, and what are they?
Thy tide wash'd down the blood of yesterday,
And all was stainless, and on thy clear
stream
Glass'd, with its dancing light, the sunny
ray;
But o'er the blacken'd memory's blight-ing dream
Thy waves would vainly roll, all sweeping as they seem.

LII

Thus Harold inly said, and pass'd along,
Yet not insensible to all which here
Awoke the jocund birds to early song
In glens which might have made even exile dear:
Though on his brow were graven lines
austere,
And tranquil sternness, which had ta'en
the place
Of feelings fierier far but less severe,
Joy was not always absent from his face,
But o'er it in such scenes would steal with transient trace.

LIII

Nor was all love shut from him, though his days
Of passion had consumed themselves to
dust.
It is in vain that we would coldly gaze
On such as smile upon us; the heart must Leap kindly back to kindness, though
disgust

Hath wean'd it from all worldlings:
 thus he felt,
 For there was soft remembrance, and sweet trust
 In one fond breast, to which his own
 would melt,
 And in its tenderer hour on that his bosom dwelt.

LIV

And he had learn'd to love,—I know not
 why,
 For this in such as him seems strange of mood,—
 The helpless looks of blooming infancy,
 Even in its earliest nurture; what sub-
 dued,
 To change like this, a mind so far imbued
 With scorn of man, it little boots to
 know;
 But thus it was; and though in solitude Small power the nipp'd affections have to grow,
 In him this glow'd when all beside had ceased to glow.

LV

And there was one soft breast, as hath
 been said,
 Which unto his was bound by stronger ties
 Than the church links withal; and,
 though unwed,
That love was pure, and, far above dis-
 guise,
 Had stood the test of mortal enmities
 Still undivided, and cemented more
 By peril, dreaded most in female eyes;
 But this was firm, and from a foreign
 shore
 Well to that heart might his these absent greetings pour!

1

The castled crag of Drachenfels
 Frowns o'er the wide and winding
 Rhine,
 Whose breast of waters broadly swells
 Between the banks which bear the vine,
 And hills all rich with blossom'd trees,
 And fields which promise corn and
 wine,
 And scatter'd cities crowning these,
 Whose far white walls along them
 shine,
 Have strew'd a scene, which I should
 see
 With double joy wert thou with me.

2

And peasant girls, with deep blue eyes,
 And hands which offer early flowers,
 Walk smiling o'er this paradise;
 Above, the frequent feudal towers

Through green leaves lift their walls of gray;
 And many a rock which steeply lowers,
 And noble arch in proud decay,
 Look o'er this vale of vintage-bowers;
 But one thing want these banks of
 Rhine,—
 Thy gentle hand to clasp in mine!

3

I send the lilies given to me;
 Though long before thy hand they touch,
 I know that they must wither'd be,
 But yet reject them not as such;
 For I have cherish'd them as dear,
 Because they yet may meet thine eye,
 And guide thy soul to mine even here,
 When thou behold'st them drooping
 nigh,
 And know'st them gather'd by the Rhine,
 And offer'd from my heart to thine!

4

The river nobly foams and flows,
 The charm of this enchanted ground,
 And all its thousand turns disclose
 Some fresher beauty varying round:
 The haughtiest breast its wish might
 bound
 Through life to dwell delighted here;
 Nor could on earth a spot be found
 To nature and to me so dear,
 Could thy dear eyes in following mine Still sweeten more these banks of Rhine!

LVI

By Coblentz, on a rise of gentle ground,
 There is a small and simple pyramid,
 Crowning the summit of the verdant
 mound;
 Beneath its base are heroes' ashes hid,
 Our enemy's—but let not that forbid Honour to Marceau! o'er whose early
 tomb
 Tears, big tears, gush'd from the rough soldier's lid,
 Lamenting and yet envying such a doom,
 Falling for France, whose rights he battled to resume.

LVII

Brief, brave, and glorious was his young
 career,—
 His mourners were two hosts, his friends
 and foes;
 And fitly may the stranger lingering here
 Pray for his gallant spirit's bright re-
 pose;
 For he was Freedom's champion, one of
 those,

The few in number, who had not o'erstept
The charter to chastise which she bestows
On such as wield her weapons; he had kept
The whiteness of his soul, and thus men o'er him wept.

Here Ehrenbreitstein, with her shatter'd
wall
Black with the miner's blast, upon her
height
Yet shows of what she was, when shell and ball
Rebounding idly on her strength did
light:
A tower of victory! from whence the
flight
Of baffled foes was watch'd along the
plain:
But Peace destroy'd what War could never blight,
And laid those proud roofs bare to Summer's rain—
On which the iron shower for years had pour'd in vain.

LIX

Adieu to thee, fair Rhine! How long delighted
The stranger fain would linger on his
way!
Thine is a scene alike where souls
united
Or lonely Contemplation thus might
stray;
And could the ceaseless vultures cease
to prey
On self-condemning bosoms, it were
here,
Where Nature, nor too sombre nor too
gay,
Wild but not rude, awful yet not austere,
Is to the mellow Earth as Autumn to the year.

LX

Adieu to thee again! a vain adieu!
There can be no farewell to scene like
thine;
The mind is colour'd by thy every hue;
And if reluctantly the eyes resign
Their cherish'd gaze upon thee, lovely
Rhine!
'Tis with the thankful heart of parting
praise;
More mighty spots may rise, more glaring shine,
But none unite in one attaching maze
The brilliant, fair, and soft,—the glories of old days.

LXI

The negligently grand, the fruitful bloom
Of coming ripeness, the white city's sheen,
The rolling stream, the precipice's
gloom,
The forest's growth, and Gothic walls
between,
The wild rocks shaped as they had turrets been,
In mockery of man's art; and these withal
A race of faces happy as the scene,
Whose fertile bounties here extend to all,
Still springing o'er thy banks, though Empires near them fall.

LXII

But these recede. Above me are the Alps,
The palaces of Nature, whose vast walls
Have pinnacled in clouds their snowy scalps,
And throned Eternity in icy halls
Of cold sublimity, where forms and falls
The avalanche—the thunderbolt of
snow!
All that expands the spirit, yet appals, Gather around these summits, as to
show
How Earth may pierce to Heaven, yet leave vain man below.

LXIII

But ere these matchless heights I dare to
scan,
There is a spot should not be pass'd in
vain,— Morat! the proud, the patriot field!
where man
May gaze on ghastly trophies of the
slain,
Nor blush for those who conquer'd on that plain;
Here Burgundy bequeath'd his tombless
host,
A bony heap, through ages to remain,
Themselves their monument;—the Stygian coast
Unsepulchred they roam'd, and shriek'd each wandering ghost.

LXIV

While Waterloo with Cannæ's carnage
vies,
Morat and Marathon twin names shall
stand;
They were true Glory's stainless victories,
Won by the unambitious heart and hand
Of a proud, brotherly, and civic band,
All unbought champions in no princely
cause

Of vice-entail'd Corruption; they no land
Doom'd to bewail the blasphemy of laws Making kings' rights divine, by some Draconic clause.

LXV

By a lone wall a lonelier column rears
A gray and grief-worn aspect of old
days;
'Tis the last remnant of the wreck of
years,
And looks as with the wild-bewilder'd
gaze
Of one to stone converted by amaze,
Yet still with consciousness; and there it stands
Making a marvel that it not decays,
When the coeval pride of human hands,
Levell'd Adventicum, hath strew'd her subject lands.

LXVI

And there—oh! sweet and sacred be the
name!—
Julia—the daughter, the devoted—gave Her youth to Heaven; her heart, beneath a claim Nearest to Heaven's, broke o'er a father's grave.
Justice is sworn 'gainst tears, and hers would crave
The life she lived in; but the judge was
just,
And then she died on him she could not
save.
Their tomb was simple, and without a
bust,
And held within their urn one mind, one heart, one dust.

LXVII

But these are deeds which should not
pass away,
And names that must not wither, though
the earth
Forgets her empires with a just decay,
The enslavers and the enslaved, their death and birth;
The high, the mountain-majesty of worth
Should be, and shall, survivor of its woe,
And from its immortality look forth
In the sun's face, like yonder Alpine
snow, Imperishably pure beyond all things
below.

LXVIII

Lake Lemn woos me with its crystal
face,
The mirror where the stars and mountains view
The stillness of their aspect in each trace
Its clear depth yields of their far height and hue:

CHILDE HAROLD'S PILGRIMAGE

There is too much of man here, to look
through
With a fit mind the might which I be-
hold;
But soon in me shall Loneliness renew Thoughts hid, but not less cherish'd than of old,
Ere mingling with the herd had penn'd me
in their fold.

LXIX

To fly from, need not be to hate, mankind:
All are not fit with them to stir and toil,
Nor is it discontent to keep the mind
Deep in its fountain, lest it overboil
In the hot throng, where we become the spoil
Of our infection, till too late and long
We may deplore and struggle with the coil,
In wretched interchange of wrong for
wrong
Midst a contentious world, striving where none are strong.

LXX

There, in a moment we may plunge our
years
In fatal penitence, and in the blight
Of our own soul turn all our blood to tears,
And colour things to come with hues of
Night;
The race of life becomes a hopeless flight
To those that walk in darkness: on the
sea
The boldest steer but where their ports invite;
But there are wanderers o'er Eternity Whose bark drives on and on, and anchor'd ne'er shall be.

LXXI

Is it not better, then, to be alone,
And love Earth only for its earthly sake?
By the blue rushing of the arrowy Rhône,
Or the pure bosom of its nursing lake,
Which feeds it as a mother who doth
make
A fair but froward infant her own care,
Kissing its cries away as these awake;—
Is it not better thus our lives to wear,
Than join the crushing crowd, doom'd to inflict or bear?

LXXII

I live not in myself, but I become Portion of that around me; and to me
High mountains are a feeling, but the hum
Of human cities torture: I can see Nothing to loathe in nature, save to be

A link reluctant in a fleshly chain, Class'd among creatures, when the soul
can flee,
And with the sky, the peak, the heaving
plain
Of ocean, or the stars, mingle, and not in vain.

LXXIII

And thus I am absorb'd, and this is life:
I look upon the peopled desert past,
As on a place of agony and strife,
Where, for some sin, to sorrow I was
cast,
To act and suffer, but remount at last
With a fresh pinion; which I feel to
spring,
Though young, yet waxing vigorous as
the blast
Which it would cope with, on delighted
wing,
Spurning the clay-cold bonds which round
our being cling.

LXXIV

And when, at length, the mind shall be all free
From what it hates in this degraded
form,
Reft of its carnal life, save what shall be Existent happier in the fly and worm,—
When elements to elements conform,
And dust is as it should be, shall I not Feel all I see, less dazzling, but more
warm?
The bodiless thought? the Spirit of each
spot?
Of which, even now, I share at times the immortal lot?

LXXV

Are not the mountains, waves, and skies, a part
Of me and of my soul, as I of them?
Is not the love of these deep in my heart
With a pure passion? should I not con-
temn
All objects, if compared with these? and stem
A tide of suffering, rather than forego
Such feelings for the hard and worldly phlegm
Of those whose eyes are only turn'd
below,
Gazing upon the ground, with thoughts which dare not glow?

LXXVI

But this is not my theme; and I return
To that which is immediate, and require Those who find contemplation in the
urn,
To look on One, whose dust was once
all fire,

A native of the land where I respire
The clear air for a while—a passing
guest,
Where he became a being,—whose desire
Was to be glorious; 'twas a foolish
quest,
The which to gain and keep, he sacrificed
all rest.

LXXVII

Here the self-torturing sophist, wild Rousseau,
The apostle of affliction, he who threw Enchantment over passion, and from
woe
Wrung overwhelming eloquence, first
drew
The breath which made him wretched;
yet he knew How to make madness beautiful, and
cast
O'er erring deeds and thoughts a heavenly hue
Of words, like sunbeams, dazzling as they past
The eyes, which o'er them shed tears feeling and fast.

LXXVIII

His love was passion's essence:—as a tree
On fire by lightning, with ethereal flame Kindled he was, and blasted; for to
be Thus, and enamour'd, were in him the
same.
But his was not the love of living
dame,
Nor of the dead who rise upon our
dreams,
But of ideal beauty, which became
In him existence, and o'erflowing teems Along his burning page, distemper'd though it seems.

LXXIX

This breathed itself to life in Julie, this Invested her with all that's wild and
sweet;
This hallow'd, too, the memorable kiss Which every morn his fever'd lip would greet,
From hers, who but with friendship his would meet;
But to that gentle touch through brain and breast
Flash'd the thrill'd spirit's love-devouring heat;
In that absorbing sigh perchance more
blest
Than vulgar minds may be with all they seek possess.

LXXX

His life was one long war with self-sought foes,
 Or friends by him self-banish'd; for his mind
 Had grown Suspicion's sanctuary, and chose,
 For its own cruel sacrifice, the kind,
 'Gainst whom he raged with fury strange and blind.
 But he was phrensied,—wherefore, who may know?
 Since cause might be which skill could never find;
 But he was phrensied by disease or woe,
 To that worst pitch of all, which wears a reasoning show.

LXXXI

For then he was inspired, and from him came,
 As from the Pythian's mystic cave of yore,
 Those oracles which set the world in flame,
 Nor ceased to burn till kingdoms were no more:
 Did he not this for France? which lay before
 Bow'd to the inborn tyranny of years?
 Broken and trembling to the yoke she bore,
 Till by the voice of him and his compeers
 Roused up to too much wrath, which follows o'ergrown fears?

LXXXII

They made themselves a fearful monument!
 The wreck of old opinions—things which grew,
 Breathed from the birth of time: the veil they rent,
 And what behind it lay, all earth shall view.
 But good with ill they also overthrew,
 Leaving but ruins, wherewith to rebuild
 Upon the same foundation, and renew Dungeons and thrones, which the same hour refill'd
 As heretofore, because ambition was self-will'd.

LXXXIII

But this will not endure, nor be endured!
 Mankind have felt their strength, and made it felt.
 They might have used it better, but, allured
 By their new vigour, sternly have they dealt
 On one another; pity ceased to melt

CHILDE HAROLD'S PILGRIMAGE

With her once natural charities. But they,
 Who in oppression's darkness caved had dwelt,
 They were not eagles, nourish'd with the day;
 What marvel then, at times, if they mistook their prey?

LXXXIV

What deep wounds ever closed without a scar?
 The heart's bleed longest, and but heal to wear
 That which disfigures it; and they who war
 With their own hopes, and have been vanquish'd, bear
 Silence, but not submission: in his lair
 Fix'd Passion holds his breath, until the hour
 Which shall atone for years; none need despair:
 It came, it cometh, and will come,—the power
 To punish or forgive—in one we shall be slower.

LXXXV

Clear, placid Leman! thy contrasted lake,
 With the wild world I dwelt in, is a thing
 Which warns me, with its stillness, to forsake
 Earth's troubled waters for a purer spring.
 This quiet sail is as a noiseless wing
 To waft me from distraction; once I loved Torn ocean's roar, but thy soft murmuring
 Sounds sweet as if a Sister's voice reprov'd,
 That I with stern delights should e'er have been so moved.

LXXXVI

It is the hush of night, and all between
 Thy margin and the mountains, dusk, yet clear,
 Mellow'd and mingling, yet distinctly seen,
 Save darken'd Jura, whose cap heights appear Precipitously steep; and drawing near,
 There breathes a living fragrance from the shore,
 Of flowers yet fresh with childhood; on the ear
 Drops the light drip of the suspended oar,
 Or chirps the grasshopper one good-night carol more:

LXXXVII

He is an evening reveller, who makes
His life an infancy, and sings his fill;
At intervals, some bird from out the brakes
Starts into voice a moment, then is still.
There seems a floating whisper on the hill,
But that is fancy, for the starlight dew's
All silently their tears of love instil,
Weeping themselves away, till they infuse Deep into nature's breast the spirit of her hues.

LXXXVIII

Ye stars! which are the poetry of heaven!
If in your bright leaves we would read
the fate
Of men and empires,—'tis to be for-
given,
That in our aspirations to be great,
Our destinies o'erleap their mortal state,
And claim a kindred with you; for ye are
A beauty and a mystery, and create
In us such love and reverence from afar,
That fortune, fame, power, life, have named themselves a star.

LXXXIX

All heaven and earth are still—though not in sleep,
But breathless, as we grow when feeling
most;
And silent, as we stand in thoughts too
deep:—
All heaven and earth are still: From the high host
Of stars, to the lull'd lake and mountain-
coast,
All is concenter'd in a life intense,
Where not a beam, nor air, nor leaf is lost,
But hath a part of being, and a sense
Of that which is of all Creator and defence.

XC

Then stirs the feeling infinite, so felt
In solitude, where we are least alone;
A truth, which through our being then doth melt,
And purifies from self: it is a tone,
The soul and source of music, which makes known Eternal harmony, and sheds a charm
Like to the fabled Cytherea's zone,
Binding all things with beauty;—
'twould disarm
The spectre Death, had he substantial power to harm.

XCI

Not vainly did the early Persian make
His altar the high places, and the peak Of earth-o'ergazing mountains, and thus take
A fit and unwall'd temple, there to seek

The Spirit, in whose honour shrines are
weak, Uprear'd of human hands. Come, and compare
Columns and idol-dwellings, Goth or Greek,
With Nature's realms of worship, earth
and air,
Nor fix on fond abodes to circumscribe thy pray'r!

XCII

The sky is changed!—and such a change!
Oh night,
And storm, and darkness, ye are wondrous strong,
Yet lovely in your strength, as is the light
Of a dark eye in woman! Far along,
From peak to peak, the rattling crags
among Leaps the live thunder! Not from one lone cloud,
But every mountain now hath found a
tongue,
And Jura answers, through her misty
shroud,
Back to the joyous Alps, who call to her aloud!

XCIII

And this is in the night:—Most glorious
night!
Thou wert not sent for slumber! let me
be
A sharer in thy fierce and far delight,—
A portion of the tempest and of thee!
How the lit lake shines, a phosphoric
sea,
And the big rain comes dancing to the
earth!
And now again 'tis black,—and now,
the glee
Of the loud hills shakes with its mountain-mirth,
As if they did rejoice o'er a young earthquake's birth.

XCIV

Now, where the swift Rhone cleaves his way between Heights which appear as lovers who have parted
In hate, whose mining depths so intervene,
That they can meet no more, though broken-hearted;
Though in their souls, which thus each other thwarted,
Love was the very root of the fond rage
Which blighted their life's bloom, and then departed:
Itself expired, but leaving them an age
Of years all winters,—war within themselves to wage.

XCV

Now, where the quick Rhone thus hath cleft his way,
 The mightiest of the storms hath ta'en
 his stand:
 For here, not one, but many, make their
 play,
 And fling their thunder-bolts from hand
 to hand,
 Flashing and cast around; of all the
 band,
 The brightest through these parted hills hath fork'd
 His lightnings,—as if he did under-
 stand,
 That in such gaps as desolation work'd,
 There the hot shaft should blast whatever therein lurk'd.

XCVI

Sky, mountains, river, winds, lake, lightnings! ye!
 With night, and clouds, and thunder,
 and a soul
 To make these felt and feeling, well may
 be Things that have made me watchful; the far roll
 Of your departing voices, is the knoll
 Of what in me is sleepless,—if I rest.
 But where of ye, O tempests! is the goal?
 Are ye like those within the human
 breast?
 Or do ye find, at length, like eagles, some high nest?

XCVII

Could I embody and unbosom now
 That which is most within me,—could
 I wreak
 My thoughts upon expression, and thus throw
 Soul, heart, mind, passions, feelings,
 strong or weak,
 All that I would have sought, and all I
 seek,
 Bear, know, feel, and yet breathe—into
 one word,
 And that one word were Lightning, I would speak;
 But as it is, I live and die unheard,
 With a most voiceless thought, sheathing it as a sword.

XCVIII

The morn is up again, the dewy morn,
 With breath all incense, and with cheek
 all bloom,
 Laughing the clouds away with playful
 scorn,
 And living as if earth contain'd no
 tomb,—

CHILDE HAROLD'S PILGRIMAGE

And glowing into day: we may resume
 The march of our existence: and thus I, Still on thy shores, fair Leman! may find
 room
 And food for meditation, nor pass by Much, that may give us pause, if ponder'd fittingly.

XCIX

Clarens! sweet Clarens, birthplace of deep Love!
 Thine air is the young breath of passionate thought;
 Thy trees take root in Love; the snows
 above
 The very Glaciers have his colours
 caught,
 And sun-set into rose-hues sees them
 wrought
 By rays which sleep there lovingly: the
 rocks,
 The permanent crags, tell here of Love,
 who sought
 In them a refuge from the worldly shocks,
 Which stir and sting the soul with hope that woos, then mocks.

Clarens! by heavenly feet thy paths are trod,— Undying Love's, who here ascends a
 throne
 To which the steps are mountains;
 where the god
 Is a pervading life and light,—so shown
 Not on those summits solely, nor alone
 In the still cave and forest; o'er the flower
 His eye is sparkling, and his breath hath blown,
 His soft and summer breath, whose tender power Passes the strength of storms in their most desolate hour.

CI

All things are here of him; from the black pines,
 Which are his shade on high, and the loud roar
 Of torrents, where he listeneth, to the vines
 Which slope his green path downward to the shore,
 Where the bow'd waters meet him, and
 adore,
 Kissing his feet with murmurs; and the
 wood,
 The covert of old trees, with trunks all
 hoar,
 But light leaves, young as joy, stands
 where it stood,
 Offering to him, and his, a populous solitude.

CII

A populous solitude of bees and birds,
And fairy-form'd and many-colour'd
things,
Who worship him with notes more sweet than words,
And innocently open their glad wings,
Fearless and full of life: the gush of
springs,
And fall of lofty fountains, and the bend
Of stirring branches, and the bud which brings
The swiftest thought of beauty, here extend, Mingling, and made by Love, unto one mighty end.

CIII

He who hath loved not, here would learn that lore,
And make his heart a spirit; he who
knows
That tender mystery, will love the more;
For this is Love's recess, where vain
men's woes,
And the world's waste, have driven him far from those,
For 'tis his nature to advance or die;
He stands not still, but or decays, or grows
Into a boundless blessing, which may vie
With the immortal lights, in its eternity!

CIV

'Twas not for fiction chose Rousseau
this spot,
Peopling it with affections; but he found
It was the scene which Passion must allot
To the Mind's purified beings; 'twas the
ground
Where early Love his Psyche's zone
unbound,
And hallow'd it with loveliness: 'tis
lone,
And wonderful, and deep, and hath a
sound,
And sense, and sight of sweetness; here
the Rhone Hath spread himself a couch, the Alps have rear'd a throne.

CV

Lausanne! and Ferney! ye have been the abodes
Of names which unto you bequeath'd a
name;
Mortals, who sought and found, by dangerous roads,
A path to perpetuity of fame:
They were gigantic minds, and their steep aim
Was, Titan-like, on daring doubts to pile

Thoughts which should call down thunder, and the flame
Of Heaven again assail'd, if Heaven the while
On man and man's research could deign do more than smile.

CVI

The one was fire and fickleness, a child
Most mutable in wishes, but in mind
A wit as various,—gay, grave, sage, or wild,—
Historian, bard, philosopher, combined;
He multiplied himself among mankind,
The Proteus of their talents; But his own Breathed most in ridicule,—which, as
the wind,
Blew where it listed, laying all things prone,—
Now to o'erthrow a fool, and now to shake a throne.

CVII

The other, deep and slow, exhausting
thought,
And hiving wisdom with each studious
year,
In meditation dwelt, with learning
wrought,
And shaped his weapon with an edge
severe,
Sapping a solemn creed with solemn sneer;
The lord of irony,—that master-spell,
Which stung his foes to wrath, which grew from fear,
And doom'd him to the zealot's ready
Hell,
Which answers to all doubts so eloquently
well.

CVIII

Yet, peace be with their ashes,—for by
them,
If merited, the penalty is paid;
It is not ours to judge,—far less condemn;
The hour must come when such things shall be made Known unto all, or hope and dread
allay'd
By slumber, on one pillow, in the dust,
Which, thus much we are sure, must lie
decay'd;
And when it shall revive, as is our trust,
'Twill be to be forgiven, or suffer what is just.

CIX

But let me quit man's works, again to
read
His Maker's, spread around me, and suspend
This page, which from my reveries I
feed,
Until it seems prolonging without end.

The clouds above me to the white Alps
tend,
And I must pierce them, and survey
whate'er
May be permitted, as my steps I bend
To their most great and growing region,
where
The earth to her embrace compels the powers of air.

CX

Italia! too, Italia! looking on thee,
Full flashes on the soul the light of ages,
Since the fierce Carthaginian almost won thee,
To the last halo of the chiefs and sages
Who glorify thy consecrated pages;
Thou wert the throne and grave of empires; still,
The fount at which the panting mind
assuages
Her thirst of knowledge, quaffing there her fill,
Flows from the eternal source of Rome's imperial hill.

CXI

Thus far have I proceeded in a theme Renew'd with no kind auspices:—to feel
We are not what we have been, and to
deem
We are not what we should be, and to
steel
The heart against itself; and to conceal,
With a proud caution, love, or hate, or ought,— Passion or feeling, purpose, grief or zeal,—
Which is the tyrant spirit of our thought,
Is a stern task of soul:—No matter,—it is taught.

CXII

And for these words, thus woven into
song,
It may be that they are a harmless wile,—
The colouring of the scenes which fleet
along,
Which I would seize, in passing, to beguile
My breast, or that of others, for a while.
Fame is the thirst of youth, but I am not So young as to regard men's frown or
smile,
As loss or guerdon of a glorious lot;
I stood and stand alone,—remember'd or forgot.

CXIII

I have not loved the world, nor the world
me;
I have not flatter'd its rank breath, nor bow'd
To its idolatries a patient knee,

CHILDE HAROLD'S PILGRIMAGE

Nor coin'd my cheek to smiles, nor cried
aloud
In worship of an echo; in the crowd
They could not deem me one of such; I
stood Among them, but not of them; in a shroud
Of thoughts which were not their thoughts, and still could,
Had I not filed my mind, which thus itself subdued.

CXIV

I have not loved the world, nor the world
me,—
But let us part fair foes; I do believe, Though I have found them not, that there may be Words which are things, hopes which will not deceive,
And virtues which are merciful, nor weave Snares for the failing; I would also deem O'er others' griefs that some sincerely
grieve;
That two, or one, are almost what they
seem,
That goodness is no name, and happiness
no dream.

CXV

My daughter! with thy name this song
begun;
My daughter! with thy name thus much shall end;
I see thee not, I hear thee not, but none
Can be so wrapt in thee; thou art the
friend
To whom the shadows of far years extend:
Albeit my brow thou never shouldst be-
hold,
My voice shall with thy future visions
blend,
And reach into thy heart, when mine is
cold,
A token and a tone, even from thy father's mould.

CXVI

To aid thy mind's development, to watch
Thy dawn of little joys, to sit and see Almost thy very growth, to view thee catch Knowledge of objects,—wonders yet to
thee!
To hold thee lightly on a gentle knee,
And print on thy soft cheek a parent's
kiss,—
This, it should seem, was not reserved
for me;
Yet this was in my nature: as it is,
I know not what is there, yet something like to this.

CXVII

Yet, though dull Hate as duty should be
taught,
I know that thou wilt love me; though
my name
Should be shut from thee, as a spell still fraught
With desolation, and a broken claim:
Though the grave closed between us,—
'twere the same,
I know that thou wilt love me; though
to drain
My blood from out thy being were an
aim,
And an attainment,—all would be in
vain,—
Still thou wouldst love me, still that more than life retain.

CXVIII

The child of love, though born in bitter-
ness,
And nurtured in convulsion. Of thy sire
These were the elements, and thine no
less.
As yet such are around thee, but thy fire
Shall be more temper'd, and thy hope far higher.
Sweet be thy cradled slumbers! O'er the
sea
And from the mountains where I now
respire,
Fain would I waft such blessing upon
thee,
As, with a sigh, I deem thou might'st have been to me.

CANTO THE FOURTH

'Visto ho Toscana, Lombardia, Romagna,
Quel Monte che divide, e quel che serra
Italia, e un mare e l' altro, che la bagna.'
Ariosto, Satira iii.

TO

JOHN HOBHOUSE, ESQ., A.M., F.R.S., &c. &c. &c.

VENICE, January 2, 1818.

MY DEAR HOBHOUSE,

AFTER an interval of eight years between the composition of the first and last cantos of Childe Harold, the conclusion of the poem is about to be submitted to the public. In parting with so old a friend, it is not extraordinary that I should recur to one still older and better,—to one who has beheld the birth and death of the other, and to whom I am far more indebted for the social advantages of an enlightened friendship, than—though not ungrateful—I can, or could be, to Childe Harold, for any public favour reflected through the poem on the poet,—to one, whom I have known long and accompanied far, whom I have found wakeful over my sickness and kind in my sorrow, glad in my prosperity and firm in my adversity, true in counsel and trusty in peril,—to a friend often tried and never found wanting;—to yourself.

In so doing, I recur from fiction to truth; and in dedicating to you in its complete, or at least concluded state, a poetical work which is the longest, the most thoughtful and comprehensive of my compositions, I wish to do honour to myself by the record of many years' intimacy with a man of learning, of talent, of steadiness, and of honour. It is not for minds like ours to give or to receive flattery; yet the praises of sincerity have ever been permitted to the voice of friendship; and it is not for you, nor even for others, but to relieve a heart which has not elsewhere, or lately, been so much accustomed to the encounter of good-will as to withstand the shock firmly, that I thus attempt to commemorate your good qualities, or rather the advantages which I have derived from their exertion. Even the recurrence of the date of this letter, the anniversary of the most unfortunate day of my past existence*, but which cannot poison my future while I retain the resource of your friendship, and of my own faculties, will henceforth have a more agreeable recollection for both, inasmuch as it will remind us of this my attempt to thank you for an indefatigable regard, such as few men have experienced, and no one could experience without thinking better of his species and of himself.

It has been our fortune to traverse together, at various periods, the countries of chivalry, history, and fable—Spain, Greece, Asia Minor, and Italy; and what Athens and Constantinople were to us a few years ago, Venice and Rome have been more recently. The poem also, or the pilgrim, or both, have accompanied me from first to last; and perhaps it may be a pardonable vanity which induces me to reflect with complacency on a composition which in some degree connects me with the spot where it was produced, and the objects it would fain describe; and however unworthy it may be deemed of those magical and memorable abodes, however short it may fall of our distant conceptions and immediate impressions, yet as a mark of respect for what is venerable, and of feeling for what is glorious, it has been to me a source of pleasure in the production, and I part with it with a kind of regret, which I hardly suspected that events could have left me for imaginary objects.

With regard to the conduct of the last canto, there will be found less of the pilgrim than in any of the preceding, and that little slightly, if at all, separated from the author speaking in his own person. The fact is, that I had become weary of drawing a line which every one seemed determined not to perceive: like the Chinese in Goldsmith's 'Citizen of the World,' whom nobody would believe to be a Chinese, it was in vain that I asserted, and imagined that I had drawn, a distinction between the author and the pilgrim; and the very anxiety to preserve this difference, and disappointment at finding it unavailing, so far crushed my efforts in the composition, that I determined to abandon it altogether—and have done so. The opinions which have been, or may be, formed on that subject are now a matter of indifference; the work is to depend on itself, and not on the writer; and the author, who has no resources in his own mind beyond the reputation, transient or permanent, which is to arise from his literary efforts, deserves the fate of authors.

In the course of the following canto it was my intention, either in the text or in the notes, to have touched upon the present state of Italian literature, and perhaps of manners. But the text, within the limits I proposed, I soon found hardly sufficient for the labyrinth of external objects, and the consequent reflections; and for the whole of the notes, excepting a few of the shortest, I am indebted to yourself, and these were necessarily limited to the elucidation of the text.

It is also a delicate, and no very grateful task, to dissent upon the literature and manners of a nation so dissimilar; and requires an attention and impartiality which would induce us—though perhaps no inattentive observers, nor ignorant of the language or customs of the people amongst whom we have recently abode—to distrust, or at least defer our judgment, and more narrowly examine our information. The state of literary, as well as political party, appears to run, or to have run, so high, that for a stranger to steer impartially between them is next to impossible. It may be enough, then, at least for my purpose, to quote from their own beautiful language—‘Mi pare che in un paese tutto poetico, che vanta la lingua la più nobile ed insieme la più dolce, tutte tutte le vie diverse si possono tentare, e che sinche la patria di Alfieri e di Monti non ha perduto l’antico valore, in tutte essa dovrebbe essere la prima.’ Italy has great names still—Canova, Monti, Ugo Foscolo, Pindemonte, Visconti, Morelli, Cicognara, Albrizzi, Mezzofanti, Mai, Mustoxidi, Aglietti, and Vacca, will secure to the present generation an honourable place in most of the departments of Art, Science, and Belles Lettres; and in some the very highest—Europe—the World—has but one Canova.

It has been somewhere said by Alfieri, that ‘La pianta uomo nasce più robusta in Italia che in qualunque altra terra—e che gli stessi atroci delitti che vi si commettono ne sono una prova.’ Without subscribing to the latter part of his proposition, a dangerous doctrine, the truth of which may be disputed on better grounds, namely, that the Italians are in no respect more ferocious than their neighbours, that man must be wilfully blind, or ignorantly heedless, who is not struck with the extraordinary capacity of this people, or, if such a word be admissible, their capabilities, the facility of their acquisitions, the rapidity of their conceptions, the fire of their genius, their sense of beauty, and, amidst all the disadvantages of repeated revolutions, the desolation of battles, and the despair of ages, their still unquenched ‘longing after immortality,’—the immortality of independence. And when we ourselves, in riding round the walls of Rome, heard the simple lament of the labourers’ chorus, ‘Roma! Roma! Roma! Roma non è più come era prima!’ it was difficult not to contrast this melancholy dirge with the bacchanal roar of the songs of exultation still yelled from the London taverns, over the carnage of Mont St. Jean, and of the betrayal of Genoa, of Italy, of France, and of the world, by men whose conduct you yourself have exposed in a work worthy of the better days of our history. For me,—

Ove la turba di sue ciance assorda.’*

What Italy has gained by the late transfer of nations, it was useless for Englishmen to inquire, till it becomes ascertained that England has acquired something more than a permanent army and a suspended Habeas Corpus; it is enough for them to look at home. For what they have done abroad, and especially in the South, ‘Verily they will have their reward,’ and at no very distant period.

Wishing you, my dear Hobhouse, a safe and agreeable return to that country whose real welfare can be dearer to none than to yourself, I dedicate to you this poem in its completed state; and repeat once more how truly I am ever

Your obliged and affectionate friend,

BYRON.

I

I STOOD in Venice, on the Bridge of Sighs;
A palace and a prison on each hand:
I saw from out the wave her structures
rise
As from the stroke of the enchanter’s
wand:
A thousand years their cloudy wings
expand
Around me, and a dying Glory smiles
O’er the far times, when many a subject
land
Look’d to the winged Lion’s marble piles,
Where Venice sate in state, throned on her hundred isles!

II

She looks a sea Cybele, fresh from
ocean,
Rising with her tiara of proud towers
At airy distance, with majestic motion,
A ruler of the waters and their powers:
And such she was;—her daughters had their dowers
From spoils of nations, and the exhaust-less East
Pour’d in her lap all gems in sparkling showers.
In purple was she robed, and of her feast
Monarchs partook, and deem’d their dignity increased.

III

In Venice Tasso’s echoes are no more,
And silent rows the songless gondolier;
Her palaces are crumbling to the shore,
And music meets not always now the
ear:
Those days are gone—but Beauty still is here.
States fall, arts fade—but Nature doth
not die,
Nor yet forget how Venice once was
dear,
The pleasant place of all festivity,
The revel of the earth, the masque of Italy!

IV

But unto us she hath a spell beyond
Her name in story, and her long array
Of mighty shadows, whose dim forms
despond
Above the dogeless city’s vanish’d sway;

Ours is a trophy which will not decay
With the Rialto; Shylock and the Moor,
And Pierre, cannot be swept or worn
away—

The keystones of the arch! though all were o'er,
For us re-peopled were the solitary shore.

V

The beings of the mind are not of clay;
Essentially immortal, they create
And multiply in us a brighter ray
And more beloved existence; that which
Fate

Prohibits to dull life, in this our state
Of mortal bondage, by these spirits
supplied,
First exiles, then replaces what we hate;
Watering the heart whose early flowers have died,
And with a fresher growth replenishing
the void.

VI

Such is the refuge of our youth and age,
The first from Hope, the last from Vacancy;

And this worn feeling peoples many a
page,
And, may be, that which grows beneath mine eye:

Yet there are things whose strong reality Outshines our fairy-land; in shape and hues

More beautiful than our fantastic sky,
And the strange constellations which the Muse

O'er her wild universe is skilful to diffuse:

VII

I saw or dream'd of such,—but let them
go,—

They came like truth, and disappear'd like dreams;

And whatso'er they were—are now but
so:

I could replace them if I would; still teems

My mind with many a form which aptly seems

Such as I sought for, and at moments
found;

Let these too go—for waking Reason deems

Such overweening phantasies unsound,
And other voices speak, and other sights surround.

VIII

I've taught me other tongues, and in strange eyes

Have made me not a stranger; to the
mind

Which is itself, no changes bring surprise;

Nor is it harsh to make, nor hard to find

A country with—ay, or without man-
kind;

Yet was I born where men are proud to
be,—

Not without cause; and should I leave
behind

The inviolate island of the sage and
free,

And seek me out a home by a remoter
sea,

IX

Perhaps I loved it well: and should I
lay

My ashes in a soil which is not mine,
My spirit shall resume it—if we may

Unbodied choose a sanctuary. I twine My hopes of being remember'd in my
line

With my land's language: if too fond and far

These aspirations in their scope incline,—

If my fame should be, as my fortunes
are,

Of hasty growth and blight, and dull
Oblivion bar

X

My name from out the temple where the
dead

Are honour'd by the nations—let it be—
And light the laurels on a loftier head!

And be the Spartan's epitaph on me—
'Sparta hath many a worthier son than
he.'

Meantime I seek no sympathies, nor
need;

The thorns which I have reap'd are of the tree

I planted: they have torn me, and I
bleed:

I should have known what fruit would spring from such a seed.

XI

The spouseless Adriatic mourns her
lord;

And, annual marriage now no more re-
new'd,

The Bucentaur lies rotting unrestored,
Neglected garment of her widowhood!

St. Mark yet sees his lion where he stood

Stand, but in mockery of his wither'd
power,

Over the proud Place where an Emperor
sued,

And monarchs gazed and envied in the
hour

When Venice was a queen with an un-equal'd dower.

XII

The Suabian sued, and now the Austrian reigns—
 An Emperor tramples where an Emperor knelt;
 Kingdoms are shrunk to provinces, and
 chains
 Clank over sceptred cities; nations melt From power's high pinnacle, when they have felt
 The sunshine for a while, and downward
 go
 Like Lauwine loosen'd from the mountain's belt;
 Oh for one hour of blind old Dandolo!
 Th' octogenarian chief, Byzantium's conquering foe.

XIII

Before St. Mark still glow his steeds of
 brass,
 Their gilded collars glittering in the sun;
 But is not Doria's menace come to pass?
 Are they not bridled?—Venice, lost and
 won,
 Her thirteen hundred years of freedom
 done,
 Sinks, like a seaweed, into whence she
 rose!
 Better be whelm'd beneath the waves,
 and shun,
 Even in destruction's depth, her foreign
 foes,
 From whom submission wrings an infamous repose.

XIV

In youth she was all glory,—a new Tyre;
 Her very by-word sprung from victory,
 The 'Planter of the Lion,' which through fire
 And blood she bore o'er subject earth
 and sea;
 Though making many slaves, herself
 still free,
 And Europe's bulwark 'gainst the Otto-
 mite;
 Witness Troy's rival, Candia! Vouch it, ye Immortal waves that saw Lepanto's
 fight!
 For ye are none no time nor tyranny can blight.

XV

Statues of glass—all shiver'd—the long file
 Of her dead Doges are declined to dust;
 But where they dwelt, the vast and sumptuous pile
 Bespeaks the pageant of their splendid
 trust;
 Their sceptre broken, and their sword
 in rust,

CHILDE HAROLD'S PILGRIMAGE

Have yielded to the stranger: empty
 halls,
 Thin streets, and foreign aspects, such as must Too oft remind her who and what en-
 thrals,
 Have flung a desolate cloud o'er Venice'
 lovely walls.

XVI

When Athens' armies fell at Syracuse,
 And fetter'd thousands bore the yoke
 of war,
 Redemption rose up in the Attic Muse,
 Her voice their only ransom from afar:
 See! as they chant the tragic hymn, the car
 Of the o'ermaster'd victor stops, the reins
 Fall from his hands, his idle scimitar Starts from its belt—he rends his cap-tive's chains,
 And bids him thank the bard for freedom and his strains.

XVII

Thus, Venice, if no stronger claim were
 thine,
 Were all thy proud historic deeds forgot,
 Thy choral memory of the Bard divine, Thy love of Tasso, should have cut the knot
 Which ties thee to thy tyrants; and thy lot
 Is shameful to the nations,—most of all, Albion! to thee: the Ocean queen should
 not Abandon Ocean's children; in the fall
 Of Venice think of thine, despite thy watery wall.

XVIII

I loved her from my boyhood; she to me
 Was as a fairy city of the heart,
 Rising like water-columns from the sea,
 Of joy the sojourn, and of wealth the
 mart;
 And Otway, Radcliffe, Schiller, Shak-speare's art,
 Had stamp'd her image in me, and even
 so,
 Although I found her thus, we did not
 part;
 Perchance even dearer in her day of woe,
 Than when she was a boast, a marvel, and a show.

XIX

I can repeople with the past—and of The present there is still for eye and
 thought,
 And meditation chasten'd down,
 enough;
 And more, it may be, than I hoped or
 sought;

And of the happiest moments which were wrought
Within the web of my existence, some From thee, fair Venice! have their colours caught:
There are some feelings Time cannot be-
numb,
Nor Torture shake, or mine would now be cold and dumb.

XX

But from their nature will the Tannen
grow Loftiest on loftiest and least shelter'd
rocks,
Rooted in barrenness, where nought
below
Of soil supports them 'gainst the Alpine
shocks
Of eddying storms; yet springs the trunk, and mocks
The howling tempest, till its height and frame
Are worthy of the mountains from whose blocks
Of bleak, gray granite into life it came,
And grew a giant tree;—the mind may grow the same.

XXI

Existence may be borne, and the deep root
Of life and sufferance make its firm
abode
The bare and desolated bosoms: mute
The camel labours with the heaviest load,
And the wolf dies in silence,—not bestow'd
In vain should such example be; if they,
Things of ignoble or of savage mood,
Endure and shrink not, we of nobler
clay
May temper it to bear,—it is but for a
day.

XXII

All suffering doth destroy, or is destroy'd,
Even by the sufferer; and, in each event,
Ends:—Some, with hope replenish'd and rebuoy'd,
Return to whence they came—with like
intent,
And weave their web again; some,
bow'd and bent,
Wax gray and ghastly, withering ere their time,
And perish with the reed on which they leant;
Some seek devotion, toil, war, good or
crime,
According as their souls were form'd to sink or climb.

XXIII

But ever and anon of griefs subdued
There comes a token like a scorpion's
sting,
Scarce seen, but with fresh bitterness imbued;
And slight withal may be the things which bring Back on the heart the weight which it would fling
Aside for ever: it may be a sound—
A tone of music—summer's eve—or
spring—
A flower—the wind—the ocean—which shall wound,
Striking the electric chain wherewith we are darkly bound;

XXIV

And how and why we know not, nor can
trace
Home to its cloud this lightning of the
mind,
But feel the shock renew'd, nor can efface
The blight and blackening which it leaves behind,
Which out of things familiar, un-
design'd,
When least we deem of such, calls up to
view
The spectres whom no exorcism can bind,—
The cold, the changed, perchance the
dead—
The mourn'd, the loved, the lost—too many! yet how few!

XXV

But my soul wanders; I demand it
back
To meditate amongst decay, and stand
A ruin amidst ruins; there to track Fall'n states and buried greatness, o'er a land
Which was the mightiest in its old command,
And is the loveliest, and must ever be
The master-mould of Nature's heavenly
hand;
Wherein were cast the heroic and the
free,
The beautiful, the brave, the lords of earth
and sea,

XXVI

The commonwealth of kings, the men
of Rome!
And even since, and now, fair Italy!
Thou art the garden of the world, the
home
Of all Art yields, and Nature can decree;

Even in thy desert, what is like to thee?
Thy very weeds are beautiful, thy waste
More rich than other climes' fertility;
Thy wreck a glory, and thy ruin graced
With an immaculate charm which cannot be defaced.

XXVII

The moon is up, and yet it is not night;
Sunset divides the sky with her; a sea
Of glory streams along the Alpine
height
Of blue Friuli's mountains; Heaven is
free
From clouds, but of all colours seems to be,—
Melted to one vast Iris of the West,—
Where the Day joins the past Eternity, While, on the other hand, meek Dian's
crest
Floats through the azure air—an island of the blest!

XXVIII

A single star is at her side, and reigns
With her o'er half the lovely heaven; but
still Yon sunny sea heaves brightly, and remains
Roll'd o'er the peak of the far Rhætian
hill,
As Day and Night contending were,
until Nature reclaim'd her order:—gently
flows
The deep-dyed Brenta, where their hues instil
The odorous purple of a new-born rose,
Which streams upon her stream, and glass'd within it glows,

XXIX

Fill'd with the face of heaven, which,
from afar,
Comes down upon the waters; all its
hues,
From the rich sunset to the rising star,
Their magical variety diffuse:
And now they change; a paler shadow strews
Its mantle o'er the mountains; parting
day
Dies like the dolphin, whom each pang imbues
With a new colour as it gasps away—
The last still loveliest,—till—'tis gone—and all is gray.

XXX

There is a tomb in Arqua;—rear'd in
air,
Pillar'd in their sarcophagus, repose
The bones of Laura's lover: here repair
Many familiar with his well-sung woes,

CHILDE HAROLD'S PILGRIMAGE

The pilgrims of his genius. He arose
To raise a language, and his land reclaim
From the dull yoke of her barbaric foes:
Watering the tree which bears his lady's
name
With his melodious tears, he gave himself to fame.

XXXI

They keep his dust in Arqua, where he
died;
The mountain-village where his latter
days
Went down the vale of years; and 'tis their pride—
An honest pride—and let it be their
praise,
To offer to the passing stranger's gaze
His mansion and his sepulchre; both
plain
And venerably simple, such as raise
A feeling more accordant with his strain
Than if a pyramid form'd his monumental fane.

XXXII

And the soft quiet hamlet where he dwelt Is one of that complexion which seems
made
For those who their mortality have felt,
And sought a refuge from their hopes
decay'd
In the deep umbrage of a green hill's
shade,
Which shows a distant prospect far away
Of busy cities, now in vain display'd,
For they can lure no further; and the ray
Of a bright sun can make sufficient holiday,

XXXIII

Developing the mountains, leaves, and
flowers,
And shining in the brawling brook,
whereby,
Clear as its current, glide the sauntering
hours
With a calm languor, which, though to the eye
Idlesse it seem, hath its morality.
If from society we learn to live,
'Tis solitude should teach us how to die;
It hath no flatterers; vanity can give No hollow aid; alone—man with his God must strive:

XXXIV

Or, it may be, with demons, who impair
The strength of better thoughts, and seek their prey
In melancholy bosoms, such as were
Of moody texture from their earliest
day,

And loved to dwell in darkness and dismay,
Deeming themselves predestined to a doom
Which is not of the pangs that pass away;
Making the sun like blood, the earth a tomb,
The tomb a hell, and hell itself a murkier gloom.

XXXV

Ferrara! in thy wide and grass-grown streets,
Whose symmetry was not for solitude,
There seems as 'twere a curse upon the seats
Of former sovereigns, and the antique brood
Of Este, which for many an age made good
Its strength within thy walls, and was of yore
Patron or tyrant, as the changing mood
Of petty power impell'd, of those who wore
The wreath which Dante's brow alone had worn before.

XXXVI

And Tasso is their glory and their shame.
Hark to his strain! and then survey his cell!
And see how dearly earn'd Torquato's fame,
And where Alfonso bade his poet dwell:
The miserable despot could not quell
The insulted mind he sought to quench, and blend
With the surrounding maniacs, in the hell
Where he had plunged it. Glory without end Scatter'd the clouds away; and on that name attend

XXXVII

The tears and praises of all time; while thine
Would rot in its oblivion—in the sink
Of worthless dust, which from thy boasted line
Is shaken into nothing—but the link
Thou formest in his fortunes bids us think
Of thy poor malice, naming thee with scorn:
Alfonso! how thy ducal pageants shrink
From thee! if in another station born,
Scarce fit to be the slave of him thou madest to mourn:

XXXVIII

Thou! form'd to eat, and be despised, and die,
Even as the beasts that perish, save that thou
Hadst a more splendid trough and wider sty:
He! with a glory round his furrow'd brow,
Which emanated then, and dazzles now,
In face of all his foes, the Cruscan quire,
And Boileau, whose rash envy could allow
No strain which shamed his country's creaking lyre,
That whetstone of the teeth—monotony in wire!

XXXIX

Peace to Torquato's injured shade!
'twas his
In life and death to be the mark where Wrong
Aim'd with her poison'd arrows,—but to miss.
Oh, victor unsurpass'd in modern song!
Each year brings forth its millions; but how long
The tide of generations shall roll on,
And not the whole combined and countless throng
Compose a mind like thine? though all in one Condensed their scatter'd rays, they would not form a sun.

XL

Great as thou art, yet parallel'd by those,
Thy countrymen, before thee born to shine,
The Bards of Hell and Chivalry: first rose
The Tuscan father's Comedy Divine;
Then, not unequal to the Florentine,
The southern Scott, the minstrel who call'd forth
A new creation with his magic line,
And, like the Ariosto of the North,
Sang ladye-love and war, romance and knightly worth.

XLI

The lightning rent from Ariosto's bust
The iron crown of laurel's mimic'd leaves;
Nor was the ominous element unjust,
For the true laurel-wreath which Glory weaves
Is of the tree no bolt of thunder cleaves,
And the false semblance but disgraced his brow;
Yet still, if fondly Superstition grieves,
Know, that the lightning sanctifies below
Whate'er it strikes;—yon head is doubly sacred now.

XLII

Italia! oh Italia! thou who hast
 The fatal gift of beauty, which became A funeral dower of present woes and
 past,
 On thy sweet brow is sorrow plough'd
 by shame,
 And annals graved in characters of
 flame.
 Oh, God! that thou wert in thy naked-
 ness
 Less lovely or more powerful, and couldst claim Thy right, and awe the robbers back, who press
 To shed thy blood, and drink the tears of thy distress;

XLIII

Then might'st thou more appal; or, less desired,
 Be homely and be peaceful, undeplord
 For thy destructive charms; then, still untired,
 Would not be seen the armed torrents
 pour'd
 Down the deep Alps; nor would the hostile horde
 Of many-nation'd spoilers from the Po Quaff blood and water; nor the stranger's sword
 Be thy sad weapon of defence, and so, Victor or vanquish'd, thou the slave of friend or foe.

XLIV

Wandering in youth, I traced the path
 of him,
 The Roman friend of Rome's least-mortal mind,
 The friend of Tully: as my bark did
 skim
 The bright blue waters with a fanning
 wind,
 Came Megara before me, and behind
 Ægina lay, Piræus on the right,
 And Corinth on the left; I lay re-
 clined
 Along the prow, and saw all these unite
 In ruin, even as he had seen the desolate
 sight;

XLV

For Time hath not rebuilt them, but uprear'd
 Barbaric dwellings on their shatter'd
 site,
 Which only make more mourn'd and more endear'd
 The few last rays of their far-scatter'd
 light,
 And the crush'd relics of their vanish'd might.

CHILDE HAROLD'S PILGRIMAGE

The Roman saw these tombs in his own
 age,
 These sepulchres of cities, which excite
 Sad wonder, and his yet surviving page
 The moral lesson bears, drawn from such pilgrimage.

XLVI

That page is now before me, and on
 mine
 His country's ruin added to the mass
 Of perish'd states he mourn'd in their decline,
 And I in desolation: all that was
 Of then destruction is; and now, alas!
 Rome—Rome imperial, bows her to the
 storm,
 In the same dust and blackness, and we
 pass
 The skeleton of her Titanic form, Wrecks of another world, whose ashes still are warm.

XLVII

Yet, Italy! through every other land Thy wrongs should ring, and shall, from side to side;
 Mother of Arts! as once of arms; thy
 hand
 Was then our guardian, and is still our
 guide;
 Parent of our religion! whom the wide Nations have knelt to for the keys of
 heaven!
 Europe, repentant of her parricide,
 Shall yet redeem thee, and, all backward
 driven,
 Roll the barbarian tide, and sue to be forgiven.

XLVIII

But Arno wins us to the fair white walls, Where the Etrurian Athens claims and keeps
 A softer feeling for her fairy halls.
 Girt by her theatre of hills, she reaps
 Her corn, and wine, and oil, and Plenty leaps
 To laughing life, with her redundant
 horn.
 Along the banks where smiling Arno sweeps
 Was modern Luxury of Commerce
 born,
 And buried Learning rose, redeem'd to a new morn.

XLIX

There, too, the Goddess loves in stone, and fills
 The air around with beauty; we inhale
 The ambrosial aspect, which, beheld,
 instils
 Part of its immortality; the veil

Of heaven is half undrawn; within the
pale
We stand, and in that form and face be-
hold
What Mind can make, when Nature's self would fail;
And to the fond idolaters of old Envy the innate flash which such a soul could mould:

L

We gaze and turn away, and know not
where,
Dazzled and drunk with beauty, till the
heart
Reels with its fulness; there—for ever
there—
Chain'd to the chariot of triumphal Art,
We stand as captives, and would not depart.
Away!—there need no words nor terms precise,
The paltry jargon of the marble mart,
Where Pedantry gulls Folly—we have
eyes:
Blood, pulse, and breast confirm the Dar-dan Shepherd's prize.

LI

Appear'dst thou not to Paris in this
guise?
Or to more deeply blest Anchises? or,
In all thy perfect Goddess-ship, when lies Before thee thy own vanquish'd Lord
of War?
And gazing in thy face as toward a star,
Laid on thy lap, his eyes to thee upturn, Feeding on thy sweet cheek! while thy lips are
With lava kisses melting while they burn, Shower'd on his eyelids, brow, and mouth,
as from an urn?

LII

Glowing, and circumfused in speechless love
Their full divinity inadequate
That feeling to express, or to improve,
The gods become as mortals, and man's
fate
Has moments like their brightest; but the weight
Of earth recoils upon us;—let it go!
We can recall such visions, and create,
From what has been, or might be, things which grow
Into thy statue's form, and look like gods
below.

LIII

I leave to learned fingers and wise
hands,
The artist and his ape, to teach and tell How well his connoisseurship understands

The graceful bend, and the voluptuous
swell:
Let these describe the undescribable:
I would not their vile breath should crisp the stream
Wherein that image shall for ever dwell;
The unruddied mirror of the loveliest
dream
That ever left the sky on the deep soul to beam.

LIV

In Santa Croce's holy precincts lie Ashes which make it holier, dust which is Even in itself an immortality, Though there were nothing save the past, and this,
The particle of those sublimities
Which have relapsed to chaos: here
repose
Angelo's, Alfieri's bones, and his,
The starry Galileo, with his woes;
Here Machiavelli's earth return'd to whence it rose.

LIV

These are four minds, which, like the elements,
Might furnish forth creation:—Italy!
Time, which hath wrong'd thee with ten thousand rents
Of thine imperial garment, shall deny,
And hath denied, to every other sky,
Spirits which soar from ruin: thy decay
Is still impregnate with divinity,
Which gilds it with revivifying ray;
Such as the great of yore, Canova is to-day.

LVI

But where repose the all-Etruscan three—Dante, and Petrarch, and, scarce less than they,
The Bard of Prose, creative spirit! he
Of the Hundred Tales of love—where did they lay
Their bones, distinguish'd from our common clay
In death as life? Are they resolved to
dust,
And have their country's marbles nought
to say?
Could not her quarries furnish forth one
bust?
Did they not to her breast their filial earth entrust?

LVII

Ungrateful Florence! Dante sleeps afar, Like Scipio, buried by the upbraiding
shore:
Thy factions, in their worse than civil
war, Proscribed the bard whose name for evermore

Their children's children would in vain
 adore
 With the remorse of ages; and the crown
 Which Petrarch's laureate brow su-premely wore,
 Upon a far and foreign soil had grown,
 His life, his fame, his grave, though rifled—not thine own.

LVIII

Boccaccio to his parent earth be-queath'd
 His dust,—and lies it not her great
 among,
 With many a sweet and solemn requiem
 breathed
 O'er him who form'd the Tuscan's siren
 tongue?
 That music in itself, whose sounds are
 song,
 The poetry of speech? No;—even his
 tomb
 Uptorn, must bear the hyæna bigot's
 wrong,
 No more amidst the meaner dead find
 room,
 Nor claim a passing sigh, because it told for whom!

LIX

And Santa Croce wants their mighty
 dust;
 Yet for this want more noted, as of yore
 The Cæsar's pageant, shorn of Brutus'
 bust,
 Did but of Rome's best Son remind her
 more:
 Happier Ravenna! on thy hoary shore,
 Fortress of falling empire! honour'd sleeps
 The immortal exile;—Arqua, too, her
 store
 Of tuneful relics proudly claims and
 keeps,
 While Florence vainly begs her banish'd dead and weeps.

LX

What is her pyramid of precious stones?
 Of porphyry, jasper, agate, and all hues
 Of gem and marble, to encrust the bones
 Of merchant-dukes? the momentary dews
 Which, sparkling to the twilight stars, infuse
 Freshness in the green turf that wraps
 the dead,
 Whose names are mausoleums of the Muse,
 Are gently prest with far more reverent
 tread
 Than ever paced the slab which paves the princely head.

LXI

There be more things to greet the heart and eyes
 In Arno's dome of Art's most princely
 shrine,
 Where Sculpture with her rainbow sister
 vies;
 There be more marvels yet—but not for
 mine;
 For I have been accustom'd to entwine
 My thoughts with Nature rather in the fields,
 Than Art in galleries; though a work
 divine
 Calls for my spirit's homage, yet it yields Less than it feels, because the weapon which it wields

LXII

Is of another temper, and I roam
 By Thrasimene's lake, in the defiles Fatal to Roman rashness, more at
 home;
 For there the Carthaginian's warlike
 wiles
 Come back before me, as his skill beguiles
 The host between the mountains and the
 shore,
 Where Courage falls in her despairing
 files,
 And torrents, swoll'n to rivers with their
 gore,
 Reek through the sultry plain, with legions scatter'd o'er,

LXIII

Liketo a forest fell'd by mountain winds;
 And such the storm of battle on this
 day,
 And such the frenzy, whose convulsion blinds
 To all save carnage, that, beneath the fray,
 An earthquake reel'd unheededly away!
 None felt stern Nature rocking at his
 feet,
 And yawning forth a grave for those who lay Upon their bucklers for a winding-
 sheet;
 Such is the absorbing hate when warring nations meet!

LXIV

The Earth to them was as a rolling bark
 Which bore them to Eternity; they saw The Ocean round, but had no time to mark
 The motions of their vessel; Nature's
 law,
 In them suspended, reck'd not of the
 awe

CHILDE HAROLD'S PILGRIMAGE

[CANTO IV

Which reigns when mountains tremble, and the birds
Plunge in the clouds for refuge, and withdraw From their down-toppling nests; and bellowing herds Stumble o'er heaving plains, and man's dread hath no words.

LXV

Far other scene is Thrasimene now;
Her lake a sheet of silver, and her plain Rent by no ravage save the gentle
plough;
Her aged trees rise thick as once the slain
Lay where their roots are; but a brook hath ta'en—
A little rill of scanty stream and bed—
A name of blood from that day's sanguine rain;
And Sanguinetto tells ye where the dead
Made the earth wet, and turn'd the unwilling waters red.

LXVI

But thou, Clitumnus! in thy sweetest
wave
Of the most living crystal that was e'er
The haunt of river nymph, to gaze and
lave
Her limbs where nothing hid them, thou dost rear
Thy grassy banks whereon the milk-white steer
Grazes; the purest god of gentle waters!
And most serene of aspect, and most
clear;
Surely that stream was unprofaned by slaughters,
A mirror and a bath for Beauty's youngest daughters!

LXVII

And on thy happy shore a Temple still,
Of small and delicate proportion, keeps,
Upon a mild declivity of hill,
Its memory of thee; beneath it sweeps
Thy current's calmness; oft from out it leaps
The finny darter with the glittering scales,
Who dwells and revels in thy glassy
deeps;
While, chance, some scatter'd water-
lily sails
Down where the shallower wave still tells its bubbling tales.

LXVIII

Pass not unblest the Genius of the place!
If through the air a zephyr more serene
Win to the brow, 'tis his; and if ye trace
Along his margin a more eloquent green,

If on the heart the freshness of the scene
Sprinkle its coolness, and from the dry
dust
Of weary life a moment lave it clean
With Nature's baptism,—'tis to him ye
must

Pay orisons for this suspension of disgust.

LXIX

The roar of waters!—from the headlong
height
Velino cleaves the wave-worn precipice;
The fall of waters! rapid as the light
The flashing mass foams shaking the abyss;
The hell of waters! where they howl and
hiss,
And boil in endless torture; while the sweat
Of their great agony, wrung out from this Their Phlegethon, curls round the rocks of jet
That guard the gulf around, in pitiless horror set,

LXX

And mounts in spray the skies, and thence again
Returns in an unceasing shower, which
round,
With its unemptied cloud of gentle rain,
Is an eternal April to the ground,
Making it all one emerald;—how pro-
found
The gulf! and how the giant element
From rock to rock leaps with delirious
bound,
Crushing the cliffs, which, downward worn and rent
With his fierce footsteps, yield in chasms a fearful vent!

LXXI

To the broad column which rolls on,
and shows
More like the fountain of an infant sea Torn from the womb of mountains by the throes
Of a new world, than only thus to be Parent of rivers, which flow gushingly,
With many windings, through the vale:—Look back!
Lo! where it comes like an eternity,
As if to sweep down all things in its track,
Charming the eye with dread,—a matchless cataract,

LXXII

Horribly beautiful! but on the verge,
From side to side, beneath the glittering
morn,
An Iris sits, amidst the infernal surge,
Like Hope upon a death-bed, and, un-
worn

Its steady dyes, while all around is torn
By the distracted waters, bears serene Its brilliant hues with all their beams
unshorn:

Resembling, 'mid the torture of the
scene,

Love watching Madness with unalterable
mien.

LXXXIII

Once more upon the woody Apennine,
The infant Alps, which—had I not be-
fore

Gazed on their mightier parents, where the pine

Sits on more shaggy summits, and where
roar

The thundering Lauwine—might be worshipp'd more;

But I have seen the soaring Jungfrau rear
Her never-trodden snow, and seen the
hoar

Glaciers of bleak Mont Blanc both far
and near,

And in Chimari heard the thunder-hills of
fear,

LXXXIV

Th' Acroceranian mountains of old
name;

And on Parnassus seen the eagles fly Like spirits of the spot, as 'twere for
fame,

For still they soared unutterably high:
I've look'd on Ida with a Trojan's eye;

Athos, Olympus, Ætna, Atlas, made
These hills seem things of lesser dignity,

All, save the lone Soracte's height, dis-
play'd

Not now in snow, which asks the lyric Roman's aid

LXXXV

For our remembrance, and from out the
plain

Heaves like a long-swept wave about to
break,

And on the curl hangs pausing: not in
vain

May he, who will, his recollections rake,
And quote in classic raptures, and awake

The hills with Latian echoes; I abhorr'd Too much, to conquer for the poet's

sake,
The drill'd dull lesson, forced down

word by word

In my repugnant youth, with pleasure to record

LXXXVI

Aught that recalls the daily drug which turn'd

My sickening memory; and, though
Time hath taught

CHILDE HAROLD'S PILGRIMAGE

My mind to meditate what then it
learn'd,

Yet such the fix'd inveteracy wrought
By the impatience of my early thought,

That, with the freshness wearing out
before

My mind could relish what it might have
sought,

If free to choose, I cannot now restore Its health; but what it then detested, still abhor.

LXXXVII

Then farewell, Horace; whom I hated so,
Not for thy faults, but mine; it is a curse

To understand, not feel thy lyric flow,
To comprehend, but never love thy verse:

Although no deeper Moralist rehearse
Our little life, nor Bard prescribe his art,

Nor livelier Satirist the conscience
pierce,

Awakening without wounding the
touch'd heart,

Yet fare thee well—upon Soracte's ridge
we part.

LXXXVIII

Oh Rome! my country! city of the soul!
The orphans of the heart must turn to
thee,

Lone mother of dead empires! and control

In their shut breasts their petty misery.
What are our woes and sufferance? Come and see

The cypress, hear the owl, and plod your

way
O'er steps of broken thrones and temples, Ye!

Whose agonies are evils of a day—
A world is at our feet as fragile as our clay.

LXXXIX

The Niobe of nations! there she stands,
Childless and crownless, in her voiceless

woe;
An empty urn within her wither'd hands,
Whose holy dust was scatter'd long ago;

The Scipios' tomb contains no ashes
now;

The very sepulchres lie tenantless
Of their heroic dwellers: dost thou flow,

Old Tiber! through a marble wilderness?
Rise, with thy yellow waves, and mantle

her distress.

LXXX

The Goth, the Christian, Time, War, Flood, and Fire,

Have dealt upon the seven-hill'd city's
pride;

She saw her glories star by star expire,
And up the steep barbarian monarchs

ride,

Where the car climb'd the Capitol; far and wide Temple and tower went down, nor left a
site:
Chaos of ruins! who shall trace the
void,
O'er the dim fragments cast a lunar
light,
And say, 'here was, or is,' where all is doubly night?

LXXXI

The double night of ages, and of her,
Night's daughter, Ignorance, hath wrapt and wrap
All round us: we but feel our way to err:
The ocean hath its chart, the stars their map,
And Knowledge spreads them on her ample lap;
But Rome is as the desert, where we steer Stumbling o'er recollections; now we clap
Our hands, and cry 'Eureka!' it is clear—
When but some false mirage of ruin rises
near.

LXXXII

Alas! the lofty city! and alas!
The trebly hundred triumphs! and the
day
When Brutus made the dagger's edge surpass
The conqueror's sword in bearing fame
away!
Alas, for Tully's voice, and Virgil's lay,
And Livy's pictured page!—but these shall be
Her resurrection; all beside—decay.
Alas, for Earth, for never shall we see That brightness in her eye she bore when Rome was free!

LXXXIII

Oh thou, whose chariot roll'd on Fortune's wheel,
Triumphant Sylla! Thou, who didst sub-
due Thy country's foes ere thou wouldst pause to feel
The wrath of thy own wrongs, or reap
the due
Of hoarded vengeance till thine eagles flew O'er prostrate Asia;—thou, who with thy frown
Annihilated senates—Roman, too,
With all thy vices, for thou didst lay
down
With an atoning smile a more than earthly crown—

LXXXIV

The dictatorial wreath—couldst thou
divine
To what would one day dwindle that which made
Thee more than mortal? and that so supine
By aught than Romans Rome should thus be laid?
She who was named Eternal, and array'd Her warriors but to conquer—she who veil'd
Earth with her haughty shadow, and
display'd,
Until the o'er-canopied horizon fail'd,
Her rushing wings—Oh! she who was Almighty hail'd!

LXXXV

Sylla was first of victors; but our own,
The sagest of usurpers, Cromwell!—he Too swept off senates while he hew'd the
throne
Down to a block—immortal rebel! See
What crimes it costs to be a moment free,
And famous through all ages! but beneath
His fate the moral lurks of destiny;
His day of double victory and death
Beheld him win two realms, and, happier, yield his breath.

LXXXVI

The third of the same moon whose former course
Had all but crown'd him, on the self-same day
Deposed him gently from his throne of
force,
And laid him with the earth's preceding
clay.
And show'd not Fortune thus how fame
and sway,
And all we deem delightful, and consume
Our souls to compass through each arduous way,
Are in her eyes less happy than the
tomb?
Were they but so in man's, how different were his doom!

LXXXVII

And thou, dread statue! yet existent in
The austerest form of naked majesty,
Thou who beheldest, 'mid the assassins'
din,
At thy bathed base the bloody Cæsar lie,
Folding his robe in dying dignity,
An offering to thine altar from the queen Of gods and men, great Nemesis! did he
die,
And thou, too, perish, Pompey? have ye
been Victors of countless kings, or puppets of a scene?

LXXXVIII

And thou, the thunder-stricken nurse of Rome!
 She-wolf! whose brazen-imaged dugs impart
 The milk of conquest yet within the dome
 Where, as a monument of antique art,
 Thou standest:—Mother of the mighty heart,
 Which the great founder suck'd from thy wild teat,
 Scorch'd by the Roman Jove's ethereal dart,
 And thy limbs black with lightning—dost thou yet
 Guard thine immortal cubs, nor thy fond charge forget?

LXXXIX

Thou dost; but all thy foster-babes are dead—
 The men of iron: and the world hath rear'd
 Cities from out their sepulchres: men bled
 In imitation of the things they fear'd,
 And fought and conquer'd, and the same course steer'd,
 At apish distance; but as yet none have,
 Nor could, the same supremacy have near'd,
 Save one vain man, who is not in the grave,
 But, vanquish'd by himself, to his own slaves a slave—

XC

The fool of false dominion—and a kind
 Of bastard Cæsar, following him of old
 With steps unequal; for the Roman's mind
 Was modell'd in a less terrestrial mould,
 With passions fiercer, yet a judgment cold,
 And an immortal instinct which redeem'd
 The frailties of a heart so soft, yet bold,
 Alcides with the distaff now he seem'd
 At Cleopatra's feet,—and now himself he beam'd,

XCI

And came—and saw—and conquer'd!
 But the man
 Who would have tamed his eagles down to flee,
 Like a train'd falcon, in the Gallic van,
 Which he, in sooth, long led to victory,
 With a deaf heart, which never seem'd to be
 A listener to itself, was strangely framed;
 With but one weakest weakness—vanity,
 Coquettish in ambition, still he aim'd—
 At what? can he avouch, or answer what he claim'd?

XCII

And would be all or nothing—nor could wait
 For the sure grave to level him; few years
 Had fix'd him with the Cæsars in his fate,
 On whom we tread: For this the conqueror rears
 The arch of triumph and for this the tears
 And blood of earth flow on as they have flow'd,
 An universal deluge, which appears
 Without an ark for wretched man's abode,
 And ebbs but to reflow! Renew thy rainbow, God!

XCIII

What from this barren being do we reap?
 Our senses narrow, and our reason frail,
 Life short, and truth a gem which loves the deep,
 And all things weigh'd in custom's falsest scale;
 Opinion an omnipotence,—whose veil
 Mantles the earth with darkness, until right
 And wrong are accidents, and men grow pale Lest their own judgments should become too bright,
 And their free thoughts be crimes, and earth have too much light.

XCIV

And thus they plod in sluggish misery,
 Rotting from sire to son, and age to age,
 Proud of their trampled nature, and so die,
 Bequeathing their hereditary rage
 To the new race of inborn slaves, who wage War for their chains, and rather than be free, Bleed gladiator-like, and still engage Within the same arena where they see
 Their fellows fall before, like leaves of the same tree.

XCV

I speak not of men's creeds—they rest between Man and his Maker—but of things allow'd,
 Avert'd, and known, and daily, hourly seen—
 The yoke that is upon us doubly bow'd,
 And the intent of tyranny avow'd,
 The edict of Earth's rulers, who are grown
 The apes of him who humbled once the proud,
 And shook them from their slumbers on the throne:
 Too glorious, were this all his mighty arm had done.

XCVI

Can tyrants but by tyrants conquer'd be,
And Freedom find no champion and no
child
Such as Columbia saw arise when she Sprung forth a Pallas, arm'd and un-defiled?
Or must such minds be nourish'd in the
wild,
Deep in the unpruned forest, 'midst the
roar
Of cataracts, where nursing Nature
smiled
On infant Washington? Has Earth no
more Such seeds within her breast, or Europe
no such shore?

XCVII

But France got drunk with blood to vomit crime,
And fatal have her Saturnalia been
To Freedom's cause, in every age and
clime;
Because the deadly days which we have
seen,
And vile Ambition, that built up between
Man and his hopes an adamant wall,
And the base pageant last upon the
scene,
Are grown the pretext for the eternal thrall
Which nips life's tree, and dooms man's worst—his second fall.

XCVIII

Yet, Freedom! yet thy banner, torn, but flying,
Streams like the thunder-storm against
the wind;
Thy trumpet voice, though broken now
and dying,
The loudest still the tempest leaves behind;
Thy tree hath lost its blossoms, and the rind, Chopp'd by the axe, looks rough and little worth,
But the sap lasts,—and still the seed
we find
Sown deep, even in the bosom of the North;
So shall a better spring less bitter fruit bring forth.

XCIX

There is a stern round tower of other
days,
Firm as a fortress, with its fence of stone,
Such as an army's baffled strength delays,
Standing with half its battlements alone,

And with two thousand years of ivy
grown,
The garland of eternity, where wave
The green leaves over all by time o'er-
thrown;—
What was this tower of strength? within its cave
What treasure lay so lock'd, so hid?—A woman's grave.

But who was she, the lady of the
dead, Tomb'd in a palace? Was she chaste
and fair?
Worthy a king's, or more—a Roman's
bed?
What race of chiefs and heroes did she
bear?
What daughter of her beauties was the
heir?
How lived, how loved, how died she?
Was she not
So honoured—and conspicuously there,
Where meaner relics must not dare to rot,
Placed to commemorate a more than mortal lot?

CI

Was she as those who love their lords, or
they
Who love the lords of others? such have
been Even in the olden time, Rome's annals
say.
Was she a matron of Cornelia's mien,
Or the light air of Egypt's graceful
queen,
Profuse of joy—or 'gainst it did she war
Inveterate in virtue? Did she lean
To the soft side of the heart, or wisely
bar
Love from amongst her griefs?—for such the affections are.

CII

Perchance she died in youth: it may be,
bow'd
With woes far heavier than the ponderous tomb
That weigh'd upon her gentle dust, a
cloud
Might gather o'er her beauty, and a gloom
In her dark eye, prophetic of the doom Heaven gives its favourites—early death; yet shed
A sunset charm around her, and illume With hectic light, the Hesperus of the
dead,
Of her consuming cheek the autumnal leaf-like red.

CIII

Perchance she died in age—surviving all, Charms, kindred, children—with the silver gray
 On her long tresses, which might yet recall,
 It may be, still a something of the day
 When they were braided, and her proud
 array
 And lovely form were envied, praised,
 and eyed
 By Rome—But whither would Conjecture stray?
 Thus much alone we know—Metella
 died,
 The wealthiest Roman's wife: Behold his love or pride!

CIV

I know not why—but standing thus by
 thee
 It seems as if I had thine inmate known,
 Thou Tomb! and other days come back on me
 With recollected music, though the tone
 Is changed and solemn, like the cloudy
 groan
 Of dying thunder on the distant wind;
 Yet could I seat me by this ivied stone
 Till I had bodied, forth the heated mind, Forms from the floating wreck which Ruin
 leaves behind;

CV

And from the planks, far shatter'd o'er
 the rocks,
 Built me a little bark of hope, once more
 To battle with the ocean and the shocks
 Of the loud breakers, and the ceaseless
 roar
 Which rushes on the solitary shore
 Where all lies founder'd that was ever
 dear:
 But could I gather from the wave-worn
 store
 Enough for my rude boat, where should
 I steer?
 There woos no home, nor hope, nor life,
 save what is here.

CVI

Then let the winds howl on! their harmony
 Shall henceforth be my music, and the
 night
 The sound shall temper with the owlets'
 cry,
 As I now hear them, in the fading light Dim o'er the bird of darkness' native
 site,
 Answering each other on the Palatine,
 With their large eyes, all glistening gray
 and bright,

CHILDE HAROLD'S PILGRIMAGE

And sailing pinions.—Upon such a
 shrine
 What are our petty griefs?—let me not number mine.

CVII

Cypress and ivy, weed and wallflower
 grown,
 Matted and mass'd together, hillocks
 heap'd
 On what were chambers, arch crush'd, column strown
 In fragments, choked up vaults, and frescos steep'd
 In subterranean damps, where the owl
 peep'd,
 Deeming it midnight:—Temples, baths,
 or halls?
 Pronounce who can; for all that Learning reap'd
 From her research hath been, that these are walls—
 Behold the Imperial Mount! 'tis thus the mighty falls.

CVIII

There is the moral of all human tales;
 'Tis but the same rehearsal of the past,
 First Freedom, and then Glory—when that fails,
 Wealth, vice, corruption,—barbarism
 at last.
 And History, with all her volumes vast,
 Hath but one page,—'tis better written here
 Where gorgeous Tyranny hath thus
 amass'd
 All treasures, all delights, that eye or ear,
 Heart, soul, could seek, tongue ask—
 Away with words! draw near,

CIX

Admire, exult, despise, laugh, weep,— for here
 There is such matter for all feeling:—
 Man!
 Thou pendulum betwixt a smile and tear,
 Ages and realms are crowded in this span,
 This mountain, whose obliterated plan
 The pyramid of empires pinnacled,
 Of Glory's gewgaws shining in the van Till the sun's rays with added flame were fill'd!
 Where are its golden roofs? where those who dared to build?

CX

Tully was not so eloquent as thou,
 Thou nameless column with the buried
 base!
 What are the laurels of the Cæsar's
 brow?
 Crown me with ivy from his dwelling-
 place.

Whose arch or pillar meets me in the
face,
Titus or Trajan's? No—'tis that of
Time:
Triumph, arch, pillar, all he doth dis-
place
Scoffing; and apostolic statues climb
To crush the imperial urn, whose ashes slept sublime,

CXI

Buried in air, the deep blue sky of Rome,
And looking to the stars: they had con-
tain'd
A spirit which with these would find a
home,
The last of those who o'er the whole earth reign'd,
The Roman globe, for after none sus-
tain'd,
But yielded back his conquests:—he was more Than a mere Alexander, and, unstain'd
With household blood and wine, serenely
wore
His sovereign virtues—still we Trajan's name adore.

CXII

Where is the rock of Triumph, the high
place
Where Rome embraced her heroes?
where the steep
Tarpeian? fittest goal of Treason's race,
The promontory whence the Traitor's
Leap
Cured all ambition. Did the conquerors heap
Their spoils here? Yes; and in yon field
below,
A thousand years of silenced factions
sleep—
The Forum, where the immortal accents
glow,
And still the eloquent air breathes—burns with Cicero!

CXIII

The field of freedom, faction, fame, and
blood:
Here a proud people's passions were exhaled,
From the first hour of empire in the bud
To that when further worlds to conquer
fail'd;
But long before had Freedom's face
been veil'd,
And Anarchy assumed her attributes;
Till every lawless soldier who assail'd Trode on the trembling senate's slavish mutes,
Or raised the venal voice of baser prosti-tutes.

CXIV

Then turn we to her latest tribune's name,
From her ten thousand tyrants turn to
thee,
Redeemer of dark centuries of shame—
The friend of Petrarch—hope of Italy—
Rienzi! last of Romans! While the tree
Of freedom's wither'd trunk puts forth
a leaf
Even for thy tomb a garland let it be—
The forum's champion, and the people's
chief—
Her new-born Numa thou—with reign, alas! too brief.

CXV

Egeria! sweet creation of some heart
Which found no mortal resting-place
so fair
As thine ideal breast; whate'er thou art
Or wert,—a young Aurora of the air,
The nympholepsy of some fond despair;
Or, it might be, a beauty of the earth,
Who found a more than common votary
there
Too much adoring; whatsoe'er thy birth,
Thou wert a beautiful thought, and softly bodied forth.

CXVI

The mosses of thy fountain still are sprinkled
With thine Elysian water-drops; the face
Of thy cave-guarded spring with years
unwrinkled,
Reflects the meek-eyed genius of the
place,
Whose green, wild margin now no more erase Art's works; nor must the delicate waters sleep,
Prison'd in marble—bubbling from the base
Of the cleft statue, with a gentle leap
The rill runs o'er—and round—fern, flowers, and ivy creep,

CXVII

Fantastically tangled: the green hills
Are clothed with early blossoms, through the grass
The quick-eyed lizard rustles, and the bills
Of summer-birds sing welcome as ye
pass;
Flowers fresh in hue, and many in their class,
Implore the pausing step, and with their
dyes,
Dance in the soft breeze in a fairy mass;
The sweetness of the violet's deep blue
eyes, Kiss'd by the breath of heaven seems colour'd by its skies.

CXXIII

Here didst thou dwell, in this enchanted
cover,
Egeria! thy all heavenly bosom beating
For the far footsteps of thy mortal lover;
The purple Midnight veil'd that mystic
meeting
With her most starry canopy, and seat-
ing
Thyself by thine adorer, what befell?
This cave was surely shaped out for the greeting
Of an enamour'd Goddess, and the cell
Haunted by holy Love—the earliest oracle!

CXXIX

And didst thou not, thy breast to his replying,
Blend a celestial with a human heart;
And Love, which dies as it was born, in sighing,
Share with immortal transports? could thine art
Make them indeed immortal, and impart
The purity of heaven to earthly joys, Expel the venom and not blunt the dart—
The dull satiety which all destroys—
And root from out the soul the deadly weed which cloy's?

CXX

Alas! our young affections run to waste,
Or water but the desert; whence arise
But weeds of dark luxuriance, tares of haste,
Rank at the core, though tempting to the
eyes,
Flowers whose wild odours breathe but agonies,
And trees whose gums are poisons; such
the plants
Which spring beneath her steps as Passion flies
O'er the world's wilderness, and vainly pant
For some celestial fruit forbidden to our wants.

CXXI

Oh, Love! no habitant of earth thou
art—
An unseen seraph, we believe in thee,—
A faith whose martyrs are the broken
heart,—
But never yet hath seen, nor e'er shall see
The naked eye, thy form, as it should be;
The mind hath made thee, as it peopled
heaven,
Even with its own desiring phantasy,
And to a thought such shape and image
given,
As haunts the unquench'd soul—parch'd, wearied, wrung, and riven.

CXXII

Of its own beauty is the mind diseased,
And fevers into false creation:—where,
Where are the forms the sculptor's soul hath seiz'd?
In him alone. Can Nature show so fair?
Where are the charms and virtues which we dare
Conceive in boyhood and pursue as
men,
The unreach'd Paradise of our despair,
Which o'er-informs the pencil and the
pen,
And overpowers the page where it would bloom again?

CXXIII

Who loves, raves—'tis youth's frenzy
—but the cure
Is bitterer still, as charm by charm unwinds
Which robbed our idols, and we see too
sure Nor worth nor beauty dwells from out the mind's
Ideal shape of such; yet still it binds
The fatal spell, and still it draws us on, Reaping the whirlwind from the oft-sown winds;
The stubborn heart, its alchemy begun,
Seems ever near the prize—wealthiest when most undone.

CXXIV

We wither from our youth, we gasp
away—
Sick—sick; unfound the boon, unslaked
the thirst,
Though to the last, in verge of our decay,
Some phantom lures, such as we sought at first—
But all too late,—so are we doubly curst.
Love, fame, ambition, avarice—'tis
the same,
Each idle, and all ill, and none the
worst—
For all are meteors with a different name,
And Death the sable smoke where vanishes the flame.

CXXV

Few—none—find what they love or could have loved,
Though accident, blind contact, and the
strong
Necessity of loving, have removed Antipathies—but to recur, ere long,
Envenom'd with irrevocable wrong;
And Circumstance, that unspiritual god
And miscreator, makes and helps along
Our coming evils with a crutch-like rod, Whose touch turns Hope to dust,—the dust we all have trod.

[CANTO IV

CXXVI

Our life is a false nature: 'tis not in The harmony of things,—this hard decree,
This unradicable taint of sin,
This boundless upas, this all-blasting
tree,
Whose root is earth, whose leaves and branches be
The skies which rain their plagues on men like dew—
Disease, death, bondage—all the woes
we see,
And worse, the woes we see not—which throb through
The immedicable soul, with heart-aches ever new.

CXXVII

Yet let us ponder boldly—'tis a base
Abandonment of reason to resign
Our right of thought—our last and only
place
Of refuge; this, at least, shall still be
mine:
Though from our birth the faculty
divine
Is chain'd and tortured—cabin'd, cribb'd, confined,
And bred in darkness, lest the truth should shine
Too brightly on the unprepared mind,
The beam pours in, for time and skill will couch the blind.

CXXVIII

Arches on arches! as it were that Rome, Collecting the chief trophies of her
line,
Would build up all her triumphs in one
dome,
Her Coliseum stands; the moonbeams
shine
As 'twere its natural torches, for divine Should be the light which streams here to illumine
This long-explored but still exhaustless
mine
Of contemplation; and the azure gloom
Of an Italian night, where the deep skies assume

CXXIX

Hues which have words, and speak to ye of heaven,
Floats o'er this vast and wondrous monument,
And shadows forth its glory. There is
given Unto the things of earth, which Time hath bent,
A spirit's feeling, and where he hath
leant

His hand, but broke his scythe, there is a power
And magic in the ruin'd battlement,
For which the palace of the present hour Must yield its pomp, and wait till ages are its dower.

CXXX

Oh Time! the beautifier of the dead,
Adorner of the ruin, comforter
And only healer when the heart hath bled;
Time! the corrector where our judgments err,
The test of truth, love—sole philosopher,
For all beside are sophists—from thy thrif, which never loses though it doth defer—
Time, the avenger! unto thee I lift
My hands, and eyes, and heart, and crave of thee a gift:

CXXXI

Amidst this wreck, where thou hast made a shrine
And temple more divinely desolate, Among thy mightier offerings here are
mine,
Ruins of years, though few, yet full of
fate:
If thou hast ever seen me too elate,
Hear me not; but if calmly I have borne Good, and reserved my pride against the
hate
Which shall not overwhelm me, let me not have worn
This iron in my soul in vain—shall they not mourn?

CXXXII

And thou, who never yet of human
wrong
Left the unbalanced scale, great Nemesis!
Here, where the ancient paid thee homage long—Thou who didst call the Furies from the
abyss,
And round Orestes bade them howl and
hiss
For that unnatural retribution—just,
Had it but been from hands less near—in this Thy former realm, I call thee from the
dust!
Dost thou not hear my heart?—Awake!
thou shalt, and must.

CXXXIII

It is not that I may not have incurr'd
For my ancestral faults or mine the wound
I bleed withal, and, had it been conferr'd
With a just weapon, it had flow'd un-
bound;

But now my blood shall not sink in the ground;
 To thee I do devote it—thou shalt take The vengeance, which shall yet be sought and found,
 Which if I have not taken for the sake—
 But let that pass—I sleep, but thou shalt yet awake.

CXXXIV

And if my voice break forth, 'tis not that
 now
 I shrink from what is suffer'd: let him
 speak
 Who hath beheld decline upon my brow,
 Or seen my mind's convulsion leave it
 weak;
 But in this page a record will I seek.
 Not in the air shall these my words disperse,
 Though I be ashes; a far hour shall wreak
 The deep prophetic fulness of this verse,
 And pile on human heads the mountain of my curse!

CXXXV

That curse shall be Forgiveness.—Have
 I not—
 Hear me, my mother Earth! behold it,
 Heaven!
 Have I not had to wrestle with my lot?
 Have I not suffer'd things to be forgiven?
 Have I not had my brain sear'd, my heart riven,
 Hopes sapp'd, name blighted, Life's life lied away?
 And only not to desperation driven,
 Because not altogether of such clay
 As rots into the souls of those whom I survey.

CXXXVI

From mighty wrongs to petty perfidy
 Have I not seen what human things could do?
 From the loud roar of foaming calumny
 To the small whisper of the as paltry few,
 And subtler venom of the reptile crew,
 The Janus glance of whose significant eye, Learning to lie with silence, would seem
 true,
 And without utterance, save the shrug
 or sigh,
 Deal round to happy fools its speechless obloquy.

CXXXVII

But I have lived, and have not lived in
 vain:
 My mind may lose its force, my blood its
 fire,
 And my frame perish even in conquering pain;

But there is that within me which shall tire
 Torture and Time, and breathe when I
 expire;
 Something unearthly, which they deem not of,
 Like the remember'd tone of a mute lyre, Shali on their soften'd spirits sink, and
 move
 In hearts all rocky now the late remorse of
 love.

CXXXVIII

The seal is set.—Now welcome, thou dread power!
 Nameless, yet thus omnipotent, which
 here
 Walk'st in the shadow of the midnight
 hour
 With a deep awe, yet all distinct from
 fear;
 Thy haunts are ever where the dead walls rear
 Their ivy mantles, and the solemn scene Derives from thee a sense so deep and
 clear
 That we become a part of what has been,
 And grow unto the spot, all-seeing but unseen.

CXXXIX

And here the buzz of eager nations ran,
 In murmur'd pity, or loud-roar'd ap-
 plause,
 As man was slaughter'd by his fellow-
 man.
 And wherefore slaughter'd? wherefore,
 but because Such were the bloody Circus' genial
 laws,
 And the imperial pleasure.—Wherefore
 not?
 What matters where we fall to fill the
 maws
 Of worms—on battle-plain or listed
 spot?
 Both are but theatres—where the chief actors rot.

CXL

I see before me the Gladiator lie:
 He leans upon his hand—his manly
 brow
 Consents to death, but conquers agony,
 And his droop'd head sinks gradually
 low—
 And through his side the last drops, ebbing slow
 From the red gash, fall heavy, one by
 one,
 Like the first of a thunder-shower; and
 now
 The arena swims around him—he is
 gone,
 Ere ceased the inhuman shout which hail'd
 the wretch who won.

CXLI

He heard it, but he heeded not—his eyes
Were with his heart, and that was far
away;
He reck'd not of the life he lost nor prize,
But where his rude hut by the Danube
lay,
There were his young barbarians all at
play,
There was their Dacian mother—he,
their sire,
Butcher'd to make a Roman holiday—
All this rush'd with his blood—Shall he
expire
And unavenged? Arise! ye Goths, and glut your ire!

CXLII

But here, where Murder breathed her bloody steam;
And here, where buzzing nations choked
the ways,
And roar'd or murmur'd like a mountain stream
Dashing or winding as its torrent strays;
Here, where the Roman million's blame or praise
Was death or life, the playthings of a
crowd,
My voice sounds much—and fall the stars' faint rays
On the arena void—seats crush'd—walls bow'd—
And galleries, where my steps seem echoes strangely loud.

CXLIII

A ruin—yet what ruin! from its mass Walls, palaces, half-cities, have been rear'd;
Yet oft the enormous skeleton ye pass,
And marvel where the spoil could have appear'd.
Hath it indeed been plunder'd, or but clear'd?
Alas! developed, opens the decay,
When the colossal fabric's form is near'd:
It will not bear the brightness of the day,
Which streams too much on all—years—
man—have reft away.

CXLIV

But when the rising moon begins to climb
Its topmost arch, and gently pauses
there;
When the stars twinkle through the loops of time,
And the low night-breeze waves along
the air
The garland-forest, which the gray walls
wear,
Like laurels on the bald first Cæsar's
head;

When the light shines serene but doth not glare,
Then in this magic circle raise the dead:
Heroes have trod this spot—'tis on their dust ye tread.

CXLV

'While stands the Coliseum, Rome shall
stand;
'When falls the Coliseum, Rome shall
fall;
'And when Rome falls—the World.'
From our own land
Thus spake the pilgrims o'er this mighty
wall
In Saxon times, which we are wont to call Ancient; and these three mortal things are still
On their foundations, and unalter'd all;
Rome and her Ruin past Redemption's
skill,
The World, the same wide den—of thieves,
or what ye will.

CXLVI

Simple, erect, severe, austere, sublime—
Shrine of all saints and temple of all gods,
From Jove to Jesus—spared and blest
by time;
Looking tranquillity, while falls or nods
Arch, empire, each thing round thee, and man plods
His way through thorns to ashes—
glorious dome!
Shalt thou not last? Time's scythe and tyrants' rods
Shiver upon thee—sanctuary and home
Of art and piety—Pantheon!—pride of Rome!

CXLVII

Relic of nobler days, and noblest arts!
Despoil'd yet perfect, with thy circle
spreads
A holiness appealing to all hearts—
To art a model; and to him who treads
Rome for the sake of ages, Glory sheds Her light through thy sole aperture; to
those
Who worship, here are altars for their beads;
And they who feel for genius may repose
Their eyes on honour'd forms, whose busts around them close.

CXLVIII

There is a dungeon, in whose dim drear
light
What do I gaze on? Nothing: Look
again!
Two forms are slowly shadow'd on my
sight—
Two insulated phantoms of the brain:

It is not so; I see them full and plain—
 An old man, and a female young and
 fair,
 Fresh as a nursing mother, in whose vein
 The blood is nectar:—but what doth
 she there,
 With her unmantled neck, and bosom white and bare?

CXLIX

Full swells the deep pure fountain of young life,
 Where on the heart and from the heart
 we took
 Our first and sweetest nurture, when the
 wife,
 Blest into mother, in the innocent look,
 Or even the piping cry of lips that brook
 No pain and small suspense, a joy perceives
 Man knows not, when from out its cradled nook
 She sees her little bud put forth its leaves—
 What may the fruit be yet? I know not—Cain was Eve's.

CL

But here youth offers to old age the
 food,
 The milk of his own gift: it is her
 sire
 To whom she renders back the debt of
 blood
 Born with her birth. No; he shall not expire
 While in those warm and lovely veins
 the fire
 Of health and holy feeling can provide
 Great Nature's Nile, whose deep stream rises higher Than Egypt's river: from that gentle
 side Drink, drink and live, old man! Heaven's realm holds no such tide.

CLI

The starry fable of the milky way
 Has not thy story's purity; it is A constellation of a sweeter ray,
 And sacred Nature triumphs more in
 this Reverse of her decree, than in the abyss
 Where sparkle distant worlds:—Oh, holiest nurse!
 No drop of that clear stream its way shall miss
 To thy sire's heart, replenishing its source
 With life, as our freed souls rejoin the universe.

CLII

Turn to the mole which Hadrian rear'd
 on high,
 Imperial mimic of old Egypt's piles,
 Colossal copyist of deformity
 Whose travell'd phantasy from the far Nile's Enormous model, doom'd the artist's toils
 To build for giants, and for his vain
 earth,
 His shrunken ashes, raise this dome:
 How smiles
 The gazer's eye with philosophic mirth,
 To view the huge design which sprung from such a birth!

CLIII

But lo! the dome—the vast and wondrous dome,
 To which Diana's marvel was a cell—
 Christ's mighty shrine above his martyr's tomb!
 I have beheld the Ephesian's miracle;— Its columns strew the wilderness, and
 dwell
 The hyæna and the jackal in their shade;
 I have beheld Sophia's bright roofs
 swell
 Their glittering mass i' the sun, and have survey'd
 Its sanctuary the while the usurping Moslem pray'd;

CLIV

But thou, of temples old, or altars new, Standest alone, with nothing like to
 thee—
 Worthiest of God, the holy and the true.
 Since Zion's desolation, when that He Forsook his former city, what could be,
 Of earthly structures, in his honour piled,
 Of a sublimer aspect? Majesty, Power, Glory, Strength, and Beauty all are aisled

In this eternal ark of worship undefiled.

CLV

Enter: its grandeur overwhelms thee
 not;
 And why? It is not lessen'd; but thy
 mind,
 Expanded by the genius of the spot,
 Has grown colossal, and can only find
 A fit abode wherein appear enshrined
 Thy hopes of immortality; and thou Shalt one day, if found worthy, so defined,
 See thy God face to face, as thou dost
 now
 His Holy of Holies, nor be blasted by his brow.

CLVI

Thou movest, but increasing with the
advance,
Like climbing some great Alp, which still doth rise,
Deceived by its gigantic elegance;
Vastness which grows, but grows to harmonise—
All musical in its immensities;
Rich marbles, richer painting—shrines where flame
The lamps of gold—and haughty dome which vies
In air with Earth's chief structures, though their frame
Sits on the firm-set ground, and this the clouds must claim.

CLVII

Thou seest not all; but piecemeal thou must break,
To separate contemplation, the great
whole;
And as the ocean many bays will make
That ask the eye—so here condense thy
soul
To more immediate objects, and control Thy thoughts until thy mind hath got by
heart
Its eloquent proportions, and unroll
In mighty graduations, part by part,
The glory which at once upon thee did not dart,

CLVIII

Not by its fault—but thine: Our outward sense
Is but of gradual grasp—and as it is That what we have of feeling most intense
Outstrips our faint expression; even so
this Outshining and o'erwhelming edifice Fools our fond gaze, and greatest of the
great
Defies at first our Nature's littleness, Till, growing with its growth, we thus dilate
Our spirits to the size of that they contemplate.

CLIX

Then pause, and be enlighten'd; there is
more
In such a survey than the sating gaze
Of wonder pleased, or awe which would adore
The worship of the place, or the mere
praise
Of art and its great masters, who could
raise
What former time, nor skill, nor thought could plan;
The fountain of sublimity displays

Its depth, and thence may draw the mind of man
Its golden sands, and learn what great conceptions can.

CLX

Or, turning to the Vatican, go see Laocoön's torture dignifying pain—
A father's love and mortal's agony
With an immortal's patience blending:
—Vain
The struggle; vain, against the coiling
strain
And gripe, and deepening of the dragon's grasp,
The old man's clench; the long envenom'd chain
Rivets the living links,—the enormous
asp
Enforces pang on pang, and stifles gasp on gasp.

CLXI

Or view the Lord of the unerring bow,
The God of life, and poesy, and light—
The Sun in human limbs array'd, and
brow
All radiant from his triumph in the fight;
The shaft hath just been shot—the arrow bright
With an immortal's vengeance; in his
eye
And nostril beautiful disdain, and might
And majesty, flash their full lightnings
by,
Developing in that one glance the Deity.

CLXII

But in his delicate form—a dream of
Love,
Shaped by some solitary nymph, whose
breast
Long'd for a deathless lover from above,
And madden'd in that vision—are ex-
prest
All that ideal beauty ever bless'd
The mind with in its most unearthly
mood,
When each conception was a heavenly
guest—
A ray of immortality—and stood Starlike, around, until they gather'd to a god!

CLXIII

And if it be Prometheus stole from
Heaven
The fire which we endure, it was repaid
By him to whom the energy was given
Which this poetic marble hath array'd
With an eternal glory—which, if made By human hands, is not of human
thought;

And Time himself hath hallow'd it, nor laid
 One ringlet in the dust—nor hath it caught A tinge of years, but breathes the flame with which 'twas wrought.

CLXIV

But where is he, the Pilgrim of my song,
 The being who upheld it through the past?
 Methinks he cometh late and tarries long.
 He is no more—these breathings are his last;
 His wanderings done, his visions ebbing fast,
 And he himself as nothing:—if he was Aught but a phantasy, and could be class'd
 With forms which live and suffer—let that pass—
 His shadow fades away into Destruction's mass,

CLXV

Which gathers shadow, substance, life, and all
 That we inherit in its mortal shroud,
 And spreads the dim and universal pall
 Through which all things grow phantoms; and the cloud
 Between us sinks and all which ever glow'd,
 Till Glory's self is twilight, and displays
 A melancholy halo scarce allow'd
 To hover on the verge of darkness; rays
 Sadder than saddest night, for they distract the gaze,

CLXVI

And send us prying into the abyss,
 To gather what we shall be when the frame
 Shall be resolved to something less than this
 Its wretched essence; and to dream of fame,
 And wipe the dust from off the idle name
 We never more shall hear,—but never more,
 Oh, happier thought! can we be made the same:
 It is enough in sooth that once we bore
 These fardels of the heart—the heart whose sweat was gore.

CLXVII

Hark! forth from the abyss a voice proceeds,
 A long low distant murmur of dread sound,
 Such as arises when a nation bleeds

CHILDE HAROLD'S PILGRIMAGE

With some deep and immedicable wound;
 Through storm and darkness yawns the rending ground,
 The gulf is thick with phantoms, but the chief
 Seems royal still, though with her head discrown'd,
 And pale, but lovely, with maternal grief
 She clasps a babe, to whom her breast yields no relief.

CLXVIII

Scion of chiefs and monarchs, where art thou?
 Fond hope of many nations, art thou dead?
 Could not the grave forget thee, and lay low
 Some less majestic, less beloved head?
 In the sad midnight, while thy heart still bled,
 The mother of a moment, o'er thy boy,
 Death hush'd that pang for ever: with thee fled
 The present happiness and promised joy
 Which fill'd the imperial isles so full it seem'd to cloy.

CLXIX

Peasants bring forth in safety.—Can it be,
 Oh thou that wert so happy, so adored!
 Those who weep not for kings shall weep for thee,
 And Freedom's heart, grown heavy, cease to hoard
 Her many griefs for ONE; for she had pour'd
 Her orisons for thee, and o'er thy head
 Beheld her Iris.—Thou, too, lonely lord,
 And desolate consort—vainly wert thou wed!
 The husband of a year! the father of the dead!

CLXX

Of sackcloth was thy wedding garment made;
 Thy bridal's fruit is ashes: in the dust
 The fair-hair'd Daughter of the Isles is laid,
 The love of millions! How we did intrust Futurity to her! and, though it must Darken above our bones, yet fondly deem'd
 Our children should obey her child, and bless'd
 Her and her hoped-for seed, whose promise seem'd
 Like stars to shepherd's eyes:—'twas but a meteor beam'd.

CLXXI

Woe unto us, not her; for she sleeps
well:
The fickle reek of popular breath, the
tongue
Of hollow counsel, the false oracle,
Which from the birth of monarchy hath rung
Its knell in princely ears, till the o'er-stung Nations have arm'd in madness, the strange fate
Which tumbles mightiest sovereigns, and hath flung Against their blind omnipotence a weight
Within the opposing scale, which crushes soon or late,—

CLXXII

These might have been her destiny; but
no,
Our hearts deny it; and so young, so fair,
Good without effort, great without a
foe;
But now a bride and mother—and now
there!
How many ties did that stern moment
tear!
From thy Sire's to his humblest subject's
breast
Is link'd the electric chain of that despair,
Whose shock was as an earthquake's,
and opprest
The land which loved thee so that none could love thee best.

CLXXIII

Lo, Nemi! navell'd in the woody hills
So far, that the uprooting wind which
tears
The oak from his foundation, and which spills
The ocean o'er its boundary, and bears
Its form against the skies, reluctant spares
The oval mirror of thy glassy lake;
And calm as cherish'd hate, its surface
wears
A deep cold settled aspect nought can shake,
All coil'd into itself and round, as sleeps the snake.

CLXXIV

And near, Albano's scarce divided
waves
Shine from a sister valley;—and afar
The Tiber winds, and the broad ocean
laves
The Latian coast where sprung the Epic
war,

'Arms and the man,' whose re-ascending star
Rose o'er an empire:—but beneath thy
right
Tully reposed from Rome;—and where yon bar
Of girdling mountains intercepts the
sight
The Sabine farm was till'd, the weary bard's delight.

CLXXV

But I forget.—My Pilgrim's shrine is
won,
And he and I must part,—so let it be,—
His task and mine alike are nearly done;
Yet once more let us look upon the sea;
The midland ocean breaks on him and
me,
And from the Alban Mount we now
behold
Our friend of youth, that Ocean, which when we
Beheld it last by Calpe's rock unfold
Those waves, we follow'd on till the dark Euxine roll'd

CLXXVI

Upon the blue Symplegades: long
years—
Long, though not very many—since
have done
Their work on both; some suffering and some tears
Have left us nearly where we had begun:
Yet not in vain our mortal race hath
run;
We have had our reward, and it is
here,—
That we can yet feel gladden'd by the
sun,
And reap from earth, sea, joy almost as
dear
As if there were no man to trouble what is clear.

CLXXVII

Oh! that the Desert were my dwelling-
place,
With one fair Spirit for my minister,
That I might all forget the human race,
And, hating no one, love but only her!
Ye elements!—in whose ennobling stir
I feel myself exalted—Can ye not Accord me such a being? Do I err
In deeming such inhabit many a spot?
Though with them to converse can rarely be our lot.

CLXXVIII

There is a pleasure in the pathless woods,
There is a rapture on the lonely shore,
There is society, where none intrudes,
By the deep Sea, and music in its roar:

I love not Man the less, but Nature
 more,
 From these our interviews, in which I
 steal
 From all I may be, or have been before,
 To mingle with the Universe, and feel What I can ne'er express, yet cannot all conceal.

CLXXIX

Roll on, thou deep and dark blue Ocean—roll!
 Ten thousand fleets sweep over thee in
 vain;
 Man marks the earth with ruin—his
 control
 Spots with the shore; upon the watery
 plain
 The wrecks are all thy deed, nor doth remain
 A shadow of man's ravage, save his own,
 When, for a moment, like a drop of
 rain,
 He sinks into thy depths with bubbling
 groan,
 Without a grave, unknell'd, uncoffin'd, and unknown.

CLXXX

His steps are not upon thy paths,—thy fields
 Are not a spoil for him,—thou dost
 arise
 And shake him from thee; the vile strength he wields
 For earth's destruction thou dost all de-pise, Spurning him from thy bosom to the
 skies,
 And send'st him, shivering in thy playful spray
 And howling, to his Gods, where haply
 lies
 His petty hope in some near port or
 bay,
 And dashest him again to earth:—there let him lay.

CLXXXI

The armaments which thunderstrike
 the walls
 Of rock-built cities, bidding nations
 quake,
 And monarchs tremble in their capitals,
 The oak leviathans, whose huge ribs
 make
 Their clay creator the vain title take
 Of lord of thee, and arbiter of war—
 These are thy toys, and, as the snowy flake,
 They melt into thy yeast of waves, which
 mar
 Alike the Armada's pride or spoils of Trafalgar.

CLXXXII

Thy shores are empires, changed in all save thee—
 Assyria, Greece, Rome, Carthage, what
 are they?
 Thy waters wash'd them power while they were free,
 And many a tyrant since; their shores
 obey
 The stranger, slave, or savage; their decay
 Has dried up realms to deserts:—not so
 thou;—
 Unchangeable, save to thy wild waves'
 play,
 Time writes no wrinkle on thine azure
 brow:
 Such as creation's dawn beheld, thou rollest now.

CLXXXIII

Thou glorious mirror, where the Almighty's form
 Glasses itself in tempests; in all time,— Calm or convulsed, in breeze, or gale, or
 storm,
 Icing the pole, or in the torrid clime Dark-heaving—boundless, endless, and sublime,
 The image of eternity, the throne
 Of the Invisible; even from out thy slime
 The monsters of the deep are made;
 each zone
 Obeys thee; thou goest forth, dread, fathomless, alone.

CLXXXIV

And I have loved thee, Ocean! and my
 joy
 Of youthful sports was on thy breast to
 be Borne, like thy bubbles, onward: from a boy
 I wanton'd with thy breakers—they to
 me
 Were a delight; and if the freshening
 sea
 Made them a terror—'twas a pleasing
 fear,
 For I was as it were a child of thee,
 And trusted to thy billows far and near,
 And laid my hand upon thy mane—as I do
 here.

CLXXXV

My task is done, my song hath ceased, my theme
 Has died into an echo; it is fit
 The spell should break of this protracted
 dream.
 The torch shall be extinguish'd which hath lit

My midnight lamp—and what is writ,
is writ;
Would it were worthier! but I am not
now
That which I have been—and my visions flit
Less palpably before me—and the
glow
Which in my spirit dwelt is fluttering, faint, and low.

CLXXXVI

Farewell! a word that must be, and hath
been—

A sound which makes us linger;—yet—
farewell!
Ye! who have traced the Pilgrim to the
scene
Which is his last, if in your memories
dwell
A thought which once was his, if on ye
swell
A single recollection, not in vain
He wore his sandal-shoon and scallop-
shell;
Farewell! with him alone may rest the
pain,
If such there were—with you, the moral of his strain.

TALES THE GIAOUR

A FRAGMENT OF A TURKISH TALE

'One fatal remembrance—one sorrow that throws
Its bleak shade alike o'er our joys and our woes—
To which Life nothing darker nor brighter can bring,
For which joy hath no balm—and affliction no sting.'—MOORE.

TO

SAMUEL ROGERS, ESQ.

AS A SLIGHT BUT MOST SINCERE TOKEN OF ADMIRATION FOR HIS GENIUS, RESPECT FOR HIS CHARACTER, AND GRATITUDE FOR HIS FRIENDSHIP,

THIS PRODUCTION IS INSCRIBED,

BY HIS OBLIGED AND AFFECTIONATE SERVANT,

BYRON.

LONDON, May, 1813.

THE tale which these disjointed fragments present is founded upon circumstances now less common in the East than formerly; either because the ladies are more circumspect than in the 'olden time,' or because the Christians have better fortune, or less enterprize.

The story, when entire, contained the adventures of a female slave, who was thrown, in the Mussulman manner, into the sea for infidelity, and avenged by a young Venetian, her lover, at the time the Seven Islands were possessed by the Republic of Venice, and soon after the Arnauts were beaten back from the Morea, which they had ravaged for some time subsequent to the Russian invasion. The desertion of the Mainotes, on being refused the plunder of Misitra, led to the abandonment of that enterprise, and to the desolation of the Morea; during which the cruelty exercised on all sides was unparalleled even in the annals of the faithful.

No breath of air to break the wave
That rolls below the Athenian's grave,
That tomb which, gleaming o'er the cliff,
First greets the homeward-veering skiff,
High o'er the land he saved in vain; 5
When shall such hero live again?

Fair clime! where every season smiles
Benignant o'er those blessed isles,

Which, seen from far Colonna's height, Make glad the heart that hails the
sight, 10
And lend to loneliness delight,
There mildly dimpling, Ocean's cheek
Reflects the tints of many a peak
Caught by the laughing tides that lave
These Edens of the eastern wave: 15
And if at times a transient breeze
Break the blue crystal of the seas,

Or sweep one blossom from the trees,
How welcome is each gentle air
That wakes and wafts the odours there!
For there the Rose, o'er crag or vale, 21
Sultana of the Nightingale,

The maid for whom his melody,
His thousand songs are heard on high,
Blooms blushing to her lover's tale: 25
His queen, the garden queen, his Rose,
Unbent by winds, unchill'd by snows,
Far from the winters of the west,
By every breeze and season blest,
Returns the sweets by nature given 30
In softest incense back to heaven;
And grateful yields that smiling sky
Her fairest hue and fragrant sigh.
And many a summer flower is there,
And many a shade that love might 35
share,

And many a grotto, meant for rest,
That holds the pirate for a guest;
Whose bark in sheltering cove below
Lurks for the passing peaceful prow,
Till the gay mariner's guitar 40
Is heard, and seen the evening star;
Then stealing with the muffled oar,
Far shaded by the rocky shore,
Rush the night-prowlers on the prey,
And turn to groans his roundelay. 45 Strange—that where Nature loved to
trace,

As if for gods, a dwelling-place,
And every charm and grace hath mix'd
Within the paradise she fix'd,
There man, enamour'd of distress, 50
Should mar it into wilderness,
And trample, brute-like, o'er each flower
That tasks not one laborious hour;
Nor claims the culture of his hand
To bloom along the fairy land, 55
But springs as to preclude his care,
And sweetly woos him—but to spare!
Strange—that where all is peace beside,
There passion riots in her pride,
And lust and rapine wildly reign 60
To darken o'er the fair domain.
It is as though the fiends prevail'd
Against the seraphs they assail'd,
And, fix'd on heavenly thrones, should 65
dwell

The freed inheritors of hell;
So soft the scene, so form'd for joy,
So curst the tyrants that destroy!

He who hath bent him o'er the dead
Ere the first day of death is fled,
The first dark day of nothingness, 70
The last of danger and distress,
(Before Decay's effacing fingers
Have swept the lines where beauty lingers,)
And mark'd the mild angelic air,
The rapture of repose that's there, 75
The fix'd yet tender traits that streak
The languor of the placid cheek,

And—but for that sad shrouded eye,
That fires not, wins not, weeps not, now,
And but for that chill, changeless brow,
Where cold Obstruction's apathy 81
Appals the gazing mourner's heart,
As if to him it could impart

The doom he dreads, yet dwells upon;
Yes, but for these and these alone, 85
Some moments, ay, one treacherous
hour,

He still might doubt the tyrant's power;
So fair, so calm, so softly seal'd,
The first, last look by death reveal'd!
Such is the aspect of this shore; 90
'Tis Greece, but living Greece no more!

So coldly sweet, so deadly fair,
We start, for soul is wanting there.
Hers is the loveliness in death,
That parts not quite with parting 95
breath;

But beauty with that fearful bloom,
That hue which haunts it to the tomb,
Expression's last receding ray,
A gilded halo hovering round decay,
The farewell beam of Feeling pass'd 100
away!

Spark of that flame, perchance of heavenly
birth,
Which gleams, but warms no more its cherish'd earth!

Clime of the unforgotten brave!
Whose land from plain to mountain-
cave

Was Freedom's home or Glory's grave!
Shrine of the mighty! can it be, 106
That this is all remains of thee?
Approach, thou craven crouching slave:
Say, is not this Thermopylæ?

These waters blue that round you
lave,— 110

Oh servile offspring of the free,
Pronounce what sea, what shore is this?
The gulf, the rock of Salamis!

These scenes, their story not unknown,
Arise, and make again your own; 115
Snatch from the ashes of your sires
The embers of their former fires;

And he who in the strife expires
Will add to theirs a name of fear
That Tyranny shall quake to hear, 120
And leave his sons a hope, a fame,

They too will rather die than shame:
For Freedom's battle once begun,
Bequeath'd by bleeding Sire to Son,

Though baffled oft is ever won. 125
Bear witness, Greece, thy living page!
Attest it many a deathless age!

While kings, in dusty darkness hid,
Have left a nameless pyramid, 129
Thy heroes, though the general doom
Hath swept the column from their tomb,

A mightier monument command,
The mountains of their native land!

THE GIAOUR

There points thy Muse to stranger's eye
 The graves of those that cannot die!
 'Twere long to tell, and sad to trace, 136
 Each step from splendour to disgrace;
 Enough—no foreign foe could quell
 Thy soul, till from itself it fell;
 Yes! Self-abasement paved the way 140
 To villain-bonds and despot sway.
 What can he tell who treads thy shore?
 No legend of thine olden time,
 No theme on which the Muse might soar
 High as thine own in days of yore, 145
 When man was worthy of thy clime.
 The hearts within thy valleys bred,
 The fiery souls that might have led Thy sons to deeds sublime,
 Now crawl from cradle to the grave, 150
 Slaves—nay, the bondsmen of a slave,
 And callous, save to crime;
 Stain'd with each evil that pollutes
 Mankind, where least above the brutes;
 Without even savage virtue blest, 155
 Without one free or valiant breast,
 Still to the neighbouring ports they waft
 Proverbial wiles and ancient craft;
 In this the subtle Greek is found,
 For this, and this alone, renown'd. 160
 In vain might Liberty invoke
 The spirit to its bondage broke,
 Or raise the neck that courts the yoke:
 No more her sorrows I bewail,
 Yet this will be a mournful tale, 165
 And they who listen may believe,
 Who heard it first had cause to grieve.

Far, dark, along the blue sea glancing,
 The shadows of the rocks advancing Start on the fisher's eye like boat 170
 Of island-pirate or Mainote;
 And fearful for his light caïque,
 He shuns the near but doubtful creek:
 Though worn and weary with his toil,
 And cumber'd with his scaly spoil, 175
 Slowly, yet strongly, plies the oar,
 Till Port Leone's safer shore
 Receives him by the lovely light
 That best becomes an Eastern night.

Who thundering comes on blackest
 steed, 180
 With slacken'd bit and hoof of speed?
 Beneath the clattering iron's sound
 The cavern'd echoes wake around
 In lash for lash, and bound for bound;
 The foam that streaks the courser's side
 Seems gather'd from the ocean-tide: 186
 Though weary waves are sunk to rest,
 There's none within his rider's breast;
 And though to-morrow's tempest lower,
 'Tis calmer than thy heart, young Giaour!
 I know thee not, I loathe thy race, 191
 But in thy lineaments I trace
 What Time shall strengthen, not efface:

Though young and pale, that sallow front
 Is scathed by fiery passion's brunt; 195
 Though bent on earth thine evil eye,
 As meteor-like thou glidest by,
 Right well I view and deem thee one Whom Othman's sons should slay or shun.

On—on he hasten'd, and he drew 200
 My gaze of wonder as he flew:
 Though like a demon of the night
 He pass'd, and vanish'd from my sight,
 His aspect and his air impress'd
 A troubled memory on my breast, 205
 And long upon my startled ear
 Rung his dark courser's hoofs of fear.
 He spurs his steed; he nears the steep,
 That, jutting, shadows o'er the deep;
 He winds around; he hurries by; 210
 The rock relieves him from mine eye;
 For well I ween unwelcome he Whose glance is fix'd on those that flee;
 And not a star but shines too bright
 On him who takes such timeless flight.
 He wound along; but ere he pass'd, 216
 One glance he snatch'd, as if his last,
 A moment check'd his wheeling steed,
 A moment breathed him from his speed,
 A moment on his stirrup stood— 220
 Why looks he o'er the olive wood?
 The crescent glimmers on the hill,
 The Mosque's high lamps are quivering
 still:
 Though too remote for sound to wake
 In echoes of the far tophaike, 225
 The flashes of each joyous peal
 Are seen to prove the Moslem's zeal.
 To-night, set Rhamazani's sun;
 To-night, the Bairam feast's begun;
 To-night—but who and what art thou 230
 Of foreign garb and fearful brow?
 And what are these to thine or thee,
 That thou shouldst either pause or flee?

He stood—some dread was on his
 face,
 Soon Hatred settled in its place: 235
 It rose not with the reddening flush
 Of transient Anger's hasty blush,
 But pale as marble o'er the tomb,
 Whose ghastly whiteness aids its gloom.
 His brow was bent, his eye was glazed; 240
 He raised his arm, and fiercely raised,
 And sternly shook his hand on high,
 As doubting to return or fly;
 Impatient of his flight delay'd,
 Here loud his raven charger neigh'd—Down glanced that hand, and grasp'd his blade; 246
 That sound had burst his waking dream,
 As Slumber starts at owl's scream,
 The spur hath lanced his courser's sides;
 Away, away, for life he rides: 250
 Swift as the hurl'd on high jerreed
 Springs to the touch his startled steed:

The rock is doubled, and the shore
Shakes with the clattering tramp no more;
The crag is won, no more is seen 255
His Christian crest and haughty mien.
'Twas but an instant he restrain'd
That fiery barb so sternly rein'd;
'Twas but a moment that he stood,
Then sped as if by death pursued; 260
But in that instant o'er his soul
Winters of Memory seem'd to roll,
And gather in that drop of time
A life of pain, an age of crime.
O'er him who loves, or hates, or fears, 265
Such moment pours the grief of years:
What felt he then, at once oppress
By all that most distracts the breast?
That pause, which ponder'd o'er his fate,
Oh, who its dreary length shall date! 270
Though in Time's record nearly nought,
It was Eternity to Thought!
For infinite as boundless space
The thought that Conscience must embrace,
Which in itself can comprehend 275
Woe without name, or hope, or end.

The hour is past, the Giaour is gone;
And did he fly or fall alone?
Woe to that hour he came or went!
The curse for Hassan's sin was sent 280
To turn a palace to a tomb;
He came, he went, like the simoom,
That harbinger of fate and gloom,
Beneath whose widely-wasting breath
The very cypress droops to death— 285 Dark tree, still sad when others' grief is
fled,
The only constant mourner o'er the dead!

The steed is vanish'd from the stall;
No serf is seen in Hassan's hall;
The lonely spider's thin gray pall 290
Waves slowly widening o'er the wall;
The bat builds in his haram bower,
And in the fortress of his power
The owl usurps the beacon-tower;
The wild-dog howls o'er the fountain's brim, 295
With baffled thirst, and famine, grim;
For the stream has shrunk from its marble
bed,
Where the weeds and the desolate dust are
spread.

'Twas sweet of yore to see it play
And chase the sultriness of day, 300
As springing high the silver dew
In whirls fantastically flew,
And flung luxurious coolness round
The air, and verdure o'er the ground.
'Twas sweet, when cloudless stars were
bright, 305
To view the wave of watery light,
And hear its melody by night.
And oft had Hassan's Childhood play'd
Around the verge of that cascade;

And oft upon his mother's breast 310
That sound had harmonized his rest;
And oft had Hassan's Youth along
Its bank been soothed by Beauty's song;
And softer seem'd each melting tone
Of Music mingled with its own. 315
But ne'er shall Hassan's Age repose
Along the brink at twilight's close:
The stream that fill'd that font is fled—
The blood that warm'd his heart is shed!

And here no more shall human voice
Be heard to rage, regret, rejoice. 321
The last sad note that swell'd the gale
Was woman's wildest funeral wail:
That quench'd in silence, all is still,
But the lattice that flaps when the wind is shrill: 325

Though raves the gust, and floods the
rain,
No hand shall close its clasp again.
On desert sands 'twere joy to scan
The rudest steps of fellow man,
So here the very voice of Grief 330
Might wake an Echo like relief—
At least 'twould say, 'All are not
gone:

There lingers Life, though but in one'—
For many a gilded chamber's there,
Which Solitude might well forbear;
Within that dome as yet Decay 336
Hath slowly work'd her cankering
way—

But gloom is gather'd o'er the gate,
Nor there the Fakir's self will wait;
Nor there will wandering Dervise stay.
For bounty cheers not his delay; 341
Nor there will weary stranger halt
To bless the sacred 'bread and salt.'
Alike must Wealth and Poverty
Pass heedless and unheeded by, 345
For Courtesy and Pity died
With Hassan on the mountain side.
His roof, that refuge unto men,
Is Desolation's hungry den.
The guest flies the hall, and the vassal from labour, 350
Since his turban was cleft by the infidel's sabre!

I hear the sound of coming feet,
But not a voice mine ear to greet;
More near—each turban I can scan,
And silver-sheathed ataghan; 355
The foremost of the band is seen
An Emir by his garb of green:
'Ho! who art thou?'—'This low salam Replies of Moslem faith I am.'
'The burthen ye so gently bear 360
Seems one that claims your utmost care,
And, doubtless, holds some precious freight—
My humble bark would gladly wait.'

THE GIAOUR

'Thou speakest sooth: thy skiff unmoor,
And waft us from the silent shore; 365
Nay, leave the sail still furl'd, and ply
The nearest oar that's scatter'd by,
And midway to those rocks where sleep
The channell'd waters dark and deep.
Rest from your task—so—bravely done,
Our course has been right swiftly run; 371
Yet 'tis the longest voyage, I trow,
That one of—

Sullen it plunged, and slowly sank,
The calm wave rippled to the bank; 375
I watch'd it as it sank, methought
Some motion from the current caught
Bestirr'd it more,—'twas but the beam
That checker'd o'er the living stream:
I gaz'd, till vanishing from view, 380
Like lessening pebble it withdrew;
Still less and less, a speck of white
That gemm'd the tide, then mock'd the
sight;
And all its hidden secrets sleep,
Known but to Genii of the deep, 385
Which, trembling in their coral caves,
They dare not whisper to the waves.

As rising on its purple wing
The insect queen of eastern spring,
O'er emerald meadows of Kashmeer 390
Invites the young pursuer near,
And leads him on from flower to flower
A weary chase and wasted hour,
Then leaves him as it soars on high,
With panting heart and tearful eye: 395
So Beauty lures the full-grown child,
With hue as bright, and wing as wild;
A chase of idle hopes and fears,
Begun in folly, closed in tears.
If won, to equal ills betray'd, 400
Woe waits the insect and the maid;
A life of pain, the loss of peace,
From infant's play, and man's caprice:
The lovely toy so fiercely sought
Hath lost its charm by being caught, 405
For every touch that woo'd its stay
Hath brush'd its brightest hues away,
Till charm, and hue, and beauty gone,
'Tis left to fly or fall alone.
With wounded wing, or bleeding breast,
Ah! where shall either victim rest? 411
Can this with faded pinion soar
From rose to tulip as before?
Or Beauty, blighted in an hour,
Find joy within her broken bow? 415
No: gayer insects fluttering by Ne'er droop the wing o'er those that die,
And lovelier things have mercy shown
To every failing but their own,
And every woe a tear can claim 420
Except an erring sister's shame.

The Mind, that broods o'er guilty woes,
Is like the Scorpion girt by fire;
In circle narrowing as it glows,
The flames around their captive close,
Till inly search'd by thousand throes, 426
And maddening in her ire,
One sad and sole relief she knows,
The sting she nourish'd for her foes,
Whose venom never yet was vain, 430
Gives but one pang and cures all pain,
And darts into her desperate brain:
So do the dark in soul expire,
Or live like Scorpion girt by fire;
So writhes the mind Remorse hath riven,
Unfit for earth, undoom'd for heaven,
Darkness above, despair beneath, 437
Around it flame, within it death!

Black Hassan from the Haram flies,
Nor bends on woman's form his eyes;
The unwonted chase each hour employs,
Yet shares he not the hunter's joys.
Not thus was Hassan wont to fly
When Leila dwelt in his Serai.
Doth Leila there no longer dwell? 445
That tale can only Hassan tell:
Strange rumours in our city say
Upon that eve she fled away
When Rhamazan's last sun was set,
And flashing from each minaret 450
Millions of lamps proclaim'd the feast
Of Bairam through the boundless East.
'Twas then she went as to the bath,
Which Hassan vainly search'd in wrath;
For she was flown her master's rage 455
In likeness of a Georgian page,
And far beyond the Moslem's power
Had wrong'd him with the faithless Giaour.
Somewhat of this had Hassan deem'd;
But still so fond, so fair she seem'd, 460
Too well he trusted to the slave
Whose treachery deserved a grave:
And on that eve had gone to mosque,
And thence to feast in his kiosk.
Such is the tale his Nubians tell, 465
Who did not watch their charge too well;
But others say, that on that night,
By pale Phingari's trembling light,
The Giaour upon his jet-black steed
Was seen, but seen alone to speed 470
With bloody spur along the shore,
Nor maid nor page behind him bore.

Her eye's dark charm 'twere vain to tell,
But gaze on that of the Gazelle,
It will assist thy fancy well; 475
As large, as languishingly dark,
But Soul beam'd forth in every spark
That darted from beneath the lid,
Bright as the jewel of Giamschid. 479
Yea, Soul, and should our prophet say
That form was nought but breathing clay,

By Alla! I would answer nay;
 Though on Al-Sirat's arch I stood,
 Which totters o'er the fiery flood,
 With Paradise within my view, 485
 And all his Houris beckoning through.
 Oh! who young Leila's glance could read
 And keep that portion of his creed
 Which saith that woman is but dust,
 A soulless toy for tyrant's lust? 490
 On her might Muftis gaze, and own
 That through her eye the Immortal shone;
 On her fair cheek's unfading hue
 The young pomegranate's blossoms strew
 Their bloom in blushes ever new; 495
 Her hair in hyacinthine flow,
 When left to roll its folds below,
 As midst her handmaids in the hall
 She stood superior to them all,
 Hath swept the marble where her feet 500
 Gleam'd whiter than the mountain sleet
 Ere from the cloud that gave it birth
 It fell, and caught one stain of earth.
 The cygnet nobly walks the water;
 So moved on earth Circassia's daughter,
 The loveliest bird of Frangestan! 506
 As rears her crest the ruffled Swan,

And spurns the waves with wings of pride,
 When pass the steps of stranger man

Along the banks that bound her tide;
 Thus rose fair Leila's whiter neck:— 511
 Thus arm'd with beauty would she check
 Intrusion's glance, till Folly's gaze
 Shrunk from the charms it meant to praise.
 Thus high and graceful was her gait; 515
 Her heart as tender to her mate;
 Her mate—stern Hassan, who was he?
 Alas! that name was not for thee!

Stern Hassan hath a journey ta'en
 With twenty vassals in his train, 520
 Each arm'd, as best becomes a man,
 With arquebuss and ataghan;
 The chief before, as deck'd for war,
 Bears in his belt the scimitar
 Stain'd with the best of Arnaut blood, 525
 When in the pass the rebels stood,
 And few return'd to tell the tale
 Of what befell in Parne's vale.
 The pistols which his girdle bore
 Were those that once a pasha wore, 530
 Which still, though gemm'd and boss'd with gold,

Even robbers tremble to behold.
 'Tis said he goes to woo a bride
 More true than her who left his side;
 The faithless slave that broke her bower,
 And, worse than faithless, for a Giaour!

The sun's last rays are on the hill,
 And sparkle in the fountain rill, 538
 Whose welcome waters, cool and clear,
 Draw blessings from the mountaineer:

Here may the loitering merchant Greek Find that repose 'twere vain to seek
 In cities lodged too near his lord,
 And trembling for his secret hoard—
 Here may he rest where none can see, 545
 In crowds a slave, in deserts free;
 And with forbidden wine may stain
 The bowl a Moslem must not drain.

The foremost Tartar's in the gap
 Conspicuous by his yellow cap; 550
 The rest in lengthening line the while Wind slowly through the long defile:
 Above, the mountain rears a peak,
 Where vultures whet the thirsty beak,
 And theirs may be a feast to-night, 555
 Shall tempt them down ere morrow's
 light;

Beneath, a river's wintry stream
 Has shrunk before the summer beam,
 And left a channel bleak and bare,
 Save shrubs that spring to perish there;
 Each side the midway path there lay 561
 Small broken crags of granite gray,
 By time, or mountain lightning, riven
 From summits clad in mists of heaven;
 For where is he that hath beheld 565
 The peak of Liakura unveil'd?

They reach the grove of pine at last;
 'Bismillah! now the peril's past;
 For yonder view the opening plain,
 And there we'll prick our steeds amain:
 The Chiaus spake, and as he said, 571
 A bullet whistles o'er his head;
 The foremost Tartar bites the ground!

Scarce had they time to check the rein,
 Swift from their steeds the riders bound;
 But three shall never mount again: 576
 Unseen the foes that gave the wound,

The dying ask revenge in vain.
 With steel unsheath'd, and carbine bent,
 Some o'er their courser's harness leant,
 Half shelter'd by the steed; 581

Some fly behind the nearest rock,
 And there await the coming shock,
 Nor tamely stand to bleed
 Beneath the shaft of foes unseen, 585
 Who dare not quit their craggy screen.

Stern Hassan only from his horse
 Disdains to light, and keeps his course,
 Till fiery flashes in the van Proclaim too sure the robber-clan 590
 Have well secured the only way
 Could now avail the promised prey;
 Then curl'd his very beard with ire,
 And glared his eye with fiercer fire;
 'Though far and near the bullets hiss, 595
 I've scaped a bloodier hour than this,
 And now the foe their covert quit,
 And call his vassals to submit;
 But Hassan's frown and furious word
 Are dreaded more than hostile sword, 600

THE GIAOUR

Nor of his little band a man
Resign'd carbine or ataghan,
Nor raised the craven cry, Amaun!
In fuller sight, more near and near,
The lately ambush'd foes appear, 605
And issuing from the grove, advance
Some who on battle-charger prance.
Who leads them on with foreign brand
Far flashing in his red right hand?
'Tis he! 'tis he! I know him now; 610
I know him by his pallid brow;
I know him by the evil eye
That aids his envious treachery;
I know him by his jet-black barb;
Though now array'd in Arnaut garb, 615
Apostate from his own vile faith,
It shall not save him from the death:
'Tis he! well met in any hour,
Lost Leila's love, accursed Giaour!'

As rolls the river into ocean, 620
In sable torrent wildly streaming;
As the sea-tide's opposing motion,
In azure column proudly gleaming,
Beats back the current many a rood,
In curling foam and mingling flood, 625
While eddying whirl, and breaking wave,
Roused by the blast of winter, rave;
Through sparkling spray, in thundering clash,
The lightnings of the waters flash
In awful whiteness o'er the shore, 630
That shines and shakes beneath the roar;
Thus—as the stream and ocean greet,
With waves that madden as they meet—
Thus join the bands, whom mutual wrong,
And fate, and fury, drive along. 635
The bickering sabres' shivering jar;
And pealing wide or ringing near
Its echoes on the throbbing ear,
The deathshot hissing from afar;
The shock, the shout, the groan of war,
Reverberate along that vale, 641
More suited to the shepherd's tale: Though few the numbers—theirs the
strife,
That neither spares nor speaks for life!
Ah! fondly youthful hearts can press, 645
To seize and share the dear caress;
But Love itself could never part
For all that Beauty sighs to grant
With half the fervour Hate bestows
Upon the last embrace of foes, 650
When grappling in the fight they fold
Those arms that ne'er shall lose their hold:
Friends meet to part; Love laughs at faith;
True foes, once met, are join'd till death!

With sabre shiver'd to the hilt, 655
Yet dripping with the blood he spilt;
Yet strain'd within the sever'd hand
Which quivers round that faithless brand;

His turban far behind him roll'd,
And cleft in twain its firmest fold; 660
His flowing robe by falchion torn,
And crimson as those clouds of morn
That, streak'd with dusky red, portend
The day shall have a stormy end;
A stain on every bush that bore 665
A fragment of his palampore;
His breast with wounds unnumber'd riven,
His back to earth, his face to heaven,
Fall'n Hassan lies—his unclosed eye
Yet lowering on his enemy, 670
As if the hour that seal'd his fate
Surviving left his quenchless hate;
And o'er him bends that foe with brow
As dark as his that bled below.—

'Yes, Leila sleeps beneath the wave, 675
But his shall be a redder grave;
Her spirit pointed well the steel
Which taught that felon heart to feel.
He call'd the Prophet, but his power
Was vain against the vengeful Giaour:
He call'd on Alla, but the word 681
Arose unheeded or unheard.
Thou Paynim fool! could Leila's prayer
Be pass'd, and thine accorded there?
I watch'd my time, I leagu'd with these,
The traitor in his turn to seize; 686
My wrath is wreak'd, the deed is done,
And now I go—but go alone.'

The browsing camels' bells are tinkling:
His mother look'd from her lattice high—
She saw the dews of eve besprinkling
The pasture green beneath her eye, 692
She saw the planets faintly twinkling:
'Tis twilight—sure his train is nigh.'
She could not rest in the garden-bower,
But gazed through the grate of his steepest
tower: 696
'Why comes he not? his steeds are fleet,
Nor shrink they from the summer heat;
Why sends not the Bridegroom his promised gift?
Is his heart more cold, or his barb less swift? 700
Oh, false reproach! yon Tartar now
Has gain'd our nearest mountain's brow,
And warily the steep descends,
And now within the valley bends;
And he bears the gift at his saddle-bow—
How could I deem his courser slow? 706
Right well my largess shall repay
His welcome speed and weary way.'

The Tartar lighted at the gate,
But scarce upheld his fainting weight: 710
His swarthy visage spake distress,
But this might be from weariness;

His garb with sanguine spots was dyed,
 But these might be from his courser's side;
 He drew the token from his vest— 715
 Angel of Death! 'tis Hassan's cloven crest!
 His calpac rent—his caftan red—
 'Lady, a fearful bride thy son hath wed:
 Me, not from mercy, did they spare,
 But this empurpled pledge to bear. 720
 Peace to the brave! whose blood is spilt:
 Woe to the Giaour! for his the guilt.'

A turban carved in coarsest stone,
 A pillar with rank weeds o'ergrown,
 Whereon can now be scarcely read 725
 The Koran verse that mourns the dead,
 Point out the spot where Hassan fell
 A victim in that lonely dell.
 There sleeps as true an Osmanlie
 As e'er at Mecca bent the knee; 730
 As ever scorn'd forbidden wine,
 Or pray'd with face towards the shrine,
 In orisons resumed anew
 At solemn sound of 'Alla Hu!'
 Yet died he by a stranger's hand, 735
 And stranger in his native land;
 Yet died he as in arms he stood,
 And unavenged, at least in blood.
 But him the maids of Paradise
 Impatiant to their halls invite, 740
 And the dark heaven of Houris' eyes
 On him shall glance for ever bright;
 They come—their kerchiefs green they wave,
 And welcome with a kiss the brave!
 Who falls in battle 'gainst a Giaour 745
 Is worthiest an immortal bower.

But thou, false Infidel! shalt writhe
 Beneath avenging Monkir's scythe;
 And from its torment 'scape alone
 To wander round lost Eblis' throne; 750
 And fire unquench'd, unquenchable,
 Around, within, thy heart shall dwell;
 Nor ear can hear nor tongue can tell
 The tortures of that inward hell!
 But first, on earth as Vampire sent, 755
 Thy corse shall from its tomb be rent:
 Then ghastly haunt thy native place,
 And suck the blood of all thy race;
 There from thy daughter, sister, wife,
 At midnight drain the stream of life; 760
 Yet loathe the banquet which perforce
 Must feed thy livid living corse:
 Thy victims ere they yet expire
 Shall know the demon for their sire,
 As cursing thee, thou cursing them, 765
 Thy flowers are wither'd on the stem.
 But one that for thy crime must fall,
 The youngest, most beloved of all,
 Shall bless thee with a father's name—
 That word shall wrap thy heart in flame!
 Yet must thou end thy task, and mark 771
 Her cheek's last tinge, her eye's last spark,

And the last glassy glance must view
 Which freezes o'er its lifeless blue;
 Then with unhallow'd hand shalt tear 775
 The tresses of her yellow hair,
 Of which in life a lock when shorn,
 Affection's fondest pledge was worn,
 But now is borne away by thee,
 Memorial of thine agony! 780
 Wet with thine own best blood shall drip
 Thy gnashing tooth and haggard lip;
 Then stalking to thy sullen grave,
 Go—and with Gouls and Afrits rave;
 Till these in horror shrink away 785
 From spectre more accursed than they!

'How name ye yon lone Caloyer?
 His features I have scann'd before
 In mine own land: 'tis many a year,
 Since, dashing by the lonely shore, 790
 I saw him urge as fleet a steed
 As ever served a horseman's need.
 But once I saw that face, yet then
 It was so mark'd with inward pain,
 I could not pass it by again; 795
 It breathes the same dark spirit now,
 As death were stamp'd upon his brow.

'Tis twice three years at summer tide
 Since first among our freres he came;
 And here it soothes him to abide 800
 For some dark deed he will not name.
 But never at our vesper prayer,
 Nor e'er before confession chair
 Kneels he, nor recks he when arise
 Incense or anthem to the skies, 805
 But broods within his cell alone,
 His faith and race alike unknown.
 The sea from Paynim land he crost,
 And here ascended from the coast;
 Yet seems he not of Othman race, 810
 But only Christian in his face:
 I'd judge him some stray renegade,
 Repentant of the change he made,
 Save that he shuns our holy shrine, 814
 Nor tastes the sacred bread and wine.
 Great largess to these walls be brought,
 And thus our abbot's favour bought;
 But were I prior, not a day
 Should brook such stranger's further stay.
 Or pent within our penance cell 820
 Should doom him there for aye to dwell.
 Much in his visions mutters he
 Of maiden whelm'd beneath the sea;
 Of sabres clashing, foemen flying,
 Wrongs avenged, and Moslem dying. 825
 On cliff he hath been known to stand,
 And rave as to some bloody hand
 Fresh sever'd from its parent limb,
 Invisible to all but him,
 Which beckons onward to his grave, 830
 And lures to leap into the wave.'

THE GIAOUR

Dark and unearthly is the scowl
That glares beneath his dusky cowl.
The flash of that dilating eye
Reveals too much of times gone by; 835
Though varying, indistinct its hue,
Oft will his glance the gazer rue,
For in it lurks that nameless spell,
Which speaks, itself unspeakable,
A spirit yet unquell'd and high, 840
That claims and keeps ascendancy;
And like the bird whose pinions quake,
But cannot fly the gazing snake,
Will others quail beneath his look,
Nor 'scape the glance they scarce can 845
brook.

From him the half-affrighted Friar
When met alone would fain retire,
As if that eye and bitter smile
Transferr'd to others fear and guile:
Not oft to smile descendeth he, 850
And when he doth 'tis sad to see
That he but mocks at Misery.
How that pale lip will curl and quiver!
Then fix once more as if for ever;
As if his sorrow or disdain 855
Forbade him e'er to smile again.
Well were it so—such ghastly mirth
From joyaunce ne'er derived its birth.
But sadder still it were to trace
What once were feelings in that face: 860
Time hath not yet the features fix'd,
But brighter traits with evil mix'd;
And there are hues not always faded,
Which speak a mind not all degraded
Even by the crimes through which it 865
waded:

The common crowd but see the gloom
Of wayward deeds, and fitting doom;
The close observer can espy
A noble soul, and lineage high:
Alas! though both bestow'd in vain, 870
Which Grief could change, and Guilt could stain,

It was no vulgar tenement
To which such lofty gifts were lent,
And still with little less than dread
On such the sight is riveted. 875
The roofless cot, decay'd and rent,
Will scarce delay the passer by;
The tower by war or tempest bent,
While yet may frown one battlement,
Demands and daunts the stranger's 880
eye;

Each ivied arch, and pillar lone,
Pleads haughtily for glories gone!

His floating robe around him folding,
Slow sweeps he through the column'd
aisle;
With dread beheld, with gloom behold-
ing 885
The rites that sanctify the pile.
But when the anthem shakes the choir,
And kneel the monks, his steps retire;

By yonder lone and wavering torch
His aspect glares within the porch; 890
There will he pause till all is done—
And hear the prayer, but utter none.
See—by the half-illumin'd wall
His hood fly back, his dark hair fall,
That pale brow wildly wreathing round,
As if the Gorgon there had bound 896
The sablest of the serpent-braid
That o'er her fearful forehead stray'd:
For he declines the convent oath,
And leaves those locks unhallow'd growth
But wears our garb in all beside; 901
And, not from piety but pride,
Gives wealth to walls that never heard
Of his one holy vow nor word.
Lo!—mark ye, as the harmony 905
Peals louder praises to the sky,
That livid cheek, that stony air
Of mix'd defiance and despair!
Saint Francis, keep him from the shrine!
Else may we dread the wrath divine 910
Made manifest by awful sign.
If ever evil angel bore
The form of mortal, such he wore;
By all my hope of sins forgiven,
Such looks are not of earth nor heaven!'

To love the softest hearts are prone, 916
But such can ne'er be all his own;
Too timid in his woes to share,
Too meek to meet, or brave despair;
And sterner hearts alone may feel 920
The wound that time can never heal.
The rugged metal of the mine
Must burn before its surface shine,
But plunged within the furnace-flame,
It bends and melts—though still the 925
same;

Then temper'd to thy want, or will,
'Twill serve thee to defend or kill;
A breastplate for thine hour of need,
Or blade to bid thy foeman bleed;
But if a dagger's form it bear, 930
Let those who shape its edge beware!
Thus passion's fire, and woman's art,
Can turn and tame the sterner heart;
From these its form and tone are ta'en,
And what they make it, must remain, 935
But break—before it bend again.

If solitude succeed to grief,
Release from pain is slight relief;
The vacant bosom's wilderness 939
Might thank the pang that made it less.
We loathe what none are left to share:
Even bliss—'twere woe alone to bear;
The heart once thus left desolate
Must fly at last for ease—to hate.
It is as if the dead could feel 945
The icy worm around them steal,
And shudder, as the reptiles creep
To revel o'er their rotting sleep,

Without the power to scare away
The cold consumers of their clay! 950
It is as if the desert bird,

Whose beak unlocks her bosom's
stream

To still her famish'd nestlings' scream,
Nor mourns a life to them transferr'd,
Should rend her rash devoted breast, 955
And find them flown her empty nest.

The keenest pangs the wretched find
Are rapture to the dreary void,
The leafless desert of the mind,

The waste of feelings unemploy'd. 960
Who would be doom'd to gaze upon
A sky without a cloud or sun?

Less hideous far the tempest's roar
Than ne'er to brave the billows more—
Thrown, when the war of winds is o'er,
A lonely wreck on fortune's shore, 966
'Mid sullen calm, and silent bay,
Unseen to drop by dull decay;—
Better to sink beneath the shock
Than moulder piecemeal on the rock!

'Father! thy days have pass'd in peace,
'Mid counted beads, and countless
prayer;

To bid the sins of others cease,
Thyself without a crime or care,
Save transient ills that all must bear, 975
Has been thy lot from youth to age;
And thou wilt bless thee from the rage
Of passions fierce and uncontroll'd,
Such as thy penitents unfold,
Whose secret sins and sorrows rest 980
Within thy pure and pitying breast.
My days, though few, have pass'd below
In much of joy, but more of woe;
Yet still in hours of love or strife,
I've 'scaped the weariness of life: 985
Now leagu'd with friends, now grit by
foes.

I loathed the languor of repose.
Now nothing left to love or hate,
No more with hope or pride elate,
I'd rather be the thing that crawls 990
Most noxious o'er a dungeon's walls,
Than pass my dull, unvarying days,
Condemn'd to meditate and gaze.
Yet, lurks a wish within my breast
For rest—but not to feel 'tis rest. 995
Soon shall my fate that wish fulfil;

And I shall sleep without the dream
Of what I was, and would be still,

Dark as to thee my deeds may seem:
My memory now is but the tomb 1006
Of joys long dead; my hope, their doom:
Though better to have died with those
Than bear a life of lingering woes.
My spirit shrunk not to sustain
The searching throes of ceaseless pain;
Nor sought the self-accorded grave 1006
Of ancient fool and modern knave:

Yet death I have not fear'd to meet;
And in the field it had been sweet,
Had danger woo'd me on to move 1010
The slave of glory, not of love.

I've braved it—not for honour's boast;
I smile at laurels won or lost;

To such let others carve their way,
For high renown, or hireling pay: 1015

But place again before my eyes
Aught that I deem a worthy prize—

The maid I love, the man I hate—
And I will hunt the steps of fate,

To save or slay, as these require, 1020
Through rending steel and rolling fire:

Nor need'st thou doubt this speech from
one

Who would but do—what he hath done,
Death is but what the haughty brave,

The weak must bear, the wretch must crave; 1025

Then let life go to Him who gave:
I have not quail'd to danger's brow

When high and happy—need I now?

‘I loved her, Friar! nay, adored—
But these are words that all can use—

I proved it more in deed than word; 1031
There's blood upon that dinted sword.

A stain its steel can never lose:
'Twas shed for her, who died for me.

It warm'd the heart of one abhorr'd:
Nay, start not—no—nor bend thy knee.

Nor midst my sins such act record;
Thou wilt absolve me from the deed,

For he was hostile to thy creed!
The very name of Nazarene

Was wormwood to his Paynim spleen,
Ungrateful fool! since but for brands

Well wielded in some hardy hands,
And wounds by Galileans given,

The surest pass to Turkish heaven, 1045
For him his Houris still might wait

Impatient at the Prophet's gate.
I loved her—love will find its way

Through paths where wolves would fear
to prey:

And if it dares enough, 'twere hard 1050
If passion met not some reward—

THE GIAOUR

Howe'er deserved her doom might be,
Her treachery was truth to me;
To me she gave her heart, that all
Which tyranny can ne'er enthrall:
And I, alas! too late to save! 1070
Yet all I then could give, I gave,
'Twas some relief, our foe a grave.
His death sits lightly; but her fate
Has made me—what thou well may'st
hate.

His doom was seal'd—he knew it well,
Warn'd by the voice of stern Taheer, 1076
Deep in whose darkly boding ear
The deathshot peal'd of murder near
As filed the troop to where they fell!
He died too in the battle broil, 1080
A time that heeds nor pain nor toil;
One cry to Mahomet for aid,
One prayer to Alla all he made:
He knew and cross'd me in the fray—
I gazed upon him where he lay, 1085
And watch'd his spirit ebb away;
Though pierced like pard by hunter's steel,
He felt not half that now I feel.
I search'd, but vainly search'd, to find
The workings of a wounded mind; 1090
Each feature of that sullen corse
Betray'd his rage, but no remorse.
Oh, what had Vengeance given to trace Despair upon his dying face!
The late repentance of that hour, 1095
When Penitence hath lost her power
To tear one terror from the grave,
And will not soothe, and cannot save.

'The cold in clime are cold in blood,
Their love can scarce deserve the name;
But mine was like the lava flood 1101
That boils in Ætna's breast of flame.
I cannot prate in puling strain
Of ladye-love and beauty's chain: 1104
If changing cheek, and scorching vein,
Lips taught to writhe, but not complain,
If bursting heart, and madd'ning brain,
And daring deed, and vengeful steel,
And all that I have felt, and feel,
Betoken love—that love was mine, 1110
And shown by many a bitter sign.
'Tis true, I could not whine nor sigh,
I knew but to obtain or die.
I die—but first I have possess'd,
And come what may, I have been bless'd.
Shall I the doom I sought upbraid? 1116
No—reft of all, yet undismay'd
No—for the thought of Leila slain,
Give me the pleasure with the pain,
So would I live and love again. 1120
I grieve, but not, my holy guide!
For him who dies, but her who died:
She sleeps beneath the wandering wave—
Ah! had she but an earthly grave, 1124
This breaking heart and throbbing head
Should seek and share her narrow bed.

She was a form of life and light,
That, seen, became a part of sight;
And rose, where'er I turn'd mine eye,
The Morning-star of Memory! 1130

'Yes, Love indeed is light from heaven;
A spark of that immortal fire
With angels shared, by Alla given,
To lift from earth our low desire.
Devotion wafts the mind above, 1135
But Heaven itself descends in love;
A feeling from the Godhead caught,
To wean from self each sordid thought;
A Ray of him who form'd the whole;
A Glory circling round the soul! 1140
I grant my love imperfect, all
That mortals by the name miscall;
Then deem it evil, what thou wilt;
But say, oh say, hers was not guilt!
She was my life's unerring light: 1145
That quench'd, what beam shall break my
night?

Oh! would it shone to lead me still,
Although to death or deadliest ill!
Why marvel ye, if they who lose
This present joy, this future hope, 1150
No more with sorrow meekly cope;
In phrensy then their fate accuse;
In madness do those fearful deeds
That seem to add but guilt to woe?
Alas! the breast that inly bleeds 1155
Hath nought to dread from outward
blow:

Who falls from all he knows of bliss,
Cares little into what abyss.
Fierce as the gloomy vulture's now
To thee, old man, my deeds appear:
I read abhorrence on thy brow, 1161
And this too was I born to bear!
'Tis true, that, like that bird of prey,
With havoc have I mark'd my way:
But this was taught me by the dove, 1165
To die—and know no second love.
This lesson yet hath man to learn,
Taught by the thing he dares to spurn:
The bird that sings within the brake,
The swan that swims upon the lake, 1170
One mate, and one alone, will take.
And let the fool still prone to range,
And sneer on all who cannot change,
Partake his jest with boasting boys;
I envy not his varied joys, 1175
But deem such feeble, heartless man
Less than yon solitary swan;
Far, far beneath the shallow maid
He left believing and betray'd. 1179
Such shame at least was never mine—
Leila! each thought was only thine!
My good, my guilt, my weal, my woe,
My hope on high—my all below.
Earth holds no other like to thee,
Or, if it doth, in vain for me: 1185
For worlds I dare not view the dame Resembling thee, yet not the same.

The very crimes that mar my youth,
This bed of death—attest my truth!
'Tis all too late—thou wert, thou art
The cherish'd madness of my heart! 1191

'And she was lost—and yet I breathed,
But not the breath of human life:
A serpent round my heart was wreathed,
And stung my every thought to strife.
Alike all time, abhorr'd all place, 1196
Shuddering I shrunk from Nature's face,
Where every hue that charm'd before
The blackness of my bosom wore.
The rest thou dost already know, 1200
And all my sins, and half my woe.
But talk no more of penitence;
Thou seest I soon shall part from hence;
And if thy holy tale were true, 1204
The deed that's done canst thou undo?
Think me not thankless—but this grief
Looks not to priesthood for relief.
My soul's estate in secret guess:
But wouldst thou pity more, say less.
When thou canst bid my Leila live, 1210
Then will I sue thee to forgive;
Then plead my cause in that high place
Where purchased masses proffer grace.
Go, when the hunter's hand hath wrung
From forest-cave her shrieking young,
And calm the lonely lioness: 1216
But soothe not—mock not my distress!

'In earlier days, and calmer hours,
When heart with heart delights to blend,
Where bloom my native valley's bowers,
I had—Ah! have I now?—a friend!
To him this pledge I charge thee send,
Memorial of a youthful vow; 1223
I would remind him of my end:
Though souls absorb'd like mine allow Brief thought to distant friendship's claim,
Yet dear to him my blighted name. 1227
'Tis strange—he prophesied my doom,
And I have smiled—I then could smile—
When Prudence would his voice assume,
And warn—I reck'd not what—the
while: 1231

But now remembrance whispers o'er
Those accents scarcely mark'd before.
Say—that his bodings came to pass,
And he will start to hear their truth,
And wish his words had not been sooth:
Tell him, unheeding as I was, 1237
Through many a busy bitter scene
Of all our golden youth had been,
In pain, my faltering tongue had tried
To bless his memory ere I died; 1241
But Heaven in wrath would turn away
If Guilt should for the guiltless pray.
I do not ask him not to blame,
Too gentle he to wound my name; 1245
And what have I to do with fame?
I do not ask him not to mourn,
Such cold request might sound like scorn;

And what than friendship's manly tear
May better grace a brother's bier? 1250
But bear this ring, his own of old,
And tell him—what thou dost behold!
The wither'd frame, the ruin'd mind,
The wrack by passion left behind,
A shrivell'd scroll, a scatter'd leaf, 1255
Sear'd by the autumn blast of grief!

'Tell me no more of fancy's gleam,
No, father, no, 'twas not a dream;
Alas! the dreamer first must sleep,—
I only watch'd, and wish'd to weep, 1260
But could not, for my burning brow
Throbb'd to the very brain as now:
I wish'd but for a single tear,
As something welcome, new, and dear:
I wish'd it then, I wish it still; 1265
Despair is stronger than my will.
Waste not thine orison, despair
Is mightier than thy pious prayer:
I would not, if I might, be blest;
I want no paradise, but rest. 1270
'Twas then, I tell thee, father! then
I saw her; yes, she lived again;
And shining in her white symar,
As through yon pale gray cloud the
star
Which now I gaze on, as on her, 1275
Who look'd and looks far lovelier;
Dimly I view its trembling spark;
To-morrow's night shall be more dark;
And I, before its rays appear,
That lifeless thing the living fear. 1280
I wander, father! for my soul
Is fleeing towards the final goal.
I saw her, friar! and I rose
Forgetful of our former woes; 1284
And rushing from my couch, I dart,
And clasp her to my desperate heart;
I clasp—what is it that I clasp?
No breathing form within my grasp,
No heart that beats reply to mine—
Yet, Leila! yet the form is thine! 1290
And art thou, dearest, changed so much
As meet my eye, yet mock my touch?
Ah! were thy beauties e'er so cold,
I care not so my arms enfold
The all they ever wish'd to hold. 1295
Alas! around a shadow prest
They shrink upon my lonely breast;
Yet still 'tis there! In silence stands,
And beckons with beseeching hands!
With braided hair, and bright-black eye—
I knew 'twas false—she could not die!
But he is dead! within the dell 1302
I saw him buried where he fell;
He comes not, for he cannot break
From earth; why then art thou awake?
They told me wild waves roll'd above
The face I view, the form I love; 1307
They told me—'twas a hideous tale!—
I'd tell it, but my tongue would fail:

THE GIAOUR

If true, and from thine ocean-cave 1310
 Thou com'st to claim a calmer grave,
 Oh! pass thy dewy fingers o'er
 This brow that then will burn no more;
 Or place them on my hopeless heart:
 But, shape or shade! whate'er thou
 art,
 In mercy ne'er again depart! 1316
 Or farther with thee bear my soul
 Than winds can waft or waters roll!

'Such is my name, and such my tale.
 Confessor! to thy secret ear 1320

I breathe the sorrows I bewail,
 And thank thee for the generous tear
 This glazing eye could never shed.
 Then lay me with the humblest dead,
 And, save the cross above my head, 1325
 Be neither name nor emblem spread,
 By prying stranger to be read,
 Or stay the passing pilgrim's tread.'

He pass'd—nor of his name and race
 Hath left a token or a trace, 1330
 Save what the father must not say
 Who shrived him on his dying day:
 This broken tale was all we knew
 Of her he loved, or him he slew.

THE BRIDE OF ABYDOS

A TURKISH TALE,

'Had we never loved so kindly,
 Had we never loved so blindly,
 Never met or never parted,
 We had ne'er been broken-hearted.'—BURNS.

TO

THE RIGHT HON. LORD HOLLAND,

THIS TALE IS INSCRIBED,

WITH EVERY SENTIMENT OF REGARD AND RESPECT, BY HIS GRATEFULLY OBLIGED AND SINCERE FRIEND,

BYRON.

CANTO THE FIRST

I

Know ye the land where the cypress and myrtle
 Are emblems of deeds that are done in their clime?
 Where the rage of the vulture, the love of the turtle,
 Now melt into sorrow, now madden to
 crime!
 Know ye the land of the cedar and vine,
 Where the flowers ever blossom, the beams ever shine; 6
 Where the light wings of Zephyr, oppress'd with perfume,
 Wax faint o'er the gardens of Gúl in her
 bloom;
 Where the citron and olive are fairest of fruit,
 And the voice of the nightingale never is
 mute: 10
 Where the tints of the earth, and the hues of the sky,
 In colour though varied, in beauty may vie,

And the purple of ocean is deepest in dye;
 Where the virgins are soft as the roses they twine, 14
 And all, save the spirit of man, is divine?
 'Tis the clime of the East; 'tis the land of
 the Sun—
 Can he smile on such deeds as his children
 have done?
 Oh! wild as the accents of lovers' farewell
 Are the hearts which they bear, and the tales which they tell.

II

Begirt with many a gallant slave, 20
 Apparell'd as becomes the brave,
 Awaiting each his lord's behest
 To guide his steps, or guard his rest,
 Old Giafir sate in his Divan: 24
 Deep thought was in his aged eye;
 And though the face of Mussulman
 Not oft betrays to standers by
 The mind within, well skill'd to hide
 All but unconquerable pride,
 His pensive cheek and pondering brow
 Did more than he was wont avow. 31

III

'Let the chamber be clear'd.'—The train disappear'd.—

'Now call me the chief of the Haram
guard.'

With Giaffir is none but his only son,
And the Nubian awaiting the sire's award. 35

'Haroun—when all the crowd that
wait

Are pass'd beneath the outer gate, (Woe to the head whose eye beheld
My child Zuleika's face unveil'd!) Hence, lead my daughter from her
tower; 40

Her fate is fix'd this very hour:
Yet not to her repeat my thought;
By me alone be duty taught!'

'Pacha! to hear is to obey.' 44

No more must slave to despot say—
Then to the tower had ta'en his way,

But here young Selim silence brake,
First lowly rendering reverence meet;

And downcast look'd, and gently spake,
Still standing at the Pacha's feet:

For son of Moslem must expire, 51
Ere dare to sit before his sire!

'Father! for fear that thou shouldst
chide

My sister, or her sable guide, 54

Know—for the fault, if fault there be,
Was mine, then fall thy frowns on me—

So lovelily the morning shone,

That—let the old and weary sleep—
I could not; and to view alone 59

The fairest scenes of land and deep,
With none to listen and reply

To thoughts with which my heart beat
high

Were irksome—for whate'er my mood,
In sooth I love not solitude;

I on Zuleika's slumber broke, 65

And, as thou knowest that for me

Soon turns the Haram's grating key,

Before the guardian slaves awoke

We to the cypress groves had flown,

And made earth, main, and heaven our
own! 70

There linger'd we, beguiled too long

With Mejnoun's tale, or Sadi's song;

Till I, who heard the deep tambour

Beat thy Divan's approaching hour,

To thee, and to my duty true, 75

Warn'd by the sound, to greet thee flew:

But there Zuleika wanders yet—

Nay, Father, rage not—nor forget

That none can pierce that secret bower

But those who watch the women's tower.' 80

IV

'Son of a slave'—the Pacha said—

'From unbelieving mother bred,

Vain were a father's hope to see
Aught that beseems a man in thee.

Thou, when thine arm should bend the
bow, 85

And hurl the dart, and curb the steed,
Thou, Greek in soul if not in creed,

Must pore where babbling waters flow,
And watch unfolding roses blow.

Would that yon orb, whose matin glow
Thy listless eyes so much admire, 91

Would lend thee something of his fire!

Thou, who wouldst see this battlement
By Christian cannon piecemeal rent;

Nay, tamely view old Stambol's wall
Before the dogs of Moscow fall, 96

Nor strike one stroke for life and death
Against the curs of Nazareth!

Go—let thy less than woman's hand
Assume the distaff—not the brand.

But, Haroun!—to my daughter speed;
And hark—of thine own head take
heed— 102

If thou see'st yon bow—it hath a string!'

V

No sound from Selim's lip was heard,
At least that met old Giaffir's ear,

But every frown and every word 107
Pierced keener than a Christian's sword.

'Son of a slave!—reproach'd with fear!
Those gibes had cost another dear.

Son of a slave!—and who my sire?'
Thus held his thoughts their dark
career;

And glances ev'n of more than ire
Flash forth, then faintly disappear.

Old Giaffir gazed upon his son 115

And started; for within his eye
He read how much his wrath had done;

He saw rebellion there begun:
'Come hither, boy—what, no reply?

I mark thee—and I know thee too; 120
But there be deeds thou dar'st not do:

But if thy beard had manlier length,
And if thy hand had skill and strength,

I'd joy to see thee break a lance,
Albeit against my own perchance.' 125

As sneeringly these accents fell,
On Selim's eye he fiercely gazed:

That eye return'd him glance for
glance,

And proudly to his sire's was raised,
Till Giaffir's quail'd and shrunk askance— 130

And why—he felt, but durst not tell.
'Much I misdoubt this wayward boy

Will one day work me more annoy:
I never loved him from his birth,

And—but his arm is little worth, 135
And scarcely in the chase could cope

With timid fawn or antelope,
Far less would venture into strife

Where man contends for fame and life—

I would not trust that look or tone: 140

No—nor the blood so near my own.

That blood—he hath not heard—no more—

I'll watch him closer than before.

He is an Arab to my sight, 144

Or Christian crouching in the fight—

But hark!—I hear Zuleika's voice;

Like Houris' hymn it meets mine ear:

She is the offspring of my choice;

Oh! more than ev'n her mother dear,

With all to hope, and nought to fear—

My Peri! ever welcome here! 151

Sweet, as the desert fountain's wave

To lips just cool'd in time to save—

Such to my longing sight art thou;

Nor can they waft to Mecca's shrine

More thanks for life, than I for thine,

Who blest thy birth and bless thee now.'

VI

Fair, as the first that fell of womankind,
When on that dread yet lovely serpent
smiling,

Whose image then was stamp'd upon her
mind— 160

But once beguil'd—and ever more beguiting;

Dazzling, as that, oh! too transcendent
vision

To Sorrow's phantom-peopled slumber
given,

When heart meets heart again in dreams
Elysian,

And paints the lost on Earth revived in
Heaven; 165

Soft, as the memory of buried love;

Pure, as the prayer which Childhood
wafts above,

Was she—the daughter of that rude old
Chief,

Who met the maid with tears—but not of
grief.

Who hath not proved how feebly words
essay 170

To fix one spark of Beauty's heavenly ray?

Who doth not feel, until his failing sight

Faints into dimness with its own delight,

His changing cheek, his sinking heart
confess 174

The might, the majesty of Loveliness?

Such was Zuleika, such around her shone

The nameless charms unmark'd by her
alone—

The light of love, the purity of grace,

The mind, the Music breathing from her
face,

The heart whose softness harmonized the
whole, 180

And oh! that eye was in itself a Soul!

Her graceful arms in meekness bending

Across her gently-budding breast;

At one kind word those arms extending

To clasp the neck of him who blest

His child caressing and carest, 186

Zuleika came—and Giaffir felt

His purpose half within him melt:

Not that against her fancied weal

His heart though stern could ever feel;

Affection chain'd her to that heart; 191

Ambition tore the links apart.

'Zuleika! child of gentleness!

How dear this very day must tell,

When I forget my own distress, 195

In losing what I love so well,

To bid thee with another dwell:

Another! and a braver man

Was never seen in battle's van.

We Moslem reck not much of blood; 200

But yet the line of Carasman

Unchanged, unchangeable hath stood

First of the bold Timariot bands

That won and well can keep their lands.

Enough that he who comes to woo

Is kinsman of the Bey Oglou: 206

His years need scarce a thought employ:

I would not have thee wed a boy.

And thou shalt have a noble dower:

And his and my united power 210

Will laugh to scorn the death-firman,

Which others tremble but to scan,

And teach the messenger what fate

The bearer of such boon may wait.

And now thou know'st thy father's

will: 215

All that thy sex hath need to know:

'Twas mine to teach obedience still—

The way to love, thy lord may show.'

VIII

In silence bow'd the virgin's head:

And if her eye was fill'd with tears

That stifled feeling dare not shed, 221

And changed her cheek from pale to red,

And red to pale, as through her ears

Those winged words like arrows sped,

What could such be but maiden
fears? 225

So bright the tear in Beauty's eye,

Love half regrets to kiss it dry;

So sweet the blush of Bashfulness,

Even Pity scarce can wish it less!

Whate'er it was the sire forgot; 230

Or if remember'd, mark'd it not;

Thrice clapp'd his hands, and call'd his
steed,

Resign'd his gem-adorn'd chibouque,

And mounting featly for the mead,

With Maugrabee and Mamaluke,
 His way amid his Delis took, 236
 To witness many an active deed
 With sabre keen, or blunt jerreed.
 The Kislar only and his Moors
 Watch well the Haram's massy doors.

IX

His head was leant upon his hand, 241
 His eye look'd o'er the dark blue
 water

That swiftly glides and gently swells
 Between the winding Dardanelles;
 But yet he saw nor sea nor strand, 245
 Nor even his Pacha's turban'd band

Mix in the game of mimic slaughter,
 Careering cleave the folded felt,
 With sabre stroke right sharply dealt;
 Nor mark'd the javelin-darting crowd
 Nor heard their Ollahs wild and loud—
 He thought but of old Giaffir's daughter! 252

X

No word from Selim's bosom broke;
 One sigh Zuleika's thoughts bespoke:
 Still gazed he through the lattice grate,
 Pale, mute, and mournfully sedate. 256
 To him Zuleika's eyes was turn'd,
 But little from his aspect learn'd:
 Equal her grief, yet not the same;
 Her heart confess'd a gentler flame: 260
 But yet that heart, alarm'd or weak,
 She knew not why, forbade to speak.
 Yet speak she must—but when essay?
 'How strange he thus should turn away!
 Not thus we e'er before have met; 265
 Nor thus shall be our parting yet.'
 Thrice paced she slowly through the
 room,

And watch'd his eye—it still was fix'd:
 She snatch'd the urn wherein was
 mix'd

The Persian Atar-gul's perfume, 270
 And sprinkled all its odours o'er
 The pictured roof and marble floor:
 The drops, that through his glittering vest

The playful girl's appeal address'd,
 Unheeded o'er his bosom flew, 275
 As if that breast were marble too.
 'What, sullen yet? it must not be—
 Oh! gentle Selim, this from thee!'
 She saw in curious order set

The fairest flowers of eastern land—
 'He loved them once; may touch them
 yet, 281

If offer'd by Zuleika's hand.' The childish thought was hardly breathed

Before the rose was pluck'd and wreathed;

The next fond moment saw her seat
 Her fairy form at Selim's feet: 286

'This rose to calm my brother's cares
 A message from the Bulbul bears;
 It says to-night he will prolong
 For Selim's ear his sweetest song; 290
 And though his note is somewhat sad,
 He'll try for once a strain more glad,
 With some faint hope his alter'd lay
 May sing these gloomy thoughts away.

XI

'What! not receive my foolish flower?
 Nay then I am indeed unblest: 296
 On me can thus thy forehead lower?
 And know'st thou not who loves thee
 best?

Oh, Selim dear! oh, more than dearest!
 Say, is it me thou hat'st or fearest?
 Come, lay thy head upon my breast,
 And I will kiss thee into rest, Since words of mine, and songs must
 fail,

Ev'n from my fabled nightingale.
 I knew our sire at times was stern, 305
 But this from thee had yet to learn:
 Too well I know he loves thee not;
 But is Zuleika's love forgot?

Ah! deem I right? the Pacha's plan—
 This kinsman Bey of Carasman 310
 Perhaps may prove some foe of thine.
 If so, I swear by Mecca's shrine,—
 If shrines that ne'er approach allow
 To woman's step admit her vow,—
 Without thy free consent, command,
 The Sultan should not have my hand!
 Think'st thou that I could bear to part
 With thee, and learn to halve my heart?
 Ah! were I sever'd from thy side,
 Where were thy friend—and who my
 guide? 320

Years have not seen, Time shall not see,
 The hour that tears my soul from thee:
 Ev'n Azrael, from his deadly quiver

When flies that shaft, and fly it must,
 That parts all else, shall doom for ever
 Our hearts to undivided dust!' 326

XII

He lived, he breathed, he moved, he felt;

He raised the maid from where she knelt;

His trance was gone, his keen eye shone
 With thoughts that long in darkness
 dwelt; 330

With thoughts that burn—in rays that melt.

As the stream late conceal'd
 By the fringe of its willows,

When it rushes reveal'd
 In the light of its billows; 335

As the bolt bursts on high
 From the black cloud that bound it,
 Flash'd the soul of that eye

Through the long lashes round it.

A war-horse at the trumpet's sound,
 A lion roused by heedless hound, 347
 A tyrant waked to sudden strife
 By graze of ill-directed knife,
 Starts not to more convulsive life
 Than he, who heard that vow, dis-
 play'd, 345
 And all, before repress'd, betray'd:
 'Now thou art mine, for ever mine,
 With life to keep, and scarce with life
 resign;
 Now thou art mine, that sacred oath,
 Though sworn by one, hath bound us
 both. 350
 Yes, fondly, wisely hast thou done;
 That vow hath saved more heads than
 one:
 But blench not thou—thy simplest tress
 Claims more from me than tenderness;
 I would not wrong the slenderest hair
 That clusters round thy forehead fair,
 For all the treasures buried far 357
 Within the caves of Istakar.
 This morning clouds upon me lower'd,
 Reproaches on my head were shower'd,
 And Giaffir almost call'd me coward!
 Now I have motive to be brave; 362
 The son of his neglected slave,
 Nay, start not, 'twas the term he gave,
 May show, though little apt to vaunt,
 A heart his words nor deeds can daunt. 366
 His son, indeed!—yet, thanks to thee,
 Perchance I am, at least shall be;
 But let our plighted secret vow
 Be only known to us as now. 370
 I know the wretch who dares demand
 From Giaffir thy reluctant hand;
 More ill-got wealth, a meaner soul
 Holds not a Musselim's control:
 Was he not bred in Egripo? 375
 A viler race let Israel show!
 But let that pass—to none be told
 Our oath; the rest shall time unfold.
 To me and mine leave Osman Bey;
 I've partisans for peril's day: 380
 Think not I am what I appear;
 I've arms, and friends, and vengeance
 near.

XIII

'Think not thou art what thou appear-
 est!

My Selim, thou art sadly changed:
 This morn I saw thee gentlest, dearest;
 But now thou'rt from thyself estranged. 386
 My love thou surely knew'st before,
 It ne'er was less, nor can be more.
 To see thee, hear thee, near thee stay,
 And hate the night I know not why,
 Save 'hat we meet not but by day;
 With thee to live, with thee to die,
 I dare not to my hope deny:

Thy cheek, thine eyes, thy lips to kiss,
 Like this—and this—no more than
 this; 395
 For, Allah! sure thy lips are flame:
 What fever in thy veins is flushing?
 My own have nearly caught the same,
 At least I feel my cheek, too, blush-
 ing.
 To soothe thy sickness, watch thy health, 400
 Partake, but never waste thy wealth,
 Or stand with smiles unurmuring by,
 And lighten half thy poverty;
 Do all but close thy dying eye,
 For that I could not live to try; 405
 To these alone my thoughts aspire:
 More can I do? or thou require?
 But, Selim, thou must answer why
 We need so much of mystery?
 The cause I cannot dream nor tell, 410
 But be it, since thou say'st 'tis well;
 Yet what thou mean'st by "arms" and
 "friends,"
 Beyond my weaker sense extends.
 I meant that Giaffir should have heard
 The very vow I plighted thee; 415
 His wrath would not revoke my word:
 But surely he would leave me free.
 Can this fond wish seem strange in
 me,
 To be what I have ever been?
 What other hath Zuleika seen 420
 From simple childhood's earliest hour?
 What other can she seek to see
 Than thee, companion of her bower,
 The partner of her infancy?
 These cherish'd thoughts with life
 begun, 425
 Say, why must I no more avow?
 What change is wrought to make me
 shun
 The truth; my pride, and thine till
 now?
 To meet the gaze of stranger's eyes
 Our law, our creed, our God denies;
 Nor shall one wandering thought of
 mine 431
 At such, our Prophet's will, repine:
 No! happier made by that decree,
 He left me all in leaving thee.
 Deep were my anguish, thus compell'd
 To wed with one I ne'er beheld: 436
 This wherefore should I not reveal?
 Why wilt thou urge me to conceal?
 I know the Pacha's haughty mood
 To thee hath never boded good; 440
 And he so often storms at nought,
 Allah! forbid that e'er he ought!
 And why I know not, but within
 My heart concealment weighs like sin.
 If then such secrecy be crime, 445
 And such it feels while lurking here;
 Oh, Selim! tell me yet in time,
 Nor leave me thus to thoughts of fear.

Ah! yonder see the Tchocadar,
My father leaves the mimic war; 450
I tremble now to meet his eye—
Say, Selim, canst thou tell me why?’

XIV

‘Zuleika—to thy tower’s retreat
Betake thee—Giaffir I can greet:
And now with him I fain must prate
Of firmans, imposts, levies, state. 456
There’s fearful news from Danube’s
banks,
Our Vizier nobly thins his ranks,
For which the Giaour may give him
thanks!

Our Sultan hath a shorter way 460
Such costly triumph to repay.
But, mark me, when the twilight drum Hath warn’d the troops to food and
sleep,

Unto thy cell will Selim come: 464
Then softly from the Haram creep
Where we may wander by the deep:
Our garden battlements are steep;
Nor these will rash intruder climb
To list our words, or stint our time;
And if he doth, I want not steel 470
Which some have felt, and more may
feel.

Then shalt thou learn of Selim more Than thou hast heard or thought be-
fore:

Trust me, Zuleika—fear not me! 474
Thou know’st I hold a Haram key.’
‘Fear thee, my Selim! ne’er till now Did word like this——’

‘Delay not thou;

I keep the key—and Haroun’s guard
Have some, and hope of more reward.
To-night, Zuleika, thou shalt hear 480
My tale, my purpose, and my fear:
I am not, love! what I appear.’

CANTO THE SECOND

I

THE winds are high on Helle’s wave,
As on that night of stormy water
When Love, who sent, forgot to save
The young, the beautiful, the brave,
The lonely hope of Sestos’ daughter.
Oh! when alone along the sky 6
Her turret-torch was blazing high,
Though rising gale, and breaking foam,
And shrieking sea-birds warn’d him
home;

And clouds aloft and tides below, 10
With signs and sounds, forbade to go,
He could not see, he would not hear,
Or sound or sign foreboding fear;
His eye but saw that light of love,
The only star it hail’d above; 15
His ear but rang with Hero’s song,
‘Ye waves, divide not lovers long!’—

That tale is old, but love anew
May nerve young hearts to prove as true. 19

II

The winds are high, and Helle’s tide
Rolls darkly heaving to the main;
And Night’s descending shadows hide
That field with blood bedew’d in vain,
The desert of old Priam’s pride; 24
The tombs, sole relics of his reign,
All—save immortal dreams that could beguile
The blind old man of Scio’s rocky isle!

III

Oh! yet—for there my steps have been;
These feet have press’d the sacred
shore,
These limbs that buoyant wave hath
borne— 30
Minstrel! with thee to muse, to mourn,
To trace again those fields of yore,
Believing every hillock green
Contains no fabled hero’s ashes,
And that around the undoubted scene Thine own ‘broad Hellespont’ still dashes, 36
Be long my lot! and cold were he
Who there could gaze denying thee!

IV

The night hath closed on Helle’s
stream,
Nor yet hath risen on Ida’s hill 40
That moon, which shone on his high
theme:
No warrior chides her peaceful beam,
But conscious shepherds bless it still.
Their flocks are grazing on the mound
Of him who felt the Dardan’s arrow:
That mighty heap of gather’d ground
Which Ammon’s son ran proudly round
By nations raised, by monarchs crown’d,
Is now a lone and nameless barrow!
Within—thy dwelling-place how narrow! 50
Without—can only strangers breathe
The name of him that was beneath:
Dust long outlasts the storied stone;
But Thou—thy very dust is gone!

V

Late, late to-night will Dian cheer 55
The swain, and chase the boatman’s
fear;
Till then—no beacon on the cliff
May shape the course of struggling skiff;
The scatter’d lights that skirt the bay,
All, one by one, have died away; 60
The only lamp of this lone hour
Is glimmering in Zuleika’s tower.

Yes! there is light in that lone chamber,
And o'er her silken ottoman Are thrown the fragrant beads of amber, 65

O'er which her fairy fingers ran;
Near these, with emerald rays beset,
(How could she thus that gem forget?)
Her mother's sainted amulet,
Whereon engraved the Koorsee text, Could smooth this life, and win the next; 71

And by her comboloio lies
A Koran of illumined dyes;
And many a bright emblazon'd rhyme
By Persian scribes redeem'd from time;
And o'er those scrolls, not oft so
mute, 76

Reclines her now neglected lute;
And round her lamp of fretted gold Bloom flowers in urns of China's
mould;

The richest work of Iran's loom, 80
And Sheeraz' tribute of perfume;
All that can eye or sense delight

Are gather'd in that gorgeous room:
But yet it hath an air of gloom.
She, of this Peri cell the sprite, 85
What doth she hence, and on so rude
a night?

VI

Wrapt in the darkest sable vest,
Which none save noblest Moslem
wear,
To guard from winds of heaven the
breast

As heaven itself to Selim dear, 90
With cautious steps the thicket thread-
ing,

And starting oft, as through the glade
The gust its hollow moanings made,
Till on the smoother pathway tread-
ing,

More free her timid bosom beat, 95
The maid pursued her silent guide;
And though her terror urged retreat,
How could she quit her Selim's side?
How teach her tender lips to chide?

They reach'd at length a grotto, hewn
By nature, but enlarged by art, 101
Where oft her lute she wont to tune,
And oft her Koran con'd apart;
And oft in youthful reverie 104

She dream'd what Paradise might be:
Where woman's parted soul shall go
Her Prophet had disdain'd to show;
But Selim's mansion was secure,
Nor deem'd she, could he long endure
His boomer in other worlds of bliss 110
Without her, most beloved in this!
Oh! who so dear with him could dwell?
What Houri soothe him half so well?

VIII

Since last she visited the spot
Some change seem'd wrought within the grot: 115

It might be only that the night
Disguised things seen by better light:
That brazen ramp but dimly threw
A ray of no celestial hue;
But in a nook within the cell 120
Her eye on stranger objects fell.
There arms were piled, not such as
wild

The turban'd Delis in the field;
But brands of foreign blade and hilt,
And one was red—perchance with guilt! 125

Ah! how without can blood be spilt?
A cup too on the board was set
That did not seem to hold sherbet.
What may this mean? she turn'd to see
Her Selim—'Oh! can this be he?' 130

IX

His robe of pride was thrown aside,
His brow no high-crown'd turban
bore,

But in its stead a shawl of red,
Wreathed lightly round, his temples
wore: 134

That dagger, on whose hilt the gem
Were worthy of a diadem,
No longer glitter'd at his waist,
Where pistols unadorn'd were braced;
And from his belt a sabre swung, 139
And from his shoulder loosely hung
The cloak of white, the thin capote
That decks the wandering Candiote;
Beneath—his golden plated vest
Clung like a cuirass to his breast;
The greaves below his knee that wound With silvery scales were sheathed and
bound. 146

But were it not that high command
Spake in his eye, and tone, and hand,
All that a careless eye could see
In him was some young Galiongée.

X

'I said I was not what I seem'd; 151
And now thou see'st my words were
true:

I have a tale thou hast not dream'd,
If sooth—its truth must others rue.
My story now 'twere vain to hide, 155
I must not see thee Osman's bride:
But had not thine own lips declared
How much of that young heart I shared,
I could not, must not, yet have shown
The darker secret of my own. 160
In this I speak not now of love;
That, let time, truth, and peril prove:
But first—Oh! never wed another—Zuleika! I am not thy brother!'

XI

'Oh! not my brother!—yet unsay—
 God! am I left alone on earth 166
 To mourn—I dare not curse—the day
 That saw my solitary birth?
 Oh! thou wilt love me now no more!
 My sinking heart foreboded ill; 170
 But know me all I was before,
 Thy sister—friend—Zuleika still.
 Thou led'st me here perchance to kill;
 If thou hast cause for vengeance, see!
 My breast is offer'd—take thy fill! 175
 Far better with the dead to be
 Than live thus nothing now to thee!
 Perhaps far worse, for now I know
 Why Giaffir always seem'd thy foe;
 And I, alas! am Giaffir's child, 180
 For whom thou wert condemn'd, reviled.
 If not thy sister—wouldst thou save
 My life, oh! bid me be thy slave!'

XII

'My slave, Zuleika!—nay, I'm thine:
 But, gentle love, this transport calm.
 Thy lot shall yet be link'd with mine;
 I swear it by our Prophet's shrine,
 And be that thought thy sorrow's balm.

So may the Koran verse display'd
 Upon its steel direct my blade, 190
 In danger's hour to guard us both,
 As I preserve that awful oath!
 The name in which thy heart hath prided

Must change; but, my Zuleika, know,
 That tie is widen'd, not divided, 195
 Although thy Sire's my deadliest foe.
 My father was to Giaffir all

That Selim late was deem'd to thee:
 That brother wrought a brother's fall,
 But spared, at least, my infancy;

And lull'd me with a vain deceit 201
 That yet a like return may meet.

He rear'd me, not with tender help,
 But like the nephew of a Cain;
 He watch'd me like a lion's whelp, 205
 That gnaws and yet may break his
 chain.

My father's blood in every vein
 Is boiling; but for thy dear sake
 No present vengeance will I take;

Though here I must no more remain.
 But first, beloved Zuleika! hear 211
 How Giaffir wrought this deed of fear.

XIII

'How first their strife to rancour grew,
 If love or envy made them foes,
 It matters little if I knew; 215
 In fiery spirits, slights, though few
 And thoughtless, will disturb repose.
 In war Abdallah's arm was strong,
 Remember'd yet in Bosniac song,

And Paswan's rebel hordes attest 220
 How little love they bore such guest:
 His death is all I need relate,
 The stern effect of Giaffir's hate;
 And how my birth disclosed to me,
 Whate'er beside it makes, hath made me free. 225

XIV

'When Paswan, after years of strife,
 At last for power, but first for life,
 In Widdin's walls too proudly sate,
 Our Pachas rallied round the state;
 Nor last nor least in high command,
 Each brother led a separate band; 231
 They gave their horse-tails to the
 wind,

And mustering in Sophia's plain Their tents were pitch'd, their post
 assign'd;

To one, alas! assign'd in vain! 235
 What need of words! the deadly bowl,
 By Giaffir's order drugged and given,
 With venom subtle as his soul,

Dismiss'd Abdallah's hence to heaven.
 Reclined and feverish in the bath, 240
 He, when the hunter's sport was up,
 But little deem'd a brother's wrath

To quench his thirst had such a cup:

The bowl a bribed attendant bore;
 He drank one draught, nor needed
 more! 245

If thou my tale, Zuleika, doubt,
 Call Haroun—he can tell it out.

XV

'The deed once done, and Paswan's
 feud

In part suppress'd, though ne'er subdued, 249

Abdallah's Pachalick was gain'd:—
 Thou know'st not what in our Divan Can wealth procure for worse than
 man—

Abdallah's honours were obtain'd
 By him a brother's murder stain'd;
 'Tis true, the purchase nearly drain'd
 His ill-got treasure, soon replaced. 256 Wouldst question whence? Survey the
 waste,

And ask the squalid peasant how
 His gains repay his broiling brow!—

Why me the stern usurper spared, 260
 Why thus with me his palace shared,
 I know not. Shame, regret, remorse,

And little fear from infant's force;
 Besides, adoption as a son
 By him whom Heaven accorded none,
 Or some unknown cabal, caprice, 266
 Preserved me thus;—but not in peace:
 He cannot curb his haughty mood,
 Nor I forgive a father's blood.

XVI

'Within thy father's house are foes;
 Not all who break his bread are
 true: 271
 To these should I my birth disclose,
 His days, his very hours were few:
 They only want a heart to lead,
 A hand to point them to the deed. 275
 But Haroun only knows, or knew,
 This tale, whose close is almost nigh:
 He in Abdallah's palace grew,
 And held that post in his Serai
 Which holds he here—he saw him
 die: 280
 But what could single slavery do?
 Avenge his lord? alas! too late;
 Or save his son from such a fate?
 He chose the last, and when elate
 With foes subdued, or friends betray'd, 285
 Proud Giaffir in high triumph sate,
 He led me helpless to his gate,
 And not in vain it seems essay'd
 To save the life for which he pray'd.
 The knowledge of my birth secured
 From all and each, but most from
 me; 291
 Thus Giaffir's safety was insured.
 Removed he too from Roumelie
 To this our Asiatic side,
 Far from our seats by Danube's tide,
 With none but Haroun, who retains Such knowledge—and that Nubian feels
 A tyrant's secrets are but chains,
 From which the captive gladly steals,
 And this and more to me reveals: 300
 Such still to guilt just Allah sends—Slaves, tools, accomplices—no friends!

XVII

'All this, Zuleika, harshly sounds;
 But harsher still my tale must be:
 Howe'er my tongue thy softness
 wounds, 305
 Yet I must prove all truth to thee.
 I saw thee start this garb to see,
 Yet is it one I oft have worn,
 And long must wear: this Galiongée,
 To whom thy plighted vow is sworn,
 Is leader of those pirate hordes, 311 Whose laws and lives are on their swords;
 To hear whose desolating tale
 Would make thy waning cheek more
 pale:
 Those arms thou see'st my band have brought, 315
 The hands that wield are not remote;
 This cup too for the rugged knaves
 Is fill'd—once quaff'd, they ne'er repine:
 Our Prophet might forgive the slaves;
 They're only infidels in wine. 320

XVIII

'What could I be? Proscribed at home,
 And taunted to a wish to roam;
 And listless left—for Giaffir's fear
 Denied the courser and the spear—
 Though oft—Oh, Mahomet! how oft!—
 In full Divan the despot scoff'd, 326
 As if my weak unwilling hand
 Refused the bridle or the brand:
 He ever went to war alone, 329
 And pent me here untried—unknown;
 To Haroun's care with women left,
 By hope unblest, of fame bereft,
 While thou—whose softness long en-
 dear'd,
 Though it unmann'd me, still had cheer'd—
 To Brusa's walls for safety sent, 335
 Awaited'st there the field's event.
 Haroun, who saw my spirit pining
 Beneath inaction's sluggish yoke,
 His captive, though with dread resign-
 ing,
 My thralldom for a season broke,
 On promise to return before 341
 The day when Giaffir's charge was o'er.
 'Tis vain—my tongue cannot impart
 My almost drunkenness of heart,
 When first this liberated eye 345
 Survey'd Earth, Ocean, Sun, and Sky,
 As if my spirit pierced them through,
 And all their inmost wonders knew!
 One word alone can paint to thee
 That more than feeling—I was Free!
 E'en for thy presence ceased to pine;
 The World—nay, Heaven itself was
 mine!

XIX

'The shallop of a trusty Moor
 Convey'd me from this idle shore;
 I long'd to see the isles that gem 355
 Old Ocean's purple diadem:
 I sought by turns, and saw them all;
 But when and where I join'd the crew,
 With whom I'm pledged to rise or fall,
 When all that we design to do 360
 Is done, 'twill then be time more meet
 To tell thee, when the tale's complete.

XX

''Tis true, they are a lawless brood,
 But rough in form, nor mild in mood;
 And every creed, and every race, 365
 With them hath found—may find a
 place;
 But open speech, and ready hand,
 Obedience to their chief's command:
 A soul for every enterprise,
 That never sees with terror's eyes; 370
 Friendship for each, and faith to all,
 And vengeance vow'd for those who
 fall,

Have made them fitting instruments
 For more than ev'n my own intents.
 And some—and I have studied all 375
 Distinguish'd from the vulgar rank,
 But chiefly to my council call
 The wisdom of the cautious Frank—
 And some to higher thoughts aspire,
 The last of Lambro's patriots there Anticipated freedom share; 381
 And oft around the cavern fire
 On visionary schemes debate,
 To snatch the Rayahs from their fate.
 So let them ease their hearts with prate
 Of equal rights, which man ne'er knew;
 I have a love for freedom too. 387
 Ay! let me like the ocean-Patriarch roam,
 Or only know on land the Tartar's home!
 My tent on shore, my galley on the sea,
 Are more than cities and Serais to me:
 Borne by my steed, or wafted by my sail,
 Across the desert, or before the gale,
 Bound where thou wilt, my barb! or glide,
 my prow!
 But be the star that guides the wanderer,
 Thou! 395
 Thou, my Zuleika, share and bless my
 bark;
 The Dove of peace and promise to mine
 ark!
 Or, since that hope denied in worlds of
 strife,
 Be thou the rainbow to the storms of
 life!
 The evening beam that smiles the clouds
 away, 400
 And tints to-morrow with prophetic ray!
 Blest—as the Muezzin's strain from Mecca's wall
 To pilgrims pure and prostrate at his call;
 Soft—as the melody of youthful days,
 That steals the trembling tear of speechless praise; 405
 Dear—as his native song to Exile's ears,
 Shall sound each tone thy long-loved voice endears.
 For thee in those bright isles is built a bower
 Blooming as Aden in its earliest hour.
 A thousand swords, with Selim's heart and
 hand, 410
 Wait—wave—defend—destroy—at thy
 command!
 Girt by my band, Zuleika at my side,
 The spoil of nations shall bedeck my
 bride.
 The Haram's languid years of listless ease
 Are well resign'd for cares—for joys like
 these: 415
 Not blind to fate, I see, where'er I rove, Unnumber'd perils—but one only love!
 Yet well my toils shall that fond breast
 repay,
 Though fortune frown, or falser friends betray.

How dear the dream in darkest hours of
 ill, 420
 Should all be changed, to find thee faithful
 still!
 Be but thy soul, like Selim's, firmly shown;
 To thee be Selim's tender as thine own;
 To soothe each sorrow, share in each
 delight,
 Blend every thought, do all—but disunite!
 Once free, 'tis mine our horde again to
 guide; 426
 Friends to each other, foes to aught be-
 side:
 Yet there we follow but the bent assign'd
 By fatal Nature to man's warring kind:
 Mark! where his carnage and his conquests cease! 430
 He makes a solitude, and calls it—peace!
 I, like the rest, must use my skill or strength,
 But ask no land beyond my sabre's
 length:
 Power sways but by division—her resource 434
 The blest alternative of fraud or force!
 Ours be the last; in time deceit may come
 When cities cage us in a social home:
 There ev'n thy soul might err—how oft
 the heart
 Corruption shakes which peril could not
 part!
 And woman, more than man, when death or woe, 440
 Or even Disgrace, would lay her lover low,
 Sunk in the lap of Luxury will shame—
 Away suspicion!—not Zuleika's name!
 But life is hazard at the best; and here
 No more remains to win, and much to
 fear: 445
 Yes, fear! the doubt, the dread of losing
 thee,
 By Osman's power, and Giaffir's stern
 decree.
 That dread shall vanish with the favouring
 gale,
 Which Love to-night hath promised to my
 sail:
 No danger daunts the pair his smile hath
 blest, 450
 Their steps still roving, but their hearts at
 rest.
 With thee all toils are sweet, each clime
 hath charms;
 Earth—sea alike—our world within our arms!
 Ay—let the loud winds whistle o'er the
 deck,
 So that those arms cling closer round my neck: 455
 The deepest murmur of this lip shall be
 No sigh for safety, but a prayer for thee!
 The war of elements no fears impart
 To Love, whose deadliest bane is human
 Art:

There lie the only rocks our course can check; 460
Here moments menace—there are years
of wreck!
But hence ye thoughts that rise in Horror's
shape!
This hour bestows, or ever bars escape.
Few words remain of mine my tale to
close;
Of thine but one to waft us from our foes;
Yea—foes—to me will Giaffir's hate decline? 466
And is not Osman, who would part us,
thine?

XXI

'His head and faith from doubt and
death
Return'd in time my guard to save; Few heard, none told, that o'er the
wave 470
From isle to isle I roved the while;
And since, though parted from my band
Too seldom now I leave the land,
No deed they've done, nor deed shall
do,
Ere I have heard and doom'd it too:
I form the plan, decree the spoil, 476
'Tis fit I oftener share the toil.
But now too long I've held thine ear;
Time presses, floats my bark, and here
We leave behind but hate and fear.
To-morrow Osman with his train 481
Arrives—to-night must break thy chain:
And wouldst thou save that haughty
Bey,— Perchance his life who gave thee
thine,—
With me this hour away—away! 485
But yet, though thou art plighted
mine,
Wouldst thou recall thy willing vow,
Appall'd by truths imparted now,
Here rest I—not to see thee wed:
But be that peril on my head!' 490

XXII

Zuleika, mute and motionless,
Stood like that statue of distress,
When, her last hope for ever gone,
The mother harden'd into stone:
All in the maid that eye could see 495
Was but a younger Niobé.
But ere her lip, or even her eye,
Essay'd to speak, or look reply,
Beneath the garden's wicket porch 499
Far flashed on high a blazing torch!
Another—and another—and another—
'Oh! fly—no more—yet now my more than brother!'
Far, wide, through every thicket spread
The fearful lights are gleaming red;
Nor these alone—for each right hand
Is ready with a sheathless brand. 506

They part, pursue, return, and wheel
With searching flambeau, shining steel;
And last of all, his sabre waving,
Stern Giaffir in his fury raving: 510
And now almost they touch the cave—
Oh! must that grot be Selim's grave?

XXIII

Dauntless he stood—'Tis come—soon
past—
One kiss, Zuleika—'tis my last: 514
But yet my band not far from shore
May hear this signal, see the flash;
Yet now too few—the attempt were
rash:
No matter—yet one effort more.'
Forth to the cavern mouth he stept;
His pistol's echo rang on high, 520
Zuleika started not, nor wept, Despair benumb'd her breast and
eye!—
'They hear me not, or if they ply
Their oars, 'tis but to see me die;
That sound hath drawn my foes more
nigh.
Then forth my father's scimitar, 526
Thou ne'er hast seen less equal war!
Farewell, Zuleika!—sweet! retire:
Yet stay within—here linger safe,
At thee his rage will only chafe. 530
Stir not—lest even to thee perchance
Some erring blade or ball should glance.
Fear'st thou for him?—may I expire
If in this strife I seek thy sire! 534
No—though by him that poison pour'd;
No—though again he call me coward!
But tamely shall I meet their steel?
No—as each crest save his may feel!'

XXIV

One bound he made, and gain'd the sand:
Already at his feet hath sunk 540
The foremost of the prying band,
A gasping head, a quivering trunk:
Another falls—but round him close
A swarming circle of his foes; 544
From right to left his path he cleft,
And almost met the meeting wave:
His boat appears—not five oars'
length—
His comrades strain with desperate
strength—
Oh! are they yet in time to save?
His feet the foremost breakers lave;
His band are plunging in the bay, 551
Their sabres glitter through the spray;
Wet—wild—unwearied to the strand
They struggle—now they touch the
land!
They come—'tis but to add to slaughter— 555
His heart's best blood is on the water.

XXV

Escaped from shot, unharm'd by steel,
Or scarcely grazed its force to feel,
Had Selim won, betray'd, beset, 559
To where the strand and billows met;
There as his last step left the land—
And the last death-blow dealt his
hand—

Ah! wherefore did he turn to look
For her his eye but sought in vain?
That pause, that fatal gaze he took,
Hath doom'd his death, or fix'd his
chain. 566

Sad proof, in peril and in pain,
How late will Lover's hope remain!
His back was to the dashing spray;
Behind, but close, his comrades lay, 570
When, at the instant, hiss'd the ball—
'So may the foes of Giaffir fall!'
Whose voice is heard? whose carbine rang?

Whose bullet through the night-air sang,
Too nearly, deadly aim'd to err? 575
'Tis thine—Abdallah's Murderer!
The father slowly rued thy hate,
The son hath found a quicker fate:
Fast from his breast the blood is bubbling,
The whiteness of the sea-foam troubling— 580

If aught his lips essay'd to groan,
The rushing billows choked the tone!

XXVI

Morn slowly rolls the clouds away;
Few trophies of the fight are there:
The shouts that shook the midnight-bay
Are silent; but some signs of fray 586

That strand of strife may bear,
And fragments of each shiver'd brand;
Steps stamp'd; and dash'd into the sand
The print of many a struggling hand
May there be mark'd; nor far remote
A broken torch, an oarless boat;
And tangled on the weeds that heap
The beach where shelving to the deep
There lies a white capote! 595
'Tis rent in twain—one dark-red stain
The wave yet ripples o'er in vain;
But where is he who wore?

Ye! who would o'er his relics weep,
Go, seek them where the surges sweep
Their burthen round Sigæum's steep
And cast on Lemnos' shore:

The sea-birds shriek above the prey,
O'er which their hungry beaks delay,
As shaken on his restless pillow, 605
His head heaves with the heaving
billow;

That hand, whose motion is not life,
Yet feebly seems to menace strife,
Flung by the tossing tide on high,

Then level'd with the wave— 610
What recks it, though that corse shall lie
Within a living grave?
The bird that tears that prostrate form
Hath only robb'd the meaner worm;
The only heart, the only eye 615
Had bled or wept to see him die,
Had seen those scatter'd limbs composed,
And mourn'd above his turban-stone,
That heart hath burst—that eye was closed—
Yea—closed before his own! 620

XXVII

By Helle's stream there is a voice of wail!
And woman's eye is wet—man's cheek is
pale:

Zuleika! last of Giaffir's race,
Thy destined lord is come too late:
He sees not—ne'er shall see thy face!
Can he not hear 626

The loud Wul-wulleh warn his distant ear?
Thy handmaids weeping at the gate,
The Koran-chanters of the hymn of fate,
The silent slaves with folded arms that
wait, 630

Sighs in the hall, and shrieks upon the gale,
Tell him thy tale!
Thou didst not view thy Selim fall!
That fearful moment when he left the
cave

Thy heart grew chill: 635
He was thy hope—thy joy—thy love—
thine all,

And that last thought on him thou couldst not save

Sufficed to kill;
Burst forth in one wild cry—and all was
still,
Peace to thy broken heart, and virgin
grave! 640

Ah! happy! but of life to lose the worst!
That grief—though deep—though fatal—was thy first!

Thrice happy ne'er to feel nor fear the force
Of absence, shame, pride, hate, revenge, remorse!

And, oh! that pang where more than madness lies! 645

The worm that will not sleep—and never
dies;

Thought of the gloomy day and ghastly
night,

That dreads the darkness, and yet loathes
the light,

That winds around, and tears the quivering heart!

Ah! wherefore not consume it—and de-
part! 650

Woe to thee, rash and unrelenting chief!
Vainly thou heap'st the dust upon thy
head,
Vainly the sackcloth o'er thy limbs dost
spread:

By that same hand Abdallah—Selim
bled,
Now let it tear thy beard in idle grief:
Thy pride of heart, thy bride for Osman's
bed, 656
She, whom thy sultan had but seen to
wed,

Thy Daughter's dead!
Hope of thine age, thy twilight's lonely
beam,
The Star hath set that shone on Helle's
stream. 660
What quench'd its ray?—the blood that thou hast shed!
Hark! to the hurried question of Despair:
'Where is my child?'—an Echo answers—
'Where?'

XXVIII

Within the place of thousand tombs
That shine beneath, while dark above
The sad but living cypress glooms 666
And withers not, though branch and
leaf

Are stamp'd with an eternal grief,
Like early unrequited Love,
One spot exists, which ever blooms,
Ev'n in that deadly grove— 671

A single rose is shedding there
Its lonely lustre, meek and pale:
It looks as planted by Despair—
So white—so faint—the slightest gale
Might whirl the leaves on high; 676
And yet, though storms and blight
assail,

And hands more rude than wintry sky
May wring it from the stem—in
vain—

To-morrow sees it bloom again: 680
The stalk some spirit gently rears,
And waters with celestial tears;

For well may maids of Helle deem
That this can be no earthly flower,
Which mocks the tempest's withering
hour, 685

And buds unshelter'd by a bower;
Nor droops though Spring refuse her
shower,
Nor woos the summer beam:

To it the livelong night there sings
A bird unseen—but not remote: 691
Invisible his airy wings,
But soft as harp that Houri strings
His long entrancing note!
It were the Bulbul; but his throat,
Though mournful, pours not such a
strain: 695

For they who listen cannot leave
The spot, but linger there and grieve,
As if they loved in vain!
And yet so sweet the tears they shed,
'Tis sorrow so unmix'd with dread,
They scarce can bear the morn to break
That melancholy spell,
And longer yet would weep and wake,
He sings so wild and well!
But when the day-blush bursts from
high 705

Expires that magic melody.
And some have been who could believe,
(So fondly youthful dreams deceive, Yet harsh be they that blame,)
That note so piercing and profound
Will shape and syllable its sound 711
Into Zuleika's name.

'Tis from her cypress summit heard,
That melts in air the liquid word:
'Tis from her lowly virgin earth 715
That white rose takes its tender birth.
There late was laid a marble stone;
Eve saw it placed—the Morrow gone!
It was no mortal arm that bore
That deep-fix'd pillar to the shore;
For there, as Helle's legends tell, 721
Next morn 'twas found where Selim fell; Lash'd by the tumbling tide, whose
wave

Denied his bones a holier grave:
And there by night, reclin'd, 'tis said,
Is seen a ghastly turban'd head: 726
And hence extended by the billow,
'Tis named the 'Pirate-phantom's
pillow!'

Where first it lay that mourning flower
Hath flourish'd; flourisheth this hour,
Alone and dewy, coldly pure and pale;
As weeping Beauty's cheek at Sorrow's tale! 732

THE CORSAIR

A TALE

———'I suoi pensieri in lui dormir non ponno.'
TASSO, Gerusalemme Liberata, canto x.

TO

THOMAS MOORE, ESQ.

MY DEAR MOORE,

I DEDICATE to you the last production with which I shall trespass on public patience, and your indulgence, for some years; and I own that I feel anxious to avail myself of this latest and only opportunity of adorning my pages with a name, consecrated by unshaken public principle, and the most undoubted and various talents. While Ireland ranks you among the firmest of her patriots; while you stand alone the first of her bards in her estimation, and Britain repeats and ratifies the decree, permit me, whose only regret, since our first acquaintance, has been the years he had lost before it commenced, to add the humble but sincere suffrage of friendship to the voice of more than one nation. It will at least prove to you, that I have neither forgotten the gratification derived from your society, nor abandoned the prospect of its renewal, whenever your leisure or inclination allows you to atone to your friends for too long an absence. It is said among those friends, I trust truly, that you are engaged in the composition of a poem whose scene will be laid in the East; none can do those scenes so much justice. The wrongs of your own country, the magnificent and fiery spirit of her sons, the beauty and feeling of her daughters, may there be found; and Collins, when he denominated his Oriental his Irish Eclogues, was not aware how true, at least, was a part of his parallel. Your imagination will create a warmer sun, and less clouded sky; but wildness, tenderness, and originality, are part of your national claim of oriental descent, to which you have already thus far proved your title more clearly than the most zealous of your country's antiquarians.

May I add a few words on a subject on which all men are supposed to be fluent, and none agreeable?—Self. I have written much, and published more than enough to demand a longer silence than I now meditate; but, for some years to come, it is my intention to tempt no further the award of 'Gods, men, nor columns.' In the present composition I have attempted not the most difficult, but, perhaps the best adapted measure to our language, the good old and now neglected heroic couplet. The stanza of Spenser is perhaps too slow and dignified for narrative; though, I confess, it is the measure most after my own heart: Scott alone, of the present generation, has hitherto completely triumphed over the fatal facility of the octo-syllabic verse; and this is not the least victory of his fertile and mighty genius: in blank verse, Milton, Thomson, and our dramatists, are the beacons that shine along the deep, but warn us from the rough and barren rock on which they are kindled. The heroic couplet is not the most popular measure certainly; but as I did not deviate into the other from a wish to flatter what is called public opinion, I shall quit it without further apology, and take my chance once more with that versification, in which I have hitherto published nothing but compositions whose former circulation is part of my present, and will be of my future regret.

With regard to my story, and stories in general, I should have been glad to have rendered my personages more perfect and amiable, if possible, inasmuch as I have been sometimes criticised, and considered no less responsible for their deeds and qualities than if all had been personæ. Be it so—if I have deviated into the gloomy vanity of 'drawing from self,' the pictures are probably like, since they are unfavourable; and if not, those who know me are undeceived, and those who do not, I have little interest in undeceiving. I have no particular desire that any but my acquaintance should think the author better than the beings of his imagining; but I cannot help a little surprise, and perhaps amusement, at some odd critical exceptions in the present instance, when I see several bards (far more deserving, I allow) in very reputable plight, and quite exempted from all participation in the faults of those heroes, who, nevertheless, might be found with little more morality than 'The Giaour,' and perhaps—but no—I must admit Childe Harold to be a very repulsive personage; and as to his identity, those who like it must give him whatever 'alias' they please.

If, however, it were worth while to remove the impression, it might be of some service to me, that the man who is alike the delight of his readers and his friends, the poet of all circles, and the idol of his own, permits me here and elsewhere to subscribe myself,

Most truly,

And affectionately,

His obedient servant,

BYRON.

THE CORSAIR

CANTO THE FIRST

'—nessun maggior dolore,
Che ricordarsi del tempo felice
Nelle miseria,——'—DANTE.

I

'O'ER the glad waters of the dark blue
sea,
Our thoughts as boundless, and our souls
as free,
Far as the breeze can bear, the billows
foam,
Survey our empire, and behold our home!
These are our realms, no limits to their
sway—
Our flag the sceptre all who meet obey. 5
Ours the wild life in tumult still to range
From toil to rest, and joy in every change.
Oh, who can tell? not thou, luxurious
slave!
Whose soul would sicken o'er the heaving
wave; 10
Not thou, vain lord of wantonness and
ease!
Whom slumber soothes not—pleasure cannot please—
Oh, who can tell, save he whose heart hath tried,
And danced in triumph o'er the waters
wide,
The exulting sense—the pulse's maddening play, 15
That thrills the wanderer of that trackless
way?
That for itself can woo the approaching
fight,
And turn what some deem danger to de-
light;
That seeks what cravens shun with more than zeal, 19
And where the feebler faint can only feel—
Feel—to the rising bosom's inmost core,
Its hope awaken and its spirit soar?
No dread of death if with us die our foes—
Save that it seems even duller than re-
pose:
Come when it will—we snatch the life of
life— 25
When lost—what reck's it but disease or
strife?
Let him who crawls enamour'd of decay,
Cling to his couch, and sicken years away:
Heave his thick breath, and shake his palsied head;
Ours—the fresh turf, and not the feverish
bed. 30
While gasp by gasp he falters forth his
soul,
Ours with one pang—one bound—escapes
control.

His corse may boast its urn and narrow
cave,
And they who loath'd his life may gild his
grave:
Ours are the tears, though few, sincerely
shed, 35
When Ocean shrouds and sepulchres our
dead.
For us, even banquets fond regret supply
In the red cup that crowns our memory;
And the brief epitaph in danger's day,
When those who win at length divide the
prey, 40
And cry, Remembrance saddening o'er each brow,
How had the brave who fell exulted now!'

II

Such were the notes that from the Pirate's
isle
Around the kindling watch-fire rang the
while:
Such were the sounds that thrill'd the rocks along, 45
And unto ears as rugged seem'd a song!
In scatter'd groups upon the golden sand,
They game—carouse—converse—or whet
the brand:
Select the arms—to each his blade assign,
And careless eye the blood that dims its
shine, 50
Repair the boat, replace the helm or oar, While others straggling muse along the
shore;
For the wild bird the busy springes set,
Or spread beneath the sun the dripping
net;
Gaze where some distant sail a speck
supplies, 55
With all the thirsting eye of Enterprise;
Tell o'er the tales of many a night of toil,
And marvel where they next shall seize a
spoil:
No matter where—their chief's allotment
this;
Theirs, to believe no prey nor plan amiss.
But who that CHIEF? his name on every
shore 61
Is famed and fear'd—they ask and know
no more.
With these he mingles not but to command;
Few are his words, but keen his eye and
hand.
Ne'er seasons he with mirth their jovial
mess, 65
But they forgive his silence for success.
Ne'er for his lip the purpling cup they
fill,
That goblet passes him untasted still—

And for his fare—the rudest of his crew
Would that, in turn, have pass'd untasted
too; 70
Earth's coarsest bread, the garden's home-
liest roots,

And scarce the summer luxury of fruits,
His short repast in humbleness supply
With all a hermit's board would scarce
deny.

But while he shuns the grosser joys of
sense, 75
His mind seems nourish'd by that abstinence.

'Steer to that shore!'—they sail. 'Do this!'—'tis done:

'Now form and follow me!'—the spoil is won.

Thus prompt his accents and his actions
still,

And all obey and few inquire his will; 80
To such, brief answer and contemptuous
eye

Convey reproof, nor further deign reply.

III

'A sail!—a sail!'—a promised prize to
Hope!

Her nation—flag—how speaks the telescope?

No prize, alas! but yet a welcome sail: 85
The blood-red signal glitters in the gale.
Yes—she is ours—a home-returning
bark—

Blow fair, thou breeze!—she anchors ere
the dark.

Already doubled is the cape—our bay Receives that prow which proudly spurns
the spray. 90

How gloriously her gallant course she goes!
Her white wings flying—never from her
foes—

She walks the waters like a thing of life,
And seems to dare the elements to strife.
Who would not brave the battle-fire, the wreck, 95

To move the monarch of her peopled deck?

IV

Hoarse o'er her side the rustling cable rings;

The sails are furl'd; and anchoring round
she swings;

And gathering loiterers on the land discern

Her boat descending from the latticed
stern. 100

'Tis mann'd—the oars keep concert to the
strand,

Till grates her keel upon the shallow sand.
Hail to the welcome shout!—the friendly speech!

When hand grasps hand uniting on the beach;

The smile, the question, and the quick
reply, 105
And the heart's promise of festivity!

V

The tidings spread, and gathering grows
the crowd;

The hum of voices, and the laughter loud,
And woman's gentler anxious tone is
heard—

Friends', husbands', lovers' names in each
dear word: 110

'Oh! are they safe? we ask not of success—

But shall we see them? will their accents
bless?

From where the battle roars, the billows
chafe,

They doubtless boldly did—but who are safe?

Here let them haste to gladden and surprise, 115

And kiss the doubt from these delighted
eyes!'

VI

'Where is our chief? for him we bear report—

And doubt that joy—which hails our coming—short;

Yet thus sincere, 'tis cheering, though so
brief;

But, Juan! instant guide us to our chief:
Our greeting paid, we'll feast on our return, 121

And all shall hear what each may wish to learn.'

Ascending slowly by the rock-hewn way,
To where his watch-tower beetles o'er the
bay,

By bushy brake, and wild flowers blossom-
ing, 125

And freshness breathing from each silver
spring,

Whose scatter'd streams from granite basins burst,

Leap into life, and sparkling woo your
thirst;

From crag to cliff they mount—Near yonder cave,

What lonely straggler looks along the
wave? 130

In pensive posture leaning on the brand,
Not oft a resting-staff to that red hand?

'Tis he—'tis Conrad—here, as wont,
alone;

On—Juan!—on—and make our purpose
known.

The bark he views—and tell him we would
greet 135

His ear with tidings he must quickly meet:
We dare not yet approach—thou know'st his mood

When strange or uninvited steps intrude.'

Him Juan sought, and told of their intent;—

He spake not, but a sign express'd assent.
These Juan calls—they come—to their salute

He bends him slightly, but his lips are mute.

'These letters, Chief, are from the Greek
—the spy,

Who still proclaims our spoil or peril
nigh:

Whate'er his tidings, we can well report,
Much that '—'Peace, peace!'—he cuts their prating short.

Wondering they turn, abash'd, while each to each

Conjecture whispers in his muttering
speech:

They watch his glance with many a stealing
look,

To gather how that eye the tidings took;
But, this as if he guess'd, with head aside, Perchance from some emotion, doubt, or
pride,

He read the scroll—'My tablets, Juan,
hark—

Where is Gonsalvo?'

'In the anchor'd bark.'

'There let him stay—to him this order
bear—

Back to your duty—for my course prepare:

Myself this enterprise to-night will share.'

'To-night, Lord Conrad!'

'Ay! at set of sun:

The breeze will freshen when the day is
done.

My corslet, cloak—one hour and we are
gone.

Sling on thy bugle—see that free from rust
My carbine-lock springs worthy of my
trust;

Be the edge sharpen'd of my boarding-
brand,

And give its guard more room to fit my
hand.

This let the armourer with speed dispose;
Last time, it more fatigued my arm than
foes:

Mark that the signal-gun be duly fired,
To tell us when the hour of stay's expired.'

VIII

They make obeisance, and retire in haste,
Too soon to seek again the watery waste:
Yet they repine not—so that Conrad
guides;

And who dare question aught that he decides?

That man of loneliness and mystery Scarce seen to smile, and seldom heard
to sigh;

Whose name appals the fiercest of his
crew,

And tints each swarthy cheek with sal-
lower hue;

Still sways their souls with that commanding art

That dazzles, leads, yet chills the vulgar
heart.

What is that spell, that thus his lawless
train

Confess and envy, yet oppose in vain?
What should it be, that thus their faith can bind?

The power of Thought—the magic of the
Mind!

Link'd with success, assumed and kept with skill,

That moulds another's weakness to its
will;

Wields with their hands, but, still to these unknown,

Makes even their mightiest deeds appear his own.

Such hath it been—shall be—beneath the
sun

The many still must labour for the one!
'Tis Nature's doom—but let the wretch who toils

Accuse not, hate not him who wears the spoils.

Oh! if he knew the weight of splendid
chains,

How light the balance of his humbler pains!

IX

Unlike the heroes of each ancient race,
Demons in act, but Gods at least in face,
In Conrad's form seems little to admire,
Though his dark eyebrow shades a glance
of fire:

Robust but not Herculean—to the sight
No giant frame sets forth his common
height;

Yet, in the whole, who paused to look
again,

Saw more than marks the crowd of vulgar
men;

They gaze and marvel how—and still confess

That thus it is, but why they cannot guess.
Sun-burnt his cheek, his forehead high and pale

The sable curls in wild profusion veil;
And oft perforce his rising lip reveals

The haughtier thought it curbs, but scarce conceals.

Though smooth his voice, and calm his general mien,

Still seems there something he would not
have seen:

His features' deepening lines and varying
hue

At times attracted, yet perplex'd the view,

As if within that murkiness of mind 211
 Work'd feelings fearful, and yet unde-
 fined;
 Such might it be—that none could truly
 tell—
 Too close inquiry his stern glance would quell.
 There breathe but few whose aspect might defy 215
 The full encounter of his searching eye;
 He had the skill, when Cunning's gaze
 would seek
 To probe his heart and watch his changing cheek,
 At once the observer's purpose to espy,
 And on himself roll back his scrutiny,
 Lest he to Conrad rather should betray
 Some secret thought, than drag that chief's to day.
 There was a laughing Devil in his sneer,
 That raised emotions both of rage and fear;
 And where his frown of hatred darkly
 fell, 225
 Hope upon him fled, and Mercy sigh'd farewell!

X

Slight are the outward signs of evil
 thought,
 Within—within—'twas there the spirit
 wrought!
 Love shows all changes—Hate, Ambition,
 Guile,
 Betray no further than the bitter smile;
 The lip's least curl, the lightest paleness
 thrown 231
 Along the govern'd aspect, speak alone
 Of deeper passions; and to judge their
 mien,
 He, who would see, must be himself un-
 seen.
 Then—with the hurried tread, the upward eye, 235
 The clenched hand, the pause of agony,
 That listens, starting, lest the step too near Approach intrusive on that mood of fear;
 Then—with each feature working from
 the heart,
 With feelings, loosed to strengthen—not depart, 240
 That rise, convulse, contend—that freeze,
 or glow,
 Flush in the cheek, or damp upon the
 brow;
 Then, Stranger! if thou canst, and tremb-lest not,
 Behold his soul—the rest that soothes his
 lot!
 Mark how that lone and blighted bosom
 sears 245
 The scathing thought of execrated years!
 Behold—but who hath seen, or e'er shall
 see,
 Man as himself—the secret spirit free?

XI

Yet was not Conrad thus by Nature sent To lead the guilty—guilt's worse instrument— 250
 His soul was changed, before his deeds had driven Him forth to war with man and forfeit
 heaven.
 Warp'd by the world in Disappointment's
 school,
 In words too wise, in conduct there a fool;
 Too firm to yield, and far too proud to
 stoop, 255
 Doom'd by his very virtues for a dupe,
 He cursed those virtues as the cause of ill,
 And not the traitors who betray'd him
 still;
 Nor deem'd that gifts bestow'd on better
 men
 Had left him joy, and means to give
 again. 260
 Fear'd, shunn'd, belied, ere youth had lost her force,
 He hated man too much to feel remorse,
 And thought the voice of wrath a sacred
 call,
 To pay the injuries of some on all.
 He knew himself a villain—but he deem'd
 The rest no better than the thing he
 seem'd; 266
 And scorn'd the best as hypocrites who hid
 Those deeds the bolder spirit plainly did.
 He knew himself detested, but he knew
 The hearts that loath'd him, crouch'd and dreaded too. 270
 Lone, wild, and strange, he stood alike
 exempt
 From all affection and from all contempt;
 His name could sadden, and his acts surprise;
 But they that fear'd him dared not to
 despise;
 Man spurns the worm, but pauses ere he wake 275
 The slumbering venom of the folded
 snake:
 The first may turn, but not avenge the
 blow;
 The last expires, but leaves no living foe;
 Fast to the doom'd offender's form it
 clings,
 And he may crush—not conquer—still it stings! 280

XII

None are all evil—quickenings round his
 heart
 One softer feeling would not yet depart;
 Oft could he sneer at others as beguiled
 By passions worthy of a fool or child;
 Yet 'gainst that passion vainly still he strove, 285
 And even in him it asks the name of Love!

[CANTO I

Yes, it was love—unchangeable—unchanged,
Felt but for one from whom he never ranged;
Though fairest captives daily met his eye,
He shunn'd, nor sought, but coldly pass'd them by;
Though many a beauty droop'd in prison'd bower,
None ever sooth'd his most unguarded
hour.
Yes—it was Love—if thoughts of tender-
ness
Tried in temptation, strengthen'd by distress,
Unmoved by absence, firm in every clime,
And yet—oh more than all! untired by
time;
Which nor defeated hope, nor baffled
wile,
Could render sullen were she near to
smile,
Nor rage could fire, nor sickness fret to vent
On her one murmur of his discontent;
Which still would meet with joy, with calmness part,
Lest that his look of grief should reach her heart;
Which nought removed, nor menaced to remove—
If there be love in mortals—this was love!
He was a villain—ay, reproaches shower
On him—but not the passion, nor its
power,
Which only proved, all other virtues gone,
Not guilt itself could quench this loveliest one!

XIII

He paused a moment—till his hastening
men Pass'd the first winding downward to the glen.
'Strange tidings!—many a peril have I
pass'd,
Nor know I why this next appears the last!
Yet so my heart forebodes, but must not
fear,
Nor shall my followers find me falter here.
'Tis rash to meet, but surer death to
wait
Till here they hunt us to undoubted fate;
And, if my plan but hold, and Fortune
smile,
We'll furnish mourners for our funeral
pile.
Ay, let them slumber—peaceful be their
dreams!
Morn ne'er awoke them with such brilliant beams
As kindle high to-night (but blow, thou breeze!)
To warm these slow avengers of the seas.

Now to Medora—Oh! my sinking heart,
Long may her own be lighter than thou
art!
Yet was I brave—mean boast where all are brave!
Ev'n insects sting for aught they seek to
save.
This common courage which with brutes
we share,
That owes its deadliest efforts to despair,
Small merit claims—but 'twas my nobler
hope
To teach my few with numbers still to
cope;
Long have I led them—not to vainly
bleed:
No medium now—we perish or succeed;
So let it be—it irks not me to die;
But thus to urge them whence they cannot
fly.
My lot hath long had little of my care,
But chafes my pride thus baffled in the snare:
Is this my skill? my craft? to set at last
Hope, power, and life upon a single cast?
Oh, Fate!—accuse thy folly, not thy fate!
She may redeem thee still, nor yet too
late.'

XIV

Thus with himself communion held he, till
He reach'd the summit of his towercrown'd hill:
There at the portal paused—for wild and soft
He heard those accents never heard too
oft;
Through the high lattice far yet sweet they
rung,
And these the notes his bird of beauty
sung:

1

'Deep in my soul that tender secret dwells,
Lonely and lost to light for evermore,
Save when to thine my heart responsive swells,
Then trembles into silence as before.

2

'There, in its centre, a sepulchral lamp
Burns the slow flame, eternal, but un-
seen;
Which not the darkness of despair can damp,
Though vain its ray as it had never been.

3

'Remember me—Oh! pass not thou my
grave
Without one thought whose relics there
recline:
The only pang my bosom dare not brave
Must be to find forgetfulness in thine.

'My fondest, faintest, latest accents
 hear—Grief for the dead not virtue can re-
 prove; 360
 Then give me all I ever ask'd—a tear,
 The first—last—sole reward of so much
 love!'

He pass'd the portal, cross'd the corridor,
 And reach'd the chamber as the strain gave o'er:

'My own Medora! sure thy song is sad—' 365

'In Conrad's absence wouldst thou have it glad?

Without thine ear to listen to my lay,
 Still must my song my thoughts, my soul
 betray:

Still must each action to my bosom suit,
 My heart unhush'd, although my lips were
 mute! 370

Oh! many a night on this lone couch re-
 clined,

My dreaming fear with storms hath wing'd
 the wind,

And deem'd the breath that faintly fann'd thy sail

The murmuring prelude of the ruder gale;
 Though soft, it seem'd the low prophetic dirge, 375

That mourn'd thee floating on the savage
 surge;

Still would I rise to rouse the beacon fire,
 Lest spies less true should let the blaze
 expire;

And many a restless hour outwatch'd each
 star,

And morning came—and still thou wert
 afar. 380

Oh! how the chill blast on my bosom
 blew,

And day broke dreary on my troubled
 view,

And still I gazed and gazed—and not a prow

Was granted to my tears, my truth, my vow!

At length 'twas noon—I hail'd and blest
 the mast 385

That met my sight—it near'd—Alas! it
 pass'd!

Another came—Oh God! 'twas thine at
 last!

Would that those days were over! wilt thou ne'er,

My Conrad! learn the joys of peace to
 share?

Sure thou hast more than wealth, and many a home 390

As bright as this invites us not to roam:
 Thou know'st it is not peril that I fear,

I only tremble when thou art not here;

Then not for mine, but that far dearer
 life,

Which flies from love and languishes for
 strife— 395

How strange that heart, to me so tender
 still,

Should war with nature and its better
 will!'

'Yea, strange indeed—that heart hath long been changed;

Worm-like 'twas trampled, adder-like avenged,

Without one hope on earth beyond thy
 love, 400

And scarce a glimpse of mercy from above.
 Yet the same feeling which thou dost condemn,

My very love to thee is hate to them,
 So closely mingling here, that disen-
 twined,

I cease to love thee when I love mankind:
 Yet dread not this—the proof of all the
 past 406

Assures the future that my love will last;
 But—oh, Medora! nerve thy gentler heart;

This hour again—but not for long—we
 part.'

'This hour we part—my heart foreboded
 this: 410

Thus ever fade my fairy dreams of bliss.
 This hour—it cannot be—this hour
 away!

Yon bark hath hardly anchor'd in the
 bay:

Her consort still is absent, and her crew
 Have need of rest before they toil anew:

My love! thou mock'st my weakness; and wouldst steel 416

My breast before the time when it must feel;
 But trifle now no more with my distress,

Such mirth hath less of play than bitter-
 ness.

Be silent, Conrad!—dearest! come and
 share 420

The feast these hands delighted to prepare;

Light toil! to cull and dress thy frugal fare!
 See, I have pluck'd the fruit that promised
 best,

And where not sure, perplex'd, but pleased,
 I guess'd

At such as seem'd the fairest; thrice the hill 425

My steps have wound to try the coolest
 rill;

Yes! thy sherbet to-night will sweetly flow,
 See how it sparkles in its vase of snow!

The grapes' gay juice thy bosom never
 cheers;

Thou more than Moslem when the cup
 appears: 430

Think not I mean to chide—for I rejoice
 What others deem a penance is thy choice.

But come, the board is spread; our silver
 Is trimm'd, and heeds not the sirocco's
 damp;
 Then shall my handmaids while the time
 along, ⁴³⁵
 And join with me the dance, or wake the
 song;
 Or my guitar, which still thou lov'st to
 hear,
 Shall soothe or lull—or, should it vex
 thine ear,
 We'll turn the tale, by Ariosto told,
 Of fair Olympia loved and left of old.
 Why, thou wert worse than he who broke his vow ⁴⁴¹
 To that lost damsel, shouldst thou leave me now;
 Or even that traitor chief—I've seen thee
 smile,
 When the clear sky show'd Ariadne's
 Isle,
 Which I have pointed from these cliffs the while: ⁴⁴⁵
 And thus half sportive, half in fear, I
 said,
 Lest time should raise that doubt to more than dread,
 Thus Conrad, too, will quit me for the
 main;
 And he deceived me—for he came again!

'Again, again—and oft again—my love!
 If there be life below, and hope above,
 He will return—but now, the moments bring ⁴⁵²
 The time of parting with redoubled wing:
 The why, the where—what boots it now
 to tell?
 Since all must end in that wild word—
 farewell!
 Yet would I fain—did time allow—disclose— ⁴⁵⁶
 Fear not—these are no formidable foes;
 And here shall watch a more than wanted
 guard,
 For sudden siege and long defence prepared:
 Nor be thou lonely, though thy lord's away, ⁴⁶⁰
 Our matrons and thy handmaids with thee stay;
 And this thy comfort—that, when next
 we meet,
 Security shall make repose more sweet.
 List!—'tis the bugle!—Juan shrilly
 blew—
 'One kiss—one more—another—Oh!
 Adieu!' ⁴⁶⁵

She rose—she sprung—she clung to his
 embrace,
 Till his heart heaved beneath her hidden
 face:

He dared not raise to his that deep-blue
 eye,
 Which downcast droop'd in tearless agony.
 Her long fair hair lay floating o'er his arms, ⁴⁷⁰
 In all the wildness of dishevell'd charms;
 Scarce beat that bosom where his image
 dwelt
 So full—that feeling seem'd almost un-
 felt!
 Hark—peals the thunder of the signal-
 gun!
 It told 'twas sunset, and he cursed that
 sun. ⁴⁷⁵
 Again—again—that form he madly
 press'd,
 Which mutely clasp'd, imploringly car-ess'd!
 And tottering to the couch his bride he
 bore,
 One moment gazed, as if to gaze no more;
 Felt that for him earth held but her alone, ⁴⁸⁰
 Kiss'd her cold forehead—turn'd—is Conrad gone?

XV

'And is he gone?' on sudden solitude
 How oft that fearful question will intrude!
 'Twas but an instant past, and here he
 stood!
 And now—without the portal's porch
 she rush'd, ⁴⁸⁵
 And then at length her tears in freedom
 gush'd;
 Big, bright, and fast, unknown to her they
 fell;
 But still her lips refused to send—'Fare-
 well!'
 For in that word—that fatal word—howe'er
 We promise, hope, believe, there breathes despair. ⁴⁹⁰
 O'er every feature of that still, pale face,
 Had sorrow fix'd what time can ne'er
 erase:
 The tender blue of that large loving eye
 Grew frozen with its gaze on vacancy, Till—Oh, how far!—it caught a glimpse of him, ⁴⁹⁵
 And then it flow'd, and phrensied seem'd to swim,
 Through those long, dark, and glistening lashes dew'd
 With drops of sadness oft to be renew'd.
 'He's gone!'—against her heart that hand is driven,
 Convulsed and quick—then gently raised to heaven: ⁵⁰⁰
 She look'd and saw the heaving of the
 main;
 The white sail set—she dared not look
 again;

But turn'd with sickening soul within the gate—
'It is no dream—and I am desolate!'

XVI

From crag to crag descending, swiftly sped
Stern Conrad down, nor once he turn'd his head; 506

But shrunk whene'er the windings of his way Forced on his eye what he would not survey,

His lone but lovely dwelling on the steep,
That hail'd him first when homeward from
the deep: 510

And she—the dim and melancholy star, Whose ray of beauty reach'd him from
afar,

On her he must not gaze, he must not think,
There he might rest—but on Destruction's
brink:

Yet once almost he stopp'd, and nearly
gave 515

His fate to chance, his projects to the wave:
But no—it must not be—a worthy chief May melt, but not betray to woman's grief.

He sees his bark, he notes how fair the
wind, 519

And sternly gathers all his might of mind:
Again he hurries on—and as he hears

The clang of tumult vibrate on his ears,
The busy sounds, the bustle of the shore,
The shout, the signal, and the dashing oar;
As marks his eye the seaboy on the mast,
The anchors rise, the sails unfurling fast,
The waving kerchiefs of the crowd that urge

That mute adieu to those who stem the surge;

And more than all, his blood-red flag aloft,
He marvell'd how his heart could seem so
soft. 530

Fire in his glance, and wildness in his
breast,

He feels of all his former self possess;
He bounds—he flies—until his footsteps reach

The verge where ends the cliff, begins the
beach,

There checks his speed; but pauses less to
breathe 535

The breezy freshness of the deep beneath,
Than there his wonted statelier step renew;
Nor rush, disturb'd by haste, to vulgar
view:

For well had Conrad learn'd to curb the
crowd,

By arts that veil, and oft preserve the proud;
His was the lofty port, the distant mien,
That seems to shun the sight—and awes if
seen: 542

The solemn aspect, and the high-born eye,
That checks low mirth, but lacks not courtesy;

All these he wielded to command assent:
But where he wish'd to win, so well unbent,
That kindness cancell'd fear in those who
heard, 547

And others' gifts show'd mean beside his
word,

When echo'd to the heart as from his own
His deep yet tender melody of tone:

But such was foreign to his wonted mood,
He cared not what he soften'd, but sub-
dued: 552

The evil passions of his youth had made Him value less who loved—than what obey'd.

XVII

Around him mustering ranged his ready
guard, 555

Before him Juan stands—'Are all prepared?'

'They are—nay more—embark'd: the latest boat

Waits but my Chief——'
'My sword, and my capote.'

Soon firmly girded on, and lightly slung,
His belt and cloak were o'er his shoulders
flung: 560

'Call Pedro here!' He comes—and Conrad bends,

With all the courtesy he deign'd his friends;
'Receive these tablets, and peruse with
care,

Words of high trust and truth are graven
there;

Double the guard, and when Anselmo's
bark 565

Arrives, let him alike these orders mark:
In three days (serve the breeze) the sun shall shine

On our return—till then all peace be
thine!'

This said, his brother Pirate's hand he
wrung,

Then to his boat with haughty gesture
sprung. 570

Flash'd the dipt oars, and sparkling with the stroke,

Around the waves' phosphoric brightness
broke;

They gain the vessel—on the deck he stands,—

Shrieks the shrill whistle, ply the busy
hands—

He marks how well the ship her helm
obeys, 575

How gallant all her crew, and deigns to
praise.

His eyes of pride to young Gonsalvo
turn—

Why doth he start, and inly seem to mourn?

Alas! those eyes beheld his rocky tower
And live a moment o'er the parting hour;

She—his Medora—did she mark the prow? ⁵⁸¹
 Ah! never loved he half so much as now!
 But much must yet be done ere dawn of
 day—
 Again he mans himself and turns away;
 Down to the cabin with Gonsalvo bends,
 And there unfolds his plan, his means, and ends; ⁵⁸⁶
 Before them burns the lamp, and spreads
 the chart,
 And all that speaks and aids the naval art;
 They to the midnight watch protract debate;
 To anxious eyes what hour is ever late?
 Meantime, the steady breeze serenely blew, ⁵⁹¹
 And fast and falcon-like the vessel flew;
 Pass'd the high headlands of each clustering isle,
 To gain their port—long—long ere morning smile:
 And soon the night-glass through the narrow bay ⁵⁹⁵
 Discovers where the Pacha's galleys lay.
 Count they each sail, and mark how there supine
 The lights in vain o'er heedless Moslem
 shine.
 Secure, unnoted, Conrad's prow pass'd by,
 And anchor'd where his ambush meant to lie; ⁶⁰⁰
 Screen'd from espial by the jutting cape,
 That rears on high its rude fantastic shape.
 Then rose his band to duty—not from
 sleep—
 Equipp'd for deeds alike on land or deep;
 While lean'd their leader o'er the fretting flood, ⁶⁰⁵
 And calmly talk'd—and yet he talk'd of
 blood!

CANTO THE SECOND

'Conosceste i dubiosi desiri?'—DANTE.

I

IN Coron's bay floats many a galley light, Through Coron's lattices the lamps are
 bright,
 For Seyd, the Pacha, makes a feast to-night:
 A feast for promised triumph yet to come,
 When he shall drag the fetter'd Rovers home; ⁵
 This hath he sworn by Allah and his sword,
 And faithful to his firman and his word,
 His summon'd prowls collect along the coast,
 And great the gathering crews, and loud
 the boast;
 Already shared the captives and the prize, Though far the distant foe they thus despise; ¹¹
 'Tis but to sail—no doubt to-morrow's Sun
 Will see the Pirates bound, their haven
 won!

Meantime the watch may slumber, if they
 will,
 Nor only wake to war, but dreaming kill.
 Though all, who can, disperse on shore and seek ¹⁶
 To flesh their glowing valour on the Greek;
 How well such deed becomes the turban'd
 brave—
 To bare the sabre's edge before a slave!
 Infest his dwelling—but forbear to slay,
 Their arms are strong, yet merciful to-day,
 And do not deign to smite because they may! ²²
 Unless some gay caprice suggests the blow,
 To keep in practice for the coming foe.
 Revel and rout the evening hours beguile,
 And they who wish to wear a head must smile; ²⁶
 For Moslem mouths produce their choicest
 cheer,
 And hoard their curses, till the coast is clear.

II

High in his hall reclines the turban'd Seyd; Around—the bearded chiefs he came to lead. ³⁰
 Removed the banquet, and the last pilaff—Forbidden draughts, 'tis said, he dared to quaff,
 Though to the rest the sober berry's juice
 The slaves bear round for rigid Moslems'
 use;
 The long chibouque's dissolving cloud supply, ³⁵
 While dance the Almas to wild minstrelsy.
 The rising morn will view the chiefs em-
 bark;
 But waves are somewhat treacherous in
 the dark:
 And revellers may more securely sleep
 On silken couch than o'er the rugged deep:
 Feast there who can—nor combat till they must, ⁴¹
 And less to conquest than to Korans trust:
 And yet the numbers crowded in his host Might warrant more than even the Pacha's boast.

III

With cautious reverence from the outer gate ⁴⁵
 Slow stalks the slave, whose office there to
 wait,
 Bows his bent head, his hand salutes the
 floor,
 Ere yet his tongue the trusted tidings bore:
 'A captive Dervise, from the Pirate's nest Escaped, is here—himself would tell the rest.' ⁵⁰
 He took the sign from Seyd's assenting eye,
 And led the holy man in silence nigh.
 His arms were folded on his dark-green vest,
 His step was feeble, and his look deprest;

Yet worn he seem'd of hardship more than
 years, 55
 And pale his cheek with penance, not from
 fears.
 Vow'd to his God—his sable locks he
 wore,
 And these his lofty cap rose proudly o'er:
 Around his form his loose long robe was
 thrown,
 And wrapt a breast bestow'd on heaven
 alone; 60
 Submissive, yet with self-possession
 mann'd,
 He calmly met the curious eyes that scann'd;
 And question of his coming fain would
 seek,
 Before the Pacha's will allow'd to speak.

IV

'Whence com'st thou, Dervise?'
 'From the outlaw's den, 65
 A fugitive—'
 'Thy capture where and when?'
 'From Scalanovo's port to Scio's isle,
 The Saick was bound; but Allah did not
 smile
 Upon our course—the Moslem merchant's gains
 The Rovers won; our limbs have worn their chains. 70
 I had no death to fear, nor wealth to boast,
 Beyond the wandering freedom which I
 lost;
 At length a fisher's humble boat by night Afforded hope, and offer'd chance of
 flight;
 I seized the hour, and find my safety
 here— 75
 With thee—most mighty Pacha! who can
 fear?'

'How speed the outlaws? stand they well
 prepared,
 Their plunder'd wealth, and robber's rock,
 to guard?
 Dream they of this our preparation,
 doom'd
 To view with fire their scorpion nest consumed?' 80

'Pacha! the fetter'd captive's mourning eye,
 That weeps for flight, but ill can play the spy;
 I only heard the reckless waters roar,
 Those waves that would not bear me from
 the shore; 84
 I only mark'd the glorious sun and sky,
 Too bright, too blue, for my captivity;
 And felt that all which Freedom's bosom
 cheers,
 Must break my chain before it dried my
 tears.

This may'st thou judge, at least, from my
 escape,
 They little deem of aught in peril's shape;
 Else vainly had I pray'd or sought the
 chance 91
 That leads me here—if eyed with vigilance:
 The careless guard that did not see me fly
 May watch as idly when thy power is nigh.
 Pacha! my limbs are faint—and nature
 craves 95
 Food for my hunger, rest from tossing
 waves:
 Permit my absence—peace be with thee!
 Peace
 With all around!—now grant repose—release.'

'Stay, Dervise! I have more to question—
 stay,
 I do command thee—sit—dost hear?— obey! 100
 More I must ask, and food the slaves shall
 bring;
 Thou shalt not pine where all are banqueting:
 The supper done—prepare thee to reply,
 Clearly and full—I love not mystery.
 'Twere vain to guess what shook the pious
 man, 105
 Who look'd not lovingly on that Divan;
 Nor show'd high relish for the banquet
 prest,
 And less respect for every fellow guest.
 'Twas but a moment's peevish hectic pass'd
 Along his cheek, and tranquillised as fast:
 He sate him down in silence, and his look Resumed the calmness which before forsook: 112
 The feast was usher'd in, but sumptuous fare
 He shunn'd as if some poison mingled
 there.
 For one so long condemn'd to toil and
 fast, 115
 Methinks he strangely spares the rich re-
 past.

'What ails thee, Dervise? eat—dost thou suppose
 This feast a Christian's? or my friends thy
 foes?
 Why dost thou shun the salt? that sacred pledge,
 Which, once partaken, blunts the sabre's edge, 120
 Makes ev'n contending tribes in peace
 unite,
 And hated hosts seem brethren to the
 sight!'

'Salt seasons dainties—and my food is still
 The humblest root, my drink the simplest
 rill;
 And my stern vow and order's laws oppose
 To break or mingle bread with friends or
 foes; 126

It may seem strange—if there be aught to
 read,
 That peril rests upon my single head;
 But for thy sway—nay more—thy Sultan's
 throne,
 I taste nor bread nor banquet—save alone;
 Infring'd our order's rule, the Prophet's rage¹³¹
 To Mecca's dome might bar my pilgrimage.'

'Well—as thou wilt—ascetic as thou art—
 One question answer; then in peace de-
 part.

How many?—Ha! it cannot sure be day?
 What star—what sun is bursting on the bay?¹³⁶

It shines a lake of fire!—away—away!
 Ho! treachery! my guards! my scimitar!
 The galleys feed the flames—and I afar!
 Accurs'd Dervise!—these thy tidings—thou¹⁴⁰
 Some villain spy—seize—cleave him—
 slay him now!'

Up rose the Dervise with that burst of
 light,
 Nor less his change of form appall'd the
 sight:

Up rose that Dervise—not in saintly garb,
 But like a warrior bounding on his barb,
 Dash'd his high cap, and tore his robe away—¹⁴⁶

Shone his mail'd breast, and flash'd his sabre's ray!

His close but glittering casque, and sable
 plume,

More glittering eye, and black brow's
 sabler gloom,

Glared on the Moslems' eyes some Afrit
 sprite,¹⁵⁰

Whose demon death-blow left no hope for
 fight.

The wild confusion, and the swarthy glow
 Of flames on high, and torches from be-
 low;

The shriek of terror, and the mingling
 yell—

For swords began to clash, and shouts to swell—¹⁵⁵

Flung o'er that spot of earth the air of hell!
 Distracted, to and fro, the flying slaves
 Behold but bloody shore and fiery waves;
 Nought heeded they the Pacha's angry cry,
 They seize that Dervise!—seize on Za-tanai!¹⁶⁰

He saw their terror—check'd the first
 despair

That urged him but to stand and perish
 there,

Since far too early and too well obey'd,
 The flame was kindled ere the signal made;
 He saw their terror—from his baldric
 drew¹⁶⁵

His bugle—brief the blast—but shrilly
 blew;

'Tis answered—'Well ye speed, my gallant
 crew!

Why did I doubt their quickness of career?
 And deem design had left me single here?'
 Sweeps his long arm—that sabre's whirling sway¹⁷⁰

Sheds fast atonement for its first delay;
 Completes his fury what their fear begun,
 And makes the many basely quail to one.
 The cloven turbans o'er the chamber
 spread,

And scarce an arm dare rise to guard its head:¹⁷⁵

Even Seyd, convulsed, o'erwhelm'd, with rage, surprise,

Retreats before him, though he still defies.
 No craven he—and yet he dreads the blow,
 So much Confusion magnifies his foe!

His blazing galleys still distract his sight,
 He tore his beard, and foaming fled the fight;¹⁸¹

For now the pirates pass'd the Haram gate,
 And burst within—and it were death to
 wait;

Where wild Amazement shrieking—kneeling throws

The sword aside—in vain—the blood o'er-flows!¹⁸⁵

The Corsairs pouring, haste to where
 within

Invited Conrad's bugle, and the din
 Of groaning victims, and wild cries for life, Proclaim'd how well he did the work of
 strife.

They shout to find him grim and lonely
 there,¹⁹⁰

A glutted tiger mangling in his lair!
 But short their greeting, shorter his reply—

'Tis well—but Seyd escapes, and he must
 die—

Much hath been done, but more remains to do—

Their galleys blaze—why not their city too?'¹⁹⁵

v

Quick at the word they seized him each a torch,

And fire the dome from minaret to porch.
 A stern delight was fix'd in Conrad's eye,
 But sudden sunk—for on his ear the cry
 Of women struck, and like a deadly knell
 Knock'd at that heart unmoved by battle's yell.²⁰¹

'Oh! burst the Haram—wrong not on your lives

One female form—remember—we have wives.

On them such outrage Vengeance will repay;
 Man is our foe, and such 'tis ours to slay;
 But still we spared—must spare the weaker prey.²⁰⁶

Oh! I forgot—but Heaven will not forgive
 If at my word the helpless cease to live;
 Follow who will—I go—we yet have time
 Our souls to lighten of at least a crime.
 He climbs the crackling stair, he bursts the
 door, 211
 Nor feels his feet glow scorching with the
 floor;
 His breath choked gasping with the vol-
 umed smoke,
 But still from room to room his way he
 broke.
 They search—they find—they save: with lusty arms 215
 Each bears a prize of unregarded charms;
 Calm their loud fears; sustain their sinking frames

With all the care defenceless beauty
 claims:
 So well could Conrad tame their fiercest
 mood,
 And check the very hands with gore imbrued. 220
 But who is she? whom Conrad's arms convey
 From reeking pile and combat's wreck
 away—
 Who but the love of him he dooms to
 bleed?
 The Haram queen—but still the slave of Seyd!

VI

Brief time had Conrad now to greet Gulnare, 225
 Few words to re-assure the trembling fair;
 For in that pause compassion snatch'd
 from war,
 The foe before retiring, fast and far,
 With wonder saw their footsteps unpur-
 sued,
 First slowlier fled—then rallied—then withstood. 230
 This Seyd perceives, then first perceives
 how few,
 Compared with his, the Corsair's roving
 crew,
 And blushes o'er his error, as he eyes
 The ruin wrought by panic and surprise.
 Alla il Alla! Vengeance swells the cry—Shame mounts to rage that must atone or
 die! 236
 And flame for flame and blood for blood must tell,
 The tide of triumph ebbs that flow'd too
 well—
 When wrath returns to renovated strife,
 And those who fought for conquest strike
 for life. 240
 Conrad beheld the danger—he beheld
 His followers faint by freshening foes repell'd:
 'One effort—one—to break the circling
 host!'

They form—unite—charge—waver—all
 is lost!
 Within a narrower ring compress'd, beset, Hopeless, not heartless, strive and struggle
 yet— 246
 Ah! now they fight in firmest file no more,
 Hemm'd in, cut off, cleft down, and trampled o'er,
 But each strikes singly, silently, and home,
 And sinks outwearied rather than o'er-
 come, 250
 His last faint quittance rendering with his
 breath,
 Till the blade glimmers in the grasp of
 death!

VII

But first, ere came the rallying host to blows,
 And rank to rank, and hand to hand
 oppose,
 Gulnare and all her Haram handmaids
 freed, 255
 Safe in the dome of one who held their
 creed,
 By Conrad's mandate safely were be-
 stow'd,
 And dried those tears for life and fame that
 flow'd:
 And when that dark-eyed lady, young Gulnare,
 Recall'd those thoughts late wandering in
 despair, 260
 Much did she marvel o'er the courtesy That smooth'd his accents; soften'd in his
 eye:
 'Twas strange—that robber thus with gore bedew'd
 Seem'd gentler then than Seyd in fondest
 mood.
 The Pacha woo'd as if he deem'd the slave Must seem delighted with the heart he
 gave; 266
 The Corsair vow'd protection, soothed af-
 fright,
 As if his homage were a woman's right.
 'The wish is wrong—nay, worse for female—vain: 269
 Yet much I long to view that chief again;
 If but to thank for, what my fear forgot,
 The life my loving lord remember'd not!'

VIII

And him she saw, where thickest carnage
 spread,
 But gather'd breathing from the happier
 dead;
 Far from his band, and battling with a
 host 275
 That deem right dearly won the field he lost, Fell'd—bleeding—baffled of the death he
 sought,
 And snatch'd to expiate all the ills he
 wrought;

Preserved to linger and to live in vain,
 While Vengeance ponder'd o'er new plans of pain, 280
 And stanch'd the blood she saves to shed
 again—
 But drop for drop, for Seyd's unglutted
 eye
 Would doom him ever dying—ne'er to
 die!
 Can this be he? triumphant late she saw,
 When his red hand's wild gesture waved a law! 285
 'Tis he indeed—disarm'd but undeprest,
 His sole regret the life he still possess;
 His wounds too slight, though taken with that will,
 Which would have kiss'd the hand that then could kill.
 Oh were there none, of all the many given,
 To send his soul—he scarcely ask'd to
 heaven? 291
 Must he alone of all retain his breath,
 Who more than all had striven and struck for death?
 He deeply felt—what mortal hearts must
 feel,
 When thus reversed on faithless fortune's
 wheel, 295
 For crimes committed, and the victor's threat
 Of lingering tortures to repay the debt—
 He deeply, darkly felt; but evil pride
 That led to perpetrate, now serves to hide.
 Still in his stern and self-collected mien
 A conqueror's more than captive's air is
 seen, 301
 Though faint with wasting toil and stiffen-ing wound,
 But few that saw—so calmly gazed
 around:
 Though the far shouting of the distant
 crowd, 304
 Their tremors o'er, rose insolently loud,
 The better warriors who beheld him near,
 Insulted not the foe who taught them fear;
 And the grim guards that to his durance
 led,
 In silence eyed him with a secret dread.

IX

The Leech was sent—but not in mercy—
 there, 310
 To note how much the life yet left could
 bear;
 He found enough to load with heaviest
 chain,
 And promise feeling for the wretch of
 pain;
 To-morrow—yea—to-morrow's evening
 sun
 Will sinking see impalement's pangs
 begun, 315
 And rising with the wonted blush of morn

Behold how well or ill those pangs are
 borne.
 Of torments this the longest and the worst,
 Which adds all other agony to thirst,
 That day by day death still forbears to
 slake, 320
 While famish'd vultures flit around the stake.
 'Oh! water—water!'—smiling Hate denies
 The victim's prayer, for if he drinks he dies.
 This was his doom;—the Leech, the guard
 were gone,
 And left proud Conrad fetter'd and alone.

'Twere vain to paint to what his feelings
 grew— 326
 It even were doubtful if their victim knew.
 There is a war, a chaos of the mind,
 When all its elements convulsed, combined,
 Lie dark and jarring with perturbed force,
 And gnashing with impenitent Remorse—
 That juggling fiend, who never spake
 before, 332
 But cries 'I warn'd thee!' when the deed is o'er.
 Vain voice! the spirit burning but unbent,
 May writhe, rebel—the weak alone repent!
 Even in that lonely hour when most it feels, 336
 And, to itself, all, all that self reveals,—
 No single passion, and no ruling thought That leaves the rest, as once, unseen, un-
 sought,
 But the wild prospect when the soul reviews, 340
 All rushing through their thousand avenues—
 Ambition's dreams expiring, love's regret,
 Endanger'd glory, life itself beset;
 The joy untasted, the contempt or hate
 'Gainst those who fain would triumph in our fate; 345
 The hopeless past, the hasting future
 driven
 Too quickly on to guess of hell or heaven;
 Deeds, thoughts, and words, perhaps re-member'd not
 So keenly till that hour, but ne'er forgot;
 Things light or lovely in their acted time;
 But now to stern reflection each a crime;
 The withering sense of evil unreveal'd,
 Not cankering less because the more con-
 ceal'd— 353
 All, in a word, from which all eyes must
 start,
 That opening sepulchre—the naked heart
 Bares with its buried woes, till Pride
 awake, 356
 To snatch the mirror from the soul—and
 break.

Ay, Pride can veil, and Courage brave it
 all—
 All—all—before—beyond—the deadliest
 fall.
 Each hath some fear, and he who least betrays, 360
 The only hypocrite deserving praise:
 Not the loud recreant wretch who boasts and flies;
 But he who looks on death—and silent dies.
 So steel'd by pondering o'er his far career,
 He half-way meets him should he menace
 near! 365

XI

In the high chamber of his highest tower
 Sate Conrad, fetter'd in the Pacha's power.
 His palace perish'd in the flame—this fort Contain'd at once his captive and his
 court.
 Not much could Conrad of his sentence
 blame, 370
 His foe, if vanquish'd, had but shared the
 same:—
 Alone he sate—in solitude had scann'd
 His guilty bosom, but that breast he
 mann'd:
 One thought alone he could not—dared not meet—
 'Oh, how these tidings will Medora greet?'
 Then—only then—his clanking hands he raised, 376
 And strain'd with rage the chain on which he gazed;
 But soon he found, or feign'd, or dream'd
 relief,
 And smiled in self-derision of his grief,
 'And now come torture when it will—or may, 380
 More need of rest to nerve me for the day!'
 This said, with languor to his mat he crept,
 And, whatso'er his visions, quickly slept.
 'Twas hardly midnight when that fray
 begun,

For Conrad's plans matured, at once were
 done: 385
 And Havoc loathes so much the waste of
 time,
 She scarce had left an uncommitted crime.
 One hour beheld him since the tide he stemm'd—
 Disguised, discover'd, conquering, ta'en,
 condemn'd— 389
 A chief on land, an outlaw on the deep—
 Destroying, saving, prison'd, and asleep!

XII

He slept in calmest seeming, for his breath
 Was hush'd so deep—Ah! happy if in
 death!
 He slept—Who o'er his placid slumber
 bends?
 His foes are gone, and here he hath no
 friends; 395

Is it some seraph sent to grant him grace?
 No, 'tis an earthly form with heavenly
 face!

Its white arm raised a lamp—yet gently hid,
 Lest the ray flash abruptly on the lid
 Of that closed eye, which opens but to
 pain, 400
 And once unclosed—but once may close
 again.
 That form, with eye so dark, and cheek so
 fair,
 And auburn waves of gemm'd and braided
 hair;

With shape of fairy lightness—naked foot,
 That shines like snow, and falls on earth as
 mute— 405
 Through guards and dunnest night how came it there?

Ah! rather ask what will not woman dare?
 Whom youth and pity lead like thee,
 Gulnare!

She could not sleep—and while the Pacha's rest

In muttering dreams yet saw his pirate-
 guest, 410

She left his side—his signet-ring she bore,
 Which oft in sport adorn'd her hand
 before—

And with it, scarcely question'd, won her
 way

Through drowsy guards that must that sign obey.

Worn out with toil, and tired with changing blows, 415

Their eyes had envied Conrad his repose;
 And chill and nodding at the turret door,
 They stretch their listless limbs, and watch
 no more;

Just raised their heads to hail the signet-ring,

Nor ask or what or who the sign may bring. 420

XIII

She gazed in wonder, 'Can he calmly sleep,
 While other eyes his fall or ravage weep?
 And mine in restlessness are wandering
 here—

What sudden spell hath made this man so
 dear?

True—'tis to him my life, and more, I owe,
 And me and mine he spared from worse than woe: 426

'Tis late to think—but soft, his slumber
 breaks—

How heavily he sighs!—he starts—awakes!

He raised his head, and dazzled with the
 light,

His eye seem'd dubious if it saw aright:
 He moved his hand—the grating of his
 chain 431

Too harshly told him that he lived again.

'What is that form? if not a shape of air,
Methinks, my jailor's face shows wondrous fair!'

'Pirate! thou know'st me not—but I am
one, 435

Grateful for deeds thou hast too rarely
done;

Look on me—and remember her, thy hand
Snatch'd from the flames, and thy more fearful band.

I come through darkness—and I scarce know why—

Yet not to hurt—I would not see thee die.'

'If so, kind lady! thine the only eye 441
That would not here in that gay hope de-
light:

Theirs is the chance—and let them use their right.

But still I thank their courtesy or thine,
That would confess me at so fair a shrine!'
Strange though it seem—yet with extremest grief 446

Is link'd a mirth—it doth not bring relief—
That playfulness of Sorrow ne'er beguiles,
And smiles in bitterness—but still it
smiles;

And sometimes with the wisest and the
best, 450

Till even the scaffold echoes with their jest!

Yet not the joy to which it seems akin—
It may deceive all hearts, save that within.
Whate'er it was that flash'd on Conrad,
now

A laughing wildness half unbent his brow
And these his accents had a sound of
mirth, 456

As if the last he could enjoy on earth;
Yet 'gainst his nature—for through that short life,

Few thoughts had he to spare from gloom and strife.

XIV

'Corsair! thy doom is named—but I have
power 460

To soothe the Pacha in his weaker hour.
Thee would I spare—nay more—would save thee now,

But this—time—hope—nor even thy strength allow;

But all I can, I will: at least, delay
The sentence that remits thee scarce a day.
More now were ruin—even thyself were loth 466

The vain attempt should bring but doom to both.'

'Yes! loth indeed:—my soul is nerved to
all,

Or fall'n too low to fear a further fall;
Tempt not thyself with peril—me with
hope 470

Of flight from foes with whom I could not cope:

Unfit to vanquish, shall I meanly fly,
The one of all my band that would not die?

Yet there is one to whom my memory
clings,

Till to these eyes her own wild softness
springs. 475

My sole resources in the path I trod
Were these—my bark, my sword, my love, my God!

The last I left in youth!—he leaves me
now—

And Man but works his will to lay me low.
I have no thought to mock his throne with
prayer 480

Wrung from the coward crouching of
despair;

It is enough—I breathe, and I can bear.
My sword is shaken from the worthless
hand

That might have better kept so true a
brand;

My bark is sunk or captive—but my
love— 485

For her in sooth my voice would mount
above:

Oh! she is all that still to earth can bind—
And this will break a heart so more than
kind,

And blight a form—till thine appear'd,
Gulnare!

Mine eye ne'er ask'd if others were as
fair.' 490

'Thou lov'st another then?—but what to
me

Is this—'tis nothing—nothing e'er can be:
But yet—thou lov'st—and—Oh! I envy
those

Whose hearts on hearts as faithful can
repose,

Who never feel the void—the wandering
thought 495

That sighs o'er visions—such as mine hath
wrought.'

'Lady, methought thy love was his, for whom

This arm redeem'd thee from a fiery tomb.'

'My love stern Seyd's! Oh—No—No—not my love—

Yet much this heart, that strives no more,
once strove 500

To meet his passion—but it would not be.
I felt—I feel—love dwells with—with the
free.

I am a slave, a favour'd slave at best,
To share his splendour, and seem very
blest!

Oft must my soul the question undergo,
Of—'Dost thou love?' and burn to answer, 'No!' 506

Oh! hard it is that fondness to sustain,
And struggle not to feel averse in vain;
But harder still the heart's recoil to bear,
And hide from one—perhaps another
there.

He takes the hand I give not, nor with-
hold—

Its pulse nor check'd, nor quicken'd—
calmly cold:

And when resign'd, it drops a lifeless
weight

From one I never loved enough to hate.
No warmth these lips return by his im-
prest,

And chill'd remembrance shudders o'er
the rest.

Yes—had I ever proved that passion's zeal,
The change to hatred were at least to feel:
But still he goes unmourn'd, returns un-
sought,

And oft when present—absent from my
thought.

Or when reflection comes—and come it
must—

I fear that henceforth 'twill but bring disgust;

I am his slave—but, in despite of pride,
'Twere worse than bondage to become his
bride.

Oh! that this dotage of his breast would
cease:

Or seek another and give mine release,
But yesterday—I could have said, to
peace!

Yes, if unwonted fondness now I feign,
Remember, captive! 'tis to break thy chain;
Repay the life that to thy hand I owe;
To give thee back to all endear'd below,
Who share such love as I can never know.
Farewell, morn breaks, and I must now
away:

'Twill cost me dear—but dread no death
to-day!

XV

She press'd his fetter'd fingers to her heart,
And bow'd her head, and turn'd her to de-
part,

And noiseless as a lovely dream is gone.
And was she here? and is he now alone?
What gem hath dropp'd and sparkles o'er his chain?

The tear most sacred, shed for others'
pain,

That starts at once—bright—pure—from Pity's mine,

Already polish'd by the hand divine!

Oh! too convincing—dangerously dear—
In woman's eye the unanswerable tear!
That weapon of her weakness she can
wield,

To save, subdue—at once her spear and
shield:

Avoid it—Virtue ebbs and Wisdom errs,
Too fondly gazing on that grief of hers!
What lost a world, and bade a hero fly?
The timid tear in Cleopatra's eye.
Yet be the soft triumvir's fault forgiven;
By this—how many lose not earth—but
heaven!

Consign their souls to man's eternal foe,
And seal their own to spare some wanton's
woe!

XVI

'Tis morn, and o'er his alter'd features
play

The beams—without the hope of yester-
day.

What shall he be ere night? perchance a
thing

O'er which the raven flaps her funeral
wing,

By his closed eye unheeded and unfelt;
While sets that sun, and dews of evening
melt,

Chill, wet, and misty round each stiffen'd
limb,

Refreshing earth—reviving all but him!

CANTO THE THIRD

'Come vedi—ancor non m'abbandona.'—DANTE.

I

SLOW sinks, more lovely ere his race be run,
Along Morea's hills the setting sun;

Not, as in Northern climes, obscurely
bright,

But one unclouded blaze of living light!
O'er the hush'd deep the yellow beam he
throws,

Gilds the green wave, that trembles as it
glows.

On old Ægina's rock and Idra's isle,
The god of gladness sheds his parting
smile;

O'er his own regions lingering, loves to
shine,

Though there his altars are no more
divine.

Descending fast the mountain shadows
kiss

Thy glorious gulf, unconquer'd Salamis!
Their azure arches through the long ex-
panse

More deeply purpled meet his mellowing
glance,

And tenderest tints, along their summits
driven,

Mark his gay course, and own the hues of
heaven;

Till, darkly shaded from the land and deep,
Behind his Delphian cliff he sinks to sleep.

On such an eve, his palest beam he cast,
When—Athens! here thy Wisest look'd
his last.

How watch'd thy better sons his farewell
ray,
That closed their murder'd sage's rarest
day!

Not yet—not yet—Sol pauses on the hill—
The precious hour of parting lingers still;
But sad his light to agonising eyes, 25
And dark the mountain's once delightful
dyes;

Gloom o'er the lovely land he seem'd to
pour,

The land, where Phœbus never frown'd
before;

But ere he sank below Cithæron's head,
The cup of woe was quaff'd—the spirit
fled; 30

The soul of him who scorn'd to fear or fly—
Who lived and died, as none can live or die!

But lo! from high Hymettus to the plain,
The queen of night asserts her silent reign.
No murky vapour, herald of the storm,
Hides her fair face, nor girds her glowing
form; 36

With cornice glimmering as the moon-
beams play,

There the white column greets her grateful
ray,

And, bright around with quivering beams
beset,

Her emblem sparkles o'er the minaret:
The groves of olive scatter'd dark and
wide 41

Where meek Cephissus pours his scanty
tide,

The cypress saddening by the sacred mosque,

The gleaming turret of the gay kiosk,
And, dun and sombre 'mid the holy calm,
Near Theseus' fane yon solitary palm, 46
All tinged with varied hues arrest the
eye—

And dull were his that pass'd them heed-
less by.

Again the Ægean, heard no more afar, Lulls his chafed breast from elemental
war; 50

Again his waves in milder tints unfold
Their long array of sapphire and of gold, Mix'd with the shades of many a distant
isle,

That frown—where gentler ocean seems to smile.

II

Not now my theme—why turn my thoughts
to thee? 55

Oh! who can look along thy native sea,
Nor dwell upon thy name, whate'er the
tale,

So much its magic must o'er all prevail?
Who that beheld that Sun upon thee set, Fair Athens! could thine evening face forget? 60

Not he—whose heart nor time nor distance frees,

Spell-bound within the clustering Cyclades!

Nor seems this homage foreign to its
strain,

His Corsair's isle was once thine own do-
main—

Would that with freedom it were thine
again! 65

The Sun hath sunk—and, darker than the
night,

Sinks with its beam upon the beacon
height

Medora's heart—the third day's come and
gone—

With it he comes not—sends not—faithless one!

The wind was fair though light; and storms
were none. 70

Last eve Anselmo's bark return'd, and
yet

His only tidings that they had not met!
Though wild, as now, far different were the tale

Had Conrad waited for that single sail.

The night-breeze freshens—she that day had pass'd 75

In watching all that Hope proclaim'd a
mast;

Sadly she sate on high—Impatience bore
At last her footsteps to the midnight shore,

And there she wander'd, heedless of the spray

That dash'd her garments oft, and warn'd
away: 80

She saw not, felt not this—nor dared de-
part,

Nor deem'd it cold—her chill was at her
heart;

Till grew such certainty from that suspense—

His very sight had shock'd from life or
sense! 84

It came at last—a sad and shatter'd boat, Whose inmates first beheld whom first
they sought;

Some bleeding—all most wretched—these the few—

Scarce knew they how escaped—this all they knew.

In silence, darkling, each appear'd to wait
His fellow's mournful guess at Conrad's
fate: 90

Something they would have said; but seem'd to fear

To trust their accents to Medora's ear.
She saw at once, yet sunk not—trembled
not—

Beneath that grief, that loneliness of lot;

Within that meek fair form were feelings
high,
That deem'd not, till they found, their energy. 95

While yet was Hope they soften'd, flutter'd,
wept—

All lost—that softness died not—but it slept;

And o'er its slumber rose that Strength which said,

'With nothing left to love, there's nought to dread.' 100

'Tis more than nature's; like the burning
might

Delirium gathers from the fever's height.

'Silent you stand—nor would I hear you
tell

What—speak not—breathe not—for I know it well—

Yet would I ask—almost my lip denies The—quick your answer—tell me where he lies.' 106

'Lady! we know not—scarce with life we
fled;

But here is one denies that he is dead:
He saw him bound: and bleeding—but
alive.'

She heard no further—'twas in vain to strive— 110

So throb'd each vein—each thought—
till then withstood;

Her own dark soul—these words at once
subdued:

She totters—falls—and senseless had the
wave

Perchance but snatched her from another
grave,

But that with hands though rude, yet weeping eyes, 115

They yield such aid as Pity's haste supplies:
Dash o'er her deathlike cheek the ocean dew,

Raise, fan, sustain—till life returns anew;
Awake her handmaids, with the matrons
leave

That fainting form o'er which they gaze and grieve; 120

Then seek Anselmo's cavern, to report
The tale too tedious—when the triumph
short.

IV

In that wild council words wax'd warm and strange

With thoughts of ransom, rescue, and revenge;

All, save repose or flight: still lingering
there

Breathed Conrad's spirit, and forbade
despair; 126

Whate'er his fate—the breasts he form'd and led

Will save him living, or appease him dead.

Woe to his foes! there yet survive a few,
Whose deeds are daring, as their hearts are true. 130

Within the Haram's secret chamber sate Stern Seyd, still pondering o'er his Cap-tive's fate;

His thoughts on love and hate alternate
dwell,

Now with Gulnare, and now in Conrad's cell;

Here at his feet the lovely slave reclined
Surveys his brow—would soothe his gloom of mind; 136

While many an anxious glance her large dark eye

Sends in its idle search for sympathy,
His only bends in seeming o'er his beads,
But inly views his victim as he bleeds,

'Pacha! the day is thine; and on thy crest Sits Triumph—Conrad taken—fall'n the
rest!

His doom is fix'd—he dies: and well his
fate

Was earn'd—yet much too worthless for thy hate:

Methinks, a short release, for ransom
told 145

With all his treasure, not unwisely sold;
Report speaks largely of his pirate-hoard—

Would that of this my Pacha were the
lord!

While baffled, weaken'd by this fatal
fray—

Watch'd—follow'd—he were then an easier prey; 150

But once cut off—the remnant of his band
Embark their wealth, and seek a safer
strand.'

'Gulnare!—if for each drop of blood a gem

Were offer'd rich as Stamboul's diadem;
If for each hair of his a massy mine 155

Of virgin ore should supplicating shine;
If all our Arab tales divulge or dream

Of wealth were here—that gold should not redeem! 158

It had not now redeem'd a single hour,
But that I know him fetter'd, in my power;

And, thirsting for revenge, I ponder still On pangs that longest rack, and latest kill.'

'Nay, Seyd! I seek not to restrain thy rage, 163

Too justly moved for mercy to assuage;
My thoughts were only to secure for thee

His riches—thus released, he were not free:
Disabled, shorn of half his might and
band,

His capture could but wait thy first command.'

'His capture could!—and shall I then
resign
One day to him—the wretch already mine?
Release my foe!—at whose remonstrance?
—thine! 171

Fair suitor!—to thy virtuous gratitude,
That thus repays this Giaour's relenting
mood,
Which thee and thine alone of all could
spare,
No thanks—regardless if the prize were
fair, 175
My thanks and praise alike are due—now
hear!

I have a counsel for thy gentler ear:
I do mistrust thee, woman! and each word
Of thine stamps truth on all Suspicion
heard.

Borne in his arms through fire from yon
Serai— 180
Say, wert thou lingering there with him
to fly?

Thou need'st not answer—thy confession
speaks,
Already reddening on thy guilty cheeks;
Then, lovely dame, bethink thee! and beware: 184

'Tis not his life alone may claim such care!
Another word and—nay—I need no more.
Accursed was the moment when he bore Thee from the flames, which better far—but no—

I then had mourn'd thee with a lover's
woe—

Now 'tis thy lord that warns—deceitful
thing! 190

Know'st thou that I can clip thy wanton
wing?

In words alone I am not wont to chafe:
Look to thyself, nor deem thy falsehood
safe!

He rose—and slowly, sternly thence with-
drew,

Rage in his eye and threats in his adieu:
Ah! little reck'd that chief of womanhood— 196

Which frowns ne'er quell'd, nor menaces
subdued;

And little deem'd he what thy heart, Gulnare!

When soft could feel, and when incensed could dare.

His doubts appear'd to wrong—nor yet
she knew 200

How deep the root from whence compassion grew—

She was a slave—from such may captives
claim

A fellow-feeling, differing but in name; Still half unconscious—heedless of his
wrath,

Again she ventured on the dangerous
path, 205

Again his rage repell'd—until arose
That strife of thought, the source of woman's woes!

VI

Meanwhile, long, anxious, weary, still the
same

Roll'd day and night: his soul could terror
tame—

This fearful interval of doubt and dread,
When every hour might doom him worse than dead, 211

When every step that echo'd by the gate,
Might entering lead where axe and stake
await;

When every voice that grated on his ear
Might be the last that he could ever hear;
Could terror tame—that spirit stern and
high 216

Had proved unwilling as unfit to die;
'Twas worn—perhaps decay'd—yet silent
bore

That conflict, deadlier far than all before:
The heat of fight, the hurry of the gale, Leave scarce one thought inert enough to quail; 221

But bound and fix'd in fetter'd solitude,
To pine, the prey of every changing mood;
To gaze on thine own heart; and meditate Irrevocable faults, and coming fate—

Too late the last to shun—the first to
mend— 226

To count the hours that struggle to thine
end,

With not a friend to animate, and tell
To other ears that death became thee well;
Around thee foes to forge the ready lie,
And blot life's latest scene with calumny;
Before thee tortures, which the soul can dare,

Yet doubts how well the shrinking flesh
may bear;

But deeply feels a single cry would shame—
To valour's praise thy last and dearest
claim; 235

The life thou leav'st below, denied above
By kind monopolists of heavenly love;
And more than doubtful paradise—thy
heaven

Of earthly hope—thy loved one from thee
riven.

Such were the thoughts that outlaw must sustain, 240

And govern pangs surpassing mortal pain:
And those sustain'd he—boots it well or
ill?

Since not to sink beneath, is something still!

VII

The first day pass'd—he saw not her—Gulnare—

The second, third—and still she came not
there; 245

But what her words avouch'd, her charms
 had done,
 Or else he had not seen another sun.
 The fourth day roll'd along, and with the
 night
 Came storm and darkness in their mingling might. ²⁴⁹
 Oh! how he listen'd to the rushing deep;
 That ne'er till now so broke upon his sleep;
 And his wild spirit wilder wishes sent,
 Roused by the roar of his own element!
 Oft had he ridden on that winged wave,
 And loved its roughness for the speed it gave; ²⁵⁵
 And now its dashing echo'd on his ear,
 A long known voice—alas! too vainly near!
 Loud sung the wind above; and, doubly
 loud,
 Shook o'er his turret cell the thunder-
 cloud;
 And flash'd the lightning by the latticed bar, ²⁶⁰
 To him more genial than the midnight star:
 Close to the glimmering grate he dragg'd
 his chain;
 And hoped that peril might not prove in
 vain.
 He raised his iron hand to Heaven, and pray'd
 One pitying flash to mar the form it made:
 His steel and impious prayer attract alike— ²⁶⁶
 The storm roll'd onward, and disdain'd to
 strike;
 Its peal wax'd fainter—ceased—he felt
 alone,
 As if some faithless friend had spurn'd his groan!

VIII

The midnight pass'd, and to the massy door ²⁷⁰
 A light step came—it paused—it moved
 once more;
 Slow turns the grating bolt and sullen key:
 'Tis as his heart foreboded—that fair she!
 Whate'er her sins, to him a guardian saint,
 And beauteous still as hermit's hope can paint; ²⁷⁵
 Yet changed since last within that cell she
 came,
 More pale her cheek, more tremulous her
 frame:
 On him she cast her dark and hurried eye,
 Which spoke before her accents—'Thou must die!
 Yes, thou must die—there is but one resource, ²⁸⁰
 The last—the worst—if torture were not
 worse.'

'Lady! I look to none; my lips proclaim What last proclaim'd they—Conrad still
 the same:

Why shouldst thou seek an outlaw's life to
 spare,
 And change the sentence I deserve to bear?
 Well have I earn'd—nor here alone—the meed ²⁸⁶
 Of Seyd's revenge, by many a lawless
 deed.'

'Why should I seek? because—Oh! didst thou not Redeem my life from worse than slavery's
 lot?

Why should I seek?—hath misery made thee blind ²⁹⁰

To the fond workings of a woman's mind?
 And must I say?—albeit my heart rebel With all that woman feels, but should not tell—

Because, despite thy crimes, that heart is moved:

It fear'd thee, thank'd thee, pitied, mad-den'd, loved. ²⁹⁵

Reply not, tell not now thy tale again,
 Thou lov'st another, and I love in vain:
 Though fond as mine her bosom, form
 more fair,

I rush through peril which she would not dare.

If that thy heart to hers were truly dear,
 Were I thine own thou wert not lonely here: ³⁰¹

An outlaw's spouse and leave her lord to
 roam!

What hath such gentle dame to do with
 home?

But speak not now—o'er thine and o'er my head

Hangs the keen sabre by a single thread;
 If thou hast courage still, and wouldst be free, ³⁰⁶

Receive this poniard—rise and follow me!

'Ay—in my chains! my steps will gently
 tread,

With these adornments, o'er each slumbering head! ³⁰⁹

Thou hast forgot—is this a garb for fight?
 Or is that instrument more fit for fight?'

'Misdoubting Corsair! I have gain'd the
 guard,

Ripe for revolt, and greedy for reward.
 A single word of mine removes that chain:

Without some aid how here could I remain? ³¹⁵

Well, since we met, hath sped my busy
 time,

If in aught evil, for thy sake the crime:
 The crime—'tis none to punish those of Seyd.

That hated tyrant, Conrad—he must
 bleed!

I see thee shudder, but my soul is changed—
 Wrong'd, spurn'd, reviled, and it shall be avenged— ³²¹

Accused of what till now my heart disdain'd—
Too faithful, though to bitter bondage chain'd.

Yes, smile!—but he had little cause to sneer,

I was not treacherous then, nor thou too dear:

But he has said it—and the jealous well—
Those tyrants, teasing, tempting to rebel—Deserve the fate their fretting lips foretell.
I never loved—he bought me—somewhat high—

Since with me came a heart he could not buy.

I was a slave un murmuring; he hath said,
But for his rescue I with thee had fled.
'Twas false thou know'st—but let such augurs rue,

Their words are omens insult renders true.
Nor was thy respite granted to my prayer;
This fleeting grace was only to prepare
New torments for thy life, and my despair.
Mine too he threatens; but his dotage still Would fain reserve me for his lordly will:
When wearier of these fleeting charms and me,

There yawns the sack, and yonder rolls the sea!

What, am I then a toy for dotard's play,
To wear but till the gilding frets away?
I saw thee—loved thee—owe thee all—would save,

If but to show how grateful is a slave.
But had he not thus menaced fame and life—

(And well he keeps his oaths pronounced in strife)—

I still had saved thee, but the Pacha spared.
Now I am all thine own, for all prepared:
Thou lov'st me not, nor know'st—or but the worst.

Alas! this love—that hatred—are the first—

Oh! couldst thou prove my truth, thou wouldst not start,

Nor fear the fire that lights an Eastern heart;
'Tis now the beacon of thy safety—now
It points within the port a Mainote prow:
But in one chamber, where our path must lead,

There sleeps—he must not wake—the oppressor Seyd!

'Gulnare—Gulnare—I never felt till now
My abject fortune, wither'd fame so low:
Seyd is mine enemy; had swept my band
From earth with ruthless but with open hand,

And therefore came I, in my bark of war,
To smite the smiter with the scimitar;
Such is my weapon—not the secret knife;
Who spares a woman's seeks not slumber's life.

Thine saved I gladly, Lady—not for this;
Let me not deem that mercy shown amiss.
Now fare thee well—more peace be with thy breast!

Night wears apace, my last of earthly rest!

'Rest! rest! by sunrise must thy sinews shake,

And thy limbs writhe around the ready stake.

I heard the order—saw—I will not see—
If thou wilt perish, I will fall with thee.

My life, my love, my hatred—all below
Are on this cast—Corsair! 'tis but a blow!

Without it flight were idle—how evade
His sure pursuit?—my wrongs too unrepaired,

My youth disgraced, the long, long wasted years,

One blow shall cancel with our future fears;

But since the dagger suits thee less than brand,

I'll try the firmness of a female hand.

The guards are gain'd—one moment all were o'er—

Corsair! we meet in safety or no more;
If errs my feeble hand, the morning cloud
Will hover o'er thy scaffold, and my shroud.

IX

She turn'd, and vanish'd ere he could reply,

But his glance follow'd far with eager eye;
And gathering, as he could, the links that bound

His form, to curl their length, and curb their sound,

Since bar and bolt no more his steps preclude,

He, fast as fetter'd limbs allow, pursued.
'Twas dark and winding, and he knew not where

That passage led; nor lamp nor guard was there:

He sees a dusky glimmering—shall he seek
Or shun that ray so indistinct and weak?

Chance guides his steps—a freshness seems to bear

Full on his brow, as if from morning air;
He reach'd an open gallery—on his eye

Gleam'd the last star of night, the clearing sky:

Yet scarcely heeded these—another light
From a lone chamber struck upon his sight,

Towards it he moved; a scarcely closing door

Reveal'd the ray within, but nothing more.
With hasty step a figure outward pass'd,

Then paused, and turn'd—and paused—
'tis she at last!

No poniard in that hand, nor sign of ill—‘Thanks to that softening heart—she could not kill!’

Again he look’d, the wildness of her eye
Starts from the day abrupt and fearfully.
She stopp’d—threw back her dark far-floating hair, ⁴¹⁰

That nearly veil’d her face and bosom fair,
As if she late had bent her leaning head
Above some object of her doubt or dread.
They meet—upon her brow—unknown,
forgot—

Her hurrying hand had left—’twas but a spot— ⁴¹⁵

Its hue was all he saw, and scarce withstood—

Oh! slight but certain pledge of crime—
’tis blood!

X

He had seen battle—he had brooded lone O’er promised pangs to sentenced guilt
foreshown;

He had been tempted, chasten’d, and the chain ⁴²⁰

Yet on his arms might ever there remain:
But ne’er from strife, captivity, remorse—
From all his feelings in their inmost
force—

So thrill’d, so shudder’d every creeping
vein,

As now they froze before that purple stain.
That spot of blood, that light but guilty streak, ⁴²⁶

Had banish’d all the beauty from her
cheek!

Blood he had view’d, could view unmoved—but then

It flow’d in combat, or was shed by men!

XI

‘’Tis done—he nearly waked—but it is done. ⁴³⁰

Corsair! he perish’d—thou art dearly won.
All words would now be vain—away—
away!

Our bark is tossing—’tis already day.
The few gain’d over, now are wholly mine,
And these thy yet surviving band shall join: ⁴³⁵

Anon my voice shall vindicate my hand,
When once our sail forsakes this hated strand.’

XII

She clapp’d her hands, and through the gallery pour,

Equipp’d for flight, her vassals—Greek and Moor;

Silent but quick they stoop, his chains unbind; ⁴⁴⁰

Once more his limbs are free as mountain
wind!

But on his heavy heart such sadness sate,
As if they there transferr’d that iron
weight.

No words are utter’d—at her sign, a door
Reveals the secret passage to the shore:

The city lies behind—they speed, they reach ⁴⁴⁶

The glad waves dancing on the yellow
beach;

And Conrad following, at her beck, obey’d,
Nor cared he now if rescued or betray’d;
Resistance were as useless as if Seyd
Yet lived to view the doom his ire decreed.

XIII

Embark’d, the sail unfurl’d, the light breeze blew—

How much had Conrad’s memory to review!

Sunk he in contemplation, till the cape
Where last he anchor’d rear’d its giant shape. ⁴⁵⁵

Ah! since that fatal night, though brief the
time,

Had swept an age of terror, grief, and
crime.

As its far shadow frown’d above the mast,
He veil’d his face, and sorrow’d as he
pass’d;

He thought of all—Gonsalvo and his band, ⁴⁶⁰

His fleeting triumph and his failing hand;
He thought on her afar, his lonely bride:
He turn’d and saw—Gulnare, the homicide!

XIV

She watch’d his features till she could not bear ⁴⁶⁴

Their freezing aspect and averted air;
And that strange fierceness, foreign to her
eye,

Fell quench’d in tears, too late to shed or dry.

She knelt beside him and his hand she
press’d,

‘Thou may’st forgive, though Allah’s self
detest;

But for that deed of darkness what wert
thou? ⁴⁷⁰

Reproach me—but not yet—Oh! spare me
now!

I am not what I seem—this fearful night
My brain bewilder’d—do not madden
quite!

If I had never loved, though less my guilt,
Thou hadst not lived to—hate me—if thou wilt. ⁴⁷⁵

XV

She wrongs his thoughts, they more himself upbraid

Than her, though undesign’d, the wretch
he made;

But speechless all, deep, dark, and unexpressed,
They bled within that silent cell—his breast.

Still onward, fair the breeze, nor rough the surge, 480

The blue waves sport around the stern they urge;

Far on the horizon's verge appears a speck,
A spot—a mast—a sail—an armed deck!
Their little bark her men of watch descry,
And ampler canvas woos the wind from high; 485

She bears her down majestically near,
Speed on her prow, and terror in her tier;
A flash is seen—the ball beyond their bow
Booms harmless, hissing to the deep below. 489

Uprose keen Conrad from his silent trance,
A long, long absent gladness in his glance;
"Tis mine—my blood-red flag! again—again—

I am not all deserted on the main!"
They own the signal, answer to the hail,
Hoist out the boat at once, and slacken sail. 495

"Tis Conrad! Conrad!" shouting from the deck, Command nor duty could their transport check!

With light alacrity and gaze of pride,
They view him mount once more his vessel's side;

A smile relaxing in each rugged face, 500
Their arms can scarce forbear a rough embrace.

He, half forgetting danger and defeat,
Returns their greeting as a chief may greet,
Wrings with a cordial grasp Anselmo's hand,

And feels he yet can conquer and command! 505

XVI

These greetings o'er, the feelings that o'erflow,

Yet grieve to win him back without a blow;

They sail'd prepared for vengeance—had they known

A woman's hand secured that deed her own,

She were their queen—less scrupulous are they 510

Than haughty Conrad how they win their way.

With many an asking smile, and wondering stare,

They whisper round, and gaze upon Gulnare;

And her—at once above—beneath her sex,

Whom blood appall'd not, their regards perplex. 515

To Conrad turns her faint imploring eye,
She drops her veil, and stands in silence by;

Her arms are meekly folded on that breast,
Which—Conrad safe—to fate resign'd the rest.

Though worse than frenzy could that bosom fill, 520

Extreme in love or hate, in good or ill,
The worst of crimes had left her woman still!

XVII

This Conrad mark'd, and felt—ah! could he less?—

Hate of that deed, but grief for her distress;

What she has done no tears can wash away, 525

And Heaven must punish on its angry day:

But—it was done: he knew, whate'er her guilt,

For him that poniard smote, that blood was spilt;

And he was free! and she for him had given

Her all on earth, and more than all in heaven! 530

And now he turn'd him to that dark-eyed slave

Whose brow was bow'd beneath the glance he gave,

Who now seem'd changed and humbled, faint and meek,

But varying oft the colour of her cheek
To deeper shades of paleness—all its red 535

That fearful spot which stain'd it from the dead!

He took that hand—it trembled—now too late—

So soft in love, so wildly nerved in hate;
He clasp'd that hand—it trembled—and his own

Had lost its firmness, and his voice its tone. 540

'Gulnare!'—but she replied not—'dear Gulnare!'

She raised her eye—her only answer there—

At once she sought and sunk in his embrace:

If he had driven her from that resting-place,

His had been more or less than mortal heart, 545

But—good or ill—it bade her not depart.

Perchance, but for the bodings of his breast,

His latest virtue then had join'd the rest.
Yet even Medora might forgive the kiss

That ask'd from form so fair no more than this, 550

The first, the last that Frailty stole from Faith—
To lips where Love had lavish'd all his
breath,
To lips—whose broken sighs such fragrance fling,
As he had fann'd them freshly with his wing!

XVIII

They gain by twilight's hour their lonely
isle. 555
To them the very rocks appear to smile;
The haven hums with many a cheering
sound,
The beacons blaze their wonted stations
round,
The boats are darting o'er the curly bay,
And sportive dolphins bend them through
the spray; 560
Even the hoarse sea-bird's shrill, discordant shriek
Greets like the welcome of his tuneless
beak!
Beneath each lamp that through its lattice
gleams,
Their fairy paints the friends that trim
the beams.
Oh! what can sanctify the joys of home,
Like Hope's gay glance from Ocean's troubled foam? 566

XIX

The lights are high on beacon and from
bower,
And 'midst them Conrad seeks Medora's
tower:
He looks in vain—'tis strange—and all remark,
Amid so many, hers alone is dark. 570
'Tis strange—of yore its welcome never
fail'd,
Nor now, perchance, extinguish'd, only
veil'd.
With the first boat descends he for the
shore, 573
And looks impatient on the lingering oar.
Oh! for a wing beyond the falcon's flight,
To bear him like an arrow to that height!
With the first pause the resting rowers
gave,
He waits not, looks not—leaps into the
wave,
Strives through the surge, bestrides the beach, and high 579
Ascends the path familiar to his eye.
He reach'd his turret door—he paused—no sound
Broke from within; and all was night
around.
He knock'd, and loudly—footstep nor reply
Announced that any heard or deem'd him
nigh;

He knock'd, but faintly—for his trembling
hand 585
Refused to aid his heavy heart's demand.
The portal opens—'tis a well-known face,
But not the form he panted to embrace.
Its lips are silent—twice his own essay'd,
And fail'd to frame the question they delay'd; 590
He snatch'd the lamp—its light will answer
all—
It quits his grasp, expiring in the fall.
He would not wait for that reviving ray—
As soon could he have linger'd there for
day;
But, glimmering through the dusky corridor, 595
Another chequers o'er the shadow'd floor;
His steps the chamber gain—his eyes be-
hold
All that his heart believed not—yet foretold!

XX

He turn'd not—spoke not—sunk not—fix'd his look,
And set the anxious frame that lately
shook: 600
He gazed—how long we gaze despite of
pain,
And know, but dare not own, we gaze in
vain!
In life itself she was so still and fair,
That death with gentler aspect wither'd
there;
And the cold flowers her colder hand con-
tain'd, 605
In that last grasp as tenderly were strain'd
As if she scarcely felt, but feign'd a sleep,
And made it almost mockery yet to weep:
The long dark lashes fringed her lids of
snow,
And veil'd—thought shrinks from all that lurk'd below— 610
Oh! o'er the eye Death most exerts his
might,
And hurls the spirit from her throne of
light;
Sinks those blue orbs in that long last eclipse,
But spares, as yet, the charm around her lips—
Yet, yet they seem as they forbore to
smile, 615
And wish'd repose,—but only for a while;
But the white shroud, and each extended
tress,
Long, fair—but spread in utter lifeless-
ness,
Which, late the sport of every summer wind, Escaped the baffled wreath that strove to
bind; 620
These—and the pale pure cheek, became the bier—
But she is nothing—wherefore is he here?

XXI

He ask'd no question—all were answer'd
 now
 By the first glance on that still, marble
 brow.
 It was enough—she died—what reck'd it
 how? 625
 The love of youth, the hope of better
 years,
 The source of softest wishes, tenderest
 fears,
 The only living thing he could not hate,
 Was reft at once—and he deserved his
 fate,
 But did not feel it less;—the good explore, 630
 For peace, those realms where guilt can never soar:
 The proud, the wayward—who have fix'd
 below
 Their joy, and find this earth enough for
 woe,
 Lose in that one their all—perchance a mite—
 But who in patience parts with all de-
 light? 635
 Full many a stoic eye and aspect stern Mask hearts where grief hath little left to learn;
 And many a withering thought lies hid,
 not lost,
 In smiles that least befit who wear them
 most. 639

XXII

By those, that deepest feel, is ill exprest
 The indistinctness of the suffering breast;
 Where thousand thoughts begin to end in
 one,
 Which seeks from all the refuge found in
 none;
 No words suffice the secret soul to show,
 For Truth denies all eloquence to Woe.
 On Conrad's stricken soul exhaustion
 prest, 646
 And stupor almost lull'd it into rest;
 So feeble now—his mother's softness crept
 To those wild eyes, which like an infant's
 wept:
 It was the very weakness of his brain,
 Which thus confess'd without relieving
 pain. 651
 None saw his trickling tears—perchance,
 if seen,
 That useless flood of grief had never been:
 Nor long they flow'd—he dried them to
 depart,
 In helpless—hopeless—brokenness of
 heart: 655
 The sun goes forth, but Conrad's day is
 dim;
 And the night cometh—ne'er to pass from
 him.

There is no darkness like the cloud of
 mind,
 On Grief's vain eye—the blindest of the blind!
 Which may not—dare not see—but turns
 aside 660
 To blackest shade—nor will endure a guide!

XXIII

His heart was form'd for softness—warp'd to wrong;
 Betray'd too early, and beguiled too long;
 Each feeling pure—as falls the dropping
 dew
 Within the grot—like that had harden'd
 too; 665
 Less clear, perchance, its earthly trials
 pass'd,
 But sunk, and chill'd, and petrified at last.
 Yet tempests wear, and lightning cleaves
 the rock;
 If such his heart, so shatter'd it the
 shock.
 There grew one flower beneath its rugged
 brow, 670
 Though dark the shade—it shelter'd—
 saved till now.
 The thunder came—that bolt hath blasted
 both,
 The Granite's firmness, and the Lily's
 growth:
 The gentle plant hath left no leaf to tell
 Its tale, but shrunk and wither'd where it
 fell; 675
 And of its cold protector, blacken round
 But shiver'd fragments on the barren
 ground!

XXIV

'Tis morn—to venture on his lonely
 hour
 Few dare; though now Anselmo sought his tower.
 He was not there, nor seen along the
 shore; 680
 Ere night, alarm'd, their isle is traversed
 o'er:
 Another morn—another bids them seek,
 And shout his name till echo waxeth
 weak;
 Mount, grotto, cavern, valley search'd in
 vain,
 They find on shore a sea-boat's broken
 chain: 685
 Their hope revives—they follow o'er the
 main.
 'Tis idle all—moons roll on moons away,
 And Conrad comes not, came not since
 that day:
 Nor trace, nor tidings of his doom declare
 Where lives his grief, or perish'd his
 despair! 690

Long mourn'd his band whom none could mourn beside;
And fair the monument they gave his
bride:
For him they raise not the recording
stone—

His death yet dubious, deeds too widely
known;
He left a Corsair's name to other
times,
Link'd with one virtue, and a thousand crimes.

LARA

CANTO THE FIRST

I

THE Serfs are glad through Lara's wide
domain,
And Slavery half forgets her feudal chain;
He, their unhoped, but unforgotten lord,
The long self-exiled chieftain, is restored:
There be bright faces in the busy hall, 5 Bowls on the board, and banners on the
wall;
Far checkering o'er the pictured window,
plays
The unwonted faggot's hospitable blaze;
And gay retainers gather round the hearth,
With tongues all loudness, and with eyes
all mirth. 10

II

The chief of Lara is returned again:
And why had Lara cross'd the bounding
main?
Left by his sire, too young such loss to
know,
Lord of himself,—that heritage of woe,
That fearful empire which the human
breast 15
But holds to rob the heart within of rest!—
With none to check, and few to point in
time
The thousand paths that slope the way to
crime;
Then, when he most required commandment, then
Had Lara's daring boyhood govern'd
men. 20
It skills not, boots not step by step to
trace
His youth through all the mazes of its
race;
Short was the course his restlessness had
run,
But long enough to leave him half undone.

And Lara left in youth his father-land;
But from the hour he waved his parting
hand 26
Each trace wax'd fainter of his course, till
all
Had nearly ceased his memory to recall.

His sire was dust, his vassals could declare,
'Twas all they knew, that Lara was not
there; 30
Nor sent, nor came he, till conjecture
grew
Cold in the many, anxious in the few.
His hall scarce echoes with his wonted
name,
His portrait darkens in its fading frame,
Another chief consoled his destined bride,
The young forgot him, and the old had
died; 36
'Yet doth he live!' exclaims the impatient
heir,
And sighs for sables which he must not
wear.
A hundred scutcheons deck with gloomy
grace
The Laras' last and longest dwelling-
place; 40
But one is absent from the mouldering
file,
That now were welcome in that Gothic pile.

IV

He comes at last in sudden loneliness,
And whence they know not, why they need not guess;
They more might marvel, when the greet-ing's o'er, 45
Not that he came, but came not long
before:
No train is his beyond a single page,
Of foreign aspect, and of tender age.
Years had roll'd on, and fast they speed
away
To those that wander as to those that stay; 50
But lack of tidings from another clime
Had lent a flagging wing to weary Time.
They see, they recognise, yet almost deem
The present dubious, or the past a dream.

He lives, nor yet is past his manhood's
prime, 55
Though sear'd by toil, and something
touch'd by time;
His faults, whate'er they were, if scarce
forgot,
Might be untaught him by his varied lot;

Nor good nor ill of late were known, his
 name
 Might yet uphold his patrimonial fame:
 His soul in youth was haughty, but his sins 61
 No more than pleasure from the stripling wins;
 And such, if not yet harden'd in their
 course,
 Might be redeem'd, nor ask a long remorse.

V

And they indeed were changed—'tis quickly seen, 65
 Whate'er he be, 'twas not what he had
 been:
 That brow in furrow'd lines had fix'd at
 last,
 And spake of passions, but of passion
 past:
 The pride, but not the fire, of early days, Coldness of mien, and carelessness of
 praise; 70
 A high demeanour, and a glance that took Their thoughts from others by a single
 look;
 And that sarcastic levity of tongue,
 The stinging of a heart the world hath
 stung,
 That darts in seeming playfulness around,
 And makes those feel that will not own
 the wound; 76
 All these seem'd his, and something more
 beneath
 Than glance could well reveal, or accent
 breathe.
 Ambition, glory, love, the common aim,
 That some can conquer, and that all would
 claim, 80
 Within his breast appear'd no more to strive,
 Yet seem'd as lately they had been alive;
 And some deep feeling it were vain to
 trace
 At moments lighten'd o'er his livid face.

VI

Not much he loved long question of the
 past, 85
 Nor told of wondrous wilds, and deserts vast,
 In those far lands where he had wander'd
 lone,
 And—as himself would have it seem—un-
 known;
 Yet these in vain his eye could scarcely
 scan,
 Nor glean experience from his fellow
 man; 90
 But what he had beheld he shunn'd to
 show,
 As hardly worth a stranger's care to
 know;

If still more prying such inquiry grew,
 His brow fell darker, and his words more
 few.

VII

Not unrejoiced to see him once again,
 Warm was his welcome to the haunts of
 men; 96
 Born of high lineage, link'd in high command,
 He mingled with the magnates of his land;
 Join'd the carousals of the great and
 gay,
 And saw them smile or sigh their hours
 away; 100
 But still he only saw, and did not share,
 The common pleasure or the general care;
 He did not follow what they all pursued
 With hope still baffled, still to be renew'd;
 Nor shadowy honour, nor substantial gain, 105
 Nor beauty's preference, and the rival's
 pain:
 Around him some mysterious circle
 thrown Repell'd approach, and show'd him still
 alone;
 Upon his eye sat something of reproof,
 That kept at least frivolity aloof; 110
 And things more timid that beheld him
 near
 In silence gazed, or whisper'd mutual fear;
 And they the wiser, friendlier few con-
 fess'd
 They deem'd him better than his air ex-
 press'd.

VIII

'Twas strange—in youth all action and all
 life, 115
 Burning for pleasure, not averse from
 strife;
 Woman, the field, the ocean, all that gave Promise of gladness, peril of a grave,
 In turn he tried—he ransack'd all be-
 low,
 And found his recompense in joy or woe,
 No tame, trite medium; for his feelings
 sought 121
 In that intenseness an escape from thought:
 The tempest of his heart in scorn had
 gazed
 On that the feebler elements had raised;
 The rapture of his heart had look'd on
 high, 125
 And ask'd if greater dwelt beyond the
 sky:
 Chain'd to excess, the slave of each extremes,
 How woke he from the wildness of that
 dream?
 Alas! he told not—but he did awake
 To curse the wither'd heart that would not break. 130

IX

Books, for his volume heretofore was
 Man,
 With eye more curious he appear'd to
 scan,
 And oft, in sudden mood, for many a day,
 From all communion he would start
 away:
 And then, his rarely call'd attendants said,
 Through night's long hours would sound his hurried tread 136
 O'er the dark gallery, where his fathers
 frown'd
 In rude but antique portraiture around:
 They heard, but whisper'd—'that must not be known—
 The sound of words less earthly than his
 own. 140
 Yes, they who chose might smile, but some had seen
 They scarce knew what, but more than should have been.
 Why gazed he so upon the ghastly head
 Which hands profane had gather'd from
 the dead,
 That still beside his open'd volume lay,
 As if to startle all save him away? 146
 Why slept he not when others were at rest?
 Why heard no music, and received no
 guest?
 All was not well, they deem'd—but where
 the wrong?
 Some knew perchance—but 'twere a tale
 too long; 150
 And such besides were too discreetly wise,
 To more than hint their knowledge in surmise;
 But if they would—they could'—around the board
 Thus Lara's vassals prattled of their lord.

X

It was the night—and Lara's glassy stream
 The stars are studding, each with imaged
 beam; 156
 So calm, the waters scarcely seem to stray,
 And yet they glide like happiness away;
 Reflecting far and fairy-like from high
 The immortal lights that live along the
 sky: 160
 Its banks are fringed with many a goodly
 tree,
 And flowers the fairest that may feast the bee;
 Such in her chaplet infant Dian wove,
 And Innocence would offer to her love.
 These deck the shore; the waves their channel make 165
 In windings bright and mazy like the
 snake.
 All was so still, so soft in earth and air,
 You scarce would start to meet a spirit
 there;

Secure that nought of evil could delight
 To walk in such a scene, on such a night!
 It was a moment only for the good: 171
 So Lara deem'd, nor longer there he stood,
 But turn'd in silence to his castle-gate;
 Such scene his soul no more could contemplate:
 Such scene reminded him of other days,
 Of skies more cloudless, moons of purer
 blaze, 176
 Of nights more soft and frequent, hearts that now—
 No—no—the storm may beat upon his
 brow,
 Unfelt, unsparring—but a night like this,
 A night of beauty, mock'd such breast as
 his. 180

XI

He turn'd within his solitary hall,
 And his high shadow shot along the wall:
 There were the painted forms of other
 times,
 'Twas all they left of virtues or of crimes,
 Save vague tradition; and the gloomy
 vaults 185
 That hid their dust, their foibles, and their faults;
 And half a column of the pompous page,
 That speeds the specious tale from age to
 age;
 Where history's pen its praise or blame
 supplies,
 And lies like truth, and still most truly
 lies. 190
 He wandering mused, and as the moon-beam shone
 Through the dim lattice o'er the floor of
 stone,
 And the high fretted roof, and saints, that
 there
 O'er Gothic windows knelt in pictured
 prayer,
 Reflected in fantastic figures grew, 195
 Like life, but not like mortal life to view:
 His bristling locks of sable, brow of
 gloom,
 And the wide waving of his shaken plume,
 Glanced like a spectre's attributes, and
 gave
 His aspect all that terror gives the grave.

XII

'Twas midnight—all was slumber; the lone light 201
 Dimm'd in the lamp, as loth to break the
 night.
 Hark! there be murmurs heard in Lara's
 hall—
 A sound, a voice, a shriek, a fearful call!
 A long, loud shriek—and silence—did they hear 205
 That frantic echo burst the sleeping ear?

LARA

They heard and rose, and, tremulously
 brave,
 Rush where the sound invoked their aid
 to save;
 They come with half-lit tapers in their
 hands,
 And snatch'd in startled haste unbelied brands. 210

XIII

Cold as the marble where his length was
 laid,
 Pale as the beam that o'er his features
 play'd,
 Was Lara stretch'd; his half-drawn sabre
 near,
 Dropp'd it should seem in more than nature's fear;
 Yet he was firm, or had been firm till
 now, 215
 And still defiance knit his gather'd brow;
 Though mix'd with terror, senseless as he
 lay,
 There lived upon his lip the wish to slay;
 Some half-form'd threat in utterance there had died, 219
 Some imprecation of despairing pride;
 His eye was almost seal'd, but not forsook,
 Even in its trance, the gladiator's look,
 That oft awake his aspect could disclose,
 And now was fix'd in horrible repose.
 They raise him—bear him:—hush! he breathes, he speaks, 225
 The swarthy blush recolours in his cheeks,
 His lip resumes its red, his eye, though
 dim,
 Rolls wide and wild, each slowly quivering
 limb
 Recalls its function, but his words are strung
 In terms that seem not of his native
 tongue; 230
 Distinct but strange, enough they understand
 To deem them accents of another land;
 And such they were, and meant to meet an
 ear
 That hears him not—alas! that cannot hear!

XIV

His page approach'd, and he alone appear'd 235
 To know the import of the words they
 heard;
 And, by the changes of his cheek and
 brow,
 They were not such as Lara should avow,
 Nor he interpret,—yet with less surprise
 Than those around their chieftain's state he eyes, 240
 But Lara's prostrate form he bent beside,
 And in that tongue which seem'd his own
 replied,

And Lara heeds those tones that gently
 seem
 To soothe away the horrors of his dream—
 If dream it were that thus could overthrow 245
 A breast that needed not ideal woe.

XV

Whate'er his frenzy dream'd or eye beheld,—
 If yet remember'd ne'er to be reveal'd,— Rests at his heart: the custom'd morning
 came,
 And breathed new vigour in his shaken
 frame; 250
 And solace sought he none from priest
 nor leech,
 And soon the same in movement and in
 speech,
 As heretofore he fill'd the passing hours,
 Nor less he smiles, nor more his forehead
 lowers,
 Than these were wont; and if the coming
 night 255
 Appear'd less welcome now to Lara's sight,
 He to his marvelling vassals show'd it not,
 Whose shuddering proved their fear was less forgot.
 In trembling pairs (alone they dared not) crawl
 The astonish'd slaves, and shun the fated
 hall; 260
 The waving banner, and the clapping
 door,
 The rustling tapestry, and the echoing
 floor;
 The long dim shadows of surrounding
 trees,
 The flapping bat, the night song of the
 breeze;
 Aught they behold or hear their thought
 appals, 265
 As evening saddens o'er the dark grey walls.

XVI

Vain thought! that hour of ne'er unravel'd gloom
 Came not again, or Lara could assume
 A seeming of forgetfulness, that made
 His vassals more amazed nor less afraid.
 Had memory vanish'd then with sense restored? 271
 Since word, nor look, nor gesture of their
 lord
 Betray'd a feeling that recall'd to these
 That fever'd moment of his mind's disease.
 Was it a dream? was his the voice that
 spoke 275
 Those strange wild accents; his the cry that broke Their slumber? his the oppress'd, o'erlabour'd heart
 That ceased to beat, the look that made them start?

Could he who thus had suffer'd so forget,
 When such as saw that suffering shudder
 yet? 280
 Or did that silence prove his memory fix'd
 Too deep for words, indelible, unmix'd
 In that corroding secrecy which gnaws
 The heart to show the effect, but not the
 cause?
 Not so in him; his breast had buried
 both, 285
 Nor common gazers could discern the
 growth
 Of thoughts that mortal lips must leave half told;
 They choke the feeble words that would unfold.

XVII

In him inexplicably mix'd appear'd Much to be loved and hated, sought and fear'd; 290
 Opinion varying o'er his hidden lot,
 In praise or railing ne'er his name forgot:
 His silence form'd a theme for others'
 prate—
 They guess'd, they gazed, they fain would know his fate.
 What had he been? what was he, thus un-
 known, 295
 Who walk'd their world, his lineage only
 known?
 A hater of his kind? yet some would
 say,
 With them he could seem gay amidst the
 gay;
 But own'd that smile, if oft observed and
 near,
 Waned in its mirth, and wither'd to a
 sneer; 300
 That smile might reach his lip, but pass'd not by,
 None e'er could trace its laughter to his
 eye:
 Yet there was softness too in his regard,
 At times, a heart as not by nature hard,
 But once perceived, his spirit seem'd to
 chide 305
 Such weakness, as unworthy of its pride,
 And steel'd itself, as scorning to redeem
 One doubt from others' half-withheld esteem;
 In self-inflicted penance of a breast
 Which tenderness might once have wrung from rest; 310
 In vigilance of grief that would compel
 The soul to hate for having loved too well.

XVIII

There was in him a vital scorn of all:
 As if the worst had fall'n which could be-
 fall,
 He stood a stranger in this breathing
 world, 315
 An erring spirit from another hurl'd;

A thing of dark imaginings, that shaped
 By choice the perils he by chance escaped;
 But 'scaped in vain, for in their memory
 yet
 His mind would half exult and half regret: 320
 With more capacity for love than earth Bestows on most of mortal mould and
 birth,
 His early dreams of good outstripp'd the
 truth,
 And troubled manhood follow'd baffled
 youth;
 With thought of years in phantom chase
 mis-spent, 325
 And wasted powers for better purpose lent;
 And fiery passions that had pour'd their
 wrath
 In hurried desolation o'er his path,
 And left the better feelings all at strife
 In wild reflection o'er his stormy life;
 But haughty still, and loth himself to blame,
 He call'd on Nature's self to share the
 shame,
 And charged all faults upon the fleshly
 form
 She gave to clog the soul, and feast the worm; 334
 Till he at last confounded good and ill,
 And half mistook for fate the acts of will:
 Too high for common selfishness, he could
 At times resign his own for others' good,
 But not in pity, not because he ought,
 But in some strange perversity of thought,
 That sway'd him onward with a secret
 pride 341
 To do what few or none would do beside;
 And this same impulse would, in tempting
 time,
 Mislead his spirit equally to crime;
 So much he soar'd beyond, or sunk beneath, 345
 The men with whom he felt condemn'd to
 breathe,
 And long'd by good or ill to separate Himself from all who shared his mortal
 state;
 His mind abhorring this, had fix'd her
 throne
 Far from the world, in regions of her
 own; 350
 Thus coldly passing all that pass'd below,
 His blood in temperate seeming now
 would flow:
 Ah! happier if it ne'er with guilt had
 glow'd,
 But ever in that icy smoothness flow'd!
 'Tis true, with other men their path he walk'd, 355
 And like the rest in seeming did and talk'd, Nor outraged Reason's rules by flaw nor
 start,
 His madness was not of the head, but
 heart;

And rarely wander'd in his speech, or
drew
His thoughts so forth as to offend the
view. 360

XIX

With all that chilling mystery of mien,
And seeming gladness to remain unseen,
He had (if 'twere not nature's boon) an
art
Of fixing memory on another's heart:
It was not love perchance, nor hate, nor aught 365
That words can image to express the
thought;
But they who saw him did not see in vain,
And once beheld, would ask of him again:
And those to whom he spake remember'd
well,
And on the words, however light, would
dwell: 370
None knew nor how, nor why, but he entwined
Himself perforce around the hearer's mind;
There he was stamp'd, in liking, or in hate,
If greeted once; however brief the date
That friendship, pity, or aversion knew, Still there within the inmost thought he
grew. 376
You could not penetrate his soul, but
found,
Despite your wonder, to your own he
wound;
His presence haunted still; and from the
breast
He forced an all unwilling interest: 380
Vain was the struggle in that mental net,
His spirit seem'd to dare you to forget!

XX

There is a festival, where knights and dames,
And aught that wealth or lofty lineage
claims,
Appear—a high-born and a welcome
guest 385
To Otho's hall came Lara with the rest.
The long carousal shakes the illumined
hall,
Well speeds alike the banquet and the
ball;
And the gay dance of bounding Beauty's
train
Links grace and harmony in happiest
chain: 390
Blest are the early hearts and gentle hands
That mingle there in well according bands;
It is a sight the careful brow might smooth,
And make Age smile, and dream itself to
youth,
And Youth forget such hour was past on
earth, 395
So springs the exulting bosom to that mirth!

XXI

And Lara gazed on these, sedately glad,
His brow belied him if his soul was sad;
And his glance follow'd fast each fluttering
fair,
Whose steps of lightness woke no echo
there: 400
He lean'd against the lofty pillar nigh,
With folded arms and long attentive eye,
Nor mark'd a glance so sternly fix'd on
his—
Ill brook'd high Lara scrutiny like this:
At length he caught it, 'tis a face un-
known, 405
But seems as searching his, and his alone;
Prying and dark, a stranger's by his mien,
Who still till now had gazed on him un-
seen:
At length encountering meets the mutual
gaze 409
Of keen inquiry, and of mute amaze;
On Lara's glance emotion gathering grew,
As if distrusting that the stranger threw;
Along the stranger's aspect, fix'd and
stern,
Flash'd more than thence the vulgar eye could learn.

XXII

"Tis he!" the stranger cried, and those that heard 415
Re-echoed fast and far the whisper'd
word.
"Tis he!"—"Tis who?" they question far
and near,
Till louder accents rung on Lara's ear;
So widely spread, few bosoms well could brook
The general marvel, or that single look:
But Lara stirr'd not, changed not, the surprise 421
That sprung at first to his arrested eyes Seem'd now subsided, neither sunk nor raised
Glanced his eye round, though still the stranger gazed;
And drawing nigh, exclaim'd, with haughty sneer, 425
"Tis he! how came he thence?—what doth he here?"

XXIII

It were too much for Lara to pass by Such questions, so repeated fierce and
high;
With look collected, but with accent cold,
More mildly firm than petulantly bold,
He turn'd, and met the inquisitorial tone—
'My name is Lara!—when thine own is
known, 432
Doubt not my fitting answer to requite
The unlook'd-for courtesy of such a knight.

'Tis Lara!—further wouldst thou mark or ask? ⁴³⁵
I shun no question, and I wear no mask.'

'Thou shunn'st no question! Ponder—is there none
Thy heart must answer, though thine ear would shun?
And deem'st thou me unknown too?
Gaze again!
At least thy memory was not given in vain. ⁴⁴⁰
Oh! never canst thou cancel half her debt,
Eternity forbids thee to forget.'
With slow and searching glance upon his
face
Grew Lara's eyes, but nothing there could
trace
They knew, or chose to know—with dubious look ⁴⁴⁵
He deign'd no answer, but his head he
shook,
And half contemptuous turn'd to pass
away;
But the stern stranger motion'd him to stay.
'A word!—I charge thee stay, and answer
here
To one, who, wert thou noble, were thy peer, ⁴⁵⁰
But as thou wast and art—nay, frown not,
lord,
If false, 'tis easy to disprove the word—
But as thou wast and art, on thee looks
down,
Distrusts thy smiles, but shakes not at thy
frown.
Art thou not he? whose deeds——'
'Whate'er I be,
Words wild as these, accusers like to thee, ⁴⁵⁶
I list no further; those with whom they weigh
May hear the rest, nor venture to gainsay
The wondrous tale no doubt thy tongue
can tell,
Which thus begins so courteously and well. ⁴⁶⁰
Let Otho cherish here his polish'd guest,
To him my thanks and thoughts shall be express'd.' And here thy wondering host hath interposed—
'Whate'er there be between you undisclosed, ⁴⁶⁴
This is no time nor fitting place to mar
The mirthful meeting with a wordy war.
If thou, Sir Ezzelin, hast aught to show
Which it befits Count Lara's ear to know,
To-morrow, here, or elsewhere, as may
best Beseeem your mutual judgment, speak the rest; ⁴⁷⁰
I pledge myself for thee, as not unknown,

Though, like Count Lara, now return'd
alone
From other lands, almost a stranger
grown;
And if from Lara's blood and gentle birth
I augur right of courage and of worth,
He will not that untainted line belie, ⁴⁷⁶
Nor aught that knighthood may accord,
deny.'

'To-morrow be it,' Ezzelin replied,
'And here our several worth and truth be tried;
I gage my life, my falchion to attest ⁴⁸⁰
My words, so may I mingle with the blest!'
What answers Lara? to its centre shrunk
His soul, in deep abstraction sudden sunk;
The words of many, and the eyes of all
That there were gather'd, seem'd on him to fall; ⁴⁸⁵
But his were silent, his appear'd to stray
In far forgetfulness away—away—
Alas! that heedlessness of all around Bespoke remembrance only too profound.

XXIV

'To-morrow!—ay, to-morrow!' further word ⁴⁹⁰
Than those repeated none from Lara
heard:
Upon his brow no outward passion spoke;
From his large eye no flashing anger broke;
Yet there was something fix'd in that low
tone,
Which show'd resolve, determined, though unknown. ⁴⁹⁵
He seized his cloak—his head he slightly
bow'd,
And passing Ezzelin, he left the crowd;
And as he pass'd him, smiling met the
frown
With which that chieftain's brow would bear him down:
It was nor smile of mirth, nor struggling pride ⁵⁰⁰
That curbs to scorn the wrath it cannot
hide;
But that of one in his own heart secure
Of all that he would do, or could endure.
Could this mean peace? the calmness of
the good?
Or guilt grown old in desperate hardi-hood? ⁵⁰⁵
Alas! too like in confidence are each,
For man to trust to mortal look or speech;
From deeds, and deeds alone, may he discern
Truths which it wrings the unpractised heart to learn.

XXV

And Lara call'd his page, and went his way— ⁵¹⁰
Well could that stripling word or sign obey:

His only follower from those climes afar,
 Where the soul glows beneath a brighter
 star;
 For Lara left the shore from whence he sprung, ⁵¹⁴
 In duty patient, and sedate though young;
 Silent as him he served, his faith appears Above his station, and beyond his years.
 Though not unknown the tongue of Lara's
 land,
 In such from him he rarely heard command;
 But fleet his step, and clear his tones
 would come, ⁵²⁰
 When Lara's lip breathed forth the words of home:
 Those accents, as his native mountains
 dear,
 Awake their absent echoes in his ear,
 Friends', kindred's, parents' wonted voice
 recall,
 Now lost, abjured, for one—his friend, his all: ⁵²⁵
 For him earth now disclosed no other
 guide;
 What marvel then he rarely left his side?

XXVI

Light was his form, and darkly delicate That brow whereon his native sun had
 sate,
 But had not marr'd, though in his beams
 he grew, ⁵³⁰
 The cheek where oft the unbidden blush shone through;
 Yet not such blush as mounts when health would show
 All the heart's hue in that delighted glow;
 But 'twas a hectic tint of secret care
 That for a burning moment fever'd there;
 And the wild sparkle of his eye seem'd caught ⁵³⁶
 From high, and lighten'd with electric
 thought,
 Though its black orb those long low lashes' fringe
 Had temper'd with a melancholy tinge;
 Yet less of sorrow than of pride was there,
 Or, if 'twere grief, a grief that none should share: ⁵⁴¹
 And pleased not him the sports that please
 his age,
 The tricks of youth, the frolics of the
 page;
 For hours on Lara he would fix his glance,
 As all-forgotten in that watchful trance;
 And from his chief withdrawn, he wander'd lone, ⁵⁴⁶
 Brief were his answers, and his questions
 none;
 His walk the wood, his sport some foreign book;
 His resting-place the bank that curbs the
 brook;

He seem'd, like him he served, to live apart ⁵⁵⁰
 From all that lures the eye, and fills the
 heart;
 To know no brotherhood, and take from
 earth
 No gift beyond that bitter boon—our birth.

XXVII

If aught he loved, 'twas Lara; but was
 shown
 His faith in reverence and in deeds alone;
 In mute attention; and his care, which guess'd ⁵⁵⁶
 Each wish, fulfill'd it ere the tongue ex-
 press'd.
 Still there was haughtiness in all he did,
 A spirit deep that brook'd not to be chid;
 His zeal, though more than that of servile hands, ⁵⁶⁰
 In act alone obeys, his air commands;
 As if 'twas Lara's less than his desire
 That thus he served, but surely not for hire.
 Slight were the tasks enjoin'd him by his lord, ⁵⁶⁴
 To hold the stirrup, or to bear the sword;
 To tune his lute, or, if he will'd it more,
 On tomes of other times and tongues to pore;
 But ne'er to mingle with the menial train,
 To whom he show'd nor deference nor dis-
 dain,
 But that well-worn reserve which proved he knew ⁵⁷⁰
 No sympathy with that familiar crew:
 His soul, whate'er his station or his stem,
 Could bow to Lara, not descend to them.
 Of higher birth he seem'd, and better days,
 Nor mark of vulgar toil that hand betrays,
 So femininely white it might bespeak ⁵⁷⁶ Another sex, when match'd with that smooth cheek,
 But for his garb, and something in his gaze,
 More wild and high than woman's eye
 betrays;
 A latent fierceness that far more became
 His fiery climate than his tender frame:
 True, in his words it broke not from his breast, ⁵⁸²
 But from his aspect might be more than guess'd.
 Kaled his name, though rumour said he
 bore
 Another ere he left his mountain-shore;
 For sometimes he would hear, however nigh, ⁵⁸⁶
 That name repeated loud without reply,
 As unfamiliar, or, if roused again,
 Start to the sound, as but remember'd
 then;
 Unless 'twas Lara's wonted voice that
 spake,
 For then, ear, eyes, and heart would all awake. ⁵⁹¹

XXVIII

He had look'd down upon the festive
hall,
And mark'd that sudden strife so mark'd
of all:

And when the crowd around and near him
told

Their wonder at the calmness of the bold,
Their marvel how the high-born Lara bore
Such insult from a stranger, doubly sore,
The colour of young Kaled went and came,
The lip of ashes, and the cheek of flame;
And o'er his brow the dampening heart-drops threw

The sickening iciness of that cold dew,
That rises as the busy bosom sinks
With heavy thoughts from which reflection shrinks.

Yes—there be things which we must dream
and dare,

And execute ere thought be half aware:
Whate'er might Kaled's be, it was enow
To seal his lip, but agonise his brow.

He gazed on Ezzelin till Lara cast That sidelong smile upon the knight he
pass'd;

When Kaled saw that smile his visage fell,
As if on something recognised right well:
His memory read in such a meaning more Than Lara's aspect unto others wore:

Forward he sprung—a moment, both were
gone,

And all within that hall seem'd left alone;
Each had so fix'd his eye on Lara's mien,
All had so mix'd their feelings with that
scene,

That when his long dark shadow through the porch

No more relieves the glare of yon high
torch,

Each pulse beats quicker, and all bosoms
seem

To bound as doubting from too black a
dream,

Such as we know is false, yet dread in
sooth,

Because the worst is ever nearest truth.
And they are gone—but Ezzelin is there,
With thoughtful visage and imperious air;
But long remain'd not; ere an hour expired
He waved his hand to Otho and retired.

XXIX

The crowd are gone, the revellers at rest;
The courteous host, and all-approving
guest,

Again to that accustom'd couch must creep

Where joy subsides, and sorrow sighs to
sleep,

And man, o'erlabour'd with his being's
strife,

Shrinks to that sweet forgetfulness of life:

There lie love's feverish hope, and cun-
ning's guile,
Hate's working brain, and lull'd ambition's wile;

O'er each vain eye oblivion's pinions wave,
And quench'd existence crouches in a
grave.

What better name may slumber's bed be-
come?
Night's sepulchre, the universal home,
Where weakness, strength, vice, virtue,
sunk supine,

Alike in naked helplessness recline;
Glad for a while to heave unconscious
breath,

Yet wake to wrestle with the dread of
death,

And shun, though day but dawn on ills increased,

That sleep, the loveliest, since it dreams
the least.

CANTO THE SECOND

I

NIGHT wanes—the vapours round the mountains curl'd

Melt into morn, and Light awakes the
world,

Man has another day to swell the past,
And lead him near, to little but his last:
But mighty Nature bounds as from her
birth,

The sun is in the heavens, and life on
earth;

Flowers in the valley, splendour in the
beam,

Health on the gale, and freshness in the stream.

Immortal man! behold her glories shine,
And cry, exulting inly, 'They are thine!'

Gaze on, while yet thy gladden'd eye may
see:

A morrow comes when they are not for
thee:

And grieve what may above thy senseless
bier,

Nor earth nor sky will yield a single tear;
Nor cloud shall gather more, nor leaf shall fall,

Nor gale breathe forth one sigh for thee,
for all;

But creeping things shall revel in their
spoil,

And fit thy clay to fertilise the soil.

II

'Tis morn—'tis noon—assembled in the
hall,

The gather'd chieftains come to Otho's
call;

'Tis now the promised hour, that must proclaim

The life or death of Lara's future fame;

When Ezzelin his charge may here unfold,
And whatsoe'er the tale, it must be told.
His faith was pledged, and Lara's promise given,²⁵
To meet it in the eye of man and heaven.
Why comes he not? Such truths to be divulged,
Methinks the accuser's rest is long indulged.

III

The hour is past, and Lara too is there,
With self-confiding, coldly patient air;³⁰
Why comes not Ezzelin? The hour is past,
And murmurs rise, and Otho's brow's
o'ercast.

'I know my friend! his faith I cannot fear,
If yet he be on earth, expect him here;
The roof that held him in the valley stands
Between my own and noble Lara's lands;
My halls from such a guest had honour
gain'd,

Nor had Sir Ezzelin his host disdain'd,
But that some previous proof forbade his stay,³⁹

And urged him to prepare against to-day;
The word I pledged for his I pledge again,
Or will myself redeem his knighthood's stain.'⁴²

He ceased—and Lara answered, 'I am here
To lend at thy demand a listening ear
To tales of evil from a stranger's tongue, Whose words already might my heart have wrung,'⁴⁶

But that I deem'd him scarcely less than mad,
Or, at the worst, a foe ignobly bad.
I know him not—but me it seems he knew
In lands where—but I must not trifle too:
Produce this babbler—or redeem the pledge;⁵¹
Here in thy hold, and with thy falchion's
edge.'

Proud Otho on the instant, reddening,
threw

His glove on earth, and forth his sabre flew.
'The last alternative befits me best,'⁵⁵
And thus I answer for mine absent guest.
With cheek unchanging from its sallow
gloom,

However near his own or other's tomb;
With hand, whose almost careless coolness
spoke

Its grasp well used to deal the sabre-stroke;
With eye, though calm, determin'd not to spare,⁶¹

Did Lara too his willing weapon bare.
In vain the circling chieftains round them
closed,

For Otho's frenzy would not be opposed;
And from his lip those words of insult fell—⁶⁵

His sword is good who can maintain them
well.

IV

Short was the conflict; furious, blindly
rash,

Vain Otho gave his bosom to the gash:
He bled, and fell; but not with deadly
wound,

Stretch'd by a dexterous sleight along the ground.⁷⁰

'Demand thy life!' He answer'd not: and
then

From that red floor he ne'er had risen
again,

For Lara's brow upon the moment grew
Almost to blackness in its demon hue;
And fiercer shook his angry falchion now Than when his foe's was levell'd at his brow;⁷⁶

Then all was stern collectedness and art,
Now rose the unleaven'd hatred of his
heart;

So little sparing to the foe he fell'd,
That when the approaching crowd his arm withheld,⁸⁰

He almost turn'd the thirsty point on those
Who thus for mercy dared to interpose;
But to a moment's thought that purpose
bent;

Yet look'd he on him still with eye intent,
As if he loathed the ineffectual strife⁸⁵
That left a foe, howe'er o'ercome, with life;
As if to search how far the wound he gave
Had sent its victim onward to his grave.

V

They raised the bleeding Otho, and the Leech

Forbade all present question, sign, and speech:⁹⁰

The others met within a neighbouring hall,
And he, incensed, and heedless of them
all,

The cause and conqueror in this sudden
fray,

In haughty silence slowly strode away;
He back'd his steed, his homeward path he took,⁹⁵

Nor cast on Otho's towers a single look.

VI

But where was he? that meteor of a night,
Who menaced but to disappear with light.
Where was this Ezzelin? who came and went,

To leave no other trace of his intent.¹⁰⁰
He left the dome of Otho long ere morn,

In darkness, yet so well the path was worn
He could not miss it: near his dwelling lay;
But there he was not, and with coming day
Came fast inquiry, which unfolded nought,
Except the absence of the chief it sought.

A chamber tenantless, a steed at rest,
His host alarm'd, his murmuring squires
distress'd:

Their search extends along, around the
 path,
 In dread to meet the marks of prowlers'
 wrath: 110
 But none are there, and not a brake hath
 borne
 Nor gout of blood, nor shred of mantle
 torn;
 Nor fall nor struggle hath defaced the
 grass,
 Which still retains a mark where murder
 was; 114
 Nor dabbling fingers left to tell the tale,
 The bitter print of each convulsive nail,
 When agonised hands that cease to guard, Wound in the pang that smoothness of the
 sword.

Some such had been, if here a life was
 reft,
 But these were not; and doubting hope is left; 120
 And strange suspicion, whispering Lara's
 name,
 Now daily mutters o'er his blacken'd
 fame;
 Then sudden silent when his form ap-
 pear'd,
 Awaits the absence of the thing it fear'd,
 Again its wonted wondering to renew, 125
 And dye conjecture with a darker hue.

VII

Days roll along, and Otho's wounds are heal'd,
 But not his pride; and hate no more con-
 ceal'd:
 He was a man of power, and Lara's foe,
 The friend of all who sought to work him
 woe, 130
 And from his country's justice now demands
 Account of Ezzelin at Lara's hands.
 Who else than Lara could have cause to
 fear
 His presence? who had made him disappear,
 If not the man on whom his menaced
 charge 135
 Had sate too deeply were he left at large?
 The general rumour ignorantly loud,
 The mystery dearest to the curious crowd;
 The seeming friendlessness of him who strove
 To win no confidence, and wake no love;
 The sweeping fierceness which his soul
 betray'd, 141
 The skill with which he wielded his keen
 blade;
 Where had his arm unwarlike caught that
 art?
 Where had that fierceness grown upon his
 heart? 144
 For it was not the blind capricious rage
 A word can kindle and a word assuage;

But the deep working of a soul unmix'd
 With aught of pity where its wrath had
 fix'd;
 Such as long power and overgorged
 success
 Concentrates into all that's merciless:
 These, link'd with that desire which ever sways 151
 Mankind, the rather to condemn than
 praise,
 'Gainst Lara gathering raised at length a
 storm,
 Such as himself might fear, and foes would
 form, 154
 And he must answer for the absent head
 Of one that haunts him still, alive or dead.

VIII

Within that land was many a malcontent,
 Who cursed the tyranny to which he bent;
 That soil full many a wringing despot saw Who work'd his wantonness in form of
 law; 160
 Long war without and frequent broil with-
 in
 Had made a path for blood and giant sin,
 That waited but a signal to begin
 New havoc, such as civil discord blends, Which knows no neuter, owns but foes or
 friends; 165
 Fix'd in his feudal fortress each was lord,
 In word and deed obey'd, in soul abhorr'd.
 Thus Lara had inherited his lands,
 And with them pining hearts and sluggish
 hands;
 But that long absence from his native
 clime 170
 Had left him stainless of oppression's
 crime,
 And now, diverted by his milder sway,
 All dread by slow degrees had worn away.
 The menials felt their usual awe alone,
 But more for him than them that fear was
 grown; 175
 They deem'd him now unhappy, though at
 first
 Their evil judgment augur'd of the worst,
 And each long restless night, and silent
 mood,
 Was traced to sickness, fed by solitude:
 And though his lonely habits threw of
 late 180
 Gloom o'er his chamber, cheerful was his
 gate;
 For thence the wretched ne'er unsoothed
 withdrew,
 For them, at least, his soul compassion
 knew.
 Cold to the great, contemptuous to the
 high,
 The humble pass'd not his unheeding eye;
 Much he would speak not, but beneath his roof 186
 They found asylum oft, and ne'er reproof.

And they who watch'd might mark that,
 day by day,
 Some new retainers gather'd to his sway;
 But most of late, since Ezzelin was lost,
 He play'd the courteous lord and bounteous host: 191
 Perchance his strife with Otho made him
 dread
 Some snare prepared for his obnoxious
 head;
 Whate'er his view, his favour more obtains
 With these, the people, than his fellow thanes. 195
 If this were policy, so far 'twas sound,
 The million judged but of him as they
 found;
 From him by sterner chiefs to exile driven
 They but required a shelter, and 'twas given.
 By him no peasant mourn'd his rifled cot,
 And scarce the Serf could murmur o'er his
 lot; 201
 With him old avarice found its hoard secure,
 With him contempt forbore to mock the poor;
 Youth present cheer and promised recom-
 pense
 Detain'd, till all too late to part from thence:
 To hate he offer'd, with the coming
 change, 206
 The deep reversion of delay'd revenge;
 To love, long baffled by the unequal match,
 The well-won charms success was sure to snatch. 209
 All now was ripe, he waits but to proclaim
 That slavery nothing which was still a name.
 The moment came, the hour when Otho
 thought Secure at last the vengeance which he sought: 213
 His summons found the destined criminal
 Begirt by thousands in his swarming hall,
 Fresh from their feudal fetters newly riven,
 Defying earth, and confident of heaven.
 That morning he had freed the soil-bound
 slaves,
 Who dig no land for tyrants but their graves!
 Such is their cry—some watchword for the
 fight 220
 Must vindicate the wrong, and warp the
 right;
 Religion—freedom—vengeance—what you will,
 A word's enough to raise mankind to kill;
 Some factious phrase by cunning caught and spread,
 That guilt may reign, and wolves and worms be fed! 225

IX

Throughout that clime the feudal chiefs had gain'd
 Such sway, their infant monarch hardly reign'd;

Now was the hour for faction's rebel
 growth,
 The Serfs contemn'd the one, and hated
 both: 229
 They waited but a leader, and they found
 One to their cause inseparably bound;
 By circumstance compell'd to plunge
 again,
 In self-defence, amidst the strife of men.
 Cut off by some mysterious fate from those Whom birth and nature meant not for his
 foes, 235
 Had Lara from that night, to him accurst,
 Prepared to meet, but not alone, the worst:
 Some reason urged, whate'er it was, to
 shun
 Inquiry into deeds at distance done; 239
 By mingling with his own the cause of all,
 E'en if he fail'd, he still delay'd his fall.
 The sullen calm that long his bosom kept,
 The storm that once had spent itself and
 slept,
 Roused by events that seem'd foredoom'd to urge
 His gloomy fortunes to their utmost verge, Burst forth, and made him all he once had
 been, 246
 And is again; he only changed the scene.
 Light care had he for life, and less for fame,
 But not less fitted for the desperate game:
 He deem'd himself mark'd out for others'
 hate, 250
 And mock'd at ruin so they shared his fate.
 What cared he for the freedom of the
 crowd?
 He raised the humble but to bend the
 proud.
 He had hoped quiet in his sullen lair,
 But man and destiny beset him there:
 Inured to hunters, he was found at bay;
 And they must kill, they cannot snare the
 prey. 257
 Stern, unambitious, silent, he had been Henceforth a calm spectator of life's scene;
 But dragg'd again upon the arena, stood
 A leader not unequal to the feud; 261
 In voice, mien, gesture, savage nature
 spoke,
 And from his eye the gladiator broke.

X

What boots the oft-repeated tale of strife,
 The feast of vultures, and the waste of life?
 The varying fortune of each separate field,
 The fierce that vanquish, and the faint that
 yield? 267
 The smoking ruin, and the crumbled wall?
 In this the struggle was the same with all;
 Save that distemper'd passions lent their
 force 270
 In bitterness that banish'd all remorse.
 None sued, for Mercy knew her cry was
 vain,
 The captive died upon the battle-slain:

In either cause, one rage alone possess'd
The empire of the alternate victor's breast;
And they that smote for freedom or for
sway, 276
Deem'd few were slain, while more re-main'd to slay.

It was too late to check the wasting brand,
And Desolation reap'd the famish'd land;
The torch was lighted, and the flame was
spread, 280
And Carnage smiled upon her daily dead.

XI

Fresh with the nerve the new-born impulse
strung,

The first success to Lara's numbers clung:
But that vain victory hath ruin'd all;
They form no longer to their leader's call:
In blind confusion on the foe they press,
And think to snatch is to secure success.
The lust of booty, and the thirst of hate,
Lure on the broken brigands to their fate:
In vain he doth whate'er a chief may do,
To check the headlong fury of that crew;
In vain their stubborn ardour he would
tame, 292

The hand that kindles cannot quench the
flame;

The wary foe alone hath turn'd their
mood,

And shown their rashness to that erring
brood: 295

The feign'd retreat, the nightly ambuscade,

The daily harass, and the fight delay'd,
The long privation of the hoped supply,
The tentless rest beneath the humid sky,
The stubborn wall that mocks the leaguer's
art, 300

And palls the patience of his baffled heart,
Of these they had not deem'd: the battle-
day

They could encounter as a veteran may;
But more preferr'd the fury of the strife,
And present death, to hourly suffering
life: 305

And famine wrings, and fever sweeps away
His numbers melting fast from their array;
Intemperate triumph fades to discontent,
And Lara's soul alone seems still unbent:
But few remain to aid his voice and hand,
And thousands dwindled to a scanty band:
Desperate, though few, the last and best remain'd 312

To mourn the discipline they late dis-dain'd.

One hope survives, the frontier is not far,
And thence they may escape from native
war; 315

And bear within them to the neighbouring state

An exile's sorrows, or an outlaw's hate:
Hard is the task their father-land to quit,
But harder still to perish or submit.

XII

It is resolved—they march—consenting
Night 320

Guides with her star their dim and torch-less flight;

Already they perceive its tranquil beam
Sleep on the surface of the barrier stream;
Already they descry—Is yon the bank?
Away! 'tis lined with many a hostile rank.
Return or fly!—What glitters in the rear?
'Tis Otho's banner—the pursuer's spear!
Are those the shepherds' fires upon the
height?

Alas! they blaze too widely for the flight:
Cut off from hope, and compass'd in the
toil, 330

Less blood perchance hath bought a richer spoil!

XIII

A moment's pause—'tis but to breathe their band,

Or shall they onward press, or here with-
stand?

It matters little—if they charge the foes
Who by their border-stream their march
oppose, 335

Some few, perchance, may break and pass
the line,

However link'd to baffle such design.
'The charge be ours! to wait for their assault

Were fate well worthy of a coward's halt,'
Forth flies each sabre, rein'd is every steed,
And the next word shall scarce outstrip
the deed: 341

In the next tone of Lara's gathering
breath

How many shall but hear the voice of death!

XIV

His blade is bared,—in him there is an air
As deep, but far too tranquil for despair;
A something of indifference more than
then 346

Becomes the bravest, if they feel for men.
He turn'd his eye on Kaled, ever near,
And still too faithful to betray one fear;
Perchance 'twas but the moon's dim twilight threw 350

Along his aspect an unwonted hue
Of mournful paleness, whose deep tint ex-
press'd

The truth, and not the terror of his breast.
This Lara mark'd, and laid his hand on
his: 354

It trembled not in such an hour as this;
His lip was silent, scarcely beat his heart,
His eye alone proclaim'd, 'We will not
part!

Thy band may perish, or thy friends may
flee,

Farewell to life, but not adieu to thee!"

The word hath pass'd his lips, and onward driven,³⁶⁰
Pours the link'd band through ranks
asunder riven:
Well has each steed obey'd the armed heel,
And flash the scimitars, and rings the steel;
Outnumber'd, not outbraved, they still oppose
Despair to daring, and a front to foes;
And blood is mingled with the dashing stream,³⁶⁶
Which runs all redly till the morning beam.

XV

Commanding, aiding, animating all,
Where foe appear'd to press, or friend to
fall,
Cheers Lara's voice, and waves or strikes his steel,³⁷⁰
Inspiring hope himself had ceased to feel.
None fled, for well they knew that flight were vain;
But those that waver turn to smite again,
While yet they find the firmest of the foe
Recoil before their leader's look and blow:
Now girt with numbers, now almost alone,
He foils their ranks, or re-unites his own;
Himself he spared not—once they seem'd to fly—³⁷⁸
Now was the time, he waved his hand on
high,
And shook—Why sudden droops that plumed crest?³⁸⁰
The shaft is sped—the arrow's in his
breast!
That fatal gesture left the unguarded side,
And Death has stricken down yon arm of
pride.
The word of triumph fainted from his
tongue;
That hand, so raised, how droopingly it hung!³⁸⁵
But yet the sword instinctively retains,
Though from its fellow shrink the falling
reins;
These Kaled snatches: dizzy with the blow,
And senseless bending o'er his saddle-bow,
Perceives not Lara that his anxious page Beguiles his charger from the combat's rage:³⁹¹
Meantime his followers charge, and charge again;
Too mix'd the slayers now to heed the slain!

XVI

Day glimmers on the dying and the dead,
The cloven cuirass and the helmless head;
The war-horse masterless is on the earth,
And that last gasp hath burst his bloody girth;³⁹⁷
And near, yet quivering with what life re-
main'd,
The heel that urged him and the hand that rein'd;

And some too near that rolling torrent lie,
Whose waters mock the lip of those that die;⁴⁰¹
That panting thirst which scorches in the
breath
Of those that die the soldier's fiery death,
In vain impels the burning mouth to crave
One drop—the last—to cool it for the grave;⁴⁰⁵
With feeble and convulsive effort swept,
Their limbs along the crimson'd turf have crept;
The faint remains of life such struggles
waste,
But yet they reach the stream and bend to
taste:
They feel its freshness, and almost partake—⁴¹⁰
Why pause? No further thirst have they to slake—
It is unquench'd, and yet they feel it not;
It was an agony—but now forgot!

XVII

Beneath a lime, remoter from the scene,
Where but for him that strife had never been,⁴¹⁵
A breathing but devoted warrior lay:
'Twas Lara bleeding fast from life away.
His follower once, and now his only guide,
Kneels Kaled watchful o'er his welling
side,
And with his scarf would stanch the tides
that rush,⁴²⁰
With each convulsion, in a blacker gush;
And then, as his faint breathing waxes
low,
In feebler, not less fatal tricklings flow:
He scarce can speak, but motions him 'tis
vain,
And merely adds another throb to pain.
He clasps the hand that pang which would assuage,⁴²⁶
And sadly smiles his thanks to that dark
page,
Who nothing fears, nor feels, nor heeds,
nor sees,
Save that damp brow which rests upon his knees;
Save that pale aspect, where the eye,
though dim,⁴³⁰
Held all the light that shone on earth for
him.

XVIII

The foe arrives, who long had search'd
the field,
Their triumph nought till Lara too should
yield:
They would remove him, but they see
'twere vain.
And he regards them with a calm disdain,
That rose to reconcile him with his fate,
And that escape to death from living hate:

And Otho comes, and leaping from his
steed,
Looks on the bleeding foe that made him
bleed,
And questions of his state; he answers
not, 440
Scarce glances on him as on one forgo'r,
And turns to Kaled:—each remain'g
word
They understood not, if distinctly heard;
His dying tones are in that other tongue,
To which some strange remembrance wildly clung, 445
They spake of other scenes, but what—is
known
To Kaled, whom their meaning reach'd
alone;
And he replied, though faintly, to their
sound,
While gazed the rest in dumb amazement
round:
They seem'd even then—that twain—unto
the last 450
To half-forget the present in the past;
To share between themselves some separate fate,
Whose darkness none beside should penetrate.

XIX

Their words though faint were many—from the tone
Their import those who heard could judge
alone; 455
From this, you might have deem'd young Kaled's death
More near than Lara's by his voice and
breath,
So sad, so deep, and hesitating broke
The accents his scarce-moving pale lips
spoke;
But Lara's voice, though low, at first was
clear 460
And calm, till murmuring death gasp'd hoarsely near;
But from his visage little could we guess,
So unrepentant, dark, and passionless,
Save that when struggling nearer to his
last,
Upon that page his eye was kindly cast;
And once, as Kaled's answering accents ceased, 466
Rose Lara's hand, and pointed to the East: Whether (as then the breaking sun from
high Roll'd back the clouds) the morrow caught his eye,
Or that 'twas chance, or some remember'd scene, 470
That rais'd his arm to point where such had been,
Scarce Kaled seem'd to know, but turn'd
away,
As if his heart abhorr'd that coming day,

And shrunk his glance before that morning light,
To look on Lara's brow—where all grew
night, 475
Yet sense seem'd left, though better were its loss;
For when one near display'd the absolv-
ing cross,
And proffer'd to his touch the holy bead,
Of which his parting soul might own the
need,
He look'd upon it with an eye profane,
And smiled—Heaven pardon! if 'twere with disdain: 481
And Kaled, though he spoke not, nor withdrew
From Lara's face his fix'd despairing view,
With brow repulsive, and with gesture
swift,
Flung back the hand which held the sacred gift, 485
As if such but disturb'd the expiring man, Nor seem'd to know his life but then
began,
That life of Immortality, secure
To none, save them whose faith in Christ is sure.

XX

But gasping heaved the breath that Lara
drew, 490
And dull the film along his dim eye grew;
His limbs stretch'd fluttering, and his head droop'd o'er
The weak yet still untiring knee that bore;
He press'd the hand he held upon his
heart—
It beats no more, but Kaled will not
part 495
With the cold grasp, but feels, and feels in
vain,
For that faint throb which answers not
again.
'It beats!'—Away, thou dreamer! he is
gone—
It once was Lara which thou look'st upon.

XXI

He gazed, as if not yet had pass'd away
The haughty spirit of that humble clay;
And those around have roused him from his trance,
But cannot tear from thence his fixed
glance;
And when, in raising him from where he
bore
Within his arms the form that felt no
more, 505
He saw the head his breast would still sus-tain,
Roll down like earth to earth upon the
plain;
He did not dash himself thereby, nor tear
The glossy tendrils of his raven hair,

But strove to stand and gaze, but reel'd
and fell, 510
Scarce breathing more than that he loved
so well.

Than that he loved! Oh! never yet beneath
The breast of man such trusty love may breathe!

That trying moment hath at once reveal'd
The secret long and yet but half conceal'd;
In baring to revive that lifeless breast, 516
Its grief seem'd ended, but the sex con-
fess'd;

And life return'd, and Kaled felt no
shame—

What won to her was Womanhood or Fame?

XXII

And Lara sleeps not where his fathers
sleep, 520

But where he died his grave was dug as
deep;

Nor is his mortal slumber less profound,
Though priest nor bless'd nor marble
deck'd the mound,

And he was mourn'd by one whose quiet
grief,

Less loud, outlasts a people's for their
chief. 525

Vain was all question ask'd her of the past,
And vain e'en menace—silent to the last;
She told nor whence, nor why she left behind

Her all for one who seem'd but little kind.
Why did she love him? Curious fool!—be
still— 530

Is human love the growth of human will?
To her he might be gentleness; the stern
Have deeper thoughts than your dull eyes discern,

And when they love, your smilers guess not how

Beats the strong heart, though less the lips
avow. 535

They were not common links, that form'd
the chain

That bound to Lara Kaled's heart and
brain;

But that wild tale she brook'd not to un-
fold,

And seal'd is now each lip that could have told.

XXIII

They laid him in the earth, and on his
breast, 540

Besides the wound that sent his soul to
rest,

They found the scatter'd dints of many a
scar,

Which were not planted there in recent war;
Where'er had pass'd his summer years of
life,

It seems they vanish'd in a land of strife;

But all unknown his glory or his guilt, These only told that somewhere blood was
spilt,

And Ezzelin, who might have spoke the
past,

Return'd no more—that night appear'd
his last. 549

XXIV

Upon that night (a peasant's is the tale)
A Serf that cross'd the intervening vale,
When Cynthia's light almost gave way to
morn,

And nearly veil'd in mist her waning horn;
A Serf, that rose betimes to thread the
wood,

And hew the bough that brought his children's food, 555

Pass'd by the river that divides the plain
Of Otho's lands and Lara's broad domain:
He heard a tramp—a horse and horseman broke

From out the wood—before him was a cloak

Wrapt round some burthen at his saddle-
bow, 560

Bent was his head, and hidden was his
brow.

Roused by the sudden sight at such a time,
And some foreboding that it might be

crime,
Himself unheeded watch'd the stranger's
course,

Who reach'd the river, bounded from his horse, 565

And lifting thence the burthen which he
bore,

Heaved up the bank, and dash'd it from
the shore,

Then paused, and look'd, and turn'd, and seem'd to watch,

And still another hurried glance would
snatch,

And follow with his step the stream that
flow'd, 570

As if even yet too much its surface show'd;
At once he started, stoop'd, around him
strown

The winter floods had scatter'd heaps of
stone;

Of these the heaviest thence he gather'd
there,

And slung them with a more than common
care. 575

Meantime the Serf had crept to where un-
seen

Himself might safely mark what this might
mean;

He caught a glimpse, as of a floating breast,
And something glitter'd starlike on the
vest;

But ere he well could mark the buoyant trunk, 580

A massy fragment smote it, and it sunk:

It rose again, but indistinct to view,
 And left the waters of a purple hue,
 Then deeply disappear'd: the horseman
 gazed 584
 Till ebb'd the latest eddy it had raised;
 Then turning, vaulted on his pawing steed,
 And instant spurr'd him into panting
 speed.
 His face was mask'd—the features of the
 dead,
 If dead it were, escaped the observer's
 dread;
 But if in sooth a star its bosom bore, 590
 Such is the badge that knighthood ever
 wore,
 And such 'tis known Sir Ezzelin had worn
 Upon the night that led to such a morn.
 If thus he perish'd, Heaven receive his
 soul! 594
 His undiscover'd limbs to ocean roll;
 And charity upon the hope would dwell
 It was not Lara's hand by which he fell.

XXV

And Kaled—Lara—Ezzelin, are gone,
 Alike without their monumental stone!
 The first, all efforts vainly strove to wean
 From lingering where her chieftain's blood
 had been: 601
 Grief had so tamed a spirit once too proud,
 Her tears were few, her wailing never loud;
 But furious would you tear her from the
 spot

Where yet she scarce believed that he was
 not, 605
 Her eye shot forth with all the living fire
 That haunts the tigress in her whelpless ire;
 But left to waste her weary moments there,
 She talk'd all idly unto shapes of air,
 Such as the busy brain of Sorrow paints,
 And woos to listen to her fond complaints:
 And she would sit beneath the very tree
 Where lay his drooping head upon her
 knee:
 And in that posture where she saw him
 fall,
 His words, his looks, his dying grasp recall; 615
 And she had shorn, but saved her raven
 hair,
 And oft would snatch it from her bosom
 there,
 And fold, and press it gently to the ground,
 As if she staunch'd anew some phantom's
 wound. 619
 Herself would question, and for him reply;
 Then rising, start, and beckon him to fly
 From some imagined spectre in pursuit;
 Then seat her down upon some linden's
 root,
 And hide her visage with her meagre hand,
 Or trace strange characters along the sand.
 This could not last—she lies by him she
 loved; 626
 Her tale untold, her truth too dearly proved.

THE SIEGE OF CORINTH

'THE grand army of the Turks (in 1715), under the Prime Vizier, to open to themselves a way into the heart of the Morea, and to form the siege of Napoli di Romania, the most considerable place in all that country*, thought it best in the first place to attack Corinth, upon which they made several storms. The garrison being weakened, and the governor seeing it was impossible to hold out against so mighty a force, thought it fit to beat a parley: but while they were treating about the articles, one of the magazines in the Turkish camp, wherein they had six hundred barrels of powder, blew up by accident, whereby six or seven hundred men were killed; which so enraged the infidels, that they would not grant any capitulation, but stormed the place with so much fury, that they took it, and put most of the garrison, with Signior Minotti, the governor, to the sword. The rest, with Antonio Bembo, proveditor extraordinary, were made prisoners of war.'—History of the Turks, vol. iii, p. 151.

* Napoli di Romania is not now the most considerable place in the Morea, but Tripolitza, where the Pacha resides, and maintains his government. Napoli is near Argos. I visited all three in 1810–11, and, in the course of journeying through the country from my first arrival in 1809, I crossed the Isthmus eight times in my way from Attica to the Morea, over the mountains; or in the other direction, when passing from the Gulf of Athens to that of Lepanto. Both the routes are picturesque and beautiful, though very different: that by sea has more sameness; but the voyage being always within sight of land, and often very near it, presents many attractive views of the islands Salamis, Ægina, Poros, &c., and the coast of the Continent.

THE SIEGE OF CORINTH

In the year since Jesus died for men,
Eighteen hundred years and ten,
We were a gallant company,
Riding o'er land, and sailing o'er sea.
Oh! but we went merrily! 5
We forded the river, and clomb the high

hill,
Never our steeds for a day stood still;
Whether we lay in the cave or the shed,
Our sleep fell soft on the hardest bed: 9
Whether we couch'd in our rough capote,
On the rougher plank of our gliding boat,
Or stretch'd on the beach, or our saddles

spread
As a pillow beneath the resting head,
Fresh we woke upon the morrow:

All our thoughts and words had scope,
We had health, and we had hope, 16
Toll and travel, but no sorrow.

We were of all tongues and creeds;—
Some were those who counted beads,
Some of mosque, and some of church, 20
And some, or I mis-say, of neither;
Yet through the wide world might ye

search,
Nor find a motlier crew nor blither.
But some are dead, and some are gone,
And some are scatter'd and alone, 25
And some are rebels on the hills

That look along Epirus' valleys,
Where freedom still at moments rallies,
And pays in blood oppression's ills;

And some are in a far countree, 30
And some all restlessly at home;
But never more, oh! never, we Shall meet to revel and to roam.

But those hardy days flew cheerily!
And when they now fall drearily, 35
My thoughts, like swallows, skim the

main,
And bear my spirit back again
Over the earth, and through the air,
A wild bird and a wanderer.

'Tis this that ever wakes my strain, 40
And oft, too oft, implores again
The few who may endure my lay,
To follow me so far away.

Stranger—wilt thou follow now,
And sit with me on Acro-Corinth's brow?

I

Many a vanish'd year and age, 46
And tempest's breath, and battle's rage,
Have swept o'er Corinth; yet she stands,
A fortress form'd to Freedom's hands.
The whirlwind's wrath, the earthquake's

shock, 50
Have left untouched her hoary rock,
The keystone of a land, which still,
Though fall'n, looks proudly on that hill,

The landmark to the double tide
That purpling rolls on either side, 55
As if their waters chafed to meet,
Yet pause and crouch beneath her feet.

But could the blood before her shed
Since first Timoleon's brother bled,
Or baffled Persia's despot fled, 60

Arise from out the earth which drank
The stream of slaughter as it sank,
That sanguine ocean would o'erflow
Her isthmus idly spread below:

Or could the bones of all the slain, 65
Who perish'd there, be piled again,
That rival pyramid would rise
More mountain-like, through those clear

skies,
Than yon tower-capp'd Acropolis,
Which seems the very clouds to kiss. 70

II

On dun Cithæron's ridge appears
The gleam of twice ten thousand spears;
And downward to the Isthmian plain,
From shore to shore of either main,

The tent is pitch'd, the crescent shines 75
Along the Moslem's leaguering lines;
And the dusk Spahi's bands advance
Beneath each bearded pacha's glance;

And far and wide as eye can reach
The turban'd cohorts throng the beach;
And there the Arab's camel kneels, 81
And there his steed the Tartar wheels;

The Turcoman hath left his herd,
The sabre round his loins to gird;
And there the volleying thunders pour, 85
Till waves grow smoother to the roar.

The trench is dug, the cannon's breath
Wings the far hissing globe of death;
Fast whirl the fragments from the wall,
Which crumbles with the ponderous ball;

And from that wall the foe replies, 91
O'er dusty plain and smoky skies,
With fires that answer fast and well
The summons of the Infidel.

III

But near and nearest to the wall 95
Of those who wish and work its fall,
With deeper skill in war's black art
Than Othman's sons, and high of heart

As any chief that ever stood Triumphant in the fields of blood; 100
From post to post, and deed to deed,
Fast spurring on his reeking steed,

Where sallying ranks the trench assail,
And make the foremost Moslem quail;
Or where the battery, guarded well, 105
Remains as yet impregnable,

Alighting cheerly to inspire
The soldier slackening in his fire;

The first and freshest of the host
Which Stamboul's sultan there can boast,
To guide the follower o'er the field, 111
To point the tube, the lance to wield,
Or whirl around the bickering blade;—
Was Alp, the Adrian renegade!

IV

From Venice—once a race of worth 115
His gentle sires—he drew his birth;
But late an exile from her shore,
Against his countrymen he bore
The arms they taught to bear; and now
The turban girt his shaven brow, 120
Through many a change had Corinth
pass'd

With Greece to Venice' rule at last;
And here, before her walls, with those
To Greece and Venice equal foes,
He stood a foe, with all the zeal 125
Which young and fiery converts feel,
Within whose heated bosom throngs
The memory of a thousand wrongs.
To him had Venice ceased to be
Her ancient civic boast—'the Free'; 130
And in the palace of St. Mark
Unnamed accusers in the dark Within the 'Lion's mouth' had placed
A charge against him uneffaced:
He fled in time, and saved his life, 135
To waste his future years in strife,
That taught his land how great her loss
In him who triumph'd o'er the Cross,
'Gainst which he rear'd the Crescent high,
And battled to avenge or die. 140

Coumourgi—he whose closing scene
Adorn'd the triumph of Eugene,
When on Carlowitz' bloody plain,
The last and mightiest of the slain,
He sank, regretting not to die, 145
But cursed the Christian's victory—
Coumourgi—can his glory cease,
That latest conqueror of Greece,
Till Christian hands to Greece restore
The freedom Venice gave of yore? 150
A hundred years have roll'd away
Since he refix'd the Moslem's sway;
And now he led the Mussulman,
And gave the guidance of the van
To Alp, who well repaid the trust 155
By cities levell'd with the dust;
And proved, by many a deed of death,
How firm his heart in novel faith.

VI

The walls grew weak; and fast and hot
Against them pour'd the ceaseless shot,
With unabating fury sent 161
From battery to battlement;
And thunder-like the pealing din
Rose from each heated culverin;

And here and there some crackling dome
Was fired before the exploding bomb; 166
And as the fabric sank beneath
The shattering shell's volcanic breath,
In red and wreathing columns flash'd
The flame, as loud the ruin crash'd, 170
Or into countless meteors driven,
Its earth-stars melted into heaven;
Whose clouds that day grew doubly dun,
Impervious to the hidden sun,
With volumed smoke that slowly grew
To one wide sky of sulphurous hue. 176

VII

But not for vengeance, long delay'd,
Alone, did Alp, the renegade,
The Moslem warriors sternly teach
His skill to pierce the promised breach:
Within these walls a maid was pent 181
His hope would win, without consent
Of that inexorable sire,
Whose heart refused him in its ire,
When Alp, beneath his Christian name,
Her virgin hand aspired to claim.
In happier mood, and earlier time, 187
While unimpeach'd for traitorous crime,
Gayest in gondola or hall,
He glitter'd through the Carnival;
And tuned the softest serenade
That e'er on Adria's waters play'd
At midnight to Italian maid. 193

VIII

And many deem'd her heart was won;
For sought by numbers, given to none,
Had young Francesca's hand remain'd
Still by the church's bonds unchain'd:
And when the Adriatic bore
Lanciotto to the Paynim shore, 199
Her wonted smiles were seen to fail,
And pensive wax'd the maid and pale;
More constant at confessional,
More rare at masque and festival;
Or seen at such, with downcast eyes,
Which conquer'd hearts they ceased to
prize; 205
With listless look she seems to gaze:
With humbler care her form arrays;
Her voice less lively in the song;
Her step, though light, less fleet among
The pairs, on whom the Morning's glance
Breaks, yet unsated with the dance. 211

IX

Sent by the state to guard the land, (Which, wrested from the Moslem's hand,
While Sobieski tamed his pride
By Buda's wall and Danube's side, 215
The chiefs of Venice wrung away
From Patra to Eubœa's bay,
Minotti held in Corinth's towers
The Doge's delegated powers,
While yet the pitying eye of Peace 220
Smiled o'er her long forgotten Greece:

THE SIEGE OF CORINTH

And ere that faithless truce was broke
Which freed her from the unchristian yoke,
With him his gentle daughter came;
Nor there, since Menelaus' dame 225
Forsook her lord and land, to prove
What woes await on lawless love,
Had fairer form adorn'd the shore
Than she, the matchless stranger, bore.

X

The wall is rent, the ruins yawn; 230
And with to-morrow's earliest dawn,
O'er the disjointed mass shall vault
The foremost of the fierce assault.
The bands are rank'd; the chosen van
Of Tartar and of Mussulman, 235
The full of hope, misnamed 'forlorn',
Who hold the thought of death in scorn,
And win their way with falchion's force,
Or pave the path with many a corse,
O'er which the following brave may rise,
Their stepping-stone—the last who dies!

XI

'Tis midnight: on the mountains brown
The cold, round moon shines deeply
down; 243
Blue roll the waters, blue the sky
Spreads like an ocean hung on high,
Bespangled with those isles of light,
So wildly, spiritually bright,
Who ever gazed upon them shining
And turn'd to earth without repining,
Nor wish'd for wings to flee away, 250
And mix with their eternal ray?
The waves on either shore lay there
Calm, clear, and azure as the air;
And scarce their foam the pebbles shook,
But murmur'd meekly as the brook. 255
The winds were pillow'd on the waves;
The banners droop'd along their staves,
And, as they fell around them furling,
Above them shone the crescent curling;
And that deep silence was unbroke, 260
Save where the watch his signal spoke,
Save where the steed neigh'd oft and shrill,
And echo answer'd from the hill,
And the wide hum of that wild host
Rustled like leaves from coast to coast,
As rose the Muezzin's voice in air 266
In midnight call to wonted prayer;
It rose, that chanted mournful strain,
Like some lone spirit's o'er the plain:
'Twas musical, but sadly sweet, 270
Such as when winds and harp-strings
meet,
And take a long unmeasured tone,
To mortal minstrelsy unknown.
It seem'd to those within the wall
A cry prophetic of their fall:
It struck even the besieger's ear 276
With something ominous and drear,
An undefined and sudden thrill,
Which makes the heart a moment still,

Then beat with quicker pulse, ashamed
Of that strange sense its silence framed;
Such as a sudden passing-bell 282
Wakes, though but for a stranger's knell.

XII

The tent of Alp was on the shore;
The sound was hush'd, the prayer was
o'er, 285
The watch was set, the night-round made,
All mandates issued and obey'd:
'Tis but another anxious night,
His pains the morrow may requite
With all revenge and love can pay, 290
In guerdon for their long delay.
Few hours remain, and he hath need
Of rest, to nerve for many a deed
Of slaughter; but within his soul 294
The thoughts like troubled waters roll.
He stood alone among the host;
Not his the loud fanatic boast
To plant the crescent o'er the cross,
Or risk a life with little loss,
Secure in paradise to be 300
By Houris loved immortally:
Nor his, what burning patriots feel,
The stern exaltedness of zeal,
Profuse of blood, untired in toil,
When battling on the parent soil. 305
He stood alone—a renegade
Against the country he betray'd;
He stood alone amidst his band,
Without a trusted heart or hand: 309
They follow'd him, for he was brave,
And great the spoil he got and gave;
They crouch'd to him, for he had skill
To warp and wield the vulgar will:
But still his Christian origin
With them was little less than sin. 315
They envied even the faithless fame
He earn'd beneath a Moslem name;
Since he, their mightiest chief, had been
In youth a bitter Nazarene. 319
They did not know how pride can stoop,
When baffled feelings withering droop;
They did not know how hate can burn
In hearts once changed from soft to stern;
Nor all the false and fatal zeal
The convert of revenge can feel. 325
He ruled them—man may rule the worst,
By ever daring to be first:
So lions o'er the jackal sway;
The jackal points, he fells the prey,
Then on the vulgar, yelling, press, 330
To gorge the relics of success.

XIII

His head grows fever'd, and his pulse
The quick successive throbs convulse:
In vain from side to side he throws
His form, in courtship of repose; 335
Or if he dozed, a sound, a start
Awoke him with a sunken heart.

The turban on his hot brow press'd,
 The mail weigh'd lead-like on his breast,
 Though oft and long beneath its weight
 Upon his eyes had slumber sate, 341
 Without or couch or canopy,
 Except a rougher field and sky
 Than now might yield a warrior's bed,
 Than now along the heaven was spread.
 He could not rest, he could not stay 346
 Within his tent to wait for day,
 But walk'd him forth along the sand,
 Where thousand sleepers strew'd the
 strand.
 What pillow'd them? and why should he
 More wakeful than the humblest be,
 Since more their peril, worse their toil?
 And yet they fearless dream of spoil;
 While he alone, where thousands pass'd
 A night of sleep, perchance their last, 355
 In sickly vigil wander'd on,
 And envied all he gazed upon.

XIV

He felt his soul become more light
 Beneath the freshness of the night.
 Cool was the silent sky, though calm, 360
 And bathed his brow with airy balm:
 Behind, the camp—before him lay,
 In many a winding creek and bay,
 Lepanto's gulf; and, on the brow
 Of Delphi's hill, unshaken snow, 365
 High and eternal, such as shone
 Through thousand summers brightly
 gone,
 Along the gulf, the mount, the clime;
 It will not melt, like man, to time:
 Tyrant and slave are swept away, 370
 Less form'd to wear before the ray;
 But that white veil, the lightest, frailest,
 Which on the mighty mount thou hailest,
 While tower and tree are torn and rent,
 Shines o'er its craggy battlement; 375
 In form a peak, in height a cloud,
 In texture like a hovering shroud,
 Thus high by parting Freedom spread,
 As from her fond abode she fled,
 And linger'd on the spot, where long 380
 Her prophet spirit spake in song.
 Oh! still her step at moments falters
 O'er wither'd fields, and ruin'd altars,
 And fain would wake, in souls too broken,
 By pointing to each glorious token: 385
 But vain her voice, till better days
 Dawn in those yet remember'd rays,
 Which shone upon the Persian flying,
 And saw the Spartan smile in dying.

XV

Not mindless of these mighty times 390
 Was Alp, despite his flight and crimes;
 And through this night, as on he wander'd,
 And o'er the past and present ponder'd,
 And thought upon the glorious dead
 Who there in better cause had bled, 395

He felt how faint and feebly dim
 The fame that could accrue to him,
 Who cheer'd the band, and waved the
 sword,
 A traitor in a turban'd horde;
 And led them to the lawless siege, 400
 Whose best success were sacrilege.
 Not so had those his fancy number'd,
 The chiefs whose dust around him slum-ber'd;
 Their phalanx marshall'd on the plain,
 Whose bulwarks were not then in vain.
 They fell devoted, but undying; 406
 The very gale their name seem'd sighing;
 The waters murmur'd of their name;
 The woods were peopled with their fame;
 The silent pillar, lone and grey, 410
 Claim'd kindred with their sacred clay;
 Their spirits wrapp'd the dusky mountain,
 Their memory sparkled o'er the fountain;
 The meanest rill, the mightiest river
 Roll'd mingling with their fame for ever.
 Despite of every yoke she bears, 416
 That land is glory's still and theirs!
 'Tis still a watchword to the earth:
 When man would do a deed of worth
 He points to Greece, and turns to tread,
 So sanction'd, on the tyrant's head: 421
 He looks to her, and rushes on Where life is lost, or freedom won.

XVI

Still by the shore Alp mutely mused,
 And woo'd the freshness Night diffused.
 There shrinks no ebb in that tideless sea,
 Which changeless rolls eternally; 427
 So that wildest of waves, in their angriest
 mood,
 Scarce break on the bounds of the land
 for a rood;
 And the powerless moon beholds them
 flow, 430
 Heedless if she come or go:
 Calm or high, in main or bay,
 On their course she hath no sway.
 The rock unworn its base doth bare,
 And looks o'er the surf, but it comes not
 there; 435
 And the fringe of the foam may be seen
 below,
 On the line that it left long ages ago:
 A smooth short space of yellow sand
 Between it and the greener land.

He wander'd on along the beach, 440
 Till within the range of a carbine's reach Of the leaguer'd wall, but they saw him
 not,
 Or how could he 'scape from the hostile shot?
 Did traitors lurk in the Christians' hold?
 Were their hands grown stiff, or their hearts wax'd cold? 445

THE SIEGE OF CORINTH

I know not, in sooth; but from yonder
 wall
 There flash'd no fire, and there hiss'd no
 ball,
 Though he stood beneath the bastion's
 frown,
 That flank'd the sea-ward gate of the
 town;
 Though he heard the sound, and could almost tell 450
 The sullen words of the sentinel,
 As his measured step on the stone below
 Clank'd, as he paced it to and fro;
 And he saw the lean dogs beneath the wall
 Hold o'er the dead their carnival, 455 Gorging and growling o'er carcass and
 limb;

They were too busy to bark at him!
 From a Tartar's skull they had stripp'd
 the flesh,
 As ye peel the fig when its fruit is fresh;
 And their white tusks crunch'd o'er the whiter skull, 460
 As it slipp'd through their jaws, when their edge grew dull,
 As they lazily mumbled the bones of the
 dead,
 When they scarce could rise from the spot
 where they fed;
 So well had they broken a lingering fast
 With those who had fallen for that night's repast. 465
 And Alp knew, by the turbans that roll'd
 on the sand,
 The foremost of these were the best of his
 band:
 Crimson and green were the shawls of their wear,
 And each scalp had a single long tuft of
 hair,
 All the rest was shaven and bare. 470
 The scalps were in the wild dog's maw,
 The hair was tangled round his jaw:
 But close by the shore, on the edge of the gulf,
 There sat a vulture flapping a wolf,
 Who had stolen from the hills, but kept
 away, 475
 Scared by the dogs, from the human
 prey;
 But he seized on his share of a steed that
 lay,
 Pick'd by the birds, on the sands of the bay.

XVII

Alp turn'd him from the sickening sight:
 Never had shaken his nerves in fight;
 But he better could brook to behold the dying, 481
 Deep in the tide of their warm blood lying,
 Scorch'd with the death-thirst, and writhing in vain,
 Than the perishing dead who are past all
 pain.

There is something of pride in the perilous
 hour, 485
 Whate'er be the shape in which death may lower;
 For Fame is there to say who bleeds,
 And Honour's eye on daring deeds!
 But when all is past, it is humbling to
 tread
 O'er the weltering field of the tombless
 dead, 490
 And see worms of the earth, and fowls of
 the air,
 Beasts of the forest, all gathering there;
 All regarding man as their prey,
 All rejoicing in his decay.

XVIII

There is a temple in ruin stands, 495
 Fashion'd by long-forgotten hands;
 Two or three columns, and many a stone,
 Marble and granite, with grass o'ergrown!
 Out upon Time! it will leave no more Of the things to come than the things
 before! 500
 Out upon Time! who for ever will leave But enough of the past for the future to
 grieve
 O'er that which hath been, and o'er that which must be:
 What we have seen, our sons shall see;
 Remnants of things that have pass'd away, Fragments of stone rear'd by creatures of
 clay! 506

XIX

He sate him down at a pillar's base,
 And pass'd his hand athwart his face;
 Like one in dreary musing mood,
 Declining was his attitude; 510
 His head was drooping on his breast,
 Fever'd, throbbing, and oppress'd;
 And o'er his brow, so downward bent,
 Oft his beating fingers went,
 Hurriedly, as you may see 515
 Your own run over the ivory key,
 Ere the measured tone is taken
 By the chords you would awaken.
 There he sate all heavily,
 As he heard the night-wind sigh. 520
 Was it the wind through some hollow
 stone
 Sent that soft and tender moan?
 He lifted his head, and he look'd on the
 sea,
 But it was unrippled as glass may be;
 He look'd on the long grass—it waved not a blade; 525
 How was that gentle sound convey'd?
 He look'd to the banners—each flag lay
 still,
 So did the leaves on Cithæron's hill,
 And he felt not a breath come over his
 cheek;
 What did that sudden sound bespeak?

He turn'd to the left—is he sure of sight? 531

There sate a lady, youthful and bright!

XX

He started up with more of fear
Than if an armed foe were near.

'God of my fathers! what is here? 535

Who art thou? and wherefore sent

So near a hostile armament?'

His trembling hands refused to sign

The cross he deem'd no more divine:

He had resumed it in that hour, 540

But conscience wrung away the power.

He gazed, he saw: he knew the face

Of beauty, and the form of grace;

It was Francesca by his side,

The maid who might have been his 545

bride!

The rose was yet upon her cheek,

But mellow'd with a tenderer streak:

Where was the play of her soft lips fled?

Gone was the smile that enliven'd their

red.

The ocean's calm within their view,

Beside her eye had less of blue; 551

But like that cold wave it stood still,

And its glance, though clear, was chill.

Around her form a thin robe twining,

Nought conceal'd her bosom shining;

Through the parting of her hair, 556

Floating darkly downward there,

Her rounded arm show'd white and bare:

And ere yet she made reply,

Once she raised her hand on high; 560

It was so wan, and transparent of hue,

You might have seen the moon shine

through.

XXI

'I come from my rest to him I love best,

That I may be happy, and he may be blest'd,

I have pass'd the guards, the gate, the

wall; 565

Sought thee in safety through foes and all.

'Tis said the lion will turn and flee

From a maid in the pride of her purity;

And the Power on high, that can shield

the good

Thus from the tyrant of the wood, 570

Hath extended its mercy to guard me as

well

From the hands of the leaguering infidel.

I come—and if I come in vain,

Never, oh never, we meet again!

Thou hast done a fearful deed 575

In falling away from thy fathers' creed:

But dash that turban to earth, and sign

The sign of the cross, and for ever be mine;

Wring the black drop from thy heart,

And to-morrow unites us no more to

part.' 580

'And where should our bridal couch be spread?

In the midst of the dying and the dead?

For to-morrow we give to the slaughter

and flame

The sons and the shrines of the Christian

name. 584

None, save thou and thine, I've sworn,

Shall be left upon the morn;

But thee will I bear to a lovely spot,

Where our hands shall be join'd, and our sorrow forgot.

There thou yet shalt be my bride, 589

When once again I've quell'd the pride

Of Venice; and her hated race

Have felt the arm they would debase

Scourge, with a whip of scorpions, those Whom vice and envy made my foes.'

Upon his hand she laid her own— 595

Light was the touch, but it thrill'd to the

bone,

And shot a chillness to his heart,

Which fix'd him beyond the power to start.

Though slight was that grasp so mortal

cold,

He could not loose him from its hold;

But never did clasp of one so dear 601

Strike on the pulse with such feeling of

fear,

As those thin fingers, long and white,

Froze through his blood by their touch that night.

The feverish glow of his brow was gone,

And his heart sank so still that it felt like

stone. 606

As he look'd on the face, and beheld its

hue,

So deeply changed from what he knew:

Fair but faint—without the ray

Of mind, that made each feature play

Like sparkling waves on a sunny day;

And her motionless lips lay still as

death,

And her words came forth without her

breath,

And there rose not a heave o'er her

bosom's swell,

And there seem'd not a pulse in her veins

to dwell. 615

Though her eye shone out, yet the lids

were fix'd,

And the glance that it gave was wild and unmix'd

With aught of change, as the eyes may

seem

Of the restless who walk in a troubled

dream;

Like the figures on arras, that gloomily

glare, 620

Stirr'd by the breath of the wintry air,

So seen by the dying lamp's fitful light,

Lifeless, but life-like, and awful to sight;

THE SIEGE OF CORINTH

As they seem, through the dimness, about to come down
From the shadowy wall where their images
frown; 625
Fearfully flitting to and fro,
As the gusts on the tapestry come and go.

'If not for love of me be given Thus much, then, for the love of
heaven,—

Again I say—that turban tear 630
From off thy faithless brow, and swear
Thine injured country's sons to spare,
Or thou art lost; and never shalt see—
Not earth—that's past—but heaven or
me.

If this thou dost accord, albeit 635
A heavy doom 'tis thine to meet,
That doom shall half absolve thy sin,
And mercy's gate may receive thee within:
But pause one moment more, and take
The curse of Him thou didst forsake;
And look once more to heaven, and see
Its love for ever shut from thee.
There is a light cloud by the moon—
'Tis passing, and will pass full soon—
If, by the time its vapoury sail 645
Hath ceased her shaded orb to veil,
Thy heart within thee is not changed,
Then God and man are both avenged;
Dark will thy doom be, darker still Thine immortality of ill.' 650

Alp look'd to heaven, and saw on high
The sign she spake of in the sky;
But his heart was swollen, and turn'd aside,
By deep interminable pride. 654
This first false passion of his breast
Roll'd like a torrent o'er the rest.
He sue for mercy! He dismay'd
By wild words of a timid maid!
He, wrong'd by Venice, vow to save
Her sons, devoted to the grave! 660
No—though that cloud were thunder's
worst,
And charged to crush him—let it burst!

He look'd upon it earnestly,
Without an accent of reply; 664
He watch'd it passing; it is flown:
Full on his eye the clear moon shone,
And thus he spake—'Whate'er my fate,
I am no changeling—'tis too late:
The reed in storms may bow and quiver,
Then rise again; the tree must shiver.
What Venice made me, I must be, 671
Her foe in all, save love to thee:
But thou art safe: oh, fly with me!
He turn'd, but she is gone!
Nothing is there but the column stone.
Hath she sunk in the earth, or melted
in air? 676
He saw not—he knew not—but nothing is there.

XXII

The night is past, and shines the sun
As if that morn were a jocund one.
Lightly and brightly breaks away 680
The Morning from her mantle grey,
And the noon will look on a sultry day.
Hark to the trumpet, and the drum,
And the mournful sound of the barbarous
horn,
And the flap of the banners, that flit as they're borne, 685
And the neigh of the steed, and the multi-tude's hum,
And the clash, and the shout, 'They come!
they come!'
The horsetails are pluck'd from the ground, and the sword
From its sheath; and they form, and but wait for the word.
Tartar, and Spahi, and Turcoman, 690
Strike your tents, and throng to the van:
Mount ye, spur ye, skirr the plain,
That the fugitive may flee in vain,
When he breaks from the town; and none
escape, 694
Aged or young, in the Christian shape;
While your fellows on foot, in a fiery mass, Bloodstain the breach through which they
pass.
The steeds are all bridled, and snort to
the rein;
Curved is each neck, and flowing each
mane;
White is the foam of their champ on the
bit; 700
The spears are uplifted; the matches are lit;
The cannon are pointed, and ready to
roar,
And crush the wall they have crumbled
before:
Forms in his phalanx each janizar;
Alp at their head; his right arm is bare,
So is the blade of his scimitar; 706
The khan and the pachas are all at their post;
The vizier himself at the head of the host.
When the culverin's signal is fired, then
on;
Leave not in Corinth a living one— 710
A priest at her altars, a chief in her halls,
A hearth in her mansions, a stone on her
walls.
God and the prophet—Alla Hu!
Up to the skies with that wild halloo!
'There the breach lies for passage, the ladder to scale; 715
And your hands on your sabres, and how should ye fail?
He who first downs with the red cross may crave
His heart's dearest wish; let him ask it,
and have!

Thus utter'd Coumourg, the dauntless
vizier;
The reply was the brandish of sabre and
spear, 720
And the shout of fierce thousands in joyous ire:—
Silence—hark to the signal—fire!

XXIII

As the wolves, that headlong go
On the stately buffalo,
Though with fiery eyes, and angry roar,
And hoofs that stamp, and horns that
gore, 726
He tramples on earth, or tosses on high
The foremost, who rush on his strength
but to die:
Thus against the wall they went,
Thus the first were backward bent; 730
Many a bosom, sheathed in brass,
Strew'd the earth like broken glass,
Shiver'd by the shot, that tore
The ground whereon they moved no
more:
Even as they fell, in files they lay, 735
Like the mower's grass at the close of
day,
When his work is done on the levell'd
plain;
Such was the fall of the foremost slain.

XXIV

As the spring-tides, with heavy plash,
From the cliffs invading dash 740
Huge fragments, sapp'd by the ceaseless flow,
Till white and thundering down they go,
Like the avalanche's snow
On the Alpine vales below; 744
Thus at length, outbreathed and worn,
Corinth's sons were downward borne
By the long and oft renew'd
Charge of the Moslem multitude.
In firmness they stood, and in masses
they fell,
Heap'd by the host of the infidel, 750
Hand to hand, and foot to foot:
Nothing there, save death, was mute:
Stroke, and thrust, and flash, and cry
For quarter or for victory, 754
Mingle there with the volleying thunder,
Which makes the distant cities wonder
How the sounding battle goes,
If with them, or for their foes;
If they must mourn, or may rejoice
In that annihilating voice, 760
Which pierces the deep hills through and through
With an echo dread and new:
You might have heard it, on that day,
O'er Salamis and Megara;
(We have heard the hearers say,) 765
Even unto Piræus' bay.

XXV

From the point of encountering blades
to the hilt,
Sabres and swords with blood were gilt;
But the rampart is won, and the spoil
begun,
And all but the after carnage done. 770
Shriller shrieks now mingling come
From within the plunder'd dome:
Hark to the haste of flying feet,
That splash in the blood of the slippery street;
But here and there, where 'vantage
ground 775
Against the foe may still be found,
Desperate groups, of twelve or ten,
Make a pause, and turn again—
With banded backs against the wall,
Fiercely stand, or fighting fall. 780

There stood an old man—his hairs were
white,
But his veteran arm was full of might:
So gallantly bore he the brunt of the
fray,
The dead before him, on that day,
In a semicircle lay; 785
Still he combated unwounded,
Though retreating, unsurrounded.
Many a scar of former fight
Lurk'd beneath his corslet bright; 789
But of every wound his body bore,
Each and all had been ta'en before:
Though aged, he was so iron of limb,
Few of our youth could cope with
him,
And the foes, whom he singly kept at
bay, Outnumber'd his thin hairs of silver
grey. 795
From right to left his sabre swept;
Many an Othman mother wept
Sons that were unborn, when dipp'd
His weapon first in Moslem gore,
Ere his years could count a score. 800
Of all he might have been the sire
Who fell that day beneath his ire:
For, sonless left long years ago,
His wrath made many a childless foe;
And since the day, when in the strait
His only boy had met his fate, 806
His parent's iron hand did doom
More than a human hecatomb.
If shades by carnage be appeased,
Patroclus' spirit less was pleased 810
Than his, Minotti's son, who died
Where Asia's bounds and ours divide.
Buried he lay, where thousands be-
fore
For thousands of years were inhumed
on the shore;
What of them is left, to tell 815
Where they lie, and how they fell?

THE SIEGE OF CORINTH

Not a stone on their turf, nor a bone in their graves;
But they live in the verse that immortally saves.

XXVI

Hark to the Allah shout! a band Of the Mussulman bravest and best is at hand; 820
Their leader's nervous arm is bare,
Swifter to smite, and never to spare—Unclothed to the shoulder it waves them on;
Thus in the fight is he ever known:
Others a gaudier garb may show, 825
To tempt the spoil of the greedy foe;
Many a hand's on a richer hilt,
But none on a steel more ruddily gilt;
Many a loftier turban may wear,— Alp is but known by the white arm bare; 830

Look through the thick of the fight,
'tis there!

There is not a standard on that shore
So well advanced the ranks before;
There is not a banner in Moslem war
Will lure the Delhis half so far; 835
It glances like a falling star!
Where'er that mighty arm is seen,
The bravest be, or late have been;
There the craven cries for quarter
Vainly to the vengeful Tartar; 840
Or the hero, silent lying,
Scorns to yield a groan in dying;
Mustering his last feeble blow
'Gainst the nearest levell'd foe,
Though faint beneath the mutual
wound, 845

Grappling on the gory ground.

XXVII

Still the old man stood erect,
And Alp's career a moment check'd.
'Yield thee, Minotti; quarter take,
For thine own, thy daughter's sake.'

'Never, renegade, never! 851 Though the life of thy gift would last
for ever.'

'Francesca!—Oh, my promised bride!
Must she too perish by thy pride?'

'She is safe.'—'Where? where?'—'In
heaven; 855
From whence thy traitor'soul is driven—
Far from thee, and undefiled.'
Grimly then Minotti smiled,
As he saw Alp staggering bow
Before his words, as with a blow. 860
'Oh God! when died she?'—'Yester-
night—

Nor weep I for her spirit's flight:

None of my pure race shall be Slaves to Mahomet and thee—
Come on!—That challenge is in vain—
Alp's already with the slain! 866
While Minotti's words were wreaking
More revenge in bitter speaking
Than his falchion's point had found,
Had the time allow'd to wound, 870
From within the neighbouring porch
Of a long defended church,
Where the last and desperate few
Would the failing fight renew,
The sharp shot dash'd Alp to the
ground; 875

Ere an eye could view the wound
That crash'd through the brain of the infidel,

Round he spun, and down he fell;
A flash like fire within his eyes
Blazed, as he bent no more to rise, 880
And then eternal darkness sunk
Through all the palpitating trunk;
Nought of life left, save a quivering
Where his limbs were slightly shivering:
They turn'd him on his back; his breast
And brow were stain'd with gore and
dust, 886

And through his lips the life-blood
oozed,

From its deep veins lately loosed:
But in his pulse there was no throb,
Nor on his lips one dying sob; 890
Sigh, nor word, nor struggling breath
Heralded his way to death;
Ere his very thought could pray,
Unanel'd he pass'd away,
Without a hope from mercy's aid,—
To the last a Renegade. 896

XXVIII

Fearfully the yell arose
Of his followers, and his foes;
These in joy, in fury those:
Then again in conflict mixing, 900
Clashing swords, and spears trans-fixing,

Interchanged the blow and thrust,
Hurling warriors in the dust.
Street by street, and foot by foot,
Still Minotti dares dispute 905

The latest portion of the land
Left beneath his high command;
With him, aiding heart and hand,
The remnant of his gallant band.
Still the church is tenable, 910

Whence issued late the fated ball
That half avenged the city's fall,
When Alp, her fierce assailant, fell:
Thither bending sternly back,
They leave before a bloody track; 915
And, with their faces to the foe,
Dealing wounds with every blow,
The chief, and his retreating train,
Join to those within the fane;

THE SIEGE OF CORINTH

There they yet may breathe awhile, 920
Shelter'd by the massy pile.

XXIX

Brief breathing-time! the turban'd host,
With added ranks and raging boast, Press onwards with such strength and
heat,

Their numbers balk their own retreat;
For narrow the way that led to the
spot 926

Where still the Christians yielded not;
And the foremost, if fearful, may vainly
try

Through the massy column to turn and
fly;

They perforce must do or die. 930

They die; but ere their eyes could close,
Avengers o'er their bodies rose;

Fresh and furious, fast they fill
The ranks unthinn'd, though slaugh-
ter'd still; 934

And faint the weary Christians wax
Before the still renew'd attacks:

And now the Othmans gain the gate;
Still resists its iron weight,

And still, all deadly aim'd and hot,
From every crevice comes the shot;

From every shatter'd window pour 941
The volleys of the sulphurous shower:

But the portal wavering grows and
weak—

The iron yields, the hinges creak—
It bends—it falls—and all is o'er; 945

Lost Corinth may resist no more!

XXX

Darkly, sternly, and all alone,
Minotti stood o'er the altar-stone:

Madonna's face upon him shone,
Painted in heavenly hues above, 950

With eyes of light and looks of love;
And placed upon that holy shrine

To fix our thoughts on things divine,
When pictured there, we kneeling see

Her, and the boy-God on her knee,
Smiling sweetly on each prayer 956

To heaven, as if to waft it there.
Still she smiled; even now she smiles,

Though slaughter streams along her aisles:

Minotti lifted his aged eye, 960
And made the sign of a cross with a
sigh,

Then seized a torch which blazed there-
by;

And still he stood, while with steel and
flame

Inward and onward the Mussulman came.

XXXI

The vaults beneath the mosaic stone
Contain'd the dead of ages gone; 966

Their names were on the graven floor,
But now illegible with gore;

The carved crests, and curious hues
The varied marble's vein diffuse, 970

Were smear'd, and slippery,—stain'd, and strown

With broken swords, and helms o'er-
thrown:

There were dead above, and the dead
below

Lay cold in many a coffin'd row;
You might see them piled in sable
state, 975

By a pale light through a gloomy grate;
But War had enter'd their dark caves,

And stored along the vaulted graves
Her sulphurous treasures, thickly
spread

In masses by the fleshless dead: 980
Here, throughout the siege, had been

The Christians' chiefest magazine;
To these a late-form'd train now led,

Minotti's last and stern resource
Against the foe's o'erwhelming force.

XXXII

The foe came on, and few remain 986
To strive, and those must strive in vain:

For lack of further lives, to slake
The thirst of vengeance now awake,

With barbarous blows they gash the
dead, 990

And lop the already lifeless head,
And fell the statues from their niche,

And spoil the shrines of offerings rich,
And from each other's rude hands wrest

The silver vessels saints had bless'd.
To the high altar on they go; 996

Oh, but it made a glorious show!
On its table still behold

The cup of consecrated gold;
Massy and deep, a glittering prize, 1000

Brightly it sparkles to plunderers' eyes:
That morn it held the holy wine,

Converted by Christ to his blood so
divine,

Which his worshippers drank at the break of day,

To shrive their souls ere they join'd in the fray. 1005

Still a few drops within it lay:
And round the sacred table glow

Twelve lofty lamps, in splendid row,
From the purest metal cast;

A spoil—the richest, and the last.

XXXIII

So near they came, the nearest stretch'd
To grasp the spoil he almost reach'd,

When old Minotti's hand
Touch'd with the torch the train—

'Tis fired! 1015

THE SIEGE OF CORINTH

Spire, vaults, the shrine, the spoil, the slain,
 The turban'd victors, the Christian band,
 All that of living or dead remain,
 Hurl'd on high with the shiver'd fane,
 In one wild roar expired! 1020
 The shatter'd town—the walls thrown down—
 The waves a moment backward bent—
 The hills that shake, although unrent,
 As if an earthquake pass'd—
 The thousand shapeless things all driven 1025
 In cloud and flame athwart the heaven,
 By that tremendous blast—
 Proclaim'd the desperate conflict o'er
 On that too long afflicted shore:
 Up to the sky like rockets go 1030
 All that mingled there below:
 Many a tall and goodly man,
 Scorch'd and shrivell'd to a span,
 When he fell to earth again
 Like a cinder strew'd the plain: 1035
 Down the ashes shower like rain;
 Some fell in the gulf, which received the sprinkles
 With a thousand circling wrinkles;
 Some fell on the shore, but, far away,
 Scatter'd o'er the isthmus lay; 1040
 Christian or Moslem, which be they?
 Let their mothers see and say!
 When in cradled rest they lay,
 And each nursing mother smiled
 On the sweet sleep of her child, 1045

Little deem'd she such a day
 Would rend those tender limbs away.
 Not the matrons that them bore
 Could discern their offspring more;
 That one moment left no trace 1050
 More of human form or face
 Save a scatter'd scalp or bone:
 And down came blazing rafters, strown
 Around, and many a falling stone,
 Deeply dinted in the clay, 1055
 All blacken'd there and reeking lay.
 All the living things that heard
 That deadly earth-shock disappear'd:
 The wild birds flew; the wild dogs fled,
 And howling left the unburied dead;
 The camels from their keepers broke;
 The distant steer forsook the yoke—
 The nearer steed plunged o'er the plain,
 And burst his girth, and tore his rein;
 The bull-frog's note, from out the marsh, 1065
 Deep-mouth'd arose, and doubly harsh;
 The wolves yell'd on the cavern'd hill
 Where echo roll'd in thunder still;
 The jackals' troop, in gather'd cry,
 Bay'd from afar complainingly, 1070
 With a mix'd and mournful sound,
 Like crying babe, and beaten hound:
 With sudden wing, and ruffled breast,
 The eagle left his rocky nest,
 And mounted nearer to the sun, 1075
 The clouds beneath him seem'd so dun;
 Their smoke assail'd his startled beak,
 And made him higher soar and shriek—
 Thus was Corinth lost and won!

THE FOLLOWING POEM IS INSCRIBED,

BY ONE WHO HAS LONG ADMIR'D HIS TALENTS, AND VALUED HIS FRIENDSHIP

January 22, 1816.

ADVERTISEMENT

THE following poem is grounded on a circumstance mentioned in Gibbon's 'Antiquities of the House of Brunswick.' I am aware, that in modern times the delicacy or fastidiousness of the reader may deem such subjects unfit for the purposes of poetry. The Greek dramatists, and some of the best of our old English writers, were of a different opinion: as Alfieri and Schiller have also been, more recently, upon the Continent. The following extract will explain the facts on which the story is founded. The name of Azo is substituted for Nicholas, as more metrical.

'Under the reign of Nicholas III. Ferrara was polluted with a domestic tragedy. By the testimony of an attendant, and his own observation, the Marquis of Este discovered the incestuous loves of his wife Parisina, and Hugo his bastard son, a beautiful and valiant youth. They were beheaded in the castle by the sentence of a father and husband, who published his shame, and survived their execution. He was unfortunate, if they were guilty: if they were innocent, he was still more unfortunate; nor is there any possible situation in which I can sincerely approve the last act of the justice of a parent.'—GIBBON'S Miscellaneous Works, vol. iii, p. 470.

PARISINA

I

It is the hour when from the boughs
 The nightingale's high note is heard;
 It is the hour when lovers' vows
 Seem sweet in every whisper'd word;
 And gentle winds, and waters near, 5
 Make music to the lonely ear.
 Each flower the dews have lightly wet,
 And in the sky the stars are met,
 And on the wave is deeper blue,
 And on the leaf a browner hue, 10
 And in the heaven that clear obscure,
 So softly dark, and darkly pure,
 Which follows the decline of day,
 As twilight melts beneath the moon
 away.

II

But it is not to list to the waterfall 15
 That Parisina leaves her hall,
 And it is not to gaze on the heavenly light
 That the lady walks in the shadow of night;
 And if she sits in Este's bower,
 'Tis not for the sake of its full-blown
 flower; 20
 She listens—but not for the nightingale—
 Though her ear expects as soft a tale.
 There glides a step through the foliage
 thick,
 And her cheek grows pale, and her heart beats quick.
 There whispers a voice through the rustling leaves, 25
 And her blush returns, and her bosom
 heaves:
 A moment more and they shall meet—
 'Tis past—her lover's at her feet.

III

And what unto them is the world beside,
 With all its change of time and tide? 30
 Its living things, its earth and sky,
 Are nothing to their mind and eye.
 And heedless as the dead are they
 Of aught around, above, beneath;
 As if all else had pass'd away, 35
 They only for each other breathe;
 Their very sighs are full of joy
 So deep, that did it not decay,
 That happy madness would destroy
 The hearts which feel its fiery sway:
 Of guilt, of peril, do they deem 41
 In that tumultuous tender dream?
 Who that have felt that passion's power,
 Or paused, or fear'd in such an hour?
 Or thought how brief such moments
 last? 45
 But yet—they are already past!
 Alas! we must awake before
 We know such vision comes no more.

IV

With many a lingering look they leave
 The spot of guilty gladness past: 50
 And though they hope and vow, they
 grieve,
 As if that parting were the last.
 The frequent sigh—the long embrace—
 The lip that there would cling for ever,
 While gleams on Parisina's face 55
 The Heaven she fears will not forgive
 her,
 As if each calmly conscious star
 Beheld her frailty from afar—
 The frequent sigh, the long embrace,
 Yet binds them to their trysting place.
 But it must come, and they must part
 In fearful heaviness of heart, 62
 With all the deep and shuddering chill
 Which follows fast the deeds of ill.

And Hugo is gone to his lonely bed, 65
 To covet there another's bride;
 But she must lay her conscious head
 A husband's trusting heart beside.
 But fever'd in her sleep she seems,
 And red her cheek with troubled
 dreams, 70
 And mutters she in her unrest
 A name she dare not breathe by day,
 And clasps her lord unto the breast
 Which pants for one away:
 And he to that embrace awakes, 75
 And, happy in the thought, mistakes
 The dreaming sigh, and warm caress,
 For such as he was wont to bless;
 And could in very fondness weep
 O'er her who loves him even in sleep.

VI

He clasp'd her sleeping to his heart,
 And listen'd to each broken word:
 He hears—Why doth Prince Azo start,
 As if the Archangel's voice he heard?
 And well he may—a deeper doom 85
 Could scarcely thunder o'er his tomb,
 When he shall wake to sleep no more,
 And stand the eternal throne before.
 And well he may—his earthly peace
 Upon that sound is doom'd to cease. 90
 That sleeping whisper of a name
 Bespeaks her guilt and Azo's shame.
 And whose that name? that o'er his
 pillow
 Sounds fearful as the breaking billow,
 Which rolls the plank upon the shore,
 And dashes on the pointed rock 96
 The wretch who sinks to rise no more,—
 So came upon his soul the shock.

PARISINA

And whose that name? 'tis Hugo's,— his—⁹⁹
 In sooth he had not deem'd of this!—
 'Tis Hugo's,—he, the child of one
 He loved—his own all-evil son—
 The offspring of his wayward youth,
 When he betray'd Bianca's truth,¹⁰⁴
 The maid whose folly could confide
 In him who made her not his bride.

VII

He pluck'd his poniard in its sheath,
 But sheath'd it ere the point was bare—
 Howe'er unworthy now to breathe,
 He could not slay a thing so fair—
 At least, not smiling—sleeping—
 there:¹¹¹
 Nay more:—he did not wake her then,
 But gazed upon her with a glance
 Which, had she roused her from her trance,
 Had frozen her sense to sleep again;¹¹⁵
 And o'er his brow the burning lamp Gleam'd on the dew-drops big and damp.
 She spake no more—but she still slum-ber'd—
 While, in his thought, her days are number'd.

VIII

And with the morn he sought and found,¹²⁰
 In many a tale from those around,
 The proof of all he fear'd to know,
 Their present guilt, his future woe;
 The long-conniving damsels seek
 To save themselves, and would transfer¹²⁵
 The guilt—the shame—the doom—
 to her:
 Concealment is no more—they speak
 All circumstance which may compel Full credence to the tale they tell:
 And Azo's tortured heart and ear¹³⁰
 Have nothing more to feel or hear.

IX

He was not one who brook'd delay:
 Within the chamber of his state,
 The chief of Este's ancient sway¹³⁴
 Upon his throne of judgment sat;
 His nobles and his guards are there,—
 Before him is the sinful pair;
 Both young,—and one how passing fair!
 With swordless belt, and fetter'd hand, Oh, Christ! that thus a son should stand¹⁴⁰
 Before a father's face!
 Yet thus must Hugo meet his sire,
 And hear the sentence of his ire,
 The tale of his disgrace!

And yet he seems not overcome,¹⁴⁵
 Although, as yet, his voice be dumb.

X

And still, and pale, and silently
 Did Parisina wait her doom;
 How changed since last her speaking
 eye
 Glanced gladness round the glittering room,¹⁵⁰
 Where high-born men were proud to
 wait,
 Where Beauty watch'd to imitate
 Her gentle voice, her lovely mien,
 And gather from her air and gait
 The graces of its queen!¹⁵⁵
 Then,—had her eye in sorrow wept,
 A thousand warriors forth had leapt,
 A thousand swords had sheathless
 shone,
 And made her quarrel all their own.
 Now,—what is she? and what are they?
 Can she command, or these obey?
 All silent and unheeding now,
 With downcast eyes and knitting brow,
 And folded arms, and freezing air,
 And lips that scarce their scorn forbear,¹⁶⁵
 Her knights and dames, her court—is
 there:
 And he, the chosen one, whose lance
 Had yet been couch'd before her glance,
 Who—were his arm a moment free—
 Had died or gain'd her liberty;¹⁷⁰
 The minion of his father's bride,—
 He, too, is fetter'd by her side;
 Nor sees her swoln and full eye swim
 Less for her own despair than him:
 Those lids—o'er which the violet vein
 Wandering, leaves a tender stain,¹⁷⁶
 Shining through the smoothest white
 That e'er did softest kiss invite—
 Now seem'd with hot and livid glow
 To press, not shade, the orbs below;
 Which glance so heavily, and fill,¹⁸¹
 As tear on tear grows gathering still.

XI

And he for her had also wept,
 But for the eyes that on him gazed:
 His sorrow, if he felt it, slept;¹⁸⁵
 Stern and erect his brow was raised.
 Whate'er the grief his soul avow'd,
 He would not shrink before the crowd;
 But yet he dared not look on her;
 Remembrance of the hours that were—
 His guilt, his love, his present state—
 His father's wrath, all good men's hate—¹⁹²
 His earthly, his eternal fate—
 And hers,—oh, hers! he dared not throw
 One look upon that death-like brow!
 Else had his rising heart betray'd¹⁹⁶
 Remorse for all the wreck it made.

XII

And Azo spake:—‘But yesterday
 I gloried in a wife and son;
 That dream this morning pass’d away;
 Ere day declines, I shall have none.
 My life must linger on alone; 202
 Well,—let that pass,—there breathes not one
 Who would not do as I have done:
 Those ties are broken—not by me;
 Let that too pass;—the doom’s prepared! 206
 Hugo, the priest awaits on thee,
 And then—thy crime’s reward!
 Away! address thy prayers to Heaven,
 Before its evening stars are met—
 Learn if thou there canst be forgiven;
 Its mercy may absolve thee yet. 212
 But here, upon the earth beneath,
 There is no spot where thou and I
 Together for an hour could breathe:
 Farewell! I will not see thee die—
 But thou, frail thing! shalt view his
 head— 217
 Away! I cannot speak the rest:
 Go! woman of the wanton breast;
 Not I, but thou his blood dost shed:
 Go! if that sight thou canst outlive,
 And joy thee in the life I give.’ 222

And here stern Azo hid his face—
 For on his brow the swelling vein
 Throbb’d as if back upon his brain
 The hot blood ebb’d and flow’d
 again, 226
 And therefore bow’d he for a space,
 And pass’d his shaking hand along
 His eye, to veil it from the throng:
 While Hugo raised his chain’d hands,
 And for a brief delay demands 231
 His father’s ear: the silent sire
 Forbids not what his words require.

‘It is not that I dread the death—
 For thou hast seen me by thy side
 All redly through the battle ride,
 And that—not once a useless brand—
 Thy slaves have wrested from my hand
 Hath shed more blood in cause of thine,
 Than e’er can stain the axe of mine:
 Thou gav’st, and may’st resume my
 breath, 241
 A gift for which I thank thee not;
 Nor are my mother’s wrongs forgot,
 Her slighted love and ruin’d name,
 Her offspring’s heritage of shame;
 But she is in the grave, where he,
 Her son, thy rival, soon shall be.
 Her broken heart—my sever’d head—
 Shall witness for thee from the dead
 How trusty and how tender were 250
 Thy youthful love—paternal care.

’Tis true that I have done thee wrong—
 But wrong for wrong:—this,— deem’d thy bride,
 The other victim of thy pride,—
 Thou know’st for me was destined long;
 Thou saw’st, and coveted’st her charms;
 And with thy very crime—my birth—
 Thou tauntedst me, as little worth;
 A match ignoble for her arms, 259
 Because, forsooth, I could not claim
 The lawful heirship of thy name,
 Nor sit on Este’s lineal throne;
 Yet, were a few short summers mine,
 My name should more than Este’s shine
 With honours all my own. 265
 I had a sword—and have a breast
 That should have won as haught a crest
 As ever waved along the line
 Of all these sovereign sires of thine.
 Not always knightly spurs are worn
 The brightest by the better born; 271
 And mine have lanced my courser’s flank
 Before proud chiefs of princely rank,
 When charging to the cheering cry
 Of “Este” and of “Victory!” 275
 I will not plead the cause of crime,
 Nor sue thee to redeem from time
 A few brief hours or days that must
 At length roll o’er my reckless dust;—
 Such maddening moments as my past,
 They could not, and they did not, last.
 Albeit my birth and name be base,
 And thy nobility of race 283
 Disdain’d to deck a thing like me—
 Yet in my lineaments they trace
 Some features of my father’s face,
 And in my spirit—all of thee.
 From thee this tamelessness of heart—
 From thee—nay, wherefore dost thou
 start?— 289
 From thee in all their vigour came
 My arm of strength, my soul of flame;
 Thou didst not give me life alone,
 But all that made me more thine own.
 See what thy guilty love hath done!
 Repaid thee with too like a son! 295
 I am no bastard in my soul,
 For that, like thine, abhor’d control;
 And for my breath, that hasty boon
 Thou gav’st and wilt resume so soon,
 I valued it no more than thou, 300
 When rose thy casque above thy brow,
 And we, all side by side, have striven,
 And o’er the dead our coursers driven:
 The past is nothing—and at last
 The future can but be the past; 305
 Yet would I that I then had died:
 For though thou work’dst my mother’s ill,
 And made thy own my destined bride,
 I feel thou art my father still: 309
 And harsh as sounds thy hard decree,
 ’Tis not unjust, although from thee.

PARISINA

Begot in sin, to die in shame,
My life begun and ends the same:
As err'd the sire, so err'd the son, 314
And thou must punish both in one.
My crime seems worst to human view,
But God must judge between us too!'

XIV

He ceased—and stood with folded
arms,
On which the circling fetters sounded;
And not an ear but felt as wounded,
Of all the chiefs that there were rank'd, 321
When those dull chains in meeting
clank'd:

Till Parisina's fatal charms
Again attracted every eye—
Would she thus hear him doom'd to die!
She stood, I said, all pale and still,
The living cause of Hugo's ill: 327
Her eyes unmoved, but full and wide,
Not once had turn'd to either side—
Nor once did those sweet eyelids close,
Or shade the glance o'er which they
rose, 331

But round their orbs of deepest blue
The circling white dilated grew—
And there with glassy gaze she stood
As ice were in her curdled blood;
But every now and then a tear 336
So large and slowly gather'd slid
From the long dark fringe of that fair lid,

It was a thing to see, not hear!
And those who saw, it did surprise,
Such drops could fall from human eyes.
To speak she thought—the imperfect
note 342

Was choked within her swelling throat,
Yet seem'd in that low hollow groan
Her whole heart gushing in the tone.
It ceased—again she thought to speak,
Then burst her voice in one long shriek,
And to the earth she fell like stone
Or statue from its base o'erthrown,
More like a thing that ne'er had life,—
A monument of Azo's wife,— 351
Than her, that living guilty thing,
Whose every passion was a sting,
Which urged to guilt, but could not
bear

That guilt's detection and despair. 355
But yet she lived—and all too soon
Recover'd from that death-like swoon—
But scarce to reason—every sense
Had been o'erstrung by pangs intense;
And each frail fibre of her brain 360
(As bowstrings, when relax'd by rain,
The erring arrow launch aside) Sent forth her thoughts all wild and
wide—

The past a blank, the future black,
With glimpses of a dreary track, 365

Like lightning on the desert path,
When midnight storms are mustering
wrath. 367

She fear'd—she felt that something ill
Lay on her soul, so deep and chill;
That there was sin and shame she knew,
That some one was to die—but who?
She had forgotten:—did she breathe?
Could this be still the earth beneath,
The sky above, and men around; 374
Or were they fiends who now so frown'd
On one, before whose eyes each eye
Till then had smiled in sympathy?
All was confused and undefined
To her all-jarr'd and wandering mind;
A chaos of wild hopes and fears: 380
And now in laughter, now in tears,
But madly still in each extreme,
She strove with that convulsive dream;
For so it seem'd on her to break:
Oh! vainly must she strive to wake!

XV

The Convent bells are ringing, 386
But mournfully and slow;
In the grey square turret swinging,
With a deep sound, to and fro.
Heavily to the heart they go! 390
Hark! the hymn is singing—
The song for the dead below,
Or the living who shortly shall be so!
For a departing being's soul
The death-hymn peals and the hollow bells knoll: 395

He is near his mortal goal;
Kneeling at the Friar's knee,
Sad to hear, and piteous to see—
Kneeling on the bare cold ground,
With the block before and the guards
around— 400
And the headsman with his bare arm
ready,
That the blow may be both swift and
steady,
Feels if the axe be sharp and true
Since he set its edge anew:
While the crowd in a speechless circle
gather 405
To see the Son fall by the doom of the Father!

XVI

It is a lovely hour as yet
Before the summer sun shall set,
Which rose upon that heavy day, 409
And mock'd it with his steadiest ray;
And his evening beams are shed
Full on Hugo's fated head,
As his last confession pouring
To the monk, his doom deploring
In penitential holiness, 415
He bends to hear his accents bless
With absolution such as may Wipe our mortal stains away.

That high sun on his head did glisten
 As he there did bow and listen, 420
 And the rings of chestnut hair
 Curl'd half down his neck so bare;
 But brighter still the beam was thrown Upon the axe which near him shone
 With a clear and ghastly glitter—
 Oh! that parting hour was bitter! 426
 Even the stern stood chill'd with awe:
 Dark the crime, and just the law—
 Yet they shudder'd as they saw.

XVII

The parting prayers are said and over
 Of that false son, and daring lover! 431
 His beads and sins are all recounted,
 His hours to their last minute mounted;
 His mantling cloak before was stripp'd,
 His bright brown locks must now be clipp'd; 435

'Tis done—all closely are they shorn;
 The vest which till this moment worn—
 The scarf which Parisina gave—
 Must not adorn him to the grave. 439
 Even that must now be thrown aside,
 And o'er his eyes the kerchief tied;
 But no—that last indignity
 Shall ne'er approach his haughty eye.
 All feelings seemingly subdued,
 In deep disdain were half renew'd,
 When headsman's hands prepared to bind
 Those eyes which would not brook
 such blind,

As if they dared not look on death.
 'No—yours my forfeit blood and
 breath;

These hands are chain'd, but let me die
 At least with an unshackled eye— 451
 Strike:—and as the word he said,
 Upon the block he bow'd his head;
 These the last accents Hugo spoke:
 'Strike'—and flashing fell the stroke—
 Roll'd the head—and, gushing, sunk
 Back the stain'd and heaving trunk,
 In the dust, which each deep vein
 Slaked with its ensanguined rain; 459
 His eyes and lips a moment quiver,
 Convulsed and quick—then fix for ever.

He died, as erring man should die,
 Without display, without parade;
 Meekly had he bow'd and pray'd,
 As not disdaining priestly aid, 465
 Nor desperate of all hope on high.
 And while before the Prior kneeling,
 His heart was wean'd from earthly feeling;
 His wrathful sire, his paramour—
 What were they in such an hour? 470
 No more reproach, no more despair,
 No thought but heaven, no word but
 prayer—

Save the few which from him broke,
 When, bared to meet the headsman's
 stroke,

He claim'd to die with eyes unbound,
 His sole adieu to those around. 476

XVIII

Still as the lips that closed in death,
 Each gazer's bosom held his breath:
 But yet, afar, from man to man,
 A cold electric shiver ran, 480
 As down the deadly blow descended
 On him whose life and love thus ended;
 And, with a hushing sound compress'd,
 A sigh shrunk back on every breast;
 But no more thrilling noise rose there,
 Beyond the blow that to the block Pierced through with forced and sullen shock, 487

Save one:—what cleaves the silent air
 So madly shrill, so passing wild?
 That, as a mother's o'er her child,
 Done to death by sudden blow, 491
 To the sky these accents go,
 Like a soul's in endless woe.
 Through Azo's palace-lattice driven,
 That horrid voice ascends to heaven,
 And every eye is turn'd thereon: 496
 But sound and sight alike are gone!
 It was a woman's shriek—and ne'er
 In madder accents rose despair;
 And those who heard it, as it pass'd,
 In mercy wish'd it were the last. 501

XIX

Hugo is fallen; and, from that hour,
 No more in palace, hall, or bower,
 Was Parisina heard or seen: 504
 Her name—as if she ne'er had been—
 Was banish'd from each lip and ear,
 Like words of wantonness or fear;
 And from Prince Azo's voice, by none
 Was mention heard of wife or son;
 No tomb, no memory had they; 510
 Theirs was unconsecrated clay—
 At least the knight's who died that day.
 But Parisina's fate lies hid
 Like dust beneath the coffin lid:
 Whether in convent she abode, 515
 And won to heaven her dreary road
 By blighted and remorseful years
 Of scourge, and fast, and sleepless tears;
 Or if she fell by bowl or steel,
 For that dark love she dared to feel;
 Or if, upon the moment smote, 521
 She died by tortures less remote,
 Like him she saw upon the block,
 With heart that shared the headsman's
 shock,

In quicken'd brokenness that came,
 In pity, o'er her shatter'd frame, 526
 None knew—and none can ever know:
 But whatsoe'er its end below,
 Her life began and closed in woe!

XX

And Azo found another bride, 530
 And goodly sons grew by his side;

PARISINA

But none so lovely and so brave
 As him who wither'd in the grave;
 Or if they were—on his cold eye
 Their growth but glanced unheeded by,
 Or noticed with a smother'd sigh. 536
 But never tear his cheek descended,
 And never smile his brow unbended;
 And o'er that fair broad brow were
 wrought
 The intersected lines of thought; 540
 Those furrows which the burning share
 Of Sorrow ploughs untimely there;
 Scars of the lacerating mind
 Which the Soul's war doth leave behind.
 He was past all mirth or woe:
 Nothing more remain'd below 546
 But sleepless nights and heavy days,
 A mind all dead to scorn or praise,
 A heart which shunn'd itself—and yet
 That would not yield, nor could forget,
 Which, when it least appear'd to melt,
 Intently thought, intensely felt: 552
 The deepest ice which ever froze
 Can only o'er the surface close;
 The living stream lies quick below, 555
 And flows, and cannot cease to flow.
 Still was his seal'd-up bosom haunted
 By thoughts which Nature hath implanted; 558
 Too deeply rooted thence to vanish,

Howe'er our stifled tears we banish;
 When, struggling as they rise to start,
 We check those waters of the heart,
 They are not dried—those tears unshed
 But flow back to the fountain head,
 And resting in their spring more pure,
 For ever in its depth endure, 566
 Unseen, unwept, but uncongeal'd,
 And cherish'd most where least reveal'd.
 With inward starts of feeling left,
 To throb o'er those of life bereft, 570
 Without the power to fill again
 The desert gap which made his pain;
 Without the hope to meet them where United souls shall gladness share;
 With all the consciousness that he Had only pass'd a just decree; 576
 That they had wrought their doom of
 ill;
 Yet Azo's age was wretched still.
 The tainted branches of the tree,
 If lopp'd with care, a strength may
 give, 580
 By which the rest shall bloom and
 live
 All greenly fresh and wildly free:
 But if the lightning, in its wrath,
 The waving boughs with fury scathe,
 The massy trunk the ruin feels, 585
 And never more a leaf reveals.

THE PRISONER OF CHILLON

SONNET ON CHILLON

ETERNAL Spirit of the chainless Mind!
 Brightest in dungeons, Liberty! thou art,
 For there thy habitation is the heart—
 The heart which love of thee alone can bind;
 And when thy sons to fetters are consign'd—
 To fetters, and the damp vault's dayless gloom,
 Their country conquers with their martyrdom,
 And Freedom's fame finds wings on every wind.
 Chillon! thy prison is a holy place,
 And thy sad floor an altar—for 'twas trod,
 Until his very steps have left a trace
 Worn, as if thy cold pavement were a sod,
 By Bonnivard! May none those marks efface!
 For they appeal from tyranny to God.

ADVERTISEMENT

WHEN this poem was composed, I was not sufficiently aware of the history of Bonnivard, or I should have endeavoured to dignify the subject by an attempt to celebrate his courage and his virtues. With some account of his life I have been furnished, by the kindness of a citizen of that republic, which is still proud of the memory of a man worthy of the best age of ancient freedom:—

‘François de Bonnivard, fils de Louis de Bonnivard, originaire de Seyssel et Seigneur de Lunes, naquit en 1496. Il fit ses études à Turin: en 1510 Jean Aimé de Bonnivard, son oncle, lui résigna le Prieuré de St. Victor, qui aboutissait aux murs de Genève, et qui formait un bénéfice considérable.

‘Ce grand homme—(Bonnivard mérite ce titre par la force de son âme, la droiture de son cœur, la noblesse de ses intentions, la sagesse de ses conseils, le courage de ses démarches, l'étendue de ses connaissances, et la vivacité de son esprit),—ce grand homme, qui excitera l'admiration de tous ceux

qu'une vertu héroïque peut encore émouvoir, inspirera encore la plus vive reconnaissance dans les cœurs des Génévois qui aiment Genève. Bonnivard en fut toujours un des plus fermes appuis: pour assurer la liberté de notre République, il ne craignit pas de perdre souvent la sienne; il oublia son repos; il méprisa ses richesses; il ne négligea rien pour affermir le bonheur d'une patrie qu'il honora de son choix: dès ce moment il la chérit comme le plus zélé de ses citoyens; il la servit avec l'intrépidité d'un héros, et il écrivit son Histoire avec la naïveté d'un philosophe et la chaleur d'un patriote.

'Il dit dans le commencement de son Histoire de Genève, que, dès qu'il eut commencé de lire l'histoire des nations, il se sentit entraîné par son goût pour les Républiques, dont il épousa toujours les intérêts: c'est ce goût pour la liberté qui lui fit sans doute adopter Genève pour sa patrie.

'Bonnivard, encore jeune, s'annonça hautement comme le défenseur de Genève contre le Duc de Savoye et l'Evêque.

'En 1519, Bonnivard devient le martyr de sa patrie. Le Duc de Savoye étant entré dans Genève avec cinq cent hommes, Bonnivard craint le ressentiment du Duc; il voulut se retirer à Fribourg pour en éviter les suites; mais il fut trahi par deux hommes qui l'accompagnaient, et conduit par ordre du Prince à Grolée, où il resta prisonnier pendant deux ans. Bonnivard était malheureux dans ses voyages: comme ses malheurs n'avaient point ralenti son zèle pour Genève, il était toujours un ennemi redoutable pour ceux qui la menaçaient, et par conséquent il devait être exposé à leurs coups. Il fut rencontré en 1530 sur le Jura par des voleurs, qui le dépouillèrent et qui le mirent encore entre les mains du Duc de Savoye: ce Prince le fit enfermer dans le Château de Chillon, où il resta sans être interrogé jusques en 1536; il fut alors délivré par les Bernois, qui s'emparèrent du Pays de Vaud.

'Bonnivard, en sortant de sa captivité, eut le plaisir de trouver Genève libre et réformée: la République s'pressa de lui témoigner sa reconnaissance, et de le dédommager des maux qu'il avoit soufferts; elle le reçut Bourgeois de la ville au mois de Juin, 1536; elle lui donna la maison habitée autrefois par le Vicaire-Général, et elle lui assigna une pension de deux cent écus d'or tant qu'il séjournerait à Genève. Il fut admis dans le Conseil de Deux-Cent en 1537.

'Bonnivard n'a pas fini d'être utile: après avoir travaillé à rendre Genève libre, il réussit à la rendre tolérante. Bonnivard engagea le Conseil à accorder aux ecclésiastiques et aux paysans un tems suffisant pour examiner les propositions qu'on leur faisait; il réussit par sa douceur: on prêche toujours le Christianisme avec succès quand on le prêche avec charité.

'Bonnivard fut savant: ses manuscrits, qui sont dans la bibliothèque publique, prouvent qu'il avoit bien lu les auteurs classiques Latins, et qu'il avoit approfondi la théologie et l'histoire. Ce grand homme aimait les sciences, et il croyait qu'elles pouvaient faire la gloire de Genève; aussi il ne négligea rien pour les fixer dans cette ville naissante; en 1551 il donna sa bibliothèque au public; elle fut le commencement de notre bibliothèque publique; et ces livres sont en partie les rares et belles éditions du quinzième siècle qu'on voit dans notre collection. Enfin, pendant la même année, ce bon patriote institua la République son héritière, à condition qu'elle emploierait ses biens à entretenir le collège dont on projetait la fondation.

'Il paraît que Bonnivard mourut en 1570; mais on ne peut l'assurer, parcequ'il y a une lacune dans le Nécrologe depuis le mois de Juillet, 1570, jusques en 1571.'

I

My hair is grey, but not with years,
Nor grew it white
In a single night,
As men's have grown from sudden fears:
My limbs are bow'd, though not with 5 toil,
But rusted with a vile repose,
For they have been a dungeon's spoil,
And mine has been the fate of those
To whom the goodly earth and air
Are bann'd, and barr'd—forbidden
 10 fare:
But this was for my father's faith
I suffer'd chains and courted death;
That fathers perish'd at the stake
For tenets he would not forsake;
And for the same his lineal race 15
In darkness found a dwelling-place;
We were seven—who now are one,
Six in youth, and one in age,
Finish'd as they had begun,
Proud of Persecution's rage; 20
One in fire, and two in field,
Their belief with blood have seal'd,
Dying as their father died,
For the God their foes denied;
Three were in a dungeon cast, 25
Of whom this wreck is left the last.

II

There are seven pillars of Gothic mould,
In Chillon's dungeons deep and old,
There are seven columns, massy and
 grey,
Dim with a dull imprison'd ray, 30
A sunbeam which hath lost its way,
And through the crevice and the cleft
Of the thick wall is fallen and left;
Creeping o'er the floor so damp,
Like a marsh's meteor lamp: 35
And in each pillar there is a ring,
And in each ring there is a chain;
That iron is a cankerer thing,
For in these limbs its teeth remain,
With marks that will not wear away,
Till I have done with this new day, 41
Which now is painful to these eyes,
Which have not seen the sun so rise
For years—I cannot count them o'er,
I lost their long and heavy score, 45
When my last brother droop'd and died,
And I lay living by his side.

III

They chain'd us each to a column stone,
And we were three—yet, each alone;
We could not move a single pace, 50
We could not see each other's face,

THE PRISONER OF CHILLON

But with that pale and livid light
That made us strangers in our sight:
And thus together—yet apart, 54
Fetter'd in hand, but join'd in heart,
'Twas still some solace, in the dearth
Of the pure elements of earth,
To hearken to each other's speech,
And each turn comforter to each
With some new hope, or legend old,
Or song heroically bold; 61
But even these at length grew cold.
Our voices took a dreary tone,
An echo of the dungeon stone,
A grating sound, not full and free, 65
As they of yore were wont to be:
It might be fancy, but to me
They never sounded like our own.

IV

I was the eldest of the three, 69
And to uphold and cheer the rest
I ought to do—and did my best—
And each did well in his degree.
The youngest, whom my father loved,
Because our mother's brow was given
To him, with eyes as blue as heaven—
For him my soul was sorely moved;
And truly might it be distress'd 77
To see such bird in such a nest;
For he was beautiful as day—
(When day was beautiful to me 80
As to young eagles, being free)—
A polar day, which will not see
A sunset till its summer's gone,
Its sleepless summer of long light,
The snow-clad offspring of the sun: 85
And thus he was as pure and bright,
And in his natural spirit gay,
With tears for nought but others' ills,
And then they flow'd like mountain rills,
Unless he could assuage the woe 90
Which he abhor'd to view below.

V

The other was as pure of mind,
But form'd to combat with his kind;
Strong in his frame, and of a mood Which 'gainst the world in war had
stood, 95
And perish'd in the foremost rank
With joy—but not in chains to pine:
His spirit wither'd with their clank,
I saw it silently decline—
And so perchance in sooth did mine:
But yet I forced it on to cheer 101
Those relics of a home so dear.
He was a hunter of the hills,
Had follow'd there the deer and wolf;
To him his dungeon was a gulf, 105
And fetter'd feet the worst of ills.

VI

Lake Leman lies by Chillon's walls:
A thousand feet in depth below
Its massy waters meet and flow; 109

Thus much the fathom-line was sent
From Chillon's snow-white battlement, Which round about the wave in-
thrals:

A double dungeon wall and wave
Have made—and like a living grave
Below the surface of the lake 115
The dark vault lies wherein we lay,
We heard it ripple night and day;
Sounding o'er our heads it knock'd;
And I have felt the winter's spray
Wash through the bars when winds were high 120
And wanton in the happy sky;
And then the very rock hath rock'd,
And I have felt it shake, unshock'd,
Because I could have smiled to see
The death that would have set me free.

VII

I said my nearer brother pined, 126
I said his mighty heart declined,
He loathed and put away his food;
It was not that 'twas coarse and rude,
For we were used to hunter's fare,
And for the like had little care: 131
The milk drawn from the mountain goat
Was changed for water from the moat,
Our bread was such as captives' tears
Have moisten'd many a thousand years,
Since man first pent his fellow men
Like brutes within an iron den;
But what were these to us or him? 138
These wasted not his heart or limb;
My brother's soul was of that mould
Which in a palace had grown cold,
Had his free breathing been denied
The range of the steep mountain's side;
But why delay the truth?—he died.
I saw, and could not hold his head, 145
Nor reach his dying hand—nor dead,
Though hard I strove, but strove in vain,
To rend and gnash my bonds in twain.
He died, and they unlock'd his chain,
And scoop'd for him a shallow grave
Even from the cold earth of our cave.
I begg'd them as a boon to lay 152
His corse in dust whereon the day
Might shine—it was a foolish thought,
But then within my brain it wrought,
That even in death his freeborn breast
In such a dungeon could not rest. 157
I might have spared my idle prayer—
They coldly laugh'd, and laid him there:
The flat and turfless earth above
The being we so much did love; 161
His empty chain above it leant,
Such murder's fitting monument!

VIII

But he, the favourite and the flower,
Most cherish'd since his natal hour,
His mother's image in fair face, 166
The infant love of all his race,

His martyr'd father's dearest thought,
 My latest care, for whom I sought 169
 To hoard my life, that his might be Less wretched now, and one day free;
 He, too, who yet had held untired
 A spirit natural or inspired—
 He, too, was struck, and day by day
 Was wither'd on the stalk away. 175
 Oh, God! it is a fearful thing
 To see the human soul take wing
 In any shape, in any mood:
 I've seen it rushing forth in blood,
 I've seen it on the breaking ocean
 Strive with a swoln convulsive motion,
 I've seen the sick and ghastly bed
 Of Sin delirious with its dread;
 But these were horrors—this was woe
 Unmix'd with such—but sure and slow:
 He softly, and so calm and meek, 186
 So sately worn, so sweetly weak,
 So tearless, yet so tender, kind,
 And grieved for those he left behind;
 With all the while a cheek whose bloom
 Was as a mockery of the tomb, 191
 Whose tints as gently sunk away
 As a departing rainbow's ray;
 An eye of most transparent light,
 That almost made the dungeon bright,
 And not a word of murmur, not 196
 A groan o'er his untimely lot,—
 A little talk of better days,
 A little hope my own to raise,
 For I was sunk in silence—lost 200
 In this last loss, of all the most;
 And then the sighs he would suppress
 Of fainting nature's feebleness,
 More slowly drawn, grew less and less:
 I listen'd, but I could not hear; 205
 I call'd, for I was wild with fear;
 I knew 'twas hopeless, but my dread
 Would not be thus admonished;
 I call'd, and thought I heard a sound—
 I burst my chain with one strong bound,
 And rush'd to him:—I found him not,
 I only stirr'd in this black spot, 212
 I only lived, I only drew
 The accursed breath of dungeon-dew;
 The last, the sole, the dearest link 215
 Between me and the eternal brink,
 Which bound me to my failing race,
 Was broken in this fatal place.
 One on the earth, and one beneath—
 My brothers—both had ceased to
 breathe: 220
 I took that hand which lay so still,
 Alas! my own was full as chill;
 I had not strength to stir, or strive,
 But felt that I was still alive—
 A frantic feeling, when we know 225
 That what we love shall ne'er be so.
 I know not why
 I could not die,
 I had no earthly hope but faith,
 And that forbade a selfish death. 230

IX

What next befell me then and there
 I know not well—I never knew—
 First came the loss of light, and air,
 And then of darkness too:
 I had no thought, no feeling—none—
 Among the stones I stood a stone, 236
 And was, scarce conscious what I wist,
 As shrubless crags within the mist;
 For all was blank, and bleak, and grey;
 It was not night, it was not day; 240
 It was not even the dungeon-light,
 So hateful to my heavy sight,
 But vacancy absorbing space,
 And fixedness without a place;
 There were no stars, no earth, no time,
 No check, no change, no good, no
 crime, 246
 But silence, and a stirless breath
 Which neither was of life nor death;
 A sea of stagnant idleness,
 Blind, boundless, mute, and motion-
 less! 250

A light broke in upon my brain,—
 It was the carol of a bird;
 It ceased, and then it came again,
 The sweetest song ear ever heard,
 And mine was thankful till my eyes
 Ran over with the glad surprise, 256
 And they that moment could not see
 I was the mate of misery;
 But then by dull degrees came back
 My senses to their wonted track; 260
 I saw the dungeon walls and floor
 Close slowly round me as before,
 I saw the glimmer of the sun
 Creeping as it before had done,
 But through the crevice where it came That bird was perch'd, as fond and
 tame, 266
 And tamer than upon the tree;
 A lovely bird, with azure wings,
 And song that said a thousand things,
 And seem'd to say them all for me!
 I never saw its like before, 271
 I ne'er shall see its likeness more:
 It seem'd like me to want a mate,
 But was not half so desolate,
 And it was come to love me when None lived to love me so again, 276
 And cheering from my dungeon's brink,
 Had brought me back to feel and think.
 I know not if it late were free,
 Or broke its cage to perch on mine,
 But knowing well captivity, 281
 Sweet bird! I could not wish for thine!
 Or if it were, in winged guise,
 A visitant from Paradise;
 For—Heaven forgive that thought! the
 while 285
 Which made me both to weep and smile—

THE PRISONER OF CHILLON

I sometimes deem'd that it might be
My brother's soul come down to me;
But then at last away it flew, 289
And then 'twas mortal well I knew,
For he would never thus have flown,
And left me twice so doubly lone,
Lone as the corse within its shroud,
Lone as a solitary cloud,—

A single cloud on a sunny day, 295
While all the rest of heaven is clear,
A frown upon the atmosphere,
That hath no business to appear
When skies are blue, and earth is gay.

XI

A kind of change came in my fate,
My keepers grew compassionate; 301
I know not what had made them so,
They were inured to sights of woe,
But so it was:—my broken chain
With links unfasten'd did remain, 305
And it was liberty to stride
Along my cell from side to side,
And up and down, and then athwart,
And tread it over every part;
And round the pillars one by one, 310
Returning where my walk begun,
Avoiding only, as I trod,
My brothers' graves without a sod;
For if I thought with heedless tread
My step profaned their lowly bed, 315
My breath came gaspingly and thick,
And my crush'd heart felt blind and sick.

XII

I made a footing in the wall,
It was not therefrom to escape,
For I had buried one and all 320
Who loved me in a human shape;
And the whole earth would henceforth be
A wider prison unto me:
No child, no sire, no kin had I,
No partner in my misery; 325
I thought of this, and I was glad,
For thought of them had made me mad;
But I was curious to ascend
To my barr'd windows, and to bend
Once more, upon the mountains high,
The quiet of a loving eye. 331

XIII

I saw them, and they were the same,
They were not changed like me in
frame;
I saw their thousand years of snow
On high—their wide long lake below,
And the blue Rhone in fullest flow;
I heard the torrents leap and gush 337

O'er channell'd rock and broken bush;
I saw the white-wall'd distant town,
And whiter sails go skimming down;
And then there was a little isle,
Which in my very face did smile, 342

The only one in view;
A small green isle, it seem'd no more,
Scarce broader than my dungeon floor,
But in it there were three tall trees,
And o'er it blew the mountain breeze,
And by it there were waters flowing,
And on it there were young flowers growing, 349

Of gentle breath and hue.
The fish swam by the castle wall,
And they seem'd joyous each and all;
The eagle rode the rising blast,
Methought he never flew so fast
As then to me he seem'd to fly; 355
And then new tears came in my eye,
And I felt troubled—and would fain
I had not left my recent chain;
And when I did descend again,
The darkness of my dim abode 360
Fell on me as a heavy load;
It was as is a new-dug grave,
Closing o'er one we sought to save,—
And yet my glance, too much oppress,
Had almost need of such a rest. 365

XIV

It might be months, or years, or days,
I kept no count, I took no note,
I had no hope my eyes to raise,
And clear them of their dreary mote;
At last men came to set me free; 370
I ask'd not why, and reck'd not where;
It was at length the same to me,
Fetter'd or fetterless to be,
I learn'd to love despair. 374
And thus when they appear'd at last,
And all my bonds aside were cast,
These heavy walls to me had grown
A hermitage—and all my own!
And half I felt as they were come
To tear me from a second home: 380
With spiders I had friendship made,
And watch'd them in their sullen trade,
Had seen the mice by moonlight play,
And why should I feel less than they?
We were all inmates of one place, 385
And I, the monarch of each race,
Had power to kill—yet, strange to tell!
In quiet we had learn'd to dwell;
My very chains and I grew friends,
So much a long communion tends 390
To make us what we are:—even I Regain'd my freedom with a sigh.

'CELUI qui remplissait alors cette place était un gentilhomme Polonais, nommé Mazeppa, né dans le palatinat de Podolie: il avait été élevé page de Jean Casimir, et avait pris à sa cour quelque teinture des belles-lettres. Une intrigue qu'il eut dans sa jeunesse avec la femme d'un gentilhomme Polonais ayant été découverte, le mari le fit lier tout nu sur un cheval farouche, et le laissa aller en cet état. Le cheval, qui était du pays de l'Ukraine, y retourna, et y porta Mazeppa, demi-mort de fatigue et de faim. Quelques paysans le secoururent: il resta longtemps parmi eux, et se signala dans plusieurs courses contre les Tartares. La supériorité de ses lumières lui donna une grande considération parmi les Cosaques: sa réputation s'augmentant de jour en jour obligea le Czar à le faire Prince de l'Ukraine.'

—VOLTAIRE, Hist. de Charles XII. p. 196.

'Le roi fuyant, et poursuivi, eut son cheval tué sous lui; le Colonel Gieta, blessé, et perdant tout son sang, lui donna le sien. Ainsi on remit deux fois à cheval, dans sa fuite, ce conquérant qui n'avait pu y monter pendant la bataille.'—P. 216.

'Le roi alla par un autre chemin avec quelques cavaliers. Le carrosse, où il était, rompit dans la marche; on le remit à cheval. Pour comble de disgrâce, il s'égara pendant la nuit dans un bois; là, son courage ne pouvant plus suppléer à ses forces épuisées, les douleurs de sa blessure devenues plus insupportables par la fatigue, son cheval étant tombé de lassitude, il se coucha quelques heures au pied d'un arbre, en danger d'être surpris à tout moment par les vainqueurs, qui le cherchaient de tous côtés.'—P. 218.

I

'Twas after dread Pultowa's day,
When fortune left the royal Swede,
Around a slaughter'd army lay,
No more to combat and to bleed.
The power and glory of the war, 5
Faithless as their vain votaries, men,
Had pass'd to the triumphant Czar,
And Moscow's walls were safe again,
Until a day more dark and drear,
And a more memorable year, 10
Should give to slaughter and to shame
A mighty host and haughtier name;
A greater wreck, a deeper fall,
A shock to one—a thunderbolt to all.

II

Such was the hazard of the die; 15
The wounded Charles was taught to fly
By day and night through field and flood,
Stain'd with his own and subjects' blood;
For thousands fell that flight to aid:
And not a voice was heard t' upbraid
Ambition in his humbled hour, 21
When truth had nought to dread from power.

His horse was slain, and Gieta gave
His own—and died the Russians' slave.
This too sinks after many a league 25
Of well sustain'd but vain fatigue;
And in the depth of forests, darkling
The watch-fires in the distance sparkling—

The beacons of surrounding foes—
A king must lay his limbs at length.
Are these the laurels and repose 31
For which the nations strain their strength?

They laid him by a savage tree,
In outworn nature's agony;

His wounds were stiff, his limbs were stark; 35

The heavy hour was chill and dark;
The fever in his blood forbade
A transient slumber's fitful aid:
And thus it was; but yet through all,
Kinglike the monarch bore his fall, 40
And made, in this extreme of ill,
His pangs the vassals of his will:
All silent and subdued were they,
As once the nations round him lay.

III

A band of chiefs!—alas! how few,
Since but the fleeting of a day 46
Had thinn'd it; but this wreck was true
And chivalrous: upon the clay
Each sate him down, all sad and mute,
Beside his monarch and his steed;
For danger levels man and brute,
And all are fellows in their need. 52
Among the rest, Mazeppa made
His pillow in an old oak's shade—
Himself as rough, and scarce less old,
The Ukraine's Hetman, calm and bold;
But first, outspent with this long course,
The Cossack prince rubb'd down his horse, 58

And made for him a leafy bed,
And smooth'd his fetlocks and his
mane,
And slack'd his girth, and stripp'd his
rein,

And joy'd to see how well he fed;
For until now he had the dread
His wearied courser might refuse 64
To browse beneath the midnight dews:
But he was hardy as his lord,
And little cared for bed and board;
But spirited and docile too,
Whate'er was to be done, would do.

MAZEPPA

Shaggy and swift, and strong of limb,
 All Tartar-like he carried him; 71
 Obey'd his voice, and came to call,
 And knew him in the midst of all:
 Though thousands were around,—and
 Night,
 Without a star, pursued her flight,—
 That steed from sunset until dawn 76
 His chief would follow like a fawn.

IV

This done, Mazeppa spread his cloak,
 And laid his lance beneath his oak,
 Felt if his arms in order good 80
 The long day's march had well with-
 stood—

If still the powder fill'd the pan,
 And flints unloosen'd kept their lock—
 His sabre's hilt and scabbard felt,
 And whether they had chafed his belt;
 And next the venerable man, 86
 From out his havresack and can,

Prepared and spread his slender stock;
 And to the monarch and his men
 The whole or portion offer'd then 90
 With far less of inquietude
 Than courtiers at a banquet would.

And Charles of this his slender share
 With smiles partook a moment there,
 To force of cheer a greater show, 95
 And seem above both wounds and woe;
 And then he said—'Of all our band,
 Though firm of heart and strong of hand,
 In skirmish, march, or forage, none
 Can less have said or more have done
 Than thee, Mazeppa! on the earth 101

So fit a pair had never birth,
 Since Alexander's days till now,
 As thy Bucephalus and thou:
 All Scythia's fame to thine should yield
 For pricking on o'er flood and field.'
 Mazeppa answer'd—'Ill betide 107
 The school wherein I learn'd to ride!
 Quoth Charles—'Old Hetman, wherefore so,

Since thou hast learn'd the art so well?'
 Mazeppa said—'Twere long to tell;
 And we have many a league to go,
 With every now and then a blow, 113
 And ten to one at least the foe,
 Before our steeds may graze at ease
 Beyond the swift Borysthene:
 And, Sire, your limbs have need of rest,

And I will be the sentinel
 Of this your troop.—'But I request,'
 Said Sweden's monarch, 'thou wilt
 tell 120

This tale of thine, and I may reap,
 Perchance, from this the boon of sleep
 For at this moment from my eyes
 The hope of present slumber flies.'

'Well, Sire, with such a hope, I'll track
 My seventy years of memory back: 126

I think 'twas in my twentieth spring,—
 Ay, 'twas,—when Casimir was king—
 John Casimir,—I was his page
 Six summers, in my earlier age: 130
 A learned monarch, faith! was he,
 And most unlike your majesty;
 He made no wars, and did not gain
 New realms to lose them back again;
 And (save debates in Warsaw's diet)
 He reign'd in most unseemly quiet;
 Not that he had no cares to vex; 137
 He loved the muses and the sex;
 And sometimes these so froward are,
 They made him wish himself at war;
 But soon his wrath being o'er, he took Another mistress, or new book: 142
 And then he gave prodigious fêtes—
 All Warsaw gather'd round his gates
 To gaze upon his splendid court,
 And dames, and chiefs, of princely port:
 He was the Polish Solomon, 147
 So sung his poets, all but one,
 Who, being unpension'd, made a satire,
 And boasted that he could not flatter.
 It was a court of jousts and mimes, 151
 Where every courtier tried at rhymes;
 Even I for once produced some verses,
 And sign'd my odes "Despairing Thyrsis."
 There was a certain Palatine, 155

A count of far and high descent,
 Rich as a salt or silver mine;
 And he was proud, ye may divine,
 As if from heaven he had been sent:
 He had such wealth in blood and ore
 As few could match beneath the
 throne; 161

And he would gaze upon his store,
 And o'er his pedigree would pore,
 Until by some confusion led,
 Which almost look'd like want of head,

He thought their merits were his own.
 His wife was not of his opinion; 167

His junior she by thirty years,
 Grew daily tired of his dominion;
 And, after wishes, hopes, and fears,
 To virtue a few farewell tears, 171
 A restless dream or two, some glances At Warsaw's youth, some songs, and dances,

Awaited but the usual chances,
 Those happy accidents which render
 The coldest dames so very tender, 176
 To deck her Count with titles given,
 'Tis said, as passports into heaven;
 But, strange to say, they rarely boast
 Of these, who have deserved them most.

V

'I was a goodly stripling then; 182
 At seventy years I so may say,
 That there were few, or boys or men,
 Who, in my dawning time of day,
 Of vassal or of knight's degree, 185
 Could vie in vanities with me;

For I had strength, youth, gaiety,
 A port, not like to this ye see,
 But smooth, as all is rugged now;
 For time, and care, and war, have
 plough'd 190

My very soul from out my brow;
 And thus I should be disavow'd
 By all my kind and kin, could they Compare my day and yesterday;
 This change was wrought, too, long ere
 age 195

Had ta'en my features for his page;
 With years, ye know, have not declined
 My strength, my courage, or my mind,
 Or at this hour I should not be Telling old tales beneath a tree, 200
 With starless skies my canopy.

But let me on: Theresa's form—
 Methinks it glides before me now,
 Between me and yon chestnut's bough,
 The memory is so quick and warm;
 And yet I find no words to tell 206
 The shape of her I loved so well:
 She had the Asiatic eye,

Such as our Turkish neighbourhood
 Hath mingled with our Polish blood,
 Dark as above us is the sky; 211
 But through it stole a tender light,
 Like the first moonrise of midnight;
 Large, dark, and swimming in the
 stream, 214

Which seem'd to melt to its own beam;
 All love, half languor, and half fire,
 Like saints that at the stake expire,
 And lift their raptured looks on high,
 As though it were a joy to die.
 A brow like a midsummer lake, 220

Transparent with the sun therein,
 When waves no murmur dare to make,
 And heaven beholds her face within.
 A cheek and lip—but why proceed?

I loved her then, I love her still;
 And such as I am, love indeed 226
 In fierce extremes—in good and ill.
 But still we love even in our rage,
 And haunted to our very age
 With the vain shadow of the past, 230
 As is Mazeppa to the last.

VI

'We met—we gazed—I saw, and sigh'd,
 She did not speak, and yet replied;
 There are ten thousand tones and signs
 We hear and see, but none defines—
 Involuntary sparks of thought, 236
 Which strike from out the heart o'er-
 wrought,

And form a strange intelligence,
 Alike mysterious and intense,
 Which link the burning chain that binds, Without their will, young hearts and minds: 241

Conveying, as the electric wire,
 We know not how, the absorbing fire.

I saw, and sigh'd—in silence wept,
 And still reluctant distance kept, 245
 Until I was made known to her,
 And we might then and there confer
 Without suspicion—then, even then,
 I long'd, and was resolved to speak;
 But on my lips they died again, 250

The accents tremulous and weak,
 Until one hour.—There is a game,
 A frivolous and foolish play,
 Wherewith we while away the day;
 It is—I have forgot the name— 255

And we to this, it seems, were set,
 By some strange chance, which I forget:
 I reck'd not if I won or lost,
 It was enough for me to be
 So near to hear, and oh! to see 260
 The being whom I loved the most.
 I watch'd her as a sentinel, (May ours this dark night watch as
 well!)

Until I saw, and thus it was,
 That she was pensive, nor perceived
 Her occupation, nor was grieved 266
 Nor glad to lose or gain; but still Play'd on for hours, as if her will Yet bound her to the place, though not
 That hers might be the winning lot.

Then through my brain the thought did pass 271

Even as a flash of lightning there,
 That there was something in her air
 Which would not doom me to despair;
 And on the thought my words broke forth,
 All incoherent as they were; 276

Their eloquence was little worth,
 But yet she listen'd—'tis enough—
 Who listens once will listen twice;
 Her heart, be sure, is not of ice,
 And one refusal no rebuff. 281

VII

'I loved, and was beloved again—
 They tell me, Sire, you never knew
 Those gentle frailties; if 'tis true, 285
 I shorten all my joy or pain;
 To you 'twould seem absurd as vain;
 But all men are not born to reign,
 Or o'er their passions, or as you
 Thus o'er themselves and nations too.
 I am—or rather was—a prince, 290
 A chief of thousands, and could lead Them on where each would foremost
 bleed;

But could not o'er myself evince
 The like control—But to resume:

I loved, and was beloved again; 295
 In sooth, it is a happy doom,
 But yet where happiest ends in pain.
 We met in secret, and the hour
 Which led me to that lady's bower
 Was fiery Expectation's dower. 300
 My days and nights were nothing—all Except that hour, which doth recall,

MAZEPPA

In the long lapse from youth to age,
 No other like itself: I'd give
 The Ukraine back again to live 305
 It o'er once more, and be a page,
 The happy page, who was the lord
 Of one soft heart, and his own sword,
 And had no other gem nor wealth
 Save nature's gift of youth and health.
 We met in secret—doubly sweet, 311
 Some say, they find it so to meet;
 I know not that—I would have given
 My life but to have call'd her mine
 In the full view of earth and heaven;
 For I did oft and long repine 316
 That we could only meet by stealth.

VIII

'For lovers there are many eyes,
 And such there were on us; the devil
 On such occasions should be civil—
 The devil!—I'm loth to do him wrong,
 It might be some untoward saint,
 Who would not be at rest too long,
 But to his pious bile gave vent—
 But one fair night, some lurking spies
 Surprised and seized us both. 326
 The Count was something more than wroth—
 I was unarm'd; but if in steel,
 All cap-à-pie from head to heel,
 What 'gainst their numbers could I do?
 'Twas near his castle, far away 331
 From city or from succour near,
 And almost on the break of day;
 I did not think to see another,
 My moments seem'd reduced to few;
 And with one prayer to Mary Mother,
 And, it may be, a saint or two, 337
 As I resign'd me to my fate,
 They led me to the castle gate:
 Theresa's doom I never knew, 340
 Our lot was henceforth separate.
 An angry man, ye may opine,
 Was he, the proud Count Palatine;
 And he had reason good to be, 344
 But he was most enraged lest such An accident should chance to touch
 Upon his future pedigree;
 Nor less amazed, that such a blot
 His noble 'scutcheon should have got,
 While he was highest of his line; 350
 Because unto himself he seem'd
 The first of men, nor less he deem'd
 In others' eyes, and most in mine.
 'Sdeath! with a page—perchance a king
 Had reconciled him to the thing; 355
 But with a stripling of a page—
 I felt, but cannot paint his rage.

IX

"Bring forth the horse!"—the horse was brought;
 In truth, he was a noble steed,
 A Tartar of the Ukraine breed, 360

Who look'd as though the speed of
 thought
 Were in his limbs; but he was wild,
 Wild as the wild deer, and untought,
 With spur and bridle undefiled—
 'Twas but a day he had been caught;
 And snorting, with erected mane, 366
 And struggling fiercely, but in vain,
 In the full foam of wrath and dread
 To me the desert-born was led:
 They bound me on, that menial throng;
 Upon his back with many a thong; 371
 Then loosed him with a sudden lash—
 Away!—away!—and on we dash!
 Torrents less rapid and less rash.

X

'Away!—away! My breath was gone,
 I saw not where he hurried on: 376
 'Twas scarcely yet the break of day,
 And on he foam'd—away!—away!
 The last of human sounds which rose,
 As I was darted from my foes, 380
 Was the wild shout of savage laughter,
 Which on the wind came roaring after
 A moment from that rabble rout:
 With sudden wrath I wrench'd my head,
 And snapp'd the cord, which to the mane 385
 Had bound my neck in lieu of rein,
 And, writhing half my form about,
 Howl'd back my curse; but 'midst the
 tread,
 The thunder of my courser's speed,
 Perchance they did not hear nor heed:
 It vexes me—for I would fain 391
 Have paid their insult back again.
 I paid it well in after days:
 There is not of that castle gate,
 Its drawbridge and portcullis' weight,
 Stone, bar, moat, bridge, or barrier left;
 Nor of its fields a blade of grass, 397
 Save what grows on a ridge of wall,
 Where stood the hearth-stone of the
 hall;
 And many a time ye there might pass,
 Nor dream that e'er that fortress was.
 I saw its turrets in a blaze, 402
 Their crackling battlements all cleft,
 And the hot lead pour down like rain
 From off the scorch'd and blackening
 roof, 405
 Whose thickness was not vengeance-
 proof.
 They little thought that day of pain,
 When launch'd, as on the lightning's flash,
 They bade me to destruction dash, 409
 That one day I should come again,
 With twice five thousand horse, to thank
 The Count for his uncounteous ride.
 They play'd me then a bitter prank,
 When, with the wild horse for my
 guide, 414

They bound me to his foaming flank:
 At length I play'd them one as frank
 For time at last sets all things even—
 And if we do but watch the hour,
 There never yet was human power
 Which could evade, if unforgiven, 420
 The patient search and vigil long
 Of him who treasures up a wrong.

XI

'Away, away, my steed and I,
 Upon the pinions of the wind,
 All human dwellings left behind;
 We sped like meteors through the sky,
 When with its crackling sound the night
 Is chequer'd with the northern light:
 Town—village—none were on our track
 But a wild plain of far extent, 430
 And bounded by a forest black;
 And, save the scarce-seen battlement
 On distant heights of some strong hold,
 Against the Tartars built of old,
 No trace of man. The year before 435
 A Turkish army had march'd o'er;
 And where the Spahi's hoof hath trod,
 The verdure flies the bloody sod:
 The sky was dull, and dim, and gray,
 And a low breeze crept moaning by—
 I could have answer'd with a sigh—
 But fast we fled, away, away, 442
 And I could neither sigh nor pray;
 And my cold sweat-drops fell like rain
 Upon the courser's bristling mane;
 But, snorting still with rage and fear,
 He flew upon his far career: 447
 At times I almost thought, indeed,
 He must have slacken'd in his speed;
 But no—my bound and slender frame
 Was nothing to his angry might,
 And merely like a spur became:
 Each motion which I made to free
 My swoln limbs from their agony
 Increased his fury and affright: 455
 I tried my voice,—'twas faint and low,
 But yet he swerved as from a blow;
 And, starting to each accent, sprang
 As from a sudden trumpet's clang:
 Meantime my cords were wet with gore,
 Which, oozing through my limbs, ran
 o'er; 461
 And in my tongue the thirst became
 A something fierier far than flame.

XII

'We near'd the wild wood—'twas so
 wide,
 I saw no bounds on either side; 465
 'Twas studded with old sturdy trees,
 That bent not to the roughest breeze
 Which howls down from Siberia's waste,
 And strips the forest in its haste,—
 But these were few and far between, Set thick with shrubs more young and
 green, 471

Luxuriant with their annual leaves,
 Ere strown by those autumnal eves
 That nip the forest's foliage dead,
 Discolour'd with a lifeless red, 475
 Which stands thereon like stiffen'd gore
 Upon the slain when battle's o'er,
 And some long winter's night hath shed
 Its frost o'er every tombless head,
 So cold and stark the raven's beak 480
 May peck unpierced each frozen cheek:
 'Twas a wild waste of underwood,
 And here and there a chestrut stood,
 The strong oak, and the hardy pine;

But far apart—and well it were, 485
 Or else a different lot were mine—

The boughs gave way, and did not tear
 My limbs; and I found strength to bear
 My wounds, already scarr'd with cold;
 My bonds forbade to loose my hold.
 We rustled through the leaves like wind, Left shrubs, and trees, and wolves behind; 492

By night I heard them on the track,
 Their troop came hard upon our back,
 With their long gallop, which can tire
 The hound's deep hate, and hunter's fire:
 Where'er we flew they follow'd on, 497
 Nor left us with the morning sun;
 Behind I saw them, scarce a rood,
 At day-break winding through the
 wood, 500

And through the night had heard their
 feet

Their stealing, rustling step repeat.
 Oh! how I wish'd for spear or sword,
 At least to die amidst the horde,
 And perish—if it must be so— 505
 At bay, destroying many a foe!
 When first my courser's race begun,
 I wish'd the goal already won;
 But now I doubted strength and speed.
 Vain doubt! his swift and savage breed
 Had nerved him like the mountain-roe;
 Nor faster falls the blinding snow 512
 Which whelms the peasant near the door
 Whose threshold he shall cross no more,
 Bewilder'd with the dazzling blast,
 Than through the forest-paths he
 pass'd—

Untired, untamed, and worse than wild;
 All furious as a favour'd child Balk'd of its wish; or fiercer still—
 A woman piqued—who has her will.

XIII

'The wood was past; 'twas more than noon, 521
 But chill the air, although in June;
 Or it might be my veins ran cold—
 Prolong'd endurance tames the bold;
 And I was then not what I seem, 525
 But headlong as a wintry stream,
 And wore my feelings out before
 I well could count their causes o'er:

MAZEPPA

And what with fury, fear, and wrath,
The tortures which beset my path, 530
Cold, hunger, sorrow, shame, distress,
Thus bound in nature's nakedness;
Sprung from a race whose rising blood,
When stirr'd beyond its calmer mood,
And trodden hard upon, is like 535
The rattle-snake's, in act to strike,
What marvel if this worn-out trunk
Beneath its woes a moment sunk?
The earth gave way, the skies roll'd
round,

I seem'd to sink upon the ground; 540
But err'd, for I was fastly bound.
My heart turn'd sick, my brain grew
sore,
And throb'd awhile, then beat no
more:

The skies spun like a mighty wheel;
I saw the trees like drunkards reel, 545
And a slight flash sprang o'er my eyes,
Which saw no farther: he who dies
Can die no more than then I died.
O'er-tortured by that ghastly ride,
I felt the blackness come and go, 550
And strove to wake; but could not
make

My senses climb up from below:
I felt as on a plank at sea,
When all the waves that dash o'er thee,
At the same time upheave and whirl,
And hurl thee towards a desert realm.
My undulating life was as 557
The fancied lights that flitting pass
Our shut eyes in deep midnight, when Fever begins upon the brain; 560
But soon it pass'd, with little pain,
But a confusion worse than such:
I own that I should deem it much,
Dying, to feel the same again;
And yet I do suppose we must 565
Feel far more ere we turn to dust:
No matter; I have bared my brow
Full in Death's face—before—and now.

XIV

'My thoughts came back; where was I?
Cold,
And numb, and giddy: pulse by pulse
Life reassumed its lingering hold, 571
And throb by throb,—till grown a pang
Which for a moment would convulse, My blood reflow'd, though thick and chill;
My ear with uncouth noises rang,
My heart began once more to thrill;
My sight return'd, though dim; alas!
And thicken'd, as it were, with glass.
Methought the dash of waves was nigh;
There was a gleam too of the sky, 580
Studded with stars;—it is no dream;
The wild horse swims the wilder stream!
The bright broad river's gushing tide
Sweeps, winding onward, far and wide,

And we are half-way, struggling o'er
To yon unknown and silent shore. 586
The waters broke my hollow trance,
And with a temporary strength
My stiffen'd limbs were rebaptized.
My courser's broad breast proudly braves, 590
And dashes off the ascending waves,
And onward we advance!
We reach the slippery shore at length,
A haven I but little prized, 594
For all behind was dark and drear,
And all before was night and fear.
How many hours of night or day
In those suspended pangs I lay,
I could not tell; I scarcely knew
If this were human breath I drew. 600

XV

'With glossy skin, and dripping mane,
And reeling limbs, and reeking flank,
The wild steed's sinewy nerves still strain
Up the repelling bank. 604
We gain the top: a boundless plain Spreads through the shadow of the
night,
And onward, onward, onward, seems,
Like precipices in our dreams,
To stretch beyond the sight; 609
And here and there a speck of white,
Or scatter'd spot of dusky green,
In masses broke into the light,
As rose the moon upon my right:
But nought distinctly seen
In the dim waste would indicate 615
The omen of a cottage gate;
No twinkling taper from afar
Stood like a hospitable star;
Not even an ignis-fatuus rose 619
To make him merry with my woes:
That very cheat had cheer'd me then!
Although detected, welcome still,
Reminding me, through every ill,
Of the abodes of men, 624

XVI

'Onward we went—but slack and slow;
His savage force at length o'erspent,
The drooping courser, faint and low,
All feebly foaming went.
A sickly infant had had power 629
To guide him forward in that hour,
But useless all to me:
His new-born tameness nought avail'd—
My limbs were bound; my force had
fail'd,
Perchance, had they been free.
With feeble effort still I tried 635
To rend the bonds so starkly tied,
But still it was in vain;
My limbs were only wrung the more,
And soon the idle strife gave o'er,
Which but prolong'd their pain: 640

The dizzy race seem'd almost done,
Although no goal was nearly won:
Some streaks announced the coming
sun—

How slow, alas! he came! 644
Methought that mist of dawning gray
Would never dapple into day;
How heavily it roll'd away—

Before the eastern flame
Rose crimson, and deposed the stars,
And call'd the radiance from their cars,
And fill'd the earth, from his deep
throne, 651
With lonely lustre, all his own.

XVII

'Up rose the sun; the mists were curl'd
Back from the solitary world
Which lay around, behind, before.
What boot'd it to traverse o'er 656
Plain, forest, river? Man nor brute,
Nor dint of hoof, nor print of foot,
Lay in the wild luxuriant soil;
No sign of travel, none of toil; 660
The very air was mute;
And not an insect's shrill small horn,
Nor matin bird's new voice was borne
From herb nor thicket. Many a werst,
Panting as if his heart would burst, 665
The weary brute still stagger'd on;
And still we were—or seem'd—alone.
At length, while reeling on our way,
Methought I heard a courser neigh,
From out yon tuft of blackening firs.
Is it the wind those branches stirs? 671
No, no! from out the forest prance
A trampling troop; I see them come!
In one vast squadron they advance!

I strove to cry—my lips were dumb.
The steeds rush on in plunging pride;
But where are they the reins to guide?
A thousand horse, and none to ride!
With flowing tail, and flying mane,
Wide nostrils never stretch'd by pain,
Mouths bloodless to the bit or rein,
And feet that iron never shod, 682
And flanks unscarr'd by spur or rod,
A thousand horse, the wild, the free,
Like waves that follow o'er the sea,

Came thickly thundering on,
As if our faint approach to meet;
The sight re-nerv'd my courser's feet,
A moment staggering, feebly fleet,
A moment, with a faint low neigh,
He answer'd, and then fell; 691
With gasps and glazing eyes he lay,
And reeking limbs immoveable,

His first and last career is done!
On came the troop—they saw him stoop,
They saw me strangely bound along
His back with many a bloody thong:
They stop, they start, they snuff the
air,
Gallop a moment here and there,

Approach, retire, wheel round and
round, 700
Then plunging back with sudden bound,
Headed by one black mighty steed,
Who seem'd the patriarch of his breed,
Without a single speck or hair
Of white upon his shaggy hide; 705
They snort, they foam, neigh, swerve
aside,

And backward to the forest fly,
By instinct, from a human eye.
They left me there to my despair,
Link'd to the dead and stiffening wretch,
Whose lifeless limbs beneath me stretch,
Relieved from that unwonted weight,
From whence I could not extricate
Nor him nor me—and there we lay,
The dying on the dead! 715
I little deem'd another day
Would see my houseless, helpless
head.

'And there from morn to twilight
bound,
I felt the heavy hours toil round,
With just enough of life to see 720
My last of suns go down on me,
In hopeless certainty of mind,
That makes us feel at length resign'd
To that which our foreboding years
Present the worst and last of fears:
Inevitable—even a boon, 726
Nor more unkind for coming soon,
Yet shunn'd and dreaded with such care,
As if it only were a snare

That prudence might escape: 730
At times both wish'd-for and implored,
At times sought with self-pointed sword,
Yet still a dark and hideous close
To even intolerable woes,
And welcome in no shape. 735
And, strange to say, the sons of pleasure,
They who have revell'd beyond measure
In beauty, wassail, wine, and treasure, Die calm, or calmer, oft than he Whose heritage was misery: 740
For he who hath in turn run through
All that was beautiful and new,

Hath nought to hope, and nought to
leave;
And, save the future, (which is view'd
Not quite as men are base or good, 745
But as their nerves may be endured,)

With nought perhaps to grieve:
The wretch still hopes his woes must end,
And Death, whom he should deem his
friend,
Appears, to his distemper'd eyes, 750
Arrived to rob him of his prize,
The tree of his new Paradise.
To-morrow would have given him all,
Repaid his pangs, repair'd his fall;
To-morrow would have been the first
Of days no more deplored or curst,

MAZEPPA

But bright, and long, and beckoning years,
 Seen dazzling through the mist of tears.
 Guerdon of many a painful hour;
 To-morrow would have given him
 power 760
 To rule, to shine, to smite, to save—
 And must it dawn upon his grave?

XVIII

'The sun was sinking—still I lay Chain'd to the chill and stiffening
 steed;

I thought to mingle there our clay, 765
 And my dim eyes of death had need;
 No hope arose of being freed:

I cast my last looks up the sky,
 And there between me and the sun
 I saw the expecting raven fly, 770 Who scarce would wait till both should
 die,

Ere his repast begun;
 He flew, and perch'd, then flew once more,
 And each time nearer than before;
 I saw his wing through twilight flit,
 And once so near me he alit 776

I could have smote, but lack'd the
 strength;

But the slight motion of my hand,
 And feeble scratching of the sand,
 The exerted throat's faint struggling
 noise, 780

Which scarcely could be called a voice,
 Together scared him off at length.

I know no more—my latest dream
 Is something of a lovely star
 Which fix'd my dull eyes from afar,
 And went and came with wandering
 beam, 786

And all the cold, dull, swimming, dense Sensation of recurring sense,
 And then subsiding back to death,
 And then again a little breath, 790
 A little thrill, a short suspense,

An icy sickness curdling o'er My heart, and sparks that cross'd my
 brain—

A gasp, a throb, a start of pain,
 A sigh, and nothing more. 795

XIX

'I woke—where was I?—Do I see
 A human face look down on me?
 And doth a roof above me close?
 Do these limbs on a couch repose?
 Is this a chamber where I lie? 800
 And is it mortal yon bright eye,
 That watches me with gentle glance?

I closed my own again once more,
 As doubtful that my former trance
 Could not as yet be o'er. 805

A slender girl, long-hair'd, and tall,
 Sate watching by the cottage wall;
 The sparkle of her eye I caught,
 Even with my first return of thought;

For ever and anon she threw 810
 A prying, pitying glance on me
 With her black eyes so wild and free:
 I gazed, and gazed, until I knew
 No vision it could be,—

But that I lived, and was released 815
 From adding to the vulture's feast:
 And when the Cossack maid beheld
 My heavy eyes at length unseal'd,
 She smiled—and I essay'd to speak,
 But fail'd—and she approach'd, and
 made 820

With lip and finger signs that said,
 I must not strive as yet to break
 The silence, till my strength should be Enough to leave my accents free; 824
 And then her hand on mine she laid,
 And smooth'd the pillow for my head,
 And stole along on tiptoe tread,

And gently oped the door, and spake
 In whispers—ne'er was voice so sweet!
 Even music follow'd her light feet: 830

But those she call'd were not awake,
 And she went forth; but, ere she pass'd,
 Another look on me she cast,

Another sign she made, to say,
 That I had nought to fear, that all 835
 Were near, at my command or call,
 And she would not delay

Her due return:—while she was gone,
 Methought I felt too much alone. 839

XX

'She came with mother and with sire—
 What need of more?—I will not tire
 With long recital of the rest,
 Since I became the Cossack's guest.

They found me senseless on the plain,
 They bore me to the nearest hut, 845
 They brought me into life again—
 Me—one day o'er their realm to reign!

Thus the vain fool who strove to glut
 His rage, refining on my pain, 849

Sent me forth to the wilderness,
 Bound, naked, bleeding, and alone,
 To pass the desert to a throne,—

What mortal his own doom may guess?
 Let none despond, let none despair!
 To-morrow the Borysthenes 855

May see our coursers graze at ease
 Upon his Turkish bank, and never Had I such welcome for a river

As I shall yield when safely there.
 Comrades, good night!—The Hetman
 threw 860

His length beneath the oak-tree shade,
 With leafy couch already made,
 A bed nor comfortless nor new
 To him, who took his rest where'er
 The hour arrived, no matter where:

His eyes the hastening slumbers steep.
 And if ye marvel Charles forgot
 To thank his tale, he wonder'd not,—
 The king had been an hour asleep.

THE ISLAND

OR

CHRISTIAN AND HIS COMRADES

ADVERTISEMENT

THE foundation of the following story will be found partly in Lieutenant Bligh's 'Narrative of the Mutiny and Seizure of the Bounty, in the South Seas, in 1789'; and partly in 'Mariner's Account of the Tonga Islands,' Genoa, 1823.

CANTO THE FIRST

I

THE morning watch was come; the vessel lay
Her course, and gently made her liquid way;
The cloven billow flash'd from off her prow
In furrows form'd by that majestic plough;
The waters with their world were all before;
Behind, the South Sea's many an islet shore.
The quiet night, now dappling, 'gan to wane,
Dividing darkness from the dawning main;
The dolphins, not unconscious of the day,
Swam high, as eager of the coming ray;
The stars from broader beams began to creep,
And lift their shining eyelids from the deep;
The sail resumed its lately shadow'd white,
And the wind flutter'd with a freshening flight;
The purpling ocean owns the coming sun,
But ere he break--a deed is to be done.

II

The gallant chief within his cabin slept,
Secure in those by whom the watch was kept:
His dreams were of Old England's welcome shore,
Of toils rewarded, and of dangers o'er;
His name was added to the glorious roll
Of those who search the storm-surrounded Pole.
The worst was over, and the rest seem'd sure,
And why should not his slumber be secure?
Alas! his deck was trod by unwilling feet,
And wilder hands would hold the vessel's sheet;

26

Young hearts, which languish'd for some sunny isle,
Where summer years and summer women smile;
Men without country, who, too long estranged,
Had found no native home, or found it changed,
And, half uncivilised, preferr'd the cave
Of some soft savage to the uncertain wave--
The gushing fruits that nature gave untill'd;
The wood without a path but where they will'd;
The field o'er which promiscuous Plenty pour'd
Her horn; the equal land without a lord;
The wish--which ages have not yet subdued
In man--to have no master save his mood;
The earth, whose mine was on its face, unsold,
The glowing sun and produce all its gold;
The freedom which can call each grot a home;
The general garden, where all steps may roam,
Where Nature owns a nation as her child,
Exulting in the enjoyment of the wild;
Their shells, their fruits, the only wealth they know,
Their unexploring navy, the canoe;
Their sport, the dashing breakers and the chase;
Their strangest sight, an European face:--
Such was the country which these strangers yearn'd
To see again; a sight they dearly earn'd.

III

Awake, bold Bligh! the foe is at the gate!
Awake! awake!--Alas! it is too late!
Fiercely beside thy cot the mutineer
Stands, and proclaims the reign of rage and fear.
Thy limbs are bound, the bayonet at thy breast;
The hands, which trembled at thy voice, arrest;

55

Dragg'd o'er the deck, no more at thy
 command
 The obedient helm shall veer, the sail expand;
 That savage spirit, which would lull by
 wrath 59
 Its desperate escape from duty's path,
 Glares round thee, in the scarce-believing
 eyes
 Of those who fear the chief they sacrifice:
 For ne'er can man his conscience all assuage,
 Unless he drain the wine of passion—rage.

IV

In vain, not silenced by the eye of death,
 Thou call'st the loyal with thy menaced
 breath:— 66
 They come not; they are few, and, overawed,
 Must acquiesce, while sterner hearts applaud.
 In vain thou dost demand the cause: a curse
 Is all the answer, with the threat of worse.
 Full in thine eyes is waved the glittering
 blade, 71
 Close to thy throat the pointed bayonet
 laid.
 The levell'd muskets circle round thy
 breast
 In hands as steel'd to do the deadly rest.
 Thou dar'st them to their worst, exclaiming—'Fire!' 75
 But they who pitied not could yet admire;
 Some lurking remnant of their former
 awe Restrain'd them longer than their broken
 law;
 They would not dip their souls at once in
 blood, 79
 But left thee to the mercies of the flood.

'Hoist out the boat!' was now the leader's
 cry;
 And who dare answer 'No!' to Mutiny,
 In the first dawning of the drunken hour,
 The Saturnalia of unhop'd-for power?
 The boat is lower'd with all the haste of
 hate, 85
 With its slight plank between thee and thy
 fate;
 Her only cargo such a scant supply
 As promises the death their hands deny;
 And just enough of water and of bread
 To keep, some days, the dying from the
 dead: 90
 Some cordage, canvas, sails, and lines, and
 twine,
 But treasures all to hermits of the brine,
 Were added after, to the earnest prayer
 Of those who saw no hope, save sea and
 air;

And last, that trembling vassal of the Pole— 95
 The feeling compass—Navigation's soul.

VI

And now the self-elected chief finds time
 To stun the first sensation of his crime,
 And raise it in his followers—'Ho! the
 bowl!'
 Lest passion should return to reason's
 shcal, 100
 'Brandy for heroes!' Burke could once exclaim—
 No doubt a liquid path to epic fame;
 And such the new-born heroes found it
 here,
 And drain'd the draught with an applauding cheer.
 'Huzza! for Otaheite!' was the cry. 105
 How strange such shouts from sons of Mutiny!
 The gentle island, and the genial soil,
 The friendly hearts, the feasts without a
 toil,
 The courteous manners but from nature
 caught,
 The wealth unhoarded, and the love un-
 bought; 110
 Could these have charms for rudest sea-boys, driven
 Before the mast by every wind of heaven?
 And now, even now prepared with others'
 woes
 To earn mild Virtue's vain desire, repose?
 Alas! such is our nature! all but aim
 At the same end by pathways not the same;
 Our means, our birth, our nation, and our
 name,
 Our fortune, temper, even our outward
 frame,
 Are far more potent o'er our yielding clay
 Than aught we know beyond our little
 day. 120
 Yet still there whispers the small voice
 within,
 Heard through Gain's silence, and o'er Glory's din:
 Whatever creed be taught, or land be trod,
 Man's conscience is the oracle of God.

VII

The launch is crowded with the faithful
 few 125
 Who wait their chief, a melancholy crew:
 But some remain'd reluctant on the deck
 Of that proud vessel—now a moral
 wreck—
 And view'd their captain's fate with piteous
 eyes: 129
 While others scoff'd his augur'd miseries,
 Sneer'd at the prospect of his pigmy sail,
 And the slight bark so laden and so frail.
 The tender nautilus, who steers his prow,
 The sea-born sailor of his shell canoe,

The ocean Mab, the fairy of the sea, 135
Seems far less fragile, and, alas! more free.
He, when the lightning-wing'd tornados sweep

The surge, is safe—his port is in the deep—
And triumphs o'er the armadas of mankind,
Which shake the world, yet crumble in the wind. 140

VIII

When all was now prepared, the vessel clear

Which hail'd her master in the mutineer,
A seaman, less obdurate than his mates,
Show'd the vain pity which but irritates;
Watch'd his late chieftain with exploring eye, 145

And told, in signs, repentant sympathy;
Held the moist shaddock to his parched mouth,

Which felt exhaustion's deep and bitter drouth.

But soon observed, this guardian was withdrawn,

Nor further mercy clouds rebellion's dawn. 150

Then forward stepp'd the bold and forward boy

His chief had cherish'd only to destroy,
And, pointing to the helpless prow beneath,

Exclaim'd, 'Depart at once! delay is death!'

Yet then, even then, his feelings ceased not all: 155

In that last moment could a word recall
Remorse for the black deed as yet half done,

And what he hid from many show'd to one:

When Bligh in stern reproach demanded where

Was now his grateful sense of former care?
Where all his hopes to see his name aspire,
And blazon Britain's thousand glories higher? 162

His feverish lips thus broke their gloomy spell,

"'Tis that! 'tis that! I am in hell! in hell!"
No more he said: but urging to the bark
His chief, commits him to his fragile ark;
These the sole accents from his tongue that fell, 167

But volumes lurk'd below his fierce farewell.

IX

The arctic sun rose broad above the wave;
The breeze now sank, now whisper'd from his cave; 170

As on the Æolian harp, his fitful wings
Now swell'd, now flutter'd o'er his ocean strings.

With slow, despairing oar, the abandon'd skiff

Ploughs its drear progress to the scarce-seen cliff, 174

Which lifts its peak a cloud above the main:
That boat and ship shall never meet again!

But 'tis not mine to tell their tale of grief,
Their constant peril, and their scant relief;
Their days of danger, and their nights of pain;

Their manly courage even when deem'd in vain; 180

The sapping famine, rendering scarce a son
Known to his mother in the skeleton;

The ills that lessen'd still their little store,
And starved even Hunger till he wrung no more;

The varying frowns and favours of the deep, 185

That now almost ingulfs, then leaves to creep

With crazy oar and shatter'd strength along
The tide that yields reluctant to the strong;

The incessant fever of that arid thirst
Which welcomes, as a well, the clouds that burst 190

Above their naked bones, and feels delight
In the cold drenching of the stormy night,

And from the outspread canvas gladly wrings

A drop to moisten life's all-gasping springs; 194

The savage foe escaped, to seek again
More hospitable shelter from the main;

The ghastly spectres which were doom'd at last

To tell as true a tale of dangers past,
As ever the dark annals of the deep

Disclosed for man to dread or woman weep. 200

X

We leave them to their fate, but not unknown

Nor unredress'd. Revenge may have her own:

Roused discipline aloud proclaims their cause,

And injured navies urge their broken laws.
Pursue we on his track the mutineer,

Whom distant vengeance had not taught to fear. 206

Wide o'er the wave—away! away! away!
Once more his eyes shall hail the welcome bay;

Once more the happy shores without a law
Receive the outlaws whom they lately saw;

Nature, and Nature's goddess—woman—woos 211

To lands where, save their conscience, none accuse;

Where all partake the earth without dispute,
And bread itself is gather'd as a fruit;

Where none contest the fields, the woods,
 the streams:—²¹⁵
 The goldless age, where gold disturbs no
 dreams,
 Inhabits or inhabited the shore,
 Till Europe taught them better than be-
 fore:
 Bestow'd her customs, and amended
 theirs,
 But left her vices also to their heirs, ²²⁰
 Away with this! behold them as they were,
 Do good with Nature, or with Nature err,
 'Huzza! for Otaheite!' was the cry,
 As stately swept the gallant vessel by.
 The breeze springs up; the lately flapping sail ²²⁵
 Extends its arch before the growing gale;
 In swifter ripples stream aside the seas,
 Which her bold bow flings off with dashing ease.
 Thus Argo plough'd the Euxine's virgin
 foam,
 But those she wafted still look'd back to home: ²³⁰
 These spurn their country with their rebel
 bark,
 And fly her as the raven fled the ark;
 And yet they seek to nestle with the dove,
 And tame their fiery spirits down to love.

CANTO THE SECOND

I

How pleasant were the songs of Toobonai,
 When summer's sun went down the coral
 bay!
 Come, let us to the islet's softest shade,
 And hear the warbling birds! the damsel
 said:
 The wood-dove from the forest-depth shall coo, ⁵
 Like voices of the gods from Bolotoo, We'll cull the flowers that grow above the
 dead,
 For these most bloom where rests the warrior's head;
 And we will sit in twilight's face, and see
 The sweet moon glancing through the toa tree, ¹⁰
 The lofty accents of whose sighing bough
 Shall sadly please us as we lean below;
 Or climb the steep, and view the surf in
 vain
 Wrestle with rocky giants o'er the main,
 Which spurn in columns back the baffled spray. ¹⁵
 How beautiful are these! how happy they,
 Who, from the toil and tumult of their lives,
 Steal to look down where nought but ocean strives!
 Even he too loves at times the blue lagoon,
 And smoothes his ruffled mane beneath the moon. ²⁰

II

Yes—from the sepulchre we'll gather
 flowers,
 Then feast like spirits in their promised
 bowers,
 Then plunge and revel in the rolling surf,
 Then lay our limbs along the tender turf,
 And, wet and shining from the sportive toil, ²⁵
 Anoint our bodies with the fragrant oil,
 And plait our garlands gather'd from the
 grave,
 And wear the wreaths that sprung from out the brave.
 But lo! night comes, the Mooa woos us
 back,
 The sound of mats are heard along our track;
 Anon the torchlight dance shall fling its sheen ³¹
 In flashing mazes o'er the Marly's green;
 And we too will be there; we too recall
 The memory bright with many a festival,
 Ere Fiji blew the shell of war, when foes
 For the first time were wafted in canoes.
 Alas! for them the flower of mankind bleeds;
 Alas! for them our fields are rank with weeds:
 Forgotten is the rapture, or unknown,
 Of wandering with the moon and love alone. ⁴⁰
 But be it so:—they taught us how to wield
 The club, and rain our arrows o'er the field:
 Now let them reap the harvest of their art!
 But feast to-night! to-morrow we depart.
 Strike up the dance! the cava bowl fill high! ⁴⁵
 Drain every drop!—to-morrow we may die.
 In summer garments be our limbs array'd;
 Around our waists the tappa's white dis-
 play'd;
 Thick wreaths shall form our coronal, like
 spring's,
 And round our necks shall glance the hooni strings; ⁵⁰
 So shall their brighter hues contrast the
 glow
 Of the dusk bosoms that beat high below.

III

But now the dance is o'er—yet stay awhile;
 Ah, pause! nor yet put out the social smile.
 To-morrow for the Mooa we depart, ⁵⁵
 But not to-night—to-night is for the heart.
 Again bestow the wreaths we gently woo,
 Ye young enchantresses of gay Licoo!
 How lovely are your forms! how every
 sense
 Bows to your beauties, soften'd, but intense, ⁶⁰
 Like to the flowers on Mataloco's steep,
 Which fling their fragrance far athwart
 the deep!—

We too will see Licoo; but—oh! my heart!—

What do I say?—to-morrow we depart!

IV

Thus rose a song—the harmony of times
Before the winds blew Europe o'er these climes. 66

True, they had vices—such are Nature's growth—

But only the barbarian's—we have both;
The sordor of civilisation, mix'd

With all the savage which man's fall hath
fix'd. 70

Who hath not seen Dissimulation's reign,
The prayers of Abel link'd to deeds of
Cain?

Who such would see may from his lattice
view

The Old World more degraded than the
New,—

Now new no more, save where Columbia
rears 75

Twin giants, born by Freedom to her
spheres,

Where Chimborazo, over air, earth, wave,
Glares with his Titan eye, and sees no slave.

Such was this ditty of Tradition's days,
Which to the dead a lingering fame conveys 80

In song, where fame as yet hath left no sign Beyond the sound whose charm is half
divine;

Which leaves no record to the sceptic eye,
But yields young history all to harmony;

A boy Achilles, with the centaur's lyre 85
In hand, to teach him to surpass his sire.
For one long-cherish'd ballad's simple

stave,
Rung from the rock, or mingled with the

wave,
Or from the bubbling streamlet's grassy side,
Or gathering mountain echoes as they glide, 90

Hath greater power o'er each true heart and ear,

Than all the columns Conquest's minions

rear;
Invites, when hieroglyphics are a theme
For sages' labours, or the student's dream;

Attracts, when History's volumes are a
toil,— 95

The first, the freshest bud of Feeling's soil.
Such was this rude rhyme—rhyme is of the rude—

But such inspired the Norseman's solitude,
Who came and conquer'd; such, wherever

rise 99
Lands which no foes destroy or civilise,
Exist: and what can our accomplish'd art

Of verse do more than reach the awaken'd
heart?

VI

And sweetly now those untaught melodies
Broke the luxurious silence of the skies,

The sweet siesta of a summer day, 105
The tropic afternoon of Toobonai,

When every flower was bloom, and air
was balm,

And the first breath began to stir the palm,
The first yet voiceless wind to urge the wave

All gently to refresh the thirsty cave,
Where sat the songstress with the stranger

boy, 111
Who taught her passion's desolating joy,
Too powerful over every heart, but most

O'er those who know not how it may be
lost;

O'er those who, burning in the new-born
fire, 115

Like martyrs revel in their funeral pyre,
With such devotion to their ecstasy,

That life knows no such rapture as to die:
And die they do; for earthly life has nought

Match'd with that burst of nature, even in thought; 120

And all our dreams of better life above
But close in one eternal gush of love.

VII

There sat the gentle savage of the wild,
In growth a woman, though in years a

child,
As childhood dates within our colder

clime, 125
Where nought is ripen'd rapidly save crime;
The infant of an infant world, as pure

From nature—lovely, warm, and premature;

Dusky like night, but night with all her
stars, 129

Or cavern sparkling with its native spars;
With eyes that were a language and a spell,

A form like Aphrodite's in her shell,
With all her loves around her on the deep,

Voluptuous as the first approach of sleep;
Yet full of life—for through her tropic

cheek 135
The blush would make its way, and all but

speak:
The sun-born blood suffused her neck, and

threw
O'er her clear nut-brown skin a lucid hue,

Like coral reddening through the darken'd
wave,

Which draws the diver to the crimson cave.
Such was this daughter of the southern

seas, 141
Herself a billow in her energies,
To bear the bark of others' happiness,

Nor feel a sorrow till their joy grew less:
Her wild and warm yet faithful bosom

knew 145
No joy like what it gave; her hopes ne'er

drew

Aught from experience, that chill touchstone, whose Sad proof reduces all things from their
hues:
She fear'd no ill, because she knew it not,
Or what she knew was soon—too soon—
forgot: 150
Her smiles and tears had pass'd, as light winds pass

O'er lakes to ruffle, not destroy, their glass, Whose depths unsearch'd, and fountains
from the hill,

Restore their surface, in itself so still,
Until the earthquake tear the naiad's cave, Root up the spring, and trample on the
wave, 156

And crush the living waters to a mass,
The amphibious desert of the dank morass!

And must their fate be hers? The eternal
change

But grasps humanity with quicker range;
And they who fall but fall as worlds will
fall, 161

To rise, if just, a spirit o'er them all.

VIII

And who is he? the blue-eyed northern child
Of isles more known to man, but scarce less wild;

The fair-hair'd offspring of the Hebrides,
Where roars the Pentland with its whirling
seas; 166

Rock'd in his cradle by the roaring wind,
The tempest-born in body and in mind,
His young eyes opening on the ocean-
foam,

Had from that moment deem'd the deep his home, 170

The giant comrade of his pensive moods,
The sharer of his craggy solitudes,
The only Mentor of his youth, where'er
His bark was borne; the sport of wave and
air;

A careless thing, who placed his choice in
chance, 175

Nursed by the legends of his land's romance;

Eager to hope, but not less firm to bear,
Acquainted with all feelings save despair.
Placed in the Arab's clime, he would have
been

As bold a rover as the sands have seen,
And braved their thirst with as enduring lip 181

As Ishmael, wafted on his desert-ship;
Fix'd upon Chili's shore, a proud cacique;
On Hellas' mountains, a rebellious Greek;
Born in a tent, perhaps a Tamerlane;
Bred to a throne, perhaps unfit to reign.
For the same soul that rends its path to
sway, 187

If rear'd to such, can find no further prey
Beyond itself, and must retrace its way,

Plunging for pleasure into pain: the same Spirit which made a Nero, Rome's worst
shame, 191

A humbler state and discipline of heart,
Had form'd his glorious namesake's
counterpart;

But grant his vices, grant them all his own,
How small their theatre without a throne!

IX

Thou smilest:—these comparisons seem
high 196

To those who scan all things with dazzled
eye;

Link'd with the unknown name of one whose doom

Has nought to do with glory or with Rome,
With Chili, Hellas, or with Araby; 200 Thou smilest?—Smile; 'tis better thus than
sigh;

Yet such he might have been; he was a man,
A soaring spirit, ever in the van,

A patriot hero or despotic chief,
To form a nation's glory or its grief, 205

Born under auspices which make us more
Or less than we delight to ponder o'er.
But these are visions; say, what was he
here?

A blooming boy, a truant mutineer.
The fair-hair'd Torquil, free as ocean's
spray, 210

The husband of the bride of Toobonai.

X

By Neuha's side he sate, and watch'd the waters,—

Neuha, the sun-flower of the island daughters,

Highborn, (a birth at which the herald
smiles,

Without a scutcheon for these secret isles,) 215

Of a long race, the valiant and the free,
The naked knights of savage chivalry,

Whose grassy cairns ascend along the
shore;

And thine—I've seen—Achilles! do no
more.

She, when the thunder-bearing strangers
came, 220

In vast canoes, begirt with bolts of flame, Topp'd with tall trees, which, loftier than the palm,

Seem'd rooted in the deep amidst its calm:
But when the winds awaken'd, shot forth
wings

Broad as the cloud along the horizon
flings, 225

And sway'd the waves like cities of the sea,
Making the very billows look less free;—

She, with her paddling oar and dancing
prow,

Shot through the surf, like reindeer
through the snow,

Swift-gliding o'er the breaker's whitening
edge, 230
Light as a nereid in her ocean sledge,
And gazed and wonder'd at the giant hulk,
Which heaved from wave to wave its trampling bulk.
The anchor dropp'd; it lay along the deep,
Like a huge lion in the sun asleep, 235
While round it swarm'd the proas' flitting
chain,
Like summer bees that hum around his mane.

XI

The white man landed! need the rest be
told?
The New World stretch'd its dusk hand to the Old; 239
Each was to each a marvel, and the tie
Of wonder warm'd to better sympathy.
Kind was the welcome of the sun-born
sires,
And kinder still their daughters' gentler
fires.
Their union grew: the children of the storm
Found beauty link'd with many a dusky
form; 245
While these in turn admired the paler
glow,
Which seem'd so white in climes that knew no snow.
The chase, the race, the liberty to roam,
The soil where every cottage show'd a
home;
The sea-spread net, the lightly launch'd
canoe, 250
Which stemm'd the studded archipelago,
O'er whose blue blossom rose the starry
isles;
The healthy slumber, earn'd by sportive
toils;
The palm, the loftiest dryad of the woods,
Within whose bosom infant Bacchus broods, 255
While eagles scarce build higher than the crest
Which shadows o'er the vineyard in her
breast;
The cava feast, the yam, the cocoa's root,
Which bears at once the cup, and milk,
and fruit;
The bread-tree, which, without the plough-share, yields 260
The unreap'd harvest of unfurrow'd fields,
And bakes its unadulterated loaves
Without a furnace in unpurchased groves,
And flings off famine from its fertile breast,
A priceless market for the gathering
guest;— 265
These, with the luxuries of seas and woods,
The airy joys of social solitudes,
Tamed each rude wanderer to the sympathies
Of those who were more happy, if less wise,

Did more than Europe's discipline had
done, 270
And civilised Civilisation's son!

XII

Of these, and there was many a willing pair,
Neuha and Torquil were not the least fair:
Both children of the isles, though distant
far;
Both born beneath a sea-presiding star;
Both nourish'd amidst nature's native scenes, 276
Loved to the last, whatever intervenes
Between us and our childhood's sympathy,
Which still reverts to what first caught the
eye.
He who first met the Highlands' swelling
blue 280
Will love each peak that shows a kindred
hue,
Hail in each crag a friend's familiar face,
And clasp the mountain in his mind's
embrace.
Long have I roamed through lands which are not mine, 284
Adored the Alp, and loved the Apennine,
Revered Parnassus, and beheld the steep
Jove's Ida and Olympus crown the deep:
But 'twas not all long ages' lore, nor all Their nature held me in their thrilling
thrall;
The infant rapture still survived the boy,
And Loch-na-gar with Ida look'd o'er
Troy, 291
Mix'd Celtic memories with the Phrygian
mount,
And Highland linns with Castalie's clear
fount.
Forgive me, Homer's universal shade!
Forgive me, Phœbus! that my fancy
stray'd; 295
The north and nature taught me to adore
Your scenes sublime, from those beloved before.

XIII

The love which maketh all things fond and
fair,
The youth which makes one rainbow of
the air,
The dangers past, that make even man enjoy 300
The pause in which he ceases to destroy,
The mutual beauty, which the sternest feel Strike to their hearts like lightning to the
steel,
United the half savage and the whole,
The maid and boy in one absorbing soul.
No more the thundering memory of the
fight 306
Wrapp'd his wean'd bosom in its dark de-
light;
No more the irksome restlessness of rest
Disturb'd him like the eagle in her nest,

Whose whetted beak and far-pervading
eye 310

Darts for a victim over all the sky:
His heart was tamed to that voluptuous
state,

At once Elysian and effeminate,
Which leaves no laurels o'er the hero's
urn;—

These wither when for aught save blood
they burn; 315

Yet when their ashes in their nook are laid,
Doth not the myrtle leave as sweet a shade?
Had Cæsar known but Cleopatra's kiss, Rome had been free, the world had not been his.

And what have Cæsar's deeds and Cæsar's
fame 320

Done for the earth? We feel them in our
shame:

The gory sanction of his glory stains
The rust which tyrants cherish on our
chains.

Though Glory, Nature, Reason, Freedom,
bid

Roused millions do what single Brutus
did— 325

Sweep these mere mock-birds of the despot's song

From the tall bough where they have perch'd so long,—

Still are we hawk'd at by such mousing owls,

And take for falcons those ignoble fowls,
When but a word of freedom would dispel These bugbears, as their terrors show too
well. 331

XIV

Rapt in the fond forgetfulness of life,
Neuha, the South Sea girl, was all a wife,
With no distracting world to call her off
From love; with no society to scoff 335
At the new transient flame; no babbling
crowd

Of coxcombry in admiration loud,
Or with adulterous whisper to alloy
Her duty, and her glory, and her joy: 339
With faith and feelings naked as her form,
She stood as stands a rainbow in a storm,
Changing its hues with bright variety,
But still expanding lovelier o'er the sky,
Howe'er its arch may swell, its colours
move, 344

The cloud-compelling harbinger of love.

XV

Here, in this grotto of the wave-worn shore,
They pass'd the tropic's red meridian o'er;
Nor long the hours—they never paused o'er time,

Unbroken by the clock's funereal chime,
Which deals the daily pittance of our span,
And points and mocks with iron laugh at
man. 351

What deem'd they of the future or the
past?

The present, like a tyrant, held them fast:
Their hour-glass was the sea-sand, and the
tide,

Like her smooth billow, saw their moments glide; 355

Their clock the sun, in his unbounded
tow'r;

They reckon'd not, whose day was but an
hour;

The nightingale, their only vesper-bell,
Sung sweetly to the rose the day's farewell;
The broad sun set, but not with lingering
sweep, 360

As in the north he mellows o'er the deep;
But fiery, full, and fierce, as if he left

The world for ever, earth of light bereft, Plunged with red forehead down along the
wave, 364

As dives a hero headlong to his grave.
Then rose they, looking first along the skies,

And then for light into each other's eyes,
Wondering that summer show'd so brief
a sun,

And asking if indeed the day were done.

XVI

And let not this seem strange: the devotee
Lives not in earth, but in his ecstasy;

Around him days and worlds are heedless
driven,

His soul is gone before his dust to heaven.
Is love less potent? No—his path is trod,

Alike uplifted gloriously to God; 375
Or link'd to all we know of heaven below,

The other better self, whose joy or woe
Is more than ours; the all-absorbing flame

Which, kindled by another, grows the
same,

Wrapt in one blaze; the pure, yet funeral
pile, 380

Where gentle hearts, like Bramins, sit and
smile.

How often we forget all time, when lone,
Admiring Nature's universal throne,

Her woods, her wilds, her waters, the intense

Reply of hers to our intelligence! 385 Live not the stars and mountains? Are the

waves
Without a spirit? Are the dropping caves

Without a feeling in their silent tears?
No, no;—they woo and clasp us to their
spheres,

Dissolve this clog and clod of clay before His hour, and merge our soul in the great
shore. 391

Strip off this fond and false identity!—
Who thinks of self when gazing on the sky?

And who, though gazing lower, ever
thought,

In the young moments ere the heart is
taught 395

Time's lesson, of man's baseness or his own?

All nature is his realm, and love his throne.

XVII

Neuha arose, and Torquil: twilight's hour
Came sad and softly to their rocky bower,
Which, kindling by degrees its dewy spars,
Echoed their dim light to the mustering stars.

Slowly the pair, partaking nature's calm,
Sought out their cottage, built beneath the palm;

Now smiling and now silent, as the scene;
Lovely as Love—the spirit!—when serene.
The Ocean scarce spoke louder with his swell,

Than breathes his mimic murmurer in the shell,

As, far divided from his parent deep,
The sea-born infant cries, and will not sleep,

Raising his little plaint in vain, to rave
For the broad bosom of his nursing wave:
The woods droop'd darkly, as inclined to rest,

The tropic bird wheel'd rockward to his nest,
And the blue sky spread round them like a lake

Of peace, where Piety her thirst might slake.

XVIII

But through the palm and plantain, hark,
a voice!

Not such as would have been a lover's choice,

In such an hour, to break the air so still;
No dying night-breeze, harping o'er the hill,
Striking the strings of nature, rock and tree,

Those best and earliest lyres of harmony,
With Echo for their chorus; nor the alarm
Of the loud war-whoop to dispel the charm;

Nor the soliloquy of the hermit owl,
Exhaling all his solitary soul,

The dim though large-eyed winged an-chorite,

Who peals his dreary pæan o'er the night;
But a loud, long, and naval whistle, shrill
As ever started through a sea-bird's bill;
And then a pause, and then a hoarse,

'Hillo!

Torquil, my boy! what cheer? Ho! brother, ho!

'Who hails?' cried Torquil, following with his eye

The sound. 'Here's one,' was all the brief reply.

XIX

But here the herald of the self-same mouth
Came breathing o'er the aromatic south,

Not like a 'bed of violets' on the gale, 436
But such as wafts its cloud o'er grog or ale, Borne from a short frail pipe, which yet had blown

Its gentle odours over either zone,
And, puff'd where'er winds rise or waters roll,

Had wafted smoke from Portsmouth to the Pole,

Opposed its vapour as the lightning flash'd,
And reek'd, 'midst mountain-billows, unabash'd,

To Æolus a constant sacrifice,
Through every change of all the varying skies.

And what was he who bore it?—I may err,
But deem him sailor or philosopher.

Sublime tobacco! which from east to west
Cheers the tar's labour or the Turkman's rest;

Which on the Moslem's ottoman divides
His hours, and rivals opium and his brides;

Magnificent in Stamboul, but less grand,
Though not less loved, in Wapping or the Strand;

Divine in hookas, glorious in a pipe,
When tipp'd with amber, mellow, rich, and ripe;

Like other charmers, wooing the caress,
More dazzling when daring in full dress;

Yet thy true lovers more admire by far
Thy naked beauties—Give me a cigar!

XX

Through the approaching darkness of the wood

A human figure broke the solitude,

Fantastically, it may be, array'd,
A seaman in a savage masquerade;

Such as appears to rise out from the deep
When o'er the line the merry vessels sweep,
And the rough saturnalia of the tar

Flock o'er the deck, in Neptune's borrow'd car;

And, pleased, the god of ocean sees his name

Revive once more, though but in mimic game

Of his true sons, who riot in the breeze
Undreamt of in his native Cyclades.

Still the old god delights, from out the main,

To snatch some glimpses of his ancient reign.

Our sailor's jacket, though in ragged trim,
His constant pipe, which never yet burn'd

dim,

His foremast air, and somewhat rolling gait,
Like his dear vessel, spoke his former state;

But then a sort of kerchief round his head,
Not over-tightly bound, nor nicely spread;

And, 'stead of trowsers (ah! too early
 torn! 480
 For even the mildest woods will have their thorn),
 A curious sort of somewhat scanty mat
 Now served for inexpressibles and hat;
 His naked feet and neck, and sunburnt face, Perchance might suit alike with either
 race. 485
 His arms were all his own, our Europe's
 growth,
 Which two worlds bless for civilising both;
 The musket swung behind his shoulders
 broad,
 And somewhat stoop'd by his marine
 abode,
 But brawny as the boar's; and hung beneath, 490
 His cutlass droop'd, unconscious of a sheath,
 Or lost or worn away; his pistols were Link'd to his belt, a matrimonial pair—(Let not this metaphor appear a scoff, Though one miss'd fire, the other would go off); 495
 These, with a bayonet, not so free from rust
 As when the arm-chest held its brighter
 trust,
 Completed his accoutrements, as Night
 Survey'd him in his garb heterocline.

XXI

'What cheer, Ben Bunting?' cried (when in full view 500
 Our new acquaintance) Torquil. 'Aught of new?
 'Ey, ey!' quoth Ben, 'not new, but news
 enow;
 A strange sail in the offing.'—'Sail! and
 how?
 What! could you make her out? It cannot
 be;
 I've seen no rag of canvas on the sea.' 505
 'Belike,' said Ben, 'you might not from the
 bay,
 But from the bluff-head, where I watch'd
 to-day,
 I saw her in the doldrums; for the wind
 Was light and baffling.'—'When the sun declined
 Where lay she? had she anchor'd?'—'No,
 but still 510
 She bore down on us, till the wind grew still.'
 'Her flag?'—'I had no glass: but fore and aft,
 Egad! she seem'd a wicked-looking craft.'
 'Arm'd?'—'I expect so;—sent on the look-out;
 'Tis time, belike, to put our helm about.'
 'About?—Whate'er may have us now in
 chase, 516
 We'll make no running fight, for that were
 base;

We will die at our quarters, like true men.'
 'Ey, ey! for that 'tis all the same to Ben.'
 'Does Christian know this?'—'Ay; he has piped all hands 520
 To quarters. They are furbishing the stands Of arms; and we have got some guns to
 bear,
 And scaled them. You are wanted.'—
 'That's but fair;
 And if it were not, mine is not the soul
 To leave my comrades helpless on the shoal. 525
 My Neuha! ah! and must my fate pursue
 Not me alone, but one so sweet and true?
 But whatsoe'er betide, ah, Neuha! now Unman me not; the hour will not allow A tear; I'm thine whatever intervenes!
 'Right,' quoth Ben; 'that will do for the marines.' 531

CANTO THE THIRD

I

THE fight was o'er; the flashing through the gloom,
 Which robes the cannon as he wings a
 tomb,
 Had ceased; and sulphury vapours upward driven
 Had left the earth, and but polluted
 heaven:
 The rattling roar which rung in every volley 5
 Had left the echoes to their melancholy;
 No more they shriek'd their horror, boom
 for boom;
 The strife was done, the vanquish'd had their doom;
 The mutineers were crush'd, dispers'd, or
 ta'en,
 Or lived to deem the happiest were the
 slain. 10
 Few, few escaped, and these were hunted
 o'er
 The isle they loved beyond their native
 shore.
 No further home was theirs, it seem'd, on
 earth,
 Once renegades to that which gave them
 birth;
 Track'd like wild beasts, like them they sought the wild, 15
 As to a mother's bosom flies the child;
 But vainly wolves and lions seek their den,
 And still more vainly men escape from
 men.

II

Beneath a rock whose jutting base pro-trudes
 Far over ocean in its fiercest moods, 20
 When scaling his enormous crag the wave
 Is hurl'd down headlong like the foremost
 brave,

And falls back on the foaming crowd
 behind,
 Which fight beneath the banners of the
 wind, 24
 But now at rest, a little remnant drew
 Together, bleeding, thirsty, faint, and few;
 But still their weapons in their hands, and
 still
 With something of the pride of former will,
 As men not all unused to meditate,
 And strive much more than wonder at their fate. 30
 Their present lot was what they had fore-
 seen,
 And dared as what was likely to have been;
 Yet still the lingering hope, which deem'd
 their lot
 Not pardon'd, but unsought for or forgot,
 Or trusted that, if sought, their distant caves 35
 Might still be miss'd amidst the world of
 waves,
 Had wean'd their thoughts in part from what they saw
 And felt, the vengeance of their country's
 law.
 Their sea-green isle, their guilt-won paradise,
 No more could shield their virtue or their
 vice: 40
 Their better feelings, if such were, were thrown Back on themselves,—their sins remain'd
 alone.
 Proscribed even in their second country,
 they
 Were lost; in vain the world before them
 lay;
 All outlets seem'd secured. Their new allies 45
 Had fought and bled in mutual sacrifice;
 But what avail'd the club and spear, and
 arm
 Of Hercules, against the sulphury charm,
 The magic of the thunder, which destroy'd
 The warrior ere his strength could be employ'd? 50
 Dug, like a spreading pestilence, the grave
 No less of human bravery than the brave!
 Their own scant numbers acted all the
 few
 Against the many oft will dare and do;
 But though the choice seems native to die
 free, 55
 Even Greece can boast but one Thermo-pyle,
 Till now, when she has forged her broken
 chain
 Back to a sword, and dies and lives again!

III

Beside the jutting rock the few appear'd,
 Like the last remnant of the red-deer's
 herd; 60

Their eyes were feverish, and their aspect
 worn,
 But still the hunter's blood was on their
 horn,
 A little stream came tumbling from the
 height,
 And straggling into ocean as it might,
 Its bounding crystal frolick'd in the ray,
 And gush'd from cliff to crag with saltless
 spray; 66
 Close on the wild, wide ocean, yet as pure
 And fresh as innocence, and more secure,
 Its silver torrent glitter'd o'er the deep,
 As the shy chamois' eye o'erlooks the steep, 70
 While far below the vast and sullen swell
 Of ocean's alpine azure rose and fell.
 To this young spring they rush'd,—all feelings first Absorb'd in passion's and in nature's thirst,—
 Drank as they do who drink their last, and
 threw 75
 Their arms aside to revel in its dew;
 Cool'd their scorch'd throats, and wash'd
 the gory stains
 From wounds whose only bandage might be chains;
 Then, when their drought was quench'd,
 look'd sadly round,
 As wondering how so many still were
 found 80
 Alive and fetterless:—but silent all,
 Each sought his fellow's eyes, as if to call
 On him for language which his lips denied,
 As though their voices with their cause had
 died.

IV

Stern, and aloof a little from the rest, Stood Christian, with his arms across his chest. 86
 The ruddy, reckless, dauntless hue once
 spread
 Along his cheek was livid now as lead;
 His light-brown locks, so graceful in their
 flow,
 Now rose like startled vipers o'er his
 brow. 90
 Still as a statue, with his lips comprest
 To stifle even the breath within his breast,
 Fast by the rock, all menacing, but mute,
 He stood; and, save a slight beat of his foot,
 Which deepen'd now and then the sandy dint 95
 Beneath his heel, his form seem'd turn'd to flint.
 Some paces further Torquil lean'd his head Against a bank, and spoke not, but he bled,—
 Not mortally:—his worst wound was
 within;
 His brow was pale, his blue eyes sunken in,

And blood-drops, sprinkled o'er his yellow
hair, 101
Show'd that his faintness came not from
despair,
But nature's ebb. Beside him was another,
Rough as a bear, but willing as a brother,— Ben Bunting, who essay'd to wash, and wipe, 105
And bind his wound—then calmly lit his pipe,
A beacon which survived a hundred fights,
A beacon which had cheer'd ten thousand nights.
The fourth and last of this deserted group Walk'd up and down—at times would stand, then stoop, 110
To pick a pebble up—then let it drop—
Then hurry as in haste—then quickly stop—
Then cast his eyes on his companions—
then
Half whistle half a tune, and pause again—
And then his former movements would redouble, 115
With something between carelessness and trouble.
This is a long description, but applies To scarce five minutes pass'd before the
eyes;
But yet what minutes! Moments like to these
Rend men's lives into immortalities. 120

V

At length Jack Skyscape, a mercurial
man,
Who flutter'd over all things like a fan,
More brave than firm, and more disposed to dare
And die at once than wrestle with despair, Exclaim'd, 'G—d damn!'—those syllables
intense,— 125
Nucleus of England's native eloquence,
As the Turk's 'Allah!' or the Roman's
more
Pagan 'Proh Jupiter!' was wont of yore
To give their first impressions such a vent,
By way of echo to embarrassment. 130
Jack was embarrass'd,—never hero more,
And as he knew not what to say, he swore:
Nor swore in vain; the long congenial
sound
Reviv'd Ben Bunting from his pipe pro-
found;
He drew it from his mouth, and look'd full
wise, 135
But merely added to the oath his eyes;
Thus rendering the imperfect phrase complete,
A peroration I need not repeat.

VI

But Christian, of a higher order, stood
Like an extinct volcano in his mood;

Silent, and sad, and savage,—with the
trace 141
Of passion reeking from his clouded face;
Till lifting up again his sombre eye,
It glanced on Torquil, who lean'd faintly
by.
'And is it thus?' he cried, 'unhappy boy!
And thee, too, thee—my madness must destroy!' 146
He said, and strode to where young Tor-quil stood,
Yet dabbled with his lately flowing blood;
Seized his hand wistfully, but did not press,
And shrunk as fearful of his own caress;
Inquired into his state; and when he heard
The wound was slighter than he deem'd or fear'd, 152
A moment's brightness pass'd along his
brow,
As much as such a moment would allow.
'Yes,' he exclaim'd, 'we're taken in the
toil, 155
But not a coward or a common spoil;
Dearly they've bought us—dearly still may
buy,—
And I must fall; but have you strength to
fly?
'Twould be some comfort still, could you
survive;
Our dwindled band is now too few to strive. 160
Oh! for a sole canoe! though but a shell,
To bear you hence to where a hope may
dwell!
For me, my lot is what I sought; to be.
In life or death, the fearless and the free.'

VII

Even as he spoke, around the promontory, Which nodded o'er the billows high and hoary, 166
A dark speck dotted ocean: on it flew
Like to the shadow of a roused sea-mew;
Onward it came—and, lo! a second
follow'd—
Now seen—now hid—where ocean's vale was hollow'd; 170
And near, and nearer, till their dusky crew
Presented well-known aspects to the view,
Till on the surf their skimming paddles play, Buoyant as wings, and fitting through the
spray;—
Now perching on the wave's high curl, and
now 175
Dash'd downward in the thundering foam
below,
Which flings it broad and boiling sheet on
sheet,
And slings its high flakes, shiver'd into sleet:
But floating still through surf and swell,
drew nigh
The barks, like small birds through a lowering sky. 180

Their art seem'd nature—such the skill to sweep
The wave of these born playmates of the deep.

VIII

And who the first that, springing on the strand,
Leap'd like a nereid from her shell to land,
With dark but brilliant skin, and dewy eye
Shining with love, and hope, and constancy?
Neuha—the fond, the faithful, the adored—

Her heart on Torquil's like a torrent pour'd;
And smiled, and wept, and near, and nearer clasp'd,
As if to be assured 'twas him she grasp'd;
Shudder'd to see his yet warm wound, and then,

To find it trivial, smiled and wept again.
She was a warrior's daughter, and could bear
Such sights, and feel, and mourn, but not despair.

Her lover lived,—nor foes nor fears could blight
That full-blown moment in its all delight;
Joy trickled in her tears, joy fill'd the sob
That rock'd her heart till almost heard to throb;

And paradise was breathing in the sigh
Of nature's child in nature's ecstasy.

IX

The sterner spirits who beheld that meeting

Were not unmoved; who are, when hearts are greeting?

Even Christian gazed upon the maid and boy

With tearless eye, but yet a gloomy joy
Mix'd with those bitter thoughts the soul arrays

In hopeless visions of our better days,
When all's gone—to the rainbow's latest ray.

'And but for me!' he said, and turn'd away;

Then gazed upon the pair, as in his den
A lion looks upon his cubs again;
And then relapsed into his sullen guise,
As heedless of his further destinies.

X

But brief their time for good or evil thought;

The billows round the promontory brought

The splash of hostile oars.—Alas! who made

That sound a dread? All around them seem'd array'd

Against them, save the bride of Toobonai:
She, as she caught the first glimpse o'er the bay

Of the arm'd boats, which hurried to complete

The remnant's ruin with their flying feet,
Beckon'd the natives round her to their prow,

Embark'd their guests and launch'd their light canoes,

In one placed Christian and his comrades twain;

But she and Torquil must not part again.
She fix'd him in her own.—Away! away!
They clear the breakers, dart along the bay,

And towards a group of islets, such as bear
The sea-bird's nest and seal's surf-hollow'd lair,

They skim the blue tops of the billows; fast
They flew, and fast their fierce pursuers chased.

They gain upon them—now they lose again,—

Again make way and menace o'er the main;

And now the two canoes in chase divide,
And follow different courses o'er the tide,
To baffle the pursuit.—Away! away!

As Life is on each paddle's flight to-day,
And more than Life or lives to Neuha: Love
Freights the frail bark and urges to the cove;

And now the refuge and the foe are nigh—
Yet, yet a moment: Fly, thou light ark,
fly!

CANTO THE FOURTH

I

WHITE as a white sail on a dusky sea,
When half the horizon's clouded and half free,

Fluttering between the dun wave and the sky,

Is hope's last gleam in man's extremity.
Her anchor parts! but still her snowy sail
Attracts our eye amidst the rudest gale:

Though every wave she climbs divides us more,

The heart still follows from the loneliest shore.

II

Not distant from the isle of Toobonai,
A black rock rears its bosom o'er the spray,

The haunt of birds, a desert to mankind,
Where the rough seal reposes from the wind,

And sleeps unwieldy in his cavern dun,
Or gambols with huge frolic in the sun:
There shrilly to the passing oar is heard
The startled echo of the ocean bird,

Who rears on its bare breast her callow brood,
 The feather'd fishers of the solitude.
 A narrow segment of the yellow sand
 On one side forms the outline of a strand;
 Here the young turtle, crawling from his shell, 21
 Steals to the deep wherein his parents dwell;
 Chipp'd by the beam, a nursling of the day,
 But hatch'd for ocean by the fostering ray;
 The rest was one bleak precipice, as e'er
 Gave mariners a shelter and despair; 26
 A spot to make the saved regret the deck
 Which late went down, and envy the lost wreck.
 Such was the stern asylum Neuha chose
 To shield her lover from his following foes; 30
 But all its secret was not told; she knew
 In this a treasure hidden from the view.

III

Ere the canoes divided, near the spot,
 The men that mann'd what held her Torquil's lot,
 By her command removed, to strengthen more 35
 The skiff which wafted Christian from the shore.
 This he would have opposed; but with a smile
 She pointed calmly to the craggy isle,
 And bade him 'speed and prosper.' She would take 39
 The rest upon herself for Torquil's sake.
 They parted with this added aid; afar
 The proa darted like a shooting star,
 And gain'd on the pursuers, who now steer'd
 Right on the rock which she and Torquil near'd.
 They pull'd; her arm, though delicate, was free 45
 And firm as ever grappled with the sea,
 And yielded scarce to Torquil's manlier strength.
 The prow now almost lay within its length
 Of the crag's steep, inexorable face,
 With nought but soundless waters for its base; 50
 Within a hundred boats' length was the foe,
 And now what refuge but their frail canoe?
 This Torquil ask'd with half-upbraiding eye,
 Which said—'Has Neuha brought me here to die?
 Is this a place of safety, or a grave, 55
 And yon huge rock the tombstone of the wave?'

IV

They rested on their paddles, and uprose
 Neuha, and pointing to the approaching foes,

Cried, 'Torquil, follow me, and fearless follow!'
 Then plunged at once into the ocean's hollow. 60
 There was no time to pause—the foes were near—
 Chains in his eye, and menace in his ear;
 With vigour they pull'd on, and as they came,
 Hail'd him to yield, and by his forfeit name.
 Headlong he leapt—to him the swimmer's skill 65
 Was native, and now all his hope from ill:
 But how, or where? He dived, and rose no more;
 The boat's crew look'd amazed o'er sea and shore.

There was no landing on that precipice,
 Steep, harsh, and slippery as a berg of ice.
 They watch'd awhile to see him float again,
 But not a trace rebubbled from the main:
 The wave roll'd on, no ripple on its face,
 Since their first plunge recall'd a single trace;
 The little whirl which eddied, and slight foam, 75
 That whiten'd o'er what seem'd their latest home,
 White as a sepulchre above the pair
 Who left no marble (mournful as an heir)
 The quiet proa wavering o'er the tide
 Was all that told of Torquil and his bride;
 And but for this alone the whole might seem 81
 The vanish'd phantom of a seaman's dream.
 They paused and search'd in vain, then pull'd away;
 Even superstition now forbade their stay.
 Some said he had not plunged into the wave, 85
 But vanish'd like a corpse-light from a grave;
 Others, that something supernatural
 Glared in his figure, more than mortal tall;
 While all agreed that in his cheek and eye
 There was a dead hue of eternity. 90
 Still as their oars receded from the crag,
 Round every weed a moment would they lag,
 Expectant of some token of their prey;
 But no—he had melted from them like the spray.

V

And where was he the pilgrim of the deep,
 Following the nereid? Had they ceased to weep 96
 For ever? or, received in coral caves,
 Wrung life and pity from the softening waves?
 Did they with ocean's hidden sovereigns dwell,
 And sound with mermen the fantastic shell? 100

Did Neuha with the mermaids comb her hair
Flowing o'er ocean as it stream'd in air?
Or had they perish'd, and in silence slept
Beneath the gulf wherein they boldly leapt?

VI

Young Neuha plunged into the deep, and
he 105
Follow'd: her track beneath her native sea
Was as a native's of the element,
So smoothly, bravely, brilliantly she went,
Leaving a streak of light behind her heel,
Which struck and flash'd like an amphibious steel. 110

Closely, and scarcely less expert to trace
The depths where divers hold the pearl in
chase,

Torquil, the nursling of the northern seas, Pursued her liquid steps with heart and
ease.

Deep—deeper for an instant Neuha led The way—then upward soar'd—and as she spread 116

Her arms, and flung the foam from off her locks,

Laugh'd, and the sound was answer'd by
the rocks.

They had gain'd a central realm of earth
again,

But look'd for tree, and field, and sky, in
vain. 120

Around she pointed to a spacious cave,
Whose only portal was the keyless wave,
(A hollow archway by the sun unseen,
Save through the billows' glassy veil of green,
In some transparent ocean holiday, 125
When all the finny people are at play,)

Wiped with her hair the brine from Tor-quil's eyes,

And clapp'd her hands with joy at his surprise; 128

Led him to where the rock appear'd to jut,
And form a something like a Triton's hut;
For all was darkness for a space, till day
Through clefts above let in a sober'd ray;
As in some old cathedral's glimmering
aisle

The dusty monuments from light recoil,
Thus sadly in their refuge submarine 135
The vault drew half her shadow from the scene.

VII

Forth from her bosom the young savage
drew 137

A pine torch, strongly girded with gnatoo;
A plantain-leaf o'er all, the more to keep
Its latent sparkle from the sapping deep.
This mantle kept it dry; then from a nook
Of the same plantain-leaf a flint she took,
A few shrunk wither'd twigs, and from the
blade 143

Of Torquil's knife struck fire, and thus array'd

The grot with torchlight. Wide it was and
high, 145

And show'd a self-born Gothic canopy;
The arch uprear'd by nature's architect,
The architrave some earthquake might erect;

The buttress from some mountain's bosom hurl'd,

When the Poles crash'd, and water was the
world; 150

Or harden'd from some earth-absorbing
fire,

While yet the globe reek'd from its funeral
pyre;

The fretted pinnacle, the aisle, the nave,
Were there, all scoop'd by Darkness from her cave. 154

There, with a little tinge of phantasy,
Fantastic faces mop'd and mow'd on high,
And then a mitre or a shrine would fix
The eye upon its seeming crucifix.
Thus Nature play'd with the stalactites,
And built herself a chapel of the seas.

VIII

And Neuha took her Torquil by the hand,
And waded along the vault her kindled
brand,

And led him into each recess, and show'd
The secret places of their new abode.

Nor these alone, for all had been prepared Before, to soothe the lover's lot she shared: 166

The mat for rest; for dress the fresh gnatoo,
And sandal oil to fence against the dew;
For food the cocoa-nut, the yam, the bread

Born of the fruit; for board the plantain
spread 170

With its broad leaf, or turtle-shell which
bore

A banquet in the flesh it cover'd o'er;
The gourd with water recent from the rill,
The ripe banana from the mellow hill;
A pine-torch pile to keep undying light,
And she herself, as beautiful as night,
To fling her shadowy spirit o'er the scene,
And make their subterranean world serene.
She had foreseen, since first the stranger's
sail

Drew to their isle, that force or flight might
fail, 180

And form'd a refuge of the rocky den
For Torquil's safety from his countrymen.
Each dawn had wafted there her light
canoe,

Laden with all the golden fruits that grew;
Each eve had seen her gliding through the
hour 185

With all could cheer or deck their sparry
bower;

And now she spread her little store with
smiles,

The happiest daughter of the loving isles.

IX

She, as he gazed with grateful wonder,
 press'd
 Her shelter'd love to her impassion'd
 breast; 190
 And suited to her soft caresses, told
 An olden tale of love,—for love is old,
 Old as eternity, but not outworn
 With each new being born or to be born:
 How a young chief, a thousand moons
 ago, 195
 Diving for turtle in the depths below,
 Had risen, in tracking fast his ocean prey,
 Into the cave which round and o'er them
 lay;
 How in some desperate feud of after-time
 He shelter'd there a daughter of the clime,
 A foe beloved, and offspring of a foe, 201
 Saved by his tribe but for a captive's woe;
 How, when the storm of war was still'd, he led
 His island clan to where the waters spread Their deep-green shadow o'er the rocky
 door, 205
 Then dived—it seem'd as if to rise no more:
 His wondering mates, amazed within their
 bark,
 Or deem'd him mad, or prey to the blue
 shark;
 Row'd round in sorrow the sea-girded
 rock,
 Then paused upon their paddles from the
 shock; 210
 When, fresh and springing from the deep,
 they saw
 A goddess rise—so deem'd they in their
 awe;
 And their companion, glorious by her side,
 Proud and exulting in his mermaid bride:
 And how, when undeceived, the pair they
 bore 215
 With sounding conchs and joyous shouts
 to shore;
 How they had gladly lived and calmly
 died,
 And why not also Torquil and his bride?
 Not mine to tell the rapturous caress 219
 Which follow'd wildly in that wild recess
 This tale; enough that all within that cave Was love, though buried strong as in the
 grave
 Where Abelard, through twenty years of
 death,
 When Eloisa's form was lower'd beneath
 Their nuptial vault, his arms outstretch'd, and press'd 225
 The kindling ashes to his kindled breast.
 The waves without sang round their couch, their roar
 As much unheeded as if life were o'er;
 Within, their hearts made all their harmony,
 Love's broken murmur and more broken
 sigh. 230

And they, the cause and sharers of the shock
 Which left them exiles of the hollow rock, Where were they? O'er the sea for life
 they plied,
 To seek from Heaven the shelter men denied.
 Another course had been their choice—
 but where? 235
 The wave which bore them still their foes
 would bear,
 Who, disappointed of their former chase,
 In search of Christian now renew'd their
 race.
 Eager with anger, their strong arms made
 way,
 Like vultures baffled of their previous
 prey. 240
 They gain'd upon them, all whose safety
 lay
 In some bleak crag or deeply-hidden bay:
 No further chance or choice remain'd;
 and right
 For the first further rock which met their
 sight
 They steer'd, to take their latest view of
 land, 245
 And yield as victims, or die sword in hand;
 Dismiss'd the natives and their shallop,
 who
 Would still have battled for that scanty
 crew;
 But Christian bade them seek their shore
 again,
 Nor add a sacrifice which were in vain;
 For what were simple bow and savage
 spear 251
 Against the arms which must be wielded
 here?

XI

They landed on a wild but narrow scene,
 Where few but Nature's footsteps yet had
 been;
 Prepared their arms, and with that gloomy
 eye, 255
 Stern and sustain'd, of man's extremity,
 When hope is gone, nor glory's self remains To cheer resistance against death or
 chains,—
 They stood, the three, as the three hundred
 stood
 Who dyed Thermopylæ with holy blood.
 But, ah! how different! 'tis the cause makes
 all, 261
 Degrades or hallows courage in its fall.
 O'er them no fame, eternal and intense, Blazed through the clouds of death and beckon'd hence;
 No grateful country, smiling through her
 tears, 265
 Begun the praises of a thousand years;

No nation's eyes would on their tomb be bent,
 No heroes envy them their monument;
 However boldly their warm blood was spilt,
 Their life was shame, their epitaph was guilt.
 And this they knew and felt, at least the one,
 The leader of the band he had undone;
 Who, born perchance for better things, had set
 His life upon a cast which linger'd yet:
 But now the die was to be thrown, and all
 The chances were in favour of his fall:
 And such a fall! But still he faced the shock,
 Obdurate as a portion of the rock
 Whereon he stood, and fix'd his levell'd gun,
 Dark as a sullen cloud before the sun.

XII

The boat drew nigh, well arm'd, and firm
 the crew
 To act whatever duty bade them do;
 Careless of danger, as the onward wind
 Is of the leaves it strews, nor looks behind.
 And yet perhaps they rather wish'd to go Against a nation's than a native foe,
 And felt that this poor victim of self-will,
 Briton no more, had once been Britain's still.
 They hail'd him to surrender—no reply;
 Their arms were poised, and glitter'd in the sky.
 They hail'd again—no answer; yet once more
 They offer'd quarter louder than before.
 The echoes only, from the rock's rebound,
 Took their last farewell of the dying sound.
 Then flash'd the flint, and blazed the volleying flame,
 And the smoke rose between them and their aim.
 While the rock rattled with the bullets' knell,
 Which peal'd in vain, and flatten'd as they fell;
 Then flew the only answer to be given
 By those who had lost all hope in earth or heaven.
 After the first fierce peal, as they pull'd nigher,
 They heard the voice of Christian shout,
 'Now, fire!'
 And ere the word upon the echo died,
 Two fell; the rest assail'd the rock's rough side,
 And, furious at the madness of their foes,
 Disdain'd all further efforts, save to close.
 But steep the crag, and all without a path,
 Each step opposed a bastion to their wrath,

While, placed 'midst clefts the least accessible,
 Which Christian's eye was train'd to mark full well,
 The three maintain'd a strife which must not yield,
 In spots where eagles might have chosen to build.
 Their every shot told; while the assailant fell,
 Dash'd on the shingles like the limpet shell;
 But still enough survived, and mounted still,
 Scattering their numbers here and there, until Surrounded and commanded, though not nigh
 Enough for seizure, near enough to die,
 The desperate trio held aloof their fate
 But by a thread, like sharks who've gorged the bait;
 Yet to the very last they battled well,
 And not a groan inform'd their foes who fell.
 Christian died last—twice wounded; and once more Mercy was offer'd when they saw his gore;
 Too late for life, but not too late to die,
 With, though a hostile hand, to close his eye.
 A limb was broken, and he droop'd along
 The crag, as doth a falcon reft of young.
 The sound revived him, or appear'd to wake
 Some passion which a weakly gesture spake:
 He beckon'd to the foremost, who drew nigh,
 But, as they near'd, he rear'd his weapon high—
 His last ball had been aim'd, but from his breast
 He tore the topmost button from his vest,
 Down the tube dash'd it, levell'd, fired, and smiled
 As his foe fell; then, like a serpent, coil'd
 His wounded, weary form, to where the steep
 Look'd desperate as himself along the deep;
 Cast one glance back, and clench'd his hand, and shook
 His last rage 'gainst the earth which he forsook;
 Then plunged: the rock below received like glass
 His body crush'd into one gory mass,
 With scarce a shred to tell of human form,
 Or fragment for the sea-bird or the worm;
 A fair-hair'd scalp, besmear'd with blood and weeds,
 Yet reek'd, the remnant of himself and deeds;

Some splinters of his weapons (to the last,
 As long as hand could hold, he held them
 fast)
 Yet glitter'd, but at distance—hurl'd away
 To rust beneath the dew and dashing
 spray. 350
 The rest was nothing—save a life mis-
 spent,
 And soul—but who shall answer where it
 went?
 'Tis ours to bear, not judge the dead; and
 they
 Who doom to hell, themselves are on the
 way,
 Unless these bullies of eternal pains 355
 Are pardon'd their bad hearts for their worse brains.

XIII

The deed was over! All were gone or ta'en,
 The fugitive, the captive, or the slain.
 Chain'd on the deck, where once, a gallant
 crew,
 They stood with honour, were the wretched few 360
 Survivors of the skirmish on the isle;
 But the last rock left no surviving spoil.
 Cold lay they where they fell, and welter-
 ing,
 While o'er them flapp'd the sea-birds'
 dewy wing,
 Now wheeling nearer from the neighbouring surge, 365
 And screaming high their harsh and hungry dirge:
 But calm and careless heaved the wave
 below,
 Eternal with unsympathetic flow;
 Far o'er its face the dolphins sported on,
 And sprung the flying fish against the sun,
 Till its dried wing relapsed from its brief
 height, 371
 To gather moisture for another flight.

XIV

'Twas morn; and Neuha, who by dawn of
 day
 Swam smoothly forth to catch the rising
 ray,
 And watch if aught approach'd the amphibious lair 375
 Where lay her lover, saw a sail in air:
 It flapp'd, it fill'd, and to the growing gale Bent its broad arch: her breath began to
 fail
 With fluttering fear, her heart beat thick
 and high,
 While yet a doubt sprung where its course might lie. 380

But no! it came not; fast and far away
 The shadow lessen'd as it clear'd the bay.
 She gazed, and flung the sea-foam from
 her eyes, 383
 To watch as for a rainbow in the skies.
 On the horizon verged the distant deck,
 Diminish'd, dwindled to a very speck—
 Then vanish'd. All was ocean, all was joy!
 Down plunged she through the cave to rouse her boy; 388
 Told all she had seen, and all she hoped,
 and all
 That happy love could augur or recall;
 Sprung forth again, with Torquil following free 391
 His bounding nereid over the broad sea;
 Swam round the rock, to where a shallow cleft
 Hid the canoe that Neuha there had left
 Drifting along the tide, without an oar,
 That eve the strangers chased them from
 the shore; 396
 But when these vanish'd, she pursued her
 prow,
 Regain'd, and urged to where they found it now:
 Nor ever did more love and joy embark,
 Than now were wafted in that slender ark. 400

XV

Again their own shore rises on the view,
 No more polluted with a hostile hue;
 No sullen ship lay bristling o'er the foam,
 A floating dungeon:—all was hope and
 home!
 A thousand proas darted o'er the bay,
 With sounding shells, and heralded their
 way; 406
 The chiefs came down, around the people
 pour'd,
 And welcomed Torquil as a son restored;
 The women throng'd, embracing and embraced
 By Neuha, asking where they had been chased, 410
 And how escaped? The tale was told; and
 then
 One acclamation rent the sky again;
 And from that hour a new tradition gave Their sanctuary the name of 'Neuha's
 Cave.'
 A hundred fires, far flickering from the
 height, 415
 Blazed o'er the general revel of the night,
 The feast in honour of the guest, return'd
 To peace and pleasure, perilously earn'd;
 A night succeeded by such happy days
 As only the yet infant world displays.

THE LAMENT OF TASSO

ADVERTISEMENT

AT Ferrara, in the Library, are preserved the original MSS. of Tasso's Gierusalemme and of Guarini's Pastor Fido, with letters of Tasso, one from Titian to Ariosto, and the inkstand and chair, the tomb and the house, of the latter. But, as misfortune has a greater interest for posterity, and little or none for the cotemporary, the cell where Tasso was confined in the hospital of St. Anna attracts a more fixed attention than the residence or the monument of Ariosto—at least it had this effect on me. There are two inscriptions, one on the outer gate, the second over the cell itself, inviting, unnecessarily, the wonder and the indignation of the spectator. Ferrara is much decayed and depopulated: the castle still exists entire; and I saw the court where Parisina and Hugo were beheaded, according to the annal of Gibbon.

I

LONG years!—It tries the thrilling frame
to bear

And eagle-spirit of a child of Song—
Long years of outrage, calumny, and wrong;
Imputed madness, prison'd solitude, 4
And the mind's canker in its savage mood,
When the impatient thirst of light and air
Parches the heart; and the abhorred grate, Marring the sunbeams with its hideous
shade,

Works through the throbbing eyeball to the brain, 9

With a hot sense of heaviness and pain;
And bare, at once, Captivity display'd Stands scoffing through the never-open'd
gate,

Which nothing through its bars admits,
save day,

And tasteless food, which I have eat alone
Till its unsocial bitterness is gone; 15
And I can banquet like a beast of prey,
Sullen and lonely, couching in the cave
Which is my lair, and—it may be—my grave.
All this hath somewhat worn me, and may
wear,

But must be borne. I stoop not to despair:
For I have battled with mine agony, 21
And made me wings wherewith to overfly
The narrow circus of my dungeon wall,
And freed the Holy Sepulchre from thrall;
And revell'd among men and things
divine, 25

And pour'd my spirit over Palestine,
In honour of the sacred war for Him,
The God who was on earth and is in
heaven,
For he has strengthen'd me in heart and
limb.

That through this sufferance I might be forgiven, 30

I have employ'd my penance to record
How Salem's shrine was won, and how adored.

II

But this is o'er—my pleasant task is
done:—

My long-sustaining friend of many years!

If I do blot thy final page with tears, 35 Know, that my sorrows have wrung from me none.

But thou, my young creation! my soul's
child!

Which ever playing round me came and
smiled,

And woo'd me from myself with thy sweet
sight, 39

Thou too art gone—and so is my delight:
And therefore do I weep and inly bleed

With this last bruise upon a broken reed.
Thou too art ended—what is left me now?

For I have anguish yet to bear—and how?
I know not that—but in the innate force

Of my own spirit shall be found resource.
I have not sunk, for I had no remorse, 47

Nor cause for such: they call'd me mad—
and why?

Oh Leonora! wilt not thou reply?

I was indeed delirious in my heart 50
To lift my love so lofty as thou art;

But still my frenzy was not of the mind:
I knew my fault, and feel my punishment

Not less because I suffer it unbent.
That thou wert beautiful, and I not blind,

Hath been the sin which shuts me from
mankind; 56

But let them go, or torture as they will,
My heart can multiply thine image still;

Successful love may sate itself away;
The wretched are the faithful; 'tis their

fate 60
To have all feeling, save the one, decay,
And every passion into one dilate,

As rapid rivers into ocean pour;
But ours is fathomless, and hath no shore.

III

Above me, hark! the long and maniac cry
Of minds and bodies in captivity. 66

And hark! the lash and the increasing howl,

And the half-inarticulate blasphemy!
There be some here with worse than frenzy foul,

Some who do still goad on the o'er-

labour'd mind, 70
And dim the little light that's left behind

THE LAMENT OF TASSO

With needless torture, as their tyrant will
Is wound up to the lust of doing ill:
With these and with their victims am I
class'd,
'Mid sounds and sights like these long years have pass'd;
'Mid sights and sounds like these my life
may close:
So let it be—for then I shall repose.

IV

I have been patient, let me be so yet;
I had forgotten half I would forget,
But it revives—Oh! would it were my lot
To be forgetful as I am forgot!
Feel I not wroth with those who bade me
dwell
In this vast lazarus-house of many woes?
Where laughter is not mirth, nor thought
the mind,
Nor words a language, nor ev'n men man-
kind;
Where cries reply to curses, shrieks to blows,
And each is tortured in his separate hell—
For we are crowded in our solitudes—
Many, but each divided by the wall,
Which echoes Madness in her babbling moods;
While all can hear, none heed his neighbour's call—
None! save that One, the veriest wretch of
all,
Who was not made to be the mate of these,
Nor bound between Distraction and Disease.
Feel I not wroth with those who placed me
here?
Who have debased me in the minds of men,
Debarring me the usage of my own,
Blighting my life in best of its career,
Branding my thoughts as things to shun
and fear?
Would I not pay them back these pangs
again,
And teach them inward Sorrow's stifled
groan?
The struggle to be calm, and cold distress,
Which undermines our Stoical success?
No! still too proud to be vindictive—I Have pardon'd princes' insults, and would
die.
Yes, Sister of my Sovereign! for thy sake
I weed all bitterness from out my breast,
It hath no business where thou art a guest:
Thy brother hates—but I cannot detest;
Thou pitiest not—but I cannot forsake.

V

Look on a love which knows not to despair,
But all unquench'd is still my better part,
Dwelling deep in my shut and silent heart,
As dwells the gather'd lightning in its
cloud,

Encompass'd with its dark and rolling
shroud,
Till struck,—forth flies the all-ethereal
dart!
And thus at the collision of thy name,
The vivid thought still flashes through my
frame,
And for a moment all things as they were Flit by me; they are gone—I am the same.
And yet my love without ambition grew;
I knew thy state, my station, and I knew
A Princess was no love-mate for a bard;
I told it not, I breathed it not, it was Sufficient to itself, its own reward;
And if my eyes reveal'd it, they, alas!
Were punish'd by the silentness of thine,
And yet I did not venture to repine.
Thou wert to me a crystal-girded shrine,
Worshipp'd at holy distance, and around Hallow'd and meekly kiss'd the saintly
ground;
Not for thou wert a princess, but that Love
Had rob'd thee with a glory, and array'd
Thy lineaments in beauty that dismay'd—
Oh! not dismay'd—but awed, like One
above!
And in that sweet severity there was A something which all softness did sur-
pass;
I know not how—thy genius master'd
mine;
My star stood still before thee: if it were Presumptuous thus to love without design,
That sad fatality hath cost me dear;
But thou art dearest still, and I should be Fit for this cell, which wrongs me—but for
thee.
The very love which lock'd me to my chain Hath lighten'd half its weight; and for the
rest,
Though heavy, lent me vigour to sustain,
And look to thee with undivided breast,
And foil the ingenuity of Pain.

VI

It is no marvel—from my very birth
My soul was drunk with love, which did pervade
And mingle with whate'er I saw on earth:
Of objects all inanimate I made
Idols, and out of wild and lonely flowers,
And rocks, whereby they grew, a paradise,
Where I did lay me down within the shade
Of waving trees, and dreamed uncounted
hours,
Though I was chid for wandering; and the wise
Shook their white aged heads o'er me and
said,
Of such materials wretched men were
made,
And such a truant boy would end in woe,
And that the only lesson was a blow;

And then they smote me, and I did not
weep,
But cursed them in my heart, and to my haunt Return'd and wept alone, and dream'd
again 164
The visions which arise without a sleep,
And with my years my soul began to pant
With feelings of strange tumult and soft
pain;
And the whole heart exhaled into One Want,
But undefined and wandering, till the day
I found the thing I sought—and that was
thee; 170
And then I lost my being, all to be Absorb'd in thine; the world was past
away;
Thou didst annihilate the earth to me!

VII

I loved all Solitude, but little thought
To spend I know not what of life, remote
From all communion with existence,
save 176
The maniac and his tyrant; had I been
Their fellow, many years ere this had seen
My mind like theirs corrupted to its grave.
But who hath seen me writhe, or heard me
rave? 180
Perchance in such a cell we suffer more
Than the wreck'd sailor on his desert shore;
The world is all before him—mine is here,
Scarce twice the space they must accord
my bier. 184
What though he perish, he may lift his eye,
And with a dying glance upbraid the sky;
I will not raise my own in such reproof,
Although 'tis clouded by my dungeon roof.

VIII

Yet do I feel at times my mind decline,
But with a sense of its decay: I see 190
Unwonted lights along my prison shine
And a strange demon, who is vexing me
With pilfering pranks and petty pains below
The feeling of the healthful and the free;
But much to One, who long hath suffer'd
so, 195
Sickness of heart, and narrowness of place,
And all that may be borne, or can debase.
I thought mine enemies had been but Man,
But Spirits may be leagued with them; all
Earth
Abandons, Heaven forgets me: in the dearth 200
Of such defence the Powers of Evil can,
It may be, tempt me further,—and prevail
Against the outworn creature they assail.
Why in this furnace is my spirit proved,
Like steel in tempering fire? because I
loved? 205
Because I loved what not to love, and see,
Was more or less than mortal, and than
me.

IX

I once was quick in feeling—that is o'er;
My scars are callous, or I should have dash'd
My brain against these bars, as the sun
flash'd 210
In mockery through them: If I bear and
bore
The much I have recounted, and the more Which hath no words,—'tis that I would not die
And sanction with self-slaughter the dull
lie
Which snared me here, and with the brand
of shame 215
Stamp Madness deep into my memory,
And woo Compassion to a blighted name,
Sealing the sentence which my foes pro-
claim.
No—it shall be immortal! and I make
A future temple of my present cell, 220
Which nations yet shall visit for my sake.
While thou, Ferrara! when no longer dwell
The ducal chiefs within thee, shalt fall
down,
And crumbling piecemeal view thy hearth-
less halls,
A poet's wreath shall be thine only
crown,— 225
A poet's dungeon thy most far renown,
While strangers wonder o'er thy unpeopled walls!
And thou, Leonora! thou—who wert
ashamed
That such as I could love—who blush'd to
hear
To less than monarchs that thou couldst be dear, 230
Go! tell thy brother, that my heart, untamed
By grief, years, weariness,—and it may be
A taint of that he would impute to me—
From long infection of a den like this,
Where the mind rots congenial with the
abyss,— 235
Adores thee still; and add—that when the towers
And battlements which guard his joyous
hours
Of banquet, dance, and revel, are forgot,
Or left untended in a dull repose,—
This, this, shall be a consecrated spot!
But Thou—when all that Birth and Beauty
throws 241
Of magic round thee is extinct—shalt have One half the laurel which o'ershades my
grave.
No power in death can tear our names
apart,
As none in life could rend thee from my
heart. 245
Yes, Leonora! it shall be our fate
To be entwined for ever—but too late!

THE PROPHECY OF DANTE

"Tis the sunset of life gives me mystical lore,
And coming events cast their shadows before."
CAMPBELL.

DEDICATION

LADY! if for the cold and cloudy clime,
Where I was born, but where I would not die,
Of the great Poet-Sire of Italy
I dare to build the imitative rhyme,
Harsh Runic copy of the South's sublime,
THOU art the cause; and howsoever I
Fall short of his immortal harmony,
Thy gentle heart will pardon me the crime.
Thou, in the pride of Beauty and of Youth,
Spakest; and for thee to speak and be obey'd
Are one; but only in the sunny South
Such sounds are uttered, and such charms display'd,
So sweet a language from so fair a mouth—
Ah! to what effort would it not persuade?

RAVENNA, June 21, 1819.

PREFACE

IN the course of a visit to the city of Ravenna in the summer of 1819, it was suggested to the author that having composed something on the subject of Tasso's confinement, he should do the same on Dante's exile,—the tomb of the poet forming one of the principal objects of interest in that city, both to the native and to the stranger.

'On this hint I spake,' and the result has been the following four cantos, in terza rima, now offered to the reader. If they are understood and approved, it is my purpose to continue the poem, in various other cantos, to its natural conclusion in the present age. The reader is requested to suppose that Dante addresses him in the interval between the conclusion of the Divina Commedia and his death, and shortly before the latter event, foretelling the fortunes of Italy in general in the ensuing centuries. In adopting this plan I have had in my mind the Cassandra of Lycophron, and the Prophecy of Nereus by Horace, as well as the Prophecies of Holy Writ. The measure adopted is the terza rima of Dante, which I am not aware to have seen hitherto tried in our language, except it may be by Mr. Hayley, of whose translation I never saw but one extract, quoted in the notes to Caliph Vathek; so that—if I do not err—this poem may be considered as a metrical experiment. The cantos are short, and about the same length of those of the poet, whose name I have borrowed, and most probably taken in vain.

Amongst the inconveniences of authors in the present day, it is difficult for any who have a name, good or bad, to escape translation. I have had the fortune to see the fourth canto of 'Childe Harold' translated into Italian versi sciolti,—that is, a poem written in the Spenserian stanza into blank verse, without regard to the natural divisions of the stanza or of the sense. If the present poem, being on a national topic, should chance to undergo the same fate, I would request the Italian reader to remember that when I have failed in the imitation of his great 'Padre Alighier,' I have failed in imitating that which all study and few understand, since to this very day it is not yet settled what was the meaning of the allegory in the first canto of the Inferno, unless Count Marchetti's ingenious and probable conjecture may be considered as having decided the question.

He may also pardon my failure the more, as I am not quite sure that he would be pleased with my success, since the Italians, with a pardonable nationality, are particularly jealous of all that is left them as a nation,—their literature; and in the present bitterness of the classic and romantic war, are but ill disposed to permit a foreigner even to approve or imitate them, without finding some fault with his ultramontane presumption. I can easily enter into all this, knowing what would be thought in England of an Italian imitator of Milton, or if a translation of Monti, or Pindemonte, or Arici, should be held up to the rising generation as a model for their future poetical essays. But I perceive that I am deviating into an address to the Italian reader, when my business is with the English one; and be they few or many, I must take my leave of both.

CANTO THE FIRST

ONCE more in man's frail world! which I had left
So long that 'twas forgotten; and I feel
The weight of clay again,—too soon bereft
Of the immortal vision which could heal

My earthly sorrows, and to God's own
skies
Lift me from that deep gulf without repeal,
Where late my ears rung with the damned
cries
Of souls in hopeless bale; and from that
place

Of lesser torment, whence men may arise
 Pure from the fire to join the angelic race;
 Midst whom my own bright Beatrice bless'd 11
 My spirit with her light; and to the base
 Of the eternal Triad! first, last, best,
 Mysterious, three, sole, infinite, great
 God!
 Soul universal! led the mortal guest, 15
 Unblasted by the glory, though he trod
 From star to star to reach the almighty
 throne.
 Oh Beatrice! whose sweet limbs the sod
 So long hath press'd, and the cold marble stone,
 Thou sole pure seraph of my earliest
 love, 20
 Love so ineffable, and so alone,
 That nought on earth could more my bosom move,
 And meeting thee in heaven was but to
 meet
 That without which my soul, like the arkless dove,
 Had wander'd still in search of, nor her
 feet 25
 Relieved her wing till found: without thy light
 My paradise had still been incomplete.
 Since my tenth sun gave summer to my
 sight
 Thou wert my life, the essence of my
 thought,
 Loved ere I knew the name of love, and
 bright 30
 Still in these dim old eyes, now over-
 wrought
 With the world's war, and years, and banishment,
 And tears for thee, by other woes un-
 taught;
 For mine is not a nature to be bent
 By tyrannous faction, and the brawling
 crowd, 35
 And though the long, long conflict hath been spent
 In vain,—and never more, save when the cloud
 Which overhangs the Apennine my mind's eye
 Pierces to fancy Florence, once so proud
 Of me, can I return, though but to die,
 Unto my native soil,—they have not yet Quench'd the old exile's spirit, stern and
 high.
 But the sun, though not overcast, must set,
 And the night cometh; I am old in days,
 And deeds, and contemplation, and have met 45
 Destruction face to face in all his ways.
 The world hath left me, what it found me, pure,
 And if I have not gather'd yet its praise,
 I sought it not by any baser lure;

Man wrongs, and Time avenges, and
 my name 50
 May form a monument not all obscure,
 Though such was not my ambition's end or aim,
 To add to the vain-glorious list of those
 Who dabble in the pettiness of fame,
 And make men's fickle breath the wind that blows 55
 Their sail, and deem it glory to be class'd
 With conquerors, and virtue's other
 foes,
 In bloody chronicles of ages past.
 I would have had my Florence great and
 free;
 Oh Florence! Florence! unto me thou wast 60
 Like that Jerusalem which the Almighty
 He Wept over, 'but thou wouldst not'; as the bird Gathers its young, I would have gather'd thee
 Beneath a parent pinion, hadst thou heard My voice; but as the adder, deaf and fierce, 65
 Against the breast that cherish'd thee was stirr'd
 Thy venom, and my state thou didst
 amerce,
 And doom this body forfeit to the fire.
 Alas! how bitter is his country's curse
 To him who for that country would expire,
 But did not merit to expire by her, 71
 And loves her, loves her even in her ire!
 The day may come when she will cease to
 err,
 The day may come she would be proud to have
 The dust she dooms to scatter, and transfer 75
 Of him, whom she denied a home, the
 grave.
 But this shall not be granted; let my
 dust Lie where it falls, nor shall the soil which
 gave Me breath, but in her sudden fury thrust
 Me forth to breathe elsewhere, so re-
 assume 80
 My indignant bones, because her angry
 gust
 Forsooth is over, and repeal'd her doom;
 No,—she denied me what was mine—
 my roof,
 And shall not have what is not hers—
 my tomb.
 Too long her armed wrath hath kept aloof
 The breast which would have bled for her, the heart 86
 That beat, the mind that was temptation
 proof,
 The man who fought, toil'd, travell'd, and each part

Of a true citizen fulfill'd, and saw
 For his reward the Guelf's ascendant
 art 90
 Pass his destruction even into a law.
 These things are not made for forgetfulness,
 Florence shall be forgotten first; too
 raw
 The wound, too deep the wrong, and the distress
 Of such endurance too prolong'd to
 make 95
 My pardon greater, her injustice less,
 Though late repented; yet—yet for her
 sake
 I feel some fonder yearnings, and for
 thine,
 My own Beatrice, I would hardly take Vengeance upon the land which once was
 mine, 100
 And still is hallow'd by thy dust's return,
 Which would protect the murderess like
 a shrine,
 And save ten thousand foes by thy sole
 urn.
 Though, like old Marius from Minturnæ's marsh
 And Carthage ruins, my lone breast may burn 105
 At times with evil feelings hot and harsh,
 And sometimes the last pangs of a vile
 foe Writhe in a dream before me, and o'erarch
 My brow with hopes of triumph,—let them go!
 Such are the last infirmities of those Who long have suffer'd more than mortal woe, 111
 And yet being mortal still have no repose
 But on the pillow of Revenge—Revenge, Who sleeps to dream of blood, and waking glows
 With the oft-baffled slakeless thirst of
 change, 115
 When we shall mount again, and they that trod
 Be trampled on, while Death and Atë
 range
 O'er humbled heads and sever'd necks—
 Great God!
 Take these thoughts from me—to thy hands I yield
 My many wrongs, and thine Almighty
 rod 120
 Will fall on those who smote me,—be my
 shield!
 As thou hast been in peril, and in pain,
 In turbulent cities, and the tented field—
 In toil, and many troubles borne in vain
 For Florence,—I appeal from her to
 Thee! 125
 Thee whom I late saw in thy loftiest
 reign,
 Even in that glorious vision, which to see
 And live was never granted until now,
 And yet thou hast permitted this to me.
 Alas! with what a weight upon my brow
 The sense of earth and earthly things come back, 131
 Corrosive passions, feelings dull and
 low,
 The heart's quick throb upon the mental rack,
 Long day, and dreary night; the retrospect
 Of half a century bloody and black,
 And the frail few years I may yet expect Hoary and hopeless, but less hard to
 bear,
 For I have been too long and deeply wreck'd
 On the lone rock of desolate Despair,
 To lift my eyes more to the passing sail
 Which shuns that reef so horrible and
 bare; 141
 Nor raise my voice—for who would heed
 my wail?
 I am not of this people, nor this age,
 And yet my harpings will unfold a tale
 Which shall preserve these times when not a page 145
 Of their perturbed annals could attract
 An eye to gaze upon their civil rage,
 Did not my verse embalm full many an act Worthless as they who wrought it: 'tis
 the doom
 Of spirits of my order to be rack'd
 In life, to wear their hearts out, and consume 151
 Their days in endless strife, and die
 alone;
 Then future thousands crowd around their tomb,
 And pilgrims come from climes where they have known
 The name of him—who now is but a
 name,
 And wasting homage o'er the sullen
 stone, 156
 Spread his—by him unheard, unheeded—
 fame;
 And mine at least hath cost me dear: to
 die
 Is nothing; but to wither thus—to tame
 My mind down from its own infinity—
 To live in narrow ways with little men,
 A common sight to every common eye,
 A wanderer, while even wolves can find a
 den, 163
 Ripp'd from all kindred, from all home,
 all things
 That make communion sweet, and soften pain—
 To feel me in the solitude of kings 166
 Without the power that makes them bear a crown—
 To envy every dove his nest and wings

Which waft him where the Apennine looks
 down
 On Arno, till he perches, it may be,
 Within my all inexorable town, 171
 Where yet my boys are, and that fatal she,
 Their mother, the cold partner who hath brought Destruction for a dowry—this to see
 And feel, and know without repair, hath
 taught 175
 A bitter lesson; but it leaves me free:
 I have not vilely found, nor basely
 sought,
 They made an Exile—not a slave of me.

CANTO THE SECOND

THE Spirit of the fervent days of Old,
 When words were things that came to pass, and thought Flash'd o'er the future, bidding men be-
 hold
 Their children's children's doom already brought Forth from the abyss of time which is to
 be 5
 The chaos of events, where lie half-
 wrought
 Shapes that must undergo mortality;
 What the great Seers of Israel wore
 within,
 That spirit was on them, and is on me,
 And if, Cassandra-like, amidst the din 10
 Of conflict none will hear, or hearing
 heed
 This voice from out the Wilderness, the sin
 Be theirs, and my own feelings be my meed,
 The only guerdon I have ever known.
 Hast thou not bled? and hast thou still to bleed, 15
 Italia? Ah! to me such things, foreshown
 With dim sepulchral light, bid me forget
 In thine irreparable wrongs my own;
 We can have but one country, and even yet Thou'rt mine—my bones shall be within thy breast, 20
 My soul within thy language, which once set
 With our old Roman sway in the wide
 West;
 But I will make another tongue arise
 As lofty and more sweet, in which ex-
 press'd
 The hero's ardour, or the lover's sighs, Shall find alike such sounds for every
 theme 26
 That every word, as brilliant as thy
 skies,
 Shall realise a poet's proudest dream,
 And make thee Europe's nightingale of
 song;
 So that all present speech to thine shall
 seem 30

The note of meaner birds, and every
 tongue
 Confess its barbarism when compared with thine.
 This shalt thou owe to him thou didst
 so wrong,
 Thy Tuscan bard, the banish'd Ghibelline.
 Woe! woe! the veil of coming centuries
 Is rent,—a thousand years which yet
 supine 36
 Lie like the ocean waves ere winds arise,
 Heaving in dark and sullen undulation,
 Float from eternity into these eyes;
 The storms yet sleep, the clouds still keep their station, 40
 The unborn earthquake yet is in the womb,
 The bloody chaos yet expects creation,
 But all things are disposing for thy doom;
 The elements await but for the word,
 'Let there be darkness!' and thou grow'st a tomb! 45
 Yes! thou, so beautiful, shalt feel the sword,
 Thou, Italy! so fair that Paradise, Revived in thee, blooms forth to man
 restored:
 Ah! must the sons of Adam lose it twice?
 Thou, Italy! whose ever golden fields, Plough'd by the sunbeams solely, would suffice 51
 For the world's granary; thou, whose sky heaven gilds
 With brighter stars, and robes with deeper blue;
 Thou, in whose pleasant places Summer
 builds
 Her palace, in whose cradle Empire grew,
 And form'd the Eternal City's ornaments 56
 From spoils of kings whom freemen
 overthrew;
 Birthplace of heroes, sanctuary of saints,
 Where earthly first, then heavenly glory
 made
 Her home; thou, all which fondest fancy paints, 60
 And finds her prior vision but portray'd
 In feeble colours, when the eye—from the Alp
 Of horrid snow, and rock, and shaggy
 shade
 Of desert-loving pine, whose emerald scalp
 Nods to the storm—dilates and dotes
 o'er thee, 65
 And wistfully implores, as 'twere for help
 To see thy sunny fields, my Italy,
 Nearer and nearer yet, and dearer still
 The more approach'd, and dearest were they free,
 Thou—thou must wither to each tyrant's
 will: 70
 The Goth hath been,—the German.
 Frank, and Hun

Are yet to come,—and on the imperial hill
Ruin, already proud of the deeds done
By the old barbarians, there awaits the
new,
Throned on the Palatine, while lost and
won 75
Rome at her feet lies bleeding; and the hue
Of human sacrifice and Roman slaughter
Troubles the clotted air, of late so blue,
And deepens into red the saffron water
Of Tiber, thick with dead; the helpless priest, 80
And still more helpless nor less holy
daughter,
Vow'd to their God, have shrieking fled,
and ceased
Their ministry: the nations take their
prey,
Iberian, Almain, Lombard, and the beast
And bird, wolf, vulture, more humane
than they 85
Are; these but gorge the flesh and lap
the gore
Of the departed, and then go their way;
But those, the human savages, explore
All paths of torture, and insatiate yet,
With Ugolino hunger prowl for more.
Nine moons shall rise o'er scenes like this and set; 91
The chiefless army of the dead, which
late
Beneath the traitor Prince's banner met,
Hath left its leader's ashes at the gate;
Had but the royal Rebel lived, per-
chance 95
Thou hadst been spared, but his involved thy fate.
Oh! Rome, the spoiler or the spoil of France,
From Brennus to the Bourbon, never,
never Shall foreign standard to thy walls advance,
But Tiber shall become a mournful river.
Oh! when the strangers pass the Alps and Po, 101
Crush them, ye rocks! floods whelm them, and for ever!
Why sleep the idle avalanches so,
To topple on the lonely pilgrim's head?
Why doth Eridanus but overflow 105
The peasant's harvest from his turbid bed?
Were not each barbarous horde a nobler
prey?
Over Cambyzes' host the desert spread
Her sandy ocean, and the sea-waves' sway Roll'd over Pharaoh and his thousands,—why, 110
Mountains and waters, do ye not as
they?
And you, ye men! Romans who dare not
die,

Sons of the conquerors who overthrew
Those who o'erthrew proud Xerxes, where yet lie
The dead whose tomb Oblivion never
knew, 115
Are the Alps weaker than Thermopylæ?
Their passes more alluring to the view
Of an invader? is it they, or ye,
That to each host the mountain-gate
unbar,
And leave the march in peace, the passage free? 120
Why, Nature's self detains the victor's car,
And makes your land impregnable, if
earth
Could be so; but alone she will not war,
Yet aids the warrior worthy of his birth
In a soil where the mothers bring forth
men: 125
Not so with those whose souls are little
worth;
For them no fortress can avail,—the den
Of the poor reptile which preserves its sting
Is more secure than walls of adamant,
when
The hearts of those within are quivering.
Are ye not brave? Yes, yet the Ausonian soil 131
Hath hearts, and hands, and arms, and hosts to bring
Against Oppression; but how vain the toil, While still Division sows the seeds of
woe
And weakness, till the stranger reaps the spoil! 135
Oh! my own beauteous land! so long laid
low,
So long the grave of thy own children's hopes,
When there is but required a single blow
To break the chain, yet—yet the Avenger stops,
And Doubt and Discord step 'twixt thine and thee, 140
And join their strength to that which with thee copes;
What is there wanting then to set thee free,
And show thy beauty in its fullest light?
To make the Alps impassable; and we,
Her sons, may do this with one deed—
Unite. 145

CANTO THE THIRD

FROM out the mass of never-dying ill,
The Plague, the Prince, the Stranger, and the Sword,
Vials of wrath but emptied to refill
And flow again, I cannot all record That crowds on my prophetic eye: the
earth 5
And ocean written o'er would not afford
Space for the annal, yet it shall go forth;

Yes, all, though not by human pen, is graven,
 There where the farthest suns and stars
 have birth,
 Spread like a banner at the gate of heaven,
 The bloody scroll of our millennial wrongs 11
 Waves, and the echo of our groans is driven
 Athwart the sound of archangelic songs,
 And Italy, the martyr'd nation's gore,
 Will not in vain arise to where belongs Omnipotence and mercy evermore: 16
 Like to a harp-string stricken by the wind,
 The sound of her lament shall, rising
 o'er
 The seraph voices, touch the Almighty
 Mind.
 Meantime I, humblest of thy sons, and 20
 of Earth's dust by immortality refined
 To sense and suffering, though the vain
 may scoff,
 And tyrants threat, and meeker victims
 bow
 Before the storm because its breath is rough,
 To thee, my country! whom before, as
 now, 25
 I loved and love, devote the mournful
 lyre
 And melancholy gift high powers allow
 To read the future; and if now my fire
 Is not as once it shone o'er thee, forgive!
 I but foretell thy fortunes—then expire; 30
 Think not that I would look on them and
 live.
 A spirit forces me to see and speak,
 And for my guerdon grants not to survive;
 My heart shall be pour'd over thee and
 break: 34
 Yet for a moment, ere I must resume
 Thy sable web of sorrow, let me take Over the gleams that flash athwart thy
 gloom
 A softer glimpse; some stars shine
 through thy night,
 And many meteors, and above thy tomb Leans sculptured Beauty, which Death cannot blight: 40
 And from thine ashes boundless spirits
 rise
 To give thee honour, and the earth de-
 light;
 Thy soil shall still be pregnant with the wise,
 The gay, the learn'd, the generous, and the brave,
 Native to thee as summer to thy skies,
 Conquerors on foreign shores, and the far
 wave, 46
 Discoverers of new worlds, which take their name;

For thee alone they have no arm to save,
 And all thy recompense is in their fame,
 A noble one to them, but not to thee—Shall they be glorious, and thou still the
 same? 51
 Oh! more than these illustrious far shall be The being—and even yet he may be
 born—
 The mortal saviour who shall set thee
 free,
 And see thy diadem, so changed and
 worn 55
 By fresh barbarians, on thy brow replaced;
 And the sweet sun replenishing thy
 morn,
 Thy moral morn, too long with clouds de-
 faced,
 And noxious vapours from Avernus risen,
 Such as all they must breathe who are debased 60
 By servitude, and have the mind in prison.
 Yet through this centuried eclipse of
 woe
 Some voices shall be heard, and earth shall listen;
 Poets shall follow in the path I show,
 And make it broader: the same brilliant
 sky 65
 Which cheers the birds to song shall bid them glow,
 And raise their notes as natural and high;
 Tuneful shall be their numbers; they shall sing
 Many of love, and some of liberty,
 But few shall soar upon that eagle's wing,
 And look in the sun's face with eagle's
 gaze, 71
 All free and fearless as the feather'd
 king,
 But fly more near the earth; how many a phrase
 Sublime shall lavish'd be on some small
 prince
 In all the prodigality of praise! 75
 And language, eloquently false, evince
 The harlotry of genius, which, like beauty,
 Too oft forgets its own self-reverence,
 And looks on prostitution as a duty.
 He who once enters in a tyrant's hall
 As guest is slave, his thoughts become a booty, 81
 And the first day which sees the chain enthal
 A captive, sees his half of manhood
 gone—
 The soul's emasculation saddens all His spirit; thus the Bard too near the
 throne 85
 Quails from his inspiration, bound to
 please,—
 How servile is the task to please alone!

To smooth the verse to suit his sovereign's
 ease
 And royal leisure, nor too much prolong Aught save his eulogy, and find, and seize,
 Or force, or forge fit argument of song!
 Thus trammell'd, thus condemn'd to Flattery's trebles, 92
 He toils through all, still trembling to be
 wrong:
 For fear some noble thoughts, like heavenly rebels,
 Should rise up in high treason to his
 brain, 95
 He sings, as the Athenian spoke, with pebbles
 In's mouth, lest truth should stammer through his strain.
 But out of the long file of sonneteers
 There shall be some who will not sing in
 vain,
 And he, their prince, shall rank among my peers, 100
 And love shall be his torment; but his
 grief
 Shall make an immortality of tears,
 And Italy shall hail him as the Chief
 Of Poet-lovers, and his higher song
 Of Freedom wreath him with as green
 a leaf. 105
 But in a farther age shall rise along
 The banks of Po two greater still than he;
 The world which smiled on him shall do them wrong
 Till they are ashes, and repose with me.
 The first will make an epoch with his
 lyre, 110
 And fill the earth with feats of chivalry:
 His fancy like a rainbow, and his fire,
 Like that of Heaven, immortal, and his
 thought
 Borne onward with a wing that cannot tire;
 Pleasure shall, like a butterfly new caught, Flutter her lovely pinions o'er his
 theme, 116
 And Art itself seem into Nature wrought
 By the transparency of his bright dream.—
 The second, of a tenderer, sadder mood,
 Shall pour his soul out o'er Jerusalem;
 He, too, shall sing of arms, and Christian
 blood 121
 Shed where Christ bled for man; and his high harp
 Shall, by the willow over Jordan's flood,
 Revive a song of Sion, and the sharp
 Conflict, and final triumph of the brave
 And pious, and the strife of hell to warp
 Their hearts from their great purpose, until wave 127
 The red-cross banners where the first red Cross Was crimson'd from his veins who died
 to save,
 Shall be his sacred argument; the loss

Of years, of favour, freedom, even of
 fame 131
 Contested for a time, while the smooth gloss
 Of courts would slide o'er his forgotten
 name
 And call captivity a kindness, meant
 To shield him from insanity or shame,
 Such shall be his meet guerdon! who was sent To be Christ's Laureate—they reward him well! 137
 Florence dooms me but death or banish-
 ment,
 Ferrara him a pittance and a cell,
 Harder to bear and less deserved, for I Had stung the factions which I strove to quell; 141
 But this meek man, who with a lover's eye
 Will look on earth and heaven, and who will deign
 To embalm with his celestial flattery,
 As poor a thing as e'er was spawn'd to
 reign, 145
 What will he do to merit such a doom?
 Perhaps he'll love,—and is not love in
 vain
 Torture enough without a living tomb?
 Yet it will be so—he and his compeer,
 The Bard of Chivalry, will both consume 150
 In penury and pain too many a year,
 And, dying in despondency, bequeath
 To the kind world, which scarce will yield a tear,
 A heritage enriching all who breathe
 With the wealth of a genuine poet's
 soul, 155
 And to their country a redoubled
 wreath,
 Unmatch'd by time; not Hellas can unroll Through her olympiads two such names, though one
 Of hers be mighty;—and is this the
 whole
 Of such men's destiny beneath the sun?
 Must all the finer thoughts, the thrilling
 sense, 161
 The electric blood with which their arteries run,
 Their body's self turned soul with the intense
 Feeling of that which is, and fancy of That which should be, to such a recom-
 pense 165
 Conduct? shall their bright plumage on the rough Storm be still scatter'd? Yes, and it must be;
 For, form'd of far too penetrable stuff,
 These birds of Paradise but long to flee Back to their native mansion, soon they
 find 170
 Earth's mist with their pure pinions not agree,

And die or are degraded; for the mind
 Succumbs to long infection, and despair,
 And vulture passions flying close behind,
 Await the moment to assail and tear; 175
 And when at length the winged wanderers stoop,
 Then is the prey-birds' triumph, then they share
 The spoil, o'erpower'd at length by one fell swoop.
 Yet some have been untouch'd who learn'd to bear,
 Some whom no power could ever force to droop, 180
 Who could resist themselves even, hardest care!
 And task most hopeless; but some such have been,
 And if my name amongst the number were,
 That destiny austere, and yet serene,
 Were prouder than more dazzling fame unblest'd; 185
 The Alp's snow summit nearer heaven is seen
 Than the volcano's fierce eruptive crest,
 Whose splendour from the black abyss is flung,
 While the scorch'd mountain, from whose burning breast
 A temporary torturing flame is wrung,
 Shines for a night of terror, then repels
 Its fire back to the hell from whence it sprung, 192
 The hell which in its entrails ever dwells.

CANTO THE FOURTH

MANY are poets who have never penn'd'
 Their inspiration, and perchance the best:
 They felt, and loved, and died, but would not lend
 Their thoughts to meaner beings; they compress'd
 The god within them, and rejoin'd the stars 5
 Unlaurell'd upon earth, but far more blest'd
 Than those who are degraded by the jars
 Of passion, and their frailties link'd to fame,
 Conquerors of high renown, but full of scars.
 Many are poets but without the name,
 For what is poesy but to create 11
 From overfeeling good or ill; and aim
 At an external life beyond our fate,
 And be the new Prometheus of new men,
 Bestowing fire from heaven, and then, 15
 too late,

Finding the pleasure given repaid with pain,
 And vultures to the heart of the bestower,
 Who, having lavish'd his high gift in vain,
 Lies chain'd to his lone rock by the sea-shore?
 So be it: we can bear.—But thus all they Whose intellect is an o'ermastering power 21
 Which still recoils from its encumbering clay
 Or lightens it to spirit, whatsoever
 The form which their creations may essay,
 Are bards; the kindled marble's bust may wear 25
 More poesy upon its speaking brow
 Than aught less than the Homeric page may bear;
 One noble stroke with a whole life may glow,
 Or deify the canvas till it shine
 With beauty so surpassing all below,
 That they who kneel to idols so divine
 Break no commandment, for high heaven is there Transfused, transfigured: and the line
 Of poesy, which peoples but the air
 With thought and beings of our thought reflected, 35
 Can do no more: then let the artist share
 The palm, he shares the peril, and dejected
 Faints o'er the labour unapproved—
 Alas!
 Despair and Genius are too oft connected. 39
 Within the ages which before me pass
 Art shall resume and equal even the sway
 Which with Apelles and old Phidias
 She held in Hellas' unforgotten day.
 Ye shall be taught by Ruin to revive
 The Grecian forms at least from their decay, 45
 And Roman souls at last again shall live
 In Roman works wrought by Italian hands,
 And temples, loftier than the old temples, give
 New wonders to the world; and while still stands
 The austere Pantheon, into heaven shall soar 50
 A dome, its image, while the base expands
 Into a fane surpassing all before,
 Such as all flesh shall flock to kneel in:
 ne'er
 Such sight hath been unfolded by a door
 As this, to which all nations shall repair
 And lay their sins at this huge gate of heaven. 56
 And the bold Architect unto whose care

The daring charge to raise it shall be given, Whom all Arts shall acknowledge as their lord, 59

Whether into the marble chaos driven
His chisel bid the Hebrew, at whose word Israel left Egypt, stop the waves in
stone,

Or hues of Hell be by his pencil pour'd
Over the damn'd before the Judgment-
throne,

Such as I saw them, such as all shall see,
Or fanes be built of grandeur yet un-
known, 66

The stream of his great thoughts shall spring from me,

The Ghibelline, who traversed the three realms

Which form the empire of eternity.
Amidst the clash of swords, and clang of helms, 70

The age which I anticipate, no less Shall be the Age of Beauty, and while whelms

Calamity the nations with distress,
The genius of my country shall arise,
A Cedar towering o'er the Wilderness,

Lovely in all its branches to all eyes, 76
Fragrant as fair, and recognised afar, Wafting its native incense through the
skies.

Sovereigns shall pause amidst their sport
of war,

Wean'd for an hour from blood, to turn and gaze 80

On canvas or on stone; and they who
mar

All beauty upon earth, compell'd to praise, Shall feel the power of that which they
destroy;

And Art's mistaken gratitude shall raise
To tyrants who but take her for a toy, Emblems and monuments, and prostitute 86

Her charms to pontiffs proud, who but employ

The man of genius as the meanest brute
To bear a burthen, and to serve a need,
To sell his labours, and his soul to boot.

Who toils for nations may be poor indeed,
But free; who sweats for monarchs is no
more 92

Than the gilt chamberlain, who, clothed and fee'd,

Stands sleek and slavish, bowing at his
door.

Oh, Power that rulest and inspirest!
how 95

Is it that they on earth, whose earthly
power

Is likest thine in heaven in outward show,
Least like to thee in attributes divine,
Tread on the universal necks that bow,
And then assure us that their rights are
thine? 100

And how is it that they, the sons of fame, Whose inspiration seems to them to
shine

From high, they whom the nations ofttest
name,

Must pass their days in penury or pain,
Or step to grandeur through the paths
of shame, 105

And wear a deeper brand and gaudier
chain?

Or if their destiny be born aloof
From lowliness, or tempted thence in
vain,

In their own souls sustain a harder proof,
The inner war of passions deep and fierce? 110

Florence! when thy harsh sentence
razed my roof,

I loved thee; but the vengeance of my
verse,

The hate of injuries which every year Makes greater, and accumulates my
curse,

Shall live, outliving all thou holdest dear, Thy pride, thy wealth, thy freedom, and even that, 116

The most infernal of all evils here,
The sway of petty tyrants in a state;

For such sway is not limited to kings,
And demagogues yield to them but in
date, 120

As swept off sooner; in all deadly things, Which make men hate themselves, and one another,

In discord, cowardice, cruelty, all that
springs,

From Death the Sin-born's incest with his
mother,

In rank oppression in its rudest shape,
The faction Chief is but the Sultan's
brother, 126

And the worst despot's far less human ape:
Florence! when this lone spirit, which so long

Yearn'd, as the captive toiling at escape,
To fly back to thee in despite of wrong,
An exile, saddest of all prisoners, 131

Who has the whole world for a dungeon
strong,

Seas, mountains, and the horizon's verge for bars,

Which shut him from the sole small spot
of earth,

Where—whatsoever his fate—he still were hers, 135

His country's, and might die where he had
birth—

Florence! when this lone spirit shall return

To kindred spirits, thou wilt feel my
worth,

And seek to honour with an empty urn
The ashes thou shalt ne'er obtain—

Alas! 140

'What have I done to thee, my people?'
 Stern
 Are all thy dealings, but in this they pass
 The limits of man's common malice, for All that a citizen could be I was;
 Raised by thy will, all thine in peace or war,
 And for this thou hast warr'd with me—
 'Tis done: 146
 I may not overleap the eternal bar

Built up between us, and will die alone,
 Beholding with the dark eye of a seer
 The evil days to gifted souls foreshown,
 Foretelling them to those who will not hear.
 As in the old time, till the hour be come When Truth shall strike their eyes through many a tear, 153
 And make them own the Prophet in his
 tomb.

THE MORGANTE MAGGIORE OF PULCI

ADVERTISEMENT

THE Morgante Maggiore, of the first canto of which this translation is offered, divides with the Orlando Innamorato the honour of having formed and suggested the style and story of Ariosto. The great defects of Boiardo were his treating too seriously the narratives of chivalry, and his harsh style. Ariosto, in his continuation, by a judicious mixture of the gaiety of Pulci, has avoided the one; and Berni, in his reformation of Boiardo's poem, has corrected the other. Pulci may be considered as the precursor and model of Berni altogether, as he has partly been to Ariosto, however inferior to both his copyists. He is no less the founder of a new style of poetry very lately sprung up in England. I allude to that of the ingenious Whistlercraft. The serious poems on Roncesvalles in the same language, and more particularly the excellent one of Mr. Merivale, are to be traced to the same source. It has never yet been decided entirely whether Pulci's intention was or was not to deride the religion which is one of his favourite topics. It appears to me, that such an intention would have been no less hazardous to the poet than to the priest, particularly in that age and country; and the permission to publish the poem, and its reception among the classics of Italy, prove that it neither was nor is so interpreted. That he intended to ridicule the monastic life, and suffered his imagination to play with the simple dullness of his converted giant, seems evident enough; but surely it were as unjust to accuse him of irreligion on this account, as to denounce Fielding for his Parson Adams, Barnabas, Thwackum, Supple, and the Ordinary in Jonathan Wild,—or Scott, for the exquisite use of his Covenanters in the 'Tales of my Landlord.'

In the following translation I have used the liberty of the original with the proper names: as Pulci uses Gan, Ganellon, or Ganellone; Carlo, Carlomagno, or Carlomano; Rondel, or Rondello, &c., as it suits his convenience; so has the translator. In other respects the version is faithful to the best of the translator's ability in combining his interpretation of the one language with the not very easy task of reducing it to the same versification in the other. The reader, on comparing it with the original, is requested to remember that the antiquated language of Pulci, however pure, is not easy to the generality of Italians themselves, from its great mixture of Tuscan proverbs; and he may therefore be more indulgent to the present attempt. How far the translator has succeeded, and whether or no he shall continue the work, are questions which the public will decide. He was induced to make the experiment partly by his love for, and partial intercourse with, the Italian language, of which it is so easy to acquire a slight knowledge, and with which it is so nearly impossible for a foreigner to become accurately conversant. The Italian language is like a capricious beauty, who accords her smiles to all, her favours to few, and sometimes least to those who have courted her longest. The translator wished also to present in an English dress a part at least of a poem never yet rendered into a northern language; at the same time that it has been the original of some of the most celebrated productions on this side of the Alps, as well as of those recent experiments in poetry in England which have been already mentioned.

CANTO THE FIRST

I

In the beginning was the Word next God;
 God was the Word, the Word no less was he:
 This was in the beginning, to my mode
 Of thinking, and without him nought
 could be:
 Therefore, just Lord! from out thy high abode,
 Benign and pious, bid an angel flee,
 One only, to be my companion, who Shall help my famous, worthy, old song
 through.

II

And thou, oh Virgin! daughter, mother,
 bride
 Of the same Lord, who gave to you each
 key
 Of heaven, and hell, and everything beside,
 The day thy Gabriel said 'All hail!' to
 thee,
 Since to thy servants pity's ne'er denied,
 With flowing rhymes, a pleasant style
 and free,
 Be to my verses then benignly kind,
 And to the end illuminate my mind.

III

'Twas in the season when sad Philomel Weeps with her sister, who remembers
and Deplores the ancient woes which both be-
fell,
And makes the nymphs enamour'd, to
the hand
Of Phaeton by Phœbus loved so well
His car (but temper'd by his sire's command)
Was given, and on the horizon's verge just
now
Appear'd, so that Tithonus scratch'd his
brow:

IV

When I prepared my bark first to obey,
As it should still obey, the helm, my mind,
And carry prose or rhyme, and this my lay
Of Charles the Emperor, whom you will
find
By several pens already praised; but they
Who to diffuse his glory were inclined,
For all that I can see in prose or verse,
Have understood Charles badly, and wrote worse.

V

Leonardo Aretino said already,
That if, like Pepin, Charles had had a writer
Of genius quick, and diligently steady,
No hero would in history look brighter;
He in the cabinet being always ready,
And in the field a most victorious fighter,
Who for the church and Christian faith
had wrought,
Certes, far more than yet is said or thought.

VI

You still may see at St. Liberatore,
The abbey, no great way from Manopell,
Erected in the Abruzzi to his glory,
Because of the great battle in which fell
A pagan king, according to the story,
And felon people whom Charles sent to
hell:
And there are bones so many, and so many,
Near them Giusaffa's would seem few, if any.

VII

But the world, blind and ignorant, don't
prize
His virtues as I wish to see them: thou,
Florence, by his great bounty don't¹ arise,
And hast, and may have, if thou wilt allow,
All proper customs and true courtesies:
Whate'er thou hast acquired from then till now,
With knightly courage, treasure, or the lance,

Is sprung from out the noble blood of France.

VIII

Twelve paladins had Charles in court, of
whom
The wisest and most famous was Orlando;
Him traitor Gan conducted to the tomb
In Roncesvalles, as the villain plann'd
too,
While the horn rang so loud, and knell'd
the doom
Of their sad rout, though he did all knight can do;
And Dante in his comedy has given To him a happy seat with Charles in heaven.

IX

'Twas Christmas-day; in Paris all his court
Charles held; the chief, I say, Orlando
was,
The Dane; Astolfo there too did resort,
Also Ansuigi, the gay time to pass
In festival and in triumphal sport,
The much renown'd St. Dennis being the cause;
Angiolin of Bayonne, and Oliver,
And gentle Belinghieri too came there:

X

Avolio, and Arino, and Othone
Of Normandy, and Richard Paladin,
Wise Hamo, and the ancient Salamone,
Walter of Lion's Mount and Baldwin,
Who was the son of the sad Ganellone,
Were there, exciting too much gladness
in
The son of Pepin:—when his knights came hither,
He groan'd with joy to see them all together.

XI

But watchful Fortune, lurking, takes good
heed
Ever some bar 'gainst our intents to bring, While Charles reposed him thus, in word
and deed,
Orlando ruled court, Charles, and every-
thing;
Curst Gan, with envy bursting, had such
need
To vent his spite, that thus with Charles the king
One day he openly began to say,
'Orlando must we always then obey?

XII

'A thousand times I've been about to say,
Orlando too presumptuously goes on;
Here are we, counts, kings, dukes, to own thy sway,
Hamo, and Otho, Ogier, Solomon,

Each have to honour thee and to obey;
 But he has too much credit near the
 throne,
 Which we won't suffer, but are quite decided
 By such a boy to be no longer guided.

XIII

'And even at Aspramont thou didst begin
 To let him know he was a gallant knight,
 And by the fount did much the day to win;
 But I know who that day had won the
 fight
 If it had not for good Gherardo been;
 The victory was Almonte's else; his
 sight
 He kept upon the standard, and the laurels
 In fact and fairness are his earning, Charles.

XIV

'If thou rememberest being in Gascony,
 When there advanced the nations out of Spain,
 The Christian cause had suffer'd shamefully,
 Had not his valour driven them back
 again.
 Best speak the truth when there's a reason
 why:
 Know then, oh Emperor! that all com-
 plain:
 As for myself, I shall repass the mounts O'er which I cross'd with two and sixty counts.

XV

'Tis fit thy grandeur should dispense relief,
 So that each here may have his proper
 part,
 For the whole court is more or less in grief:
 Perhaps thou deem'st this lad a Mars in
 heart?
 Orlando one day heard this speech in brief,
 As by himself it chanced he sate apart:
 Displeased he was with Gan because he said it,
 But much more still that Charles should give him credit.

XVI

And with the sword he would have murder'd Gan,
 But Oliver thrust in between the pair,
 And from his hand extracted Durlindan,
 And thus at length they separated were.
 Orlando, angry too with Carloman,
 Wanted but little to have slain him there;
 Then forth alone from Paris went the chief,
 And burst and madden'd with disdain and grief.

XVII

From Ermellina, consort of the Dane,
 He took Cortana, and then took Rondell,
 And on towards Brara prick'd him o'er the
 plain;
 And when she saw him coming, Aldabelle Stretch'd forth her arms to clasp her lord
 again:
 Orlando, in whose brain all was not well,
 As 'Welcome, my Orlando, home,' she
 said,
 Raised up his sword to smite her on the
 head,

XVIII

Like him a fury counsels; his revenge
 On Gan in that rash act he seem'd to
 take,
 Which Aldabella thought extremely strange;
 But soon Orlando found himself awake;
 And his spouse took his bridle on this
 change,
 And he dismounted from his horse, and
 spake
 Of everything which pass'd without demur,
 And then reposed himself some days with
 her.

XIX

Then full of wrath departed from the place,
 And far as pagan countries roam'd
 astray,
 And while he rode, yet still at every pace
 The traitor Gan remember'd by the way;
 And wandering on in error a long space,
 An abbey which in a lone desert lay,
 'Midst glens obscure, and distant lands,
 he found,
 Which form'd the Christian's and the pagan's bound.

XX

The abbot was call'd Clermont, and by
 blood
 Descended from Anglante: under cover
 Of a great mountain's brow the abbey
 stood,
 But certain savage giants look'd him
 over;
 One Passamont was foremost of the brood,
 And Alabaster and Morgante hover Second and third, with certain slings, and throw
 In daily jeopardy the place below.

XXI

The monks could pass the convent gate no
 more,
 Nor leave their cells for water or for
 wood;

Orlando knock'd, but none would ope,
before
Unto the prior it at length seem'd good; Enter'd, he said that he was taught to adore

Him who was born of Mary's holiest
blood,
And was baptized a Christian; and then show'd
How to the abbey he had found his road.

XXII

Said the abbot, 'You are welcome; what is mine

We give you freely, since that you believe
With us in Mary Mother's Son divine;
And that you may not, cavalier, conceive

The cause of our delay to let you in
To be rusticity, you shall receive
The reason why our gate was barr'd to
you:

Thus those who in suspicion live must do.

XXIII

'When hither to inhabit first we came These mountains, albeit that they are obscure,

As you perceive, yet without fear or blame
They seem'd to promise an asylum sure:
From savage brutes alone, too fierce to
tame,

'Twas fit our quiet dwelling to secure;
But now, if here we'd stay, we needs must
guard

Against domestic beasts with watch and ward.

XXIV

'These make us stand, in fact, upon the
watch;

For late there have appear'd three giants rough;

What nation or what kingdom bore the batch

I know not, but they are all of savage
stuff;

When force and malice with some genius
match,

You know, they can do all—we are not
enough:

And these so much our orisons derange,
I know not what to do, till matters change.

XXV

'Our ancient fathers living the desert in,
For just and holy works were duly fed;
Think not they lived on locusts sole, 'tis certain

That manna was rain'd down from heaven instead;

But here 'tis fit we keep on the alert in Our bounds, or taste the stones shower'd down for bread,

From off yon mountain daily raining faster,
And flung by Passamont and Alabaster.

XXVI

'The third, Morgante, 's savagest by far;
he

Plucks up pines, beeches, poplar-trees,
and oaks,

And flings them, our community to bury;
And all that I can do but more provokes.'

While thus they parley in the cemetery,
A stone from one of their gigantic strokes,

Which nearly crush'd Rondell, came tumbling over,

So that he took a long leap under cover.

XXVII

'For God-sake, cavalier, come in with
speed;

The manna's falling now,' the abbot
cried.

'This fellow does not wish my horse should feed,

Dear Abbot,' Roland unto him replied.
'Of restiveness he'd cure him had he need;

That stone seems with good will and aim applied.'

The holy father said, 'I don't deceive;
They'll one day fling the mountain, I believe.'

XXVIII

Orlando bade them take care of Rondello,

And also made a breakfast of his own:
'Abbot,' he said, 'I want to find that fellow

Who flung at my good horse yon cornerstone.'

Said the abbot, 'Let not my advice seem shallow;

As to a brother dear I speak alone;
I would dissuade you, baron, from this

strife,
As knowing sure that you will lose your
life.

XXIX

'That Passamont has in his hand three darts—

Such slings, clubs, ballast-stones, that yield you must:

You know that giants have much stouter
hearts

Than us, with reason, in proportion
just:

If go you will, guard well against their arts,
For these are very barbarous and robust.'

Orlando answer'd, 'This I'll see, be sure,
And walk the wild on foot to be secure.'

XXX

The abbot sign'd the great cross on his front,
 'Then go you with God's benison and mine;
 Orlando, after he had scaled the mount,
 As the abbot had directed, kept the line
 Right to the usual haunt of Passamont;
 Who, seeing him alone in this design,
 Survey'd him fore and aft with eyes observant,
 Then ask'd him, 'If he wish'd to stay as servant?'

XXXI

And promised him an office of great ease.
 But said Orlando, 'Saracen insane!
 I come to kill you, if it shall so please
 God, not to serve as footboy in your train;
 You with his monks so oft have broke the peace—
 Vile dog! 'tis past his patience to sustain.'
 The giant ran to fetch his arms, quite furious,
 When he received an answer so injurious.

XXXII

And being return'd to where Orlando stood,
 Who had not moved him from the spot,
 and swinging
 The cord, he hurl'd a stone with strength so rude,
 As show'd a sample of his skill in sling-
 ing;
 It roll'd on Count Orlando's helmet good
 And head, and set both head and helmet ringing,
 So that he swoon'd with pain as if he died,
 But more than dead, he seem'd so stupefied.

XXXIII

Then Passamont, who thought him slain outright,
 Said, 'I will go, and while he lies along,
 Disarm me: why such craven did I fight?'
 But Christ his servants ne'er abandons long,
 Especially Orlando, such a knight,
 As to desert would almost be a wrong.
 While the giant goes to put off his defences,
 Orlando has recall'd his force and senses:

XXXIV

And loud he shouted, 'Giant, where dost go?
 Thou thought'st me doubtless for the bier outlaid;
 To the right about—without wings thou'rt too slow
 To fly my vengeance—currish rene-gade!

MORGANTE MAGGIORE

'Twas but by treachery thou laid'st me low.'
 The giant his astonishment betray'd,
 And turn'd about, and stopp'd his journey on,
 And then he stoop'd to pick up a great stone.

XXXV

Orlando had Cortana bare in hand;
 To split the head in twain was what he schemed:
 Cortana clave the skull like a true brand
 And pagan Passamont died unredeem'd,
 Yet harsh and haughty, as he lay he bann'd,
 And most devoutly Macon still blasphem'd;
 But while his crude, rude blasphemies he heard,
 Orlando thank'd the Father and the Word,—

XXXVI

Saying, 'What grace to me thou'st this day given!
 And I to thee, O Lord! am ever bound.
 I know my life was saved by thee from heaven,
 Since by the giant I was fairly down'd.
 All things by thee are measured just and even;
 Our power without thine aid would nought be found:
 I pray thee take heed of me, till I can
 At least return once more to Carloman.'

XXXVII

And having said thus much, he went his way;
 And Alabaster he found out below,
 Doing the very best that in him lay
 To root from out a bank a rock or two.
 Orlando, when he reach'd him, loud 'gan say,
 'How think'st thou, glutton, such a stone to throw?'
 When Alabaster heard his deep voice ring,
 He suddenly betook him to his sling,

XXXVIII

And hurl'd a fragment of a size so large,
 That if it had in fact fulfill'd its mission,
 And Roland not avail'd him of his targe,
 There would have been no need of a physician.
 Orlando set himself in turn to charge,
 And in his bulky bosom made incision
 With all his sword. The lout fell; but o'er-thrown, he
 However by no means forgot Macone.

XXXIX

Morgante had a palace in his mode,
 Composed of branches, logs of wood,
 and earth,

And stretch'd himself at ease in this abode,
And shut himself at night within his berth.

Orlando knock'd, and knock'd again, to goad

The giant from his sleep; and he came
forth,

The door to open, like a crazy thing,
For a rough dream had shook him slumbering.

XL

He thought that a fierce serpent had attack'd him;

And Mahomet he call'd; but Mahomet
Is nothing worth, and not an instant
back'd him;

But praying blessed Jesu, he was set
At liberty from all the fears which rack'd
him;

And to the gate he came with great regret—

'Who knocks here?' grumbling all the while, said he.

'That,' said Orlando, 'you will quickly
see:

XLI

'I come to preach to you, as to your
brothers,

Sent by the miserable monks—repentance;

For Providence divine, in you and others, Condemns the evil done my new acquaintance.

'Tis writ on high—your wrong must pay another's:

From heaven itself is issued out this sentence.

Know, then, that colder now than a pilaster
I left your Passamont and Alabaster.'

XLII

Morgante said, 'Oh, gentle cavalier!

Now by thy God say me no villany:

The favour of your name I fain would
hear,

And if a Christian, speak for courtesy.'

Replied Orlando, 'So much to your ear

I by my faith disclose contentedly;

Christ I adore, who is the genuine Lord,

And, if you please, by you may be adored.'

XLIII

The Saracen rejoind'd in humble tone,

'I have had an extraordinary vision;

A savage serpent fell on me alone,

And Macon would not pity my condition;

Hence to thy God, who for ye did atone

Upon the cross, preferr'd I my petition;

His timely succour set me safe and free,

And I a Christian am disposed to be.'

XLIV

Orlando answer'd, 'Baron just and pious,
If this good wish your heart can really
move

To the true God, you will not then deny us
Eternal honour, you will go above,

And, if you please, as friends we will ally
us,

And I will love you with a perfect love.
Your idols are vain liars, full of fraud:

The only true God is the Christians' God.

XLV

'The Lord descended to the virgin breast
Of Mary Mother, sinless and divine;

If you acknowledge the Redeemer blest, Without whom neither sun nor star can

shine,
Abjure bad Macon's false and felon test,

Your renegado god, and worship mine,
Baptize yourself with zeal, since you repent.'

To which Morgante answer'd, 'I'm content.'

XLVI

And then Orlando to embrace him flew,
And made much of his convert, as he

cried,
'To the abbey I will gladly marshal you.'

To whom Morgante, 'Let us go,' replied;

'I to the friars have for peace to sue.'
Which thing Orlando heard with inward pride,

Saying, 'My brother, so devout and good,
Ask the abbot pardon, as I wish you

would:

XLVII

'Since God has granted your illumination,
Accepting you in mercy for his own,

Humility should be your first oblation.'
Morgante said, 'For goodness' sake, make known,— Since that your God is to be mine—your

station,
And let your name in verity be shown;

Then will I everything at your command
do.'

On which the other said, he was Orlando.

XLVIII

'Then,' quoth the giant, 'blessed be Jesu
A thousand times with gratitude and

praise!
Oft, perfect baron! have I heard of you

Through all the different periods of my
days:

And, as I said, to be your vassal too
I wish, for your great gallantry always.'

Thus reasoning, they continued much to
say,

And onwards to the abbey went their way.

XLIX

And by the way about the giants dead
 Orlando with Morgante reason'd: 'Be,
 For their decease, I pray you, comforted;
 And, since it is God's pleasure, pardon
 me;
 A thousand wrongs unto the monks they
 bred,
 And our true Scripture soundeth openly,
 Good is rewarded, and chastised the ill,
 Which the Lord never faileth to fulfil:

'Because his love of justice unto all Is such, he wills his judgment should devour
 All who have sin, however great or small;
 But good he well remembers to restore.
 Nor without justice holy could we call Him, whom I now require you to adore.
 All men must make his will their wishes
 sway,
 And quickly and spontaneously obey.

LI

'And here our doctors are of one accord, Coming on this point to the same conclusion,
 That in their thoughts who praise in heaven the Lord
 If pity e'er was guilty of intrusion
 For their unfortunate relations stored
 In hell below, and damn'd in great confusion,
 Their happiness would be reduced to
 nought,
 And thus unjust the Almighty's self be thought.

LII

'But they in Christ have firmest hope, and
 all
 Which seems to him, to them too must
 appear
 Well done; nor could it otherwise befall;
 He never can in any purpose err.
 If sire or mother suffer endless thrall,
 They don't disturb themselves for him or her:
 What pleases God to them must joy inspire;—
 Such is the observance of the eternal choir.'

LIII

'A word unto the wise,' Morgante said,
 'Is wont to be enough, and you shall see How much I grieve about my brethren
 dead;
 And if the will of God seem good to me,
 Just, as you tell me, 'tis in heaven obey'd—
 Ashes to ashes,—merry let us be!
 I will cut off the hands from both their trunks,
 And carry them unto the holy monks.

LIV

'So that all persons may be sure and certain That they are dead, and have no further
 fear
 To wander solitary this desert in,
 And that they may perceive my spirit
 clear
 By the Lord's grace, who hath withdrawn
 the curtain
 Of darkness, making his bright realm
 appear.'
 He cut his brethren's hands off at these words,
 And left them to the savage beasts and birds.

LV

Then to the abbey they went on together,
 Where waited them the abbot in great
 doubt.
 The monks, who knew not yet the fact, ran thither,
 To their superior, all in breathless rout,
 Saying with tremor, 'Please to tell us whether
 You wish to have this person in or out?'
 The abbot, looking through upon the giant,
 Too greatly fear'd, at first, to be compliant.

LVI

Orlando, seeing him thus agitated,
 Said quickly, 'Abbot, be thou of good
 cheer;
 He Christ believes, as Christian must be rated,
 And hath renounced his Macon false';
 which here
 Morgante with the hands corroborated,
 A proof of both the giants' fate quite
 clear:
 Thence, with due thanks, the abbot God
 adored,
 Saying, 'Thou hast contented me, oh Lord!'

LVII

Hegazed; Morgante's height he calculated,
 And more than once contemplated his
 size;
 And then he said, 'Oh giant celebrated!
 Know, that no more my wonder will
 arise,
 How you could tear and fling the trees you late did,
 When I behold your form with my own
 eyes.
 You now a true and perfect friend will show
 Yourself to Christ, as once you were a foe.

LVIII

'And one of our apostles, Saul once
 named,
 Long persecuted sore the faith of Christ,
 Till, one day, by the Spirit being inflamed,
 "Why dost thou persecute me thus?"
 said Christ;

And then from his offence he was reclaim'd,
 And went for ever after preaching
 Christ,
 And of the faith became a trump, whose sounding
 O'er the whole earth is echoing and rebounding.

LIX

'So, my Morgante, you may do likewise:
 He who repents—thus writes the Evangelist—

Occasions more rejoicing in the skies
 Than ninety-nine of the celestial list.
 You may be sure, should each desire arise
 With just zeal for the Lord, that you'll exist

Among the happy saints for evermore;
 But you were lost and damn'd to hell
 before!'

LX

And thus great honour to Morgante paid
 The abbot: many days they did repose.
 One day, as with Orlando they both stray'd,
 And saunter'd here and there, where'er
 they chose,

The abbot show'd a chamber, where array'd Much armour was, and hung up certain bows;

And one of these Morgante for a whim Girt on, though useless, he believed, to
 him.

LXI

There being a want of water in the place,
 Orlando, like a worthy brother, said,
 'Morgante, I could wish you in this case
 To go for water.' 'You shall be obey'd
 In all commands,' was the reply, 'straight-
 ways.'

Upon his shoulder a great tub he laid,
 And went out on his way unto a fountain,
 Where he was wont to drink below the mountain.

LXII

Arrived there, a prodigious noise he hears,
 Which suddenly along the forest spread;
 Whereat from out his quiver he prepares
 An arrow for his bow, and lifts his head;
 And lo! a monstrous herd of swine appears,
 And onward rushes with tempestuous
 tread,
 And to the fountain's brink precisely pours;
 So that the giant's join'd by all the boars.

LXIII

Morgante at a venture shot an arrow,
 Which pierced a pig precisely in the ear,
 And pass'd unto the other side quite thorough;

So that the boar, defunct, lay tripp'd up
 near.

Another, to revenge his fellow farrow,
 Against the giant rush'd in fierce career,
 And reach'd the passage with so swift a
 foot,
 Morgante was not now in time to shoot.

LXIV

Perceiving that the pig was on him close,
 He gave him such a punch upon the head,
 As floor'd him so that he no more arose,
 Smashing the very bone; and he fell dead
 Next to the other. Having seen such blows,
 The other pigs along the valley fled;
 Morgante on his neck the bucket took,
 Full from the spring, which neither swerved nor shook.

LXV

The tub was on one shoulder, and there
 were
 The hogs on t'other, and he brush'd apace
 On to the abbey, though by no means near,
 Nor spilt one drop of water in his race.
 Orlando, seeing him so soon appear With the dead boars, and with that brimful vase,
 Marvell'd to see his strength so very great;
 So did the abbot, and set wide the gate.

LXVI

The monks, who saw the water fresh and
 good,
 Rejoiced, but much more to perceive the
 pork;
 All animals are glad at sight of food:
 They lay their breviaries to sleep, and
 work
 With greedy pleasure, and in such a mood,
 That the flesh needs no salt beneath their fork.
 Of rankness and of rot there is no fear,
 For all the fasts are now left in arrear.

LXVII

As though they wish'd to burst at once,
 they ate;
 And gorged so that, as if the bones had
 been
 In water, sorely grieved the dog and cat,
 Perceiving that they all were pick'd too
 clean.
 The abbot, who to all did honour great,
 A few days after this convivial scene,
 Gave to Morgante a fine horse, well train'd,
 Which he long time had for himself maintain'd.

LXVIII

The horse Morgante to a meadow led,
 To gallop, and to put him to the proof,
 Thinking that he a back of iron had,
 Or to skim eggs unbroke was light
 enough;

But the horse, sinking with the pain, fell
 dead,
 And burst, while cold on earth lay head
 and hoof.
 Morgante said, 'Get up, thou sulky cur!'
 And still continued pricking with the spur.

LXIX

But finally he thought fit to dismount,
 And said, 'I am as light as any feather,
 And he has burst;—to this what say you,
 count?'
 Orlando answer'd, 'Like a ship's mast
 rather
 You seem to me, and with the truck for front:
 Let him go! Fortune wills that we together Should march, but you on foot Morgante
 still.'
 To which the giant answer'd, 'So I will.

LXX

'When there shall be occasion, you will see
 How I approve my courage in the fight.'
 Orlando said, 'I really think you'll be,
 If it should prove God's will, a goodly
 knight;
 Nor will you napping there discover me.
 But never mind your horse, though out of sight
 'Twere best to carry him into some wood,
 If but the means or way I understood.'

LXXI

The giant said, 'Then carry him I will,
 Since that to carry me he was so slack—
 To render, as the gods do, good for ill;
 But lend a hand to place him on my
 back.'
 Orlando answer'd, 'If my counsel still May weigh, Morgante, do not undertake
 To lift or carry this dead courser, who,
 As you have done to him, will do to you.

LXXII

'Take care he don't revenge himself,
 though dead,
 As Nessus did of old beyond all cure.
 I don't know if the fact you've heard or
 read;
 But he will make you burst, you may be
 sure.'
 'But help him on my back,' Morgante said,
 'And you shall see what weight I can endure.
 In place, my gentle Roland, of this palfrey,
 With all the bells, I'd carry yonder belfry.'

LXXIII

The abbot said, 'The steeple may do well,
 But, for the bells, you've broken them,
 I wot.'
 Morgante answer'd, 'Let them pay in hell
 The penalty who lie dead in yon grot;'

And hoisting up the horse from where he
 fell,
 He said, 'Now look if I the gout have
 got,
 Orlando, in the legs—or if I have force;'
 And then he made two gambols with the horse.

LXXIV

Morgante was like any mountain framed;
 So if he did this 'tis no prodigy;
 But secretly himself Orlando blamed,
 Because he was one of his family;
 And fearing that he might be hurt or
 maim'd,
 Once more he bade him lay his burden
 by:
 'Put down, nor bear him further the desert in.'
 Morgante said, 'I'll carry him for certain.'

LXXV

He did; and stow'd him in some nook
 away,
 And to the abbey then return'd with
 speed.
 Orlando said, 'Why longer do we stay?
 Morgante, here is nought to do indeed.'
 The abbot by the hand he took one day,
 And said, with great respect, he had agreed
 To leave his reverence; but for this decision
 He wish'd to have his pardon and permission.

LXXVI

The honours they continued to receive Perhaps exceeded what his merits
 claim'd:
 He said, 'I mean, and quickly, to retrieve
 The lost days of time past, which may be blamed;
 Some days ago I should have ask'd your
 leave,
 Kind father, but I really was ashamed,
 And know not how to show my sentiment,
 So much I see you with our stay content.

LXXVII

'But in my heart I bear through every
 clime
 The abbot, abbey, and this solitude—
 So much I love you in so short a time;
 For me, from heaven reward you with all good
 The God so true, the eternal Lord sub-
 lime!
 Whose kingdom at the last hath open
 stood.
 Meantime we stand expectant of your blessing,
 And recommend us to your prayers with pressing.'

LXXVIII

Now when the abbot Count Orlando
heard,
His heart grew soft with inner tender-
ness,
Such fervour in his bosom bred each word;
And, 'Cavalier,' he said, 'if I have less Courteous and kind to your great worth
appear'd,
Than fits me for such gentle blood to express,
I know I have done too little in this case;
But blame our ignorance, and this poor
place.

LXXIX

'We can indeed but honour you with masses,
And sermons, thanksgivings, and pater-
nosters,
Hot suppers, dinners (fitting other places
In verity much rather than the cloisters);
But such a love for you my heart embraces,
For thousand virtues which your bosom
fosters,
That wheresoe'er you go I too shall be,
And, on the other part, you rest with me.

LXXX

'This may involve a seeming contradic-
tion;
But you I know are sage, and feel, and
taste,
And understand my speech, with full conviction.
For your just pious deeds may you be graced
With the Lord's great reward and benediction,
By whom you were directed to this
waste;
To his high mercy is our freedom due,
For which we render thanks to him and
you.

LXXXI

'You saved at once our life and soul: such
fear
The giants caused us, that the way was
lost
By which we could pursue a fit career
In search of Jesus and the saintly host;
And your departure breeds such sorrow
here,
That comfortless we all are to our cost;
But months and years you would not stay in sloth,
Nor are you form'd to wear our sober cloth,

LXXXII

'But to bear arms, and wield the lance;
indeed,
With these as much is done as with this
cowl;

In proof of which the Scriptures you may
read.
This giant up to heaven may bear his
soul
By your compassion: now in peace proceed.
Your state and name I seek not to unroll;
But, if I'm ask'd, this answer shall be
given,
That here an angel was sent down from heaven.

LXXXIII

'If you want armour or aught else, go in,
Look o'er the wardrobe, and take what you choose,
And cover with it o'er this giant's skin.'
Orlando answer'd, 'If there should lie
loose
Some armour, ere our journey we begin,
Which might be turn'd to my compan-ion's use,
The gift would be acceptable to me.'
The abbot said to him, 'Come in and see.'

LXXXIV

And in a certain closet, where the wall
Was cover'd with old armour like a crust,
The abbot said to them, 'I give you all.'
Morgante rummaged piecemeal from the dust
The whole, which, save one cuirass, was too small,
And that too had the mail inlaid with rust.
They wonder'd how it fitted him exactly,
Which ne'er has suited others so compactly.

LXXXV

'Twas an immeasurable giant's, who
By the great Milo of Agrante fell
Before the abbey many years ago.
The story on the wall was figured well;
In the last moment of the abbey's foe,
Who long had waged a war implacable:
Precisely as the war occur'd they drew
him,
And there was Milo as he overthrew him.

LXXXVI

Seeing this history, Count Orlando said
In his own heart, 'Oh God, who in the sky
Know'st all things! how was Milo hither
led?
Who caused the giant in this place to
die?'
And certain letters, weeping, then he read,
So that he could not keep his visage
dry,—
As I will tell in the ensuing story.
From evil keep you the high King of glory!

FRANCESCA OF RIMINI

FROM THE INFERNO OF DANTE

CANTO THE FIFTH

'THE land where I was born sits by the
seas,
Upon that shore to which the Po descends,
With all his followers, in search of peace.
Love, which the gentle heart soon appre-
hends,
Seized him for the fair person which was ta'en 5
From me, and me even yet the mode offends.
Love, who to none beloved to love again
Remits, seized me with wish to please,
so strong,
That, as thou seest, yet, yet it doth re-
main.
Love to one death conducted us along,
But Caina waits for him our life who ended: 11
These were the accents utter'd by her
tongue.—
Since I first listen'd to these souls offended,
I bow'd my visage, and so kept it till—
'What think'st thou,' said the bard;
when I unbended, 15
And recommenced: 'Alas! unto such ill
How many sweet thoughts, what strong ecstasies,
Led these their evil fortune to fulfil!'
And then I turn'd unto their side my eyes,
And said, 'Francesca, thy sad destinies

Have made me sorrow till the tears arise.
But tell me, in the season of sweet sighs, 22
By what and how thy love to passion
rose,
So as his dim desires to recognise?'
Then she to me: 'The greatest of all woes
Is to remind us of our happy days 26
In misery, and that thy teacher knows.
But if to learn our passion's first root preys
Upon thy spirit with such sympathy,
I will do even as he who weeps and says.
We read one day for pastime, seated nigh,
Of Lancilot, how love enchain'd him
too. 32
We were alone, quite unsuspectingly.
But oft our eyes met, and our cheeks in
hue
All o'er discolour'd by that reading
were; 35
But one point only wholly us o'erthrew;
When we read the long-sigh'd-for smile of
her,
To be thus kiss'd by such devoted lover,
He who from me can be divided ne'er Kiss'd my mouth, trembling in the act all
over: 40
Accursed was the book and he who wrote!
That day no further leaf we did uncover.
While thus one spirit told us of their lot,
The other wept, so that with pity's thralls
I swoon'd, as if by death I had been smote 45
And fell down even as a dead body falls.

DRAMAS

MANFRED

A DRAMATIC POEM

'There are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio,
Than are dreamt of in your philosophy.'

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ

CHAMOIS HUNTER.
ABBOT OF ST. MAURICE.
MANUEL.
HERMAN.

WITCH OF THE ALPS.
ARIMANES.
NEMESIS.
THE DESTINIES.
SPIRITS, &c.

The Scene of the Drama is amongst the Higher Alps—partly in the Castle of Manfred, and partly in the Mountains.

ACT I

SCENE I.—MANFRED alone.—Scene, a Gothic Gallery.—Time, Midnight.

Man. The lamp must be replenish'd, but even then
It will not burn so long as I must watch:
My slumbers—if I slumber—are not sleep,
But a continuance of enduring thought,
Which then I can resist not: in my heart
There is a vigil, and these eyes but close
To look within; and yet I live, and bear
The aspect and the form of breathing men.
But grief should be the instructor of the
wise;

Sorrow is knowledge: they who know the
most Must mourn the deepest o'er the fatal
truth,

The Tree of Knowledge is not that of Life.
Philosophy and science, and the springs
Of wonder, and the wisdom of the world,
I have essay'd, and in my mind there is
A power to make these subject to itself—
But they avail not: I have done men good,
And I have met with good even among
men—

But this avail'd not: I have had my foes,
And none have baffled, many fallen before
me—

But this avail'd not:—Good, or evil, life,
Powers, passions, all I see in other beings,
Have been to me as rain unto the sands,
Since that all-nameless hour. I have no
dread,

And feel the curse to have no natural fear,
Nor fluttering throb, that beats with hopes or wishes,

Or lurking love of something on the earth.
Now to my task,—

Mysterious agency!

Ye spirits of the unbounded Universe!
Whom I have sought in darkness and in
light—
Ye, who do compass earth about, and
dwell

In subtler essence—ye, to whom the tops
Of mountains inaccessible are haunts,
And earth's and ocean's caves familiar
things—

I call upon ye by the written charm
Which gives me power upon you—Rise!
Appear!

They come not yet.—Now by the voice of
him

Who is the first among you—by this sign,
Which makes you tremble—by the claims
of him

Who is undying,—Rise! Appear!— Appear!

If it be so—Spirits of earth and air,
Ye shall not thus elude me: by a power,
Deeper than all yet urged, a tyrant-spell,
Which had its birthplace in a star condemn'd,

The burning wreck of a demolish'd world,
A wandering hell in the eternal space;
By the strong curse which is upon my
soul,

The thought which is within me and around
me,

I do compel ye to my will—Appear!

[A star is seen at the darker end of the gallery: it is stationary; and a voice is heard singing.]

FIRST SPIRIT

Mortal! to thy bidding bow'd,
From my mansion in the cloud,
Which the breath of twilight builds,
And the summer's sunset gilds
With the azure and vermillion,
Which is mix'd for my pavilion;

Though thy quest may be forbidden,
On a star-beam I have ridden:
To thine adjuration bow'd,
Mortal—be thy wish avow'd!

Voice of the SECOND SPIRIT

Mont Blanc is the monarch of mountains;
They crown'd him long ago 61
On a throne of rocks, in a robe of clouds,
With a diadem of snow.
Around his waist are forests braced,
The Avalanche in his hand; 65
But ere it fall, that thundering ball
Must pause for my command.
The Glacier's cold and restless mass
Moves onward day by day;
But I am he who bids it pass, 70
Or with its ice delay.
I am the spirit of the place,
Could make the mountain bow
And quiver to his cavern'd base—
And what with me wouldst Thou? 75

Voice of the THIRD SPIRIT

In the blue depth of the waters,
Where the wave hath no strife,
Where the wind is a stranger,
And the sea-snake hath life, 80
Where the Mermaid is decking
Her green hair with shells,
Like the storm on the surface
Came the sound of thy spells;
O'er my calm Hall of Coral
The deep echo roll'd— 85
To the Spirit of Ocean
Thy wishes unfold!

FOURTH SPIRIT

Where the slumbering earthquake
Lies pillow'd on fire,
And the lakes of bitumen 90
Rise boilingly higher;
Where the roots of the Andes
Strike deep in the earth,
As their summits to heaven
Shoot soaringly forth; 95
I have quitted my birthplace,
Thy bidding to bide—
Thy spell hath subdued me,
Thy will be my guide!

FIFTH SPIRIT

I am the Rider of the wind, 100
The Stirrer of the storm;
The hurricane I left behind
Is yet with lightning warm;
To speed to thee, o'er shore and sea
I swept upon the blast; 105
The fleet I met sail'd well, and yet
'Twill sink ere night be past.

SIXTH SPIRIT

My dwelling is the shadow of the night,
Why doth thy magic torture me with
light?

SEVENTH SPIRIT

The star which rules thy destiny 110
Was ruled, ere earth began, by me:
It was a world as fresh and fair
As e'er revolved round sun in air;
Its course was free and regular,
Space bosom'd not a lovelier star. 115
The hour arrived—and it became
A wandering mass of shapeless flame,
A pathless comet, and a curse,
The menace of the universe;
Still rolling on with innate force, 120
Without a sphere, without a course,
A bright deformity on high,
The monster of the upper sky! 123
And thou! beneath its influence born—
Thou worm! whom I obey and scorn—
Forced by a power (which is not thine,
And lent thee but to make thee mine)
For this brief moment to descend,
Where these weak spirits round thee 129
bend
And parley with a thing like thee—
What wouldst thou, Child of Clay! with
me?

The SEVEN SPIRITS

Earth, ocean, air, night, mountains,
winds, thy star,
Are at thy beck and bidding, Child of
Clay!
Before thee at thy quest thee their spirits are—
What wouldst thou with us, son of 135 mortals—say?

Man. Forgetfulness—

First Spirit. Of what—of whom—and
why?

Man. Of that which is within me; read it there—

90 Ye know it, and I cannot utter it.

Spirit. We can but give thee that which we possess:

Ask of us subjects, sovereignty, the power
O'er earth—the whole, or portion—or a 141
sign

95 Which shall control the elements, whereof
We are the dominators,—each and all,
These shall be thine.

Man. Oblivion, self-oblivion
Can ye not wring from out the hidden
realms 145

Ye offer so profusely what I ask?

Spirit. It is not in our essence, in our skill;

But—thou may'st die.

Man. Will death bestow it on me?

Spirit. We are immortal, and do not forget;

We are eternal; and to us the past 150
Is, as the future, present. Art thou an-swer'd?

Man. Ye mock me—but the power which brought ye here

Hath made you mine. Slaves, scoff not at my will!

The mind, the spirit, the Promethean spark, 154

The lightning of my being, is as bright,
Pervading, and far darting as your own,
And shall not yield to yours, though coop'd in clay!

Answer, or I will teach you what I am.

Spirit. We answer as we answer'd; our reply

Is even in thine own words.

Man. Why say ye so? 160

Spirit. If, as thou say'st, thine essence be as ours,

We have replied in telling thee, the thing Mortals call death hath nought to do with
us.

Man. I then have call'd ye from your realms in vain;

Ye cannot, or ye will not, aid me.

Spirit. Say, 165

What we possess we offer; it is thine:
Bethink ere thou dismiss us; ask again;
Kingdom, and sway, and strength, and length of days—

Man. Accurs'd! what have I to do with days?

They are too long already.—Hence—be-
gone! 170

Spirit. Yet pause: being here, our will would do thee service;

Bethink thee, is there then no other gift
Which we can make not worthless in thine
eyes?

Man. No, none: yet stay—one moment, ere we part,

I would behold ye face to face. I hear Your voices, sweet and melancholy
sounds, 176

As music on the waters; and I see

The steady aspect of a clear large star;
But nothing more. Approach me as ye are,
Or one, or all, in your accustom'd forms.

Spirit. We have no forms, beyond the elements 181

Of which we are the mind and principle:
But choose a form—in that we will appear.

Man. I have no choice; there is no form
on earth

Hideous or beautiful to me. Let him,
Who is most powerful of ye, take such aspect 186

As unto him may seem most fitting—
Come!

Seventh Spirit [appearing in the shape of a beautiful female figure]. Behold!

Man. Oh God! if it be thus, and thou Art not a madness and a mockery, 189
I yet might be most happy, I will clasp thee,
And we again will be—

[The figure vanishes.

My heart is crush'd!

[MANFRED falls senseless.

(A voice is heard in the Incantation which follows.)

When the moon is on the wave,
And the glow-worm in the grass,
And the meteor on the grave,
And the wisp on the morass; 195
When the falling stars are shooting,
And the answer'd owls are hooting,
And the silent leaves are still
In the shadow of the hill,
Shall my soul be upon thine, 200
With a power and with a sign.

Though thy slumber may be deep,
Yet thy spirit shall not sleep;
There are shades which will not vanish,
There are thoughts thou canst not banish; 205

By a power to thee unknown,
Thou canst never be alone;
Thou art wrapt as with a shroud,
Thou art gather'd in a cloud;
And for ever shalt thou dwell 210
In the spirit of this spell.

Though thou seest me not pass by,
Thou shalt feel me with thine eye
As a thing that, though unseen,
Must be near thee, and hath been; 215
And when in that secret dread
Thou hast turn'd around thy head,
Thou shalt marvel I am not
As thy shadow on the spot,
And the power which thou dost feel
Shall be what thou must conceal. 221

And a magic voice and verse
Hath baptized thee with a curse;
And a spirit of the air
Hath begirt thee with a snare; 225
In the wind there is a voice
Shall forbid thee to rejoice;
And to thee shall night deny
All the quiet of her sky;
And the day shall have a sun, 230
Which shall make thee wish it done.

From thy false tears I did distil
An essence which hath strength to kill;
From thy own heart I then did wring
The black blood in its blackest spring;
From thy own smile I snatch'd the
snake, 236
For there it coil'd as in a brake;
From thy own lip I drew the charm
Which gave all these their chiefest harm;
In proving every poison known, 240
I found the strongest was thine own.

By thy cold breast and serpent smile,
By thy unfathom'd gulfs of guile,
By that most seeming virtuous eye,
By thy shut soul's hypocrisy; 245

By the perfection of thine art
Which pass'd for human thine own
heart;
By thy delight in others' pain,
And by thy brotherhood of Cain,
I call upon thee! and compel 250
Thyself to be thy proper Hell!

And on thy head I pour the vial
Which doth devote thee to this trial;
Nor to slumber, nor to die,
Shall be in thy destiny; 255
Though thy death shall still seem near
To thy wish, but as a fear;
Lo! the spell now works around thee,
And the clankless chain hath bound
thee;
O'er thy heart and brain together 260
Hath the word been pass'd—now wither!

SCENE II

The Mountain of the Jungfrau.—Time, Morning.—MANFRED alone upon the Cliffs.

Man. The spirits I have raised abandon me,

The spells which I have studied baffle me,
The remedy I reck'd of tortured me;
I lean no more on superhuman aid;
It hath no power upon the past, and for The future, till the past be gulf'd in dark-
ness, 6

It is not of my search.—My mother Earth!
And thou fresh breaking Day, and you,
ye Mountains,

Why are ye beautiful? I cannot love ye.
And thou, the bright eye of the universe,
That openest over all, and unto all 11
Art a delight—thou shin'st not on my
heart.

And you, ye crags, upon whose extreme
edge

I stand, and on the torrent's brink beneath Behold the tall pines dwindled as to shrubs
In dizziness of distance; when a leap,
A stir, a motion, even a breath, would
bring

My breast upon its rocky bosom's bed
To rest for ever—wherefore do I pause?
I feel the impulse—yet I do not plunge;
I see the peril—yet do not recede; 21
And my brain reels—and yet my foot is firm:

There is a power upon me which withholds,

And makes it my fatality to live,—
If it be life to wear within myself 25
This barrenness of spirit, and to be
My own soul's sepulchre, for I have ceased
To justify my deeds unto myself—
The last infirmity of evil. Ay, 29
Thou winged and cloud-cleaving minister,

[An eagle passes.

Whose happy flight is highest into heaven,
Well may'st thou swoop so near me—I should be Thy prey, and gorge thine eaglets; thou art gone

Where the eye cannot follow thee; but
thine 34

Yet pierces downward, onward, or above,
With a pervading vision.—Beautiful!
How beautiful is all this visible world!
How glorious in its action and itself!
But we, who name ourselves its sovereigns,
we,

Half dust, half deity, alike unfit 40
To sink or soar, with our mix'd essence
make

A conflict of its elements, and breathe
The breath of degradation and of pride,
Contending with low wants and lofty will,
Till our mortality predominates, 45
And men are—what they name not to themselves,

And trust not to each other. Hark! the note, [The Shepherd's pipe in the distance is heard.

The natural music of the mountain reed—
For here the patriarchal days are not
A pastoral fable—pipes in the liberal air, Mix'd with the sweet bells of the sauntering herd; 51

My soul would drink those echoes. Oh, that I were

The viewless spirit of a lovely sound,
A living voice, a breathing harmony,
A bodiless enjoyment—born and dying
With the blest tone which made me! 56

Enter from below a CHAMOIS HUNTER.

Chamois Hunter. Even so
This way the chamois leapt: her nimble
feet

Have baffled me; my gains to-day will scarce

Repay my break-neck travail.—What is
here?

Who seems not of my trade, and yet hath reach'd 60

A height which none even of our mountaineers,

Save our best hunters, may attain: his garb
Is goodly, his mien manly, and his air Proud as a free-born peasant's, at this distance:

I will approach him nearer.

Man. [not perceiving the other]. To be
thus— 65

Grey-hair'd with anguish, like these blasted pines,

Wrecks of a single winter, barkless,
branchless,

A blighted trunk upon a cursed root,
Which but supplies a feeling to decay—

And to be thus, eternally but thus, 70
Having been otherwise! Now furrow'd o'er

With wrinkles, plough'd by moments,— not by years,—

And hours, all tortured into ages—hours
Which I outlive!—Ye toppling crags of ice!
Ye avalanches, whom a breath draws
down 75

In mountainous o'erwhelming, come and crush me!

I hear ye momentarily above, beneath,
Crash with a frequent conflict; but ye pass,
And only fall on things that still would live;
On the young flourishing forest, or the hut
And hamlet of the harmless villager. 81

C. Hun. The mists begin to rise from up the valley;

I'll warn him to descend, or he may chance
To lose at once his way and life together.

Man. The mists boil up around the glaciers; clouds 85

Rise curling fast beneath me, white and sulphury,

Like foam from the roused ocean of deep
Hell,

Whose every wave breaks on a living shore,
Heap'd with the damn'd like pebbles.—I am giddy.

C. Hun. I must approach him cautiously;
if near, 90

A sudden step will startle him, and he Seems tottering already.

Man. Mountains have fallen, Leaving a gap in the clouds, and with the
shock

Rocking their Alpine brethren; filling up
The ripe green valleys with destruction's splinters; 95

Damming the rivers with a sudden dash,
Which crush'd the waters into mist and
made

Their fountains find another channel—
thus,

Thus, in its old age, did Mount Rosenberg—

Why stood I not beneath it?

C. Hun. Friend! have a care, 100
Your next step may be fatal!—for the love
Of him who made you, stand not on that brink!

Man. [not hearing him]. Such would have been for me a fitting tomb;

My bones had then been quiet in their depth;

They had not then been strewn upon the
rocks 105

For the wind's pastime—as thus—thus they shall be—

In this one plunge.—Farewell, ye opening heavens!

Look not upon me thus reproachfully—
You were not meant for me—Earth! take these atoms!

[As MANFRED is in act to spring from the cliff, the CHAMOIS HUNTER seizes and retains him with a sudden grasp.

C. Hun. Hold, madman!—though a-weary of thy life, 110

Stain not our pure vales with thy guilty
blood:

Away with me—I will not quit my
hold.

Man. I am most sick at heart—nay, grasp me not—

I am all feebleness—the mountains whirl
Spinning around me—I grow blind—

What art thou? 115

C. Hun. I'll answer that anon. Away
with me—

The clouds grow thicker—there—now lean on me—

Place your foot here—here, take this staff, and cling

A moment to that shrub—now give me
your hand,

And hold fast by my girdle—softly—
well— 120

Thé Chalet will be gain'd within an hour:
Come on, we'll quickly find a surer foot-
ing,

And something like a pathway, which the torrent

Hath wash'd since winter.—Come, 'tis bravely done—

You should have been a hunter.—Follow
me. 125

[As they descend the rocks with difficulty, the scene closes.

ACT II

SCENE I.—A Cottage amongst the Bernese
Alps.

MANFRED and the CHAMOIS HUNTER

C. Hun. No, no—yet pause—thou must not yet go forth:

Thy mind and body are alike unfit
To trust each other, for some hours, at
least;

When thou art better, I will be thy guide—
But whither?

Man. It imports not: I do know 5
My route full well, and need no further guidance.

C. Hun. Thy garb and gait bespeak thee of high lineage—

One of the many chiefs, whose castled crags

Look o'er the lower valleys—which of these

May call thee lord? I only know their portals; 10

My way of life leads me but rarely down
To bask by the huge hearths of those old
halls,

Carousing with the vassals; but the paths,
Which step from out our mountains to their doors,

I know from childhood—which of these is
thine? 15

Man. No matter.

C. Hun. Well, sir, pardon me the question,
And be of better cheer. Come, taste my wine;

'Tis of an ancient vintage; many a day
'T has thaw'd my veins among our glaciers,
now

Let it do thus for thine—Come, pledge me fairly. 20

Man. Away, away! there's blood upon the brim!

Will it then never—never sink in the earth?

C. Hun. What dost thou mean? thy senses wander from thee.

Man. I say 'tis blood—my blood! the pure warm stream

Which ran in the veins of my fathers, and in ours 25

When we were in our youth, and had one heart,

And loved each other as we should not love,

And this was shed: but still it rises up, Colouring the clouds, that shut me out from heaven,

Where thou art not—and I shall never be.

C. Hun. Man of strange words, and some half-maddening sin, 31

Which makes thee people vacancy, whate'er Thy dread and sufferance be, there's comfort yet—

The aid of holy men, and heavenly patience—

Man. Patience and patience! Hence—that word was made 35

For brutes of burthen, not for birds of prey; Preach it to mortals of a dust like thine,—

I am not of thine order.

C. Hun. Thanks to heaven! I would not be of thine for the free fame

Of William Tell; but whatsoe'er thine ill, It must be borne, and these wild starts are useless. 41

Man. Do I not bear it?—Look on me—I live.

C. Hun. This is convulsion, and no healthful life.

Man. I tell thee, man! I have lived many years,

Many long years, but they are nothing now To those which I must number: ages—

ages— 46

Space and eternity—and consciousness, With the fierce thirst of death—and still unslaked!

C. Hun. Why, on thy brow the seal of middle age

Hath scarce been set; I am thine elder far.

Man. Think'st thou existence doth depend on time? 51

It doth; but actions are our epochs: mine Have made my days and nights imperishable,

Endless, and all alike, as sands on the shore,

Innumerable atoms; and one desert, 55
Barren and cold, on which the wild waves break,

But nothing rests, save carcasses and wrecks,

Rocks, and the salt-surf weeds of bitterness.

C. Hun. Alas! he's mad—but yet I must not leave him.

Man. I would I were—for then the things I see 60

Would be but a distemper'd dream.

C. Hun. What is it That thou dost see, or think thou look'st upon?

Man. Myself, and thee—a peasant of the Alps—

Thy humble virtues, hospitable home, And spirit patient, pious, proud, and free;

Thy self-respect, grafted on innocent thoughts; 66

Thy days of health, and nights of sleep; thy toils,

By danger dignified, yet guiltless; hopes Of cheerful old age and a quiet grave,

With cross and garland over its green turf, 70

And thy grandchildren's love for epitaph; This do I see—and then I look within—

It matters not—my soul was scorched already!

C. Hun. And wouldst thou then exchange thy lot for mine?

Man. No, friend! I would not wrong thee, nor exchange 75

My lot with living being: I can bear— However wretchedly, 'tis still to bear—

In life what others could not brook to dream,

But perish in their slumber.

C. Hun. And with this— This cautious feeling for another's pain,

Canst thou be black with evil?—say not so. 81

Can one of gentle thoughts have wreak'd revenge

Upon his enemies?

Man. Oh! no, no, no! My injuries came down on those who loved me—

On those whom I best loved: I never quell'd An enemy, save in my just defence— 86

But my embrace was fatal.

C. Hun. Heaven give thee rest! And penitence restore thee to thyself;

My prayers shall be for thee.

Man. I need them not— But can endure thy pity. I depart— 90

'Tis time—farewell!—Here's gold, and thanks for thee—

No words—it is thy due.—Follow me not—

I know my path—the mountain peril's past;
And once again I charge thee, follow not!
[Exit MANFRED.]

SCENE II.—A lower Valley in the Alps.—A Cataract.

Enter MANFRED.

It is not noon—the sunbow's rays still arch
The torrent with the many hues of heaven,
And roll the sheeted silver's waving column
O'er the crag's headlong perpendicular,
And fling its lines of foaming light along,
And to and fro, like the pale courser's tail,
The Giant steed, to be bestrode by Death,
As told in the Apocalypse. No eyes⁸
But mine now drink this sight of loveliness;
I should be sole in this sweet solitude,
And with the Spirit of the place divide
The homage of these waters.—I will call¹²
her.

[MANFRED takes some of the water into the palm of his hand, and flings it into the air, muttering the adjuration. After a pause, the WITCH OF THE ALPS rises beneath the arch of the sunbow of the torrent.]

Beautiful Spirit! with thy hair of light,
And dazzling eyes of glory, in whose form
The charms of earth's least mortal daughters grow¹⁵

To an unearthly stature, in an essence Of purer elements; while the hues of
youth,—

Carnation'd like a sleeping infant's cheek, Rock'd by the beating of her mother's
heart,

Or the rose tints, which summer's twilight leaves²⁰

Upon the lofty glacier's virgin snow,
The blush of earth embracing with her
heaven,—

Tinge thy celestial aspect, and make tame
The beauties of the sunbow which bends o'er thee.²⁴

Beautiful Spirit! in thy calm clear brow,
Wherein is heav'd serenity of soul,
Which of itself shows immortality,
I read that thou wilt pardon to a Son Of Earth, whom the abstruser powers permit²⁹

At times to commune with them—if that he Avail him of his spells—to call thee thus,
And gaze on thee a moment.

Witch.

Son of Earth!

I know thee, and the powers which give thee power;

I know thee for a man of many thoughts,
And deeds of good and ill, extreme in both,
Fatal and fated in thy sufferings.³⁶

I have expected this—what wouldst thou
with me?

Man. To look upon thy beauty—nothing further.

The face of the earth hath madden'd me,
and I³⁹

Take refuge in her mysteries, and pierce
To the abodes of those who govern her—
But they can nothing aid me. I have sought
From them what they could not bestow,
and now

I search no further.

Witch. What could be the quest Which is not in the power of the most powerful,⁴⁵

The rulers of the invisible?

Man. A boon;

But why should I repeat it? 'twere in vain.

Witch. I know not that; let thy lips utter it.

Man. Well, though it torture me, 'tis but the same;

My pang shall find a voice. From my youth upwards⁵⁰

My spirit walk'd not with the souls of men,
Nor look'd upon the earth with human
eyes;

The thirst of their ambition was not mine,
The aim of their existence was not mine;
My joys, my griefs, my passions, and my powers,⁵⁵

Made me a stranger; though I wore the
form,

I had no sympathy with breathing flesh,
Nor midst the creatures of clay that girded
me

Was there but one who—but of her anon.
I said with men, and with the thoughts of men,⁶⁰

I held but slight communion; but instead,
My joy was in the wilderness,—to breathe
The difficult air of the iced mountain's top,
Where the birds dare not build, nor insect's wing

Flit o'er the herbless granite; or to plunge
Into the torrent, and to roll along⁶⁶

On the swift whirl of the new breaking
wave

Of river-stream, or ocean, in their flow.

In these my early strength exulted; or
To follow through the night the moving moon,⁷⁰

The stars and their development; or catch
The dazzling lightnings till my eyes grew
dim;

Or to look, list'ning, on the scatter'd leaves,
While Autumn winds were at their evening song.⁷⁴

These were my pastimes, and to be alone;
For if the beings, of whom I was one,—

Hating to be so,—cross'd me in my path,
I felt myself degraded back to them,

And was all clay again. And then I dived,
In my lone wanderings, to the caves of death,⁸⁰

Searching its cause in its effect; and drew From wither'd bones, and skulls, and heap'd up dust,

Conclusions most forbidden. Then I
pass'd

The nights of years in sciences untaught, Save in the old time; and with time and
toil,

And terrible ordeal, and such penance
As in itself hath power upon the air,
And spirits that do compass air and earth,
Space, and the peopled infinite, I made
Mine eyes familiar with Eternity, 90
Such as, before me, did the Magi, and He who from out their fountain dwellings raised

Eros and Anteros, at Gadara,
As I do thee;—and with my knowledge
grew

The thirst of knowledge, and the power and joy 95

Of this most bright intelligence, until—Witch. Proceed.

Man. Oh! I but thus prolong'd
my words,

Boasting these idle attributes, because
As I approach the core of my heart's grief—
But to my task. I have not named to thee Father or mother, mistress, friend, or being, 101

With whom I wore the chain of human
ties;

If I had such, they seem'd not such to me;
Yet there was one—

Witch. Spare not thyself—proceed.

Man. She was like me in lineaments;
her eyes, 105

Her hair, her features, all, to the very tone
Even of her voice, they said were like to
mine;

But soften'd all, and temper'd into beauty:
She had the same lone thoughts and wanderings,

The quest of hidden knowledge, and a
mind 110

To comprehend the universe: nor these Alone, but with them gentler powers than
mine,

Pity, and smiles, and tears—which I had
not;

And tenderness—but that I had for her;
Humility—and that I never had. 115

Her faults were mine—her virtues were her
own—

I loved her, and destroy'd her!

Witch. With thy hand?

Man. Not with my hand, but heart, which broke her heart;

It gazed on mine, and wither'd. I have shed

Blood, but not hers—and yet her blood was shed; 120

I saw—and could not stanch it.

Witch. And for this—

A being of the race thou dost despise,
The order, which thine own would rise
above,

Mingling with us and ours,—thou dost
forego

The gifts of our great knowledge, and shrink'st back 125

To recreant mortality—Away!

Man. Daughter of Air! I tell thee, since that hour—

But words are breath—look on me in my
sleep,

Or watch my watchings—Come and sit by
me! 129

My solitude is solitude no more,
But peopled with the Furies;—I have gnash'd

My teeth in darkness till returning morn, Then cursed myself till sunset;—I have
pray'd 133

For madness as a blessing—'tis denied me.
I have affronted death—but in the war

Of elements the waters shrunk from me,
And fatal things pass'd harmless; the cold
hand

Of an all-pitiless demon held me back, Back by a single hair, which would not
break. 139

In fantasy, imagination, all
The affluence of my soul—which one day
was

A Cæsus in creation—I plunged deep,
But, like an ebbing wave, it dash'd me
back

Into the gulf of my unfathom'd thought.
I plunged amidst mankind—Forgetful-
ness 145

I sought in all, save where 'tis to be found,
And that I have to learn; my sciences,
My long-pursued and superhuman art,

Is mortal here: I dwell in my despair—
And live—and live for ever.

Witch. It may be 150

That I can aid thee.

Man. To do this thy power Must wake the dead, or lay me low with
them.

Do so—in any shape—in any hour—
With any torture—so it be the last.

Witch. That is not in my province;
but if thou 155

Wilt swear obedience to my will, and do My bidding, it may help thee to thy wishes.

Man. I will not swear—Obey! and whom? the spirits

Whose presence I command, and be the
slave

Of those who served me—Never!

Witch. Is this all? 160

Hast thou no gentler answer?—Yet be-think thee,

And pause ere thou rejectest.

Man. I have said it.

Witch. Enough! I may retire then—say!

Man. Retire!

[The WITCH disappears.]

Man. [alone]. We are the fools of time and terror: Days 164
Steal on us, and steal from us; yet we live,
Loathing our life, and dreading still to die.
In all the days of this detested yoke—
This vital weight upon the struggling heart,
Which sinks with sorrow, or beats quick with pain, 169

Or joy that ends in agony or faintness—
In all the days of past and future, for
In life there is no present, we can number How few—how less than few—wherein the soul

Forbears to pant for death, and yet draws
back

As from a stream in winter, though the
chill 175

Be but a moment's. I have one resource
Still in my science—I can call the dead,
And ask them what it is we dread to be:
The sternest answer can but be the Grave,
And that is nothing. If they answer
not— 180

The buried Prophet answered to the Hag
Of Endor; and the Spartan Monarch drew
From the Byzantine maid's unsleeping
spirit

An answer and his destiny—he slew That which he loved, unknowing what he slew, 185

And died unpardon'd—though he call'd in aid

The Phyxian Jove, and in Phigalia roused
The Arcadian Evocators to compel

The indignant shadow to depose her wrath,
Or fix her term of vengeance—she replied
In words of dubious import, but fulfill'd.

If I had never lived, that which I love 192
Had still been living; had I never loved,
That which I love would still be beautiful,

Happy and giving happiness. What is she?
What is she now?—a sufferer for my sins—
A thing I dare not think upon—or nothing.

Within few hours I shall not call in vain—
Yet in this hour I dread the thing I dare:
Until this hour I never shrunk to gaze

On spirit, good or evil—now I tremble,
And feel a strange cold thaw upon my
heart. 202

But I can act even what I most abhor,
And champion human fears.—The night approaches. [Exit.]

SCENE III.—The Summit of the Jungfrau Mountain.

Enter FIRST DESTINY.

The moon is rising broad, and round, and
bright;

And here on snows, where never human foot

Of common mortal trod, we nightly tread,
And leave no traces: o'er the savage sea,
The glassy ocean of the mountain ice, 5

We skim its rugged breakers, which put on
The aspect of a tumbling tempest's foam,
Frozen in a moment—a dead whirlpool's
image:

And this most steep fantastic pinnacle,
The fretwork of some earthquake—where the clouds 10

Pause to repose themselves in passing by—
Is sacred to our revels, or our vigils;
Here do I wait my sisters, on our way
To the Hall of Arimanes, for to-night Is our great festival—'tis strange they come not. 15

A Voice without, singing.

The Captive Usurper, Hurl'd down from the throne,
Lay buried in torpor,
Forgotten and lone;
I broke through his slumbers, 20
I shiver'd his chain,
I leagued him with numbers—
He's Tyrant again!

With the blood of a million he'll answer
my care,

With a nation's destruction—his flight and
despair. 25

Second Voice, without.

The ship sail'd on, the ship sail'd fast,
But I left not a sail, and I left not a mast;
There is not a plank of the hull or the deck,
And there is not a wretch to lament o'er his
wreck;

Save one, whom I held, as he swam, by the
hair, 30

And he was a subject well worthy my care;
A traitor on land, and a pirate at sea—
But I saved him to wreak further havoc for
me!

FIRST DESTINY, answering.

The city lies sleeping;
The morn, to deplore it, 35

May dawn on it weeping:
Sullenly, slowly,

The black plague flew o'er it—
Thousands lie lowly;

Tens of thousands shall perish; 40
The living shall fly from
The sick they should cherish;
But nothing can vanquish

The touch that they die from.
Sorrow and anguish, 45

And evil and dread,
Envelope a nation;

The blest are the dead,
Who see not the sight,
Of their own desolation; 50

This work of a night—
This wreck of a realm—this deed of my doing—

For ages I've done, and shall still be renewing!

Enter the SECOND and THIRD DESTINIES.

The Three.

Our hands contain the hearts of men,
Our footsteps are their graves; 55
We only give to take again
The spirits of our slaves!

First Des. Welcome!—Where's Nemes-
is?

Second Des. At some great work;
But what I know not, for my hands were full. 59

Third Des. Behold she cometh.

Enter NEMESIS.

First Des. Say, where hast thou been?
My sisters and thyself are slow to-night.

Nem. I was detain'd repairing shatter'd
thrones,

Marrying fools, restoring dynasties,
Avenging men upon their enemies,
And making them repent their own revenge; 65

Goading the wise to madness; from the
dull

Shaping out oracles to rule the world
Afresh, for they were waxing out of date,
And mortals dared to ponder for themselves,

To weigh kings in the balance, and to
speak 70

Of freedom, the forbidden fruit.—Away!
We have outstay'd the hour—mount we our clouds! [Exeunt.

SCENE IV.—The Hall of Arimanes—Arimanes on his Throne, a Globe of Fire, surrounded by the Spirits.

Hymn of the SPIRITS.

Hail to our Master!—Prince of Earth and
Air!

Who walks the clouds and waters—in his hand

The sceptre of the elements, which tear Themselves to chaos at his high command!

He breatheth—and a tempest shakes the
sea; 5

He speaketh—and the clouds reply in
thunder;

He gazeth—from his glance the sunbeams
flee;

He moveth—earthquakes rend the world asunder.

Beneath his footsteps the volcanoes rise;
His shadow is the Pestilence; his path

The comets herald through the crackling
skies; 11

And planets turn to ashes at his wrath.
To him War offers daily sacrifice;

To him Death pays his tribute; Life is
his,

With all its infinite of agonies— 15
And his the spirit of whatever is!

Enter the DESTINIES and NEMESIS.

First Des. Glory to Arimanes! on the
earth

His power increaseth—both my sisters did
His bidding, nor did I neglect my duty!

Second Des. Glory to Arimanes! we who bow 20

The necks of men, bow down before his
throne!

Third Des. Glory to Arimanes! we await

His nod!

Nem. Sovereign of Sovereigns! we are
thine,

And all that liveth, more or less, is ours,
And most things wholly so; still to increase 25

Our power, increasing thine, demands our
care,

And we are vigilant. The late commands
Have been fulfill'd to the utmost.

Enter MANFRED.

A Spirit. What is here?
A mortal!—Thou most rash and fatal
wretch, 29

Bow down and worship!
Second Spirit. I do know the man—
A Magian of great power, and fearful skill!

Third Spirit. Bow down and worship,
slave!—

What, know'st thou not Thine and our Sovereign?—Tremble, and obey!

All the Spirits. Prostrate thyself, and thy condemned clay,

Child of the Earth! or dread the worst.
Man. I know it;

And yet ye see I kneel not.
Fourth Spirit. 'Twill be taught thee.

Man. 'Tis taught already;—many a night on the earth,

On the bare ground, have I bow'd down
my face,

And strew'd my head with ashes; I have
known

The fulness of humiliation, for 40
I sunk before my vain despair, and knelt
To my own desolation.

Fifth Spirit. Dost thou dare
Refuse to Arimanes on his throne

What the whole earth accords, beholding
not

The terror of his glory?—Crouch, I say.
Man. Bid him bow down to that which is above him, 46

The overruling Infinite—the Maker
Who made him not for worship—let him
kneel,

And we will kneel together.
The Spirits. Crush the worm!

Tear him in pieces!—

First Des. Hence! avault!—he's mine.
Prince of the Powers invisible! This man
Is of no common order, as his port 52
And presence here denote; his sufferings
Have been of an immortal nature, like
Our own; his knowledge, and his powers and will, 55

As far as is compatible with clay,
Which clogs the ethereal essence, have been such

As clay hath seldom borne; his aspirations
Have been beyond the dwellers of the earth,
And they have only taught him what we
know— 60

That knowledge is not happiness, and science

But an exchange of ignorance for that Which is another kind of ignorance.
This is not all—the passions, attributes
Of earth and heaven, from which no power, nor being, 65

Nor breath from the worm upwards is exempt,

Have pierced his heart, and in their consequence

Made him a thing which I, who pity not,
Yet pardon those who pity. He is mine,
And thine, it may be; be it so, or not,
No other Spirit in this region hath 71

A soul like his—or power upon his soul.

Nem. What doth he here then?

First Des. Let him answer that.
Man. Ye know what I have known; and without power

I could not be amongst ye: but there are Powers deeper still beyond—I come in quest 76

Of such, to answer unto what I seek.

Nem. What wouldst thou?

Man. Thou canst not reply to me.
Call up the dead—my question is for them.

Nem. Great Arimanes, doth thy will avouch 80

The wishes of this mortal?

Ari. Yea.

Nem. Whom wouldst thou Unchangel?

Man. One without a tomb—call up Astarte

NEMESIS.

Shadow! or Spirit!

Whatever thou art,
Which still doth inherit

The whole or a part
Of the form of thy birth,

Of the mould of thy clay,
Which return'd to the earth,

Re-appear to the day!

Bear what thou borest,

The heart and the form,
And the aspect thou worst

Redeem from the worm.

Appear!—Appear!—Appear!

Who sent thee there requires thee here!

[The Phantom of ASTARTE rises and stands in the midst.

Man. Can this be death? there's bloom
upon her cheek;

But now I see it is no living hue,
But a strange hectic—like the unnatural
red 100

Which Autumn plants upon the perish'd
leaf.

It is the same! Oh, God! that I should
dread

To look upon the same—Astarte!—No,
I cannot speak to her—but bid her speak—
Forgive me or condemn me. 105

NEMESIS.

By the power which hath broken
The grave which enthrall'd thee,
Speak to him, who hath spoken,
Or those who have call'd thee!

Man. She is silent, 110

And in that silence I am more than answer'd.

Nem. My power extends no further.
Prince of Air!

It rests with thee alone—command her
voice.

Ari. Spirit—obey this sceptre!

Nem. Silent still!

She is not of our order, but belongs 115
To the other powers. Mortal! thy quest is vain,

And we are baffled also.

Man. Hear me, hear me—

Astarte! my beloved! speak to me:
I have so much endured—so much endure—

Look on me! the grave hath not changed thee more 120

Than I am changed for thee. Thou lovedst
me

Too much, as I loved thee: we were not
made

To torture thus each other, though it were
The deadliest sin to love as we have loved.
Say that thou loath'st me not—that I do
bear 125

This punishment for both—that thou wilt
be

One of the blessed—and that I shall die;

85 For hitherto all hateful things conspire
To bind me in existence—in a life

Which makes me shrink from immortality— 130

A future like the past. I cannot rest.

90 I know not what I ask, nor what I seek:
I feel but what thou art, and what I am;

And I would hear yet once before I perish
The voice which was my music—Speak to
me! 135

95 For I have call'd on thee in the still night,

Startled the slumbering birds from the hush'd boughs,
And woke the mountain wolves, and made the caves

Acquainted with thy vainly echoed name, Which answer'd me—many things an-swer'd me— 140

Spirits and men—but thou wert silent all.
Yet speak to me! I have outwatch'd the
stars,

And gazed o'er heaven in vain in search of
thee.

Speak to me! I have wander'd o'er the
earth,

And never found thy likeness—Speak to
me! 145

Look on the fiends around—they feel for
me:

I fear them not, and feel for thee alone—
Speak to me! though it be in wrath;—but
say—

I reckon not what—but let me hear thee
once—

This once—once more!

Phantom of Astarte. Manfred!

Man. Say on, say on— 150
I live but in the sound—it is thy voice!

Phan. Manfred! To-morrow ends thine earthly ills.

Farewell!

Man. Yet one word more—am I for-
given?

Phan. Farewell!

Man. Say, shall we meet again?

Phan. Farewell!

Man. One word for mercy! Say, thou lovest me. 155

Phan. Manfred!

[The Spirit of ASTARTE disappears.]

Nem. She's gone, and will not be re-
call'd;

Her words will be fulfill'd. Return to the earth.

A Spirit. He is convulsed.—This is to be a mortal

And seek the things beyond mortality.

Another Spirit. Yet, see, he mastereth himself, and makes 160

His torture tributary to his will.

Had he been one of us, he would have
made

An awful spirit.

Nem. Hast thou further question
Of our great sovereign, or his worshippers?

Man. None.

Nem. Then, for a time, farewell. 165

Man. We meet then! Where? On the
earth?—

Even as thou wilt: and for the grace accorded

I now depart a debtor. Fare ye well!

[Exit MANFRED.]

(Scene closes.)

ACT III

SCENE I.—A Hall in the Castle of Manfred.

MANFRED and HERMAN.

Man. What is the hour?

Her. It wants but one till sunset,
And promises a lovely twilight.

Man. Say,
Are all things so disposed of in the tower
As I directed?

Her. All, my lord, are ready:
Here is the key and casket.

Man. It is well: 5
Thou may'st retire. [Exit HERMAN.]

Man. [alone]. There is a calm upon
me—

Inexplicable stillness! which till now
Did not belong to what I knew of life.
If that I did not know philosophy 9
To be of all our vanities the motliest,
The merest word that ever fool'd the ear
From out the schoolman's jargon, I should deem

The golden secret, the sought 'Kalon',
found,

And seated in my soul. It will not last,
But it is well to have known it, though but
once: 15

It hath enlarged my thoughts with a new
sense,

And I within my tablets would note down
That there is such a feeling. Who is there?

Re-enter HERMAN.

Her. My lord, the abbot of St. Maurice
craves

To greet your presence.

Enter the ABBOT OF ST. MAURICE.

Abbot. Peace be with Count Manfred!

Man. Thanks, holy father! welcome to these walls; 21

Thy presence honours them, and blesseth
those

Who dwell within them.

Abbot. Would it were so, Count!—
But I would fain confer with thee alone.

Man. Herman, retire.—What would my reverend guest? 25

Abbot. Thus, without prelude:—Age and zeal, my office,

And good intent, must plead my privilege;
Our near, though not acquainted neighbourhood,

May also be my herald. Rumours strange,
And of unholy nature, are abroad, 30
And busy with thy name; a noble name
For centuries: may he who bears it now Transmit it unimpaired!

Man. Proceed,—I listen.

Abbot. 'Tis said thou holdest converse with the things 34

Which are forbidden to the search of man;

That with the dwellers of the dark abodes,
The many evil and unheavenly spirits Which walk the valley of the shade of
death,

Thou communest. I know that with man-
kind, 39

Thy fellows in creation, thou dost rarely Exchange thy thoughts, and that thy solitude

Is as an anchorite's, were it but holy.

Man. And what are they who do avouch these things?

Abbot. My pious brethren—the scared peasantry—

Even thy own vassals—who do look on
thee 45

With most unquiet eyes. Thy life's in peril.

Man. Take it.

Abbot. I come to save, and not destroy:
I would not pry into thy secret soul;
But if these things be sooth, there still is
time

For penitence and pity: reconcile thee
With the true church, and through the church to heaven. 51

Man. I hear thee. This is my reply:
whate'er

I may have been, or am, doth rest between Heaven and myself. I shall not choose a mortal

To be my mediator. Have I sinn'd 55 Against your ordinances? prove and punish!

Abbot. My son! I did not speak of punishment,

But penitence and pardon;—with thyself
The choice of such remains—and for the
last, 59

Our institutions and our strong belief
Have given me power to smoothe the path from sin

To higher hope and better thoughts; the first

I leave to heaven,—‘Vengeance is mine
alone!’

So saith the Lord, and with all humbleness
His servant echoes back the awful word.

Man. Old man! there is no power in holy men, 66

Nor charm in prayer, nor purifying form
Of penitence, nor outward look, nor fast,
Nor agony—nor, greater than all these,
The innate tortures of that deep despair,
Which is remorse without the fear of
hell, 71

But all in all sufficient to itself
Would make a hell of heaven—can exor-
cise

From out the unbounded spirit the quick
sense

Of its own sins, wrongs, sufferance, and revenge 75

Upon itself; there is no future pang

Can deal that justice on the self-condemn'd
He deals on his own soul.

Abbot.

All this is well;
For this will pass away, and be succeeded
By an auspicious hope, which shall look up
With calm assurance to that blessed place,
Which all who seek may win, whatever be
Their earthly errors, so they be atoned:

And the commencement of atonement is
The sense of its necessity. Say on— 85
And all our church can teach thee shall be
taught;

And all we can absolve thee shall be par-don'd.

Man. When Rome's sixth emperor was near his last,

The victim of a self-inflicted wound,
To shun the torments of a public death
From senates once his slaves, a certain soldier, 91

With show of loyal pity, would have stanch'd

The gushing throat with his officious robe;
The dying Roman thrust him back, and
said— 94

Some empire still in his expiring glance—
‘It is too late—is this fidelity?’

Abbot. And what of this?

Man. I answer with the Roman—
‘It is too late!’

Abbot. It never can be so,

To reconcile thyself with thy own soul,
And thy own soul with heaven. Hast thou no hope? 100

‘Tis strange—even those who do despair
above,

Yet shape themselves some fantasy on
earth,

To which frail twig they cling, like drowning men.

Man. Ay—father! I have had those earthly visions, 104

And noble aspirations in my youth,
To make my own the mind of other men,
The enlightener of nations; and to rise
I knew not whither—it might be to fall;
But fall, even as the mountain-cataract,
Which having leapt from its more dazzling
height, 110

Even in the foaming strength of its abyss, (Which casts up misty columns that be-
come

Clouds raining from the re-ascended skies,)
Lies low but mighty still.—But this is past,
My thoughts mistook themselves.

Abbot. And wherefore so? 115

Man. I could not tame my nature down;
for he

Must serve who fain would sway; and soothe, and sue,

And watch all time, and pry into all place,
And be a living lie, who would become

A mighty thing amongst the mean, and
such 120

The mass are; I disdain'd to mingle with A herd, though to be leader—and of wolves.

The lion is alone, and so am I.

Abbot. And why not live and act with other men?

Man. Because my nature was averse from life; 125

And yet not cruel; for I would not make,
But find a desolation. Like the wind,
The red-hot breath of the most lone simoom,

Which dwells but in the desert, and sweeps
o'er

The barren sands which bear no shrubs to
blast, 130

And revels o'er their wild and arid waves,
And seeketh not, so that it is not sought,
But being met is deadly,—such hath been
The course of my existence; but there came Things in my path which are no more.

Abbot. Alas! 135

I 'gin to fear that thou art past all aid
From me and from my calling; yet so
young,

I still would—

Man. Look on me! there is an order
Of mortals on the earth, who do become Old in their youth, and die ere middle age,
Without the violence of warlike death;
Some perishing of pleasure, some of study,
Some worn with toil, some of mere weariness,

Some of disease, and some insanity,
And some of wither'd or of broken hearts;
For this last is a malady which slays 146
More than are number'd in the lists of
Fate,

Taking all shapes, and bearing many names.

Look upon me! for even of all these things
Have I partaken; and of all these things,
One were enough; then wonder not that I Am what I am, but that I ever was, 152
Or having been, that I am still on earth.

Abbot. Yet, hear me still—

Man. Old man! I do respect Thine order, and revere thine years; I deem Thy purpose pious, but it is in vain: 156
Think me not churlish; I would spare thyself,

Far more than me, in shunning at this time
All further colloquy—and so—farewell.

[Exit MANFRED.]

Abbot. This should have been a noble creature: he 160

Hath all the energy which would have made
A goodly frame of glorious elements,
Had they been wisely mingled; as it is,
It is an awful chaos—light and darkness,
And mind and dust, and passions and pure
thoughts 165

Mix'd, and contending without end or
order,—

All dormant or destructive; he will perish,
And yet he must not; I will try once more.
For such are worth redemption; and my duty 169

Is to dare all things for a righteous end.

I'll follow him—but cautiously, though surely. [Exit ABBOT.]

SCENE II.—Another Chamber.

MANFRED and HERMAN.

Her. My lord, you bade me wait on you at sunset:

He sinks behind the mountain.

Man. Doth he so?

I will look on him. [MANFRED advances to the window of the Hall.

Glorious Orb! the idol

Of early nature, and the vigorous race

Of undiseased mankind, the giant sons 5

Of the embrace of angels, with a sex

More beautiful than they, which did draw
down

The erring spirits who can ne'er return.—

Most glorious orb! that wert a worship, ere

The mystery of thy making was reveal'd!

Thou earliest minister of the Almighty,

Which gladden'd, on their mountain tops,
the hearts 12

Of the Chaldean shepherds, till they pour'd

Themselves in orisons! Thou material
God!

And representative of the Unknown—

Who chose thee for his shadow! Thou chief
star! 16

Centre of many stars! which mak'st our
earth

Endurable, and temperest the hues

And hearts of all who walk within thy rays!

Sire of the seasons! Monarch of the climes,

And those who dwell in them! for near or
far, 21

Our inborn spirits have a tint of thee

Even as our outward aspects;—thou dost
rise,

And shine, and set in glory. Fare thee well!

I ne'er shall see thee more. As my first
glance 25

Of love and wonder was for thee, then take

My latest look; thou wilt not beam on one

To whom the gifts of life and warmth have
been

Of a more fatal nature. He is gone:

I follow. [Exit MANFRED.]

SCENE III.—The Mountains—The Castle of Manfred at some distance—A Terrace before a Tower—Time, Twi- light.

HERMAN, MANUEL, and other Dependants of MANFRED.

Her. 'Tis strange enough; night after night, for years,

He hath pursued long vigils in this tower,
Without a witness. I have been within it,—
So have we all been oft-times; but from it,
Or its contents, it were impossible⁵
To draw conclusions absolute, of aught
His studies tend to. To be sure, there is One chamber where none enter: I would give

The fee of what I have to come these three
years,

To pore upon its mysteries.

Manuel. 'Twere dangerous;¹⁰ Content thyself with what thou know'st already.

Her. Ah! Manuel! thou art elderly and
wise,

And couldst say much; thou hast dwelt within the castle—

How many years is 't?

Manuel. Ere Count Manfred's birth,
I served his father, whom he nought resembles.¹⁵

Her. There be more sons in like predicament.

But wherein do they differ?

Manuel. I speak not
Of features or of form, but mind and habits;

Count Sigismund was proud, but gay and
free,—

A warrior and a reveller; he dwelt not With books and solitude, nor made the night²¹

A gloomy vigil, but a festal time, Merrier than day; he did not walk the
rocks

And forests like a wolf, nor turn aside
From men and their delights.

Her. Beshrew the hour,²⁵
But those were jocund times! I would that
such

Would visit the old walls again; they look
As if they had forgotten them.

Manuel. These walls Must change their chieftain first. Oh! I have seen

Some strange things in them, Herman.

Her. Come, be friendly;³⁰
Relate me some to while away our watch:
I've heard thee darkly speak of an event
Which happen'd hereabouts, by this same
tower.

Manuel. That was a night indeed! I do remember

'Twas twilight, as it may be now, and such Another evening;—yon red cloud, which rests³⁶

On Eigher's pinnacle, so rested then,—
So like that it might be the same; the wind
Was faint and gusty, and the mountain
snows

Began to glitter with the climbing moon; Count Manfred was, as now, within his tower,—⁴¹

How occupied, we knew not, but with him
The sole companion of his wanderings
And watchings—her, whom of all earthly
things

That lived, the only thing he seem'd to love,—⁴⁵

As he, indeed, by blood was bound to do,
The lady Astarte, his—

Hush! who comes here?

Enter the ABBOT.

Abbot. Where is your master?

Her. Yonder in the tower.

Abbot. I must speak with him.

Manuel. 'Tis impossible;
He is most private, and must not be thus Intruded on.

Abbot. Upon myself I take
The forfeit of my fault, if fault there be—
But I must see him.

Her. Thou hast seen him once
This eve already.

Abbot. Herman! I command thee, Knock, and apprise the Count of my approach.⁵⁵

Her. We dare not.

Abbot. Then it seems I must be herald
Of my own purpose.

Manuel. Reverend father, stop—
I pray you pause.

Abbot. Why so?

Manuel. But step this way,
And I will tell you further. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Interior of the Tower.

MANFRED alone.

The stars are forth, the moon above the tops
Of the snow-shining mountains.—Beautiful!

I linger yet with Nature, for the Night
Hath been to me a more familiar face
Than that of man; and in her starry shade
Of dim and solitary loveliness,⁶

I learn'd the language of another world.
I do remember me, that in my youth,

When I was wandering,—upon such a night
I stood within the Coliseum's wall,¹⁰

'Midst the chief relics of almighty Rome;
The trees which grew along the broken arches

Waved dark in the blue midnight, and the stars

Shone through the rents of ruin; from afar
The watch-dog bay'd beyond the Tiber;

and¹⁵
More near from out the Cæsars' palace
came

The owl's long cry, and, interruptedly,
Of distant sentinels the fitful song
Begun and died upon the gentle wind.

Some cypresses beyond the time-worn breach²⁰

Appear'd to skirt the horizon, yet they stood Within a bowshot. Where the Cæsars dwelt,
 And dwell the tuneless birds of night, amidst
 A grove which springs through levell'd battlements,
 And twines its roots with the imperial hearths, 25
 Ivy usurps the laurel's place of growth;
 But the gladiators' bloody Circus stands,
 A noble wreck in ruinous perfection,
 While Cæsar's chambers, and the Augustan halls,
 Grovel on earth in indistinct decay. 30
 And thou didst shine, thou rolling moon, upon
 All this, and cast a wide and tender light,
 Which soften'd down the hoar austerity
 Of rugged desolation, and fill'd up, 34
 As 'twere anew, the gaps of centuries;
 Leaving that beautiful which still was so,
 And making that which was not, till the place
 Became religion, and the heart ran o'er
 With silent worship of the great of old,—
 The dead but sceptred sovereigns, who still rule 40
 Our spirits from their urns.
 'Twas such a night!
 'Tis strange that I recall it at this time;
 But I have found our thoughts take wildest flight
 Even at the moment when they should array Themselves in pensive order.

Enter the ABBOT.

Abbot. My good lord! 45
 I crave a second grace for this approach;
 But yet let not my humble zeal offend
 By its abruptness—all it hath of ill
 Recoils on me; its good in the effect
 May light upon your head—could I say
 heart— 50
 Could I touch that, with words or prayers, I should
 Recall a noble spirit which hath wander'd;
 But is not yet all lost.
Man. Thou know'st me not;
 My days are number'd, and my deeds recorded: 54
 Retire, or 'twill be dangerous—Away!
Abbot. Thou dost not mean to menace me?
Man. Not I;
 I simply tell thee peril is at hand,
 And would preserve thee.
Abbot. What dost thou mean?
Man. Look there!
 What dost thou see?
Abbot. Nothing.
Man. Look there I say,
 And steadfastly;—now tell me what thou
 seest? 60

Abbot. That which should shake me, but I fear it not:
 I see a dusk and awful figure rise,
 Like an infernal god, from out the earth;
 His face wrapt in a mantle, and his form Robed as with angry clouds: he stands between 65
 Thyself and me—but I do fear him not.
Man. Thou hast no cause—he shall not harm thee—but His sight may shock thine old limbs into palsy.
 I say to thee—Retire!
Abbot. And I reply—
 Never—till I have battled with this fiend:— 70
 What doth he here?
Man. Why—ay—what doth he here?
 I did not send for him,—he is unbidden.
Abbot. Alas! lost mortal! what with guests like these Hast thou to do? I tremble for thy sake:
 Why doth he gaze on thee, and thou on
 him? 75
 Ah! he unveils his aspect: on his brow
 The thunder-scars are graven: from his eye
 Glares forth the immortality of hell—
 Avaunt!—
Man. Pronounce—what is thy mission?
Spirit. Come!
Abbot. What art thou, unknown being? answer!—speak! 80
Spirit. The genius of this mortal.—
 Come! 'tis time.
Man. I am prepared for all things, but
 deny
 The power which summons me. Who sent thee here?
Spirit. Thou'lt know anon—Come!
 come!
Man. I have commanded Things of an essence greater far than
 thine, 85
 And striven with thy masters. Get thee
 hence!
Spirit. Mortal! thine hour is come—Away! I say.
Man. I knew, and know my hour is come, but not
 To render up my soul to such as thee:
 Away! I'll die as I have lived—alone. 90 Spirit. Then I must summon up my brethren.—Rise!
 [Other Spirits rise up.
Abbot. Avaunt! ye evil ones!—
 Avaunt! I say;
 Ye have no power where piety hath power,
 And I do charge ye in the name—Spirit. Old man!
 We know ourselves, our mission, and thine order; 95
 Waste not thy holy words on idle uses,
 It were in vain: this man is forfeited.
 Once more I summon him—Away! Away!

Man. I do defy ye,—though I feel my soul
Is ebbing from me, yet I do defy ye;
Nor will I hence, while I have earthly breath
To breathe my scorn upon ye—earthly strength
To wrestle, though with spirits; what ye take

Shall be ta'en limb by limb. 103

Spirit. Reluctant mortal!
Is this the Magian who would so pervade
The world invisible, and make himself
Almost our equal? Can it be that thou Art thus in love with life? the very life
Which made thee wretched!

Man. Thou false fiend, thou liest!
My life is in its last hour,—that I know,
Nor would redeem a moment of that hour;
I do not combat against death, but thee
And thy surrounding angels; my past power,
Was purchased by no compact with thy crew,

But by superior science—penance, daring,
And length of watching, strength of mind,
and skill 116
In knowledge of our fathers—when the earth

Saw men and spirits walking side by side,
And gave ye no supremacy: I stand 119
Upon my strength—I do defy—deny—Spurn back, and scorn ye!—

Spirit. But thy many crimes
Have made thee——

Man. What are they to such as thee?
Must crimes be punish'd but by other crimes,
And greater criminals?—Back to thy hell!
Thou hast no power upon me, that I feel;
Thou never shalt possess me, that I know:
What I have done is done; I bear within A torture which could nothing gain from
thee; 128

The mind which is immortal makes itself
Requital for its good or evil thoughts,—
Is its own origin of ill and end— 131
And its own place and time: its innate sense,

When stripp'd of this mortality, derives
No colour from the fleeting things without,
But is absorb'd in sufferance or in joy,
Born from the knowledge of its own desert. 136

Thou didst not tempt me, and thou couldst not tempt me;

I have not been thy dupe, nor am thy
prey—

But was my own destroyer, and will be My own hereafter.—Back, ye baffled fiends!— 140

The hand of death is on me—but not yours!
[The Demons disappear.]

Abbot. Alas! how pale thou art—thy lips are white—

And thy breast heaves—and in thy gasping throat

The accents rattle: Give thy prayers to
heaven—

Pray—albeit but in thought,—but die not
thus. 145

Man. 'Tis over—my dull eyes can fix
thee not;

But all things swim around me, and the
earth

Heaves as it were beneath me. Fare thee
well!

Give me thy hand.

Abbot. Cold—cold—even to the heart—
But yet one prayer—Alas! how fares it
with thee? 150

Man. Old man! 'tis not so difficult to die. [MANFRED expires.]

Abbot. He's gone—his soul hath ta'en its earthless flight;

Whither? I dread to think—but he is
gone.

MARINO FALIERO, DOGE OF VENICE

AN HISTORICAL TRAGEDY IN FIVE ACTS

'Dux inquieti turbidus Adriæ.'—HORACE.

PREFACE

THE conspiracy of the Doge Marino Faliero is one of the most remarkable events in the annals of the most singular government, city, and people of modern history. It occurred in the year 1355. Everything about Venice is, or was, extraordinary—her aspect is like a dream, and her history is like a romance. The story of this Doge is to be found in all her Chronicles, and particularly detailed in the 'Lives of the Doges,' by Marin Sanuto, which is given in the Appendix. It is simply and clearly related, and is perhaps more dramatic in itself than any scenes which can be founded upon the subject.

Marino Faliero appears to have been a man of talents and of courage. I find him commander-in-chief of the land forces at the siege of Zara, where he beat the King of Hungary and his army of eighty thousand men, killing eight thousand men, and keeping the besieged at the same time in check, an exploit to which I know none similar in history, except that of Cæsar at Alesia, and of Prince Eugene at Belgrade. He was afterwards commander of the fleet in the same war. He took Capo d'Istria. He was ambassador at Genoa and Rome,—at which last he received the news of his election to the dukedom; his absence being a proof that he sought it by no intrigue, since he was apprised of his predecessor's death and his own succession at the same moment. But he appears to have been of an ungovernable temper. A story is told by Sanuto, of his having, many years before, when podesta and captain at Treviso, boxed the ears of the bishop, who was somewhat tardy in bringing the Host. For this, honest Sanuto 'saddles him with a judgment,' as Thwackum did Square; but he does not tell us whether he was punished or rebuked by the Senate for this outrage at the time of its commission. He seems, indeed, to have been afterwards at peace with the church, for we find him ambassador at Rome, and invested with the fief of Val di Marino, in the march of Treviso, and with the title of count, by Lorenzo Count-bishop of Ceneda. For these facts my authorities are Sanuto, Vettor Sandi, Andrea Navagero, and the account of the siege of Zara, first published by the indefatigable Abate Morelli, in his 'Monumenti Veneziani di varia Letteratura,' printed in 1796, all of which I have looked over in the original language. The moderns, Daru, Sismondi, and Laugier, nearly agree with the ancient chroniclers. Sismondi attributes the conspiracy to his jealousy; but I find this nowhere asserted by the national historians. Vettor Sandi, indeed, says, that 'Altri scrissero che . . . dalla gelosa suspizion di esso Doge siasi fatto (Michel Steno) staccar con violenza,' &c. &c.; but this appears to have been by no means the general opinion, nor is it alluded to by Sanuto, or by Navagero: and Sandi himself adds, a moment after, that 'per altre Veneziane memorie traspiri, che non il solo desiderio di vendetta lo dispose alla congiura ma anche la innata abituale ambizion sua, per cui anelava a farsi principe indipendente.' The first motive appears to have been excited by the gross affront of the words written by Michel Steno on the ducal chair, and by the light and inadequate sentence of the Forty on the offender, who was one of their 'tre Capi.' The attentions of Steno himself appear to have been directed towards one of her damsels, and not to the 'Dogaressa' herself, against whose fame not the slightest insinuation appears, while she is praised for her beauty, and remarked for her youth. Neither do I find it asserted (unless the hint of Sandi be an assertion), that the Doge was actuated by jealousy of his wife; but rather by respect for her, and for his own honour, warranted by his past services and present dignity.

I know not that the historical facts are alluded to in English, unless by Dr. Moore in his View of Italy. His account is false and flippant, full of stale jests about old men and young wives, and wondering at so great an effect from so slight a cause. How so acute and severe an observer of mankind as the author of Zeluco could wonder at this is inconceivable. He knew that a basin of water spilt on Mrs. Masham's gown deprived the Duke of Marlborough of his command, and led to the inglorious peace of Utrecht—that Louis XIV. was plunged into the most desolating wars, because his minister was nettled at his finding fault with a window, and wished to give him another occupation—that Helen lost Troy—that Lucretia expelled the Tarquins from Rome—and that Cava brought the Moors to Spain—that an insulted husband led the Gauls to Clusium, and thence to Rome—that a single verse of Frederick II. of Prussia on the Abbé de Bernis, and a jest on Madame de Pompadour, led to the battle of Rosbach—that the elopement of Dearbhorgil with Mac Murchad conducted the English to the slavery of Ireland—that a personal pique between Maria Antoinette and the Duke of Orleans precipitated the first expulsion of the Bourbons—and, not to multiply instances, that Commodus, Domitian, and Caligula fell victims not to their public tyranny, but to private vengeance—and that an order to make Cromwell disembark from the ship in which he would have sailed to America destroyed both King and Commonwealth. After these instances, on the least reflection, it is indeed extraordinary in Dr. Moore to seem surprised that a man used to command, who had served and swayed in the most important offices, should fiercely resent, in a fierce age, an unpunished affront, the grossest that can be offered to a man, be he prince or peasant. The age of Faliero is little to the purpose, unless to favour it—

*'The young man's wrath is like straw on fire,
But like red-hot steel is the old man's ire.'*

'Young men soon give and soon forget affronts, Old age is slow at both.'

Laugier's reflections are more philosophical:—'Tale fù il fine ignominioso di un' uomo, che la sua

nascità, la sua età, il suo carattere dovevano tener lontano dalle passioni produttrici di grandi delitti. I suoi talenti per lungo tempo esercitati ne' maggiori impieghi, la sua capacità sperimentata ne' governi e nelle ambasciate, gli avevano acquistato la stima e la fiducia de' cittadini, ed avevano uniti i suffragj per collocarlo alla testa della repubblica. Innalzato ad un grado che terminava gloriosamente la sua vita, il risentimento di un' ingiuria leggiera insinuò nel suo cuore tal veleno che bastò a corrompere le antiche sue qualità, e a condurlo al termine dei scellerati; serio esempio, che prova non esservi età, in cui la prudenza umana sia sicura, e che nell' uomo restano sempre passioni capaci a disonorarlo, quando non invigili sopra se stesso*.

Where did Dr. Moore find that Marino Faliero begged his life? I have searched the chroniclers, and find nothing of the kind: it is true that he avowed all. He was conducted to the place of torture, but there is no mention made of any application for mercy on his part; and the very circumstance of their having taken him to the rack seems to argue anything but his having shown a want of firmness, which would doubtless have been also mentioned by those minute historians, who by no means favour him: such, indeed, would be contrary to his character as a soldier, to the age in which he lived, and at which he died, as it is to the truth of history. I know no justification, at any distance of time, for calumniating an historical character: surely truth belongs to the dead, and to the unfortunate; and they who have died upon a scaffold have generally had faults enough of their own, without attributing to them that which the very incurring of the perils which conducted them to their violent death renders, of all others, the most improbable. The black veil which is painted over the place of Marino Faliero amongst the Doges, and the Giants' Staircase where he was crowned, and disrowned, and decapitated, struck forcibly upon my imagination; as did his fiery character and strange story. I went, in 1819, in search of his tomb more than once to the church San Giovanni e San Paolo; and, as I was standing before the monument of another family, a priest came up to me and said, 'I can show you finer monuments than that.' I told him that I was in search of that of the Faliero family, and particularly of the Doge Marino's. 'Oh,' said he, 'I will show it you'; and conducting me to the outside, pointed out a sarcophagus in the wall with an illegible inscription. He said that it had been in a convent adjoining, but was removed after the French came, and placed in its present situation; that he had seen the tomb opened at its removal; there were still some bones remaining, but no positive vestige of the decapitation. The equestrian statue of which I have made mention in the third act as before that church is not, however, of a Faliero, but of some other now obsolete warrior, although of a later date. There were two other Doges of this family prior to Marino; Ordelafo, who fell in battle at Zara, in 1117 (where his descendant afterwards conquered the Huns), and Vital Faliero, who reigned in 1082. The family, originally from Fano, was of the most illustrious in blood and wealth in the city of once the most wealthy and still the most ancient families in Europe. The length I have gone into on this subject will show the interest I have taken in it. Whether I have succeeded or not in the tragedy, I have at least transferred into our language an historical fact worthy of commemoration.

It is now four years that I have meditated this work; and before I had sufficiently examined the records, I was rather disposed to have made it turn on a jealousy in Faliero. But, perceiving no foundation for this in historical truth, and aware that jealousy is an exhausted passion in the drama, I have given it a more historical form. I was, besides, well advised by the late Matthew Lewis on that point, in talking with him of my intention at Venice in 1817. 'If you make him jealous,' said he, 'recollect that you have to contend with established writers, to say nothing of Shakspeare, and an exhausted subject:—stick to the old fiery Doge's natural character, which will bear you out, if properly drawn; and make your plot as regular as you can.' Sir William Drummond gave me nearly the same counsel. How far I have followed these instructions, or whether they have availed me, is not for me to decide. I have had no view to the stage; in its present state it is, perhaps, not a very exalted object of ambition; besides, I have been too much behind the scenes to have thought it so at any time. And I cannot conceive any man of irritable feeling putting himself at the mercies of an audience. The sneering reader, and the loud critic, and the tart review, are scattered and distant calamities; but the trampling of an intelligent or of an ignorant audience on a production which, be it good or bad, has been a mental labour to the writer, is a palpable and immediate grievance, heightened by a man's doubt of their competency to judge, and his certainty of his own imprudence in electing them his judges. Were I capable of writing a play which could be deemed stage-worthy, success would give me no pleasure, and failure great pain. It is for this reason that, even during the time of being one of the committee of one of the theatres, I never made the attempt, and never will. But surely there is dramatic power somewhere, where Joanna Baillie, and Milman, and John Wilson exist. The 'City of the Plague' and the 'Fall of Jerusalem' are all of the best materiel for tragedy that has been seen since Horace Walpole, except passages of Ethwald and De Montfort. It is the fashion to underrate Horace Walpole; firstly, because he was a nobleman, and secondly, because he was a gentleman; but, to say nothing of the composition of his incomparable letters, and of the 'Castle of Otranto,' he is the 'Ultimus Romanorum,' the author of the 'Mysterious Mother,' a tragedy of the highest order, and not a puling love-play. He is the father of the first romance and of the last tragedy in our language, and surely worthy of a higher place than any living writer, be he who he may.

In speaking of the drama of 'Marino Faliero,' I forgot to mention, that the desire of preserving, though still too remote, a nearer approach to unity than the irregularity, which is the reproach of the English theatrical compositions, permits, has induced me to represent the conspiracy as already formed, and the Doge acceding to it; whereas, in fact, it was of his own preparation, and that of Israel Bertuccio. The other characters (except that of the Duchess), incidents, and almost the time, which was wonderfully short for such a design in real life, are strictly historical, except that all the consultations took place in the palace. Had I followed this, the unity would have been better preserved; but I wished to produce the Doge in the full assembly of the conspirators, instead of monotonously placing him always in dialogue with the same individuals. For the real facts, I refer to the Appendix.

ACT I

SCENE I.—An Antechamber in the Ducal Palace.

PIETRO speaks, in entering, to BATTISTA.

Pie. Is not the messenger return'd?

Bat. Not yet;

I have sent frequently, as you commanded,
But still the Signory is deep in council,
And long debate on Steno's accusation.

Pie. Too long—at least so thinks the Doge.

Bat. How bears he
These moments of suspense?

Pie. With struggling patience.
Placed at the ducal table, cover'd o'er
With all the apparel of the state; petitions, Despatches, judgments, acts, reprieves,
reports,

He sits as rapt in duty; but whene'er
He hears the jarring of a distant door,
Or aught that intimates a coming step,
Or murmur of a voice, his quick eye
wanders,

And he will start up from his chair, then
pause,

And seat himself again, and fix his gaze
Upon some edict; but I have observed
For the last hour he has not turned a leaf.

Bat. 'Tis said he is much moved,—and doubtless 'twas

Foul scorn in Steno to offend so grossly.

Pie. Ay, if a poor man: Steno's a patrician,

Young, galliard, gay, and haughty.

Bat. Then you think
He will not be judged hardly?

Pie. 'Twere enough
He be judged justly, but 'tis not for us
To anticipate the sentence of the Forty.

Bat. And here it comes.—What news, Vincenzo?

Enter VINCENZO.

Vin. 'Tis
Decided; but as yet his doom's unknown:

I saw the president in act to seal
The parchment which will bear the Forty's judgment
Unto the Doge, and hasten to inform him.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Ducal Chamber.

MARINO FALIERO, Doge; and his Nephew,
BERTUCCIO FALIERO.

Ber. F. It cannot be but they will do you justice.

Doge. Ay, such as the Avogadori did,
Who sent up my appeal unto the Forty
To try him by his peers, his own tribunal.

Ber. F. His peers will scarce protect him; such an act

Would bring contempt on all authority.

Doge. Know you not Venice? Know you not the Forty?

But we shall see anon.

Ber. F. [addressing VINCENZO, then entering]. How now—what tidings?

Vin. I am charged to tell his highness that the court

Has pass'd its resolution, and that, soon
As the due forms of judgment are gone
through,

The sentence will be sent up to the Doge;
In the mean time the Forty doth salute

The Prince of the Republic, and entreat

His acceptance of their duty.

Doge. Yes—

They are wondrous dutiful, and ever humble.

Sentence is pass'd, you say?

Vin. It is, your highness:
The president was sealing it, when I

Was call'd in, that no moment might be lost
In forwarding the intimation due

Not only to the Chief of the Republic,
But the complainant, both in one united.

Ber. F. Are you aware, from aught you have perceived,
Of their decision?

Vin. No, my lord; you know
The secret custom of the courts in Venice.

Ber. F. True; but there still is something given to guess, 26
Which a shrewd gleaner and quick eye would catch at;

A whisper, or a murmur, or an air
More or less solemn spread o'er the tribunal.

The Forty are but men—most worthy men,
And wise, and just, and cautious—this I grant— 31

And secret as the grave to which they doom

The guilty: but with all this, in their aspects—

At least in some, the juniors of the number—

A searching eye, an eye like yours, Vincenzo, 35

Would read the sentence ere it was pronounced.

Vin. My lord, I came away upon the moment,

And had no leisure to take note of that
Which pass'd among the judges, even in seeming;

My station near the accused too, Michel Steno, 40

Made me—

Doge [abruptly]. And how look'd he? deliver that.

Vin. Calm, but not overcast, he stood resign'd

To the decree, whate'er it were;—but lo!
It comes, for the perusal of his highness.

Enter the SECRETARY of the Forty.

Sec. The high tribunal of the Forty sends 45

Health and respect to the Doge Faliero,
Chief magistrate of Venice, and requests

His highness to peruse and to approve
The sentence pass'd on Michel Steno, born

Patrician, and arraign'd upon the charge
Contain'd, together with its penalty, 51

Within the rescript which I now present.
Doge. Retire, and wait without.

Exeunt SECRETARY and VINCENZO.

Take thou this paper:
The misty letters vanish from my eyes;
I cannot fix them.

Ber. F. Patience, my dear uncle: 55
Why do you tremble thus?—nay, doubt not, all

Will be as could be wish'd.

Doge. Say on.

Ber. F. [reading]. 'Decreed
In council, without one dissenting voice,

That Michel Steno, by his own confession,
Guilty on the last night of Carnival 60

Of having graven on the ducal throne
The following words—'

Doge. Wouldst thou repeat them?
Wouldst thou repeat them—thou, a Fali-ero,

Harp on the deep dishonour of our house,
Dishonour'd in its chief—that chief the prince 65
Of Venice, first of cities?—To the sentence.

Ber. F. Forgive me, my good lord; I will obey—

[Reads]. 'That Michel Steno be detain'd a month

In close arrest.'

Doge. Proceed.

Ber. F. My Lord, 'tis finish'd.
Doge. How say you?—finish'd! Do I dream?—'tis false— 70

Give me the paper—[Snatches the paper and reads]—'Tis decreed in council

That Michael Steno'—Nephew, thine arm!

Ber. F. Nay,
Cheer up, be calm; this transport is uncall'd for—

Let me seek some assistance.

Doge. Stop, sir—Stir not—
'Tis past.

Ber. F. I cannot but agree with you 75
The sentence is too slight for the offence;

It is not honourable in the Forty
To affix so slight a penalty to that

Which was a foul affront to you, and even
To them, as being your subjects; but 'tis 80

not Yet without remedy: you can appeal

To them once more, or to the Avogadori,
Who, seeing that true justice is withheld,

Will now take up the cause they once declined,

And do you right upon the bold delinquent. 85

Think you not thus, good uncle? why do you stand

So fix'd? You heed me not:—I pray you, hear me!

Doge [dashing down the Ducal bonnet, and offering to trample upon it, exclaims, as he is withheld by his nephew].

Oh! that the Saracen were in St. Mark's!
Thus would I do him homage.

Ber. F. For the sake
Of Heaven and all its saints, my lord—

Doge. Away!

Oh, that the Genoese were in the port!
Oh, that the Huns whom I o'erthrew at

Zara 92

Were ranged around the palace!

Ber. F. 'Tis not well
In Venice' Duke to say so.

Doge. Venice' Duke!
Who now is Duke in Venice? let me see

him, 95

That he may do me right.

Ber. F. If you forget
Your office, and its dignity and duty,

Remember that of man, and curb this passion.

The Duke of Venice ——

Doge [interrupting him]. There is no such thing—

It is a word—nay, worse—a worthless by-word: 100

The most despised, wrong'd, outraged, helpless wretch,

Who begs his bread, if 'tis refused by one, May win it from another kinder heart:

But he, who is denied his right by those Whose place it is to do no wrong, is poorer

Than the rejected beggar—he's a slave— And that am I, and thou, and all our house, 107

Even from this hour: the meanest artisan Will point the finger, and the haughty noble

May spit upon us:—where is our redress?

Ber. F. The law, my prince——

Doge [interrupting him]. You see what it has done; 111

I ask'd no remedy but from the law, I sought no vengeance but redress by law,

I call'd no judges but those named by law; As sovereign, I appeal'd unto my subjects,

The very subjects who had made me sovereign, 116

And gave me thus a double right to be so. The rights of place and choice, of birth and service,

Honours and years, these scars, these hoary hairs,

The travel, toil, the perils, the fatigues, The blood and sweat of almost eighty

years, 121

Were weigh'd i' the balance, 'gainst the foulest stain,

The grossest insult, most contemptuous crime

Of a rank, rash patrician—and found wanting!

And this is to be borne!

Ber. F. I say not that:— 125

In case your fresh appeal should be rejected,

We will find other means to make all even.

Doge. Appeal again! art thou my brother's son?

A scion of the house of Faliero?

The nephew of a Doge? and of that blood Which hath already given three dukes to

Venice? 131

But thou say'st well—we must be humble now.

Ber. F. My princely uncle! you are too much moved;—

I grant it was a gross offence, and grossly Left without fitting punishment: but still

This fury doth exceed the provocation, Or any provocation: if we are wrong'd,

We will ask justice; if it be denied, 138

We'll take it; but may do all this in calmness—

Deep Vengeance is the daughter of deep Silence. 140

I have yet scarce a third part of your years, I love our house, I honour you, its chief, The guardian of my youth, and its instructor—

But though I understand your grief, and enter 144

In part of your disdain, it doth appal me To see your anger, like our Adrian waves,

O'ersweep all bounds, and foam itself to air.

Doge. I tell thee—must I tell thee— what thy father

Would have required no words to comprehend?

Hast thou no feeling save the external sense 150

Of torture from the touch? hast thou no soul—

No pride—no passion—no deep sense of honour?

Ber. F. 'Tis the first time that honour has been doubted,

And were the last, from any other sceptic.

Doge. You know the full offence of this born villain, 155

This creeping, coward, rank, acquitted felon,

Who threw his sting into a poisonous libel, And on the honour of—Oh God! my wife,

The nearest, dearest part of all men's honour,

Left a base slur to pass from mouth to mouth 160

Of loose mechanics, with all coarse foul comments,

And villainous jests, and blasphemies obscene;

While sneering nobles, in more polish'd guise,

Whisper'd the tale, and smiled upon the lie

Which made me look like them—a courteous wittol, 165

Patient—ay, proud, it may be, of dishonour.

Ber. F. But still it was a lie—you knew it false

And so did all men.

Doge. Nephew, the high Roman Said, 'Cæsar's wife must not even be suspected,'

And put her from him.

Ber. F. True—but in those days——

Doge. What is it that a Roman would not suffer, 171

That a Venetian prince must bear? old Dandolo

Refused the diadem of all the Cæsars, And wore the ducal cap I trample on,

Because 'tis now degraded.

Ber. F. 'Tis even so.

Doge. It is—it is;—I did not visit on

The innocent creature thus most vilely slander'd
Because she took an old man for her lord,
For that he had been long her father's
friend

And patron of her house, as if there were No love in woman's heart but lust of
youth 181

And beardless faces;—I did not for this Visit the villain's infamy on her,
But craved my country's justice on his
head,

The justice due unto the humblest being Who hath a wife whose faith is sweet to
him, 186

Who hath a home whose hearth is dear to
him,

Who hath a name whose honour's all to
him,

When these are tainted by the accursing
breath

Of calumny and scorn.

Ber. F. And what redress 190
Did you expect as his fit punishment?

Doge. Death! Was I not the sovereign of the state—

Insulted on his very throne, and made A mockery to the men who should obey
me? 194

Was I not injured as a husband? scorn'd
As man? reviled, degraded, as a prince?
Was not offence like his a complication
Of insult and of treason?—and he lives!
Had he instead of on the Doge's throne Stamp'd the same brand upon a peasant's stool, 200

His blood had gilt the threshold; for the carle

Had stabb'd him on the instant.

Ber. F. Do not doubt it,
He shall not live till sunset—leave to me
The means, and calm yourself.

Doge. Hold, nephew; this Would have sufficed but yesterday; at present 205

I have no further wrath against this man.

Ber. F. What mean you? is not the offence redoubled

By this most rank—I will not say—acquittal;

For it is worse, being full acknowledgment
Of the offence, and leaving it unpunish'd?

Doge. It is redoubled, but not now by
him; 211

The Forty hath decreed a month's arrest—
We must obey the Forty.

Ber. F. Obey them!
Who have forgot their duty to the sove-
reign?

Doge. Why, yes;—boy, you perceive it then at last: 215

Whether as fellow citizen who sues
For justice, or as sovereign who commands it,

They have defrauded me of both my rights
(For here the sovereign is a citizen);
But, notwithstanding, harm not thou a
hair 220

Of Steno's head—he shall not wear it long.

Ber. F. Not twelve hours longer, had you left to me

The mode and means: if you had calmly
heard me,

I never meant this miscreant should escape,

But wish'd you to repress such gusts of
passion, 225

That we more surely might devise together

His taking off.

Doge. No, nephew, he must live;
At least, just now—a life so vile as his Were nothing at this hour; in th' olden
time 229

Some sacrifices ask'd a single victim,
Great expiations had a hecatomb.

Ber. F. Your wishes are my law: and yet I fain

Would prove to you how near unto my
heart

The honour of our house must ever be.

Doge. Fear not; you shall have time and place of proof: 235

But be not thou too rash, as I have been.
I am ashamed of my own anger now;
I pray you, pardon me.

Ber. F. Why, that's my uncle!
The leader, and the statesman, and the
chief

Of commonwealths, and sovereign of
himself! 240

I wonder'd to perceive you so forget
All prudence in your fury at these years,
Although the cause—

Doge. Ay, think upon the cause—
Forget it not:—When you lie down to rest, Let it be black among your dreams; and
when 245

The morn returns, so let it stand between
The sun and you, as an ill-omen'd cloud
Upon a summer day of festival:

So will it stand to me;—but speak not, stir
not,—

Leave all to me; we shall have much to do,
And you shall have a part.—But now retire, 251

'Tis fit I were alone.

Ber. F. [taking up and placing the ducal bonnet on the table]. Ere I depart,

I pray you to resume what you have
spurn'd,

Till you can change it haply for a crown.
And now I take my leave, imploring you

In all things to rely upon my duty 256
As doth become your near and faithful
kinsman,

And not less loyal citizen and subject.

[Exit BERTUCCIO FALIERO.]

Doge [solus]. Adieu, my worthy nephew.—Hollow bauble!

[Taking up the ducal cap.]
Beset with all the thorns that line a crown,
Without investing the insulted brow 261
With the all-swaying majesty of kings;
Thou idle, gilded, and degraded toy,
Let me resume thee as I would a vizor.

[Puts it on.] How my brain aches beneath thee! and
my temples 265

Throb feverish under thy dishonest weight.
Could I not turn thee to a diadem?
Could I not shatter the Briarean sceptre
Which in this hundred-handed senate
rules,

Making the people nothing, and the
prince 270

A pageant? In my life I have achieved
Tasks not less difficult—achieved for them,
Who thus repay me! Can I not requite
them?

Oh for one year! Oh! but for even a day
Of my full youth, while yet my body
served 275

My soul as serves the generous steed his
lord,

I would have dash'd amongst them, asking
few

In aid to overthrow these swoln patricians;
But now I must look round for other hands
To serve this hoary head;—but it shall plan 280

In such a sort as will not leave the task
Herculean, though as yet 'tis but a chaos
Of darkly brooding thoughts: my fancy is
In her first work, more nearly to the light
Holding the sleeping images of things
For the selection of the pausing judgment.— 286

The troops are few in——

Enter VINCENZO.

Vin. There is one without Craves audience of your highness.

Doge. I'm unwell—
I can see no one, not even a patrician—
Let him refer his business to the council.

Vin. My lord, I will deliver your reply;
It cannot much import—he's a plebeian,
The master of a galley, I believe. 293

Doge. How! did you say the patron of a galley?

That is—I mean—a servant of the state:
Admit him, he may be on public service.

[Exit VINCENZO.]

Doge [solus]. This patron may be sounded; I will try him. 297

I know the people to be discontented:
They have cause, since Sapienza's adverse
day,

When Genoa conquer'd: they have further
cause, 300

Since they are nothing in the state, and in

The city worse than nothing—mere machines,

To serve the nobles' most patrician pleasure.

The troops have long arrears of pay, oft promised,

And murmur deeply—any hope of change
Will draw them forward: they shall pay themselves 306

With plunder:—but the priests—I doubt the priesthood

Will not be with us; they have hated me
Since that rash hour, when, madden'd with the drone,

I smote the tardy bishop at Treviso, 310
Quickening his holy march; yet ne'erthe-
less,

They may be won, at least their chief at Rome,

By some well-timed concessions; but, above
All things, I must be speedy: at my hour
Of twilight little light of life remains. 315

Could I free Venice, and avenge my
wrongs,

I had lived too long, and willingly would
sleep

Next moment with my sires; and, wanting
this,

Better that sixty of my fourscore years
Had been already where—how soon, I care not— 320

The whole must be extinguish'd; better that They ne'er had been, than drag me on to
be

The thing these arch-oppressors fain would make me.

Let me consider—of efficient troops
There are three thousand posted at——

Enter VINCENZO and ISRAEL BERTUCCIO.

Vin. May it please 325
Your highness, the same patron whom I spake of

Is here to crave your patience.

Doge. Leave the chamber,
Vincenzo.— [Exit VINCENZO.]

Sir, you may advance—what would you?

I. Ber. Redress.

Doge. Of whom?

I. Ber. Of God and of the Doge.

Doge. Alas! my friend, you seek it of the twain 330

Of least respect and interest in Venice.
You must address the council.

I. Ber. 'Twere in vain;
For he who injured me is one of them.

Doge. There's blood upon thy face—how came it there?

I. Ber. 'Tis mine, and not the first I've shed for Venice, 335

But the first shed by a Venetian hand:
A noble smote me.

Doge. Doth he live?

I. Ber. Not long—
But for the hope I had and have, that you,
My prince, yourself a soldier, will redress
Him, whom the laws of discipline and Venice 340

Permit not to protect himself:—if not—
I say no more.

Doge. But something you would do—
Is it not so?

I. Ber. I am a man, my lord.

Doge. Why so is he who smote you.

I. Ber. He is call'd so;

Nay, more, a noble one—at least, in
Venice: 345

But since he hath forgotten that I am one,
And treats me like a brute, the brute may
turn—

'Tis said the worm will.

Doge. Say—his name and lineage?

I. Ber. Barbaro.

Doge. What was the cause? or the pretext?

I. Ber. I am the chief of the arsenal, em-
ploy'd 350

At present in repairing certain galleys
But roughly used by the Genoese last year.
This morning comes the noble Barbaro
Full of reproof, because our artisans 354
Had left some frivolous order of his house,
To execute the state's decree: I dared
To justify the men—he raised his hand;—
Behold my blood! the first time it e'er
flow'd

Dishonourably.

Doge. Have you long time served?

I. Ber. So long as to remember Zara's siege, 360
And fight beneath the chief who beat the Huns there,

Sometime my general, now the Doge Fa-liero.—

Doge. How! are we comrades?—the state's ducal robes

Sit newly on me, and you were appointed
Chief of the arsenal ere I came from Rome;
So that I recognised you not. Who placed
you? 366

I. Ber. The late Doge; keeping still my old command

As patron of a galley: my new office
Was given as the reward of certain scars
(So was your predecessor pleased to say):
I little thought his bounty would conduct
me 371

To his successor as a helpless plaintiff;
At least, in such a cause.

Doge. Are you much hurt?

I. Ber. Irreparably in my self-esteem.

Doge. Speak out; fear nothing: being stung at heart, 375

What would you do to be revenged on this
man?

I. Ber. That which I dare not name, and yet will do.

Doge. Then wherefore came you here?

I. Ber. I come for justice,
Because my general is Doge, and will not See his old soldier trampled on. Had any,
Save Faliero, fill'd the ducal throne,
This blood had been wash'd out in other
blood.

Doge. You come to me for justice—
unto me!

The Doge of Venice, and I cannot give it;
I cannot even obtain it—'twas denied 385
To me most solemnly an hour ago!

I. Ber. How says your highness?

Doge. Steno is condemn'd
To a month's confinement.

I. Ber. What! the same who dared To stain the ducal throne with those foul
words,

That have cried shame to every ear in
Venice? 390

Doge. Ay, doubtless they have echo'd o'er the arsenal,
Keeping due time with every hammer's
clink

As a good jest to jolly artisans;
Or making chorus to the creaking oar,
In the vile tune of every galley-slave,
Who, as he sung the merry stave, exulted
He was not a shamed dotard like the Doge.

I. Ber. Is't possible? a month's imprisonment!

No more for Steno?

Doge. You have heard the offence,
And now you know his punishment; and
then 400

You ask redress of me! Go to the Forty,
Who pass'd the sentence upon Michel
Steno;

They'll do as much by Barbaro, no doubt.

I. Ber. Ah! dared I speak my feelings!

Doge. Give them breath.
Mine have no further outrage to endure.

I. Ber. Then in a word, it rests but on your word 406

To punish and avenge—I will not say
My petty wrong, for what is a mere blow,
However vile, to such a thing as I am?—
But the base insult done your state and person. 410

Doge. You overrate my power, which is a pageant.

This cap is not the monarch's crown; these robes

Might move compassion, like a beggar's rag;

Nay, more, a beggar's are his own, and
these

But lent to the poor puppet, who must
play 415

Its part with all its empire in this ermine.

I. Ber. Wouldst thou be king?

Doge. Yes—of a happy people.

I. Ber. Wouldst thou be sovereign lord of Venice?

Doge. Ay,
If that the people shared that sovereignty,
So that nor they nor I were further slaves
To this o'ergrown aristocratic Hydra, 421
The poisonous heads of whose envenom'd body

Have breathed a pestilence upon us all.

I. Ber. Yet, thou wast born, and still hast lived, patrician.

Doge. In evil hour was I so born; my
birth 425

Hath made me Doge to be insulted; but I lived and toil'd a soldier and a servant
Of Venice and her people, not the senate;
Their good and my own honour were my guerdon.

I have fought and bled; commanded, ay,
and conquer'd; 430

Have made and marr'd peace oft in embassies,

As it might chance to be our country's
'vantage;

Have traversed land and sea in constant
duty,

Through almost sixty years, and still for Venice,

My fathers' and my birthplace, whose
dear spires, 435

Rising at distance o'er the blue Lagoon,
It was reward enough for me to view

Once more; but not for any knot of men,
Nor sect, nor faction, did I bleed or sweat!
But would you know why I have done all
this? 440

Ask of the bleeding pelican why she Hath ripp'd her bosom? Had the bird a
voice,

She'd tell thee 'twas for all her little ones.

I. Ber. And yet they made thee duke.

Doge. They made me so;

I sought it not, the flattering fetters met
me 445

Returning from my Roman embassy,
And never having hitherto refused

Toil, charge, or duty for the state, I did not,
At these late years, decline what was the highest 449

Of all in seeming, but of all most base
In what we have to do and to endure:

Bear witness for me thou, my injured subject,

When I can neither right myself nor thee.

I. Ber. You shall do both, if you possess
the will;

And many thousands more not less op-
press'd, 455

Who wait but for a signal—will you give
it?

Doge. You speak in riddles.

I. Ber. Which shall soon be read

At peril of my life, if you disdain not
To lend a patient ear.

Doge. Say on.

I. Ber. Not thou,

Nor I alone, are injured and abused, 460 Contemn'd and trampled on; but the whole people

Groan with the strong conception of their
wrongs;

The foreign soldiers in the senate's pay
Are discontented for their long arrears;

The native mariners, and civic troops, Feel with their friends; for who is he amongst them 466

Whose brethren, parents, children, wives,
or sisters,

Have not partook oppression, or pollu-
tion,

From the patricians? And the hopeless
war

Against the Genoese, which is still main-
tain'd 470

With the plebeian blood, and treasure
wrung

From their hard earnings, has inflamed them further:

Even now—but, I forget that speaking
thus,

Perhaps I pass the sentence of my death!

Doge. And suffering what thou hast done—fear'st thou death? 475

Be silent then, and live on, to be beaten
By those for whom thou hast bled.

I. Ber. No, I will speak

At every hazard; and if Venice' Doge
Should turn delator, be the shame on him,

And sorrow too; for he will lose far more Than I.

Doge. From me fear nothing; out with
it! 481

I. Ber. Know then, that there are met and sworn in secret

A band of brethren, valiant hearts and
true;

Men who have proved all fortunes, and have long

Grieved over that of Venice, and have
right 485

To do so; having served her in all climes,
And having rescued her from foreign foes,

Would do the same from those within her
walls.

They are not numerous, nor yet too few
For their great purpose; they have arms,

and means, 490

And hearts, and hopes, and faith, and patient courage.

Doge. For what then do they pause?

I. Ber. An hour to strike.

Doge [aside]. Saint Mark's shall strike
that hour!

I. Ber. I now have placed

My life, my honour, all my earthly hopes
Within thy power, but in the firm belief

That injuries like ours, sprung from one
cause, 496

Will generate one vengeance: should it
be so,

Be our chief now—our sovereign here—after.

Doge. How many are ye?

I. Ber. I'll not answer that Till I am answer'd.

Doge. How, sir! do you menace?

I. Ber. No; I affirm. I have betray'd myself;

But there's no torture in the mystic wells
Which undermine your palace, nor in those
Not less appalling cells, the 'leadens roofs,'
To force a single name from me of others.
The Pozzi and the Piombi were in vain;
They might wring blood from me, but treachery never.

And I would pass the fearful 'Bridge of Sighs,'

Joyous that mine must be the last that e'er Would echo o'er the Stygian wave which flows

Between the murderers and the murder'd, washing

The prison and the palace walls: there are Those who would live to think on't, and avenge me.

Doge. If such your power and purpose,
why come here

To sue for justice, being in the course
To do yourself due right?

I. Ber. Because the man,
Who claims protection from authority,
Showing his confidence and his submission
To that authority, can hardly be Suspected of combining to destroy it.
Had I sate down too humbly with this blow,
A moody brow and mutter'd threats had
made me

A mark'd man to the Forty's inquisition;
But loud complaint, however angrily
It shapes its phrase, is little to be fear'd,
And less distrusted. But, besides all this,
I had another reason.

Doge. What was that?

I. Ber. Some rumours that the Doge was greatly moved

By the reference of the Avogadori
Of Michel Steno's sentence to the Forty Had reach'd me. I had served you, honour'd you,

And felt that you were dangerously in-sulted,

Being of an order of such spirits, as Requite tenfold both good and evil: 'twas
My wish to prove and urge you to redress.
Now you know all; and that I speak the
truth,

My peril be the proof.

Doge. You have deeply ventured;
But all must do so who would greatly win:
Thus far I'll answer you—your secret's
safe.

I. Ber. And is this all?

Doge. Unless with all intrusted,
What would you have me answer?

I. Ber. I would have you Trust him who leaves his life in trust with
you.

Doge. But I must know your plan, your names, and numbers;
The last may then be doubled, and the former

Matured and strengthen'd.

I. Ber. We're enough already; 545
You are the sole ally we covet now.

Doge. But bring me to the knowledge of your chiefs.

I. Ber. That shall be done upon your formal pledge

To keep the faith that we will pledge to
you.

Doge. When? where?

I. Ber. This night I'll bring to your apartment 550

Two of the principals: a greater number
Were hazardous.

Doge. Stay, I must think of this.—
What if I were to trust myself amongst you,
And leave the palace?

I. Ber. You must come alone.

Doge. With but my nephew.

I. Ber. Not were he your son. 555

Doge. Wretch! darest thou name my son? He died in arms

At Sapienza for this faithless state.

Oh! that he were alive, and I in ashes!

Or that he were alive ere I be ashes!

I should not need the dubious aid of strangers. 560

I. Ber. Not one of all those strangers whom thou doubtst,

But will regard thee with a filial feeling,
So that thou keep'st a father's faith with
them.

Doge. The die is cast. Where is the place of meeting?

I. Ber. At midnight I will be alone and mask'd 565

Where'er your highness pleases to direct
me,

To wait your coming, and conduct you
where

You shall receive our homage, and pronounce

Upon our project.

Doge. At what hour arises
The moon?

I. Ber. Late, but the atmosphere is thick and dusky, 570

'Tis a sirocco.

Doge. At the midnight hour, then,
Near to the church where sleep my sires;

the same,

Twin-named from the apostles John and Paul;

A gondola, with one oar only, will Lurk in the narrow channel which glides
by.

Be there. 575

I. Ber. I will not fail.

Doge. And now retire——

I. Ber. In the full hope your highness will not falter

In your great purpose. Prince, I take my leave.

[Exit ISRAEL BERTUCCIO.

Doge [solus]. At midnight, by the church

Saints John and Paul, 579

Where sleep my noble fathers, I repair—

To what? to hold a council in the dark
With common ruffians leagued to ruin states!

And will not my great sires leap from the vault,

Where lie two doges who preceded me,
And pluck me down amongst them?

Would they could! 585

For I should rest in honour with the honour'd.

Alas! I must not think of them, but those Who have made me thus unworthy of a name

Noble and brave as aught of consular
On Roman marbles; but I will redeem it

Back to its antique lustre in our annals,
By sweet revenge on all that's base in

Venice, 592

And freedom to the rest, or leave it black
To all the growing calumnies of time,

Which never spare the fame of him who fails,

But try the Cæsar, or the Catiline,
By the true touchstone of desert—success.

ACT II

SCENE I.—An Apartment in the Ducal Palace.

ANGIOLINA (wife of the DOGE) and MARIANNA.

Ang. What was the Doge's answer?

Mar. That he was

That moment summon'd to a conference.

But 'tis by this time ended. I perceived

Not long ago the senators embarking;

And the last gondola may now be seen

Gliding into the throng of barks which stud

The glittering waters.

Ang. Would he were return'd!

He has been much disquieted of late;

And Time, which has not tamed his fiery

spirit,

Nor yet enfeebled even his mortal frame,

Which seems to me more nourish'd by a soul 11

So quick and restless that it would consume

Less rare clay—Time has but little power

On his resentments or his griefs. Unlike

To other spirits of his order, who, 15

In the first burst of passion, pour away

Their wrath or sorrow, all things wear in

him

An aspect of eternity: his thoughts,
His feelings, passions, good or evil, all Have nothing of old age; and his bold
brow 20

Bears but the scars of mind, the thoughts of years,

Not their decrepitude: and he of late
Has been more agitated than his wont.

Would he were come! for I alone have
power

Upon his troubled spirit.

Mar. It is true, 25

His highness has of late been greatly moved

By the affront of Steno, and with cause:
But the offender doubtless even now

Is doom'd to expiate his rash insult with

Such chastisement as will enforce respect
To female virtue, and to noble blood. 31

Ang. 'Twas a gross insult; but I heed it
not

For the rash scorner's falsehood in itself,
But for the effect, the deadly deep impression 34

Which it has made upon Faliero's soul,
The proud, the fiery, the austere—austere

To all save me: I tremble when I think

To what it may conduct.

Mar. Assuredly

The Doge cannot suspect you?

Ang. Suspect me!

Why Steno dared not: when he scrawl'd his lie, 40

Grovelling by stealth in the moon's glimmering light,

His own still conscience smote him for the
act,

And every shadow on the walls frown'd
shame

Upon his coward calumny.

Mar. 'Twere fit

He should be punish'd grievously.

Ang. He is so.

Mar. What! is the sentence pass'd? is he condemn'd? 46

Ang. I know not that, but he has been detected.

Mar. And deem you this enough for such foul scorn?

Ang. I would not be a judge in my own
cause,

Nor do I know what sense of punishment
May reach the soul of ribalds such as

Steno; 51

But if his insults sink no deeper in
The minds of the inquisitors than they

Have ruffled mine, he will, for all acquit-
tance,

Be left to his own shamelessness or shame.

Mar. Some sacrifice is due to slander'd virtue. 56

Ang. Why, what is virtue if it needs a victim?

Or if it must depend upon men's words?

The dying Roman said, 'twas but a name':
It were indeed no more, if human breath
Could make or mar it. 61

Mar. Yet full many a dame, Stainless and faithful, would feel all the
wrong

Of such a slander; and less rigid ladies,
Such as abound in Venice, would be loud
And all-inexorable in their cry 65

For justice.

Ang. This but proves it is the name
And not the quality they prize: the first Have found it a hard task to hold their honour,

If they require it to be blazon'd forth;
And those who have not kept it, seek its seeming 70

As they would look out for an ornament
Of which they feel the want, but not be-
cause

They think it so; they live in others'
thoughts,

And would seem honest as they must seem
fair.

Mar. You have strange thoughts for a patrician dame. 75

Ang. And yet they were my father's;
with his name,

The sole inheritance he left.

Mar. You want none;
Wife to a prince, the chief of the Republic.

Ang. I should have sought none though a peasant's bride, 79

But feel not less the love and gratitude
Due to my father, who bestow'd my hand
Upon his early, tried, and trusted friend,
The Count Val di Marino, now our Doge.

Mar. And with that hand did he bestow
your heart?

Ang. He did so, or it had not been bestow'd. 85

Mar. Yet this strange disproportion in your years,

And, let me add, disparity of tempers, Might make the world doubt whether such an union

Could make you wisely, permanently happy.

Ang. The world will think with worldlings; but my heart 90

Has still been in my duties, which are
many,

But never difficult.

Mar. And do you love him?

Ang. I love all noble qualities which merit

Love, and I loved my father, who first taught me

To single out what we should love in others, 95

And to subdue all tendency to lend
The best and purest feelings of our nature
To baser passions. He bestow'd my hand
Upon Faliero: he had known him noble,

Brave, generous; rich in all the qualities
Of soldier, citizen, and friend; in all 101
Such have I found him as my father said.
His faults are those that dwell in the high bosoms

Of men who have commanded; too much
pride,

And the deep passions fiercely foster'd by
The uses of patricians, and a life 106

Spent in the storms of state and war; and also

From the quick sense of honour, which becomes

A duty to a certain sign, a vice
When overstrain'd, and this I fear in him.

And then he has been rash from his youth upwards, 111

Yet temper'd by redeeming nobleness
In such sort, that the wariest of republics

Has lavish'd all its chief employs upon
him,

From his first fight to his last embassy,
From which on his return the dukedom met him. 116

Mar. But previous to this marriage, had your heart

Ne'er beat for any of the noble youth,
Such as in years had been more meet to

match
Beauty like yours? or, since, have you ne'er seen 120

One, who, if your fair hand were still to
give,

Might now pretend to Loredano's daughter?

Ang. I answer'd your first question when I said

I married.

Mar. And the second?

Ang. Needs no answer.
Mar. I pray you pardon, if I have offended. 125

Ang. I feel no wrath, but some surprise:
I knew not

That wedded bosoms could permit themselves

To ponder upon what they now might choose,

Or aught save their past choice.
Mar. 'Tis their past choice

That far too often makes them deem they
would 130

Now choose more wisely, could they cancel it.

Ang. It may be so. I knew not of such thoughts.

Mar. Here comes the Doge—shall I retire?

Ang. It may Be better you should quit me; he seems rapt

In thought.—How pensively he takes his
way! 135

[Exit MARIANNA.]

Enter the DOGE and PIETRO.

Doge [musing]. There is a certain Philip Calendaro

Now in the Arsenal, who holds command
Of eighty men, and has great influence
Besides on all the spirits of his comrades:
This man, I hear, is bold and popular,
Sudden and daring, and yet secret; 'twould Be well that he were won: I needs must
hope

That Israel Bertuccio has secured him,
But fain would be—

Pie. My lord, pray pardon me
For breaking in upon your meditation;
The Senator Bertuccio, your kinsman, Charged me to follow and inquire your pleasure
To fix an hour when he may speak with
you.

Doge. At sunset.—Stay a moment—let me see—
Say in the second hour of night.

[Exit PIETRO.]

Ang. My lord!

Doge. My dearest child, forgive me—
why delay

So long approaching me?—I saw you not.

Ang. You were absorb'd in thought, and he who now

Has parted from you might have words of
weight

To bear you from the senate.

Doge. From the senate?

Ang. I would not interrupt him in his duty

And theirs.

Doge. The senate's duty! you mistake;
'Tis we who owe all service to the senate.

Ang. I thought the Duke had held command in Venice.

Doge. He shall.—But let that pass.—
We will be jocund.

How fares it with you? have you been abroad?

The day is overcast, but the calm wave
Favours the gondolier's light skimming
oar;

Or have you held a levee of your friends?
Or has your music made you solitary?

Say—is there aught that you would will
within

The little sway now left the Duke? or aught
Of fitting splendour, or of honest pleasure, Social or lonely, that would glad your
heart,

To compensate for many a dull hour,
wasted

On an old man oft moved with many cares?

Speak, and 'tis done.

Ang. You're ever kind to me.
I have nothing to desire, or to request,
Except to see you oftener and calmer.

Doge. Calmer?

Ang. Ay, calmer, my good lord.—Ah,
why

Do you still keep apart, and walk alone,
And let such strong emotions stamp your
brow,

As not betraying their full import, yet
Disclose too much?

Doge. Disclose too much!—of what?
What is there to disclose?

Ang. A heart so ill
At ease.

Doge. 'Tis nothing, child.—But in the
state

You know what daily cares oppress all
those

Who govern this precarious commonwealth;

Now suffering from the Genoese without,
And malcontents within—'tis this which makes me

More pensive and less tranquil than my
wont.

Ang. Yet this existed long before, and never

Till in these late days did I see you thus.
Forgive me; there is something at your
heart

More than the mere discharge of public duties,

Which long use and a talent like to yours
Have render'd light, nay, a necessity,

To keep your mind from stagnating. 'Tis
not

In hostile states, nor perils, thus to shake
you,—

You, who have stood all storms and never sunk,

And climb'd up to the pinnacle of power
And never fainted by the way, and stand

Upon it, and can look down steadily
Along the depth beneath, and ne'er feel dizzy.

Were Genoa's galleys riding in the port,
Were civil fury raging in Saint Mark's,

You are not to be wrought on, but would
fall,

As you have risen, with an unalter'd brow:
Your feelings now are of a different kind;

Something has stung your pride, not patriotism.

Doge. Pride! Angiolina? Alas! none is left me.

Ang. Yes—the same sin that overthrew
the angels,

And of all sins most easily besets
Mortals the nearest to the angelic nature:

The vile are only vain; the great are proud.

Doge. I had the pride of honour, of your
honour,

Deep at my heart—But let us change the
theme.

Ang. Ah no!—As I have ever shared your kindness

In all things else, let me not be shut out
 From your distress: were it of public import, 215
 You know I never sought, would never
 seek

To win a word from you; but feeling now
 Your grief is private, it belongs to me
 To lighten or divide it. Since the day
 When foolish Steno's ribaldry detected Unfix'd your quiet, you are greatly
 changed, 221
 And I would soothe you back to what you
 were.

Doge. To what I was!—have you heard Steno's sentence?

Ang. No.

Doge. A month's arrest.

Ang. Is it not enough?

Doge. Enough!—yes, for a drunken galley slave, 225

Who, stung by stripes, may murmur at his master;

But not for a deliberate, false, cool villain,
 Who stains a lady's and a prince's honour
 Even on the throne of his authority.

Ang. There seems to me enough in the conviction 230

Of a patrician guilty of a falsehood:
 All other punishment were light unto
 His loss of honour.

Doge. Such men have no honour;
 They have but their vile lives—and these are spared.

Ang. You would not have him die for this offence? 235

Doge. Not now;—being still alive, I'd have him live

Long as he can; he has ceased to merit
 death;

The guilty saved hath damn'd his hundred
 judges,

And he is pure, for now his crime is theirs.

Ang. Oh! had this false and flippant libeller 240

Shed his young blood for his absurd lam-
 poon,

Ne'er from that moment could this breast
 have known

A joyous hour, or dreamless slumber
 more.

Doge. Does not the law of Heaven say blood for blood?

And he who taints kills more than he who sheds it. 245

Is it the pain of blows, or shame of blows,
 That makes such deadly to the sense of
 man?

Do not the laws of man say blood for
 honour,—

And, less than honour, for a little gold?
 Say not the laws of nations blood for treason? 250

Is't nothing to have fill'd these veins with poison

For their once healthful current? is it nothing

To have stain'd your name and mine—the noblest names?

Is't nothing to have brought into contempt
 A prince before his people? to have fail'd
 In the respect accorded by mankind 256
 To youth in woman, and old age in man?
 To virtue in your sex, and dignity
 In ours?—But let them look to it who have saved him.

Ang. Heaven bids us to forgive our enemies. 260

Doge. Doth Heaven forgive her own?
 Is there not Hell

For wrath eternal?

Ang. Do not speak thus wildly—Heaven will alike forgive you and your
 foes.

Doge. Amen! May Heaven forgive
 them!

Ang. And will you?

Doge. Yes, when they are in heaven!

Ang. And not till then?

Doge. What matters my forgiveness?
 an old man's, 266

Worn out, scorn'd, spurn'd, abused; what matters then

My pardon more than my resentment,
 both

Being weak and worthless? I have lived
 too long;

But let us change the argument.—My
 child! 270

My injured wife, the child of Loredano,
 The brave, the chivalrous, how little deem'd

Thy father, wedding thee unto his friend,
 That he was linking thee to shame!—Alas!
 Shame without sin, for thou art faultless.

Hadst thou 275

But had a different husband, any husband
 In Venice save the Doge, this blight, this

brand,
 This blasphemy had never fallen upon
 thee.

So young, so beautiful, so good, so pure,
 To suffer this, and yet be unavenged!

Ang. I am too well avenged, for you still love me, 281

And trust, and honour me; and all men
 know

That you are just, and I am true: what more Could I require, or you command?

Doge. 'Tis well,
 And may be better; but whate'er betide,
 Be thou at least kind to my memory. 286

Ang. Why speak you thus?

Doge. It is no matter why;
 But I would still, whatever others think,
 Have your respect both now and in my
 grave.

Ang. Why should you doubt it? has it ever fail'd? 290

Doge. Come hither, child; I would a word with you.

Your father was my friend; unequal fortune

Made him my debtor for some courtesies Which bind the good more firmly: when,
oppress'd

With his last malady, he will'd our union,
It was not to repay me, long repaid 296

Before by his great loyalty in friendship;
His object was to place your orphan
beauty

In honourable safety from the perils
Which, in this scorpion nest of vice, assail
A lonely and undower'd maid. I did not Think with him, but would not oppose the
thought 302

Which soothed his death-bed.
Ang. I have not forgotten
The nobleness with which you bade me
speak

If my young heart held any preference
Which would have made me happier; nor your offer 306

To make my dowry equal to the rank
Of aught in Venice, and forego all claim
My father's last injunction gave you.

Doge. Thus, 'Twas not a foolish dotard's vile caprice,
Nor the false edge of aged appetite, 311
Which made me covetous of girlish beauty,
And a young bride: for in my fieriest youth
I sway'd such passions; nor was this my
age

Infected with that leprosy of lust 315
Which taints the hoariest years of vicious
men,

Making them ransack to the very last
The dregs of pleasure for their vanish'd joys;

Or buy in selfish marriage some young
victim, 319

Too helpless to refuse a state that's honest,
Too feeling not to know herself a wretch.
Our wedlock was not of this sort; you had Freedom from me to choose, and urged in answer

Your father's choice.
Ang. I did so; I would do so

In face of earth and heaven; for I have
never 325

Repented for my sake; sometimes for
yours,

In pondering o'er your late disquietudes.
Doge. I knew my heart would never treat you harshly;

I knew my days could not disturb you
long;

And then the daughter of my earliest
friend, 330

His worthy daughter, free to choose again,
Wealthier and wiser, in the ripest bloom
Of womanhood, more skilful to select
By passing these probationary years

Inheriting a prince's name and riches,
Secured, by the short penance of enduring
An old man for some summers, against all That law's chicane or envious kinsmen
might

Have urged against her right; my best friend's child

Would choose more fitly in respect of
years, 340

And not less truly in a faithful heart.

Ang. My lord, I look'd but to my father's wishes,

Hallow'd by his last words, and to my
heart

For doing all its duties, and replying With faith to him with whom I was affianced. 345

Ambitious hopes ne'er cross'd my dreams;
and should

The hour you speak of come, it will be seen so.

Doge. I do believe you; and I know you
true:

For love, romantic love, which in my
youth

I knew to be illusion, and ne'er saw 350
Lasting, but often fatal, it had been

No lure for me, in my most passionate
days,

And could not be so now, did such exist.
But such respect, and mildly paid regard

As a true feeling for your welfare, and
A free compliance with all honest wishes,—

A kindness to your virtues, watchfulness Not shown, but shadowing o'er such little failings

As youth is apt in, so as not to check Rashly, but win you from them ere you
knew 360

You had been won, but thought the change
your choice;

A pride not in your beauty, but your conduct;

A trust in you; a patriarchal love,
And not a doting homage; friendship,

faith,— 364

Such estimation in your eyes as these Might claim, I hoped for.

Ang. And have ever had.

Doge. I think so. For the difference in our years

You knew it, choosing me, and chose: I trusted

Not to my qualities, nor would have faith
In such, nor outward ornaments of nature,

Were I still in my five and twentieth spring;
I trusted to the blood of Loredano 372

Pure in your veins; I trusted to the soul
God gave you—to the truths your father taught you—

To your belief in Heaven—to your mild virtues— 375

To your own faith and honour, for my
own.

Ang. You have done well.—I thank you for that trust,
Which I have never for one moment ceased
To honour you the more for.

Doge. Where is honour, Innate and precept-strengthen'd, 'tis the
rock 380
Of faith connubial: where it is not—where Light thoughts are lurking, or the vanities
Of worldly pleasure rankle in the heart,
Or sensual throbs convulse it, well I know
'Twere hopeless for humanity to dream
Of honesty in such infected blood, 386
Although 'twere wed to him it covets
most:

An incarnation of the poet's god
In all his marble-chisell'd beauty, or
The demi-deity, Alcides, in 390
His majesty of superhuman manhood,
Would not suffice to bind where virtue is
not;

It is consistency which forms and proves it:
Vice cannot fix, and virtue cannot change.
The once fall'n woman must for ever fall;
For vice must have variety, while virtue Stands like the sun, and all which rolls
around 397

Drinks life, and light, and glory from her aspect.

Ang. And seeing, feeling thus this truth in others,
(I pray you pardon me;) but wherefore yield you 400
To the most fierce of fatal passions, and Disquiet your great thoughts with restless
hate

Of such a thing as Steno?

Doge. You mistake me.
It is not Steno who could move me thus;
Had it been so, he should—but let that
pass. 405

Ang. What is't you feel so deeply, then,
even now?

Doge. The violated majesty of Venice,
At once insulted in her lord and laws.

Ang. Alas! why will you thus consider
it?

Doge. I have thought on't till—but let me lead you back 410
To what I urged; all these things being noted,

I wedded you; the world then did me
justice

Upon the motive, and my conduct proved They did me right, while yours was all to
praise:

You had all freedom, all respect, all trust
From me and mine; and, born of those who made 416

Princes at home, and swept kings from their thrones

On foreign shores, in all things you ap-
pear'd

Worthy to be our first of native dames.

Ang. To what does this conduct?

Doge. To thus much—that A miscreant's angry breath may blast it
all— 421

A villain, whom for his unbridled bearing
Even in the midst of our great festival,
I caused to be conducted forth, and taught How to demean himself in ducal chambers; 425

A wretch like this may leave upon the wall
The blighting venom of his sweltering
heart,

And this shall spread itself in general
poison;

And woman's innocence, man's honour,
pass

Into a by-word; and the doubly felon
(Who first insulted virgin modesty 431
By a gross affront to your attendant
damsels

Amidst the noblest of our dames in public)
Requite himself for his most just expulsion
By blackening publicly his sovereign's consort, 435

And be absolved by his upright compeers.

Ang. But he has been condemn'd into captivity.

Doge. For such as him a dungeon were acquittal;

And his brief term of mock-arrest will pass
Within a palace. But I've done with him;
The rest must be with you.

Ang. With me, my lord?

Doge. Yes, Angiolina. Do not marvel;
I 442

Have let this prey upon me till I feel My life cannot be long; and fain would have you

Regard the injunctions you will find
within 445

This scroll [Giving her a paper]—Fear not; they are for your advantage:

Read them hereafter at the fitting hour.

Ang. My lord, in life, and after life, you shall

Be honour'd still by me: but may your
days

Be many yet—and happier than the
present! 450

This passion will give way, and you will be Serene, and what you should be—what you were.

Doge. I will be what I should be, or be
nothing;

But never more—oh! never, never more,
O'er the few days or hours which yet
await 455

The blighted old age of Faliero, shall Sweet quiet shed her sunset! Never more Those summer shadows rising from the
past

Of a not ill-spent nor inglorious life,
Mellowing the last hours as the night approaches, 460

Shall soothe me to my moment of long
rest.

I had but little more to ask, or hope,
Save the regards due to the blood and
sweat,

And the soul's labour through which I had toil'd

To make my country honour'd. As her servant—

Her servant, though her chief—I would have gone

Down to my fathers with a name serene
And pure as theirs; but this has been denied me.—

Would I had died at Zara!

Ang. There you saved
The state; then live to save her still. A day,
Another day like that would be the best Reproof to them, and sole revenge for you.

Doge. But one such day occurs within an age;

My life is little less than one, and 'tis Enough for Fortune to have granted once,
That which scarce one more favour'd citizen

May win in many states and years. But why Thus speak I? Venice has forgot that
day—

Then why should I remember it?—Fare-
well,

Sweet Angiolina! I must to my cabinet;
There's much for me to do—and the hour
hastens.

Ang. Remember what you were.
Doge. It were in vain!

Joy's recollection is no longer joy,
While sorrow's memory is a sorrow still.

Ang. At least, whate'er may urge, let me implore

That you will take some little pause of rest:
Your sleep for many nights has been so turbid,

That it had been relief to have awaked you,
Had I not hoped that Nature would o'er-
power

At length the thoughts which shook your slumbers thus.

An hour of rest will give you to your toils
With fitter thoughts and freshen'd strength.

Doge. I cannot—
I must not, if I could; for never was Such reason to be watchful: yet a few—

Yet a few days and dream-perturbed
nights,

And I shall slumber well—but where?— no matter.

Adieu, my Angiolina.

Ang. Let me be An instant—yet an instant your companion!

I cannot bear to leave you thus.

Doge. Come then,
My gentle child—forgive me; thou wert
made

For better fortunes than to share in mine,
Now darkling in their close toward the deep vale

Where Death sits robed in his all-sweeping shadow.

When I am gone—it may be sooner than Even these years warrant, for there is that stirring

Within, above, around, that in this city
Will make the cemeteries populous

As e'er they were by pestilence or war,—
When I am nothing, let that which I was

Be still sometimes a name on thy sweet
lips,

A shadow in thy fancy, of a thing Which would not have thee mourn it, but remember.

Let us begone, my child—the time is pressing. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—A retired spot near the Arsenal.

ISRAEL BERTUCCIO and PHILIP CALENDARO.

Cal. How sped you, Israel, in your late complaint?

I. Ber. Why, well.

Cal. Is't possible! will he be punish'd?

I. Ber. Yes.

Cal. With what? a mulct or an arrest?

I. Ber. With death!

Cal. Now you rave, or must intend revenge,

Such as I counsell'd you, with your own
hand.

I. Ber. Yes; and for one sole draught of hate, forego

The great redress we meditate for Venice,
And change a life of hope for one of exile;

Leaving one scorpion crush'd, and thousands stinging

My friends, my family, my countrymen!
No, Calendaro; these same drops of blood, Shed shamefully, shall have the whole of
his

For their requital—but not only his;
We will not strike for private wrongs
alone:

Such are for selfish passions and rash
men,

But are unworthy a tyrannicide.

Cal. You have more patience than I care to boast.

Had I been present when you bore this insult,

I must have slain him, or expired myself
In the vain effort to repress my wrath.

I. Ber. Thank Heaven you were not—all had else been marr'd:

As 'tis, our cause looks prosperous still.

Cal. You saw
The Doge—what answer gave he?

I. Ber. That there was

No punishment for such as Barbaro.

Cal. I told you so before, and that 'twas idle 25

To think of justice from such hands.

I. Ber. At least,

It lull'd suspicion, showing confidence.

Had I been silent, not a sbirro but

Had kept me in his eye, as meditating

A silent, solitary, deep revenge. 30

Cal. But wherefore not address you to the Council?

The Doge is a mere puppet, who can scarce

Obtain right for himself. Why speak to him?

I. Ber. You shall know that hereafter.

Cal. Why not now?

I. Ber. Be patient but till midnight.

Get your musters, 35

And bid our friends prepare their companies;

Set all in readiness to strike the blow,

Perhaps in a few hours; we have long waited

For a fit time—that hour is on the dial,

It may be, of to-morrow's sun: delay

Beyond may breed us double danger. See

That all be punctual at our place of meeting,

And arm'd, excepting those of the Sixteen,

Who will remain among the troops to wait

The signal.

Cal. These brave words have breathed new life 45

Into my veins; I'm sick of these protracted

And hesitating councils: day on day

Crawl'd on, and added but another link

To our long fetters, and some fresher wrong 49

Inflicted on our brethren or ourselves,

Helping to swell our tyrants' bloated strength.

Let us but deal upon them, and I care not

For the result, which must be death or freedom!

I'm weary to the heart of finding neither.

I. Ber. We will be free in life or death! the grave 55

Is chainless. Have you all the musters ready?

And are the sixteen companies completed

To sixty?

Cal. All save two, in which there are

Twenty-five wanting to make up the number.

I. Ber. No matter; we can do without.

Whose are they? 60

Cal. Bertram's and old Soranzo's, both of whom Appear less forward in the cause than we are.

I. Ber. Your fiery nature makes you deem all those Who are not restless cold: but there exists

Of in concentr'd spirits not less daring Than in more loud avengers. Do not doubt them. 66

Cal. I do not doubt the elder; but in Bertram

There is a hesitating softness, fatal

To enterprise like ours; I've seen that man

Weep like an infant o'er the misery 70

Of others, heedless of his own, though greater;

And in a recent quarrel I beheld him

Turn sick at sight of blood, although a villain's.

I. Ber. The truly brave are soft of heart and eyes,

And feel for what their duty bids them do.

I have known Bertram long; there doth not breathe 76

A soul more full of honour.

Cal. It may be so: I apprehend less treachery than weakness;

Yet as he has no mistress, and no wife

To work upon his milkiness of spirit,

He may go through the ordeal; it is well

He is an orphan, friendless save in us:

A woman or a child had made him less

Than either in resolve.

I. Ber. Such ties are not For those who are call'd to the high destinies 85

Which purify corrupted commonwealths;

We must forget all feelings save the one,

We must resign all passions save our purpose,

We must behold no object save our country,

And only look on death as beautiful, 90

So that the sacrifice ascend to heaven,

And draw down freedom on her evermore.

Cal. But if we fail——

I. Ber. They never fail who die In a great cause: the block may soak their gore;

Their heads may sodden in the sun; their limbs 95

Be strung to city gates and castle walls—

But still their spirit walks abroad. Though years

Elapse, and others share as dark a doom,

They but augment the deep and sweeping thoughts

Which overpower all others, and conduct

The world at last to freedom. What were we, 101

If Brutus had not lived? He died in giving Rome liberty, but left a deathless lesson—

A name which is a virtue, and a soul

Which multiplies itself throughout all time, 105

When wicked men wax mighty, and a state Turns servile. He and his high friend were styled

'The last of Romans!' Let us be the first

Of true Venetians, sprung from Roman
sires. 109

Cal. Our fathers did not fly from Attila
Into these isles, where palaces have sprung
On banks redeem'd from the rude ocean's ooze,

To own a thousand despots in his place.
Better bow down before the Hun, and call A Tartar lord, than these sworn silkworms masters! 115

The first at least was man, and used his
sword

As sceptre: these unmanly creeping things Command our swords, and rule us with a word

As with a spell.

I. Ber. It shall be broken soon.
You say that all things are in readiness;
To-day I have not been the usual round,
And why thou knowest; but thy vigilance
Will better have supplied my care: these orders

In recent council to redouble now
Our efforts to repair the galleys, have 125
Lent a fair colour to the introduction
Of many of our cause into the arsenal,
As new artificers for their equipment,
Or fresh recruits obtained in haste to man
The hoped-for fleet.—Are all supplied with arms? 130

Cal. All who were deem'd trustworthy:
there are some

Whom it were well to keep in ignorance
Till it be time to strike, and then supply
them;

When in the heat and hurry of the hour
They have no opportunity to pause, 135
But needs must on with those who will surround them.

I. Ber. You have said well. Have you remark'd all such?

Cal. I've noted most; and caused the other chiefs

To use like caution in their companies.
As far as I have seen, we are enough 140
To make the enterprise secure, if 'tis Commenced to-morrow; but, till 'tis begun,
Each hour is pregnant with a thousand perils.

I. Ber. Let the Sixteen meet at the wonted hour,

Except Soranzo, Nicoletto Blondo, 145
And Marco Giuda, who will keep their
watch

Within the arsenal, and hold all ready,
Expectant of the signal we will fix on.

Cal. We will not fail.

I. Ber. Let all the rest be there;
I have a stranger to present to them. 150

Cal. A stranger! doth he know the secret?

I. Ber. Yes.

Cal. And have you dared to peril your friends' lives

On a rash confidence in one we know not?

I. Ber. I have risk'd no man's life except my own—

Of that be certain: he is one who may Make our assurance doubly sure, according 156

His aid; and if reluctant, he no less
Is in our power: he comes alone with me,
And cannot 'scape us; but he will not swerve.

Cal. I cannot judge of this until I know
him: 160

Is he one of our order?

I. Ber. Ay, in spirit,
Although a child of greatness; he is one—
Who would become a throne, or overthrow one—

One who has done great deeds, and seen great changes; 164

No tyrant, though bred up to tyranny;
Valiant in war, and sage in council; noble
In nature, although haughty; quick, yet wary:

Yet for all this, so full of certain passions,
That if once stirr'd and baffled, as he has
been

Upon the tenderest points, there is no
Fury 170

In Grecian story like to that which wrings
His vitals with her burning hands, till he Grows capable of all things for revenge;
And add too, that his mind is liberal,
He sees and feels the people are oppress'd,
And shares their sufferings. Take him all in all, 176

We have need of such, and such have need of us.

Cal. And what part would you have him take with us?

I. Ber. It may be, that of chief.

Cal. What! and resign
Your own command as leader?

I. Ber. Even so.
My object is to make your cause end well.
And not to push myself to power. Experience, 182

Some skill, and your own choice, had mark'd me out

To act in trust as your commander, till Some worthier should appear: if I have found such 185

As you yourselves shall own more worthy,
think you

That I would hesitate from selfishness,
And, covetous of brief authority, Stake our deep interest on my single
thoughts, 189

Rather than yield to one above me in
All leading qualities? No, Calendaro, Know your friend better; but you all shall judge.

Away! and let us meet at the fix'd hour.
Be vigilant, and all will yet go well.

Cal. Worthy Bertuccio, I have known you ever 195

Trusty and brave, with head and heart to plan
 What I have still been prompt to execute.
 For my own part, I seek no other chief;
 What the rest will decide I know not, but I am with you, as I have ever been, 200
 In all our undertakings. Now farewell,
 Until the hour of midnight sees us meet.
 [Exeunt.

ACT III

SCENE I.—Scene, the Space between the Canal and the Church of San Giovanni e San Paolo. An equestrian Statue before it.—A Gondola lies in the Canal at some distance.

Enter the DOGE alone, disguised.

Doge [solus]. I am before the hour, the hour whose voice,
 Pealing into the arch of night, might strike
 These palaces with ominous tottering,
 And rock their marbles to the corner-stone,
 Waking the sleepers from some hideous dream 5
 Of indistinct but awful augury
 Of that which will befall them. Yes, proud city!
 Thou must be cleansed of the black blood which makes thee
 A lazar-house of tyranny: the task 9
 Is forced upon me, I have sought it not;
 And therefore was I punish'd, seeing this Patrician pestilence spread on and on,
 Until at length it smote me in my slumbers,
 And I am tainted, and must wash away
 The plague spots in the healing wave. Tall fane! 15
 Where sleep my fathers, whose dim statues shadow
 The floor which doth divide us from the dead,
 Where all the pregnant hearts of our bold blood,
 Moulder'd into a mite of ashes, hold
 In one shrunk heap what once made many heroes, 20
 When what is now a handful shook the earth—
 Fane of the tutelar saints who guard our house!
 Vault where two Doges rest—my sires! who died
 The one of toil, the other in the field,
 With a long race of other lineal chiefs
 And sages, whose great labours, wounds, and state 26
 I have inherited,—let the graves gape,
 Till all thine aisles be peopled with the dead,
 And pour them from thy portals to gaze on me!
 I call them up, and them and thee to witness 30

What it hath been which put me to this task—
 Their pure high blood, their blazon-roll of glories,
 Their mighty name dishonour'd all in me,
 Not by me, but by the ungrateful nobles
 We fought to make our equals, not our lords: 35
 And chiefly thou, Ordelafo the brave,
 Who perish'd in the field, where I since conquer'd,
 Battling at Zara, did the hecatombs
 Of thine and Venice' foes, there offer'd up
 By thy descendant, merit such acquittance? 40
 Spirits! smile down upon me; for my cause
 Is yours, in all life now can be of yours,—
 Your fame, your name, all mingled up in mine,
 And in the future fortunes of our race!
 Let me but prosper, and I make this city
 Free and immortal, and our house's name
 Worthier of what you were, now and hereafter. 47

Enter ISRAEL BERTUCCIO.

I. Ber. Who goes there?
 Doge. A friend to Venice.
 I. Ber. 'Tis he.
 Welcome, my lord,—you are before the time.
 Doge. I am ready to proceed to your assembly. 50
 I. Ber. Have with you.—I am proud and pleased to see Such confident alacrity. Your doubts
 Since our last meeting, then, are all dispell'd?
 Doge. Not so—but I have set my little left
 Of life upon this cast: the die was thrown
 When I first listen'd to your treason.—
 Start not! 56
 That is the word; I cannot shape my tongue
 To syllable black deeds into smooth names,
 Though I be wrought on to commit them.
 When
 I heard you tempt your sovereign, and forbore 60
 To have you dragg'd to prison, I became
 Your guiltiest accomplice: now you may,
 If it so please you, do as much by me.
 I. Ber. Strange words, my lord, and most unmerited;
 I am no spy, and neither are we traitors.
 Doge. We—We!—no matter—you have earn'd the right 66
 To talk of us.—But to the point.—If this Attempt succeeds, and Venice, render'd free
 And flourishing, when we are in our graves,
 Conducts her generations to our tombs,
 And makes her children with their little hands 71

Strew flowers o'er her deliverers' ashes, then
 The consequence will sanctify the deed,
 And we shall be like the two Bruti in
 The annals of hereafter; but if not, 75
 If we should fail, employing bloody means
 And secret plot, although to a good end,
 Still we are traitors, honest Israel;—thou
 No less than he who was thy sovereign
 Six hours ago, and now thy brother rebel.

I. Ber. 'Tis not the moment to consider
 thus, 81

Else I could answer.—Let us to the meeting,
 Or we may be observed in lingering here.

Doge. We are observed, and have been.

I. Ber. We observed!

Let me discover—and this steel—

Doge. Put up;

Here are no human witnesses: look there—
 What see you?

I. Ber. Only a tall warrior's statue
 Bestridding a proud steed, in the dim light
 Of the dull moon.

Doge. That warrior was the sire
 Of my sire's fathers, and that statue was Decreed to him by the twice rescued
 city:— 91

Think you that he looks down on us or no?

I. Ber. My lord, these are mere fantasies; there are

No eyes in marble.

Doge. But there are in Death.
 I tell thee, man, there is a spirit in 95
 Such things that acts and sees, unseen, though felt;

And, if there be a spell to stir the dead,
 'Tis in such deeds as we are now upon.

Deem'st thou the souls of such a race as
 mine

Can rest, when he, their last descendant
 chief, 100

Stands plotting on the brink of their pure
 graves

With stung plebeians?

I. Ber. It had been as well
 To have pondered this before,—ere you embark'd

In our great enterprise.—Do you repent?

Doge. No—but I feel, and shall do to
 the last. 105

I cannot quench a glorious life at once
 Nor dwindle to the thing I now must be,
 And take men's lives by stealth, without some pause;

Yet doubt me not; it is this very feeling,
 And knowing what has wrung me to be
 thus, 110

Which is your best security. There's not
 A roused mechanic in your busy plot

So wrong'd as I, so fall'n, so loudly call'd
 To his redress: the very means I am forced

By these fell tyrants to adopt is such,
 That I abhor them doubly for the deeds

Which I must do to pay them back for
 theirs. 117

I. Ber. Let us away—hark—the hour strikes.

Doge. On—on—

It is our knell, or that of Venice—On.

I. Ber. Say rather, 'tis her freedom's rising peal 120

Of triumph.—This way—we are near the place. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The House where the Conspirators meet.

DAGOLINO, DORO, BERTRAM, FEDELE
 TREVISANO, CALENDARO, ANTONIO
 DELLE BENDE, &c. &c.

Cal. [entering]. Are all here?

Dag. All with you; except the three
 On duty, and our leader Israel,
 Who is expected momentarily.

Cal. Where's Bertram?

Cal. Here!
Cal. Have you not been able to complete

The number wanting in your company?

Ber. I had mark'd out some; but I have not dared 6

To trust them with the secret, till assured
 That they were worthy faith.

Cal. There is no need Of trusting to their faith; who, save ourselves

And our more chosen comrades, is aware Fully of our intent? they think themselves

Engaged in secret to the Signory, 12
 To punish some more dissolute young nobles

Who have defied the law in their excesses;
 But once drawn up, and their new swords
 well flesh'd 15

In the rank hearts of the more odious
 senators,

They will not hesitate to follow up
 Their blow upon the others, when they see

The example of their chiefs, and I for one Will set them such, that they for very
 shame 20

And safety will not pause till all have perish'd.

Ber. How say you? all!

Cal. Whom wouldst thou spare?

Ber. I spare?

I have no power to spare. I only question'd, Thinking that even amongst these wicked
 men

There might be some, whose age and qualities 25

Might mark them out for pity.

Cal. Yes, such pity

As when the viper hath been cut to pieces,
 The separate fragments quivering in the
 sun,

In the last energy of venomous life, Deserve and have. Why, I should think as soon 30

Of pitying some particular fang which made

One in the jaw of the swoln serpent, as Of saving one of these: they form but links
Of one long chain; one mass, one breath,
one body;

They eat, and drink, and live, and breed
together,

Revel, and lie, oppress, and kill in concert,—

So let them die as one!

Dag. Should one survive,
He would be dangerous as the whole; it is
not

Their number, be it tens or thousands, but
The spirit of this aristocracy

Which must be rooted out; and if there
were

A single shoot of the old tree in life,
'Twould fasten in the soil, and spring
again

To gloomy verdure and to bitter fruit.
Bertram, we must be firm!

Cal. Look to it well, 45
Bertram; I have an eye upon thee.

Ber. Who
Distrusts me?

Cal. Not I; for if I did so, Thou wouldst not now be there to talk of
trust:

It is thy softness, not thy want of faith,
Which makes thee to be doubted.

Ber. You should know 50
Who hear me, who and what I am; a man
Roused like yourselves to overthrow oppression;

A kind man, I am apt to think, as some Of you have found me; and if brave or no,
You, Calendaro, can pronounce, who have seen me

Put to the proof; or, if you should have doubts,

I'll clear them on your person!

Cal. You are welcome,
When once our enterprise is o'er, which must not

Be interrupted by a private brawl.

Ber. I am no brawler; but can bear myself

As far among the foe as any he Who hears me; else why have I been selected

To be of your chief comrades? but no less
I own my natural weakness; I have not Yet learn'd to think of indiscriminate murder

Without some sense of shuddering; and
the sight

Of blood which spouts through hoary scalps is not

To me a thing of triumph, nor the death
Of men surprised a glory. Well—too well

I know that we must do such things on
those

Whose acts have raised up such avengers;
but

If there were some of these who could be saved

From out this sweeping fate, for our own sakes

And for our honour, to take off some stain 73
Of massacre, which else pollutes it wholly,
I had been glad; and see no cause in this
For sneer, nor for suspicion!

Dag. Calm thee, Bertram,
For we suspect thee not, and take good
heart.

It is the cause, and not our will, which asks
Such actions from our hands: we'll wash
away

All stains in Freedom's fountain!

Enter ISRAEL BERTUCCIO, and the DOGE, disguised.

Dag. Welcome, Israel.
Consp. Most welcome.—Brave Bertuccio, thou art late—

Who is this stranger?

Cal. It is time to name him.
Our comrades are even now prepared to greet him

In brotherhood, as I have made it known That thou wouldst add a brother to our
cause,

Approved by thee, and thus approved by all, 86
Such is our trust in all thine actions. Now Let him unfold himself.

I. Ber. Stranger, step forth!

[The Doge discovers himself.
Consp. To arms!—we are betray'd—it is the Doge!

Down with them both! our traitorous captain, and
The tyrant he hath sold us to.

Cal. [drawing his sword]. Hold! hold!
Who moves a step against them dies.

Hold! hear
Bertuccio—What! are you appall'd to see

A lone, unguarded, weaponless old man Amongst you?—Israel, speak; what means this mystery?

I. Ber. Let them advance and strike at their own bosoms,

Ungrateful suicides! for on our lives Depend their own, their fortunes, and their hopes.

Doge. Strike!—If I dreaded death, a death more fearful

Than any your rash weapons can inflict, 100
I should not now be here: Oh, noble Courage!

The eldest born of Fear, which makes you
brave

Against this solitary hoary head!
See the bold chiefs, who would reform a
state

And shake down senates, mad with wrath 105
and dread

At sight of one patrician! Butcher me!
You can, I care not.—Israel, are these men
The mighty hearts you spoke of? look upon them!

Cal. Faith! he hath shamed us, and deservedly. 110

Was this your trust in your true chief Bertuccio,
To turn your swords against him and his
guest?

Sheathe them, and hear him.

I. Ber. I disdain to speak.
They might and must have known a heart like mine 114

Incapable of treachery; and the power
They gave me to adopt all fitting means
To further their design was ne'er abused.
They might be certain that whoe'er was brought

By me into this council had been led To take his choice—as brother, or as
victim. 120

Doge. And which am I to be? your actions leave
Some cause to doubt the freedom of the choice.

I. Ber. My lord, we would have perish'd here together,

Had these rash men proceeded; but, be-
hold,

They are ashamed of that mad moment's impulse, 125

And droop their heads; believe me, they are such

As I described them.—Speak to them.

Cal. Ay, speak;
We are all listening in wonder.

I. Ber. [addressing the conspirators].
You are safe,

Nay, more, almost triumphant—listen
then, 129

And know my words for truth.

Doge. You see me here,
As one of you hath said, an old, unarm'd, Defenceless man; and yesterday you saw
me

Presiding in the hall of ducal state,
Apparent sovereign of our hundred isles,
Robed in official purple, dealing out
The edicts of a power which is not mine,
Nor yours, but of our masters—the patricians.

Why I was there you know, or think you
know;

Why I am here, he who hath been most wrong'd,

He who among you hath been most in-sulted, 140

Outraged, and trodden on, until he doubt
If he be worm or no, may answer for me,
Asking of his own heart what brought him
here?

You know my recent story, all men know
it.

And judge of it far differently from those Who sate in judgment to heap scorn on scorn. 146

But spare me the recital—it is here,
Here at my heart the outrage—but my
words,

Already spent in unavailing plaints,
Would only show my feebleness the more,
And I come here to strengthen even the
strong, 151

And urge them on to deeds, and not to war
With woman's weapons; but I need not urge you.

Our private wrongs have sprung from public vices,

In this—I cannot call it commonwealth,
Nor kingdom, which hath neither prince nor people, 156

But all the sins of the old Spartan state Without its virtues—temperance and valour.

The Lords of Lacedæmon were true soldiers, 159

But ours are Sybarites, while we are Helots,
Of whom I am the lowest, most enslaved;
Although dress'd out to head a pageant, as The Greeks of yore made drunk their slaves to form

A pastime for their children. You are met
To overthrow this monster of a state,
This mockery of a government, this spectre, 166

Which must be exorcised with blood,—
and then

We will renew the times of truth and justice,
Condensing in a fair free commonwealth
Not rash equality but equal rights, 170 Proportion'd like the columns to the temple,

Giving and taking strength reciprocal,
And making firm the whole with grace and
beauty, 173

So that no part could be removed without Infringement of the general symmetry.

In operating this great change, I claim
To be one of you—if you trust in me;
If not, strike home,—my life is compromised, 178

And I would rather fall by freemen's hands
Than live another day to act the tyrant
As delegate of tyrants: such I am not,
And never have been—read it in our annals;

I can appeal to my past government
In many lands and cities; they can tell you
If I were an oppressor, or a man 185

Feeling and thinking for my fellow men.
Haply had I been what the senate sought,

A thing of robes and trinkets, dizen'd out
To sit in state as for a sovereign's picture;
A popular scourge, a ready sentence-signer, 190

A stickler for the Senate and 'the Forty',
A sceptic of all measures which had not

The sanction of 'the Ten', a council-fawner,

A tool, a fool, a puppet,—they had ne'er Foster'd the wretch who stung me. What I suffer 195

Has reach'd me through my pity for the people;

That many know, and they who know not
yet

Will one day learn: meantime I do devote,
Whate'er the issue, my last days of life—
My present power such as it is, not that Of Doge, but of a man who has been great
Before he was degraded to a Doge, 202
And still has individual means and mind;
I stake my fame (and I had fame)—my
breath—

(The least of all, for its last hours are nigh)
My heart, my hope, my soul, upon this
cast! 206

Such as I am, I offer me to you
And to your chiefs; accept me or reject me,—
A Prince who fain would be a citizen

Or nothing, and who has left his throne to
be so. 210

Cal. Long live Faliero!—Venice shall be free!

Consp. Long live Faliero!

I. Ber. Comrades! did I well?

Is not this man a host in such a cause?

Doge. This is no time for eulogies, nor
place

For exultation. Am I one of you? 215

Cal. Ay, and the first among us, as thou hast been

Of Venice—be our general and chief.

Doge. Chief!—general!—I was general at Zara,

And chief in Rhodes and Cyprus, prince in Venice: 219

I cannot stoop—that is, I am not fit
To lead a band of—patriots: when I lay

Aside the dignities which I have borne,
'Tis not to put on others, but to be

Mate to my fellows—but now to the point;
Israel has stated to me your whole plan—

'Tis bold, but feasible if I assist it, 226
And must be set in motion instantly.

Cal. E'en when thou wilt. Is it not so,
my friends?

I have disposed all for a sudden blow;
When shall it be then?

Doge. At sunrise.

Ber. So soon?

Doge. So soon?—so late—each hour accumulates 231

Peril on peril, and the more so now Since I have mingled with you;—know you not

The Council, and 'the Ten'? the spies, the
eyes

Of the patricians dubious of their slaves,
And now more dubious of the prince they have made one? 236

I tell you, you must strike, and suddenly, Full to the Hydra's heart—its heads will follow.

Cal. With all my soul and sword, I yield assent; 239

Our companies are ready, sixty each,
And all now under arms by Israel's order;
Each at their different place of rendezvous,
And vigilant, expectant of some blow;
Let each repair for action to his post!
And now, my lord, the signal?

Doge. When you hear

The great bell of St. Mark's, which may not be 246

Struck without special order of the Doge (The last poor privilege they leave their prince),

March on Saint Mark's!

I. Ber. And there?—

Doge. By different routes

Let your march be directed, every sixty Entering a separate avenue, and still 251

Upon the way let your cry be of war
And of the Genoese fleet, by the first dawn

Discern'd before the port; form round the
palace,

Within whose court will be drawn out in arms 255

My nephew and the clients of our house,
Many and martial; while the bell tolls on,

Shout ye, 'Saint Mark!—the foe is on our
waters!'

Cal. I see it now—but on, my noble lord.

Doge. All the patricians flocking to the Council, 260

(Which they dare not refuse, at the dread signal

Peeling from out their patron saint's proud
tower),

Will then be gather'd in unto the harvest,
And we will reap them with the sword for sickle.

If some few should be tardy or absent
them, 265

'Twill be but to be taken faint and single,
When the majority are put to rest.

Cal. Would that the hour were come!

we will not scotch,
But kill.

Ber. Once more, sir, with your pardon, I Would now repeat the question which I

ask'd 270

Before Bertuccio added to our cause
This great ally who renders it more sure,

And therefore safer, and as such admits
Some dawn of mercy to a portion of

Our victims—must all perish in this slaughter? 275

Cal. All who encounter me and mine,
be sure,

The mercy they have shown, I show.
Consp. All! all!

Is this a time to talk of pity? when
Have they e'er shown, or felt, or feign'd it?

I. Ber.Bertram,

This false compassion is a folly, and Injustice to thy comrades and thy cause!
 Dost thou not see, that if we single out
 Some for escape, they live but to avenge
 The fallen? and how distinguish now the innocent

From out the guilty? all their acts are
 one— 285

A single emanation from one body,
 Together knit for our oppression! 'Tis Much that we let their children live; I
 doubt 288

If all of these even should be set apart:
 The hunter may reserve some single cub
 From out the tiger's litter, but whoe'er
 Would seek to save the spotted sire or dam,
 Unless to perish by their fangs? however,
 I will abide by Doge Faliero's counsel:
 Let him decide if any should be saved.

Doge. Ask me not—tempt me not with such a question—
 Decide yourselves. 296

I. Ber. You know their private virtues
 Far better than we can, to whom alone
 Their public vices, and most foul oppres-
 sion,

Have made them dead; if there be amongst them 300
 One who deserves to be repeal'd, pronounce.

Doge. Dolfino's father was my friend, and Lando Fought by my side, and Marc Cornaro
 shared

My Genoese embassy: I saved the life
 Of Veniero—shall I save it twice? 305
 Would that I could save them and Venice
 also!

All these men, or their fathers, were my
 friends

Till they became my subjects; then fell from me

As faithless leaves drop from the o'er-blown flower, 309

All left me a lone blighted thorny stalk,
 Which, in its solitude, can shelter nothing;
 So, as they let me wither, let them perish.

Cal. They cannot co-exist with Venice's freedom!

Doge. Ye, though you know and feel our mutual mass 314

Of many wrongs, even ye are ignorant
 What fatal poison to the springs of life,
 To human ties, and all that's good and
 dear,

Lurks in the present institutes of Venice:
 All these men were my friends: I loved them, they

Requited honourably my regards; 320
 We served and fought; we smiled and wept
 in concert;

We revell'd or we sorrow'd side by side:
 We made alliances of blood and marriage;

We grew in years and honours fairly,—till
 Their own desire, not my ambition, made Them choose me for their prince, and then
 farewell! 326

Farewell all social memory! all thoughts
 In common! and sweet bonds which link old friendships,

When the survivors of long years and actions,

Which now belong to history, soothe the
 days 330

Which yet remain by treasuring each other,
 And never meet, but each beholds the mirror

Of half a century on his brother's brow,
 And sees a hundred beings, now in earth,
 Flit round them whispering of the days gone by, 335

And seeming not all dead, as long as two Of the brave, joyous, reckless, glorious
 band,

Which once were one and many, still retain
 A breath to sigh for them, a tongue to speak Of deeds that else were silent, save on marble— 340

Oimé! Oimé!—and must I do this deed?

I. Ber. My lord, you are much moved:
 it is not now

That such things must be dwelt upon.
Doge. Your patience

A moment—I recede not: mark with me
 The gloomy vices of this government.
 From the hour they made me Doge, the Doge THEY made me—

Farewell the past! I died to all that had been,
 Or rather they to me: no friends, no kind-
 ness,

No privacy of life—all were cut off:
 They came not near me, such approach gave umbrage; 350

They could not love me, such was not the
 law;

They thwarted me, 'twas the state's policy;
 They baffled me, 'twas a patrician's duty;
 They wrong'd me, for such was to right the
 state;

They could not right me, that would give suspicion; 355

So that I was a slave to my own subjects;
 So that I was a foe to my own friends;
 Begirt with spies for guards, with robes for
 power,

With pomp for freedom, gaolers for a
 council,

Inquisitors for friends, and hell for life!
 I had one only fount of quiet left, 361
 And that they poison'd! My pure household gods

Were shiver'd on my hearth, and o'er their
 shrine

Sate grinning Ribaldry and sneering Scorn.
I. Ber. You have been deeply wrong'd, and now shall be 365

Nobly avenged before another night.

Doge. I had borne all—it hurt me, but I bore it—
 Till this last running over of the cup
 Of bitterness—until this last loud insult,
 Not only unredress'd, but sanction'd;
 then, 370
 And thus, I cast all further feelings from
 me—
 The feelings which they crush'd for me, long, long Before, even in their oath of false allegiance!
 Even in that very hour and vow, they abjured
 Their friend and made a sovereign, as boys make 375
 Playthings, to do their pleasure—and be broken!
 I from that hour have seen but senators
 In dark suspicious conflict with the Doge,
 Brooding with him in mutual hate and fear;
 They dreading he should snatch the tyranny 380
 From out their grasp, and he abhorring tyrants.
 To me, then, these men have no private life,
 Nor claim to ties they have cut off from
 others;
 As senators for arbitrary acts
 Amenable, I look on them—as such 385
 Let them be dealt upon.
Cal. And now to action!
 Hence, brethren, to our posts, and may this be
 The last night of mere words: I'd fain be doing!
 Saint Mark's great bell at dawn shall find me wakeful!
I. Ber. Success then to your posts: be firm and vigilant; 390
 Think on the wrongs we bear, the rights
 we claim.
 This day and night shall be the last of
 peril!
 Watch for the signal, and then march. I go To join my band; let each be prompt to marshal
 His separate charge: the Doge will now
 return 395
 To the palace to prepare all for the blow.
 We part to meet in freedom and in glory!
Cal. Doge, when I greet you next, my homage to you
 Shall be the head of Steno on this sword!
Doge. No; let him be reserved unto the
 last, 400
 Nor turn aside to strike at such a prey,
 Till nobler game is quarried: his offence
 Was a mere ebullition of the vice,
 The general corruption generated 404
 By the foul aristocracy: he could not—
 He dared not in more honourable days Have risk'd it. I have merged all private wrath

Against him in the thought of our great purpose.
 A slave insults me—I require his punishment
 From his proud master's hands; if he refuse it, 410
 The offence grows his, and let him answer it.
Cal. Yet, as the immediate cause of the alliance
 Which consecrates our undertaking more,
 I owe him such deep gratitude, that fain
 I would repay him as he merits; may I?
Doge. You would but lop the hand, and I the head; 416
 You would but smite the scholar, I the
 master;
 You would but punish Steno, I the senate.
 I cannot pause on individual hate,
 In the absorbing, sweeping, whole revenge,
 Which, like the sheeted fire from heaven,
 must blast 421
 Without distinction, as it fell of yore,
 Where the Dead Sea hath quench'd two cities' ashes.
I. Ber. Away, then, to your posts! I but remain
 A moment to accompany the Doge 425
 To our late place of tryst, to see no spies
 Have been upon the scout, and thence I hasten
 To where my allotted band is under arms.
Cal. Farewell, then,—until dawn!
I. Ber. Success go with you!
Consp. We will not fail—Away! My lord, farewell! 430
 [The Conspirators salute the DOGE and ISRAEL BERTUCCIO, and retire, headed by PHILIP CALENDARO. The DOGE and ISRAEL BERTUCCIO remain.]
I. Ber. We have them in the toil—it cannot fail!
 Now thou'rt indeed a sovereign, and wilt
 make
 A name immortal greater than the greatest.
 Free citizens have struck at kings ere now;
 Cæsars have fallen, and even patrician
 hands 435
 Have crush'd dictators, as the popular steel
 Has reach'd patricians: but, until this hour,
 What prince has plotted for his people's freedom? 438
 Or risk'd a life to liberate his subjects?
 For ever, and for ever, they conspire
 Against the people, to abuse their hands
 To chains, but laid aside to carry weapons
 Against the fellow nations, so that yoke
 On yoke, and slavery and death may whet,
 Not glut, the never-gorged Leviathan!
 Now, my lord, to our enterprise;—'tis
 great, 446
 And greater the reward; why stand you
 rapt?
 A moment back, and you were all impatience!

Doge. And is it then decided! must they die?

I. Ber. Who?

Doge. My own friends by blood and courtesy, 450

And many deeds and days—the senators?

I. Ber. You pass'd their sentence, and it is a just one.

Doge. Ay, so it seems, and so it is to you;

You are a patriot, plebeian Gracchus—
The rebels' oracle, the people's tribune—
I blame you not—you act in your vocation; 456

They smote you, and oppress'd you, and despised you;

So they have me; but you ne'er spake with them;

You never broke their bread, nor shared their salt;

You never had their wine-cup at your lips; You grew not up with them, nor laugh'd, nor wept, 461

Nor held a revel in their company; Ne'er smiled to see them smile, nor claim'd their smile

In social interchange for yours, nor trusted Nor wore them in your heart of hearts, as I have: 465

These hairs of mine are grey, and so are theirs,

The elders of the Council: I remember When all our locks were like the raven's wing,

As we went forth to take our prey around The isles wrung from the false Mahometan; 470

And can I see them dabbled o'er with blood? Each stab to them will seem my suicide.

I. Ber. Doge! Doge! this vacillation is unworthy

A child; if you are not in second childhood, Call back your nerves to your own purpose, nor 475

Thus shame yourself and me. By heavens! I'd rather Forego even now, or fail in our intent, Than see the man I venerate subside From high resolves into such shallow weakness!

You have seen blood in battle, shed it, both 480

Your own and that of others; can you shrink then

From a few drops from veins of hoary vampires,

Who but give back what they have drain'd from millions?

Doge. Bear with me! Step by step, and blow on blow,

I will divide with you; think not waver: Ah! no; it is the certainty of all 486

Which I must do doth make me tremble thus.

But let these last and lingering thoughts have way,
To which you only and the night are conscious,
And both regardless: when the hour arrives, 490

'Tis mine to sound the knell, and strike the blow,
Which shall unpeople many palaces,
And hew the highest genealogic trees
Down to the earth, strew'd with their bleeding fruit, 494

And crush their blossoms into barrenness: This will I—must I—have I sworn to do, Nor ought can turn me from my destiny: But still I quiver to behold what I Must be, and think what I have been! Bear with me.

I. Ber. Re-man your breast; I feel no such remorse, 500

I understand it not: why should you change?

You acted, and you act, on your free will.

Doge. Ay, there it is—you feel not, nor do I,

Else I should stab thee on the spot, to save A thousand lives, and killing, do no murder; 505

You feel not—you go to this butcher-work As if these high-born men were steers for shambles:

When all is over, you'll be free and merry, And calmly wash those hands incarnadine; But I, outgoing thee and all thy fellows
In this surpassing massacre, shall be, Shall see and feel—oh God! oh God! 'tis true, 512

And thou dost well to answer that it was 'My own free will and act,' and yet you err, For I will do this! Doubt not—fear not; I Will be your most unmerciful accomplice! And yet I act no more on my free will, Nor my own feelings—both compel me back;

But there is hell within me and around, And like the demon who believes and trembles 520

Must I abhor and do. Away! away! Get thee unto thy fellows, I will hie me To gather the retainers of our house. Doubt not, St. Mark's great bell shall wake all Venice, 524

Except her slaughtered senate: ere the sun Be broad upon the Adriatic there Shall be a voice of weeping, which shall drown
The roar of waters in the cry of blood! I am resolved—come on.

I. Ber. With all my soul! Keep a firm rein upon these bursts of passion; 530

Remember what these men have dealt to thee,
And that this sacrifice will be succeeded

By ages of prosperity and freedom
 To this unshackled city: a true tyrant Would have depopulated empires, nor Have felt the strange compunction which hath wrung you 536
 To punish a few traitors to the people.
 Trust me, such were a pity more misplaced
 Than the late mercy of the state to Steno.
Doge. Man, thou hast struck upon the chord which jars 540
 All nature from my heart. Hence to our task! [Exeunt.]

ACT IV

SCENE I.—Palazzo of the Patrician LIONI.

LIONI laying aside the mask and cloak which the Venetian Nobles wore in public, attended by a Domestic.

Lioni. I will to rest, right weary of this revel,
 The gayest we have held for many moons,
 And yet, I know not why, it cheer'd me not;
 There came a heaviness across my heart,
 Which, in the lightest movement of the dance, 5
 Though eye to eye, and hand in hand
 united
 Even with the lady of my love, oppress'd
 me,
 And through my spirit chill'd my blood,
 until
 A damp like death rose o'er my brow; I strove
 To slough the thought away, but 'twould
 not be; 10
 Through all the music ringing in my ears
 A knell was sounding as distinct and clear,
 Though low and far, as e'er the Adrian
 wave
 Rose o'er the city's murmur in the night,
 Dashing against the outward Lido's bul-
 work: 15
 So that I left the festival before
 It reach'd its zenith, and will woo my pil-
 low
 For thoughts more tranquil, or forgetful-
 ness.
Antonio, take my mask and cloak, and
 light 19
 The lamp within my chamber.
Ant. Yes, my lord:
 Command you no refreshment?
Lioni. Nought, save sleep,
 Which will not be commanded. Let me hope it, [Exit ANTONIO.
 Though my breast feels too anxious; I will try
 Whether the air will calm my spirits: 'tis A goodly night; the cloudy wind which blew 25
 From the Levant hath crept into its cave,
 And the broad moon hath brighten'd. What a stillness! [Goes to an open lattice.

And what a contrast with the scene I left,
 Where the tall torches' glare, and silver lamps'
 More pallid gleam along the tapestried
 walls, 30
 Spread over the reluctant gloom which haunts
 Those vast and dimly-latticed galleries
 A dazzling mass of artificial light, Which show'd all things, but nothing as they were. 34
 There Age essaying to recall the past,
 After long striving for the hues of youth
 At the sad labour of the toilet, and Full many a glance at the too faithful
 mirror,
 Prank'd forth in all the pride of ornament,
 Forgot itself, and trusting to the falsehood
 Of the indulgent beams, which show, yet
 hide, 41
 Believed itself forgotten, and was fool'd.
 There Youth, which needed not, nor thought of such Vain adjuncts, lavish'd its true bloom, and health,
 And bridal beauty, in the unwholesome
 press 45
 Of flush'd and crowded wassailers, and wasted
 Its hours of rest in dreaming this was
 pleasure,
 And so shall waste them till the sunrise
 streams
 On sallow cheeks and sunken eyes, which should not 49
 Have worn this aspect yet for many a year.
 The music, and the banquet, and the wine,
 The garlands, the rose odours, and the
 flowers,
 The sparkling eyes, and flashing ornaments,
 The white arms and the raven hair, the braids
 And bracelets; swanlike bosoms, and the necklace, 55
 An India in itself, yet dazzling not
 The eye like what it circled; the thin robes, Floating like light clouds 'twixt our gaze
 and heaven;
 The many-twinkling feet so small and sylph-like,
 Suggesting the more secret symmetry 60
 Of the fair forms which terminate so well—
 All the delusion of the dizzy scene,
 Its false and true enchantments—art and
 nature,
 Which swam before my giddy eyes, that drank
 The sight of beauty as the parched pilgrim's
 On Arab sands the false mirage, which offers 66
 A lucid lake to his eluded thirst, Are gone. Around me are the stars and
 waters—

Worlds mirror'd in the ocean, goodlier
 sight 69
 Than torches glared back by a gaudy glass;
 And the great element, which is to space
 What ocean is to earth, spreads its blue
 depths,
 Soften'd with the first breathings of the
 spring;
 The high moon sails upon her beauteous
 way, 74
 Serenely smoothing o'er the lofty walls
 Of those tall piles and sea-girt palaces,
 Whose porphyry pillars, and whose costly fronts,
 Fraught with the orient spoil of many marbles,
 Like altars ranged along the broad canal,
 Seem each a trophy of some mighty deed Rear'd up from out the waters, scarce less strangely 81
 Than those more massy and mysterious giants
 Of architecture, those Titanian fabrics, Which point in Egypt's plains to times that
 have 84
 No other record. All is gentle; nought
 Stirs rudely; but, congenial with the night,
 Whatever walks is gliding like a spirit.
 The tinklings of some vigilant guitars
 Of sleepless lovers to a wakeful mistress,
 And cautious opening of the casement,
 showing 90
 That he is not unheard; while her young
 hand,
 Fair as the moonlight of which it seems part,
 So delicately white, it trembles in
 The act of opening the forbidden lattice,
 To let in love through music, makes his
 heart 95
 Thrill like his lyre-strings at the sight; the dash
 Phosphoric of the oar, or rapid twinkle
 Of the far lights of skimming gondolas,
 And the responsive voices of the choir
 Of boatmen answering back with verse for
 verse; 100
 Some dusky shadow checkering the Rialto;
 Some glimmering palace roof, or tapering
 spire,
 Are all the sights and sounds which here
 pervade
 The ocean-born and earth-commanding
 city—
 How sweet and soothing is this hour of calm! 105
 I thank thee, Night! for thou hast chased
 away
 Those horrid bodements which, amidst
 the throng,
 I could not dissipate: and with the blessing
 Of thy benign and quiet influence, 109
 Now will I to my couch, although to rest
 Is almost wronging such a night as this.—
 [A knocking is heard from without.

Hark! what is that? or who at such a moment?

Enter ANTONIO.

Ant. My lord, a man without, on urgent business,
 Implores to be admitted.

Lioni. Is he a stranger?

Ant. His face is muffled in his cloak,
 but both 115

His voice and gestures seem familiar to
 me;

I craved his name, but this he seem'd reluctant

To trust, save to yourself; most earnestly
 He sues to be permitted to approach you.

Lioni. 'Tis a strange hour, and a suspicious bearing! 120

And yet there is slight peril: 'tis not in Their houses noble men are struck at; still,
 Although I know not that I have a foe
 In Venice, 'twill be wise to use some caution.

Admit him, and retire; but call up quickly
 Some of thy fellows, who may wait with-
 out.— 126

Who can this man be?

[Exit ANTONIO, and returns with BER-TRAM muffled.

Ber. My good lord Lioni,
 I have no time to lose, nor thou,—dismiss This menial hence; I would be private with
 you.

Lioni. It seems the voice of Bertram—
 Go, Antonio. [Exit ANTONIO.

Now, stranger, what would you at such an
 hour? 131

Ber. [discovering himself]. A boon, my noble patron; you have granted
 Many to your poor client, Bertram; add
 This one, and make him happy.

Lioni. Thou hast known me
 From boyhood, ever ready to assist thee
 In all fair objects of advancement, which Beseem one of thy station; I would promise Ere thy request was heard, but that the
 hour, 138

Thy bearing, and this strange, and hurried mode

Of suing, gives me to suspect this visit
 Hath some mysterious import—but say
 on— 141

What has occurred, some rash and sudden broil?—

A cup too much, a scuffle, and a stab?—
 Mere things of every day; so that thou hast
 not

Spilt noble blood, I guarantee thy safety;
 But then thou must withdraw, for angry
 friends 146

And relatives, in the first burst of vengeance,

Are things in Venice deadlier than the laws.

Ber. My lord, I thank you; but—Lioni. But what? You have not Raised a rash hand against one of our
 order? 150

If so, withdraw and fly, and own it not;
 I would not slay—but then I must not save
 thee!

He who has shed patrician blood—

Ber. I come
 To save patrician blood, and not to shed it!
 And thereunto I must be speedy, for Each minute lost may lose a life; since
 Time

Has changed his slow scythe for the two-edged sword, 157

And is about to take, instead of sand,
 The dust from sepulchres to fill his hour-
 glass!—

Go not thou forth to-morrow!

Lioni. Wherefore not?
 What means this menace?

Ber. Do not seek its meaning,
 But do as I implore thee;—stir not forth, Whate'er be stirring; though the roar of crowds—

The cry of women, and the shrieks of babes—

The groans of men—the clash of arms—
 the sound 165

Of rolling drum, shrill trumpet, and hollow
 bell,

Peal in one wild alarm!—Go not forth,
 Until the tocsin's silent, nor even then Till I return!

Lioni. Again, what does this mean?

Ber. Again, I tell thee, ask not; but by
 all 170

Thou holdest dear on earth or heaven—by
 all

The souls of thy great fathers, and thy
 hope

To emulate them, and to leave behind Descendants worthy both of them and
 thee—

By all thou hast of bless'd in hope or memory— 175

By all thou hast to fear here or hereafter—

By all the good deeds thou hast done to
 me,

Good I would now repay with greater
 good,

Remain within—trust to thy household
 gods, 179

And to my word for safety, if thou dost

As I now counsel—but if not, thou art
 lost!

Lioni. I am indeed already lost in wonder;

Surely thou ravest! what have I to dread?
 Who are my foes? or if there be such, why
 Art thou leagued with them? thou! or if so leagued, 185

Why counsel thou to tell me at this hour,
 And not before?

Ber. I cannot answer this.
 Wilt thou go forth despite of this true warning?

Lioni. I was not born to shrink from idle threats, 189

The cause of which I know not: at the hour
 Of council, be it soon or late, I shall not Be found among the absent.

Ber. Say not so!
 Once more, art thou determined to go
 forth?

Lioni. I am. Nor is there aught which shall impede me!

Ber. Then, Heaven have mercy on thy soul!—Farewell! [Going.]

Lioni. Stay—there is more in this than my own safety 196

Which makes me call thee back; we must not part thus:

Bertram, I have known thee long.

Ber. From childhood, signor,
 You have been my protector: in the days
 Of reckless infancy, when rank forgets,
 Or, rather, is not yet taught to remember,
 Its cold prerogative, we play'd together;
 Our sports, our smiles, our tears, were mingled oft;

My father was your father's client, I
 His son's scarce less than foster-brother;
 years 205

Saw us together—happy, heart-full hours!
 Oh God! the difference 'twixt those hours
 and this!

Lioni. Bertram, 'tis thou who hast forgotten them.

Ber. Nor now, nor ever; whatsoe'er be-
 tide,

I would have saved you: when to man-hood's growth 210

We sprung, and you, devoted to the state,
 As suits your station, the more humble

Bertram

Was left unto the labours of the humble, Still you forsook me not; and if my fortunes

Have not been towering, 'twas no fault of
 him 215

Who oftimes rescued and supported me,
 When struggling with the tides of circumstance,

Which bear away the weaker: noble blood
 Ne'er mantled in a nobler heart than thine

Has proved to me, the poor plebeian Bertram. 220

Would that thy fellow senators were like
 thee!

Lioni. Why, what hast thou to say against the senate?

Ber. Nothing.

Lioni. I know that there are angry spirits 223

And turbulent mutterers of stifled treason,
 Who lurk in narrow places, and walk out
 Muffled to whisper curses to the night;

Disbanded soldiers, discontented ruffians,
And desperate libertines who brawl in taverns;

Thou herdest not with such: 'tis true, of late
I have lost sight of thee, but thou wert
wont 230

To lead a temperate life, and break thy bread
With honest mates, and bear a cheerful aspect.

What hue! come to thee? in thy hollow eye
And hueless cheek, and thine unquiet motions,

Sorrow and shame and conscience seem at
war 235

To waste thee.

Ber. Rather shame and sorrow light
On the accursed tyranny which rides
The very air in Venice, and makes men
Madden as in the last hours of the plague Which sweeps the soul deliriously from
life! 240

Lioni. Some villains have been tampering with thee, Bertram;

This is not thy old language, nor own
thoughts;

Some wretch has made thee drunk with disaffection:

But thou must not be lost so; thou wert
good 244

And kind, and art not fit for such base acts
As vice and villainy would put thee to:
Confess—confide in me—thou know'st
my nature. 247

What is it thou and thine are bound to do,
Which should prevent thy friend, the only
son

Of him who was a friend unto thy father,
So that our good-will is a heritage 251

We should bequeath to our posterity
Such as ourselves received it, or augmented;

I say, what is it thou must do, that I Should deem thee dangerous, and keep the
house 255

Like a sick girl?

Ber. Nay, question me no further:
I must be gone.

Lioni. And I be murder'd!—say,
Was it not thus thou said'st, my gentle
Bertram?

Ber. Who talks of murder? what said I of murder?

'Tis false! I did not utter such a word.

Lioni. Thou didst not; but from out thy wolfish eye, 261

So changed from what I knew it, there glares forth

The gladiator. If my life's thine object,
Take it—I am unarm'd,—and then away!
I would not hold my breath on such a tenure 265

As the capricious mercy of such things
As thou and those who have set thee to thy taskwork.

Ber. Sooner than spill thy blood, I peril
mine;

Sooner than harm a hair of thine, I place
In jeopardy a thousand heads, and some
As noble, nay, even nobler than thine own.

Lioni. Ay, is it even so? Excuse me,
Bertram; 272

I am not worthy to be singled out
From such exalted hecatombs—who are
they

That are in danger, and that make the danger? 275

Ber. Venice, and all that she inherits,
are

Divided like a house against itself,
And so will perish ere to-morrow's twi-
light!

Lioni. More mysteries, and awful ones!
But now,

Or thou, or I, or both, it may be, are Upon the verge of ruin; speak once out,
And thou art safe and glorious; for 'tis
more 282

Glorious to save than slay, and slay i' the dark too—

Fie, Bertram! that was not a craft for thee!
How would it look to see upon a spear

The head of him whose heart was open to
thee, 286

Borne by thy hand before the shuddering
people?

And such may be my doom; for here I
swear,

Whate'er the peril or the penalty
Of thy denunciation, I go forth, 290

Unless thou dost detail the cause, and
show

The consequence of all which led thee here!

Ber. Is there no way to save thee?
minutes fly,

And thou art lost!—thou! my sole benefactor,

The only being who was constant to me Through every change. Yet, make me not a traitor! 296

Let me save thee—but spare my honour!
Lioni. Where

Can lie the honour in a league of murder?
And who are traitors save unto the
state?

Ber. A league is still a compact, and more binding 300

In honest hearts when words must stand for law;

And in my mind, there is no traitor like
He whose domestic treason plants the poniard

Within the breast which trusted to his
truth. 304

Lioni. And who will strike the steel to
mine?

Ber. Not I;

I could have wound my soul up to all
things

Save this. Thou must not die! and think how dear
 Thy life is, when I risk so many lives,
 Nay, more, the life of lives, the liberty
 Of future generations, not to be 310
 The assassin thou miscall'st me;—once,
 once more

I do adjure thee, pass not o'er thy threshold!
Lioni. It is in vain—this moment I go
 forth.

Ber. Then perish Venice rather than my
 friend!

I will disclose—ensnare—betray—destroy— 315

Oh, what a villain I become for thee!

Lioni. Say, rather, thy friend's saviour and the state's!—

Speak—pause not—all rewards, all pledges for

Thy safety and thy welfare; wealth such as The state accords her worthiest servants;
 nay, 320

Nobility itself I guarantee thee,
 So that thou art sincere and penitent.

Ber. I have thought again: it must not be—I love thee—

Thou know'st it—that I stand here is the
 proof,

Not least though last; but having done my
 duty 325

By thee, I now must do it by my country!
 Farewell—we meet no more in life!—fare-
 well!

Lioni. What, ho!—Antonio—Pedro—to the door!

See that none pass—arrest this man!—

Enter ANTONIO and other armed Domestics, who seize BERTRAM.

Lioni [continues]. Take care
 He hath no harm; bring me my sword and
 cloak, 330
 And man the gondola with four oars—quick—

[Exit ANTONIO.

We will unto Giovanni Gradenigo's,
 And send for Marc Cornaro:—fear not,
 Bertram; 333

This needful violence is for thy safety,
 No less than for the general weal.

Ber. Where wouldst thou Bear me a prisoner?

Lioni. Firstly to 'the Ten';

Next to the Doge.

Ber. To the Doge?

Lioni. Assuredly:

Is he not chief of the state?

Ber. Perhaps at sunrise—

Lioni. What mean you?—but we'll know anon.

Ber. Art sure?

Lioni. Sure as all gentle means can make; and if 340

They fail, you know 'the Ten' and their tribunal,

And that St. Mark's has dungeons, and the dungeons

A rack.

Ber. Apply it then before the dawn
 Now hastening into heaven.—One more such word,

 And you shall perish piecemeal, by the
 death 345

You think to doom to me.

Re-enter ANTONIO.

Ant. The bark is ready,
 My lord, and all prepared.

Lioni. Look to the prisoner.
 Bertram, I'll reason with thee as we go To the Magnifico's, sage Gradenigo.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Ducal Palace.—The Doge's Apartment.

The DOGE and his Nephew BERTUCCIO FALIERO.

Doge. Are all the people of our house in muster?

Ber. F. They are array'd, and eager for
 the signal,

Within our palace precincts at San Polo.
 I come for your last orders.

Doge. It had been
 As well had there been time to have got together, 5

From my own fief, Val di Marino, more
 Of our retainers—but it is too late.

Ber. F. Methinks, my lord, 'tis better as it is:

A sudden swelling of our retinue
 Had waked suspicion; and, though fierce and trusty, 10

The vassals of that district are too rude
 And quick in quarrel to have long main-
 tain'd

The secret discipline we need for such A service, till our foes are dealt upon.

Doge. True; but when once the signal has been given, 15

These are the men for such an enterprise;
 These city slaves have all their private bias
 Their prejudice against or for this noble,

Which may induce them to o'erdo or spare Where mercy may be madness; the fierce peasants, 20

Serfs of my county of Val di Marino, Would do the bidding of their lord with-
 out

Distinguishing for love or hate his toes;
 Alike to them Marcello or Cornaro,

A Gradenigo or a Foscari; 25
 They are not used to start at those vain
 names,

Nor bow the knee before a civic senate;
 A chief in armour is their Suzerain,

And not a thing in robes.

Ber. F. We are enough;
And for the dispositions of our clients
Against the senate I will answer.

Doge. Well,
The die is thrown; but for a warlike service,

Done in the field, commend me to my
peasants:

They made the sun shine through the host of Huns

When sallow burghers slunk back to their tents,

And cower'd to hear their own victorious trumpet.

If there be small resistance you will find
These citizens all lions, like their standard;
But if there's much to do, you'll wish,
with me,

A band of iron rustics at our backs.

Ber. F. Thus thinking, I must marvel you resolve

To strike the blow so suddenly.

Doge. Such blows
Must be struck suddenly or never. When I had o'ermaster'd the weak false remorse
Which yearn'd about my heart, too fondly yielding

A moment to the feelings of old days,
I was most fain to strike; and, firstly, that I might not yield again to such emotions;
And, secondly, because of all these men,
Save Israel and Philip Calendaro,
I know not well the courage or the faith:
To-day might find 'mongst them a traitor
to us,

As yesterday a thousand to the senate;
But once in, with their hilts hot in their
hands,

They must on for their own sakes: one stroke struck,

And the mere instinct of the first-born Cain,
Which ever lurks somewhere in human
hearts,

Though circumstance may keep it in abeyance,

Will urge the rest on like to wolves; the
sight

Of blood to crowds begets the thirst of
more,

As the first wine-cup leads to the long revel;
And you will find a harder task to quell
Than urge them when they have commenced, but till

That moment, a mere voice, a straw, a
shadow,

Are capable of turning them aside.—
How goes the night?

Ber. F. Almost upon the dawn.

Doge. Then it is time to strike upon the bell.

Are the men posted?

Ber. F. By this time they are;
But they have orders not to strike, until

They have command from you through me in person.

Doge. 'Tis well.—Will the morn never put to rest

These stars which twinkle yet o'er all the heavens?

I am settled and bound up, and being so,
The very effort which it cost me to Resolve to cleanse this commonwealth

with fire,

Now leaves my mind more steady. I have
wept

And trembled at the thought of this dread
duty;

But now I have put down all idle passion,
And look the growing tempest in the face,

As doth the pilot of an admiral galley:
Yet (wouldst thou think it, kinsman?) it hath been

A greater struggle to me, than when nations

Beheld their fate merged in the approaching fight,

Where I was leader of a phalanx, where Thousands were sure to perish—Yes, to spill

The rank polluted current from the veins
Of a few bloated despots needed more

To steel me to a purpose such as made
Timoleon immortal, than to face

The toils and dangers of a life of war.

Ber. F. It gladdens me to see your former wisdom

Subdue the furies which so wrung you ere
You were decided.

Doge. It was ever thus
With me; the hour of agitation came

In the first glimmerings of a purpose, when Passion had too much room to sway; but
in

The hour of action I have stood as calm
As were the dead who lay around me: this

They knew who made me what I am, and
trusted

To the subduing power which I preserved Over my mood, when its first burst was spent,

But they were not aware that there are
things

Which make revenge a virtue by reflection.
And not an impulse of mere anger; though

The laws sleep, justice wakes, and injured
souls

Oft do a public right with private wrong,
And justify their deeds unto themselves.—

Methinks the day breaks—is it not so?
look,

Thine eyes are clear with youth;—the air puts on

A morning freshness, and, at least to me,
The sea looks greyer through the lattice.

Ber. F. True,

The morn is dappling in the sky.

Doge. Away then!

See that they strike without delay, and with The first toll from St. Mark's, march on the palace

With all our house's strength; here I will meet you; 115

The Sixteen and their companies will move
In separate columns at the self-same moment:

Be sure you post yourself at the great gate:
I would not trust 'the Ten' except to us—
The rest, the rabble of patricians, may Glut the more careless swords of those leagued with us. 121

Remember that the cry is still 'Saint Mark!
The Genoese are come—ho! to the rescue!
Saint Mark and Liberty!'—Now—now to action!

Ber. F. Farewell then, noble uncle! we will meet 125

In freedom and true sovereignty, or never!
Doge. Come hither, my Bertuccio—one
embrace;

Speed, for the day grows broader; send me
soon

A messenger to tell me how all goes
When you rejoin our troops, and then sound—sound 130

The storm-bell from St. Mark's!
[Exit BERTUCCIO FALIERO.]

Doge [solus]. He is gone,
And on each footstep moves a life. 'Tis
done.

Now the destroying angel hovers o'er
Venice, and pauses ere he pours the vial,
Even as the eagle overlooks his prey, 135
And for a moment, poised in middle air,
Suspends the motion of his mighty wings,
Then swoops with his unerring beak.

Thou day!

That slowly walk'st the waters! march—march on—

I would not smite i' the dark, but rather see That no stroke errs. And you, ye blue sea
waves! 141

I have seen you dyed ere now, and deeply
too,

With Genoese, Saracen, and Hunnish gore, While that of Venice flow'd too, but victorious,

Now thou must wear an unmix'd crimson;
no 145

Barbaric blood can reconcile us now
Unto that horrible incarnadine,

But friend or foe will roll in civic slaughter.
And have I lived to fourscore years for this?

I, who was named Preserver of the City?
I, at whose name the million's caps were
flung 151

Into the air, and cries from tens of thousands

Rose up, imploring Heaven to send me
blessings,

And fame, and length of days—to see this
day? 154

But this day, black within the calendar,
Shall be succeeded by a bright millennium.
Doge Dandolo survived to ninety summers To vanquish empires, and refuse their
crown;

I will resign a crown, and make the state
Renew its freedom—but oh! by what means? 160

The noble end must justify them. What
Are a few drops of human blood? 'tis false,
The blood of tyrants is not human; they,
Like to incarnate Molochs, feed on ours,
Until 'tis time to give them to the tombs
Which they have made so populous.—Oh
world! 166

Oh men! what are ye, and our best designs,
That we must work by crime to punish
crime?

And slay as if Death had but this one gate,
When a few years would make the sword superfluous? 170

And I, upon the verge of th' unknown realm.
Yet send so many heralds on before me?—
I must not ponder this. [A pause.]

Hark! was there not

A murmur as of distant voices, and
The tramp of feet in martial unison?
What phantoms even of sound our wishes
raise! 176

It cannot be—the signal hath not rung—
Why pauses it? My nephew's messenger Should be upon his way to me, and he Himself perhaps even now draws grating
back 180

Upon its ponderous hinge the steep tower
portal,

Where swings the sullen huge oracular
bell,

Which never knells but for a princely
death,

Or for a state in peril, pealing forth
Tremendous bodements; let it do its office,
And be this peal its awfulest and last Sound till the strong tower rock!—What!
silent still?

I would go forth, but that my post is here,
To be the centre of re-union to

The oft discordant elements which form Leagues of this nature, and to keep compact 191

The wavering of the weak, in case of conflict;

For if they should do battle, 'twill be here,
Within the palace, that the strife will thicken:

Then here must be my station, as becomes
The master-mover.—Hark! he comes—
he comes, 196

My nephew, brave Bertuccio's messenger,—

What tidings? Is he marching? hath he sped?

They here!—all's lost—yet will I make an effort.

Enter a SIGNOR OF THE NIGHT, with Guards, &c. &c.

Sig. Doge, I arrest thee of high treason!

Doge. Me! Thy prince, of treason?—Who are they that dare 201
Cloak their own treason under such an
order?

Sig. [showing his order]. Behold my order from the assembled Ten.

Doge. And where are they, and why assembled? no

Such council can be lawful, till the prince Preside there, and that duty's mine: on
thine 206

I charge thee, give me way, or marshal me
To the council chamber.

Sig. Duke! it may not be:
Nor are they in the wonted Hall of Council,

But sitting in the convent of Saint Saviour's. 210

Doge. You dare to disobey me, then?

Sig. I serve
The state, and needs must serve it faithfully;
My warrant is the will of those who rule it.

Doge. And till that warrant has my signature

It is illegal, and, as now applied, 215 Rebellious. Hast thou weigh'd well thy life's worth,

That thus you dare assume a lawless function?

Sig. 'Tis not my office to reply, but act—
I am placed here as guard upon thy person,
And not as judge to hear or to decide.

Doge [aside]. I must gain time. So that the storm-bell sound, 221

All may be well yet.—Kinsman, speed—speed—speed!

Our fate is trembling in the balance, and Woe to the vanquish'd! be they prince and
people,

Or slaves and senate—

[The great bell of St. Mark's tolls.

Lo! it sounds—it tolls!

[Aloud]. Hark, Signor of the Night! and you, ye hirelings, 226

Who wield your mercenary staves in fear,
It is your knell—Swell on, thou lusty peal!
Now, knaves, what ransom for your lives?

Sig. Confusion!
Stand to your arms, and guard the door—
all's lost 230

Unless that fearful bell be silenced soon.
The officer hath miss'd his path or purpose,
Or met some unforeseen and hideous obstacle.

Anselmo, with thy company proceed Straight to the tower; the rest remain with me. [Exit part of the Guard.

Doge. Wretch! if thou wouldst have thy vile life, implore it; 236

It is not now a lease of sixty seconds.
Ay, send thy miserable ruffians forth;
They never shall return.

Sig. So let it be!
They die then in their duty, as will I.

Doge. Fool! the high eagle flies at nobler game 241
Than thou and thy base myrmidons,—live
on,

So thou provok'st not peril by resistance,
And learn (if souls so much obscured can
bear 244

To gaze upon the sunbeams) to be free.
Sig. And learn thou to be captive. It hath ceased, [The bell ceases to toll.

The traitorous signal, which was to have set
The bloodhound mob on their patrician
prey—

The knell hath rung, but it is not the senate's! 249

Doge [after a pause]. All's silent, and
all's lost!

Sig. Now, Doge, denounce me
As rebel slave of a revolted council!
Have I not done my duty?

Doge. Peace, thou thing!
Thou hast done a worthy deed, and earn'd
the price

Of blood, and they who use thee will reward thee.

But thou wert sent to watch, and not to
prate, 255

As thou said'st even now—then do thine
office,

But let it be in silence, as behoves thee,
Since, though thy prisoner, I am thy prince.

Sig. I did not mean to fail in the respect
Due to your rank: in this I shall obey you.

Doge [aside]. There now is nothing left me save to die; 261

And yet how near success! I would have fallen,

And proudly, in the hour of triumph, but
To miss it thus!—

Enter other SIGNORS OF THE NIGHT, with BERTUCCIO FALIERO prisoner.

2nd Sig. We took him in the act Of issuing from the tower, where, at his
order, 265

As delegated from the Doge, the signal
Had thus begun to sound.

1st Sig. Are all the passes
Which lead up to the palace well secured?

2nd Sig. They are—besides, it matters not; the chiefs

Are all in chains, and some even now on trial— 270

Their followers are dispersed, and many taken.

Ber. F. Uncle!

Doge. It is in vain to war with Fortune;
The glory hath departed from our house.

Ber. F. Who would have deem'd it?—
Ah! one moment sooner!

Doge. That moment would have changed the face of ages; 275

This gives us to eternity—We'll meet it
As men whose triumph is not in success,
But who can make their own minds all in
all, 278

Equal to every fortune. Droop not, 'tis
But a brief passage—I would go alone,
Yet if they send us, as 'tis like, together,
Let us go worthy of our sires and selves.

Ber. F. I shall not shame you, uncle.

1st Sig. Lords, our orders Are to keep guard on both in separate chambers, 284

Until the council call ye to your trial.

Doge. Our trial! will they keep their mockery up

Even to the last? but let them deal upon us,
As we had dealt on them, but with less pomp.

'Tis but a game of mutual homicides,
Who have cast lots for the first death, and
they 290

Have won with false dice.—Who hath been our Judas?

1st Sig. I am not warranted to answer
that.

Ber. F. I'll answer for thee—'tis a certain Bertram,

Even now deposing to the secret Giunta.

Doge. Bertram, the Bergamask! With what vile tools 295

We operate to slay or save! This creature,
Black with a double treason, now will earn Rewards and honours, and be stamp'd in
story

With the geese in the Capitol, which gabbled

Till Rome awoke, and had an annual triumph, 300

While Manlius, who hurl'd down the Gauls, was cast

From the Tarpeian.

1st Sig. He aspired to treason,
And sought to rule the state.

Doge. He saved the state,
And sought but to reform what he revised—

But this is idle—Come, sirs, do your work.

1st Sig. Noble Bertuccio, we must now remove you 306

Into an inner chamber.

Ber. F. Farewell, uncle!
If we shall meet again in life I know not,
But they perhaps will let our ashes mingle.

Doge. Yes, and our spirits, which shall yet go forth, 310

And do what our frail clay, thus clogg'd, hath fail'd in!

They cannot quench the memory of those Who would have hurl'd them from their guilty thrones,

And such examples will find heirs, though distant.

ACT V

SCENE I.—The Hall of the Council of Ten, assembled with the additional Senators, who, on the Trials of the Conspirators for the Treason of MARINO FALIERO, composed what was called the Giunta.—Guards, Officers, &c. &c.
—ISRAEL BERTUCCIO and PHILIP CAL-ENDARO as Prisoners.—BERTRAM,
LIONI, and Witnesses, &c.

The Chief of the Ten, BENINTENDE.

Ben. There now rests, after such conviction of

Their manifold and manifest offences,
But to pronounce on these obdurate men
The sentence of the law:—a grievous task
To those who hear, and those who speak.

Alas! 5

That it should fall to me! and that my days
Of office should be stigmatised through all
The years of coming time, as bearing
record

To this most foul and complicated treason
Against a just and free state, known to all
The earth as being the Christian bulwark
'gainst 11

The Saracen and the schismatic Greek,
The savage Hun, and not less barbarous
Frank;

A city which has open'd India's wealth
To Europe; the last Roman refuge from O'erwhelming Attila; the ocean's queen;
Proud Genoa's prouder rival! 'Tis to sap
The throne of such a city, these lost men Have risk'd and forfeited their worthless
lives— 19

So let them die the death.

I. Ber. We are prepared;
Your racks have done that for us. Let us
die.

Ben. If ye have that to say which would obtain

Abatement of your punishment, the Giunta
Will hear you; if you have aught to confess, 24

Now is your time, perhaps it may avail ye.

I. Ber. We stand to hear, and not to speak.

Ben. Your crimes
Are fully proved by your accomplices,
And all which circumstance can add to aid
them;

Yet we would hear from your own lips
complete 29

Avowal of your treason: on the verge Of that dread gulf which none repass, the
truth

Alone can profit you on earth or heaven—
Say, then, what was your motive?

I. Ber.

Justice!

Ben.

What

Your object?

I. Ber. Freedom!

Ben. You are brief, sir.

I. Ber. So my life grows: I
Was bred a soldier, not a senator.
Ben. Perhaps you think by this blunt brevity

To brave your judges to postpone the sentence?

I. Ber. Do you be brief as I am, and believe me,

I shall prefer that mercy to your pardon.
Ben. Is this your sole reply to the tribunal?

I. Ber. Go, ask your racks what they have wrung from us,

Or place us there again; we have still some blood left,

And some slight sense of pain in these wrench'd limbs:

But this ye dare not do; for if we die
there—

And you have left us little life to spend Upon your engines, gorged with pangs
already—

Ye lose the public spectacle, with which You would appal your slaves to further slavery!

Groans are not words, nor agony assent,
Nor affirmation truth, if nature's sense
Should overcome the soul into a lie,
For a short respite—must we bear or die?

Ben. Say, who were your accomplices?

I. Ber. The Senate.

Ben. What do you mean?

I. Ber. Ask of the suffering people, Whom your patrician crimes have driven to crime,

Ben. You know the Doge?

I. Ber. I served with him at Zara
In the field, when you were pleading here your way

To present office; we exposed our lives,
While you but hazarded the lives of others,
Alike by accusation or defence;

And for the rest, all Venice knows her Doge,
Through his great actions, and the Senate's insults.

Ben. You have held conference with
him?

I. Ber. I am weary—Even wearier of your questions than your tortures:

I pray you pass to judgment.

Ben. It is coming.

And you, too, Philip Calendaro, what Have you to say why you should not be doomed?

Cal. I never was a man of many words,
And now have few left worth the utterance.

Ben. A further application of yon engine

May change your tone.

Cal. Most true, it will do so;
A former application did so; but

It will not change my words, or, if it did—

Ben. What then?

Cal. Will my avowal on yon rack Stand good in law?

Ben. Assuredly.

Cal. Whoe'er

The culprit be whom I accuse of treason?

Ben. Without doubt, he will be brought up to trial.

Cal. And on this testimony would he perish?

Ben. So your confession be detail'd and
full,

He will stand here in peril of his life.

Cal. Then look well to thy proud self,
President!

For by the eternity which yawns before me,
I swear that thou, and only thou, shalt be
The traitor I denounce upon that rack,
If I be stretch'd there for the second time.

One of the Giunta. Lord President,
'twere best proceed to judgment;

There is no more to be drawn from these
men.

Ben. Unhappy men! prepare for instant
death.

The nature of your crime, our law, and
peril

The state now stands in, leave not an hour's respite.

Guards! lead them forth, and upon the balcony

Of the red columns, where, on festal Thurs-
day,

The Doge stands to behold the chase of bulls,

Let them be justified: and leave exposed
Their wavering relics, in the place of judgment,

To the full view of the assembled people!
And Heaven have mercy on their souls!

The Giunta. Amen!

I. Ber. Signors, farewell! we shall not all again

Meet in one place.

Ben. And lest they should essay
To stir up the distracted multitude—

Guards! let their mouths be gagg'd even in the act

Of execution. Lead them hence!

Cal. What! must we
Not even say farewell to some fond friend,
Nor leave a last word with our confessor?

Ben. A priest is waiting in the ante-
chamber;

But, for your friends, such interviews would be

Painful to them, and useless all to you.

Cal. I knew that we were gagg'd in life;
at least

All those who had not heart to risk their lives

Upon their open thoughts; but still I deem'd

That in the last few moments, the same idle

Freedom of speech accorded to the dying, Would not now be denied to us; but
since—

I. Ber. Even let them have their way, brave Calendaro! 115

What matter a few syllables? let's die Without the slightest show of favour from
them;

So shall our blood more readily arise
To Heaven against them, and more testify
To their atrocities, than could a volume Spoken or written of our dying words!
They tremble at our voices—nay, they
dread 122

Our very silence—let them live in fear!
Leave them unto their thoughts, and let us
now

Address our own above!—Lead on; we are ready. 125

Cal. Israel, hadst thou but hearken'd
unto me

It had not now been thus; and yon pale
villain,

The coward Bertram, would—

I. Ber. Peace, Calendaro!
What brooks it now to ponder upon this?

Bert. Alas! I fain you died in peace with
me: 130

I did not seek this task; 'twas forced upon
me:

Say, you forgive me, though I never can Retrieve my own forgiveness—frown not
thus!

I. Ber. I die and pardon thee!

Cal. [spitting at him]. I die and scorn thee!

[Exeunt ISRAEL BERTUCCIO and PHILIP CALENDARO, Guards, &c.]

Ben. Now that these criminals have been disposed of, 135

'Tis time that we proceed to pass our
sentence

Upon the greatest traitor upon record

In any annals, the Doge Faliero!

The proofs and process are complete; the
time

And crime require a quick procedure:
shall 140

He now be call'd in to receive the award?

The Giunta. Ay, ay.

Ben. Avogadori, order that the Doge
Be brought before the council.

One of the Giunta. And the rest,
When shall they be brought up?

Ben. When all the chiefs
Have been disposed of. Some have fled to

Chiozza; 145

But there are thousands in pursuit of
them,

And such precaution ta'en on terra firma,
As well as in the islands, that we hope

None will escape to utter in strange lands
His libellous tale of treasons 'gainst the senate. 150

Enter the DOGE as Prisoner, with Guards, &c. &c.

Ben. Doge—for such still you are, and by the law

Must be consider'd, till the hour shall come
When you must doff the ducal bonnet from That head, which could not wear a crown more noble 154

Than empires can confer, in quiet honour,
But it must plot to overthrow your peers,
Who made you what you are, and quench
in blood

A city's glory—we have laid already
Before you in your chamber at full length,
By the Avogadori, all the proofs 160
Which have appear'd against you; and more ample

Ne'er rear'd their sanguinary shadows to Confront a traitor. What have you to say
In your defence?

Doge. What shall I say to ye,
Since my defence must be your condemna-
tion? 165

You are at once offenders and accusers,
Judges and executioners!—Proceed
Upon your power.

Ben. Your chief accomplices
Having confess'd, there is no hope for you.

Doge. And who be they?

Ben. In number many; but The first now stands before you and the
court, 171

Bertram, of Bergamo,—would you question him?

Doge. [looking at him contemptuously].
No.

Ben. And two others, Israel Bertuccio
And Philip Calendaro, have admitted
Their fellowship in treason with the Doge!

Doge. And where are they?

Ben. Gone to their place, and now Answering to Heaven for what they did on
earth. 177

Doge. Ah! the plebeian Brutus, is he
gone?

And the quick Cassius of the arsenal?—
How did they meet their doom?

Ben. Think of your own:

It is approaching. You decline to plead,
then? 181

Doge. I cannot plead to my inferiors,
nor

Can recognise your legal power to try me.
Show me the law!

Ben. On great emergencies

The law must be remodel'd or amended:
Our fathers had not fix'd the punishment
Of such a crime, as on the old Roman tables 187

The sentence against parricide was left
In pure forgetfulness; they could not render That penal, which had neither name nor
thought 190

In their great bosoms; who would have foreseen

That nature could be filed to such a crime
As sons 'gainst sires, and princes 'gainst their realms?

Your sin hath made us make a law which will Become a precedent 'gainst such haught traitors, 195

As would with treason mount to tyranny;
Not even contented with a sceptre, till
They can convert it to a two-edged sword!
Was not the place of Doge sufficient for ye?
What's nobler than the signory of Venice?

Doge. The signory of Venice! You betray'd me— 201

*You—*you, who sit there, traitors as ye are!
From my equality with you in birth,
And my superiority in action,
You drew me from my honourable toils
In distant lands—on flood, in field, in cities— 206

You singled me out like a victim to Stand crown'd, but bound and helpless, at the altar

Where you alone could minister. I knew
not,

I sought not, wish'd not, dream'd not the election, 210

Which reach'd me first at Rome, and I
obey'd;

But found on my arrival, that, besides
The jealous vigilance which always led you
To mock and mar your sovereign's best intent, 214

You had, even in the interregnum of
My journey to the capital, curtail'd
And mutilated the few privileges
Yet left the duke: all this I bore, and would Have borne, until my very hearth was stain'd

By the pollution of your ribaldry, 220
And he, the ribald, whom I see amongst
you—

Fit judge in such a tribunal!—

Ben. [interrupting him]. Michel Steno Is here in virtue of his office, as One of the Forty; 'the Ten' having craved
A Giunta of patricians from the senate
To aid our judgment in a trial arduous
And novel as the present: he was set
Free from the penalty pronounced upon him, Because the Doge, who should protect the
law, 229

Seeking to abrogate all law, can claim
No punishment of others by the statutes
Which he himself denies and violates!

Doge. His PUNISHMENT! I rather see him
there,

Where he now sits, to glut him with my
death, 234

Than in the mockery of castigation,
Which your foul, outward, juggling show of justice

Decreed as sentence! Base as was his crime,
'Twas purity compared with your protection.

Ben. And can it be, that the great Doge
of Venice, 239

With three parts of a century of years
And honours on his head, could thus allow
His fury, like an angry boy's, to master
All feeling, wisdom, faith, and fear, on
such

A provocation as a young man's petu-
lance?

Doge. A spark creates the flame—'tis the last drop 245

Which makes the cup run o'er, and mine was full

Already: you oppress'd the prince and
people;

I would have freed both, and have fail'd in
both:

The price of such success would have been
glory, 249

Vengeance, and victory, and such a name
As would have made Venetian history
Rival to that of Greece and Syracuse
When they were freed, and flourish'd ages
after, 253

And mine to Gekon and to Thrasybulus:—
Failing, I know the penalty of failure
Is present infamy and death—the future Will judge, when Venice is no more, or
free;

Till then, the truth is in abeyance. Pause not;
I would have shown no mercy, and I seek
none; 259

My life was staked upon a mighty hazard,
And being lost, take what I would have taken!

I would have stood alone amidst your
tombs:

Now you may flock round mine, and trample on it,

As you have done upon my heart while living.

Ben. You do confess then, and admit the justice 265

Of our tribunal?

Doge. I confess to have fail'd;
Fortune is female: from my youth her favours

Were not withheld, the fault was mine to
hope

Her former smiles again at this late hour.

Ben. You do not then in aught arraign our equity? 270

Doge. Noble Venetians! stir me not with questions.

I am resign'd to the worst; but in me still Have something of the blood of brighter
days,

And am not over-patient. Pray you, spare
me
Further interrogation, which boots no-
thing, 275

Except to turn a trial to debate.
 I shall but answer that which will offend you,
 And please your enemies—a host already;
 'Tis true, these sullen walls should yield no
 echo:

But walls have ears—nay, more, they have tongues; and if 280

There were no other way for truth to o'erleap them,

You who condemn me, you who fear and slay me,

Yet could not bear in silence to your graves
 What you would hear from me of good or evil; 284

The secret were too mighty for your souls:
 Then let it sleep in mine, unless you court
 A danger which would double that you escape.

Such my defence would be, had I full scope
 To make it famous; for true words are
 things,

And dying men's are things which long outlive, 290

And oftentimes avenge them; bury mine,
 If ye would fain survive me: take this counsel,

And though too oft ye made me live in
 wrath,

Let me die calmly; you may grant me this;
 I deny nothing, defend nothing, nothing
 I ask of you, but silence for myself, 296
 And sentence from the court!

Ben. This full admission
 Spares us the harsh necessity of ordering
 The torture to elicit the whole truth.

Doge. The torture! you have put me
 there already, 300

Daily since I was Doge; but if you will Add the corporeal rack, you may: these limbs

Will yield with age to crushing iron; but There's that within my heart shall strain your engines.

Enter an OFFICER.

Officer. Noble Venetians! Duchess Faliero 305

Requests admission to the Giunta's presence.

Ben. Say, conscript fathers, shall she be admitted?

One of the Giunta. She may have revelations of importance

Unto the state, to justify compliance 309
 With her request.

Ben. Is this the general will?

All. It is.

Doge. Oh! admirable laws of Venice!
 Which would admit the wife, in the full
 hope

That she might testify against the husband.
 What glory to the chaste Venetian dames!

But such blasphemers 'gainst all honour,
 as 315

Sit here, do well to act in their vocation.
 Now, villain Steno! if this woman fail,
 I'll pardon thee thy lie, and thy escape,
 And my own violent death, and thy vile life.

The DUCHESS enters.

Ben. Lady! this just tribunal has resolved, 320

Though the request be strange, to grant it,
 and

Whatever be its purport, to accord
 A patient hearing with the due respect Which fits your ancestry, your rank, and
 virtues:

But you turn pale—ho! there, look to the lady! 325

Place a chair instantly.

Ang. A moment's faintness—
 'Tis past; I pray you pardon me,—I sit not In presence of my prince and of my husband,

While he is on his feet.

Ben. Your pleasure, lady?

Ang. Strange rumours, but most true,
 if all I hear 330

And see be sooth, have reach'd me, and I
 come

To know the worst, even at the worst; forgive

The abruptness of my entrance and my bearing.

Is it—I cannot speak—I cannot shape
 The question—but you answer it ere spoken, 335

With eyes averted, and with gloomy
 brows—

Oh God! this is the silence of the grave!

Ben. [after a pause]. Spare us, and spare thyself the repetition

Of our most awful, but inexorable 339
 Duty to Heaven and man!

Ang. Yet speak; I cannot—
 I cannot—no—even now believe these
 things.

Is he condemned?

Ben. Alas!

Ang. And was he guilty?

Ben. Lady! the natural distraction of Thy thoughts at such a moment makes the question 344

Merit forgiveness; else a doubt like this Against a just and paramount tribunal Were deep offence. But question even the

Doge,

And if he can deny the proofs, believe him
 Guiltless as thy own bosom.

Ang. Is it so?

My lord, my sovereign, my poor father's
 friend, 350

The mighty in the field, the sage in council, Unsay the words of this man!—Thou art silent!

Ben. He hath already own'd to his own
 guilt,

Nor, as thou see'st, doth he deny it now.
Ang. Ay, but he must not die! Spare his few years, 355
 Which grief and shame will soon cut down to days!

One day of baffled crime must not efface
 Near sixteen lustres crowded with brave acts.

Ben. His doom must be fulfill'd without remission

Of time or penalty—'tis a decree. 360

Ang. He hath been guilty, but there may be mercy.

Ben. Not in this case with justice.

Ang. Alas! signor,

He who is only just is cruel; who Upon the earth would live were all judged justly?

Ben. His punishment is safety to the
 state. 365

Ang. He was a subject, and hath served the state;

He was your general, and hath saved the
 state;

He is your sovereign, and hath ruled the
 state.

One of the Council. He is a traitor, and betray'd the state.

Ang. And, but for him, there now had been no state 370

To save or to destroy; and you, who sit
 There to pronounce the death of your deliverer,

Had now been groaning at a Moslem oar,
 Or digging in the Hunnish mines in fetters!

One of the Council. No, lady, there are others who would die 375

Rather than breathe in slavery!

Ang. If there are so Within these walls, thou art not of the number:

The truly brave are generous to the fallen!—

Is there no hope?

Ben. Lady, it cannot be.

Ang. [turning to the Doge]. Then die,
 Faliero! since it must be so; 380

But with the spirit of my father's friend.
 Thou hast been guilty of a great offence,

Half cancell'd by the harshness of these
 men.

I would have sued to them, have pray'd
 to them,

Have begg'd as famish'd mendicants for bread, 385

Have wept as they will cry unto their God
 For mercy, and be answer'd as they answer,—

Had it been fitting for thy name or mine,
 And if the cruelty in their cold eyes

Had not announced the heartless wrath
 within. 390

Then, as a prince, address thee to thy
 doom!

Doge. I have lived too long not to know how to die!

Thy suing to these men were but the bleat-
 ing

Of the lamb to the butcher, or the cry
 Of seamen to the surge: I would not take

A life eternal, granted at the hands 396
 Of wretches, from whose monstrous villaines

I sought to free the groaning nations!

Michel Steno. Doge,
 A word with thee, and with this noble
 lady,

Whom I have grievously offended. Would Sorrow, or shame, or penance on my part,

Could cancel the inexorable past! 402
 But since that cannot be, as Christians let
 us

Say farewell, and in peace: with full contrition

I crave, not pardon, but compassion from
 you, 405

And give, however weak, my prayers for
 both.

Ang. Sage Benintende, now chief judge
 of Venice,

I speak to thee in answer to yon signor.
 Inform the ribald Steno, that his words

Ne'er weigh'd in mind with Loredano's
 daughter, 410

Further than to create a moment's pity
 For such as he is: would that others had

Despis'd him as I pity! I prefer My honour to a thousand lives, could such

Be multiplied in mine, but would not have
 A single life of others lost for that 416

Which nothing human can impugn—the
 sense

Of virtue, looking not to what is call'd
 A good name for reward, but to itself.

To me the scorner's words were as the
 wind 420

Unto the rock: but as there are—alas!
 Spirits more sensitive, on which such
 things

Light as the whirlwind on the waters; souls
 To whom dishonour's shadow is a substance

More terrible than death, here and hereafter; 425

Men whose vice is to start at vice's scoffing,
 And who, though proof against all blandishments

Of pleasure, and all pangs of pain, are feeble

When the proud name on which they pinnaced

Their hopes is breathed on, jealous as the eagle 430

Of her high airy; let what we now
 Behold, and feel, and suffer, be a lesson

To wretches how they tamper in their spleen

With beings of a higher order. Insects

Have made the lion mad ere now; a shaft
 I' the heel o'erthrew the bravest of the brave; 436
 A wife's dishonour was the bane of Troy;
 A wife's dishonour unking'd Rome for
 ever;
 An injured husband brought the Gauls to Clusium,
 And thence to Rome, which perish'd for a
 time; 440
 An obscene gesture cost Caligula
 His life, while Earth yet bore his cruelties;
 A virgin's wrong made Spain a Moorish province;
 And Steno's lie, couch'd in two worthless
 lines, 444
 Hath decimated Venice, put in peril
 A senate which hath stood eight hundred
 years,
 Discrown'd a prince, cut off his crownless
 head,
 And forged new fetters for a groaning
 people!
 Let the poor wretch, like to the courtesan
 Who fired Persepolis, be proud of this,
 If it so please him—'twere a pride fit for
 him! 451
 But let him not insult the last hours of Him, who, whate'er he now is, was a hero,
 By the intrusion of his very prayers;
 Nothing of good can come from such a
 source, 455
 Nor would we aught with him, nor now,
 nor ever:
 We leave him to himself, that lowest depth
 Of human baseness. Pardon is for men,
 And not for reptiles—we have none for Steno,
 And no resentment: things like him must sting, 460
 And higher beings suffer; 'tis the charter
 Of life. The man who dies by the adder's fang
 May have the crawler crush'd, but feels no anger:
 'Twas the worm's nature; and some men
 are worms
 In soul more than the living things of
 tombs. 465
Doge [to Ben.]. Signor! complete that which you deem your duty.
Ben. Before we can proceed upon that
 duty,
 We would request the princess to withdraw;
 'Twill move her too much to be witness to it.
Ang. I know it will, and yet I must endure it, 470
 For 'tis a part of mine—I will not quit,
 Except by force, my husband's side.—
 Proceed!
 Nay, fear not either shriek, or sigh, or tear;
 Though my heart burst it shall be silent.—
 Speak!

I have that within which shall o'ermaster
 all. 475
Ben. Marino Faliero, Doge of Venice,
 Count of Val di Marino, Senator,
 And some time General of the Fleet and Army,
 Noble Venetian, many times and oft Intrusted by the state with high employ-
 ments, 480
 Even to the highest, listen to the sentence.
 Convict by many witnesses and proofs,
 And by thine own confession, of the guilt
 Of treachery and treason, yet unheard of Until this trial—the decree is death.
 Thy goods are confiscate unto the state,
 Thy name is razed from out her records,
 save 487
 Upon a public day of thanksgiving
 For this our most miraculous deliverance,
 When thou art noted in our calendars
 With earthquakes, pestilence, and foreign
 foes, 491
 And the great enemy of man, as subject Of grateful masses for Heaven's grace in snatching
 Our lives and country from thy wickedness.
 The place wherein as Doge thou shouldst be painted, 495
 With thine illustrious predecessors, is To be left vacant, with a death-black veil Flung over these dim words engraved beneath,—
 'This place is of Marino Faliero, 499
 Decapitated for his crimes.'
Doge. 'His crimes!'
 But let it be so;—it will be in vain.
 The veil which blackens o'er this blighted
 name,
 And hides, or seems to hide, these linea-
 ments,
 Shall draw more gazers than the thousand portraits
 Which glitter round it in their pictured trappings— 505
 Your delegated slaves—the people's tyrants!
 'Decapitated for his crimes!'—What
 crimes?
 Were it not better to record the facts,
 So that the contemplator might approve,
 Or at the least learn whence the crimes
 arose? 510
 When the beholder knows a Doge conspired,
 Let him be told the cause—it is your history.
Ben. Time must reply to that; our sons will judge
 Their fathers' judgment, which I now pronounce.
 As Doge, clad in the ducal robes and cap,
 Thou shalt be led hence to the Giant's
 Staircase, 516
 Where thou and all our princes are invested;

And there, the ducal crown being first resumed

Upon the spot where it was first assumed,
Thy head shall be struck off; and Heaven have mercy 520
Upon thy soul!

Doge. Is this the Giunta's sentence?

Ben. It is.

Doge. I can endure it.—And the time?

Ben. Must be immediate.—Make thy peace with God:

Within an hour thou must be in His presence.

Doge. I am already; and my blood will
rise 525

To Heaven before the souls of those who shed it.

Are all my lands confiscated?

Ben. They are;

And goods, and jewels, and all kind of treasure,

Except two thousand ducats—these dispose of.

Doge. That's harsh.—I would have fain reserved the lands 530

Near to Treviso, which I hold by investment From Laurence the Count-bishop of Ceneda,

In fief perpetual to myself and heirs,
To portion them (leaving my city spoil,
My palace and my treasures, to your forfeit) 535

Between my consort and my kinsmen.

Ben. These

Lie under the state's ban; their chief, thy nephew,

In peril of his own life; but the council Postpones his trial for the present. If Thou wilt'st a state unto thy widow'd princess, 540

Fear not, for we will do her justice.

Ang. Signors,

I share not in your spoil! From henceforth, know

I am devoted unto God alone,
And take my refuge in the cloister.

Doge. Come!

The hour may be a hard one, but 'twill end.
Have I ought else to undergo save death?

Ben. You have nought to do, except confess and die. 547

The priest is robed, the scimitar is bare,
And both await without. But, above all,

Think not to speak unto the people; they Are now by thousands swarming at the gates, 551

But these are closed: the Ten, the Avogadori,

The Giunta, and the chief men of the Forty,
Alone will be beholders of thy doom,

And they are ready to attend the Doge.

Doge. The Doge!

Ben. Yes, Doge, thou hast lived and thou shalt die 556

A sovereign; till the moment which precedes

The separation of that head and trunk,
That ducal crown and head shall be united.
Thou hast forgot thy dignity in deigning
To plot with petty traitors; not so we,
Who in the very punishment acknowledge The prince. Thy vile accomplices have
died

The dog's death, and the wolf's: but thou shalt fall

As falls the lion by the hunters, girt 565
By those who feel a proud compassion for
thee,

And mourn even the inevitable death
Provoked by thy wild wrath and regal fierceness.

Now we remit thee to thy preparation:
Let it be brief, and we ourselves will be Thy guides unto the place where first we
were 571

United to thee as thy subjects, and Thy senate; and must now be parted from
thee

As such for ever, on the self-same spot.
Guards! form the Doge's escort to his chamber. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Doge's Apartment.

The DOGE as Prisoner, and the DUCHESS attending him.

Doge. Now, that the priest is gone,
'twere useless all

To linger out the miserable minutes;
But one pang more, the pang of parting from thee,

And I will leave the few last grains of sand
Which yet remain of the accorded hour,

Still falling—I have done with Time.

Ang. Alas!

And I have been the cause, the unconscious
cause;

And for this funeral marriage, this black
union,

Which thou, compliant with my father's
wish,

Didst promise at his death, thou hast
seal'd thine own. 10

Doge. Not so; there was that in my spirit ever

Which shaped out for itself some great reverse;

The marvel is, it came not until now—
And yet it was foretold me.

Ang. How foretold you?

Doge. Long years ago—so long, they are a doubt 15

In memory, and yet they live in annals:
When I was in my youth, and served the

senate

And signory as podesta and captain

Of the town of Treviso, on a day

Of festival, the sluggish bishop who 20

Convey'd the Host aroused my rash young anger

By strange delay, and arrogant reply
To my reproof: I raised my hand and smote him,

Until he reel'd beneath his holy burthen;
And as he rose from earth again, he raised His tremulous hands in pious wrath towards Heaven. 26

Thence pointing to the Host, which had fallen from him,

He turn'd to me, and said, 'The hour will
come

When he thou hast o'erthrown shall overthrow thee:

The glory shall depart from out thy house,
The wisdom shall be shaken from thy soul,
And in thy best maturity of mind 32
A madness of the heart shall seize upon
thee;

Passion shall tear thee when all passions
cease

In other men, or mellow into virtues;
And majesty, which decks all other heads,
Shall crown to leave thee headless; honours
shall

But prove to thee the heralds of destruction,

And hoary hairs of shame, and both of
death, 39

But not such death as fits an aged man.'

Thus saying, he pass'd on.—That hour is
come.

Ang. And with this warning couldst thou not have striven

To avert the fatal moment, and atone,
By penitence, for that which thou hadst
done?

Doge. I own the words went to my heart, so much 45

That I remember'd them amid the maze
Of life, as if they form'd a spectral voice,
Which shook me in a supernatural dream;
And I repented; but 'twas not for me
To pull in resolution: what must be 50
I could not change, and would not fear.—

Nay more,
Thou canst not have forgot, what all remember,

That on my day of landing here as Doge,
On my return from Rome, a mist of such Unwonted density went on before 55

The Bucentaur, like the columnar cloud
Which usher'd Israel out of Egypt, till
The pilot was misled, and disembark'd us Between the pillars of Saint Mark's, where
'tis 59

The custom of the state to put to death
Its criminals, instead of touching at

The Riva della Paglia, as the wont is,—
So that all Venice shudder'd at the omen.

Ang. Ah! little boots it now to recollect
Such things.

Doge. And yet I find a comfort in 65

The thought, that these things are the work of Fate;

For I would rather yield to gods than men,
Or cling to any creed of destiny, Rather than deem these mortals, most of
whom 69

I know to be as worthless as the dust,
And weak as worthless, more than instruments

Of an o'erruling power; they in themselves
Were all incapable—they could not be Victors of him who oft had conquer'd for
them.

Ang. Employ the minutes left in aspirations 75

Of a more healing nature, and in peace
Even with these wretches take thy flight to
heaven.

Doge. I am at peace: the peace of certainty

That a sure hour will come, when their sons' sons,

And this proud city, and these azure
waters, 80

And all which makes them eminent and
bright,

Shall be a desolation and a curse,
A hissing and a scoff unto the nations,
A Carthage, and a Tyre, an Ocean Babel.

Ang. Speak not thus now: the surge of passion still 85

Sweeps o'er thee to the last; thou dost deceive

Thyself, and canst not injure them—be calmer.

Doge. I stand within eternity, and see
Into eternity, and I behold—

Ay, palpable as I see thy sweet face 90

For the last time—the days which I denounce

Unto all time against these wave-girt walls,
And they who are indwellers.

Guard [coming forward]. Doge of Venice,
The Ten are in attendance on your high-
ness.

Doge. Then farewell, Angiolina!—one
embrace— 95

Forgive the old man who hath been to
thee

A fond but fatal husband—love my memory—

I would not ask so much for me still living,
But thou canst judge of me more kindly
now,

Seeing my evil feelings are at rest. 100

Besides, of all the fruit of these long years,
Glory, and wealth, and power, and fame,
and name,

Which generally leave some flowers to bloom

Even o'er the grave, I have nothing left, not even 104

A little love, or friendship, or esteem,
No, not enough to extract an epitaph

From ostentatious kinsmen; in one hour
I have uprooted all my former life,
And outlived everything, except thy heart,
The pure, the good, the gentle, which will
 oft 110

With unimpair'd but not a clamorous
 grief

Still keep—Thou turn'st so pale!—Alas!
 she faints,

She has no breath, no pulse!—Guards!
 lend your aid—

I cannot leave her thus, and yet 'tis better,
Since every lifeless moment spares a pang.
When she shakes off this temporary death,
I shall be with the Eternal.—Call her
 women— 117

One look!—how cold her hand!—as cold
 as mine

Shall be ere she recovers.—Gently tend
 her,

And take my last thanks—I am ready
 now. 120

[The Attendants of ANGIOLINA enter, and surround their Mistress, who has fainted.—*Exeunt the DOGE, Guards,
&c. &c.*

SCENE III.—*The Court of the Ducal Palace;
the outer gates are shut against the people.*—The DOGE enters in his ducal robes, in procession with the Council of Ten and other Patricians, attended by the Guards, till they arrive at the top of the 'Giants' Staircase' (where the Doges took the oaths); the Executioner is stationed there with his sword.—On arriving, a Chief of the Ten takes off the ducal cap from the Doge's head.

Doge. So now the Doge is nothing, and at last

I am again Marino Faliero:

'Tis well to be so, though but for a moment.

Here was I crown'd, and here, bear witness,
 Heaven!

With how much more contentment I
 resign 5

That shining mockery, the ducal bauble,
Than I received the fatal ornament.

One of the Ten. Thou tremblest, Faliero!
Doge. 'Tis with age, then.

Ben. Faliero! hast thou aught further to commend,

Compatible with justice, to the senate?

Doge. I would commend my nephew to their mercy, 11

My consort to their justice; for methinks
My death, and such a death, might settle
 all

Between the state and me.

Ben. They shall be cared for;
Even notwithstanding thine unheard-of
 crime. 15

Doge. Unheard of! ay, there's not a history

But shows a thousand crown'd conspirators

*Against the people; but to set them free,
One sovereign only died, and one is dying.*

Ben. And who were they who fell in such a cause? 20

Doge. The King of Sparta, and the Doge
 of Venice—

Agis and Faliero!

Ben. Hast thou more

To utter or to do?

Doge. May I speak?

Ben. Thou may'st;

But recollect the people are without, 24
Beyond the compass of the human voice.

Doge. I speak to Time and to Eternity,
Of which I grow a portion, not to man.

Ye elements! in which to be resolved
I hasten, let my voice be as a spirit

Upon you! Ye blue waves! which bore my banner, 30

Ye winds! which flutter'd o'er as if you loved it,

And fill'd my swelling sails as they were wafted

To many a triumph! Thou, my native
 earth,

Which I have bled for! and thou, foreign
 earth,

Which drank this willing blood from many a wound! 35

Ye stones, in which my gore will not sink,
 but

Reek up to heaven! Ye skies, which will receive it!

Thou sun! which shinest on these things,
 and Thou!

Who kindest and who quenchest suns!—
 Attest!

I am not innocent—but are these guiltless?
I perish, but not unavenged: far ages 41

Float up from the abyss of time to be,
And show these eyes, before they close,
 the doom

Of this proud city, and I leave my curse
On her and hers for ever!—Yes, the 45

hours

Are silently engendering of the day,
When she, who built 'gainst Attila a bulwark,

Shall yield, and bloodlessly and basely
 yield,

Unto a bastard Attila, without Shedding so much blood in her last defence, 50

As these old veins, oft drain'd in shielding
 her,

Shall pour in sacrifice.—She shall be bought

And sold, and be an appanage to those Who shall despise her!—She shall stoop

to be 54

A province for an empire, petty town
In lieu of capital, with slaves for senates,
Beggars for nobles, panders for a people!
Then when the Hebrew's in thy palaces,
The Hun in thy high places, and the Greek Walks o'er thy mart, and smiles on it for
his: 60

When thy patricians beg their bitter bread
In narrow streets, and in their shameful
need

Make their nobility a plea for pity;
Then, when the few who still retain a
wreck

Of their great fathers' heritage shall fawn Round a barbarian Vice of Kings' Vicegerent, 66

Even in the palace where they sway'd as sovereigns,

Even in the palace where they slew their sovereign,

Proud of some name they have disgraced,
or sprung

From an adulteress boastful of her guilt
With some large gondolier or foreign soldier, 71

Shall bear about their bastardy in triumph
To the third spurious generation;—when Thy sons are in the lowest scale of being, Slaves turn'd o'er to the vanquish'd by the victors, 75

Despised by cowards for greater coward-dice,

And scorn'd even by the vicious for such vices

As in the monstrous grasp of their conception

Defy all codes to image or to name them;
Then, when of Cyprus, now thy subject kingdom, 80

All thine inheritance shall be her shame
Entail'd on thy less virtuous daughters,
grown

A wider proverb for worse prostitution;—
When all the ills of conquer'd states shall cling thee,

Vice without splendour, sin without relief
Even from the gloss of love to smooth it
o'er, 86

But in its stead, coarse lusts of habitude, Prurient yet passionless, cold studied lewdness,

Depraving nature's frailty to an art;—
When these and more are heavy on thee,
when 90

Smiles without mirth, and pastimes without pleasure,

Youth without honour, age without respect,

Meanness and weakness, and a sense of
woe

'Gainst which thou wilt not strive, and
dar'st not murmur,

Have made thee last and worst of peopled deserts, 95

Then, in the last gasp of thine agony,
Amidst thy many murders, think of mine!
Thou den of drunkards with the blood of princes! 98

Gehenna of the waters! thou sea-Sodom!
Thus I devote thee to the infernal gods!
Thee and thy serpent seed!

[Here the DOGE turns and addresses the Executioner.

Slave, do thine office!

Strike as I struck the foe! Strike as I would Have struck those tyrants! Strike deep as my curse!

Strike—and but once!

[The DOGE throws himself upon his knees, and as the Executioner raises his sword the scene closes.

SCENE IV.—The Piazza and Piazzetta of St. Mark's.—The people in crowds gathered round the grated gates of the Ducal Palace, which are shut.

First Citizen. I have gain'd the gate, and can discern the Ten,

Robed in their gowns of state, ranged round the Doge.

Second. Cit. I cannot reach thee with mine utmost effort.

How is it? let us hear at least, since sight
Is thus prohibited unto the people, 5
Except the occupiers of those bars.

First Cit. One has approach'd the Doge, and now they strip

The ducal bonnet from his head—and now
He raises his keen eyes to heaven; I see Them glitter, and his lips move—Hush!
hush!—no, 10

'Twas but a murmur—Curse upon the distance!

His words are inarticulate, but the voice Swells up like mutter'd thunder; would we could

But gather a sole sentence!

Second Cit. Hush! we perhaps may catch the sound.

First Cit. 'Tis vain, 15

I cannot hear him.—How his hoary hair Streams on the wind like foam upon the
wave!

Now—now—he kneels—and now they form a circle

Round him, and all is hidden—but I see
The lifted sword in air—Ah! hark! it falls! 20

[The people murmur.

Third Cit. Then they have murder'd him who would have freed us.

Fourth Cit. He was a kind man to the commons ever.

Fifth Cit. Wisely they did to keep their portals barr'd.

Would we had known the work they were preparing

Ere we were summon'd here—we would 'Justice hath dealt upon the mighty have brought 25 Traitor!'

Weapons, and forced them!

Sixth Cit. Are you sure he's dead?

First Cit. I saw the sword fall—Lo!
what have we here?

Enter on the Balcony of the Palace which fronts St. Mark's Place a CHIEF of the TEN, with a bloody sword. He waves it thrice before the People, and exclaims, [The gates are opened; the populace rush in towards the 'Giants' Staircase,' where the execution has taken place. The foremost of them exclaims to those behind,

'The gory head rolls down the Giants' Steps!' [The curtain falls.]

SARDANAPALUS

A TRAGEDY

TO

THE ILLUSTRIOUS GOETHE

A STRANGER PRESUMES TO OFFER THE HOMAGE OF A LITERARY VASSAL TO HIS LIEGE LORD, THE FIRST OF EXISTING WRITERS, WHO HAS CREATED THE LITERATURE OF HIS OWN COUNTRY, AND ILLUSTRATED THAT OF EUROPE.

THE UNWORTHY PRODUCTION WHICH THE AUTHOR VENTURES TO INSCRIBE TO HIM IS ENTITLED, SARDANAPALUS

PREFACE

IN publishing the following Tragedies* I have only to repeat, that they were not composed with the most remote view to the stage. On the attempt made by the managers in a former instance, the public opinion has been already expressed. With regard to my own private feelings, as it seems that they are to stand for nothing, I shall say nothing.

For the historical foundation of the following compositions the reader is referred to the Notes.

The Author has in one instance attempted to preserve, and in the other to approach, the 'unities'; conceiving that with any very distant departure from them, there may be poetry, but can be no drama. He is aware of the unpopularity of this notion in present English literature; but it is not a system of his own, being merely an opinion, which, not very long ago, was the law of literature throughout the world, and is still so in the more civilized parts of it. But 'nous avons changé tout cela,' and are reaping the advantages of the change. The writer is far from conceiving that anything he can adduce by personal precept or example can at all approach his regular, or even irregular, predecessors: he is merely giving a reason why he preferred the more regular formation of a structure, however feeble, to an entire abandonment of all rules whatsoever. Where he has failed, the failure is in the architect,—and not in the art.

SCENE.—A Hall in the Royal Palace of Nineveh

In this tragedy it has been my intention to follow the account of Diodorus Siculus; reducing it, however, to such dramatic regularity as I best could, and trying to approach the unities. I therefore suppose the rebellion to explode and succeed in one day by a sudden conspiracy, instead of the long war of the history.

ACT I

SCENE I.—A Hall in the Palace.

Salemenes [solus]. He hath wrong'd his queen, but still he is her lord;

He hath wrong'd my sister, still he is my brother;

He hath wrong'd his people, still he is their sovereign,

And I must be his friend as well as subject:

* 'Sardanapalus' and 'The Two Foscari.'

He must not perish thus. I will not see
The blood of Nimrod and Semiramis Sink in the earth, and thirteen hundred
years

Of empire ending like a shepherd's tale;
He must be roused. In his effeminate heart
There is a careless courage which corruption

Has not all quench'd, and latent energies, Repress'd by circumstance, but not de-
stroy'd—

Steep'd, but not drown'd, in deep voluptuousness.

If born a peasant, he had been a man
To have reach'd an empire: to an empire
born,

He will bequeath none; nothing but a
name,

Which his sons will not prize in heritage:
Yet, not all lost, even yet he may redeem

His sloth and shame, by only being that Which he should be, as easily as the thing
He should not be and is. Were it less toil

To sway his nations than consume his life?
To head an army than to rule a harem?
He sweats in palling pleasures, dulls his

soul,
And saps his goodly strength, in toils which yield not

Health like the chase, nor glory like the
war—

He must be roused. Alas! there is no
sound

[Sound of soft music heard from within.
To rouse him short of thunder. Hark! the lute,

The lyre, the timbrel; the lascivious tinklings

Of lulling instruments, the softening voices

Of women, and of beings less than women,
Must chime in to the echo of his revel,

While the great king of all we know of earth
Lolls crown'd with roses, and his diadem

Lies negligently by to be caught up
By the first manly hand which dares to snatch it.

Lo, where they come! already I perceive
The reeking odours of the perfumed trains,

And see the bright gems of the glittering girls,

At once his chorus and his council, flash
Along the gallery, and amidst the damsels,

As femininely garb'd, and scarce less female,

The grandson of Semiramis, the man-
queen.—

He comes! Shall I await him? yes, and front him,

And tell him what all good men tell each
other,

Speaking of him and his. They come, the
slaves

Led by the monarch subject to his slaves.

SCENE II

Enter SARDANAPALUS effeminately dressed, his Head crowned with Flowers, and his Robe negligently flowing, attended by a Train of Women and young Slaves.

Sar. [speaking to some of his attendants].
Let the pavilion over the Euphrates

Be garlanded, and lit, and furnish'd forth
For an especial banquet; at the hour

Of midnight we will sup there: see nought wanting,

And bid the galley be prepared. There is A cooling breeze which crisps the broad clear river:

We will embark anon. Fair nymphs, who deign

To share the soft hours of Sardanapalus,
We'll meet again in that the sweetest hour,

When we shall gather like the stars above
us,

And you will form a heaven as bright as
theirs;

Till then, let each be mistress of her time,
And thou, my own Ionian Myrrha, choose

Wilt thou along with them or me?

Myr. My lord—
Sar. My lord!—my life! why answerest thou so coldly?

It is the curse of kings to be so answer'd.
Rule thy own hours, thou rulest mine—

say, wouldst thou
Accompany our guests, or charm away

The moments from me?

Myr. The king's choice is mine.
Sar. I pray thee say not so: my chiefest
joy

Is to contribute to thine every wish.
I do not dare to breathe my own desire,

Lest it should clash with thine; for thou art still

Too prompt to sacrifice thy thoughts for others.

Myr. I would remain: I have no happi-
ness

Save in beholding thine; yet—
Sar. Yet! what YET?

Thy own sweet will shall be the only barrier

Which ever rises betwixt thee and me.
Myr. I think the present is the wonted
hour

Of council; it were better I retire.
Sal. [comes forward and says] The Ionian slave says well: let her retire.

Sar. Who answers? How now, brother?

Sal. The queen's brother,
And your most faithful vassal, royal lord.

Sar. [addressing his train]. As I have said, let all dispose their hours

Till midnight, when again we pray your presence.

[The court retiring.
[To MYRRA, who is going]. Myrrha! I thought thou wouldst remain.

Myr. Great king,
 Thou didst not say so.
Sar. But thou lookedst it;
 I know each glance of those Ionic eyes,
 Which said thou wouldst not leave me.
Myr. Sire! your brother—Sal. His consort's brother, minion of Ionia!
 How darest thou name me and not blush?
Sar. Not blush!
 Thou hast no more eyes than heart to make her crimson
 Like to the dying day on Caucasus,
 Where sunset tints the snow with rosy
 shadows,
 And then reproach her with thine own cold blindness,
 Which will not see it. What! in tears, my Myrrha?
Sal. Let them flow on; she weeps for more than one,
 And is herself the cause of bitterer tears.
Sar. Cursed be he who caused those tears to flow!
Sal. Curse not thyself—millions do that already.
Sar. Thou dost forget thee: make me not remember
 I am a monarch.
Sal. Would thou couldst!
Myr. My sovereign,
 I pray, and thou, too, prince, permit my absence.
Sar. Since it must be so, and this churl has check'd
 Thy gentle spirit, go; but recollect
 That we must forthwith meet: I had rather lose
 An empire than thy presence.
[Exit MYRRHA.]
Sal. It may be
 Thou wilt lose both, and both for ever!
Sar. Brother!
 I can at least command myself, who listen
 To language such as this: yet urge me not Beyond my easy nature.
Sal. 'Tis beyond
 That easy, far too easy, idle nature,
 Which I would urge thee. O that I could rouse thee!
 Though 'twere against myself.
Sar. By the god Baal!
 The man would make me tyrant.
Sal. So thou art.
 Think'st thou there is no tyranny but that Of blood and chains? The despotism of
 vice,
 The weakness and the wickedness of luxury,
 The negligence, the apathy, the evils
 Of sensual sloth—produce ten thousand
 tyrants,
 Whose delegated cruelty surpasses
 The worst acts of one energetic master,

However harsh and hard in his own bearing.
 The false and fond examples of thy lusts Corrupt no less than they oppress, and sap
 In the same moment all thy pageant power
 And those who should sustain it; so that whether
 A foreign foe invade, or civil broil
 Distract within, both will alike prove fatal.
 The first thy subjects have no heart to conquer;
 The last they rather would assist than vanquish.
Sar. Why, what makes thee the mouthpiece of the people?
Sal. Forgiveness of the queen's, my sister's wrongs;
 A natural love unto my infant nephews;
 Faith to the king, a faith he may need shortly,
 In more than words; respect for Nimrod's
 line;
 Also, another thing thou knowest not.
Sar. What's that?
Sal. To thee an unknown word.
Sar. Yet speak it;
 I love to learn.
Sal. Virtue.
Sar. Not know the word!
 Never was word yet rung so in my ears—
 Worse than the rabble's shout, or splitting
 trumpet:
 I've heard thy sister talk of nothing else.
Sal. To change the irksome theme, then hear of vice.
Sar. From whom?
Sal. Even from the winds, if thou couldst listen
 Unto the echoes of the nation's voice.
Sar. Come, I'm indulgent, as thou knowest, patient,
 As thou hast often proved—speak out,
 what moves thee?
Sal. Thy peril.
Sar. Say on.
Sal. Thus, then: all the nations,
 For they are many, whom thy father left In heritage, are loud in wrath against
 thee.
Sar. 'Gainst me! What would the
 slaves?
Sal. A king.
Sar. And what Am I then?
Sal. In their eyes a nothing; but In mine a man who might be something
 still.
Sar. The railing drunkards! why, what would they have?
 Have they not peace and plenty?
Sal. Of the first,
 More than is glorious; of the last, far less Than the king recks of.

Sar. Whose then is the crime,
But the false satraps', who provide no
better?

Sal. And somewhat in the monarch who ne'er looks

Beyond his palace walls, or if he stirs
Beyond them, 'tis but to some mountain
palace,
Till summer heats wear down. O glorious Baal!

Who built up this vast empire, and wert
made

A god, or at the least shimest like a god
Through the long centuries of thy renown,
This, thy presumed descendant, ne'er beheld

As king the kingdoms thou didst leave as hero,

Won with thy blood, and toil, and time,
and peril!

For what? to furnish imposts for a revel,
Or multiplied extortions for a minion.

Sar. I understand thee—thou wouldst have me go

Forth as a conqueror. By all the stars
Which the Chaldeans read—the restless
slaves

Deserve that I should curse them with their wishes,

And lead them forth to glory.

Sal. Wherefore not?
Semiramis—a woman only—led

These our Assyrians to the solar shores
Of Ganges.

Sar. 'Tis most true. And how re-
turn'd?

Sal. Why, like a man—a hero; baffled,
but

Not vanquish'd. With but twenty guards, she made

Good her retreat to Bactria.

Sar. And how many Left she behind in India to the vultures?

Sal. Our annals say not.

Sar. Then I will say for them—
That she had better woven within her
palace

Some twenty garments, than with twenty guards

Have fled to Bactria, leaving to the ravens,
And wolves, and men—the fiercer of the three,

Her myriads of fond subjects. Is this
glory?

Then let me live in ignominy ever.

Sal. All warlike spirits have not the same fate.

Semiramis, the glorious parent of
A hundred kings, although she fail'd in India,

Brought Persia, Media, Bactria, to the realm

Which she once sway'd—and thou might'st
sway.

Sar. I sway them—
She but subdued them.

Sal. It may be ere long That they will need her sword more than your sceptre.

Sar. There was a certain Bacchus, was there not?

I've heard my Greek girls speak of such—they say

He was a god, that is, a Grecian god,
An idol foreign to Assyria's worship,
Who conquer'd this same golden realm of Ind

Thou prat'st of, where Semiramis was vanquish'd.

Sal. I have heard of such a man; and thou perceiv'st

That he is deem'd a god for what he did.

Sar. And in his godship I will honour
him—

Not much as man. What, ho! my cupbearer?

Sal. What means the king?

Sar. To worship your new god
And ancient conqueror. Some wine, I say.

Enter Cupbearer.

Sar. [addressing the Cupbearer]. Bring me the golden goblet, thick with gems,

Which bears the name of Nimrod's chalice. Hence,

Fill full, and bear it quickly.

[Exit Cupbearer.
Sal. Is this moment

A fitting one for the resumption of Thy yet unslept-off revels?

Re-enter Cupbearer, with wine.

Sar. [taking the cup from him]. Noble
kinsman,

If these barbarian Greeks of the far shores
And skirts of these our realms lie not, this

Bacchus
Conquer'd the whole of India, did he not?

Sal. He did, and thence was deem'd a deity.

Sar. Not so:—of all his conquests a few columns

Which may be his, and might be mine, if I Thought them worth purchase and conveyance, are

The landmarks of the seas of gore he shed,
The realms he wasted, and the hearts he broke.

But here, here in this goblet is his title
To immortality—the immortal grape

From which he first express'd the soul, and
gave

To gladden that of man, as some atone-
ment

For the victorious mischiefs he had done.
Had it not been for this, he would have
been

A mortal still in name as in his grave;
And, like my ancestor Semiramis, 180
A sort of semi-glorious human monster.
Here's that which deified him—let it now
Humanise thee; my surly, chiding brother
Pledge me to the Greek god!

Sal. For all thy realms
I would not so blaspheme our country's creed. 185

Sal. That is to say, thou thinkest him
a hero,
That he shed blood by oceans; and no god,
Because he turn'd a fruit to an enchant-
ment,
Which cheers the sad, revives the old,
inspires

The young, makes weariness forget his
toil, 190
And fear her danger; opens a new world
When this, the present, palls. Well, then
I pledge thee

And him as a true man, who did his utmost
In good or evil to surprise mankind.

[Drinks.
Sal. Wilt thou resume a revel at this
hour? 195

Sar. And if I did, 'twere better than a trophy,
Being bought without a tear. But that is
not

My present purpose: since thou wilt not pledge me,
Continue what thou pleasest.

[To the Cupbearer.] Boy, retire.
[Exit Cupbearer.

Sal. I would but have recall'd thee from thy dream; 200

Better by me awaken'd than rebellion.

Sar. Who should rebel? or why? what cause? pretext?

I am the lawful king, descended from
A race of kings who knew no predecessors.
What have I done to thee, or to the people,
That thou shouldst rail, or they rise up against me? 206

Sal. Of what thou hast done to me, I speak not.

Sar. But Thou think'st that I have wrong'd the queen; is't not so?

Sal. Think! Thou hast wrong'd her!

Sar. Patience, prince, and hear me.
She has all power and splendour of her
station, 210

Respect, the tutelage of Assyria's heirs,
The homage and the appanage of sovereignty.

I married her as monarchs wed—for state,
And loved her as most husbands love their wives.

If she or thou supposedst I could link me
Like a Chaldean peasant to his mate,

Ye knew nor me, nor monarchs, nor man-
kind. 217

Sal. I pray thee, change the theme: my blood disdains

Complaint, and Salemenes' sister seeks not Reluctant love even from Assyria's lord!
Nor would she deign to accept divided
passion 221

With foreign strumpets and Ionian slaves.
The queen is silent.

Sar. And why not her brother?

Sal. I only echo thee the voice of empires,

Which he who long neglects not long will govern. 225

Sar. The ungrateful and ungracious slaves! they murmur

Because I have not shed their blood, nor led them

To dry into the desert's dust by myriads,
Or whiten with their bones the banks of Ganges; 229

Nor decimated them with savage laws,
Nor sweated them to build up pyramids,
Or Babylonian walls.

Sal. Yet these are trophies
More worthy of a people and their prince Than songs, and lutes, and feasts, and concubines,

And lavish'd treasures, and contemned
virtues. 235

Sar. Or for my trophies I have founded
cities:

There's Tarsus and Anchialus, both built In one day—what could that blood-loving beldame, 238

My martial grandam, chaste Semiramis,
Do more, except destroy them?

Sal. 'Tis most true;
I own thy merit in those founded cities,
Built for a whim, recorded with a verse,
Which shames both them and thee to coming ages.

Sar. Shame me! By Baal, the cities, though well built,

Are not more goodly than the verse! Say
what 245

Thou wilt 'gainst me, my mode of life or
rule,

But nothing 'gainst the truth of that brief
record.

Why, those few lines contain the history
Of all things human: hear—'Sardanapalus,

The king, and son of Anacyndaraxes,
In one day built Anchialus and Tarsus.

Eat, drink, and love; the rest's not worth a filip.'

Sal. A worthy moral, and a wise inscription,

For a king to put up before his subjects!
Sar. Oh, thou wouldst have me doubtless set up edicts— 255

'Obey the king—contribute to his treasure—

Recruit his phalanx—spill your blood at bidding—

Fall down and worship, or get up and toil.
Or thus—'Sardanapalus on this spot
Slew fifty thousand of his enemies. 260
These are their sepulchres, and this his trophy.'

I leave such things to conquerors; enough
For me, if I can make my subjects feel
The weight of human misery less, and glide
Ungroaning to the tomb: I take no licence
Which I deny to them. We all are men.

Sal. Thy sires have been revered as gods—

Sar. In dust
And death, where they are neither gods nor men.

Talk not of such to me! the worms are gods; 269

At least they banqueted upon your gods,
And died for lack of further nutriment.
Those gods were merely men; look to their issue—

I feel a thousand mortal things about me,
But nothing godlike,—unless it may be
The thing which you condemn, a disposition 275

To love and to be merciful, to pardon
The follies of my species, and (that's human)

To be indulgent to my own.

Sal. Alas!
The doom of Nineveh is seal'd.—Woe—
woe

To the unrivall'd city!

Sar. What dost dread?

Sal. Thou art guarded by thy foes: in a few hours 281

The tempest may break out which overwhelms thee,

And thine and mine; and in another day
What is shall be the past of Belus' race.

Sar. What must we dread?

Sal. Ambitious treachery, Which has environ'd thee with snares; but
yet 286

There is resource: empower me with thy signet

To quell the machinations, and I lay
The heads of thy chief foes before thy feet.

Sar. The heads—how many?

Sal. Must I stay to number
When even thine own's in peril? Let me go;

Give me thy signet—trust me with the rest.

Sar. I will trust no man with unlimited lives.

When we take those from others, we nor
know

What we have taken, nor the thing we
give. 295

Sal. Wouldst thou not take their lives who seek for thine?

Sar. That's a hard question—But I answer, Yes.

Cannot the thing be done without? Who are they

Whom thou suspectest?—Let them be arrested.

Sal. I would thou wouldst not ask me;
the next moment 300

Will send my answer through thy babbling
troop

Of paramours, and thence fly o'er the
palace,

Even to the city, and so baffle all.—

Trust me.

Sar. Thou knowest I have done so ever;
Take thou the signet. [Gives the signet.

Sal. I have one more request. 305

Sar. Name it.

Sal. That thou this night forbear the banquet

In the pavilion over the Euphrates.

Sar. Forbear the banquet! Not for all the plotters

That ever shook a kingdom! Let them
come,

And do their worst: I shall not blench for
them; 310

Nor rise the sooner; nor forbear the goblet;

Nor crown me with a single rose the less;
Nor lose one joyous hour.—I fear them
not.

Sal. But thou wouldst arm thee, wouldst thou not, if needful?

Sar. Perhaps. I have the goodliest armour, and 315

A sword of such a temper; and a bow
And javelin, which might furnish Nimrod
forth:

A little heavy, but yet not unwieldy.

And now I think on't, 'tis long since I've used them,

Even in the chase. Hast ever seen them,
brother? 320

Sal. Is this a time for such fantastic trifling?—

If need be, wilt thou wear them?

Sar. Will I not?

Oh! if it must be so, and these rash slaves
Will not be ruled with less, I'll use the
sword

Till they shall wish it turn'd into a distaff.

Sal. They say thy sceptre's turn'd to
that already. 326

Sar. That's false! but let them say so:
the old Greeks,

Of whom our captives often sing, related
The same of their chief hero, Hercules,

Because he loved a Lydian queen: thou
seest 330

The populace of all the nations seize Each calumny they can to sink their sovereigns.

Sal. They did not speak thus of thy fathers.

Sar. No;

They dared not. They were kept to toil and combat;

And never changed their chains but for their armour: 335

Now they have peace and pastime, and the licence

To revel and to rail; it irks me not.

I would not give the smile of one fair girl

For all the popular breath that e'er divided

A name from nothing. What are the rank

tongues 340

Of this vile herd, grown insolent with feed-

ing,

That I should prize their noisy praise, or

dread

Their noisome clamour?

Sal. You have said they are men;

As such their hearts are something.

Sar. So my dogs' are;

And better, as more faithful:—but, proceed; 345

Thou hast my signet:—since they are tumultuous,

Let them be temper'd, yet not roughly, till

Necessity enforce it. I hate all pain,

Given or received; we have enough within us,

The meanest vassal as the loftiest monarch,

Not to add to each other's natural burthen

Of mortal misery, but rather lessen, 352

By mild reciprocal alleviation,

The fatal penalties imposed on life:

But this they know not, or they will not

know. 355

I have, by Baal! done all I could to soothe

them:

I made no wars, I added no new imposts,

I interfered not with their civic lives,

I let them pass their days as best might suit

them: 359

Passing my own as suited me.

Sal. Thou stopp'st

Short of the duties of a king; and therefore

They say thou art unfit to be a monarch.

Sar. They lie.—Unhappily, I am unfit

To be aught save a monarch; else for me

The meanest Mede might be the king instead. 365

Sal. There is one Mede, at least, who seeks to be so.

Sar. What mean'st thou?—'tis thy secret; thou desirest

Few questions, and I'm not of curious

nature.

Take the fit steps; and, since necessity

Requires, I sanction and support thee.

Ne'er 370

Was man who more desired to rule in peace

The peaceful only; if they rouse me, better

They had conjured up stern Nimrod from his ashes,

'The mighty hunter.' I will turn these

realms

To one wide desert chase of brutes, who

were, 375

But would no more, by their own choice,

be human.

What they have found me, they belie; that
which

They yet may find me—shall defy their wish

To speak it worse; and let them thank themselves. 379

Sal. Then thou at last canst feel?

Sar. Feel! who feels not Ingratitude?

Sal. I will not pause to answer

With words, but deeds. Keep thou awake that energy

Which sleeps at times, but is not dead within thee,

And thou may'st yet be glorious in thy

reign, 384

As powerful in thy realm. Farewell!

[Exit SALEMENES.

Sar. [solus]. Farewell!

He's gone; and on his finger bears my sig-

net,

Which is to him a sceptre. He is stern

As I am heedless; and the slaves deserve

To feel a master. What may be the danger,

I know not: he hath found it, let him quell

it. 390

Must I consume my life—this little life—

In guarding against all may make it less?

It is not worth so much! It were to die

Before my hour, to live in dread of death,

Tracing revolt; suspecting all about me,

Because they are near; and all who are remote, 396

Because they are far. But if it should be

so—

If they should sweep me off from earth and

empire,

Why, what is earth or empire of the earth?

I have loved, and lived, and multiplied my

image; 400

To die is no less natural than those

Acts of this clay! 'Tis true I have not shed

Blood as I might have done, in oceans, till

My name became the synonyme of death—

A terror and a trophy. But for this 405

I feel no penitence; my life is love:

If I must shed blood, it shall be by force.

Till now, no drop from an Assyrian vein

Hath flow'd for me, nor hath the smallest

coin

Of Nineveh's vast treasures e'er been lavish'd 410

On objects which could cost her sons a

tear:

If then they hate me, 'tis because I hate not:

If they rebel, 'tis because I oppress not.

Oh, men! ye must be ruled with scythes,

not sceptres,

And mow'd down like the grass, else all we

reap 415

Is rank abundance, and a rotten harvest

Of discontents infecting the fair soil,

Making a desert of fertility.—

I'll think no more.—Within there, ho!

Enter an ATTENDANT.

Sar. Slave, tell
The Ionian Myrrha we could crave her presence. 420
Attend. King, she is here.

MYRRHA enters.

Sar. [apart to Attendant]. Away!
[Addressing MYRRHA]. Beautiful being!
Thou dost almost anticipate my heart;
It throb'd for thee, and here thou comest:
let me
Deem that some unknown influence, some sweet oracle,
Communicates between us, though un-
seen, 425
In absence, and attracts us to each other.

Myr. There doth.

Sar. I know there doth, but not its
name:
What is it?

Myr. In my native land a God,
And in my heart a feeling like a God's,
Exalted; yet I own 'tis only mortal; 430
For what I feel is humble, and yet happy—
That is, it would be happy; but—

[MYRRHA pauses.]

Sar. There comes
For ever something between us and what We deem our happiness: let me remove
The barrier which that hesitating accent
Proclaims to thine, and mine is seal'd.

Myr. My lord!

Sar. My lord—my king—sire—sovereign; thus it is— 437
For ever thus, address'd with awe. I ne'er Can see a smile, unless in some broad banquet's

Intoxicating glare, when the buffoons
Have gorged themselves up to equality,
Or I have quaff'd me down to their abase-
ment. 442

Myrrha, I can hear all these things, these
names,

Lord—king—sire—monarch—nay, time
was I priz'd them;

That is, I suffer'd them—from slaves and
nobles; 445

But when they falter from the lips I love,
The lips which have been press'd to mine,
a chill

Comes o'er my heart, a cold sense of the falsehood

Of this my station, which represses feeling In those for whom I have felt most, and makes me 450

Wish that I could lay down the dull tiara,
And share a cottage on the Caucasus With thee, and wear no crowns but those of flowers.

Myr. Would that we could!

Sar. And dost thou feel this?—Why?

Myr. Then thou wouldst know what thou canst never know. 455

Sar. And that is—

Myr. The true value of a heart;
At least, a woman's.

Sar. I have proved a thousand—
A thousand, and a thousand.

Myr. Hearts?

Sar. I think so.

Myr. Not one! the time may come thou may'st.

Sar. It will. 459

Hear, Myrrha; Salemenes has declared—
Or why or how he hath divined it, Belus,
Who founded our great realm, knows more
than I—

But Salemenes hath declared my throne
In peril.

Myr. He did well.

Sar. And say'st thou so?
Thou whom he spurn'd so harshly, and now dared 465

Drive from our presence with his savage
jeers,

And made thee weep and blush?

Myr. I should do both
More frequently, and he did well to call me Back to my duty. But thou spak'st of peril—

Peril to thee—

Sar. Ay, from dark plots and snares
From Medes—and discontented troops and nations, 471

I know not what—a labyrinth of things—
A maze of mutter'd threats and mysteries:
Thou know'st the man—it is his usual custom.

But he is honest. Come, we'll think no more on't— 475

But of the midnight festival.

Myr. 'Tis time

To think of aught save festivals. Thou hast
not

Spurn'd his sage cautions?

Sar. What?—and dost thou fear?

Myr. Fear!—I'm a Greek, and how should I fear death?

A slave, and wherefore should I dread my freedom? 480

Sar. Then wherefore dost thou turn so
pale?

Myr. I love.

Sar. And do not I? I love thee far—far
more

Than either the brief life or the wide realm,
Which, it may be, are menaced;—yet I blench not.

Myr. That means thou lovest nor thyself nor me; 485

For he who loves another loves himself,
Even for that other's sake. This is too rash:
Kingdoms and lives are not to be so lost.

Sar. Lost!—why, who is the aspiring chief who dared 489

Assume to win them?

Myr. Who is he should dread

To try so much? When he who is their ruler Forgets himself, will they remember him?

Sar. Myrrha!

Myr. Frown not upon me; you have smiled 493

Too often on me not to make those frowns
Bitterer to bear than any punishment Which they may augur.—King, I am your subject!

Master, I am your slave! Man, I have loved you!

Loved you, I know not by what fatal weak-
ness,

Although a Greek, and born a foe to monarchs— 499

A slave, and hating fetters—an Ionian,
And, therefore, when I love a stranger,
more

Degraded by that passion than by chains!
Still I have loved you. If that love were
strong

Enough to overcome all former nature,
Shall it not claim the privilege to save you?

Sar. Save me, my beauty! Thou art very fair, 506

And what I seek of thee is love—not safety.

Myr. And without love where dwells security?

Sar. I speak of woman's love.

Myr. The very first
Of human life must spring from woman's
breast, 510

Your first small words are taught you from her lips,

Your first tears quench'd by her, and your last sighs

Too often breathed out in a woman's hear-
ing,

When men have shrunk from the ignoble
care

Of watching the last hour of him who led
them, 515

Sar. My eloquent Ionian! thou speak'st music;

The very chorus of the tragic song

I have heard thee talk of as the favourite pastime

Of thy far father-land. Nay, weep not—calm thee.

Myr. I weep not.—But I pray thee, do not speak 520

About my fathers or their land.

Sar. Yet oft
Thou speakest of them.

Myr. True—true: constant thought
Will overflow in words unconsciously;
But when another speaks of Greece, it wounds me.

Sar. Well, then, how wouldst thou save me, as thou saidst? 525

Myr. By teaching thee to save thyself, and not

Thyself alone, but these vast realms, from
all

The rage of the worst war—the war of brethren.

Sar. Why, child, I loathe all war and warriors; 529

I live in peace and pleasure: what can man
Do more?

Myr. Alas! my lord, with common men
There needs too oft the show of war to keep The substance of sweet peace; and, for a
king,

'Tis sometimes better to be fear'd than lov'd.

Sar. And I have never sought but for the last. 535

Myr. And now art neither.

Sar. Dost thou say so, Myrrha?

Myr. I speak of civic popular love, self-
love,

Which means that men are kept in awe
and law,

Yet not oppress'd—at least they must not think so, 539

Or if they think so, deem it necessary,
To ward off worse oppression, their own passions.

A king of feasts, and flowers, and wine, and
revel,

And love, and mirth, was never king of
glory.

Sar. Glory! what's that?

Myr. Ask of the gods thy fathers.

Sar. They cannot answer; when the priests speak for them, 545

'Tis for some small addition to the temple.

Myr. Look to the annals of thine empire's founders.

Sar. They are so blotted o'er with blood, I cannot.

But what wouldst have? the empire has been founded.

I cannot go on multiplying empires. 550

Myr. Preserve thine own.

Sar. At least, I will enjoy it.
Come, Myrrha, let us go on to the Euphrates:

The hour invites, the galley is prepared,
And the pavilion, deck'd for our return,
In fit adornment for the evening banquet,
Shall blaze with beauty and with light, until 556

It seems unto the stars which are above us
Itself an opposite star; and we will sit Crown'd with fresh flowers like—

Myr. Victims.

Sar. No, like sovereigns,
The shepherd kings of patriarchal times,
Who knew no brighter gems than summer wreaths, 561

And none but tearless triumphs. Let us on.

Enter PANIA.

Pan. May the king live for ever!

Sar. Not an hour
Longer than he can love. How my soul hates

This language, which makes life itself a lie, Flattering dust with eternity! Well, Pania!
Be brief.

Pan. I am charged by Salemenes to Reiterate his prayer unto the king, 568
That for this day, at least, he will not quit
The palace: when the general returns,
He will adduce such reasons as will warrant 571
His daring, and perhaps obtain the pardon
Of his presumption.

Sar. What! am I then coop'd?
Already captive? can I not even breathe
The breath of heaven? Tell prince Saleme-nes, 575

Were all Assyria raging round the walls
In mutinous myriads, I would still go forth.
Pan. I must obey you, and yet—

Myr. Oh, monarch, listen.—
How many a day and moon thou hast reclined

Within these palace walls in silken dalli-
ance, 580
And never shown thee to thy people's long-
ing;

Leaving thy subjects' eyes ungratified,
The satraps uncontroll'd, the gods unworshipp'd,

And all things in the anarchy of sloth,
Till all, save evil, slumber'd through the
realm! 585

And wilt thou not now tarry for a day,—
A day which may redeem thee? Wilt thou
not

Yield to the few still faithful a few hours,
For them, for thee, for thy past fathers'
race,

And for thy sons' inheritance?

Pan. 'Tis true!
From the deep urgency with which the
prince 591

Despatch'd me to your sacred presence, I Must dare to add my feeble voice to that Which now has spoken.

Sar. No, it must not be.

Myr. For the sake of thy realm!

Sar. Away!

Pan. For that
Of all thy faithful subjects, who will rally
Round thee and thine.

Sar. These are mere fantasies:
There is no peril:—'tis a sullen scheme
Of Salemenes, to approve his zeal, 599
And show himself more necessary to us.

Myr. By all that's good and glorious take this counsel.

Sar. Business to-morrow.

Myr. Ay, or death to-night.

Sar. Why let it come then unexpectedly,
'Midst joy and gentleness, and mirth and
love;

So let me fall like the pluck'd rose!—far
better 605

Thus than be wither'd.

Myr. Then thou wilt not yield,
Even for the sake of all that ever stirr'd
A monarch into action, to forego 608
A trifling revel.

Sar. No.

Myr. Then yield for mine;
For my sake!

Sar. Thine, my Myrrha!

Myr. 'Tis the first
Boon which I ever ask'd Assyria's king.

Sar. That's true, and were't my kingdom, must be granted.

Well, for thy sake, I yield me. Pania, hence!
Thou hear'st me.

Pan. And obey. [Exit PANIA.

Sar. I marvel at thee.
What is thy motive, Myrrha, thus to urge
me? 615

Myr. Thy safety; and the certainty that nought

Could urge the prince thy kinsman to require

Thus much from thee, but some impending
danger.

Sar. And if I do not dread it, why shouldst thou?

Myr. Because thou dost not fear, I fear
for thee. 620

Sar. To-morrow thou wilt smile at these vain fancies.

Myr. If the worst come, I shall be where none weep,

And that is better than the power to smile.
And thou?

Sar. I shall be king, as heretofore.

Myr. Where?

Sar. With Baal, Nimrod, and Semiramis, 625

Sole in Assyria, or with them elsewhere.
Fate made me what I am—may make me
nothing—

But either that or nothing must I be:
I will not live degraded.

Myr. Hadst thou felt Thus always, none would ever dare degrade thee. 630

Sar. And who will do so now?

Myr. Dost thou suspect none?

Sar. Suspect!—that's a spy's office.
Oh! we lose

Ten thousand precious moments in vain
words,

And vainer fears. Within there!—ye slaves, deck 634

The hall of Nimrod for the evening revel:
If I must make a prison of our palace,

At least we'll wear our fetters jocundly;
If the Euphrates be forbid us, and

The summer dwelling on its beauteous
border, 639

Here we are still unmenaced. Ho! within there! [Exit SARDANAPALUS.

Myr. [sola]. Why do I love this man?

My country's daughters

Love none but heroes. But I have no country!
 The slave hath lost all save her bonds. I love him;
 And that's the heaviest link of the long chain—
 To love whom we esteem not. Be it so:
 The hour is coming when he'll need all love,
 And find none. To fall from him now were baser
 Than to have stabb'd him on his throne when highest
 Would have been noble in my country's creed:
 I was not made for either. Could I save him,
 I should not love him better, but myself;
 And I have need of the last, for I have fallen
 In my own thoughts, by loving this soft stranger:
 And yet methinks I love him more, perceiving
 That he is hated of his own barbarians,
 The natural foes of all the blood of Greece.
 Could I but wake a single thought like those Which even the Phrygians felt when battling long
 'Twixt Ilium and the sea, within his heart
 He would tread down the barbarous crowds, and triumph.
 He loves me, and I love him; the slave loves
 Her master, and would free him from his vices.
 If not, I have a means of freedom still,
 And if I cannot teach him how to reign,
 May show him how alone a king can leave
 His throne. I must not lose him from my sight.

[Exit.

ACT II

SCENE I.—The Portal of the same Hall of the Palace.

Beleses [solus]. The sun goes down: methinks he sets more slowly,
 Taking his last look of Assyria's empire.
 How red he glares amongst those deepening clouds,
 Like the blood he predicts! If not in vain,
 Thou sun that sinkest, and ye stars which rise,
 I have outwatch'd ye, reading ray by ray
 The edicts of your orbs, which make Time tremble
 For what he brings the nations, 'tis the furthest
 Hour of Assyria's years. And yet how calm!
 An earthquake should announce so great a fall—
 A summer's sun discloses it. Yon disk,
 To the star-read Chaldean, bears upon

Its everlasting page the end of what Seem'd everlasting; but oh! thou true sun!
 The burning oracle of all that live,
 As fountain of all life, and symbol of Him who bestows it, wherefore dost thou limit
 Thy lore unto calamity? Why not Unfold the rise of days more worthy thine
 All-glorious burst from ocean? why not dart
 A beam of hope athwart the future years,
 As of wrath to its days? Hear me! oh, hear me!
 I am thy worshipper, thy priest, thy servant—
 I have gazed on thee at thy rise and fall,
 And bow'd my head beneath thy mid-day beams,
 When my eye dared not meet thee. I have watch'd
 For thee, and after thee, and pray'd to thee,
 And sacrificed to thee, and read, and fear'd thee,
 And ask'd of thee, and thou hast answer'd —but Only to thus much: while I speak, he sinks—
 Is gone—and leaves his beauty, not his knowledge,
 To the delighted west, which revels in Its hues of dying glory. Yet what is Death, so it be but glorious? 'Tis a sunset;
 And mortals may be happy to resemble
 The gods but in decay.

Enter ARBACES by an inner door.

Arb. Beleses, why
 So rapt in thy devotions? Dost thou stand
 Gazing to trace thy disappearing god
 Into some realm of undiscover'd day?
 Our business is with night—'tis come.
Bel. But not
 Gone.
Arb. Let it roll on—we are ready.
Bel. Yes.
 Would it were over!
Arb. Does the prophet doubt,
 To whom the very stars shine victory?
Bel. I do not doubt of victory—but the victor.
Arb. Well, let thy science settle that.
 Meantime
 I have prepared as many glittering spears
 As will out-sparkle our allies—your planets.
 There is no more to thwart us. The she-king,
 That less than woman, is even now upon
 The waters with his female mates. The order
 Is issued for the feast in the pavilion.
 The first cup which he drains will be the last Quaff'd by the line of Nimrod.

Bel. 'Twas a brave one.
Arb. And is a weak one—'tis worn out—
 —we'll mend it. 54
Bel. Art sure of that?
Arb. Its founder was a hunter—
 I am a soldier—what is there to fear?
Bel. The soldier.
Arb. And the priest, it may be: but If you thought thus, or think, why not retain
 Your king of concubines? why stir me up?
 Why spur me to this enterprise? your own
 No less than mine?
Bel. Look to the sky!
Arb. I look.
Bel. What seest thou?
Arb. A fair summer's twilight, and
 The gathering of the stars.
Bel. And midst them, mark Yon earliest, and the brightest, which so quivers, 64
 As it would quit its place in the blue ether.
Arb. Well!
Bel. 'Tis thy natal ruler—thy birth planet.
Arb. [touching his scabbard]. My star is in this scabbard: when it shines,
 It shall out-dazzle comets. Let us think
 Of what is to be done to justify Thy planets and their portents. When we conquer, 70
 They shall have temples—ay, and priests
 —and thou
 Shalt be the pontiff of—what gods thou wilt;
 For I observe that they are ever just,
 And own the bravest for the most devout.
Bel. Ay, and the most devout for brave
 —thou hast not 75
 Seen me turn back from battle.
Arb. No; I own thee
 As firm in fight as Babylonia's captain,
 As skilful in Chaldea's worship: now,
 Will it but please thee to forget the priest,
 And be the warrior?
Bel. Why not both?
Arb. The better;
 And yet it almost shames me, we shall have
 So little to effect. This woman's warfare Degrades the very conqueror. To have pluck'd 83
 A bold and bloody despot from his throne,
 And grappled with him, clashing steel with
 steel,
 That were heroic or to win or fall;
 But to upraise my sword against this silk-
 worm, 87
 And hear him whine, it may be—
Bel. Do not deem it:
 He has that in him which may make you strife yet;
 And were he all you think, his guards are hardy, 90
 And headed by the cool, stern Salemenes.
Arb. They'll not resist.
Bel. Why not? they are soldiers.

Arb. True,
 And therefore need a soldier to command
 them.
Bel. That Salemenes is.
Arb. But not their king.
 Besides, he hates the effeminate thing that governs, 95
 For the queen's sake, his sister. Mark you
 not
 He keeps aloof from all the revels?
Bel. But
 Not from the council—there he is ever constant.
Arb. And ever thwarted: what would you have more
 To make a rebel out of? A fool reigning,
 His blood dishonour'd, and himself dis-
 dain'd: 101
 Why, it is his revenge we work for.
Bel. Could
 He but be brought to think so: this I doubt
 of.
Arb. What, if we sound him?
Bel. Yes—if the time served.

Enter BALEA.

Bal. Satraps! The king commands your presence at 105
 The feast to-night.
Bel. To hear is to obey.
 In the pavilion?
Bal. No; here in the palace.
Arb. How! in the palace? it was not thus order'd.
Bal. It is so order'd now.
Arb. And why?
Bal. I know not.
 May I retire?
Arb. Stay.
Bel. [to Arb. aside]. Hush! let him go his
 way. 110
 [Alternately to Bal.]. Yes, Balea, thank the monarch, kiss the hem
 Of his imperial robe, and say, his slaves
 Will take the crumbs he deigns to scatter
 from His royal table at the hour—was't mid-
 night?
Bal. It was: the place, the hall of Nim-
 rod. Lords, 115
 I humble me before you, and depart,
Exit BALEA.
Arb. I like not this same sudden change of place;
 There is some mystery: wherefore should he change it?
Bel. Doth he not change a thousand times a day?
 Sloth is of all things the most fanciful—
 And moves more parasangs in its intents Than generals in their marches, when they seek
 To leave their foe at fault.—Why dost thou
 muse?

Arb. He loved that gay pavilion,—it was ever
His summer dotage. 124
Bel. And he loved his queen—
And thrice a thousand harlotry besides—
And he has loved all things by turns, except Wisdom and glory.

Arb. Still—I like it not.
If he has changed—why, so must we: the attack
Were easy in the isolated bower, 130 Beset with drowsy guards and drunken courtiers;
But in the hall of Nimrod—

Bel. Is it so?
Methought the haughty soldier fear'd to
mount 133
A throne too easily—does it disappoint thee
To find there is a slipperier step or two Than what was counted on?

Arb. When the hour comes,
Thou shalt perceive how far I fear or no.
Thou hast seen my life at stake—and gaily play'd for:

But here is more upon the die—a kingdom.

Bel. I have foretold already—thou wilt win it: 140

Then on, and prosper.

Arb. Now were I a soothsayer,
I would have boded so much to myself.
But be the stars obey'd—I cannot quarrel With them, nor their interpreter. Who's
here? 144

Enter SALEMENES.

Sal. Satraps!

Bel. My prince!

Sal. Well met—I sought ye both,
But elsewhere than the palace.

Arb. Wherefore so?

Sal. 'Tis not the hour.

Arb. The hour!—what hour?

Sal. Of midnight.

Bel. Midnight, my lord!

Sal. What, are you not invited?

Bel. Oh! yes—we had forgotten.

Sal. Is it usual
Thus to forget a sovereign's invitation?

Arb. Why—we but now received it.

Sal. Then why here?

Arb. On duty.

Sal. On what duty?

Bel. On the state's.
We have the privilege to approach the
presence; 153

But found the monarch absent.

Sal. And I too
Am upon duty.

Arb. May we crave its purport?

Sal. To arrest two traitors. Guards!
Within there!

Enter Guards.

Sal. [continuing]. Satraps,

Your swords.

Bel. [delivering his]. My lord, behold my scimitar.

Arb. [drawing his sword]. Take mine.
Sal. [advancing]. I will.

Arb. But in your heart the blade—
The hilt quits not this hand.

Sal. [drawing]. How! dost thou brave
me?

'Tis well—this saves a trial, and false mercy. 160

Soldiers, hew down the rebel!

Arb. Soldiers! Ay—
Alone you dare not.

Sal. Alone! foolish slave—
What is there in thee that a prince should shrink from

Of open force? We dread thy treason, not Thy strength: thy tooth is nought without its venom— 165

The serpent's, not the lion's. Cut him
down.

Bel. [interposing]. Arbaces! are you mad? Have I not render'd

My sword? Then trust like me our sovereign's justice.

Arb. No—I will sooner trust the stars thou prat'st of, 169

And this slight arm, and die a king at least
Of my own breath and body—so far that None else shall chain them.

Sal. [to the guards]. You hear him and
me.

Take him not,—kill.

[The Guards attack ARBACES, who defends himself valiantly and dexterously till they waver.]

Sal. Is it even so; and must
I do the hangman's office? Recreants! see How you should fell a traitor.

[SALEMENES attacks ARBACES.]

Enter SARDANAPALUS and Train.

Sal. Hold your hands—Upon your lives, I say. What, deaf or drunken? 176

My sword! O fool, I wear no sword: here,
fellow,

Give me thy weapon. [To a Guard.
[SARDANAPALUS snatches a sword from one of the soldiers, and rushes between the combatants—they separate.]

Sal. In my very palace!
What hinders me from cleaving you in twain, 179

Audacious brawlers?

Bel. Sire, your justice.
Sal. Or—

Your weakness.

Sal. [raising the sword]. How?

Sal. Strike! so the blow's repeated Upon yon traitor—whom you spare a
moment,

I trust, for torture—I'm content.

I love to see their rays redoubled in 255
The tremulous silver of Euphrates' wave,
As the light breeze of midnight crisps the broad

And rolling water, sighing through the sedges

Which fringe his banks; but whether they
may be 259

Gods, as some say, or the abodes of gods,
As others hold, or simply lamps of night,
Worlds, or the lights of worlds, I know nor care not.

There's something sweet in my uncertainty 263

I would not change for your Chaldean lore;
Besides, I know of these all clay can know
Of aught above it, or below it—nothing.
I see their brilliancy and feel their beauty—
When they shine on my grave I shall know neither.

Bel. For neither, sire, say better.

Sar. I will wait,
If it so please you, pontiff, for that knowledge. 270

In the mean time receive your sword, and
know

That I prefer your service militant Unto your ministry—not loving either.

Sal. [aside]. His lusts have made him mad. Then must I save him,

Spite of myself.

Sar. Please you to hear me, Satraps!
And chiefly thou, my priest, because I doubt thee 276

More than the soldier; and would doubt thee all

Wert thou not half a warrior; let us part In peace—I'll not say pardon—which must be

Earn'd by the guilty; this I'll not pronounce ye, 280

Although upon this breath of mine depends

Your own; and, deadlier for ye, on my fears.
But fear not—for that I am soft, not fearful—

And so live on. Were I the thing some think me,

Your heads would now be dripping the last drops 285

Of their attained gore from the high gates
Of this our palace, into the dry dust,

Their only portion of the coveted kingdom
They would be crown'd to reign o'er—let that pass. 289

As I have said, I will not deem ye guilty,
Nor doom ye guiltless. Albeit better men

Than ye or I stand ready to arraign you;
And should I leave your fate to sterner
judges,

And proofs of all kinds, I might sacrifice
Two men, who, whatsoe'er they now are,
were 295

Once honest. Ye are free, sirs.

Arb. Sire, this clemency—

Bel. [interrupting him]. Is worthy of yourself; and, although innocent,

We thank—

Sar. Priest! keep your thanksgivings for Belus;

His offspring needs none.

Bel. But being innocent—

Sar. Be silent.—Guilt is loud. If ye are loyal, 300

Ye are injured men, and should be sad, not grateful.

Bel. So we should be, were justice always done

By earthly power omnipotent; but innocence

Must oft receive her right as a mere favour.

Sar. That's a good sentence for a homily, 305

Though not for this occasion. Prithee keep
it

To plead thy sovereign's cause before his people.

Bel. I trust there is no cause.

Sar. No cause, perhaps;
But many causers:—if ye meet with such
In the exercise of your inquisitive function
On earth, or should you read of it in
heaven 311

In some mysterious twinkle of the stars,
Which are your chronicles, I pray you note,

That there are worse things betwixt earth
and heaven

Than him who ruleth many and slays
none; 315

And, hating not himself, yet loves his fellows

Enough to spare even those who would not spare him

Were they once masters—but that's doubtful. Satraps!

Your swords and persons are at liberty
To use them as ye will—but from this hour

I have no call for either. Salemenes!
Follow me.

[Exeunt SARDANAPALUS, SALEMENES, and the Train, &c., leaving ARBACES and BELESES.]

Arb. Beleses!

Bel. Now, what think you?

Arb. That we are lost.

Bel. That we have won the kingdom.

Arb. What? thus suspected—with the sword slung o'er us 324

But by a single hair, and that still wavering,
To be blown down by his imperious breath

Which spared us—why, I know not.

Bel. Seek not why;

But let us profit by the interval.
The hour is still our own—our power the
same—

The night the same we destined. He hath changed 330

Nothing except our ignorance of all

Suspicion into such a certainty
As must make madness of delay.

Arb. And yet—

Bel. What, doubting still?

Arb. He spared our lives, nay, more,
Saved them from Salemenes.

Bel. And how long Will he so spare? till the first drunken minute. 336

Arb. Or sober, rather. Yet he did it nobly;

Gave royally what we had forfeited Basely—

Bel. Say bravely.

Arb. Somewhat of both, perhaps,
But it has touch'd me, and, whate'er be-
tide, 340

I will no further on.

Bel. And lose the world!

Arb. Lose anything except my own esteem.

Bel. I blush that we should owe our lives to such A king of distaffs!

Arb. But no less we owe them;
And I should blush far more to take the grantor's! 345

Bel. Thou may'st endure whate'er thou wilt—the stars

Have written otherwise.

Arb. Though they came down,
And marshall'd me the way in all their brightness,

I would not follow.

Bel. This is weakness—worse Than a scared beldam's dreaming of the
dead, 350

And waking in the dark.—Go to—go to.
Arb. Methought he look'd like Nimrod as he spoke,

Even as the proud imperial statue stands
Looking the monarch of the kings around it,
And sways, while they but ornament, the
temple. 355

Bel. I told you that you had too much despised him,
And that there was some royalty within
him—

What then? he is the nobler foe.

Arb. But we
The meaner.—Would he had not spared
us!

Bel. So—
Wouldst thou be sacrificed thus readily?

Arb. No—but it had been better to have
died 361
Than live ungrateful.

Bel. Oh, the souls of some men!
Thou wouldst digest what some call treason, and Fools treachery—and, behold, upon the sudden,

Because for something or for nothing, this Rash reveller steps, ostentatiously, 366

'Twixt thee and Salemenes, thou art turn'd
Into—what shall I say?—Sardanapalus!
I know no name more ignominious.

Arb.

But
An hour ago, who dared to term me such Had held his life but lightly—as it is,
I must forgive you, even as he forgave
us—

Semiramis herself would not have done it.

Bel. No—the queen liked no sharers of the kingdom, 374

Not even a husband.

Arb. I must serve him truly—

Bel. And humbly?

Arb. No, sir, proudly—being honest.
I shall be nearer thrones than you to heaven;
And if not quite so haughty, yet more lofty.
You may do your own deeming—you have codes,

And mysteries, and corollaries of 380 Right and wrong, which I lack for my direction,

And must pursue but what a plain heart teaches.

And now you know me.

Bel. Have you finish'd?

Arb. Yes—

With you.

Bel. And would, perhaps, betray as well
As quit me?

Arb. That's a sacerdotal thought 385
And not a soldier's.

Bel. Be it what you will—Truce with these wranglings, and but hear me.

Arb. No—
There is more peril in your subtle spirit
Than in a phalanx.

Bel. If it must be so—

I'll on alone.

Arb. Alone!

Bel. Thrones hold but one.

Arb. But this is fill'd.

Bel. With worse than vacancy—
A despised monarch. Look to it, Arbaces:
I have still aided, cherish'd, loved, and urged you; 393

Was willing even to serve you, in the hope
To serve and save Assyria. Heaven itself Seem'd to consent, and all events were friendly 396

Even to the last, till that your spirit shrunk
Into a shallow softness; but now, rather Than see my country languish, I will be
Her saviour or the victim of her tyrant,
Or one or both, for sometimes both are one;
And if I win, Arbaces is my servant. 402

Arb. Your servant!

Bel. Why not? better than be slave,
The pardon'd slave of she Sardanapalus!

Enter PANIA.

Pan. My lords, I bear an order from the
king. 405

Arb. It is obey'd ere spoken.

Bel. Notwithstanding,
Let's hear it.

Pan. Forthwith, on this very night,
Repair to your respective satrapies 408
Of Babylon and Media.

Bel. With our troops?
Pan. My order is unto the satraps and Their household train.

Arb. But——
Bel. It must be obey'd:
Say, we depart.

Pan. My order is to see you Depart, and not to bear your answer.

Bel. [aside]. Ay!
Well, sir, we will accompany you hence.

Pan. I will retire to marshal forth the
guard 415

Of honour which befits your rank, and wait
Your leisure, so that it the hour exceeds not.
[Exit PANIA.]

Bel. Now then obey!
Arb. Doubtless.

Bel. Yes, to the gates That grate the palace, which is now our prison— 419
No further.

Arb. Thou hast harp'd the truth indeed!
The realm itself, in all its wide extension, Yawns dungeons at each step for thee and
me.

Bel. Graves!
Arb. If I thought so, this good sword should dig 423

One more than mine.

Bel. It shall have work enough.
Let me hope better than thou augurst;
At present, let us hence as best we may.
Thou dost agree with me in understanding
This order as a sentence?

Arb. Why, what other Interpretation should it bear? it is
The very policy of orient monarchs— 430
Pardon and poison—favours and a
sword—

A distant voyage, and an eternal sleep.
How many satraps in his father's time—
For he I own is, or at least was, bloodless—

Bel. But will not, can not be so now.
Arb. I doubt it.

How many satraps have I seen set out
In his sire's day for mighty vice-royalties, Whose tombs are on their path! I know
not how,

But they all sicken'd by the way, it was
So long and heavy.

Bel. Let us but regain 440
The free air of the city, and we'll shorten
The journey.

Arb. 'Twill be shorten'd at the gates,
It may be.

Bel. No; they hardly will risk that.
They mean us to die privately, but not Within the palace or the city walls, 445

Where we are known, and may have partisans:

If they had meant to slay us here, we were
No longer with the living. Let us hence.

Arb. If I but thought he did not mean my life——

Bel. Fool! hence—what else should despotism alarm'd 450

Mean? Let us but rejoin our troops, and march.

Arb. Towards our provinces?
Bel. No; towards your kingdom.

There's time, there's heart, and hope, and power, and means, 453

Which their half measures leave us in full scope.—

Away!
Arb. And I even yet repenting must Relapse to guilt!

Bel. Self-defence is a virtue, 456
Sole bulwark of all right. Away, I say!

Let's leave this place, the air grows thick and choking,
And the walls have a scent of night-shade
—hence!

Let us not leave them time for further
council. 460
Our quick departure proves our civic zeal;
Our quick departure hinders our good escort,

The worthy Pania, from anticipating
The orders of some parasangs from hence:
Nay, there's no other choice, but—hence,

I say. 465
[Exit with ARBACES, who follows reluctantly.]

Enter SARDANAPALUS and SALEMENES.

Sar. Well, all is remedied, and without bloodshed,

That worst of mockeries of a remedy;
We are now secure by these men's exile.

Sal. Yes,
As he who treads on flowers is from the adder 469

Twined round their roots.

Sar. Why, what wouldst have me do?
Sal. Undo what you have done.

Sar. Revoke my pardon?
Sal. Replace the crown now tottering on your temples.

Sar. That were tyrannical.
Sal. But sure.

Sar. We are so.
What danger can they work upon the frontier?

Sal. They are not there yet—never should they be so, 475

Were I well listen'd to.

Sar. Nay, I have listen'd
Impartially to thee—why not to them?

Sal. You may know that hereafter; as
it is,

I take my leave to order forth the guard.

Sal. And you will join us at the banquet?

Sal. Sire,
Dispense with me—I am no wassailer:
Command me in all service save the Bac-chant's. 482

Sal. Nay, but 'tis fit to revel now and then.

Sal. And fit that some should watch for those who revel

Too oft. Am I permitted to depart?

Sal. Yes—Stay a moment, my good Salemenes,

My brother, my best subject, better prince
Than I am king. You should have been the monarch,

And I—I know not what, and care not; but Think not I am insensible to all 490

Thine honest wisdom, and thy rough yet kind,

Though oft reproving, sufferance of my follies.

If I have spared these men against thy counsel,

That is, their lives—it is not that I doubt
The advice was sound; but, let them live:
we will not 495

Cavil about their lives—so let them mend them.

Their banishment will leave me still sound sleep,

Which their death had not left me.

Sal. Thus you run
The risk to sleep for ever, to save traitors—

A moment's pang now changed for years of crime. 500

Still let them be made quiet.

Sal. Tempt me not;
My word is past.

Sal. But it may be recall'd.
Sal. 'Tis royal.

Sal. And should therefore be decisive.
This half indulgence of an exile serves

But to provoke—a pardon should be full,
Or it is none.

Sal. And who persuaded me 506
After I had repeal'd them, or at least

Only dismiss'd them from our presence,
who

Urged me to send them to their satrapies?

Sal. True; that I had forgotten; that is,
sire, 510

If they e'er reach'd their satrapies—why,
then,

Reprove me more for my advice.

Sal. And if They do not reach them—look to it!—in safety,

In safety, mark me—and security— 514
Look to thine own.

Sal. Permit me to depart;
Their safety shall be cared for.

Sal. Get thee hence, then;
And, prithee, think more gently of thy
brother.

Sal. Sire, I shall ever duly serve my sovereign. [Exit SALEMENES.

Sar. [solus]. That man is of a temper too severe; 519

Hard but as lofty as the rock, and free
From all the taints of common earth—
while I 521

Am softer clay, impregnated with flowers:
But as our mould is, must the produce be.

If I have err'd this time, 'tis on the side
Where error sits most lightly on that sense,

I know not what to call it; but it reckons
With me oft times for pain, and sometimes
pleasure; 527

A spirit which seems placed about my heart
To count its throbs, not quicken them, and ask

Questions which mortal never dared to ask me, 530

Nor Baal, though an oracular deity—
Albeit his marble face majestic

Frowns as the shadows of the evening dim
His brows to changed expression, till at
times

I think the statue looks in act to speak.
Away with these vain thoughts, I will be joyous— 536

And here comes Joy's true herald.

Enter MYRRHA.

Myr. King! the sky
Is overcast, and musters muttering thunder,

In clouds that seem approaching fast, and
show 539

In forked flashes a commanding tempest.
Will you then quit the palace?

Sar. Tempest, say'st thou?
Myr. Ay, my good lord.

Sar. For my own part, I should be
Not ill content to vary the smooth scene,

And watch the warring elements; but this Would little suit the silken garments and Smooth faces of our festive friends. Say,
Myrrha, 546

Art thou of those who dread the roar of clouds?

Myr. In my own country we respect their voices

As auguries of Jove.

Sar. Jove!—ay, your Baal—
Ours also has a property in thunder, 550

And ever and anon some falling bolt Proves his divinity,—and yet sometimes Strikes his own altars.

Myr. That were a dread omen.
Sar. Yes—for the priests. Well, we will not go forth

Beyond the palace walls to-night, but
make 555

Our feast within.

Myr. Now, Jove be praised! that he Hath heard the prayer thou wouldst not hear. The gods

Are kinder to thee than thou to thyself,
And flash this storm between thee and thy
foes, 559
To shield thee from them.

Sar. Child, if there be peril,
Methinks it is the same within these walls
As on the river's brink.

Myr. Not so; these walls
Are high and strong, and guarded. Treason has 563

To penetrate through many a winding way,
And massy portal; but in the pavilion
There is no bulwark.

Sar. No, nor in the palace,
Nor in the fortress, nor upon the top Of cloud-fenced Caucasus, where the eagle sits

Nested in pathless clefts, if treachery be:
Even as the arrow finds the airy king,
The steel will reach the earthly. But be calm; 571

The men, or innocent or guilty, are Banish'd, and far upon their way.

Myr. They live, then?

Sar. So sanguinary? Thou!

Myr. I would not shrink
From just infliction of due punishment
On those who seek your life: were't otherwise, 576

I should not merit mine. Besides, you heard
The princely Salemenes.

Sar. This is strange;
The gentle and the austere are both against me,
And urge me to revenge.

Myr. 'Tis a Greek virtue.

Sar. But not a kingly one—I'll none
on't; or 581

If ever I indulge in't, it shall be
With kings—my equals.

Myr. These men sought to be so.

Sar. Myrrha, this is too feminine, and springs

From fear—

Myr. For you.

Sar. No matter, still 'tis fear.
I have observed your sex, once roused to
wrath, 586

Are timbly vindictive to a pitch
Of perseverance, which I would not copy.
I thought you were exempt from this, as
from

The childish helplessness of Asian women.

Myr. My lord, I am no boaster of my
love, 591

Nor of my attributes; I have shared your splendour,

And will partake your fortunes. You may live

To find one slave more true than subject myriads: 594

But this the gods avert! I am content

To be beloved on trust for what I feel,

Rather than prove it to you in your griefs,

Which might not yield to any cares of mine.

Sar. Grief cannot come where perfect love exists, 599

Except to heighten it, and vanish from That which it could not scare away. Let's
in—

The hour approaches, and we must prepare
To meet the invited guests who grace our feast. [Exeunt.]

ACT III

SCENE I.—The Hall of the Palace illuminated—SARDANAPALUS and his Guests at Table.—A storm without, and Thunder occasionally heard during the Banquet.

Sar. Fill full! why this is as it should be:
here

Is my true realm, amidst bright eyes and faces

Happy as fair! Here sorrow cannot reach.

Zam. Nor elsewhere—where the king is, pleasure sparkles.

Sar. Is not this better now than Nim-rod's huntings, 5

Or my wild grandam's chase in search of kingdoms

She could not keep when conquer'd?

Alt. Mighty though
They were, as all thy royal line have been,
Yet none of these who went before have

reach'd

The acmé of Sardanapalus, who 10
Has placed his joy in peace—the sole true
glory.

Sar. And pleasure, good Altada, to which glory

Is but the path. What is it that we seek?

Enjoyment! We have cut the way short to
it,

And not gone tracking it through human ashes, 15

Making a grave with every footstep.

Zam. No;

All hearts are happy, and all voices bless
The king of peace, who holds a world in jubilee.

Sar. Art sure of that? I have heard otherwise; 19

Some say that there be traitors.

Zam. Traitors they
Who dare to say so!—'Tis impossible.

What cause?

Sar. What cause? true,—fill the goblet up;

We will not think of them: there are none
such,

Or if there be, they are gone.

Alt. Guests, to my pledge!
Down on your knees, and drink a measure
to 25

The safety of the king—the monarch, say I?

The god Sardanapalus!

[ZAMES and the Guests kneel, and exclaim—

His father Baal, the god Sardanapalus!

[It thunders as they kneel; some start up in confusion.

Zam. Why do you rise, my friends? in that strong peal 29

His father gods consented.

Myr. Menaced, rather.

King, wilt thou bear this mad impiety?

Sar. Impiety!—nay, if the sires who reign'd

Before me can be gods, I'll not disgrace Their lineage. But arise, my pious friends; Hoard your devotion for the thunderer there: 35

I seek but to be loved, not worshipp'd.

Alt. Both—

Both you must ever be by all true subjects.

Sar. Methinks the thunders still increase: it is An awful night.

Myr. Oh yes, for those who have No palace to protect their worshippers.

Sar. That's true, my Myrrha; and could I convert 41

My realm to one wide shelter for the wretched, I'd do it.

Myr. Thou'rt no god then, not to be Able to work a will so good and general, As thy wish would imply.

Sar. And your gods, then, Who can, and do not?

Myr. Do not speak of that, Let me provoke them.

Sar. True, they love not censure Better than mortals. Friends, a thought has struck me: 48

Were there no temples, would there, think ye, be

Air worshippers? that is, when it is angry, And pelting as even now.

Myr. The Persian prays Upon his mountain.

Sar. Yes, when the sun shines.

Myr. And I would ask if this your palace were 53

Unroof'd and desolate, how many flatterers Would lick the dust in which the king lay low?

Alt. The fair Ionian is too sarcastic Upon a nation whom she knows not well; The Assyrians know no pleasure but their king's, 58

And homage is their pride.

Sar. Nay, pardon, guests, The fair Greek's readiness of speech.

Alt. Pardon! sire: We honour her of all things next to thee. Hark! what was that?

Zam. That! nothing but the jar Of distant portals shaken by the wind.

Alt. It sounded like the clash of—hark again! 64

Zam. The big rain pattering on the roof.

Sar. No more.

Myrrha, my love, hast thou thy shell in order?

Sing me a song of Sappho, her, thou know'st,

Who in thy country threw—

Enter PANIA, with his sword and garments bloody, and disordered. The guests rise in confusion.

Pan. [to the Guards]. Look to the portals; And with your best speed to the walls without.

Your arms! To arms! The king's in danger. Monarch, 70

Excuse this haste,—'tis faith.

Sar. Speak on.

Pan. It is As Salemenes fear'd; the faithless sa-traps—

Sar. You are wounded—give some wine. Take breath, good Pania.

Pan. 'Tis nothing—a mere flesh wound. I am worn 75

More with my speed to warn my sovereign, Than hurt in his defence.

Myr. Well, sir, the rebels?

Pan. Soon as Arbaces and Beleses reach'd

Their stations in the city, they refused To march; and on my attempt to use the power 79

Which I was delegated with, they call'd Upon their troops, who rose in fierce de-fiance.

Myr. All?

Pan. Too many.

Sar. Spare not of thy free speech, To spare mine ears the truth.

Pan. My own slight guard Were faithful, and what's left of it is still 84

so. Myr. And are these all the force still faithful?

Pan. No—

The Bactrians, now led on by Salemenes, Who even then was on his way, still urged By strong suspicion of the Median chiefs,

Are numerous, and make strong head against

The rebels, fighting inch by inch, and form-ing 90

An orb around the palace, where they mean To centre all their force, and save the king.

[He hesitates]. I am charged to—

Myr. 'Tis no time for hesitation.

Pan. Prince Salemenes doth implore the king

To arm himself, although but for a mo-ment, 95

And show himself unto the soldiers: his Sole presence in this instance might do more Than hosts can do in his behalf.

Sar. What, ho! My armour there.

Myr. And wilt thou?
Sar. Will I not? Ho, there!—but seek not for the buckler:
'tis 100

Too heavy:—a light cuirass and my sword. Where are the rebels?

Pan. Scarce a furlong's length From the outward wall the fiercest conflict rages.

Sar. Then I may charge on horseback. Sfero, ho!

Order my horse out.—There is space enough 105

Even in our courts, and by the outer gate, To marshal half the horsemen of Arabia.

[Exit SFERO for the armour.]

Myr. How I do love thee!

Sar. I ne'er doubted it.

Myr. But now I know thee.

Sar. [to his Attendant]. Bring down my spear too.— 109

Where's Salemenes?

Pan. Where a soldier should be, In the thick of the fight.

Sar. Then hasten to him—Is The path still open, and communication Left 'twixt the palace and the phalanx?

Pan. 'Twas

When I late left him, and I have no fear: Our troops were steady, and the phalanx form'd. 115

Sar. Tell him to spare his person for the present,

And that I will not spare my own—and say, I come.

Pan. There's victory in the very word. [Exit PANIA.]

Sar. Altada—Zames—forth, and arm ye! There

Is all in readiness in the armoury. 120

See that the women are bestow'd in safety In the remote apartments: let a guard

Be set before them, with strict charge to quit The post but with their lives—command

it, Zames. 124

Altada, arm yourself, and return here;

Your post is near our person.

[Exeunt ZAMES, ALTADA, and all save MYRRHA.]

Enter SFERO and others with the King's Arms, &c.

Sfe. King! your armour.

Sar. [arming himself]. Give me the cuirass—so: my baldric; now

My sword: I had forgot the helm—where is it?

That's well—no, 'tis too heavy: you mistake, too—

It was not this I meant, but that which bears 130

A diadem around it.

Sfe. Sire, I deem'd

That too conspicuous from the precious stones

To risk your sacred brow beneath—and trust me,

This is of better metal, though less rich.

Sar. You deem'd! Are you too turn'd a rebel? Fellow! 135

Your part is to obey: return, and—no—It is too late—I will go forth without it.

Sfe. At least, wear this.

Sar. Wear Caucasus! why, 'tis A mountain on my temples.

Sfe. Sire, the meanest Soldier goes not forth thus exposed to battle. 140

All men will recognise you—for the storm Has ceased, and the moon breaks forth in her brightness.

Sar. I go forth to be recognised, and thus Shall be so sooner. Now—my spear! I'm arm'd. 144

[In going stops short, and turns to SFERO. Sfero—I had forgotten—bring the mirror.]

Sfe. The mirror, sire?

Sar. Yes, sir, of polish'd brass, Brought from the spoils of India—but be

speedy. [Exit SFERO.]

Sar. Myrrha, retire unto a place of safety.

Why went you not forth with the other damsels? 149

Myr. Because my place is here.

Sar. And when I am gone—

Myr. I follow.

Sar. You! to battle?

Myr. If it were so,

'Twere not the first Greek girl had trod the path.

I will await here your return.

Sar. The place

Is spacious, and the first to be sought out,

If they prevail; and, if it be so, 155

And I return not—

Myr. Still we meet again.

Sar. How?

Myr. In the spot where all must meet at last—

In Hades! if there be, as I believe,

A shore beyond the Styx; and if there be not, 159

In ashes.

Sar. Darest thou so much?

Myr. I dare all things

Except survive what I have loved, to be A rebel's booty: forth, and do your bravest.

Re-enter SFERO with the mirror.

Sar. [looking at himself]. This cuirass fits me well, the baldric better,

And the helm not at all. Methinks I seem [Flings away the helmet after trying it again.]

Passing well in these toys; and now to prove them. 165

Altada! Where's Altada?

Sfe. Waiting, sire,
Without; he has your shield in readiness.

Sar. True; I forgot he is my shield-
bearer

By right of blood, derived from age to age.
Myrrha, embrace me; yet once more—
once more— 170

Love me, whate'er betide. My chiefest
glory

Shall be to make me worthier of your love.

Myr. Go forth, and conquer!

[Exeunt SARDANAPALUS and SFERO.]

Now, I am alone,
All are gone forth, and of that all how few Perhaps return! Let him but vanquish, and Me perish! If he vanquish not, I perish;
For I will not outlive him. He has wound
About my heart, I know not how nor why.
Not for that he is king; for now his kingdom 179

Rocks underneath his throne, and the earth yawns

To yield him no more of it than a grave;
And yet I love him more. Oh, mighty Jove!

Forgive this monstrous love for a barbarian,

Who knows not of Olympus! yes, I love
him

Now, now, far more than—Hark—to the war shout! 185

Methinks it nears me. If it should be so,

[She draws forth a small vial.]

This cunning Colchian poison, which my
father

Learn'd to compound on Euxine shores, and taught me

How to preserve, shall free me! It had freed me 189

Long ere this hour, but that I loved, until I half forgot I was a slave:—where all

Are slaves save one, and proud of servitude,

So they are served in turn by something lower

In the degree of bondage, we forget That shackles worn like ornaments no
less 195

Are chains. Again that shout! and now the clash

Of arms—and now—and now—

Enter ALTADA.

Alt. Ho, Sfero, ho!

Myr. He is not here; what wouldst thou with him? How

Goes on the conflict?

Alt. Dubiously and fiercely.

Myr. And the king?

Alt. Like a king. I must find Sfero,
And bring him a new spear and his own helmet. 201

He fights till now bare-headed, and by far Too much exposed. The soldiers knew his face,

And the foe too; and in the moon's broad
light,

His silk tiara and his flowing hair 205

Make him a mark too royal. Every arrow
Is pointed at the fair hair and fair features,
And the broad fillet which crowns both.

Myr. Ye gods,
Who fulminate o'er my father's land, protect him! 209

Were you sent by the king?

Alt. By Salamenes,
Who sent me privily upon this charge,
Without the knowledge of the careless sovereign.

The king! the king fights as he revels! ho!
What, Sfero! I will seek the armoury—
He must be there. [Exit ALTADA.]

Myr. 'Tis no dishonour—no—
'Tis no dishonour to have loved this man.

I almost wish now, what I never wish'd
Before, that he were Grecian. If Alcides Were shamed in wearing Lydian Omphale's

She-garb, and wielding her vile distaff;
surely 220

He, who springs up a Hercules at once, Nursed in effeminate arts from youth to manhood,

And rushes from the banquet to the battle,
As though it were a bed of love, deserves
That a Greek girl should be his paramour,

And a Greek bard his minstrel, a Greek
tomb 226

His monument. How goes the strife, sir?

Enter an Officer.

Officer. Lost,
Lost almost past recovery. Zames!
Where

Is Zames?

Myr. Posted with the guard appointed To watch before the apartment of the women. 230

[Exit Officer.]

Myr. [sola]. He's gone; and told no more than that all's lost!

What need have I to know more? In those words,

Those little words, a kingdom and a king,
A line of thirteen ages, and the lives

Of thousands, and the fortune of all left With life, are merged; and I, too, with the
great,

Like a small bubble breaking with the
wave

Which bore it, shall be nothing. At the
least, 238

My fate is in my keeping: no proud victor
Shall count me with his spoils.

Enter PANIA.

Pan. Away with me,
Myrrha, without delay; we must not lose
A moment—all that's left us now.

Myr. The king?
Pan. Sent me here to conduct you hence beyond

The river, by a secret passage.

Myr. Then
He lives—

Pan. And charged me to secure your
life, 245

And beg you to live on for his sake, till
He can rejoin you.

Myr. Will he then give way?

Pan. Not till the last. Still, still he does
whate'er

Despair can do; and step by step disputes
The very palace.

Myr. They are here, then:—ay, Their shouts come ringing through the ancient halls, 251

Never profaned by rebel echoes till
This fatal night. Farewell, Assyria's line!
Farewell to all of Nimrod! Even the name is now no more.

Pan. Away with me—away!

Myr. No: I'll die here!—Away, and tell your king 256

I loved him to the last.

Enter SARDANAPALUS and SALEMENES with Soldiers. PANIA quits MYRRHA, and ranges himself with them.

Sar. Since it is thus,
We'll die where we were born—in our own
halls.

Serry your ranks—stand firm. I have despatch'd 259

A trusty satrap for the guard of Zames,
All fresh and faithful; they'll be here anon.
All is not over.—Pania, look to Myrrha.

[PANIA returns towards MYRRHA.

Sal. We have breathing time; yet once more charge, my friends—

One for Assyria!

Sar. Rather say for Bactria!
My faithful Bactrians, I will henceforth be King of your nation, and we'll hold together 266

This realm as province.

Sal. Hark! they come—they come.

Enter BELESES and ARBACES with the Rebels.

Arb. Set on, we have them in the toil.
Charge! charge!

Bel. On! on!—Heaven fights for us, and with us—On!

[They charge the King and SALEMENES with their troops, who defend them- selves till the arrival of ZAMES with the Guard before mentioned. The Rebels are then driven off, and pursued by SALEMENES, &c. As the King is going to join the pursuit, BELESES crosses him.

Bel. Ho! tyrant—I will end this war.

Sar. Even so,
My warlike priest, and precious prophet,
and 271

Grateful and trusty subject: yield, I pray
thee.

I would reserve thee for a fitter doom,
Rather than dip my hands in holy blood.

Bel. Thine hour is come.

Sar. No, thine.—I've lately read,
Though but a young astrologer, the stars;
And ranging round the zodiac, found thy
fate 277

In the sign of the Scorpion, which proclaims

That thou wilt now be crush'd.

Bel. But not by thee.
[They fight; BELESES is wounded and disarmed.

Sar. [raising his sword to despatch him, exclaims]—

Now call upon thy planets, will they shoot
From the sky to preserve their seer and credit? 281

[A party of Rebels enter and rescue BE-LESES. They assail the King, who, in turn, is rescued by a Party of his Soldiers, who drive the Rebels off.

The villain was a prophet after all.

Upon them—ho! there—victory is ours.
[Exit in pursuit.

Myr. [to Pan.] Pursue! Why stand'st thou here, and leav'st the ranks Of fellow-soldiers conquering without
thee? 285

Pan. The king's command was not to quit thee.

Myr. Me!

Think not of me—a single soldier's arm
Must not be wanting now. I ask no guard, I need no guard: what, with a world at stake,

Keep watch upon a woman? Hence, I say,
Or thou art shamed! Nay, then, I will go
forth, 291

A feeble female, 'midst their desperate
strife,

And bid thee guard me there—where thou shouldst shield

Thy sovereign. [Exit MYRRHA.

Pan. Yet stay, damsel!—She is gone.
If aught of ill betide her, better I 295

Had lost my life. Sardanapalus holds her Far dearer than his kingdom, yet he fights
For that too; and can I do less than he,
Who never flash'd a scimitar till now?
Myrrha, return, and I obey you, though
In disobedience to the monarch.

[Exit PANIA.]

Enter ALTADA and SFERO by an opposite door.

Alt. Myrrha! 301
What, gone? yet she was here when the fight raged,
And Pania also. Can aught have befallen them?

Sfe. I saw both safe, when late the rebels fled; 304
They probably are but retired to make Their way back to the harem.

Alt. If the king
Prove victor, as it seems even now he must,
And miss his own Ionian, we are doom'd
To worse than captive rebels.

Sfe. Let us trace them;
She cannot be fled far; and, found, she makes 310

A richer prize to our soft sovereign
Than his recover'd kingdom.

Alt. Baal himself
Ne'er fought more fiercely to win empire, than

His silken son to save it: he defies
All augury of foes or friends; and like The close and sultry summer's day, which bodes 316

A twilight tempest, bursts forth in such thunder

As sweeps the air and deluges the earth.
The man's inscrutable.

Sfe. Not more than others.
All are the sons of circumstance: away—
Let's seek the slave out, or prepare to be Tortured for his infatuation, and 322
Condemn'd without a crime. [Exeunt.]

Enter SALEMENES and Soldiers, &c.

Sal. The triumph is Flattering: they are beaten backward from
the palace,

And we have open'd regular access 325
To the troops station'd on the other side
Euphrates, who may still be true; nay,
must be,

When they hear of our victory.—But
where 328
Is the chief victor? where's the king?

Enter SARDANAPALUS, cum suis, &c. and MYRRA.

Sar. Here, brother.

Sal. Unhurt, I hope.

Sar. Not quite; but let it pass.
We've clear'd the palace—

Sal. And I trust the city.
Our numbers gather; and I've order'd onward 332

A cloud of Parthians, hitherto reserved,
All fresh and fiery, to be pour'd upon them
In their retreat, which soon will be a flight.

Sar. It is already, or at least they march'd 336

Faster than I could follow with my Bactrians,

Who spared no speed. I am spent: give me a seat.

Sal. There stands the throne, sire.

Sar. 'Tis no place to rest on,
For mind nor body: let me have a couch,
[They place a seat.]

A peasant's stool, I care not what: so—
now 341

I breathe more freely.

Sal. This great hour has proved
The brightest and most glorious of your life.

Sar. And the most tiresome. Where's my cupbearer?

Bring me some water.

Sal. [smiling]. 'Tis the first time he Ever had such an order: even I, 346

Your most austere of counsellors, would
now

Suggest a purpler beverage.

Sar. Blood—doubtless.
But there's enough of that shed; as for
wine,

I have learn'd to-night the price of the pure element: 350

Thrice have I drank of it, and thrice re-
new'd,

With greater strength than the grape ever gave me,

My charge upon the rebels. Where's the soldier

Who gave me water in his helmet?

One of the Guards. Slain, sire!

An arrow pierced his brain, while, scattering 355

The last drops from his helm, he stood in act

To place it on his brows.

Sar. Slain! unrewarded!
And slain to serve my thirst: that's hard,
poor slave!

Had he but lived, I would have gorged him
with

Gold: all the gold of earth could ne'er
repay 360

The pleasure of that draught; for I was parch'd

As I am now. [They bring water—he drinks.]

I live again—from henceforth
The goblet I reserve for hours of love,
But war on water.

Sal. And that bandage, sire,
Which girds your arm?

Sar. A scratch from brave Beleses.

Myr. Oh! he is wounded!

Sar. Not too much of that;
And yet it feels a little stiff and painful,
Now I am cooler.

Myr. You have bound it with—

Sar. The Ælet of my diadem: the first
time 369

That ornament was ever aught to me
Save an encumbrance.

Myr. [to the Attendants]. Summon speedily

A leech of the most skilful: pray, retire; I will unbind your wound and tend it.

Sar. Do so, For now it throbs sufficiently: but what Know'st thou of wounds? yet wherefore do I ask? 375

Know'st thou, my brother, where I lighted on

This minion?

Sal. Herding with the other females, Like frighten'd antelopes.

Sar. No: like the dam Of the young lion, femininely raging (And femininely meaneth furiously, 380 Because all passions in excess are female) Against the hunter flying with her cub, She urged on with her voice and gesture, and

Her floating hair and flashing eyes, the soldiers, 314

In the pursuit.

Sal. Indeed!

Sar. You see, this night Made warriors of more than me. I paused To look upon her, and her kindled cheek; Her large black eyes, that flash'd through her long hair As it stream'd o'er her; her blue veins that rose

Along her most transparent brow; her nostril

Dilated from its symmetry; her lips Apart; her voice that clove through all the din,

As a lute pierceth through the cymbals' clash,

Jarr'd but not drown'd by the loud brattling; her

Waved arms, more dazzling with their own born whiteness 395

Than the steel her hand held, which she caught up

From a dead soldier's grasp;—all these things made

Her seem unto the troops a prophetess Of victory, or Victory herself, 399

Come down to hail us hers.

Sal. [aside]. This is too much. Again the love-fit's on him, and all's lost, Unless we turn his thoughts.

[Aloud.] But pray thee, sire, Think of your wound—you said even now 'twas painful.

Sar. That's true, too; but I must not think of it.

Sal. I have look'd to all things needful, and will now 405

Receive reports of progress made in such Orders as I had given, and then return To hear your further pleasure.

Sar. Be it so.

Sal. [in retiring]. Myrrha!

Myr. Prince!

Sal. You have shown a soul to-night, Which, were he not my sister's lord—But now 410

I have no time: thou lovest the king?

Myr. I love

Sardanapalus.

Sal. But wouldst have him king still?

Myr. I would not have him less than what he should be.

Sal. Well then, to have him king, and yours, and all

He should, or should not be; to have him live, 415

Let him not sink back into luxury.

You have more power upon his spirit than Wisdom within these walls, or fierce rebellion

Raging without: look well that he relapse not.

Myr. There needed not the voice of Salemenes 420

To urge me on to this: I will not fail.

All that a woman's weakness can—

Sal. Is power Omnipotent o'er such a heart as his: Exert it wisely. [Exit SALEMENES.

Sar. Myrrha! what, at whispers With my stern brother? I shall soon be jealous. 425

Myr. [smiling]. You have cause, sire; for on the earth there breathes not A man more worthy of a woman's love, A soldier's trust, a subject's reverence, A king's esteem—the whole world's admiration!

Sar. Praise him, but not so warmly. I must not 430

Hear those sweet lips grow eloquent in

That throws me into shade; yet you speak truth.

Myr. And now retire, to have your wound look'd to.

Pray lean on me.

Sar. Yes, love! but not from pain. [Exeunt omnes.

ACT IV

SCENE I.—SARDANAPALUS discovered sleeping upon a Couch, and occasionally disturbed in his slumbers, with MYRRHA watching.

Myr. [sola, gazing]. I have stolen upon his rest, if rest it be,

Which thus convulses slumber: shall I wake him?

No, he seems calmer. Oh, thou God of Quiet!

Whose reign is o'er seal'd eyelids and soft dreams,

Or deep, deep sleep, so as to be unfathom'd, 5

Look like thy brother, Death,—so still, so stirless—

For then we are happiest, as it may be, we Are happiest of all within the realm 8
Of thy stern, silent, and unawakening twin.
Again he moves—again the play of pain
Shoots o'er his features, as the sudden gust
Crisps the reluctant lake that lay so calm Beneath the mountain shadow; or the
blast

Ruffles the autumn leaves, that drooping
cling

Faintly and motionless to their loved boughs. 15

I must awake him—yet not yet; who
knows

From what I rouse him? It seems pain;
but if

I quicken him to heavier pain? The fever
Of this tumultuous night, the grief too of His wound, though slight, may cause all this, and shake 20

Me more to see than him to suffer. No:
Let Nature use her own maternal means,
And I await to second, not disturb her.

Sar. [awakening]. Not so—although ye multiplied the stars,

And gave them to me as a realm to share
From you and with you! I would not so purchase 26

The empire of eternity. Hence—hence—
Old hunter of the earliest brutes! and ye,
Who hunted fellow-creatures as if brutes!
Once bloody mortals—and now bloodier idols, 30

If your priests lie not! And thou, ghastly
beldame!

Dripping with dusky gore, and trampling
on

The carcasses of Inde—away! away!

Where am I? Where the spectres?
Where—No—that

Is no false phantom: I should know it
'midst 35

All that the dead dare gloomily raise up
From their black gulf to daunt the living.

Myrrha!

Myr. Alas! thou art pale, and on thy brow the drops

Gather like night dew. My beloved,
hush—

Calm thee. Thy speech seems of another
world, 40

And thou art lord of this. Be of good cheer;

All will go well.

Sar. Thy hand—so—'tis thy hand;
'Tis flesh; grasp—clasp—yet closer, till I
feel

Myself that which I was.

Myr. At least know me
For what I am, and ever must be—thine.

Sar. I know it now. I know this life
again. 46

Ah, Myrrha! I have been where we shall
be.

Myr. My lord!

Sar. I've been i' the grave—where worms are lords,

And kings are—But I did not deem it so;
I thought 'twas nothing.

Myr. So it is; except Unto the timid, who anticipate 51

That which may never be.

Sar. Oh, Myrrha! if Sleep shows such things, what may not death disclose?

Myr. I know no evil death can show, which life 54

Has not already shown to those who live Embodied longest. If there be indeed

A shore where mind survives, 'twill be as
mind,

All unincorporate: or if there flits
A shadow of this cumbrous clog of clay,

Which stalks, methinks, between our souls and heaven, 60

And fetters us to earth—at least the phantom,

Whate'er it have to fear, will not fear
death.

Sar. I fear it not; but I have felt—have
seen—

A legion of the dead.

Myr. And so have I.
The dust we tread upon was once alive,

And wretched. But proceed: what hast thou seen? 66

Speak it, 'twill lighten thy dimm'd mind.
Sar. Methought—

Myr. Yet pause, thou art tired—in pain—exhausted; all

Which can impair both strength and spirit: seek 69

Rather to sleep again.

Sar. Not now—I would not Dream; though I know it now to be a dream

What I have dreamt:—and canst thou bear to hear it?

Myr. I can bear all things, dreams of life or death,

Which I participate with you in semblance
Or full reality.

Sar. And this look'd real, 75
I tell you: after that these eyes were open,
I saw them in their flight—for then they fled.

Myr. Say on.

Sar. I saw, that is, I dream'd myself Here—here—even where we are, guests as we were,

Myself a host that deem'd himself but
guest, 80

Willing to equal all in social freedom;
But, on my right hand and my left, instead

Of thee and Zames, and our custom'd
meeting,

Was ranged on my left hand a haughty,
dark, 84

And deadly face; I could not recognise it,
Yet I had seen it, though I knew not where:
The features were a giant's, and the eye
Was still, yet lighted; his long locks curl'd
down

On his vast bust, whence a huge quiver rose With shaft-heads feather'd from the eagle's wing, 90
That peep'd up bristling through his serpent hair.

I invited him to fill the cup which stood Between us, but he answer'd not; I fill'd it;
He took it not, but stared upon me, till
I trembled at the fix'd glare of his eye: 95
I frown'd upon him as a king should frown;

He frown'd not in his turn, but look'd
upon me
With the same aspect, which appall'd me
more,
Because it changed not; and I turn'd for refuge

To milder guests, and sought them on the
right, 100

Where thou wert wont to be. But——

[He pauses.

Myr. What instead?

Sar. In thy own chair—thy own place in the banquet——

I sought thy sweet face in the circle—but Instead—a grey-hair'd, wither'd bloody-eyed,

And bloody-handed, ghastly, ghostly
thing, 105

Female in garb, and crown'd upon the
brow,

Furrow'd with years, yet sneering with the
passion

Of vengeance, leering too with that of lust,
Sate:—my veins curdled.

Myr. Is this all?

Sar. Upon
Her right hand—her lank, bird-like right hand—stood 110

A goblet, bubbling o'er with blood; and on Her left, another, fill'd with—what I saw
not,

But turn'd from it and her. But all along
The table sate a range of crown'd wretches,
Of various aspects, but of one expression.

Myr. And felt you not this a mere vision?

Sar. No:

It was so palpable, I could have touch'd
them. 117

I turn'd from one face to another, in
The hope to find at last one which I knew Ere I saw theirs: but no—all turn'd upon
me, 120

And stared, but neither ate nor drank, but stared,

Till I grew stone, as they seem'd half to be,
Yet breathing stone, for I felt life in them,
And life in me: there was a horrid kind

Of sympathy between us, as if they 125
Had lost a part of death to come to me,
And I the half of life to sit by them.

We were in an existence all apart
From heaven or earth—And rather let me
see 129

Death all than such a being!

Myr. And the end?

Sar. At last I sate, marble, as they, when rose

The hunter and the crone; and smiling on
me——

Yes, the enlarged but noble aspect of
The hunter smiled upon me—I should say,
His lips, for his eyes moved not—and the woman's 135

Thin lips relax'd to something like a smile.
Both rose, and the crown'd figures on each
hand

Rose also, as if aping their chief shades—
Mere mimics even in death—but I sate
still:

A desperate courage crept through every
limb, 140

And at the last I fear'd them not, but laugh'd

Full in their phantom faces. But then—
then

The hunter laid his hand on mine: I took it,
And grasp'd it—but it melted from my
own;

While he too vanish'd, and left nothing
but 145

The memory of a hero, for he look'd so.

Myr. And was: the ancestor of heroes,
too,

And thine no less.

Sar. Ay, Myrrha, but the woman,
The female who remain'd, she flew upon
me,

And burnt my lips up with her noisome
kisses; 150

And, flinging down the goblets on each
hand,

Methought their poisons flow'd around us, till

Each form'd a hideous river. Still she clung;

The other phantoms, like a row of statues,
Stood dull as in our temples, but she still Embraced me, while I shrunk from her,
as if, 156

In lieu of her remote descendant, I Had been the son who slew her for her incest.

Then—then—a chaos of all loathsome
things

Throng'd thick and shapeless: I was dead, yet feeling—— 160

Buried, and raised again—consumed by worms,

Purged by the flames, and wither'd in the
air!

I can fix nothing further of my thoughts,

Save that I long'd for thee, and sought for thee,
In all these agonies,—and woke and found thee. 165

Myr. So shalt thou find me ever at thy side,

Here and hereafter, if the last may be.
But think not of these things—the mere creations

Of late events, acting upon a frame 169
Unused to toil, yet over-wrought by toil
Such as might try the sternest.

Sal. I am better.
Now that I see thee once more, what was seen 172

Seems nothing.

Enter SALEMENES.

Sal. Is the king so soon awake?

Sal. Yes, brother, and I would I had not slept;

For all the predecessors of our line
Rose up, methought, to drag me down to them. 176

My father was amongst them, too; but he,
I know not why, kept from me, leaving me
Between the hunter-founder of our race,
And her, the homicide and husband-killer,
Whom you call glorious.

Sal. So I term you also,
Now you have shown a spirit like to hers.
By day-break I propose that we set forth,
And charge once more the rebel crew, who still

Keep gathering head, repulsed, but not quite quell'd. 185

Sal. How wears the night?

Sal. There yet remain some hours
Of darkness: use them for your further rest.

Sal. No, not to-night, if 'tis not gone: methought 188

I pass'd hours in that vision.

Myr. Scarcely one;
I watch'd by you: it was a heavy hour,
But an hour only.

Sal. Let us then hold council;
To-morrow we set forth.

Sal. But ere that time,
I had a grace to seek.

Sal. 'Tis granted.
Sal. Hear it

Ere you reply too readily; and 'tis 194
For your ear only.

Myr. Prince, I take my leave.
[Exit MYRRHA.]

Sal. That slave deserves her freedom.
Sal. Freedom only!

That slave deserves to share a throne.
Sal. Your patience—

'Tis not yet vacant, and 'tis of its partner
I come to speak with you.

Sal. How! of the queen?

Sal. Even so. I judg'd it fitting for their safety 200

That, ere the dawn, she sets forth with her children

For Paphlagonia, where our kinsman Cotta

Governs; and there at all events secure
My nephews and your sons their lives, and with them

Their just pretensions to the crown in case— 205

Sal. I perish—as is probable: well thought—

Let them set forth with a sure escort.

Sal. That

Is all provided, and the galley ready
To drop down the Euphrates: but ere they Depart, will you not see—

Sal. My sons? It may Unman my heart, and the poor boys will weep; 211

And what can I reply to comfort them,
Save with some hollow hopes and ill-worn smiles?

You know I cannot feign.

Sal. But you can feel!
At least, I trust so; in a word, the queen

Requests to see you ere you part—for ever.
Sal. Unto what end? what purpose? I will grant 217

Aught—all that she can ask—but such a meeting.

Sal. You know, or ought to know, enough of women,

Since you have studied them so steadily,
That what they ask in aught that touches

on 221

The heart, is dearer to their feelings or
Their fancy than the whole external world.

I think as you do of my sister's wish;
But 'twas her wish—she is my sister—

you 225

Her husband—will you grant it?

Sal. 'Twill be useless:

But let her come.

Sal. I go. [Exit SALEMENES.]

Sal. We have lived asunder
Too long to meet again—and now to meet!

Have I not cares enow, and pangs enow,
To bear alone, that we must mingle

sorrows, 230

Who have ceased to mingle love?

Re-enter SALEMENES and ZARINA.

Sal. My sister! Courage: Shame not our blood with trembling, but

remember
From whence we sprung. The queen is present, sire.

Zar. I pray thee, brother, leave me.
Sal. Since you ask it.

[Exit SALEMENES.]

Zar. Alone with him! How many a year has pass'd, 235

Though we are still so young, since we
have met,

Which I have worn in widowhood of heart!

He loved me not: yet he seems little changed—

Changed to me only—would the change were mutual!

He speaks not—scarce regards me—not a word,

Nor look—yet he was soft of voice and aspect,

Indifferent, not austere. My lord!

Sar. Zarina!

Zar. No, not Zarina—do not say Zarina.

That tone—that word—annihilate long years,

And things which make them longer.

Sar. 'Tis too late

To think of these past dreams. Let's not reproach—

That is, reproach me not—for the last time—

Zar. And first. I ne'er reproach'd you.

Sar. 'Tis most true;

And that reproach comes heavier on my heart

Than—But our hearts are not in our own power.

Zar. Nor hands; but I gave both.

Sar. Your brother said

It was your will to see me ere you went from Nineveh with—[He hesitates].

Zar. Our children: it is true.

I wish'd to thank you that you have not divided

My heart from all that's left it now to love—

Those who are yours and mine, who look like you,

And look upon me as you look'd upon me Once—But they have not changed.

Sar. Nor ever will.

I fain would have them dutiful.

Zar. I cherish

Those infants, not alone from the blind love

Of a fond mother, but as a fond woman. They are now the only tie between us.

Sar. Deem not

I have not done you justice: rather make them

Resemble your own line than their own sire.

I trust them with you—to you: fit them for

A throne, or, if that be denied—You have heard

Of this night's tumults?

Zar. I had half forgotten,

And could have welcomed any grief save yours,

Which gave me to behold your face again. Sar. The throne—I say it not in fear—

but 'tis

In peril: they perhaps may never mount it; But let them not for this lose sight of it. I will dare all things to bequeath it them; But if I fail, then they must win it back Bravely—and, won, wear it wisely, not as I

Have wasted down my royalty.

Zar. They ne'er Shall know from me of aught but what may honour

Their father's memory.

Sar. Rather let them hear The truth from you than from a trampling world.

If they be in adversity, they'll learn Too soon the scorn of crowds for crown-less princes, And find that all their father's sins are theirs.

My boys!—I could have borne it were I childless.

Zar. Oh! do not say so—do not poison all

My peace left, by unwishing that thou wert A father. If thou conquerest, they shall reign, And honour him who saved the realm for them,

So little cared for as his own; and if—

Sar. 'Tis lost, all earth will cry out, thank your father!

And they will swell the echo with a curse. Zar. That they shall never do; but rather honour The name of him, who, dying like a king,

In his last hours did more for his own memory

Than many monarchs in a length of days, Which date the flight of time, but make no annals. Sar. Our annals draw perchance unto their close; But at the least, whate'er the past, their end

Shall be like their beginning—memorable. Zar. Yet be not rash—be careful of your life, Live but for those who love.

Sar. And who are they? A slave, who loves from passion—I'll not say Ambition—she has seen thrones shake, and loves; A few friends who have revell'd till we are

As one, for they are nothing if I fall; A brother I have injured—children whom

I have neglected, and a spouse—

Zar. Who loves. Sar. And pardons?

Zar. I have never thought of this, And cannot pardon till I have condemn'd.

Sar. My wife! Zar. Now blessings on thee

for that word! I never thought to hear it more—from thee.

Sar. Oh! thou wilt hear it from my subjects. Yes—³¹¹

These slaves whom I have nurtured, pamper'd, fed,
And swoln with peace, and gorged with plenty, till
They reign themselves—all monarchs in their mansions—

Now swarm forth in rebellion, and demand³¹⁵
His death, who made their lives a jubilee;
While the few upon whom I have no claim
Are faithful! This is true, yet monstrous.

Zar. 'Tis
Perhaps too natural; for benefits
Turn poison in bad minds.

Sar. And good ones make³²⁰
Good out of evil. Happier than the bee,
Which hives not but from wholesome flowers.

Zar. Then reap
The honey, nor inquire whence 'tis derived.

Be satisfied—you are not all abandon'd.

Sar. My life insures me that. How long,
bethink you,³²⁵
Were not I yet a king, should I be mortal;
That is, where mortals are, not where they must be?

Zar. I know not. But yet live for my—
that is,
Your children's sake!

Sar. My gentle, wrong'd Zarina!
I am the very slave of circumstance³³⁰
And impulse—borne away with every
breath!

Misplaced upon the throne—misplaced
in life.

I know not what I could have been, but feel
I am not what I should be—let it end.

But take this with thee: if I was not form'd To prize a love like thine, a mind like thine,³³⁶

Nor dote even on thy beauty—as I've
doted

On lesser charms, for no cause save that
such

Devotion was a duty, and I hated
All that look'd like a chain for me or others³⁴⁰

(This even rebellion must avouch); yet
hear

These words, perhaps among my last—that none

E'er valued more thy virtues, though he knew not

To profit by them—as the miner lights
Upon a vein of virgin ore, discovering

That which avails him nothing: he hath found it,³⁴⁶

But 'tis not his—but some superior's, who Placed him to dig, but not divide the wealth

Which sparkles at his feet; nor dare he lift

Nor poise it, but must grovel on, upturning³⁵⁰

The sullen earth.

Zar. Oh! if thou hast at length
Discover'd that my love is worth esteem,
I ask no more—but let us hence together,
And I—let me say we—shall yet be happy.
Assyria is not all the earth—we'll find

A world out of our own—and be more bless'd³⁵⁶

Than I have ever been, or thou, with all
An empire to indulge thee.

Enter SALEMENES.

Sal. I must part ye—
The moments, which must not be lost, are passing.

Zar. Inhuman brother! wilt thou thus weigh out³⁶⁰

Instants so high and blest?

Sal. Blest!
Zar. He hath been
So gentle with me, that I cannot think
Of quitting.

Sal. So—this feminine farewell
Ends as such partings end, in no departure.
I thought as much, and yielded against all My better bodings. But it must not be.

Zar. Not be?

Sal. Remain, and perish—
Zar. With my husband—

Sal. And children.

Zar. Alas!

Sal. Hear me, sister, like My sister:—all's prepared to make your safety

Certain, and of the boys too, our last hopes;³⁷⁰

'Tis not a single question of mere feeling,
Though that were much—but 'tis a point
of state:

The rebels would do more to seize upon
The offspring of their sovereign, and so crush—

Zar. Ah! do not name it.

Sal. Well, then, mark me: when They are safe beyond the Median's grasp,
the rebels³⁷⁶

Have miss'd their chief aim—the extinction of

The line of Nimrod. Though the present
king

Fall, his sons live for victory and vengeance.

Zar. But could not I remain, alone?

Sal. What! leave
Your children, with two parents and yet orphans—³⁸¹

In a strange land—so young, so distant?
Zar. No—

My heart will break.

Sal. Now you know all—decide.
Sar. Zarina, he hath spoken well, and
we

Must yield awhile to this necessity. 385 Remaining here, you may lose all; departing,

You save the better part of what is left,
To both of us, and to such loyal hearts
As yet beat in these kingdoms.

Sal. The time presses.

Sar. Go, then. If e'er we meet again,
perhaps 390

I may be worthier of you—and, if not,
Remember that my faults, though not atoned for,

Are ended. Yet, I dread thy nature will Grieve more about the blighted name and ashes

Which once were mightiest in Assyria—
than— 395

But I grow womanish again, and must not;
I must learn sternness now. My sins have
all

Been of the softer order—hide thy
tears—

I do not bid thee not to shed them—'twere
Easier to stop Euphrates at its source

Than one tear of a true and tender heart—
But let me not behold them; they unman
me 402

Here when I had remann'd myself. My
brother,

Lead her away.

Zar. Oh, God! I never shall Behold him more!

Sal. [striving to conduct her]. Nay, sister, I must be obey'd. 405

Zar. I must remain—away! you shall not hold me.

What, shall he die alone?—I live alone?

Sal. He shall not die alone; but lonely
you

Have lived for years.

Zar. That's false! I knew he lived,
And lived upon his image—let me go!

Sal. [conducting her off the stage]. Nay, then, I must use some fraternal
force, 411

Which you will pardon.

Zar. Never. Help me! Oh!
Sardanapalus, wilt thou thus behold me
Torn from thee?

Sal. Nay—then all is lost again,
If that this moment is not gain'd.

Zar. My brain turns— 415
My eyes fail—where is he? [She faints.]

Sar. [advancing]. No—set her down;
She's dead—and you have slain her.

Sal. 'Tis the mere
Faintness of o'erwrought passion: in the air
She will recover. Pray, keep back.—

[Aside] I must Avail myself of this sole moment to 420

Bear her to where her children are embark'd,

I' the royal galley on the river.

[SALEMENES bears her off.]

Sar. [solus].

This, too—

And this too must I suffer—I, who never Inflicted purposely on human hearts
A voluntary pang! But that is false—
She loved me, and I loved her.—Fatal
passion! 426

Why dost thou not expire at once in hearts
Which thou hast lighted up at once?
Zarina!

I must pay dearly for the desolation Now brought upon thee. Had I never
loved 430

But thee, I should have been an unopposed Monarch of honouring nations. To what gulfs

A single deviation from the track
Of human duties leads even those who
claim 434

The homage of mankind as their born due,
And find it, till they forfeit it themselves!

Enter MYRRHA.

Sar. You here! Who call'd you?

Myr. No one—but I heard

Far off a voice of wail and lamentation,
And thought—

Sar. It forms no portion of your duties
To enter here till sought for.

Myr. Though I might, 440
Perhaps, recall some softer words of yours (Although they too were chiding), which reproved

Because I ever dreaded to intrude;

Resisting my own wish and your injunction

To heed no time nor presence, but approach you 445

Uncall'd for:—I retire.

Sar. Yet stay—being here.
I pray you pardon me: events have sour'd
me

Till I wax peevish—heed it not: I shall Soon be myself again.

Myr. I wait with patience,
What I shall see with pleasure.

Sar. Scarce a moment 450
Before your entrance in this hall, Zarina,
Queen of Assyria, departed hence.

Myr. Ah!

Sar. Wherefore do you start?

Myr. Did I do so?

Sar. 'Twas well you enter'd by another
portal,

Else you had met. That pang at least is spared her! 455

Myr. I know to feel for her.

Sar. That is too much,
And beyond nature—'tis nor mutual

Nor possible. You cannot pity her, Nor she aught but—

Myr. Despise the favourite slave?
Not more than I have ever scorn'd myself.

Sar. Scorn'd! what, to be the envy of your sex, 461

And lord it o'er the heart of the world's lord?

Myr. Were you the lord of twice ten thousand worlds—

As you are like to lose the one you sway'd—

I did abase myself as much in being 465
Your paramour, as though you were a peasant—

Nay, more, if that the peasant were a Greek.

Sar. You talk it well—

Myr. And truly.

Sar. In the hour
Of man's adversity all things grow daring
Against the falling; but as I am not 470
Quite fall'n, nor now disposed to bear reproaches,

Perhaps because I merit them too often,
Let us then part while peace is still between us.

Myr. Part!

Sar. Have not all past human beings parted,
And must not all the present one day part? 475

Myr. Why?

Sar. For your safety, which I will have look'd to,
With a strong escort to your native land;
And such gifts, as, if you had not been all
A queen, shall make your dowry worth a kingdom.

Myr. I pray you talk not thus.

Sar. The queen is gone: 480
You need not shame to follow. I would fall

Alone—I seek no partners but in pleasure.

Myr. And I no pleasure but in parting not.

You shall not force me from you.

Sar. Think well of it—
It soon may be too late.

Myr. So let it be; 485
For then you cannot separate me from you.

Sar. And will not; but I thought you wish'd it.

Myr. I!

Sar. You spoke of your abasement.

Myr. And I feel it
Deeply—more deeply than all things but love. 489

Sar. Then fly from it.

Myr. 'Twill not recall the past—
'Twill not restore my honour, nor my heart.

No—here I stand or fall. If that you conquer,

I live to joy in your great triumph: should
Your lot be different, I'll not weep, but share it.

You did not doubt me a few hours ago.

Sar. Your courage never—nor your love till now; 496

And none could make me doubt it save yourself.

Those words—

Myr. Were words. I pray you, let the proofs

Be in the past acts you were pleased to praise

This very night, and in my further bearing, 500

Beside, wherever you are borne by fate.

Sar. I am content; and, trusting in my cause,

Think we may yet be victors and return
To peace—the only victory I covet.

To me war is no glory—conquest no Renown. To be forced thus to uphold my right 506

Sits heavier on my heart than all the wrongs

These men would bow me down with. Never, never

Can I forget this night, even should I live
To add it to the memory of others. 510

I thought to have made mine inoffensive rule

An era of sweet peace 'midst bloody annals,

A green spot amidst desert centuries,
On which the future would turn back and smile, 514

And cultivate, or sigh when it could not Recall Sardanapalus' golden reign.

I thought to have made my realm a paradise,

And every moon an epoch of new pleasures.

I took the rabble's shouts for love—the breath

Of friends for truth—the lips of woman for 520

My only guerdon—so they are, my Myrrha: [He kisses her.

Kiss me. Now let them take my realm and life!

They shall have both, but never thee!

Myr. No, never!
Man may despoil his brother man of all That's great or glittering—kingdoms fall, hosts yield, 525

Friends fail, slaves fly, and all betray—
and, more

Than all, the most indebted—but a heart
That loves without self-love! 'Tis here—now prove it.

Enter SALEMENES.

Sal. I sought you—How! she here again?

Sar. Return not
Now to reproof: methinks your aspect speaks 530

Of higher matter than a woman's presence.

Sal. The only woman whom it much imports me

At such a moment now is safe in absence—
The queen's embark'd.

Sar. And well? say that much.

Sal. Yes.
Her transient weakness has pass'd o'er; at
least, 535

It settled into tearless silence: her
Pale face and glittering eye, after a glance
Upon her sleeping children, were still fix'd
Upon the palace towers as the swift galley Stole down the hurrying stream beneath the starlight; 540

But she said nothing.

Sar. Would I felt no more Than she has said!

Sal. 'Tis now too late to feel.
Your feelings cannot cancel a sole pang:
To change them, my advices bring sure tidings

That the rebellious Medes and Chaldees,
marshall'd 545

By their two leaders, are already up
In arms again; and, serrying their ranks,
Prepare to attack: they have apparently
Been join'd by other satraps.

Sar. What! more rebels?
Let us be first, then.

Sal. That were hardly prudent 550
Now, though it was our first intention. If
By noon to-morrow we are join'd by those I've sent for by sure messengers, we shall
be

In strength enough to venture an attack, Ay, and pursuit too; but, till then, my
voice 555

Is to await the onset.

Sar. I detest
That waiting; though it seems so safe to
fight

Behind high walls, and hurl down foes into Deep fosses, or behold them sprawl on spikes

Strew'd to receive them, still I like it not—
My soul seems lukewarm; but when I set on them, 561

Though they were piled on mountains, I would have

A pluck at them, or perish in hot blood!—
Let me then charge.

Sal. You talk like a young soldier.

Sar. I am no soldier, but a man: speak
not 565
Of soldiership, I loathe the word, and
those

Who pride themselves upon it; but direct
me

Where I may pour upon them.

Sal. You must spare
To expose your life too hastily: 'tis not Like mine or any other subject's breath;
The whole war turns upon it—with it; this Alone creates it, kindles, and may quench
it— 572

Prolong it—end it.

Sar. Then let us end both!
'Twere better thus, perhaps, than prolong either;

I'm sick of one, perchance of both.

[A trumpet sounds without.

Sal. Hark!

Sar. Let us 575

Reply, not listen.

Sal. And your wound!

Sar. 'Tis bound—

'Tis heal'd—I had forgotten it. Away!
A leech's lancet would have scratch'd me deeper;

The slave that gave it might be well
ashamed

To have struck so weakly.

Sal. Now, may none this hour 580
Strike with a better aim!

Sar. Ay, if we conquer;
But if not, they will only leave to me

A task they might have spared their king.
Upon them! [Trumpet sounds again.

Sal. I am with you.

Sar. Ho, my arms! again, my arms!
[Exeunt.

ACT V

SCENE I.—The same Hall in the Palace.

MYRRHA and BALEA.

Myr. [at a window]. The day at last has broken. What a night Hath usher'd it! how beautiful in heaven!
Though varied with a transitory storm,
More beautiful in that variety!

How hideous upon earth! where peace and
hope, 5

And love and revel, in an hour were trampled

By human passions to a human chaos,
Not yet resolved to separate elements—

'Tis warring still! And can the sun so rise,
So bright, so rolling back the clouds into Vapours more lovely than the unclouded
sky, 11

With golden pinnacles, and snowy mountains,

And billows purpler than the ocean's,
making

In heaven a glorious mockery of the earth,
So like we almost deem it permanent; 15

So fleeting, we can scarcely call it aught
Beyond a vision, 'tis so transiently

Scatter'd along the eternal vault: and yet
It dwells upon the soul, and soothes the
soul,

And blends itself into the soul, until 20
Sunrise and sunset form the haunted epoch

Of sorrow and of love; which they who mark not,

Know not the realms where those twin genii

(Who chasten and who purify our hearts,

So that we would not change their sweet rebukes 25
For all the boisterous joys that ever shook
The air with clamour) build the palaces Where their fond votaries repose and
breathe

Briefly;—but in that brief cool calm inhale Enough of heaven to enable them to bear
The rest of common, heavy, human hours,
And dream them through in placid
sufferance,

Though seemingly employ'd like all the
rest

Of toiling breathers in allotted tasks
Of pain or pleasure, two names for one feeling, 35

Which our internal, restless agony
Would vary in the sound, although the
sense

Escapes our highest efforts to be happy.

Bal. You muse right calmly: and can you so watch

The sunrise which may be our last?

Myr. It is 40
Therefore that I so watch it, and reproach
Those eyes, which never may behold it
more,

For having look'd upon it oft, too oft,
Without the reverence and the rapture due To that which keeps all earth from being as fragile 45

As I am in this form. Come, look upon it,
The Chaldee's god, which when I gaze
upon

I grow almost a convert to your Baal.

Bal. As now he reigns in heaven, so once on earth

He sway'd.

Myr. He sways it now far more,
then; never 50

Had earthly monarch half the power and
glory

Which centres in a single ray of his.

Bal. Surely he is a god!

Myr. So we Greeks deem too;
And yet I sometimes think that gorgeous orb 54

Must rather be the abode of gods than one Of the immortal sovereigns. Now he breaks

Through all the clouds, and fills my eyes with light

That shuts the world out. I can look no
more.

Bal. Hark! heard you not a sound?

Myr. No, 'twas mere fancy; 59
They battle it beyond the wall, and not
As in late midnight conflict in the very Chambers: the palace has become a fortress

Since that insidious hour; and here,
within

The very centre, girded by vast courts 64
And regal halls of pyramid proportions,

Which must be carried one by one before
They penetrate to where they then arrived,
We are as much shut in even from the
sound

Of peril as from glory.

Bal.

But they reach'd

Thus far before.

Myr. Yes, by surprise, and were 70
Beat back by valour: now at once we have Courage and vigilance to guard us.

Bal.

May they Prosper!

Myr. That is the prayer of many, and
The dread of more: it is an anxious hour;
I strive to keep it from my thoughts. Alas!
How vainly!

Bal. It is said the king's demeanour
In the late action scarcely more appall'd
The rebels than astonish'd his true subjects.

Myr. 'Tis easy to astonish or appal
The vulgar mass which moulds a horde of
slaves; 80

But he did bravely.

Bal. Slew he not Beleses?
I heard the soldiers say he struck him
down.

Myr. The wretch was overthrown, but rescued to Triumph, perhaps, o'er one who vanquish'd him 84

In fight, as he had spared him in his peril;
And by that heedless pity risk'd a crown.

Bal.

Hark!

Myr. You are right; some steps approach, but slowly.

Enter Soldiers, bearing in SALEMENES wounded, with a broken javelin in his side: they seat him upon one of the couches which furnish the Apartment.

Myr. Oh, Jove!

Bal.

Then all is over.

Sal.

That is false.

Hew down the slave who says so, if a soldier.

Myr. Spare him—he's none: a mere court butterfly, 90

That flutters in the pageant of a monarch.

Sal. Let him live on, then.

Myr.

So wilt thou, I trust.

Sal. I fain would live this hour out,
and the event,

But doubt it. Wherefore did ye bear me
here?

Sol. By the king's order. When the javelin struck you, 95
You fell and fainted: 'twas his strict command

To bear you to this hall.

Sal.

'Twas not ill done:

For seeming slain in that cold dizzy trance,
The sight might shake our soldiers—but—
'tis vain,

I feel it ebbing!

Myr. Let me see the wound; 100
I am not quite skillless: in my native land
'Tis part of our instruction. War being constant,
We are nerved to look on such things.

Sol. Best extract
The javelin.

Myr. Hold! no, no, it cannot be.
Sal. I am sped, then!

Myr. With the blood that fast must follow 105
The extracted weapon, I do fear thy life.

Sal. And I not death. Where was the king when you

Convey'd me from the spot where I was stricken?

Sol. Upon the same ground, and encouraging

With voice and gesture the dispirited
troops 110

Who had seen you fall, and falter'd back.
Sal. Whom heard ye

Named next to the command?

Sol. I did not hear.
Sal. Fly then, and tell him, 'twas my last request

That Zames take my post until the
junction, 114

So hoped for, yet delay'd, of Ofratanes,
Satrap of Susa. Leave me here: our troops

Are not so numerous as to spare your absence.

Sol. But, prince—— Sal. Hence, I say! Here's a courtier and

A woman, the best chamber company.
As you would not permit me to expire

Upon the field, I'll have no idle soldiers About my sick couch. Hence! and do my bidding! [Exeunt the Soldiers.]

Myr. Gallant and glorious spirit!

Must the earth
So soon resign thee?

Sal. Gentle Myrrha, 'tis 124
The end I would have chosen, had I saved

The monarch or the monarchy by this;
As 'tis, I have not outlived them.

Myr. You wax paler.
Sal. Your hand; this broken weapon

but prolongs 128
My pangs, without sustaining life enough

To make me useful: I would draw it forth
And my life with it, could I but hear how

The fight goes.

Enter SARDANAPALUS and Soldiers.

Sar. My best brother!
Sal. And the battle 132

Is lost?
Sar. [despondingly]. You see me here.

Sal. I'd rather see you thus!
[He draws out the weapon from the wound, and dies.

Sar. And thus I will be seen; unless the succour,

The last frail reed of our beleaguer'd
hopes, 135

Arrive with Ofratanes.
Myr. Did you not Receive a token from your dying brother, Appointing Zames chief?

Sar. I did.
Myr. Where's Zames?

Sar. Dead.
Myr. And Altada?

Sar. Dying.
Myr. Pania? Sfero?

Sar. Pania yet lives: but Sfero's fled or captive. 140

I am alone.
Myr. And is all lost?

Sar. Our walls,
Though thinly mann'd, may still hold out against

Their present force, or aught save treachery:

But i' the field——

Myr. I thought 'twas the intent
Of Salemenes not to risk a sally 145

Till ye were strengthen'd by the expected succours.

Sar. I overruled him.
Myr. Well, the fault's a brave one.

Sar. But fatal. Oh, my brother! I would give

These realms, of which thou wert the orna-
ment,

The sword and shield, the sole-redeeming
honour, 150

To call back—But I will not weep for thee;
Thou shalt be mourn'd for as thou wouldst be mourn'd.

It grieves me most that thou couldst quit

this life
Believing that I could survive what thou

Hast died for—our long royalty of race.
If I redeem it, I will give thee blood 156

Of thousands, tears of millions, for atone-
ment

(The tears of all the good are thine already).

If not, we meet again soon,—if the spirit
Within us lives beyond;—thou readest

mine, 160
And dost me justice now. Let me once

clasp
That yet warm hand, and fold that throbless heart [Embraces the body.]

To this which beats so bitterly. Now, bear
The body hence.

Soldier. Where?

Sar. To my proper chamber.
Place it beneath my canopy, as though

The king lay there: when this is done, we
will 166

Speak further of the rites due to such ashes.

[Exeunt Soldiers with the body of SALEMENES.

Enter PANIA.

Sar. Well, Pania! have you placed the guards, and issued The orders fix'd on?

Pan. Sire, I have obey'd.

Sar. And do the soldiers keep their hearts up?

Pan. Sire? 170

Sar. I'm answer'd! When a king asks twice, and has

A question as an answer to his question, It is a portent. What! they are dishearten'd?

Pan. The death of Salemenes, and the shouts

Of the exulting rebels on his fall, 175

Have made them—

Sar. Rage—not droop—it should have been.

We'll find the means to rouse them.

Pan. Such a loss

Might sadden even a victory.

Sar. Alas!

Who can so feel it as I feel? but yet, Though coop'd within these walls, they are strong, and we 180

Have those without will break their way through hosts,

To make their sovereign's dwelling what it was—

A palace; not a prison, nor a fortress.

Enter an Officer, hastily.

Sar. Thy face seems ominous. Speak!

Offi. I dare not.

Sar. Dare not?

While millions dare revolt with sword in hand! 185

That's strange. I pray thee break that loyal silence

Which loathes to shock its sovereign; we can hear

Worse than thou hast to tell.

Pan. Proceed, thou hearest.

Offi. The wall which skirted near the river's brink 189

Is thrown down by the sudden inundation Of the Euphrates, which now rolling, swoln From the enormous mountains where it rises,

By the late rains of that tempestuous region, O'erfloods its banks, and hath destroy'd the bulwark.

Pan. That's a black augury! it has been said 195

For ages, 'That the city ne'er should yield To man, until the river grew its foe.'

Sar. I can forgive the omen, not the ravage.

How much is swept down of the wall?

Offi. About

Some twenty stadia.

Sar. And all this is left 200

Pervious to the assailants?

Offi.

For the present The river's fury must impede the assault; But when he shrinks into his wonted channel,

And may be cross'd by the accustom'd barks,

The palace is their own.

Sar. That shall be never 205
Though men, and gods, and elements, and omens,

Have risen up 'gainst one who ne'er provoked them,

My fathers' house shall never be a cave For wolves to horde and howl in.

Pan. With your sanction, I will proceed to the spot, and take such measures 210

For the assurance of the vacant space

As time and means permit.

Sar. About it straight,

And bring me back, as speedily as full

And fair investigation may permit, 214

Report of the true state of this irruption Of waters. [Exeunt PANIA and the Officer.]

Myr. Thus the very waves rise up Against you.

Sar. They are not my subjects, girl, And may be pardon'd, since they can't be punish'd

Myr. I joy to see this portent shakes you not.

Sar. I am past the fear of portents: they can tell me 220

Nothing I have not told myself since midnight:

Despair anticipates such things.

Myr. Despair!

Sar. No; not despair precisely. When we know

All that can come, and how to meet it, our Resolves, if firm, may merit a more noble

Word than this is to give it utterance. 226

But what are words to us? we have well nigh done

With them and all things.

Myr. Save one deed—the last

And greatest to all mortals; crowning act

Of all that was, or is, or is to be— 230

The only thing common to all mankind, So different in their births, tongues, sexes, natures, Hues, features, climes, times, feelings, intellects,

Without one point of union save in this, To which we tend, for which we're born, and thread 235

The labyrinth of mystery, call'd life.

Sar. Our clue being well nigh wound out, let's be cheerful.

They who have nothing more to fear may well

Indulge a smile at that which once appall'd; 239

As children at discover'd bugbears.

Re-enter PANIA.

Pan. 'Tis
As was reported: I have order'd there A double guard, withdrawing from the
wall
Where it was strongest the required addition To watch the breach occasion'd by the waters.

Sar. You have done your duty faithfully, and as 245
My worthy Pania! further ties between us Draw near a close—I pray you take this key: [Gives a key.]
It opens to a secret chamber, placed
Behind the couch in my own chamber.

(Now Press'd by a nobler weight than e'er it
bore— 250
Though a long line of sovereigns have lain
down

Along its golden frame—as bearing for A time what late was Salemenes). Search
The secret covert to which this will lead
you; 254

'Tis full of treasure; take it for yourself
And your companions: there's enough to load ye,

Though ye be many. Let the slaves be freed, too;

And all the inmates of the palace, of Whatever sex, now quit it in an hour.
Thence launch the regal barks, once form'd for pleasure, 260

And now to serve for safety, and embark.
The river's broad and swoln, and uncommanded

(More potent than a king) by these besiegers.

Fly! and be happy!

Pan. Under your protection!
So you accompany your faithful guard.

Sar. No, Pania! that must not be; get thee hence, 266

And leave me to my fate.

Pan. 'Tis the first time
I ever disobey'd: but now—

Sar. So all men
Dare beard me now, and Insolence within Apes Treason from without. Question no further; 270

'Tis my command, my last command.
Wilt thou

Oppose it? thou!

Pan. But yet—not yet.

Sar. Well, then,
Swear that you will obey when I shall give
The signal.

Pan. With a heavy but true heart,
I promise.

Sar. 'Tis enough. Now order here
Faggots, pine-nuts, and wither'd leaves, and such 276

Things as catch fire and blaze with one sole
spark;

Bring cedar, too, and precious drugs, and spices,

And mighty planks, to nourish a tall pile;
Bring frankincense and myrrh, too, for
it is 280

For a great sacrifice I build the pyre!
And heap them round yon throne.

Pan. My lord!
Sar. I have said it,
And you have sworn.

Pan. And could keep my faith
Without a vow. [Exit PANIA.]

Myr. What mean you?
Sar. You shall know

Anon—what the whole earth shall ne'er
forget. 285

PANIA, returning with a Herald.

Pan. My king, in going forth upon my
duty,

This herald has been brought before me, craving

An audience.

Sar. Let him speak.
Her. The King Arbaces—

Sar. What, crown'd already?—But,
proceed.

Her. Beleses, 289
The anointed high-priest—

Sar. Of what god or demon?
With new kings rise new altars. But,
proceed;

You are sent to prate your master's will,
and not

Reply to mine.

Her. And Satrap Ofratanes—
Sar. Why, he is ours.

Her. [showing a ring.] Be sure that he is now 294

In the camp of the conquerors; behold

His signet ring.
Sar. 'Tis his. A worthy triad!

Poor Salemenes! thou hast died in time
To see one treachery the less: this man
Was thy true friend and my most trusted subject.

Proceed.
Her. They offer thee thy life, and freedom 300

Of choice to single out a residence
In any of the further provinces,

Guarded and watch'd, but not confined in person,

Where thou shalt pass thy days in peace;
but on

Condition that the three young princes
are 305

Given up as hostages.

Sar. [ironically.] The generous victors!
Her. I wait the answer.

Sar. Answer, slave! How long
Have slaves decided on the doom of kings?

Her. Since they were free. 308
Sar. Mouthpiece of mutiny!
 Thou at the least shalt learn the penalty
 Of treason, though its proxy only. Pania!
 Let his head be thrown from our walls
 within
 The rebels' lines, his carcass down the river.

Away with him!

[PANIA and the Guards seizing him.]

Pan. I never yet obey'd Your orders with more pleasure than the
 present. 315
 Hence with him, soldiers! do not soil this
 hall

Of royalty with treasonable gore;

Put him to rest without.

Her. A single word:
 My office, king, is sacred.

Sar. And what's mine?
 That thou shouldst come and dare to ask of me 320

To lay it down?

Her. I but obey'd my orders,
 At the same peril if refused, as now
 Incurr'd by my obedience.

Sar. So there are New monarchs of an hour's growth as despotic

As sovereigns swathed in purple, and enthroned 325

From birth to manhood!

Her. My life waits your breath.
 Yours (I speak humbly)—but it may be—
 yours

May also be in danger scarce less imminent:

Would it then suit the last hours of a line
 Such as is that of Nimrod, to destroy
 A peaceful herald, unarm'd, in his office;
 And violate not only all that man Holds sacred between man and man—but that

More holy tie which links us with the gods?

Sar. He's right.—Let him go free.—

My life's last act 335
 Shall not be one of wrath. Here, fellow,
 take

[Gives him a golden cup from a table near.
 This golden goblet, let it hold your wine,
 And think of me; or melt it into ingots,
 And think of nothing but their weight and value.]

Her. I thank you doubly for my life,
 and this 340
 Most gorgeous gift, which renders it more precious.

But must I bear no answer?

Sar. Yes,—I ask
 An hour's truce to consider.

Her. But an hour's?

Sar. An hour's: if at the expiration of That time your masters hear no further
 from me, 345

They are to deem that I reject their terms,
 And act befittingly.

Her. I shall not fail
 To be a faithful legate of your pleasure.

Sar. And hark! a word more.

Her. I shall not forget it,
 Whate'er it be.

Sar. Commend me to Beleses; 350
 And tell him, ere a year expire, I summon Him hence to meet me.

Her. Where?

Sar. At Babylon.
 At least from thence he will depart to meet
 me.

Her. I shall obey you to the letter.
 [Exit Herald.
 Pania!—

Sar. Now, my good Pania!—quick—with what I order'd. 355

Pan. My lord,—the soldiers are already charged.

And see! they enter.

[Soldiers enter, and form a Pile about the Throne, &c.]

Sar. Higher, my good soldiers,
 And thicker yet; and see that the foundation

Be such as will not speedily exhaust
 Its own too subtle flame; nor yet be quench'd 360

With aught officious aid would bring to quell it.

Let the throne form the core of it; I would
 not

Leave that, save fraught with fire unquenchable,

To the new comers. Frame the whole as if 'Twere to enkindle the strong tower of our Inveterate enemies. Now it bears an aspect! 366

How say you, Pania, will this pile suffice
 For a king's obsequies?

Pan. Ay, for a kingdom's.
 I understand you, now.

Sar. And blame me?
Pan. No—

Let me but fire the pile, and share it with
 you. 370

Myr. That duty's mine.

Pan. A woman's!

Myr. 'Tis the soldier's Part to die for his sovereign, and why not
 The woman's with her lover?

Pan. 'Tis most strange!

Myr. But not so rare, my Pania, as thou think'st it.

In the mean time, live thou.—Farewell!
 the pile 375

Is ready.

Pan. I should shame to leave my sove-
 reign

With but a single female to partake
 His death.

Sar. Too many far have heralded

Me to the dust already. Get thee hence:
Enrich thee.

Pan. And live wretched!

Sar. Think upon 380
Thy vow:—'tis sacred and irrevocable.

Pan. Since it is so, farewell.

Sar. Search well my chamber,
Feel no remorse at bearing off the gold;
Remember, what you leave you leave the slaves

Who slew me: and when you have borne
away 385
All safe off to your boats, blow one long
blast

Upon the trumpet as you quit the palace.
The river's brink is too remote, its stream
Too loud at present to permit the echo
To reach distinctly from its banks. Then
fly,— 390

And as you sail, turn back; but still keep on Your way along the Euphrates: if you reach
The land of Paphlagonia, where the queen
Is safe with my three sons in Cotta's court,
Say, what you saw at parting, and request
That she remember what I said at one Parting more mournful still.

Pan. That royal hand!
Let me then once more press it to my lips;
And these poor soldiers who throng round
you, and

Would fain die with you!

[The Soldiers and PANIA throng round him, kissing his hand and the hem of his robe.]

Sar. My best! my last friends! 400
Let's not unman each other: part at once:
All farewells should be sudden, when for
ever,

Else they make an eternity of moments,
And clog the last sad sands of life with tears.
Hence, and be happy: trust me, I am not Now to be pitied; or far more for what Is past than present; for the future, 'tis
In the hands of the deities, if such
There be: I shall know soon. Farewell—
Farewell.

[Exeunt PANIA and Soldiers.]

Myr. These men were honest: it is comfort still 410
That our last looks should be on loving
faces.

Sar. And lovely ones, my beautiful! but hear me!

If at this moment—for we now are on The brink—thou feel'st an inward shrinking from

This leap through flame into the future, say it: 415

I shall not love thee less; nay, perhaps more,
For yielding to thy nature; and there's time
Yet for thee to escape hence.

Myr. Shall I light
One of the torches which lie heap'd beneath 419

The ever-burning lamp that burns without,
Before Baal's shrine, in the adjoining hall?

Sar. Do so. Is that thy answer?

Myr. Thou shalt see.
[Exit MYRRHA.]

Sar. [solus]. She's firm. My fathers!
whom I will rejoin, 423

It may be, purined by death from some Of the gross stains of too material being,
I would not leave your ancient first abode
To the defilement of usurping bondmen;
If I have not kept your inheritance
As ye bequeath'd it, this bright part of it,
Your treasure, your abode, your sacred relics 430

Of arms and records, monuments, and
spoils,
In which they would have revell'd, I bear
with me

To you in that absorbing element, 433
Which most personifies the soul as leaving
The least of matter unconsumed before
Its fiery workings:—and the light of this Most royal of funereal pyres shall be
Not a mere pillar form'd of cloud and flame,
A beacon in the horizon for a day,
And then a mount of ashes, but a light
To lesson ages, rebel nations, and 441 Voluminous princes. Time shall quench full many

A people's records, and a hero's acts;
Sweep empire after empire, like this first
Of empires, into nothing; but even then Shall spare this deed of mine, and hold it up
A problem few dare imitate, and none
Despise—but, it may be, avoid the life
Which led to such a consummation.

MYRRHA returns with a lighted Torch in one Hand, and a Cup in the other.

Myr. Lo!

I've lit the lamp which lights us to the stars.

Sar. And the cup?

Myr. 'Tis my country's custom to Make a libation to the gods.

Sar. And mine

To make libations amongst men. I've not Forgot the custom; and although alone,
Will drain one draught in memory of
many 455

A joyous banquet past.

[SARDANAPALUS takes the cup, and after drinking and tinkling the reversed cup, as a drop falls, exclaims—

And this libation
Is for the excellent Beleses.

Myr. Why

Dwells thy mind rather upon that man's
name

Than on his mate's in villainy?

Sar. The one

Is a mere soldier, a mere tool, a kind Of human sword in a friend's hand; the
other 461

Is master-mover of his warlike puppet;
But I dismiss them from my mind.—Yet
pause,
My Myrrha! dost thou truly follow me,
Freely and fearlessly?

Myr. And dost thou think 465
A Greek girl dare not do for love, that which An Indian widow braves for custom?

Sar. Then
We but await the signal.

Myr. It is long
In sounding.

Sar. Now, farewell; one last embrace.

Myr. Embrace, but not the last; there is one more. 470

Sar. True, the commingling fire will mix our ashes.

Myr. And pure as is my love to thee, shall they,

Purged from the dross of earth, and earthly
passion,

Mix pale with thine. A single thought yet irks me.

Sar. Say it.

Myr. It is that no kind hand will gather 475

The dust of both into one urn.
Sar. The better:

Rather let them be borne abroad upon
The winds of heaven, and scatter'd into air,

Than be polluted more by human hands
Of slaves and traitors. In this blazing

palace, 480
And its enormous walls of reeking ruin,
We leave a nobler monument than Egypt

Hath piled in her brick mountains, o'er dead kings,

Or kine, for none know whether those proud piles 484

Be for their monarch or their ox-god Apis:
So much for monuments that have forgotten

Their very record!

Myr. Then farewell, thou earth!
And loveliest spot of earth! farewell,

Ionia!
Be thou still free and beautiful, and far

Aloof from desolation! My last prayer
Was for thee, my last thoughts, save one,

were of thee! 491

Sar. And that?

Myr. Is yours.

[The trumpet of PANIA sounds without.

Sar. Hark!

Myr. Now!

Sar. Adieu, Assyria!
I loved thee well, my own, my father's land,

And better as my country than my kingdom.

I sated thee with peace and joys; and this Is my reward! and now I owe thee nothing,

Not even a grave. [He mounts the pile.

Now, Myrrha!

Myr. Art thou ready?

Sar. As the torch in thy grasp.

[MYRRHA fires the pile.

Myr. 'Tis fired! I come.

[As MYRRHA springs forward to throw herself into the flames, the Curtain falls.

THE TWO FOSCARI

AN HISTORICAL TRAGEDY

'The father softens, but the governor's resolved.'—CRITIC.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ

FRANCIS FOSCARI, Doge of Venice.

JACOPO FOSCARI, Son of the Doge.

JAMES LOREDANO, a Patrician.

MARCO MEMMO, a Chief of the Forty.

BARBARIGO, a Senator.

Other Senators, The Council of Ten, Guards, Attendants, &c., &c.

WOMAN

MARINA, Wife of young FOSCARI.

SCENE.—The Ducal Palace, Venice

ACT I

SCENE I.—A Hall in the Ducal Palace.

Enter LOREDANO and BARBARIGO, meeting.

Lor. Where is the prisoner?

Bar. Reposing from
The Question.

Lor. The hour's past—fix'd yesterday
For the resumption of his trial.—Let us Rejoin our colleagues in the council, and Urge his recall.

Bar. Nay, let him profit by 5
A few brief minutes for his tortured limbs;

He was o'erwrought by the Question
yesterday,

And may die under it if now repeated.

Lor. Well?

Bar. I yield not to you in love of justice,
Or hate of the ambitious Foscari, 10

Father and son, and all their noxious
race;

But the poor wretch has suffer'd beyond nature's
Most stoical endurance.

Lor. Without owning
His crime?

Bar. Perhaps without committing any.
But he avow'd the letter to the Duke 15
Of Milan, and his sufferings half atone for Such weakness.

Lor. We shall see.

Bar. You, Loredano,
Pursue hereditary hate too far.

Lor. How far?

Bar. To extermination.

Lor. When they are Extinct, you may say this.—Let's in to council. 20

Bar. Yet pause—the number of our colleagues is not

Complete yet; two are wanting ere we can Proceed.

Lor. And the chief judge, the Doge?

Bar. No—he,
With more than Roman fortitude, is ever
First at the board in this unhappy process
Against his last and only son.

Lor. True—true—
His last.

Bar. Will nothing move you?

Lor. Feels he, think you?

Bar. He shows it not.

Lor. I have mark'd that—the wretch!

Bar. But yesterday, I hear, on his return To the ducal chambers, as he pass'd the threshold 30

The old man fainted.

Lor. It begins to work, then.

Bar. The work is half your own.

Lor. And should be all mine—
My father and my uncle are no more.

Bar. I have read their epitaph, which says they died 34

By poison.

Lor. When the Doge declared that he Should never deem himself a sovereign till
The death of Peter Loredano, both
The brothers sicken'd shortly:—he is sove-
reign.

Bar. A wretched one.

Lor. What should they be who make Orphans?

Bar. But did the Doge make you so?

Lor. Yes. 40

Bar. What solid proofs?

Lor. When princes set themselves
To work in secret, proofs and process are Alike made difficult; but I have such
Of the first, as shall make the second needless.

Bar. But you will move by law?

Lor. By all the laws 45
Which he would leave us.

Bar. They are such in this
Our state as render retribution easier

Than 'mongst remoter nations. Is it true

That you have written in your books of commerce

(The wealthy practice of our highest nobles), 50

'Doge Foscari, my debtor for the deaths
Of Marco and Pietro Loredano,
My sire and uncle?'

Lor. It is written thus.

Bar. And will you leave it unerased?

Lor. Till balanced.

Bar. And how?

[Two Senators pass over the stage, as in their way to 'the Hall of the Council of Ten.']

Lor. You see the number is complete.

Follow me. [Exit LOREDANO.

Bar. [solus]. Follow thee! I have follow'd long 56

Thy path of desolation, as the wave
Sweeps after that before it, alike whelming
The wreck that creaks to the wild winds, and wretch

Who shrieks within its riven ribs, as gush
The waters through them; but this son and
sire 61

Might move the elements to pause, and yet Must I on hardly like them—Oh! would
I could as blindly and remorselessly!—

Lo, where he comes!—Be still, my heart!
they are 65

Thy foes, must be thy victims: wilt thou beat

For those who almost broke thee?

Enter Guards, with young FOSCARI as prisoner, &c.

Guard. Let him rest.

Signor, take time.

Jac. Fos. I thank thee, friend, I'm feeble;

But thou may'st stand reproved.

Guard. I'll stand the hazard.

Jac. Fos. That's kind:—I meet some pity, but no mercy; 70

This is the first.

Guard. And might be the last, did they Who rule behold us.

Bar. [advancing to the Guard]. There is one who does:

Yet fear not; I will neither be thy judge
Nor thy accuser; though the hour is past, Wait their last summons—I am of 'the Ten', 75

And waiting for that summons, sanction you Even by my presence: when the last call
sounds,

We'll in together.—Look well to the prisoner!

Jac. Fos. What voice is that?—'Tis Barbarigo's! Ah!

Our house's foe, and one of my few judges.

Bar. To balance such a foe, if such there
be, 81

Thy father sits amongst thy judges.

Jac. Fos.
He judges.

Bar. Then deem not the laws too harsh
Which yield so much indulgence to a sire,
As to allow his voice in such high matter
As the state's safety——

Jac. Fos. And his son's. I'm faint;
Let me approach, I pray you, for a breath
Of air, yon window which o'erlooks the waters.

Enter an Officer, who whispers BARBARIGO.

Bar. [to the Guard]. Let him approach.
I must not speak with him
Further than thus: I have transgress'd my
duty 90

In this brief parley, and must now redeem it Within the Council Chamber.

[Exit BARBARIGO.]

[Guard conducting JACOPO FOSCARI to the window.]

Guard. There, sir, 'tis Open.—How feel you?

Jac. Fos. Like a boy—Oh Venice!

Guard. And your limbs?

Jas. Fos. Limbs! how often have they borne me
Bounding o'er yon blue tide, as I have skimm'd 95

The gondola along in childish race,
And, masqued as a young gondolier, amidst

My gay competitors, noble as I, Raced for our pleasure, in the pride of
strength;

While the fair populace of crowding beauties,
Plebeian as patrician, cheer'd us on 101
With dazzling smiles, and wishes audible,
And waving kerchiefs, and applauding
hands,

Even to the goal!—How many a time have I Cloven with arm still lustier, breast more daring, 105

The wave all roughen'd; with a swimmer's
stroke

Flinging the billows back from my drench'd
hair,

And laughing from my lip the audacious
brine,

Which kiss'd it like a wine-cup, rising o'er
The waves as they arose, and prouder still
The loftier they uplifted me; and oft,

In wantonness of spirit, plunging down Into their green and glassy gulfs, and making

My way to shells and sea-weed, all unseen
By those above, till they wax'd fearful;
then 115

Returning with my grasp full of such tokens

As show'd that I had search'd the deep:
exulting,

With a far-dashing stroke, and drawing
deep

True, The long-suspended breath, again I spurn'd

The foam which broke around me, and pursued 120

My track like a sea-bird.—I was a boy
then.

Guard. Be a man now: there never was more need

Of manhood's strength.

Jas. Fos. [looking from the lattice]. My beautiful, my own,

My only Venice—this is breath! Thy breeze,

Thine Adrian sea-breeze, how it fans my
face! 125

Thy very winds feel native to my veins,
And cool them into calmness! How unlike

The hot gales of the horrid Cyclades,
Which howled about my Candiotte dungeon, and

Made my heart sick!

Guard. I see the colour comes Back to your cheek: Heaven send you strength to bear 131

What more may be imposed!—I dread to think on't.

Jac. Fos. They will not banish me again?—No—no,

Let them wring on; I am strong yet.

Guard. Confess,
And the rack will be spared you.

Jac. Fos. I confess'd 135

Once—twice before: both times they exiled me,

Guard. And the third time will slay
you.

Jac. Fos. Let them do so,
So I be buried in my birth-place: better
Be ashes here than aught that lives elsewhere.

Guard. And can you so much love the soil which hates you? 140

Jac. Fos. The soil!—Oh no, it is the seed of the soil

Which persecutes me; but my native earth
Will take me as a mother to her arms.

I ask no more than a Venetian grave,
A dungeon, what they will, so it be
here. 145

Enter an Officer.

Offi. Bring in the prisoner!

Guard. Signor, you hear the order.

Jac. Fos. Ay, I am used to such a summons: 't is

The third time they have tortured me:— then lend me

Thine arm. [To the Guard.]

Offi. Take mine, sir; 'tis my duty to Be nearest to your person.

Jac. Fos. You!—you are he 150

Who yesterday presided o'er my pangs—
Away!—I'll walk alone.

Offi. As you please, signor;
The sentence was not of my signing,
but
I dared not disobey the Council when
They—

Jac. Fos. Bade thee stretch me on their horrid engine. 155
I pray thee touch me not—that is, just
now;

The time will come they will renew that
order,

But keep off from me till 'tis issued. As I look upon thy hands my curdling limbs Quiver with the anticipated wrench-
ing, 160

And the cold drops strain through my brow, as if—

But onward—I have borne it—I can bear
it.—

How looks my father?

Offi. With his wonted aspect.

Jac. Fos. So does the earth, and sky,
the blue of ocean,

The brightness of our city, and her domes, 165

The mirth of her Piazza, even now
Its merry hum of nations pierces here, Even here, into these chambers of the unknown

Who govern, and the unknown and the unnumber'd

Judged and destroy'd in silence,—all things wear 170

The self-same aspect, to my very sire!
Nothing can sympathise with Foscari,
Not even a Foscari.—Sir, I attend you.

[Exeunt JACOPO FOSCARI, Officer, &c.]

Enter MEMMO and another Senator.

Mem. He's gone—we are too late:— think you 'the Ten' 174

Will sit for any length of time to-day?

Sen. They say the prisoner is most obdurate,

Persisting in his first avowal; but
More I know not.

Mem. And that is much; the secrets
Of yon terrific chamber are as hidden From us, the premier nobles of the
state, 180

As from the people.

Sen. Save the wonted rumours, Which—like the tales of spectres, that
are rife

Near ruin'd buildings—never have been proved,

Nor wholly disbelieved: men know as little 184

Of the state's real acts as of the grave's Unfathom'd mysteries.

Mem. But with length of time
We gain a step in knowledge, and I look Forward to be one day of the decemvirs.

Sen. Or Doge?

Mem. Why, no; not if I can avoid it.
Sen. 'Tis the first station of the state,
and may 190

Be lawfully desired, and lawfully Attain'd by noble aspirants.

Mem. To such
I leave it; though born noble, my ambition

Is limited: I'd rather be an unit
Of an united and imperial 'Ten' 195

Than shine a lonely though a gilded cipher.—

Whom have we here? the wife of Foscari?

Enter MARINA, with a female Attendant.

Mar. What, no one?—I am wrong,
there still are two;

But they are senators.

Mem. Most noble lady,
Command us.

Mar. I command!—Alas! my life 200
Has been one long entreaty, and a vain one.

Mem. I understand thee, but I must not answer.

Mar. [fiercely]. True—none dare answer here save on the rack,

Or question save those—

Mem. [interrupting her]. High-born dame! bethink thee

Where thou now art.

Mar. Where I now am!—It was 205
My husband's father's palace.

Mem. The Duke's palace.

Mar. And his son's prison!—True, I have not forgot it;

And if there were no other nearer,
bitterer

Remembrances, would thank the illustrious Memmo

For pointing out the pleasures of the
place, 210

Mem. Be calm!

Mar. [looking up towards heaven]. I am; but oh, thou eternal God!

Canst thou continue so, with such a
world?

Mem. Thy husband yet may be absolved.

Mar. He is,
In heaven. I pray you, signor senator,

Speak not of that; you are a man of
office, 215

So is the Doge; he has a son at stake
Now, at this moment, and I have a husband,

Or had; they are there within, or were

at least
An hour since, face to face, as judge and culprit:

Will he condemn him?

Mem. I trust not.

Mar. But if He does not, there are those will sentence
both. 221

Mem. They can.
Mar. And with them power and will are one
 In wickedness:—my husband's lost!

Mem. Not so; Justice is judge in Venice.

Mar. If it were so, There now would be no Venice. But let it ²²⁵
 Live on, so the good die not, till the hour
 Of nature's summons; but 'the Ten's' is quicker,
 And we must wait on't. Ah! a voice of wail!

[A faint cry within.]

Sen. Hark!
Mem. 'Twas a cry of—
Mar. No, no; not my husband's—
 Not Foscari's.

Mem. The voice was—
Mar. Not his; no. ²³⁰
 He shriek! No; that should be his father's part,
 Not his—not his—he'll die in silence.

[A faint groan again within.]

Mem. What!
 Again?
Mar. His voice! it seem'd so: I will not Believe it. Should he shrink, I cannot
 cease

To love; but—no—no—no—it must have been ²³⁵
 A fearful pang, which wrung a groan
 from him.

Sen. And, feeling for thy husband's wrongs, wouldst thou Have him bear more than mortal pain
 in silence?

Mar. We all must bear our tortures.
 I have not
 Left barren the great house of Foscari, Though they sweep both the Doge and son from life; ²⁴¹

I have endured as much in giving life
 To those who will succeed them, as they can
 In leaving it: but mine were joyful pangs:
 And yet they wrung me till I could have shriek'd, ²⁴⁵
 But did not; for my hope was to bring forth Heroes, and would not welcome them with tears.

Mem. All's silent now.
Mar. Perhaps all's over; but I will not deem it: he hath nerved himself,
 And now defies them.

Enter an Officer hastily.

Mem. How now, friend, what seek you? ²⁵⁰
Offi. A leech. The prisoner has fainted.

[Exit Officer.]

Mem. Lady,
 'Twere better to retire.

Sen. [Offering to assist her.] I pray thee do so.

Mar. Off! I will tend him.

Mem. You! Remember, lady!
 Ingress is given to none within those
 chambers,
 Except 'the Ten,' and their familiars.

Mar. Well, I know that none who enter there return ²⁵⁶

As they have enter'd—many never; but They shall not balk my entrance.

Mem. Alas! this Is but to expose yourself to harsh repulse,
 And worse suspense.

Mar. Who shall oppose me?

Mem. They
 Whose duty 'tis to do so.

Mar. 'Tis their duty ²⁶¹
 To trample on all human feelings, all Ties which bind man to man, to emulate
 The fiends who will one day requite them
 in

Variety of torturing! Yet I'll pass. ²⁶⁵

Mem. It is impossible.

Mar. That shall be tried.
 Despair defies even despotism: there is That in my heart would make its way through hosts

With level'd spears; and think you a few jailors

Shall put me from my path? Give me, then, way; ²⁷⁰

This is the Doge's palace; I am wife
 Of the Duke's son, the innocent Duke's
 son,

And they shall hear this!

Mem. It will only serve
 More to exasperate his judges.

Mar. What
 Are judges who give way to anger?
 they ²⁷⁵

Who do so are assassins. Give me way.
 [Exit MARINA.]

Sen. Poor lady!

Mem. 'Tis mere desperation:
 she

Will not be admitted o'er the threshold.

Sen. And
 Even if she be so, cannot save her husband.

But see, the officer returns.

[The Officer passes over the stage with another person.]

Mem. I hardly ²⁸⁰
 Thought that 'the Ten' had even this touch of pity,
 Or would permit assistance to this sufferer.

Sen. Pity! Is't pity to recall to feeling
 The wretch too happy to escape to death
 By the compassionate trance, poor nature's last ²⁸⁵

Resource against the tyranny of pain?

Mem. I marvel they condemn him not at once.

Sen. That's not their policy: they'd have him live,

Because he fears not death; and banish him,

Because all earth, except his native land, ²⁹⁰

To him is one wide prison, and each breath

Of foreign air he draws seems a slow poison,

Consuming but not killing.

Mem. Circumstance Confirms his crimes, but he avows them not.

Sen. None, save the Letter, which he says was written, ²⁹⁵

Address'd to Milan's duke, in the full knowledge

That it would fall into the senate's hands,

And thus he should be re-conveyed to Venice.

Mem. But as a culprit.

Sen. Yes, but to his country; And that was all he sought,—so he avouches. ³⁰⁰

Mem. The accusation of the bribes was proved.

Sen. Not clearly, and the charge of homicide

Has been annull'd by the death-bed confession

Of Nicolas Erizzo, who slew the late Chief of 'the Ten.'

Mem. Then why not clear him?

Sen. That ³⁰⁵ They ought to answer; for it is well known

That Almoro Donato, as I said, Was slain by Erizzo for private vengeance.

Mem. There must be more in this strange process than

The apparent crimes of the accused disclose— ³¹⁰

But here come two of 'the Ten;' let us retire.

[Exeunt MEMMO and Senator.]

Enter LOREDANO and BARBARIGO.

Bar. [addressing LOR.]. That were too much: believe me, 'twas not meet

The trial should go further at this moment.

Lor. And so the Council must break up, and Justice

Pause in her full career, because a woman Breaks in on our deliberations?

Bar. No, ³¹⁶ That's not the cause; you saw the prisoner's state.

Lor. And had he not recover'd?

Bar. To relapse Upon the least renewal.

Lor. 'Twas not tried.

Bar. 'Tis vain to murmur; the majority ³²⁰

In council were against you.

Lor. Thanks to you, sir, And the old ducal dotard, who combined

The worthy voices which o'er-ruled my own.

Bar. I am a judge; but must confess that part

Of our stern duty, which prescribes the Question, ³²⁵

And bids us sit and see its sharp inflection,

Makes me wish— Lor. What?

Bar. That you would sometimes feel, As I do always.

Lor. Go to, you're a child, Infirm of feeling as of purpose, blown

About by every breath, shook by a sigh, ³³⁰

And melted by a tear—a precious judge For Venice! and a worthy statesman to

Be partner in my policy. Bar. He shed

No tears. Lor. He cried out twice.

Bar. A saint had done so, Even with the crown of glory in his eye, ³³⁵

At such inhuman artifice of pain As was forced on him; but he did not cry

For pity; not a word nor groan escaped him,

And those two shrieks were not in supplication,

But wrung from pangs, and follow'd by no prayers. ³⁴⁰

Lor. He mutter'd many times between his teeth,

But inarticulately.

Bar. That I heard not; You stood more near him.

Lor. I did so.

Bar. Methought, To my surprise too, you were touch'd with mercy, And were the first to call out for assistance ³⁴⁵

When he was failing.

Lor. I believed that swoon His last.

Bar. And have I not oft heard thee name

His and his father's death your nearest wish?

Lor. If he dies innocent, that is to say, With his guilt unavow'd, he'll be lamented. ³⁵⁰

THE TWO FOSCARI

[ACT I

Bar. What, wouldst thou slay his memory?
Lor. Wouldst thou have His state descend to his children, as it must,
 If he die unattainted?
Bar. War with them too?
Lor. With all their house, till theirs or mine are nothing.
Bar. And the deep agony of his pale wife,
 And the repress'd convulsion of the high
 And princely brow of his old father, which Broke forth in a slight shuddering, though rarely,
 Or in some clammy drops, soon wiped away
 In stern serenity; these moved you not?
 [Exit LOREDANO.
He's silent in his hate, as Foscari Was in his suffering; and the poor wretch moved me
 More by his silence than a thousand outcries
 Could have effected. 'Twas a dreadful sight
 When his distracted wife broke through into
 The hall of our tribunal, and beheld
 What we could scarcely look upon, long used
 To such sights. I must think no more of this,
 Lest I forget in this compassion for Our foes, their former injuries, and lose
 The hold of vengeance Loredano plans For him and me; but mine would be content
 With lesser retribution than he thirsts for, And I would mitigate his deeper hatred To milder thoughts; but for the present, Foscari
 Has a short hourly respite, granted at The instance of the elders of the Council, Moved doubtless by his wife's appearance in The hall, and his own sufferings.—Lo! they come:
 How feeble and forlorn! I cannot bear
 To look on them again in this extremity: I'll hence, and try to soften Loredano.
 [Exit BARBARIGO.

ACT II

SCENE I.—A Hall in the DOGE's palace.

The DOGE and a SENATOR.

Sen. Is it your pleasure to sign the report
 Now, or postpone it till to-morrow?

Doge. Now;
 I overlook'd it yesterday: it wants Merely the signature. Give me the pen—
 [The DOGE sits down and signs the paper. There, signor.
Sen. [looking at the paper]. You have forgot; it is not signed.
Doge. Not sign'd? Ah, I perceive my eyes begin
 To wax more weak with age. I did not see That I had dipp'd the pen without effect.
Sen. [dipping the pen into the ink, and placing the paper before the DOGE]. Your hand, too, shakes, my lord: allow me, thus—Doge. 'Tis done, I thank you.
Sen. Thus the act confirm'd
 By you and by 'the Ten' gives peace to Venice.
Doge. 'Tis long since she enjoyed it: may it be
 As long ere she resume her arms!
Sen. 'Tis almost Thirty-four years of nearly ceaseless warfare
 With the Turk, or the powers of Italy; The state had need of some repose.
Doge. No doubt:
 I found her Queen of Ocean, and I leave her Lady of Lombardy; it is a comfort That I have added to her diadem
 The gems of Brescia and Ravenna; Crema
 And Bergamo no less are hers; her realm By land has grown by thus much in my reign, While her sea-sway has not shrunk.
Sen. 'Tis most true,
 And merits all our country's gratitude.
Doge. Perhaps so.
Sen. Which should be made manifest.
Doge. I have not complain'd, sir.
Sen. My good lord, forgive me.
Doge. For what?
Sen. My heart bleeds for you.
Doge. For me, signor?
Sen. And for your—
Doge. Stop!
Sen. It must have way, my lord:
 I have too many duties towards you And all your house, for past and present kindness,
 Not to feel deeply for your son.
Doge. Was this
 In your commission?
Sen. What, my lord?
Doge. This prattle
 Of things you know not: but the treaty's sign'd;
 Return with it to them who sent you.

Sen. I Obey. I had in charge, too, from the Council
That you would fix an hour for their reunion.

Doge. Say, when they will—now, even at this moment,
If it so please them: I am the state's servant.

Sen. They would accord some time for your repose.

Doge. I have no repose, that is, none which shall cause
The loss of an hour's time unto the state. Let them meet when they will, I shall be found

Where I should be, and what I have been ever. [Exit SENATOR. The DOGE remains in silence.]

Enter an Attendant.

Att. Prince!

Doge. Say on.

Att. The illustrious lady Foscari Requests an audience.

Doge. Bid her enter. Poor Marina! [Exit Attendant. The DOGE remains in silence as before.]

Enter MARINA.

Mar. I have ventured, father, on Your privacy.

Doge. I have none from you, my child. Command my time, when not commanded by The state.

Mar. I wish'd to speak to you of him.

Doge. Your husband?

Mar. And your son.

Doge. Proceed, my daughter!

Mar. I had obtain'd permission from 'the Ten'
To attend my husband for a limited number Of hours.

Doge. You had so.

Mar. 'Tis revoked.

Doge. By whom?

Mar. 'The Ten.'—When we had reach'd 'the Bridge of Sighs,'
Which I prepared to pass with Foscari, The gloomy guardian of that passage first Demurr'd: a messenger was sent back to 'The Ten';—but as the court no longer sate,
And no permission had been given in writing,

I was thrust back, with the assurance that Until that high tribunal re-assembled
The dungeon walls must still divide us.

Doge. True, The form has been omitted in the haste
With which the court adjourn'd; and till it meets,

'Tis dubious.

Mar. Till it meets! and when it meets,
They'll torture him again; and he and I Must purchase by renewal of the rack
The interview of husband and of wife,
The holiest tie beneath the heavens!—
Oh God!

Dost thou see this?

Doge. Child—child—

Mar. [abruptly]. Call me not 'child'!

You soon will have no children—you deserve none—

You, who can talk thus calmly of a son
In circumstances which would call forth tears

Of blood from Spartans! Though these did not weep

Their boys who died in battle, is it written

That they beheld them perish piecemeal, nor

Stretch'd forth a hand to save them?

Doge. You behold me:

I cannot weep—I would I could; but if Each white hair on this head were a young life,

This ducal cap the diadem of earth,
This ducal ring with which I wed the waves

A talisman to still them—I'd give all For him.

Mar. With less he surely might be saved.

Doge. That answer only shows you know not Venice.

Alas! how should you? she knows not herself,

In all her mystery. Hear me—they who aim

At Foscari, aim no less at his father; The sire's destruction would not save the son;

They work by different means to the same end,

And that is—but they have not conquer'd yet.

Mar. But they have crush'd.

Doge. Nor crush'd as yet—I live.

Mar. And your son,—how long will he live?

Doge. I trust,

For all that yet is past, as many years
And happier than his father. The rash boy,

With womanish impatience to return,
Hath ruin'd all by that detected letter:

A high crime, which I neither can deny
Nor palliate, as parent or as Duke:

Had he but borne a little, little longer
His Candiotte exile, I had hopes—he has quench'd them—

He must return.

Mar. To exile?
Doge. I have said it.
Mar. And can I not go with him?
Doge. You well know
 This prayer of yours was twice denied
 before
 By the assembled 'Ten,' and hardly now
 Will be accorded to a third request, 105
 Since aggravated errors on the part Of your lord renders them still more austere.
Mar. Austere? Atrocious! The old
 human fiends,
 With one foot in the grave, with dim eyes,
 strange
 To tears save drops of dotage, with long white 110
 And scanty hairs, and shaking hands, and heads
 As palsied as their hearts are hard, they counsel,
 Cabal, and put men's lives out, as if life
 Were no more than the feelings long extinguish'd
 In their accursed bosoms.
Doge. You know not— 115
Mar. I do—I do—and so should you,
 methinks—
 That these are demons: could it be else
 that Men, who have been of women born and suckled—
 Who have loved, or talk'd at least of love—have given Their hands in sacred vows—have danced their babes 120
 Upon their knees, perhaps have mourn'd above them—
 In pain, in peril, or in death—who are,
 Or were at least in seeming, human,
 could
 Do as they have done by yours, and you yourself—
 You, who abet them?
Doge. I forgive this, for 125
 You know not what you say.
Mar. You know it well,
 And feel it nothing.
Doge. I have borne so much,
 That words have ceased to shake me.
Mar. Oh, no doubt!
 You have seen your son's blood flow,
 and your flesh shook not;
 And after that, what are a woman's
 words? 130
 No more than woman's tears, that they should shake you.
Doge. Woman, this clamorous grief of thine, I tell thee,
 Is no more in the balance weigh'd with that
 Which—but I pity thee, my poor
 Marina:
Mar. My husband, or I cast it
 from me; 135

Pity thy son! Thou pity!—'tis a word Strange to thy heart—how came it on thy lips?
Doge. I must bear these reproaches, though they wrong me.
 Couldst thou but read—
Mar. 'Tis not upon thy brow.
 Nor in thine eyes, nor in thine acts,— where then 140
 Should I behold this sympathy? or shall?
Doge (pointing downwards). There.
Mar. In the earth?
Doge. To which I am tending: when
 It lies upon this heart, far lightlier, though Loaded with marble, than the thoughts which press it
 Now, you will know me better.
Mar. Are you, then, 145
 Indeed, thus to be pitied?
Doge. Pitied! None Shall ever use that base word, with which
 men
 Cloak their soul's hoarded triumph, as a fit one
 To mingle with my name; that name
 shall be, 149
 As far as I have borne it, what it was When I received it.
Mar. But for the poor children Of him thou canst not, or thou wilt not
 save
 You were the last to bear it.
Doge. Would it were so!
 Better for him he never had been born;
 Better for me.—I have seen our house
 dishonour'd. 155
Mar. That's false! A truer, nobler, trustier heart,
 More loving, or more loyal, never beat Within a human breast. I would not change
 My exiled, persecuted, mangled husband,
 Oppress'd but not disgraced, crush'd,
 overwhelm'd, 160
 Alive, or dead, for prince or paladin
 In story or in fable, with a world
 To back his suit. Dishonour'd!—he dishonour'd!
 I tell thee, Doge, 'tis Venice is dishonour'd!
 His name shall be her foulest, worst reproach, 165
 For what he suffers, not for what he did.
 'Tis ye who are all traitors, tyrant!— ye!
 Did you but love your country like this
 victim
 Who totters back in chains to tortures,
 and Submits to all things rather than to exile, 170
 You'd fling yourselves before him, and implore
 His grace for your enormous guilt.

Doge. He was Indeed all you have said. I better bore
The deaths of the two sons Heaven took
from me,
Than Jacopo's disgrace.

Mar. That word again? 175

Doge. Has he not been condemn'd?

Mar. Is none but guilt so?

Doge. Time may restore his memory—
I would hope so.

He was my pride, my—but 'tis useless
now—

I am not given to tears, but wept for joy
When he was born: those drops were ominous. 180

Mar. I say he's innocent! And were he not so,
Is our own blood and kin to shrink from us
In fatal moments?

Doge. I shrank not from him:
But I have other duties than a father's;
The state would not dispense me from those duties; 185

Twice I demanded it, but was refused:
They must then be fulfill'd.

Enter an Attendant.

Att. A message from 'The Ten.'

Doge. Who bears it?

Att. Noble Loredano.

Doge. He!—but admit him.

[Exit Attendant.

Mar. Must I then retire?

Doge. Perhaps it is not requisite, if
this 190

Concerns your husband, and if not—

Well, signor,
Your pleasure? [To LOREDANO entering.

Lor. I bear that of 'the Ten.'

Doge. They
Have chosen well their envoy.

Lor. 'Tis their choice
Which leads me here.

Doge. It does their wisdom honour,
And no less to their courtesy.—Proceed.

Lor. We have decided.

Doge. We?

Lor. 'The Ten' in council. 196

Doge. What! have they met again, and met without

Apprising me?

Lor. They wish'd to spare your feelings,

No less than age.

Doge. That's new—when spared they either?

I thank them, notwithstanding.

Lor. You know well
That they have power to act at their discretion, 201

With or without the presence of the Doge.

Doge. 'Tis some years since I learn'd
this, long before

I became Doge, or dream'd of such advancement.

You need not school me, signor; I sate in That council when you were a young patrician. 206

Lor. True, in my father's time; I have heard him and

The admiral, his brother, say as much.
Your highness may remember them; they
both

Died suddenly.

Doge. And if they did so, better
So die than live on lingeringly in pain.

Lor. No doubt: yet most men like to live their days out. 212

Doge. And did not they?

Lor. The grave knows best: they died,
As I said, suddenly.

Doge. Is that so strange,
That you repeat the word emphatically?

Lor. So far from strange, that never was there death 216

In my mind half so natural as theirs.

Think you not so?

Doge. What should I think of mortals?

Lor. That they have mortal foes.

Doge. I understand you;

Your sires were mine, and you are heir in
all things. 220

Lor. You best know if I should be so.

Doge. I do.

Your fathers were my foes, and I have
heard

Foul rumours were abroad; I have also
read 223

Their epitaph, attributing their deaths
To poison. 'Tis perhaps as true as most Inscriptions upon tombs, and yet no less
A fable.

Lor. Who dares say so?

Doge. I!—'Tis true

Your fathers were mine enemies, as bitter
As their son e'er can be, and I no less

Was theirs; but I was openly their foe:
I never work'd by plot in council, nor

Cabal in commonwealth, nor secret
means

Of practice against life by steel or drug.

The proof is, your existence.

Lor. I fear not.

Doge. You have no cause, being what I am; but were I 235

That you would have me thought, you long ere now

Were past the sense of fear. Hate on; I care not.

Lor. I never yet knew that a noble's life
In Venice had to dread a Doge's frown,
That is, by open means.

Doge. But I, good signor, 240 Am, or at least was, more than a mere
duke,

In blood, in mind, in means; and that they know

THE TWO FOSCARI

[ACT II]

Who dreaded to elect me, and have since Striven all they dare to weigh me down:
be sure,

Before or since that period, had I held
you

At so much price as to require your absence,

A word of mine had set such spirits to
work

As would have made you nothing. But in all things

I have observed the strictest reverence;
Not for the laws alone, for those you have strain'd

(I do not speak of you but as a single Voice of the many) somewhat beyond
what

I could enforce for my authority,
Were I disposed to brawl; but, as I said,
I have observed with veneration, like

A priest's for the high altar, even unto
The sacrifice of my own blood and quiet,
Safety, and all save honour, the decrees,
The health, the pride, and welfare of the
state.

And now, sir, to your business.

Lor. 'Tis decreed,
That, without further repetition of
The Question, or continuance of the trial,
Which only tends to show how stubborn guilt is

('The Ten,' dispensing with the stricter
law

Which still prescribes the Question till a full

Confession, and the prisoner partly having Avow'd his crime in not denying that The letter to the Duke of Milan's his),
James Foscari return to banishment,
And sail in the same galley which con-vey'd him.

Mar. Thank God! At least they will not drag him more

Before that horrible tribunal. Would he But think so, to my mind the happiest
doom,

Not he alone, but all who dwell here,
could

Desire, were to escape from such a land.

Doge. That is not a Venetian thought,
my daughter.

Mar. No, 'twas too human. May I share his exile?

Lor. Of this 'the Ten' said nothing.

Mar. So I thought!

That were too human, also. But it was not Inhibited?

Lor. It was not named.

Mar. [to the Doge]. Then, father, Surely you can obtain or grant me thus
much;

[To LOREDANO.
And you, sir, not oppose my prayer to be Permitted to accompany my husband.

Doge. I will endeavour.

Mar.

And you, signor?

Lor.

Lady!

'Tis not for me to anticipate the pleasure
Of the tribunal.

Mar.

Pleasure! what a word

To use for the decrees of ——

Doge.

Daughter, know you

In what a presence you pronounce these things?

Mar.

A prince's and his subject's.

Lor.

Subject!

Mar.

Oh!

It galls you:—well, you are his equal, as You think; but that you are not, nor
would be,

Were he a peasant:—well, then, you're a
prince,

A princely noble; and what then am I?

Lor.

The offspring of a noble house.

Mar.

And wedded

To one as noble. What, or whose, then,
is

The presence that should silence my free thoughts?

Lor.

The presence of your husband's judges.

Doge.

And

The deference due even to the lightest
word

That falls from those who rule in Venice.

Mar.

Keep

Those maxims for your mass of scared mechanics,

Your merchants, your Dalmatian and Greek slaves,

Your tributaries, your dumb citizens,
And mask'd nobility, your sbirri, and

Your spies, your galley and your other
slaves,

To whom your midnight carryings off and drownings,

Your dungeons next the palace roofs, or under

The water's level; your mysterious meetings,

And unknown dooms, and sudden execu-
tions,

Your 'Bridge of Sighs,' your strangling chamber, and

Your torturing instruments, have made ye
seem

The beings of another and worse world!
Keep such for them: I fear ye not. I know
ye;

Have known and proved your worst, in the infernal

Process of my poor husband! Treat me as Ye treated him:—you did so, in so dealing With him. Then what have I to fear from
you,

Even if I were of fearful nature, which I trust I am not?

Doge.

You hear, she speaks wildly.

Mar.

Not wisely, yet not wildly.

Lor. Lady! words 319
Utter'd within these walls I bear no further Than to the threshold, saving such as pass Between the Duke and me on the state's service.

Doge! have you aught in answer?

Doge. Something from
The Doge; it may be also from a parent.

Lor. My mission here is to the Doge.

Doge. Then say 325
The Doge will choose his own ambassador,
Or state in person what is meet; and for
The father——

Lor. I remember mine.—Farewell!
I kiss the hands of the illustrious lady,
And bow me to the Duke.

[Exit LOREDANO.]

Mar. Are you content? 330
Doge. I am what you behold.

Mar. And that's a mystery.

Doge. All things are so to mortals;
who can read them

Save he who made? or, if they can, the few
And gifted spirits, who have studied long That loathsome volume—man, and pored
upon 335

Those black and bloody leaves, his heart
and brain,

But learn a magic which recoils upon
The adept who pursues it: all the sins
We find in others, nature made our own;
All our advantages are those of fortune;
Birth, wealth, health, beauty, are her accidents, 341

And when we cry out against Fate, 'twere
well

We should remember Fortune can take nought

Save what she gave—the rest was naked-
ness,

And lusts, and appetites, and vanities,
The universal heritage, to battle 346

With as we may, and least in humblest
stations,

Where hunger swallows all in one low
want,

And the original ordinance, that man Must sweat for his poor pittance, keeps all
passions 350

Aloof, save fear of famine! All is low,
And false, and hollow—clay from first to
last,

The prince's urn no less than potter's vessel.
Our fame is in men's breath, our lives upon Less than their breath; our durance upon
days, 355

Our days on seasons; our whole being on Something which is not us!—So, we are
slaves,

The greatest as the meanest—nothing rests
Upon our will; the will itself no less

Depends upon a straw than on a storm;
And when we think we lead, we are most
led, 361

And still towards death, a thing which comes as much

Without our act or choice as birth, so that Methinks we must have sinn'd in some old world, 364

And this is hell: the best is, that it is not Eternal.

Mar. These are things we cannot judge
On earth.

Doge. And how then shall we judge
each other,

Who are all earth, and I, who am call'd
upon

To judge my son? I have administer'd
My country faithfully—victoriously—

I dare them to the proof, the chart of what She was and is: my reign has doubled
realms; 372

And, in reward, the gratitude of Venice
Has left, or is about to leave, me single.

Mar. And Foscari? I do not think of such things, 375

So I be left with him.

Doge. You shall be so;
Thus much they cannot well deny.

Mar. And if
They should, I will fly with him.

Doge. That can ne'er be.
And whither would you fly?

Mar. I know not, reckon not—
To Syria, Egypt, to the Ottoman— 380

Anywhere, where we might respire
unfetter'd,

And live nor girt by spies, nor liable
To edicts of inquisitors of state.

Doge. What, wouldst thou have a renegade for husband,

And turn him into traitor?

Mar. He is none! 385
The country is the traitress, which thrusts
forth

Her best and bravest from her. Tyranny Is far the worst of treasons. Dost thou deem

None rebels except subjects? The prince
who

Neglects or violates his trust is more
A brigand than the robber-chief.

Doge. I cannot 391
Charge me with such a breach of faith.

Mar. No; thou
Observe'st, obey'st such laws as make old Draco's

A code of mercy by comparison.

Doge. I found the law; I did not make
it. Were I 395

A subject, still I might find parts and portions

Fit for amendment; but as prince, I never Would change, for the sake of my house, the charter

Left by our fathers.

Mar. Did they make it for
The ruin of their children?

Doge. Under such laws, Venice
Has risen to what she is—a state to rival
In deeds, and days, and sway, and, let me add,
In glory (for we have had Roman spirits Amongst us), all that history has bequeath'd
Of Rome and Carthage in their best times,
when
The people sway'd by senates.

Mar. Rather say,
Groom'd under the stern oligarchs.

Doge. Perhaps so;
But yet subdued the world: in such a state
An individual, be he richest of Such rank as is permitted, or the meanest, Without a name, is alike nothing, when
The policy, irrevocably tending To one great end, must be maintain'd in vigour.

Mar. This means that you are more a Doge than father.

Doge. It means, I am more citizen than either.

If we had not for many centuries
Had thousands of such citizens, and shall,
I trust, have still such, Venice were no city.

Mar. Accused be the city where the laws
Would stifle nature's!

Doge. Had I as many sons
As I have years, I would have given them
all,

Not without feeling, but I would have given them

To the state's service, to fulfil her wishes
On the flood, in the field, or, if it must be,
As it, alas! has been, to ostracism,
Exile, or chains, or whatsoever worse
She might decree.

Mar. And this is patriotism?
To me it seems the worst barbarity.

Let me seek out my husband: the sage 'Ten,'
With all its jealousy, will hardly war
So far with a weak woman as deny me
A moment's access to his dungeon.

Doge. I'll
So far take on myself, as order that
You may be admitted.

Mar. And what shall I say
To Foscari from his father?

Doge. That he obey
The laws.

Mar. And nothing more? Will you not see him
Ere he depart? It may be the last time.

Doge. The last!—my boy!—the last time I shall see

My last of children! Tell him I will come.
[Exeunt.]

Which never echo'd but to sorrow's
sounds,
The sigh of long imprisonment, the step Of feet on which the iron clank'd, the
groan

Of death, the imprecation of despair!
And yet for this I have return'd to Venice,
With some faint hope, 'tis true, that time,
which wears

The marble down, had worn away the hate
Of men's hearts; but I knew them not, and
here

Must I consume my own, which never beat For Venice but with such a yearning as The dove has for her distant nest, when wheeling

High in the air on her return to greet Her callow brood. What letters are these

[Approaching the wall.
Are scrawl'd along the inexorable wall?
Will the gleam let me trace them? Ah! the names

Of my sad predecessors in this place,
The dates of their despair, the brief words
of

A grief too great for many. This stone
page

Holds like an epitaph their history;
And the poor captive's tale is graven on His dungeon barrier, like the lover's record

Upon the bark of some tall tree, which bears

His own and his beloved's name. Alas!
I recognise some names familiar to me,
And blighted like to mine, which I will add,
Fittest for such a chronicle as this,

Which only can be read, as writ, by wretches. [He engraves his name.]

Enter a Familiar of 'the Ten.'

Fam. I bring you food.

Jac. Fos. I pray you set it down;
I am past hunger: but my lips are parch'd—
The water!

Fam. There.

Jac. Fos. [after drinking]. I thank you:
I am better.

Fam. I am commanded to inform you
that
Your further trial is postponed.

Jac. Fos. Till when?

Fam. I know not.—It is also in my orders

That your illustrious lady be admitted.
Jac. Fos. Ah! they relent, then—I had ceased to hope it:

'Twas time.

Enter MARINA.

Mar. My best beloved!

Jac. Fos. [embracing her]. My true
wife,

And only friend! What happiness!

ACT III

SCENE I.—The Prison of JACOPO FOSCARI.

Jac. Fos. [solus]. No light, save yon faint gleam which shows me walls

Mar. We'll part
No more.

Jac. Fos. How! wouldst thou share a dungeon?

Mar. Ay, 40
The rack, the grave, all—anything with thee,
But the tomb last of all, for there we shall Be ignorant of each other, yet I will Share that—all things except new separa-
tion;

It is too much to have survived the first.
How dost thou? How are those worn limbs? Alas! 46

Why do I ask? Thy paleness—

Jac. Fos. 'Tis the joy
Of seeing thee again so soon, and so Without expectancy, has sent the blood Back to my heart, and left my cheeks like
thine, 50

For thou art pale too, my Marina!

Mar. 'Tis
The gloom of this eternal cell, which never Knew sunbeam, and the sallow sullen glare
Of the familiar's torch, which seems akin
To darkness more than light, by lending to The dungeon vapours its bituminous
smoke, 56

Which cloud whate'er we gaze on, even thine eyes—

No, not thine eyes—they sparkle—how they sparkle!

Jac. Fos. And thine!—but I am blinded by the torch.

Mar. As I had been without it.
Couldst thou see here? 60

Jac. Fos. Nothing at first; but use and time had taught me

Familiarity with what was darkness;
And the grey twilight of such glimmerings as Glide through the crevices made by the winds 64

Was kinder to mine eyes than the full sun,
When gorgeously o'ergilding any towers
Save those of Venice: but a moment ere Thou camest hither I was busy writing.

Mar. What?

Jac. Fos. My name: look, 'tis there—recorded next 69

The name of him who here preceded me,
If dungeon dates say true.

Mar. And what of him?

Jac. Fos. These walls are silent of men's ends; they only Seem to hint shrewdly of them. Such stern walls

Were never piled on high save o'er the
dead,

Or those who soon must be so.—What of
him? 75

Thou askest.—What of me? may soon be
ask'd,

With the like answer—doubt and dreadful surmise—

Unless thou tell'st my tale.

Mar. I speak of thee!

Jac. Fos. And wherefore not? All then shall speak of me:

The tyranny of silence is not lasting, 80
And, though events be hidden, just men's groans

Will burst all cerement, even a living
grave's!

I do not doubt my memory, but my life;
And neither do I fear.

Mar. Thy life is safe. 84

Jac. Fos. And liberty?

Mar. The mind should make its own.

Jac. Fos. That has a noble sound; but
'tis a sound,

A music most impressive, but too
transient:

The mind is much, but is not all. The
mind

Hath nerved me to endure the risk of
death, 89

And torture positive, far worse than death
(If death be a deep sleep), without a groan, Or with a cry which rather shamed my judges

Than me; but 'tis not all, for there are
things

More woful—such as this small dungeon,
where

I may breathe many years.

Mar. Alas! and this 95
Small dungeon is all that belongs to thee
Of this wide realm, of which thy sire is prince.

Jac. Fos. That thought would scarcely aid me to endure it.

My doom is common; many are in dungeons,

But none like mine, so near their father's
palace; 100

But then my heart is sometimes high, and
hope

Will stream along those moted rays of
light

Peopled with dusty atoms, which afford
Our only day: for, save the gaoler's torch,
And a strange firefly, which was quickly
caught 105

Last night in yon enormous spider's net,
I ne'er saw aught here like a ray. Alas!

I know if mind may bear us up, or no,
For I have such, and shown it before men;

It sinks in solitude: my soul is social. 110

Mar. I will be with thee.

Jac. Fos. Ah! if it were so!
But that they never granted—nor will grant,
And I shall be alone: no men; no books—

Those lying likenesses of lying men,
I ask'd for even those outlines of their
kind, 115

Which they term annals, history, what you
will,

Which men bequeath as portraits, and they were

Refused me,—so these walls have been my study,

More faithful pictures of Venetian story,
With all their blank, or dismal stains, than is

The Hall not far from hence, which bears
on high 121

Hundreds of doges, and their deeds and dates.

Mar. I come to tell thee the result of their

Last council on thy doom.

Jac. Fos. I know it—look!

[He points to his limbs, as referring to the question which he had undergone.

Mar. No—no—no more of that: even they relent 125

From that atrocity.

Jac. Fos. What then?

Mar. That you

Return to Candia.

Jac. Fos. Then my last hope's gone.

I could endure my dungeon, for 'twas
Venice;

I could support the torture, there was something 129

In my native air that buoy'd my spirits up
Like a ship on the ocean toss'd by storms,

But proudly still bestriding the high waves,
And holding on its course; but there,
afar,

In that accursed isle of slaves and captives,
And unbelievers, like a stranded wreck,

My very soul seem'd mouldering in my bosom, 136

And piecemeal I shall perish, if remanded.

Mar. And here?

Jac. Fos. At once—by better means,
as briefer.

What! would they even deny me my sire's sepulchre,

As well as home and heritage?

Mar. My husband! 140

I have sued to accompany thee hence,
And not so hopelessly. This love of thine

For an ungrateful and tyrannic soil
Is passion, and not patriotism; for me,

So I could see thee with a quiet aspect,
And the sweet freedom of the earth and
air, 146

I would not cavil about climes or regions.
This crowd of palaces and prisons is not

A paradise; its first inhabitants
Were wretched exiles.

Jac. Fos. Well I know how wretched!

Mar. And yet you see how, from their
banishment 151

Before the Tartar into these salt isles,
Their antique energy of mind, all that

Remain'd of Rome for their inheritance,
Created by degrees an ocean Rome; 155

And shall an evil, which so often leads
To good, depress thee thus?

Jac. Fos. Had I gone forth

From my own land, like the old patriarchs, seeking

Another region, with their flocks and
herds;

Had I been cast out like the Jews from Zion, 160

Or like our fathers, driven by Attila
From fertile Italy, to barren islets,

I would have given some tears to my late
country,

And many thoughts; but afterwards
address'd

Myself, with those about me, to create A new home and fresh state; perhaps I
could 166

Have borne this—though I know not.

Mar. Wherefore not?
It was the lot of millions, and must be

The fate of myriads more.

Jac. Fos. Ay—we but hear 169
Of the survivors' toil in their new lands,

Their numbers and success; but who can
number

The hearts which broke in silence at that parting,

Or after their departure; of that malady
Which calls up green and native fields to
view 174

From the rough deep, with such identity
To the poor exile's fever'd eye, that he Can scarcely be restrained from treading

them?

That melody, which out of tones and tunes
Collects such pasture for the longing

sorrow 179

Of the sad mountaineer, when far away
From his snow canopy of cliffs and clouds,

That he feeds on the sweet, but poisonous
thought,

And dies. You call this weakness! It is
strength,

I say,—the parent of all honest feeling.
He who loves not his country, can love
nothing. 185

Mar. Obey her, then: 'tis she that puts thee forth.

Jac. Fos. Ay, there it is; 'tis like a mother's curse

Upon my soul—the mark is set upon me.
The exiles you speak of went forth by
nations,

Their hands upheld each other by the way,
Their tents were pitch'd together—I'm
alone. 191

Mar. You shall be so no more—I will go with thee.

Jac. Fos. My best Marina!—and our children?

Mar. They,

I fear, by the prevention of the state's Abhorrent policy (which holds all ties

As threads, which may be broken at her
pleasure), 196

Will not be suffer'd to proceed with us.

Jac. Fos. And canst thou leave them?

Mar. Yes. With many a pang.
But—I can leave them, children as they are,
To teach you to be less a child. From this Learn you to sway your feelings, when exacted 201

By duties paramount; and 'tis our first
On earth to bear.

Jac. Fos. Have I not borne?

Mar. Too much
From tyrannous injustice, and enough
To teach you not to shrink now from a lot,
Which, as compared with what you have undergone 206
Of late, is mercy.

Jac. Fos. Ah! you never yet
Were far away from Venice, never saw Her beautiful towers in the receding
distance,

While every furrow of the vessel's track
Seem'd ploughing deep into your heart;
you never 211

Saw day go down upon your native spires
So calmly with its gold and crimson glory,
And after dreaming a disturbed vision
Of them and theirs, awoke and found them
not. 215

Mar. I will divide this with you. Let us think
Of our departure from this much-loved
city

(Since you must love it, as it seems), and
this

Chamber of state, her gratitude allots you.
Our children will be cared for by the Doge,
And by my uncles: we must sail ere night.

Jac. Fos. That's sudden. Shall I not behold my father? 222

Mar. You will.

Jac. Fos. Where?

Mar. Here, or in the ducal chamber—
He said not which. I would that you could
bear

Your exile as he bears it.

Jac. Fos. Blame him not. 225
I sometimes murmur for a moment; but He could not now act otherwise. A show
Of feeling or compassion on his part
Would have but drawn upon his aged head Suspicion from 'the Ten,' and upon mine
Accumulated ills.

Mar. Accumulated!
What pangs are those they have spared
you?

Jac. Fos. That of leaving
Venice without beholding him or you,
Which might have been forbidden now,
as 'twas

Upon my former exile.

Mar. That is true, 235
And thus far I am also the state's debtor,
And shall be more so when I see us both Floating on the free waves—away—
away—

Be it to the earth's end, from this abhorr'd, Unjust, and—

Jac. Fos. Curse it not. If I am silent,
Who dares accuse my country?

Mar. Men and angels!
The blood of myriads reeking up to
heaven, 242

The groans of slaves in chains, and men in
dungeons,

Mothers, and wives, and sons, and sires,
and subjects,
Held in the bondage of ten bald-heads;
and 245

Though last, not least, thy silence! Couldst thou say

Aught in its favour, who would praise like
thee?

Jac. Fos. Let us address us then, since so it must be,

To our departure. Who comes here?

Enter LOREDANO, attended by Familiars.

Lor. [to the Familiars]. Retire,
But leave the torch.

[Exeunt the two Familiars.]

Jac. Fos. Most welcome, noble signor.
I did not deem this poor place could have drawn 251
Such presence hither.

Lor. 'Tis not the first time
I have visited these places.

Mar. Nor would be The last, were all men's merits well rewarded. 254

Came you here to insult us, or remain
As spy upon us, or as hostage for us?

Lor. Neither are of my office, noble
lady!

I am sent hither to your husband, to Announce 'the Ten's' decree.

Mar. That tenderness
Has been anticipated: it is known. 260

Lor. As how?

Mar. I have inform'd him, not so gently,

Doubtless, as your nice feelings would prescribe,

The indulgence of your colleagues; but he knew it.

If you come for our thanks, take them, and
hence!

The dungeon gloom is deep enough without you, 265

And full of reptiles, not less loathsome, though

Their sting is honester.

Jac. Fos. I pray you, calm you:
What can avail such words?

Mar. To let him know
That he is known.

Lor. Let the fair dame preserve
Her sex's privilege.

Mar. I have some sons, sir, 270
Will one day thank you better.

Lor. You do well
To nurse them wisely. Foscari—you
know
Your sentence, then?
Jac. Fos. Return to Candia?
Lor. True—
For life.
Jac. Fos. Not long.
Lor. I said—for life.
Jac. Fos. And I
Repeat—not long.
Lor. A year's imprisonment 275
In Canea—afterwards the freedom of The whole isle.
Jac. Fos. Both the same to me: the after Freedom as is the first imprisonment.
Is't true my wife accompanies me?
Lor. Yes,
If she so wills it.
Mar. Who obtain'd that justice?
Lor. One who wars not with women.
Mar. But oppresses
Men: howsoever let him have my thanks
For the only boon I would have ask'd or taken
From him or such as he is.
Lor. He receives them
As they are offer'd.
Mar. May they thrive with him 285
So much!—no more.
Jac. Fos. Is this, sir, your whole
mission?
Because we have brief time for prepara-
tion,
And you perceive your presence doth disquiet
This lady, of a house noble as yours.
Mar. Nobler!
Lor. How nobler?
Mar. As more generous! 290
We say the 'generous steed' to express the purity
Of his high blood. Thus much I've learnt, although Venetian (who see few steeds save of bronze),
From those Venetians who have skimm'd
the coasts
Of Egypt and her neighbour Araby: 295
And why not say as soon the 'generous
man'?

If race be aught, it is in qualities
More than in years; and mine, which is as old
As yours, is better in its product, nay—Look not so stern—but get you back, and pore 300
Upon your genealogic tree's most green
Of leaves and most mature of fruits, and
there
Blush to find ancestors, who would have blush'd
For such a son—thou cold inveterate
hater!

Jac. Fos. Again, Marina!
Mar. Again! still, Marina.
See you not, he comes here to glut his hate
With a last look upon our misery?
Let him partake it!
Jac. Fos. That were difficult.
Mar. Nothing more easy. He partakes it now—
Ay, he may veil beneath a marble brow
And sneering lip the pang, but he partakes
it. 311
A few brief words of truth shame the devil's servants
No less than master; I have probed his soul
A moment, as the eternal fire, ere long,
Will reach it always. See how he shrinks
from me! 315
With death, and chains, and exile in his
hand,
To scatter o'er his kind as he thinks fit;
They are his weapons, not his armour, for I have pierced him to the core of his cold
heart. 319
I care not for his frowns! We can but die,
And he but live, for him the very worst
Of destinies: each day secures him more
His tempter's.
Jac. Fos. This is mere insanity.
Mar. It may be so; and who hath made us mad?
Lor. Let her go on; it irks not me.
Mar. That's false! 325
You came here to enjoy a heartless triumph
Of cold looks upon manifold griefs! You
came
To be sued to in vain—to mark our tears,
And hoard our groans—to gaze upon the
wreck
Which you have made a prince's son—my husband; 330
In short, to trample on the fallen—an office
The hangman shrinks from, as all men
from him!
How have you sped? We are wretched, signor, as Your plots could make, and vengeance could desire us,
And how feel you?
Lor. As rocks.
Mar. By thunder blasted: 335
They feel not, but no less are shiver'd.
Come,
Foscari; now let us go, and leave this felon,
The sole fit habitant of such a cell,
Which he has peopled often, but ne'er fitly
Till he himself shall brood in it alone. 340

Enter the DOGE.

Jac. Fos. My father!
Doge [embracing him]. Jacopo! my son—my son!
Jac. Fos. My father still! How long it is since I

Have heard thee name my name—our name!

Doge.

My boy!

Couldst thou but know—

Jac. Fos. I rarely, sir, have murmur'd.

Doge. I feel too much thou hast not.

Mar. Doge, look there! 345

[She points to LOREDANO.]

Doge. I see the man—what mean'st thou?

Mar.

Caution!

Lor.

Being

The virtue which this noble lady most
May practise, she doth well to recommend it.

Mar. Wretch! 'tis no virtue, but the policy

Of those who fain must deal perforce with vice; 350

As such I recommend it, as I would
To one whose foot was on an adder's path.

Doge. Daughter, it is superfluous; I have long Known Loredano.

Lor. You may know him better.

Mar. Yes: worse he could not.

Jac. Fos. Father, let not these 355
Our parting hours be lost in listening to Reproaches, which boot nothing. Is it—is it,

Indeed, our last of meetings?

Doge. You behold

These white hairs!

Jac. Fos. And I feel, besides, that mine

Will never be so white. Embrace me, father! 360

I loved you ever—never more than now.
Look to my children—to your last child's children:

Let them be all to you which he was once,
And never be to you what I am now.
May I not see them also?

Mar. No—not here. 365

Jac. Fos. They might behold their parent anywhere.

Mar. I would that they beheld their father in

A place which would not mingle fear with love,

To freeze their young blood in its natural current.

They have fed well, slept soft, and knew not that 370

Their sire was a mere hunted outlaw.

Well,

I know his fate may one day be their heritage;

But let it only be their heritage,
And not their present fee. Their senses, though

Alive to love, are yet awake to terror;
And these vile damps, too, and yon thick

green wave 376

Which floats above the place where we now stand—

A cell so far below the water's level,
Sending its pestilence through every crevice,

Might strike them: this is not their atmosphere, 380

However you—and you—and most of all,
As worthiest—you, sir, noble Loredano!
May breathe it without prejudice.

Jac. Fos.

I have not

Reflected upon this, but acquiesce.
I shall depart, then, without meeting them? 385

Doge. Not so: they shall await you in my chamber.

Jac. Fos. And must I leave them—all?

Lor. You must.

Jac. Fos. Not one?

Lor. They are the state's.

Mar. I thought they had been mine.

Lor. They are, in all maternal things.

Mar. That is

In all things painful. If they're sick, they will 390

Be left to me to tend them; should they die,
To me to bury and to mourn; but if

They live, they'll make you soldiers, senators,

Slaves, exiles—what you will; or if they are Females with portions, brides and bribes

for nobles! 395

Behold the state's care for its sons and mothers!

Lor. The hour approaches, and the wind is fair.

Jac. Fos. How know you that here, where the genial wind

Ne'er blows in all its blustering freedom? 'Twas so 400

Lor. When I came here. The galley floats within

A bow-shot of the 'Riva di Schiavoni.' Jac. Fos. Father! I pray you to precede me, and Prepare my children to behold their father. Doge. Be firm, my son!

Jac. Fos. I will do my endeavour.

Mar. Farewell! at least to this detested dungeon, 405

And him to whose good offices you owe
In part your past imprisonment.

Lor. And present

Liberation.

Doge. He speaks truth.

Jac. Fos. No doubt! but 'tis
Exchange of chains for heavier chains I owe him.

He knows this, or he had not sought to change them. 410

But I reproach not.

Lor. The time narrows, signor.

Jac. Fos. Alas! I little thought so lingeringly

To leave abodes like this: but when I feel
That every step I take, even from this cell,
Is one away from Venice, I look back 415
Even on these dull damp walls, and—

Doge. Boy! no tears.

Mar. Let them flow on: he wept not on the rack

To shame him, and they cannot shame him now.

They will relieve his heart—that too kind
heart—

And I will find an hour to wipe away 420
Those tears, or add my own. I could weep
now,

But would not gratify yon wretch so far.
Let us proceed. Doge, lead the way.

Lor. [to the Familiar]. The torch, there!

Mar. Yes, light us on, as to a funeral
pyre,

With Loredano mourning like an heir.

Doge. My son, you are feeble; take this hand.

Jac. Fos. Alas! 426

Must youth support itself on age, and I
Who ought to be the prop of yours?

Lor. Take mine.

Mar. Touch it not, Foscari; 'twill sting you. Signor,

Stand off! be sure, that if a grasp of yours
Would raise us from the gulf wherein we are plunged, 431

No hand of ours would stretch itself to meet it.

Come, Foscari, take the hand the altar
gave you;

It could not save, but will support you ever. [Exeunt.]

ACT IV

SCENE I.—A Hall in the Ducal Palace.

Enter LOREDANO and BARBARIGO.

Bar. And have you confidence in such a project?

Lor. I have.

Bar. 'Tis hard upon his years.

Lor. Say rather

Kind to relieve him from the cares of state.

Bar. 'Twill break his heart.

Lor. Age has no heart to break.

He has seen his son's half broken, and,
except 5

A start of feeling in his dungeon, never Swerved.

Bar. In his countenance, I grant you,
never;

But I have seen him sometimes in a calm
So desolate, that the most clamorous grief Had nought to envy him within. Where is
he? 10

Lor. In his own portion of the palace,
with

His son, and the whole race of Foscari.

Bar. Bidding farewell.

Lor. A last. As soon he shall Bid to his dukedom.

Bar. When embarks the son?

Lor. Forthwith—when this long leave is taken. 'Tis 15

Time to admonish them again.

Bar. Forbear;

Retrench not from their moments.

Lor. Not I, now

We have higher business for our own.
This day

Shall be the last of the old Doge's reign,
As the first of his son's last banishment,
And that is vengeance.

Bar. In my mind, too deep. 21

Lor. 'Tis moderate—not even life for life, the rule

Denounced of retribution from all time;
They owe me still my father's and my uncle's.

Bar. Did not the Doge deny this strongly?

Lor. Doubtless. 25

Bar. And did not this shake your suspicion?

Lor. No.

Bar. But if this deposition should take
place

By our united influence in the Council,
It must be done with all the deference
Due to his years, his station, and his deeds.

Lor. As much of ceremony as you will,
So that the thing be done. You may, for aught

I care, depute the Council on their knees
(Like Barbarossa to the Pope), to beg him
To have the courtesy to abdicate. 35

Bar. What if he will not?

Lor. We'll elect another,
And make him null.

Bar. But will the laws uphold us?

Lor. What laws?—'The Ten' are laws; and if they were not,
I will be legislator in this business.

Bar. At your own peril?

Lor. There is none, I tell you, 40
Our powers are such.

Bar. But he has twice already Solicited permission to retire,
And twice it was refused.

Lor. The better reason
To grant it the third time.

Bar. Unask'd?

Lor. It shows

The impression of his former instances:
If they were from his heart, he may be thankful; 46

If not, 'twill punish his hypocrisy.

Come, they are met by this time; let us
join them,

And be thou fix'd in purpose for this once.
I have prepared such arguments as will

not 50

Fail to move them, and to remove him:

since

Their thoughts, their objects, have been sounded, do not

You, with your wonted scruples, teach us
pause,

And all will prosper.

Bar. Could I but be certain 54
This is no prelude to such persecution
Of the sire as has fallen upon the son,
I would support you.

Lor. He is safe, I tell you;
His fourscore years and five may linger on
As long as he can drag them: 'tis his throne Alone is aim'd at.

Bar. But discarded princes 60
Are seldom long of life.

Lor. And men of eighty More seldom still.

Bar. And why not wait these few years?
Lor. Because we have waited long enough, and he Lived longer than enough. Hence! in to council!

[Exeunt LOREDANO and BARBARIGO.]

Enter MEMMO and a Senator.

Sen. A summons to 'the Ten'! why
so?

Mem. 'The Ten' 65
Alone can answer; they are rarely wont
To let their thoughts anticipate their purpose

By previous proclamation. We are sum-mon'd—

That is enough.

Sen. For them, but not for us;
I would know why.

Mem. You will know why anon,
If you obey: and, if not, you no less 71
Will know why you should have obey'd.

Sen. I mean not
To oppose them, but—

Mem. In Venice 'but' 's a traitor.
But me no 'buts,' unless you would pass
o'er

The Bridge which few reposs.

Sen. I am silent.

Mem. Why 75
Thus hesitate? 'The Ten' have call'd in aid
Of their deliberation five and twenty Patricians of the senate—you are one,
And I another; and it seems to me
Both honour'd by the choice or chance which leads us 80

To mingle with a body so august.

Sen. Most true. I say no more.

Mem. As we hope, signor,
And all may honestly, (that is, all those Of noble blood may,) one day hope to be Decemvir, it is surely for the senate's 85 Chosen delegates a school of wisdom, to Be thus admitted, though as novices,
To view the mysteries.

Sen. Let us view them: they,
No doubt, are worth it.

Mem. Being worth our lives
If we divulge them, doubtless they are
worth 90

Something, at least to you or me.

Sen. I sought not
A place within the sanctuary; but being Chosen, however reluctantly so chosen,
I shall fulfil my office.

Mem. Let us not
Be latest in obeying 'the Ten's' summons.

Sen. All are not met, but I am of your
thought 96

So far—let's in.

Mem. The earliest are most welcome
In earnest councils—we will not be least
so. [Exeunt.]

Enter the DOGE, JACOPO FOSCARI, and MARINA.

Jac. Fos. Ah, father! though I must and will depart, 99

Yet—yet—I pray you to obtain for me
That I once more return unto my home, Howe'er remote the period. Let there be
A point of time, as beacon to my heart,
With any penalty annex'd they please,
But let me still return.

Doge. Son Jacopo, 105
Go and obey our country's will: 'tis not
For us to look beyond.

Jac. Fos. But still I must Look back. I pray you think of me.

Doge. Alas!
You ever were my dearest offspring, when They were more numerous, nor can be less
so 110

Now you are last; but did the state demand
The exile of the disinterred ashes
Of your three goodly brothers, now in
earth,

And their desponding shades came flitting
round

To impede the act, I must no less obey
A duty, paramount to every duty. 116

Mar. My husband! let us on: this but prolongs

Our sorrow.

Jac. Fos. But we are not summon'd yet;
The galley's sails are not unfurl'd:—who knows?

The wind may change.

Mar. And if it do, it will not 120 Change their hearts, or your lot: the galley's oars

Will quickly clear the harbour.

Jac. Fos. O ye elements!
Where are your storms?

Mar. In human breasts. Alas!
Will nothing calm you?

Jac. Fos. Never yet did mariner Put up to patron saint such prayers for prosperous 125

And pleasant breezes, as I call upon you, Ye tutelar saints of my own city! which Ye love not with more holy love than I,
To lash up from the deep the Adrian
waves,

And waken Auster, sovereign of the tempest! 130

Till the sea dash me back on my own shore
A broken corse upon the barren Lido, Where I may mingle with the sands which skirt

The land I love, and never shall see more!

Mar. And wish you this with me beside you?

Jac. Fos. No— 135

No—not for thee, too good, too kind!
May'st thou

Live long to be a mother to those children
Thy fond fidelity for a time deprives
Of such support! But for myself alone,
May all the winds of heaven howl down
the Gulf, 140

And tear the vessel, till the mariners,
Appall'd, turn their despairing eyes on me,
As the Phenicians did on Jonah, then Cast me out from amongst them, as an offering

To appease the waves. The billow which destroys me 145

Will be more merciful than man, and bear
me

Dead, but still bear me to a native grave,
From fishers' hands, upon the desolate
strand,

Which, of its thousand wrecks, hath ne'er received

One lacerated like the heart which then
Will be.—But wherefore breaks it not?
why live I? 151

Mar. To man thyself, I trust, with time, to master

Such useless passion. Until now thou wert
A sufferer, but not a loud one: why,
What is this to the things thou hast borne
in silence— 155

Imprisonment and actual torture?

Jac. Fos. Double,

Triple, and tenfold torture! But you are right,

It must be borne. Father, your blessing.
Doge. Would

It could avail thee! but no less thou hast it.

Jac. Fos. Forgive—

Doge. What?

Jac. Fos. My poor mother, for my
birth, 160

And me for having lived, and you yourself
(As I forgive you), for the gift of life,
Which you bestow'd upon me as my sire.

Mar. What hast thou done?

Jac. Fos. Nothing. I cannot charge
My memory with much save sorrow: but I have been so beyond the common lot Chasten'd and visited, I needs must think

That I was wicked. If it be so, may What I have undergone here keep me from A like hereafter!

Mar. Fear not: that's reserved 170
For your oppressors.

Jac. Fos. Let me hope not.
Mar. Hope not?

Jac. Fos. I cannot wish them all they have inflicted.

Mar. All! the consummate fiends! A thousand-fold

May the worm which ne'er dieth feed upon
them! 174

Jac. Fos. They may repent.

Mar. And if they do, Heaven will not Accept the tardy penitence of demons.

Enter an Officer and Guards.

Offi. Signor! the boat is at the shore—
the wind

Is rising—we are ready to attend you.

Jac. Fos. And I to be attended. Once more, father,

Your hand!

Doge. Take it. Alas! how thine own trembles! 180

Jac. Fos. No—you mistake; 'tis yours that shakes, my father.

Farewell!

Doge. Farewell! Is there aught else?
Jac. Fos. No—nothing.

[To the Officer.

Lend me your arm, good signor.

Offi. You turn pale—Let me support you—paler—ho! some aid there!

Some water!

Mar. Ah, he is dying!

Jac. Fos. Now, I'm ready— 185
My eyes swim strangely—where's the
door?

Mar. Away!
Let me support him—my best love! Oh,
God!

How faintly beats this heart—this pulse!

Jac. Fos. The light!
Is the light?—I am faint.

[Officer presents him with water.

Offi. He will be better, 189
Perhaps, in the air.

Jac. Fos. I doubt not. Father—wife—
Your hands!

Mar. There's death in that damp, clammy grasp.

Oh God!—My Foscari, how fare you?
Jac. Fos. Well! [He dies.

Offi. He's gone!
Doge. He's free.

Mar. No—no, he is not dead;
There must be life yet in that heart—he could not

Thus leave me.
Doge. Daughter!

Mar. Hold thy peace, old man! 195

I am no daughter now—thou hast no son.
Oh, Foscari!

Offi. We must remove the body.

Mar. Touch it not, dungeon miscreants! your base office

Ends with his life, and goes not beyond murder,

Even by your murderous laws. Leave his remains 200

To those who know to honour them.

Offi. I must inform the signory, and learn their pleasure.

Doge. Inform the signory from me, the Doge,

They have no further power upon those ashes:

While he lived, he was theirs, as fits a subject— 205

Now he is mine—my broken-hearted boy! [Exit Officer.]

Mar. And I must live!

Doge. Your children live, Marina.

Mar. My children! true—they live, and I must live

To bring them up to serve the state, and die

As died their father. Oh! what best of blessings 210

Were barrenness in Venice! Would my mother

Had been so!

Doge. My unhappy children!

Mar. What!

You feel it then at last—you!—Where is now

The stoic of the state?

Doge [throwing himself down by the body]. Here!

Mar. Ay, weep on!

I thought you had no tears—you hoarded them 215

Until they are useless; but weep on! he never Shall weep more—never, never more.

Enter LOREDANO and BARBARIGO.

Lor. What's here?

Mar. Ah! the devil come to insult the dead! Avaunt!

Incarnate Lucifer! 'tis holy ground.

A martyr's ashes now lie there, which make it 220

A shrine. Get thee back to thy place of torment!

Bar. Lady, we knew not of this sad event,

But pass'd here merely on our path from council.

Mar. Pass on.

Lor. We sought the Doge.

Mar. [pointing to the Doge, who is still on the ground by his son's body].

He's busy, look,

About the business you provided for him, Are ye content?

Bar. We will not interrupt

A parent's sorrows.

Mar. No, ye only make them,

Then leave them.

Doge [rising]. Sirs, I am ready.

Bar. No—not now.

Lor. Yet 'twas important.

Doge. If 'twas so, I can

Only repeat—I am ready.

Bar. It shall not be 230

Just now, though Venice totter'd o'er the deep

Like a frail vessel. I respect your griefs.

Doge. I thank you. If the tidings which you bring

Are evil, you may say them; nothing further

Can touch me more than him thou look'st on there; 235

If they be good, say on; you need not fear That they can comfort me.

Bar. I would they could!

Doge. I spoke not to you, but to Loredano.

He understands me.

Mar. Ah! I thought it would be so.

Doge. What mean you?

Mar. Lo! there is the blood beginning 240

To flow through the dead lips of Foscari—The body bleeds in presence of the assassin. [To LOREDANO.]

Thou cowardly murderer by law, behold How death itself bears witness to thy

deeds!

Doge. My child! this is a phantasy of grief. 245

Bear hence the body. [To his attendants.]

Signors, if it please you,

Within an hour I'll hear you.

[Exeunt DOGE, MARINA, and attendants with the body. Manent LOREDANO and BARBARIGO.]

Bar. He must not

Be troubled now.

Lor. He said himself that nought Could give him trouble further.

Bar. These are words;

But grief is lonely, and the breaking in Upon it barbarous.

Lor. Sorrow preys upon 251

Its solitude, and nothing more diverts it From its sad visions of the other world,

Than calling it at moments back to this. The busy have no time for tears.

Bar. And therefore 255

You would deprive this old man of all business?

Lor. The thing's decreed. The Giunta and 'the Ten'

Have made it law—who shall oppose that law?

- Bar.* Humanity!
Lor. Because his son is dead? 259
Bar. And yet unburied.
Lor. Had we known this when The act was passing, it might have suspended
Its passage, but impedes it not—once past.
Bar. I'll not consent.
Lor. You have consented to
All that's essential—leave the rest to me.
Bar. Why press his abdication now?
Lor. The feelings
Of private passion may not interrupt 266
The public benefit; and what the state
Decides to-day must not give way before
To-morrow for a natural accident.
Bar. You have a son.
Lor. I have—and had a father. 270
Bar. Still so inexorable?
Lor. Still.
Bar. But let him
Inter his son before we press upon him
This edict.
Lor. Let him call up into life
My sire and uncle—I consent. Men may,
Even aged men, be, or appear to be, 275
Sires of a hundred sons, but cannot kindle
An atom of their ancestors from earth.
The victims are not equal; he has seen
His sons expire by natural deaths, and I
My sires by violent and mysterious maladies. 280
I used no poison, bribed no subtle master
Of the destructive art of healing, to Shorten the path to the eternal cure.
His sons—and he had four—are dead,
without
My dabbling in vile drugs.
Bar. And art thou sure 285
He dealt in such?
Lor. Most sure.
Bar. And yet he seems
All openness.
Lor. And so he seem'd not long Ago to Carmagnuola.
Bar. The attained
And foreign traitor?
Lor. Even so: when he, 289
After the very night in which 'the Ten' (Join'd with the Doge) decided his destruction,
Met the great Duke at daybreak with a jest,
Demanding whether he should augur him
'The good day or good night'? his Dogeship answer'd,
'That he in truth had pass'd a night of vigil, 295
In which (he added with a gracious smile),
There often has been question about you.'
'Twas true; the question was the death
resolved
Of Carmagnuola, eight months ere he died;
And the old Doge, who knew him doom'd, smiled on him 300
- With deadly cozenage, eight long months beforehand—
Eight months of such hypocrisy as is Learnt but in eighty years. Brave Car-magnuola
Is dead; so is young Foscari and his brethren—
I never smiled on them.
Bar. Was Carmagnuola 305
Your friend?
Lor. He was the safeguard of the city.
In early life its foe, but, in his manhood,
Its saviour first, then victim.
Bar. Ah! that seems
The penalty of saving cities. He 309
Whom we now act against not only saved
Our own, but added others to our sway.
Lor. The Romans (and we ape them) gave a crown
To him who took a city; and they gave
A crown to him who saved a citizen 314
In battle: the rewards are equal. Now,
If we should measure forth the cities taken
By the Doge Foscari, with citizens Destroy'd by him, or through him, the account
Were fearfully against him, although narrow'd 319
To private havoc, such as between him
And my dead father.
Bar. Are you then thus fix'd?
Lor. Why, what should change me?
Bar. That which changes me:
But you, I know, are marble to retain
A feud. But when all is accomplish'd,
when
The old man is deposed, his name degraded, 325
His sons all dead, his family depress'd,
And you and yours triumphant, shall you
sleep?
Lor. More soundly.
Bar. That's an error, and you'll find it
Ere you sleep with your fathers.
Lor. They sleep not
In their accelerated graves, nor will 330
Till Foscari fills his. Each night I see them Stalk frowning round my couch, and, pointing towards
The ducal palace, marshal me to vengeance.
Bar. Fancy's distemperance! There is no passion
More spectral or fantastical than Hate;
Not even its opposite, Love, so peoples air
With phantoms, as this madness of the
heart. 337
- Enter an Officer.*
Lor. Where go you, sirrah?
Offi. By the ducal order
To forward the preparatory rites
For the late Foscari's interment.

Bar. Their Vault has been often open'd of late years.
Lor. 'Twill be full soon, and may be closed for ever.
Offi. May I pass on?
Lor. You may.
Bar. How bears the Doge This last calamity?
Offi. With desperate firmness. In presence of another he says little, 345
 But I perceive his lips move now and then; And once or twice I heard him, from the adjoining Apartment, mutter forth the words—'My son!'
 Scarce audibly. I must proceed.

Bar. [Exit Officer. This stroke Will move all Venice in his favour.
Lor. Right! 350
 We must be speedy: let us call together The delegates appointed to convey The Council's resolution.

Bar. I protest Against it at this moment.
Lor. As you please—I'll take their voices on it ne'ertheless, And see whose most may sway them, yours or mine. 356
 [Exeunt BARBARIGO and LOREDANO.]

ACT V

SCENE I.—The DOGE's Apartment.

The DOGE and Attendants.

Att. My lord, the deputation is in waiting;
 But add, that if another hour would better Accord with your will, they will make it theirs.

Doge. To me all hours are like. Let them approach. [Exit Attendant.]

An Officer. Prince! I have done your bidding.

Doge. What command? 5

Offi. A melancholy one—to call the attendance

Of—
Doge. True—true—true; I crave your pardon. I

Begin to fail in apprehension, and Wax very old—old almost as my years. Till now I fought them off, but they begin To overtake me.

Enter the Deputation, consisting of six of the Signory and the Chief of the Ten.

Noble men, your pleasure! 11

Chief of the Ten. In the first place, the Council doth condole

With the Doge on his late and private grief.

Doge. No more—no more of that.

Chief of the Ten. Will not the Duke Accept the homage of respect?

Doge. I do 15
 Accept it as 'tis given—proceed.

Chief of the Ten. 'The Ten', With a selected Giunta from the senate Of twenty-five of the best born patricians, Having deliberated on the state Of the republic, and the o'erwhelming cares 20

Which, at this moment, doubly must oppress

Your years, so long devoted to your country,

Have judged it fitting, with all reverence, Now to solicit from your wisdom (which Upon reflection must accord in this), 25
 The resignation of the ducal ring,

Which you have worn so long and venerably:

And to prove that they are not ungrateful, nor

Cold to your years and services, they add An appanage of twenty hundred golden Ducats, to make retirement not less splendid 31

Than should become a sovereign's retreat.

Doge. Did I hear rightly?

Chief of the Ten. Need I say again?

Doge. No—Have you done?

Chief of the Ten. I have spoken.

Twenty-four

Hours are accorded you to give an answer.

Doge. I shall not need so many seconds.

Chief of the Ten. We Will now retire.

Doge. Stay! four and twenty hours Will alter nothing which I have to say.

Chief of the Ten. Speak!

Doge. When I twice before reiterated My wish to abdicate, it was refused me: And not alone refused, but ye exacted An oath from me that I would never more Renew this instance. I have sworn to die In full exertion of the functions which

My country call'd me here to exercise, 45

According to my honour and my conscience—

I cannot break my oath.

Chief of the Ten. Reduce us not To the alternative of a decree,

Instead of your compliance.

Doge. Providence Prolongs my days to prove and chasten me; 50

But ye have no right to reproach my length

Of days, since every hour has been the country's.

I am ready to lay down my life for her, As I have laid down dearer things than life:

But for my dignity—I hold it of 55

The whole republic: when the general will Is manifest, then you shall all be answer'd.

Chief of the Ten. We grieve for such an answer; but it cannot Avail you aught.

Doge. I can submit to all things,
But nothing will advance; no, not a moment. 60

What you decree—decree.

Chief of the Ten. With this, then, must we Return to those who sent us?

Doge. You have heard me.

Chief of the Ten. With all due reverence we retire.

Enter an Attendant.

Att. My lord,
The noble dame Marina craves an audience. 64

Doge. My time is hers.

Enter MARINA.

Mar. My lord, if I intrude—
Perhaps you fain would be alone?

Doge. Alone! Alone!
Alone, come all the world around me, I Am now and evermore. But we will bear
it.

Mar. We will, and for the sake of those who are,

Endeavour—Oh, my husband!

Doge. Give it way: 70
I cannot comfort thee.

Mar. He might have lived,
So form'd for gentle privacy of life,
So loving, so beloved; the native of Another land, and who so blest and blessing

As my poor Foscari? Nothing was want-
ing 75

Unto his happiness and mine save not To be Venetian.

Doge. Or a prince's son.

Mar. Yes; all things which conduce to other men's

Imperfect happiness or high ambition,
By some strange destiny, to him proved deadly. 80

The country and the people whom he
loved,

The prince of whom he was the elder born,
And—

Doge. Soon may be a prince no longer.

Mar. How?

Doge. They have taken my son from me, and now aim

At my too long worn diadem and ring.

Let them resume the gewgaws!

Mar. Oh, the tyrants! 86
In such an hour too!

Doge. 'Tis the fittest time;

An hour ago I should have felt it.

Mar. And
Will you not now resent it?—Oh, for vengeance!

But he, who, had he been enough protected, 90

Might have repaid protection in this moment,

Cannot assist his father.

Doge. Nor should do so Against his country, had he a thousand lives

Instead of that—

Mar. They tortured from him. This May be pure patriotism. I am a woman:
To me my husband and my children were Country and home. I loved him—how I loved him! 97

I have seen him pass through such an ordeal as

The old martyrs would have shrunk from:
he is gone,

And I, who would have given my blood
for him, 100

Have nought to give but tears! But could
I compass

The retribution of his wrongs!—Well,
well!

I have sons, who shall be men.

Doge. Your grief distracts you.

Mar. I thought I could have borne it,
when I saw him

Bow'd down by such oppression; yes, I
thought 105

That I would rather look upon his corse
Than his prolong'd captivity:—I am punish'd

For that thought now. Would I were in his grave!

Doge. I must look on him once more.

Mar. Come with me!

Doge. Is he—

Mar. Our bridal bed is now his bier. 110

Doge. And he is in his shroud!

Mar. Come, come, old man!

[Exeunt the DOGE and MARINA.

Enter BARBARIGO and LOREDANO.

Bar. [to an Attendant]. Where is the Doge?

Att. This instant retired hence,
With the illustrious lady his son's widow.

Lor. Where?

Att. To the chamber where the body
lies.

Bar. Let us return, then.

Lor. You forget, you cannot. 115
We have the implicit order of the Giunta

To await their coming here, and join them
in

Their office: they'll be here soon after us.

Bar. And will they press their answer on the Doge?

Lor. 'Twas his own wish that all should be done promptly. 120

He answer'd quickly, and must so be
answer'd;

His dignity is look'd to, his estate
Cared for—what would he more?

Bar. Die in his robes:
He could not have lived long; but I have
done 124

My best to save his honours, and opposed
This proposition to the last, though vainly.
Why would the general vote compel me
hither?

Lor. 'Twas fit that some one of such different thoughts
From ours should be a witness, lest false
tongues

Should whisper that a harsh majority 130
Dreaded to have its acts beheld by others.

Bar. And not less, I must needs think,
for the sake

Of humbling me for my vain opposition.
You are ingenious, Loredano, in

Your modes of vengeance, nay, poetical,
A very Ovid in the art of hating; 136

'Tis thus (although a secondary object, Yet hate has microscopic eyes), to you
I owe by way of foil to the more zealous,
This undesired association in 140

Your Giunta's duties.

Lor. How!—my Giunta!
Bar. Yours!

They speak your language, watch your nod, approve

Your plans, and do your work. Are they not yours?

Lor. You talk unwarily. 'Twere best they hear not

This from you.

Bar. Oh! they'll hear as much one day
From louder tongues than mine; they have gone beyond 146

Even their exorbitance of power: and when
This happens in the most condemn'd and abject

States, stung humanity will rise to check it.

Lor. You talk but idly.

Bar. That remains for proof. 150
Here come our colleagues.

Enter the Deputation as before.

Chief of the Ten. Is the Duke aware
We seek his presence?

Att. He shall be inform'd.
[Exit Attendant.]

Bar. The Duke is with his son.

Chief of the Ten. If it be so,
We will remit him till the rites are over.

Let us return. 'Tis time enough tomorrow. 155

Lor. [aside to Bar.] Now the rich man's hell-fire upon your tongue, Unquench'd, unquenchable! I'll have it torn

From its vile babbling roots, till you shall utter

Nothing but sobs through blood, for this!
Sage signors,

I pray ye be not hasty.

[Aloud to the others.]

Bar. But be human! 160

Lor. See, the Duke comes!

Enter the DOGE.

Doge. I have obey'd your summons.

Chief of the Ten. We come once more to urge our past request.

Doge. And I to answer.

Chief of the Ten. What?

Doge. My only answer.

You have heard it.

Chief of the Ten. Hear you then the last decree,

Definitive and absolute!

Doge. To the point— 165

To the point! I know of old the forms of office,

And gentle preludes to strong acts.—Go on!

Chief of the Ten. You are no longer

Doge; you are released

From your imperial oath as sovereign;

Your ducal robes must be put off; but for

Your services, the state allots the appanage 171

Already mention'd in our former congress.
Three days are left you to remove from

hence,

Under the penalty to see confiscated

All your own private fortune.

Doge. That last clause, 175

I am proud to say, would not enrich the treasury.

Chief of the Ten. Your answer, Duke!

Lor. Your answer, Francis Foscari!

Doge. If I could have foreseen that my old age

Was prejudicial to the state, the chief

Of the republic never would have shown

Himself so far ungrateful, as to place

His own high dignity before his country;

But this life having been so many years

Not useless to that country, I would fain

Have consecrated my last moments to her.

But the decree being render'd, I obey. 186

Chief of the Ten. If you would have the three days named extended,

We willingly will lengthen them to eight,
As sign of our esteem.

Doge. Not eight hours, signor,

Nor even eight minutes—there's the ducal ring 190

[Taking off his ring and cap.]

And there the ducal diadem. And so

The Adriatic's free to wed another.

Chief of the Ten. Yet go not forth so quickly.

Doge. I am old, sir,

And even to move but slowly must begin

To move betimes. Methinks I see amongst
you 195

A face I know not.—Senator! your name,
You, by your garb, Chief of the Forty!

THE TWO FOSCARI

[ACT V

Mem. Signor,
I am the son of Marco Memmo.
Doge. Ah!
Your father was my friend.—But sons and
fathers!—

What, ho! my servants there!
Atten. My prince!
Doge. No prince— 200
There are the princes of the prince!
[Pointing to the Ten's Deputation.]—
Prepare

To part from hence upon the instant.
Chief of the Ten. Why
So rashly? 'twill give scandal.
Doge. Answer that;

It is your province.—Sirs, bestir yourselves: [To the Servants.
There is one burthen which I beg you bear
With care, although 'tis past all further harm— 206

But I will look to that myself.
Bar. He means
The body of his son.
Doge. And call Marina,
My daughter!

Enter MARINA.

Doge. Get thee ready, we must mourn
Elsewhere.

Mar. And everywhere.
Doge. True; but in freedom, 210 Without these jealous spies upon the
great.

Signors, you may depart: what would you
more?

We are going: do you fear that we shall bear
The palace with us? Its old walls, ten times
As old as I am, and I'm very old, 215
Have served you, so have I, and I and they Could tell a tale; but I invoke them not
To fall upon you! else they would, as erst
The pillars of stone Dagon's temple on
The Israelite and his Philistine foes. 220
Such power I do believe there might exist
In such a curse as mine, provoked by such As you; but I curse not. Adieu, good signors!

May the next duke be better than the present!

Lor. The present duke is Paschal
Malipiero. 225

Doge. Not till I pass the threshold of these doors.

Lor. St. Mark's great bell is soon about to toll

For his inauguration.

Doge. Earth and heaven!
Ye will reverberate this peal; and I Live to hear this!—the first Doge who e'er
heard 230

Such sound for his successor: happier he,
My attainted predecessor, stern Faliero—
This insult at the least was spared him.

Lor. What!
Do you regret a traitor?
Doge. No—I merely Envy the dead.

Chief of the Ten. My lord, if you
indeed 235

Are bent upon this rash abandonment
Of the state's palace, at the least retire
By the private staircase, which conducts you towards
The landing-place of the canal.

Doge. No. I
Will now descend the stairs by which I mounted 240

To sovereignty—the Giants' Stairs, on whose

Broad eminence I was invested duke.
My services have called me up those steps,
The malice of my foes will drive me down
them. 244

There five and thirty years ago was I Install'd, and traversed these same halls, from which

I never thought to be divorced except A course—a course, it might be, fighting for
them—

But not push'd hence by fellow-citizens.
But come; my son and I will go together—
He to his grave, and I to pray for mine.

Chief of the Ten. What! thus in public?
Doge. I was publicly

Elected, and so will I be deposed.

Marina! art thou willing?

Mar. Here's my arm!

Doge. And here my staff: thus propp'd will I go forth. 255

Chief of the Ten. It must not be—the people will perceive it.

Doge. The people!—There's no people, you well know it,

Else you dare not deal thus by them or me.
There is a populace, perhaps, whose looks May shame you; but they dare not groan nor curse you, 260

Save with their hearts and eyes.

Chief of the Ten. You speak in passion,
Else—

Doge. You have reason. I have spoken much

More than my wont: it is a foible which
Was not of mine, but more excuses you,
Inasmuch as it shows that I approach
A dotage which may justify this deed
Of yours, although the law does not, nor
will. 267

Farewell, sirs!

Bar. You shall not depart without An escort fitting past and present rank.
We will accompany, with due respect,
The Doge unto his private palace. Say!
My brethren, will we not?

Different voices. Ay!—Ay!

Doge. You shall not Stir—in my train, at least. I enter'd here

As sovereign—I go out as citizen
By the same portals, but as citizen. 275
All these vain ceremonies are base insults,
Which only ulcerate the heart the more,
Applying poisons there as antidotes.
Pomp is for princes—I am none!—That's false,

I am, but only to these gates.—Ah!

Lor. Hark! 280

[The great bell of St. Mark's tolls.

Bar. The bell!

Chief of the Ten. St. Mark's, which tolls for the election

Of Malipiero.

Doge. Well I recognise

The sound! I heard it once, but once
before,

And that is five and thirty years ago;

Even then I was not young.

Bar. Sit down, my lord! 285

You tremble.

Doge. 'Tis the knell of my poor boy!
My heart aches bitterly.

Bar. I pray you sit.

Doge. No; my seat here has been a throne till now.

Marina! let us go.

Mar. Most readily. 289

Doge [walks a few steps, then stops]. I feel athirst—will no one bring me here

A cup of water?

Bar. I——

Mar. And I——

Lor. And I——

[The Doge takes a goblet from the hand of LOREDANO.

Doge. I take yours, Loredano, from
the hand

Most fit for such an hour as this.

Lor. Why so?

Doge. 'Tis said that our Venetian crystal has 294

Such pure antipathy to poisons as

To burst, if aught of venom touches it.

You bore this goblet, and it is not broken.

Lor. Well, sir!

Doge. Then it is false, or you are true.

For my own part, I credit neither; 'tis
An idle legend.

Mar. You talk wildly, and 300

Had better now be seated, nor as yet

Depart. Ah! now you look as look'd my husband!

Bar. He sinks!—support him!—quick —a chair—support him!

Doge. The bell tolls on!—let's hence
—my brain's on fire!

Bar. I do beseech you, lean upon us!

Doge. No! 305

A sovereign should die standing. My poor
boy!—

Off with your arms!—That bell!

[The DOGE drops down and dies.

Mar. My God! My God!

Bar. [to Lor.]. Behold! your work's completed!

Chief of the Ten. Is there then

No aid? Call in assistance!

Att.

'Tis all over.

Chief of the Ten. If it be so, at least his obsequies 310

Shall be such as befits his name and nation,
His rank and his devotion to the duties

Of the realm, while his age permitted him
To do himself and them full justice. Brethren,

Say, shall it not be so?

Bar. He has not had 315

The misery to die a subject where

He reign'd: then let his funeral rites be princely.

Chief of the Ten. We are agreed, then?

All, except Lor., answer. Yes.

Chief of the Ten. Heaven's peace be with him!

Mar. Signors, your pardon: this is mockery.

Juggle no more with that poor remnant,
which, 320

A moment since, while yet it had a soul,
(A soul by whom you have increased your

empire,

And made your power as proud as was his
glory.)

You banish'd from his palace, and tore
down

From his high place, with such relentless coldness; 325

And now, when he can neither know these honours,

Nor would accept them if he could, you,
signors,

Purpose, with idle and superfluous pomp,
To make a pageant over what you

trampled.

A princely funeral will be your reproach,
And not his honour. 331

Chief of the Ten. Lady, we revoke not
Our purposes so readily.

Mar.

I know it,

As far as touches torturing the living.

I thought the dead had been beyond even
you,

Though (some, no doubt) consign'd to powers which may 335

Resemble that you exercise on earth.

Leave him to me; you would have done so for His dregs of life, which you have kindly shorten'd:

It is my last of duties, and may prove

A dreary comfort in my desolation. 340

Grief is fantastical, and loves the dead,

And the apparel of the grave.

Chief of the Ten.

Do you

Pretend still to this office?

Mar.

I do, signor.

Though his possessions have been all consumed

THE TWO FOSCARI

[ACT V. SCENE I

In the state's service, I have still my dowry, 345
Which shall be consecrated to his rites,
And those of—

[She stops with agitation.

Chief of the Ten. Best retain it for your children.

Mar. Ay, they are fatherless, I thank
you.

Chief of the Ten. We Cannot comply with your request. His relics

Shall be exposed with wonted pomp, and
follow'd 350

Unto their home by the new Doge, not clad

As Doge, but simply as a senator.

Mar. I have heard of murderers, who have interr'd

Their victims; but ne'er heard, until this
hour,

Of so much splendour in hypocrisy 355 O'er those they slew. I've heard of widows' tears—

Alas! I have shed some—always thanks to
you!

I've heard of heirs in sables—you have left none

To the deceased, so you would act the part Of such. Well, sirs, your will be done! as one day, 360

I trust, Heaven's will be done too!

Chief of the Ten. Know you, lady,
To whom ye speak, and perils of such speech?

Mar. I know the former better than yourselves;

The latter—like yourselves; and can face
both.

Wish you more funerals?

Bar. Heed not her rash words; 365
Her circumstances must excuse her bearing.

Chief of the Ten. We will not note
them down.

Bar. [turning to Lor., who is writing upon his tablets]. What art thou writing, With such an earnest brow, upon thy tablets?

Lor. [pointing to the Doge's body].
That he has paid me!

Chief of the Ten. What debt did he owe
you?

Lor. A long and just one; Nature's debt and mine. 370

[Curtain falls.

CAIN

A MYSTERY

Now the Serpent was more subtil than any beast of the field which the LORD God had made.—Gen. iii. 1.

TO

SIR WALTER SCOTT, BART.,

THIS MYSTERY OF CAIN IS INSCRIBED,

BY HIS OBLIGED FRIEND AND FAITHFUL SERVANT,

THE AUTHOR.

PREFACE

THE following scenes are entitled 'A Mystery', in conformity with the ancient title annexed to dramas upon similar subjects, which were styled 'Mysteries, or Moralities'. The author has by no means taken the same liberties with his subject which were common formerly, as may be seen by any reader curious enough to refer to those very profane productions, whether in English, French, Italian, or Spanish. The author has endeavoured to preserve the language adapted to his characters; and where it is (and this is but rarely) taken from actual Scripture, he has made as little alteration, even of words, as the rhythm would permit. The reader will recollect that the book of Genesis does not state that Eve was tempted by a demon, but by 'the Serpent'; and that only because he was 'the most subtil of all the beasts of the field'. Whatever interpretation the Rabbins and the Fathers may have put upon this, I take the words as I find them, and reply, with Bishop Watson upon similar occasions, when the Fathers were quoted to him, as Moderator in the schools of Cambridge, 'Behold the Book!'—holding up the Scripture. It is to be recollected, that my present subject has nothing to do with the New Testament, to which no reference can be here made without anachronism. With the poems upon similar topics I have not been recently familiar. Since I was twenty I have never read Milton; but I had read him so frequently before, that this may make little difference. Gesner's 'Death of Abel' I have never read since I was eight years of age, at Aberdeen. The general impression of my recollection is delight; but of the contents I remember only that Cain's wife was called Mahala, and Abel's Thirza; in the following pages I have called them 'Adah' and 'Zillah', the earliest female names which occur in Genesis; they were those of Lamech's wives: those of Cain and Abel are not called by their names. Whether, then, a coincidence of subject may have caused the same in expression, I know nothing, and care as little.

The reader will please to bear in mind (what few choose to recollect), that there is no allusion to a future state in any of the books of Moses, nor indeed in the Old Testament. For a reason for this extraordinary omission he may consult Warburton's 'Divine Legation'; whether satisfactory or not, no better has yet been assigned. I have therefore supposed it new to Cain, without, I hope, any perversion of Holy Writ.

With regard to the language of Lucifer, it was difficult for me to make him talk like a clergyman upon the same subjects; but I have done what I could to restrain him within the bounds of spiritual politeness. If he disclaims having tempted Eve in the shape of the Serpent, it is only because the book of Genesis has not the most distant allusion to anything of the kind, but merely to the Serpent in his serpentine capacity.

Note.—The reader will perceive that the author has partly adopted in this poem the notion of Cuvier, that the world had been destroyed several times before the creation of man. This speculation, derived from the different strata and the bones of enormous and unknown animals found in them, is not contrary to the Mosaic account, but rather confirms it; as no human bones have yet been discovered in those strata, although those of many known animals are found near the remains of the unknown. The assertion of Lucifer, that the pre-Adamite world was also peopled by rational beings much more intelligent than man, and proportionally powerful to the mammoth, &c., &c., is, of course, a poetical fiction to help him to make out his case.

I ought to add, that there is a 'tramelogedia' of Alfieri, called 'Abele'. I have never read that, nor any other of the posthumous works of the writer, except his Life.

ACT I

SCENE I.—The Land without Paradise.—Time, Sunrise.

ADAM, EVE, CAIN, ABEL, ADAH, ZILLAH, offering a Sacrifice.

Adam. God, the Eternal! Infinite!
All-wise!—

Who out of darkness on the deep didst
make

Light on the waters with a word—all hail!
Jehovah, with returning light, all hail!

Eve. God! who didst name the day, and separate

Morning from night, till then divided
never—

Who didst divide the wave from wave, and
call

Part of thy work the firmament—all hail!

Abel. God! who didst call the elements into

Earth, ocean, air, and fire, and with the
day

And night, and worlds which these illuminate,

Or shadow, madest beings to enjoy them,
And love both them and thee—all hail!
all hail!

Adah. God, the Eternal! Parent of all
things!

Who didst create these best and beauteous beings,

To be beloved, more than all, save thee—
Let me love thee and them:—All hail! all hail!

Zillah. Oh, God! who loving, making, blessing all,

Yet didst permit the serpent to creep in,
And drive my father forth from Paradise,
Keep us from further evil:—Hail! all hail!

Adam. Son Cain, my first-born, wherefore art thou silent? 22

Cain. Why should I speak?
Adam. To pray.

Cain. Have ye not pray'd?

Adam. We have, most fervently.

Cain. And loudly: I

Have heard you.

Adam. So will God, I trust.

Abel. Amen! 25

Adam. But thou, my eldest born, art silent still.

Cain. 'Tis better I should be so.

Adam. Wherefore so?

Cain. I have nought to ask.

Adam. Nor ought to thank for!

Cain. No.

Adam. Dost thou not live?

Cain. Must I not die?

Eve. Alas!

The fruit of our forbidden tree begins
To fall. 30

Adam. And we must gather it again.

Oh, God! why didst thou plant the tree of knowledge?

Cain. And wherefore pluck'd ye not the tree of life?

Ye might have then defied him.

Adam. Oh! my son,

Blaspheeme not: these are serpent's words.

Cain. Why not? 35

The snake spoke truth; it was the tree of
knowledge;

It was the tree of life; knowledge is good,

And life is good; and how can both be evil?

CAIN: A MYSTERY

[ACT I

Eve. My boy! thou speakest as I spoke, in sin,³⁹
Before thy birth: let me not see renew'd
My misery in thine. I have repented.
Let me not see my offspring fall into
The snares beyond the walls of Paradise, Which e'en in Paradise destroy'd his parents.

Content thee with what is. Had we been so,⁴⁵
Thou now hadst been contented.—Oh,
my son!

Adam. Our orisons completed, let us
hence,
Each to his task of toil—not heavy,
though Needful: the earth is young, and yields us kindly

Her fruits with little labour.
Eve. Cain, my son,⁵⁰
Behold thy father cheerful and resign'd,
And do as he doth.

[Exeunt ADAM and EVE.

Zillah. Wilt thou not, my brother?
Abel. Why wilt thou wear this gloom upon thy brow,
Which can avail thee nothing, save to rouse
The Eternal anger?

Adam. My beloved Cain,⁵⁵
Wilt thou frown even on me?

Cain. No, Adah! no;
I fain would be alone a little while.
Abel, I'm sick at heart; but it will pass;
Precede me, brother—I will follow shortly.⁵⁹

And you, too, sisters, tarry not behind:
Your gentleness must not be harshly met;
I'll follow you anon.

Adah. If not, I will Return to seek you here.

Abel. The peace of God
Be on your spirit, brother!

[Exeunt ABEL, ZILLAH, and ADAM.

Cain [solus]. And this is Life!—Toil! and wherefore should I toil?
—because⁶⁵
My father could not keep his place in Eden.

What had I done in this?—I was unborn:
I sought not to be born; nor love the state
To which that birth has brought me. Why did he

Yield to the serpent and the woman? or, Yielding, why suffer? What was there in this?⁷¹

The tree was planted, and why not for him?
If not, why place him near it, where it
grew,

The fairest in the centre? They have but One answer to all questions, 'Twas his will,⁷⁵

And he is good.' How know I that? Because

He is all-powerful, must all-good, too,
follow?

I judge but by the fruits—and they are bitter—

Which I must feed on for a fault not mine.
Whom have we here?—A shape like to the angels,⁸⁰

Yet of a sterner and a sadder aspect
Of spiritual essence: why do I quake?
Why should I fear him more than other
spirits,

Whom I see daily wave their fiery swords
Before the gates round which I linger oft,
In twilight's hour, to catch a glimpse of those⁸⁶

Gardens which are my just inheritance,
Ere the night closes o'er the inhibited walls
And the immortal trees which overtop
The cherubim-defended battlements?

If I shrink not from these, the fire-arm'd angels,⁹¹

Why should I quail from him who now
approaches?

Yet he seems mightier far than them, nor
less

Beauteous, and yet not all as beautiful
As he hath been, and might be: sorrow seems⁹⁵

Half of his immortality. And is it
So? and can aught grieve save humanity?
He cometh.

Enter LUCIFER.

Lucifer. Mortal!

Cain. Spirit, who art thou?

Lucifer. Master of Spirits.

Cain. And being so, canst thou Leave them, and walk with dust?

Lucifer. I know the thoughts¹⁰⁰
Of dust, and feel for it, and with you.

Cain. How!

You know my thoughts?

Lucifer. They are the thoughts of all Worthy of thought;—'tis your immortal
part

Which speaks within you.

Cain. What immortal part?

This has not been reveal'd: the tree of life
Was withheld from us by my father's folly,¹⁰⁶

While that of knowledge, by my mother's
haste,

Was pluck'd too soon; and all the fruit is
death!

Lucifer. They have deceived thee;
thou shalt live.

Cain. I live,

But live to die; and, living, see no thing
To make death hateful, save an innate clinging,¹¹¹

A loathsome, and yet all invincible
Instinct of life, which I abhor, as I Despise myself, yet cannot overcome—
And so I live. Would I had never lived!

Lucifer. Thou livest, and must live for ever: think not ¹¹⁶
The earth, which is thine outward cov'ring, is Existence—it will cease, and thou wilt be
No less than thou art now.

Cain. No less! and why
No more?

Lucifer. It may be thou shalt be as we.

Cain. And ye?

Lucifer. Are everlasting.

Cain. Are ye happy? ¹²¹

Lucifer. We are mighty.

Cain. Are ye happy?

Lucifer. No: art thou?

Cain. How should I be so? Look on
me!

Lucifer. Poor clay!

And thou pretendest to be wretched!
Thou!

Cain. I am:—and thou, with all thy might, what art thou? ¹²⁵

Lucifer. One who aspired to be what made thee, and

Would not have made thee what thou art.

Cain. Ah!

Thou look'st almost a god; and—

Lucifer. I am none:

And having fail'd to be one, would be nought

Save what I am. He conquer'd; let him reign! ¹³⁰

Cain. Who?

Lucifer. Thy sire's Maker, and the earth's.

Cain. And heaven's,

And all that in them is. So I have heard
His seraphs sing; and so my father saith.

Lucifer. They say—what they must sing and say, on pain ¹³⁴

Of being that which I am—and thou art—
Of spirits and of men.

Cain. And what is that?

Lucifer. Souls who dare use their immortality—

Souls who dare look the Omnipotent tyrant in

His everlasting face, and tell him that
His evil is not good! If he has made, ¹⁴⁰

As he saith—which I know not, nor
believe—

But, if he made us—he cannot unmake:
We are immortal! nay, he'd have us so,

That he may torture:—let him! He is
great—

But, in his greatness, is no happier than We in our conflict: Goodness would not make ¹⁴⁶

Evil; and what else hath he made? But let him

Sit on his vast and solitary throne,
Creating worlds, to make eternity

Less burthensome to his immense existence ¹⁵⁰

And unparticipated solitude;

Let him crowd orb on orb: he is alone

Indefinite, indissoluble tyrant;

Could he but crush himself, 'twere the best boon

He ever granted: but let him reign on,
And multiply himself in misery! ¹⁵⁶

Spirits and Men, at least we sympathise—

And, suffering in concert, make our pangs

Innumerable more endurable,

By the unbounded sympathy of all ¹⁶⁰

With all! But He! so wretched in his
height,

So restless in his wretchedness, must still Create, and re-create—

Cain. Thou speak'st to me of things which long have swum

In visions through my thought: I never could ¹⁶⁵

Reconcile what I saw with what I heard.

My father and my mother talk to me

Of serpents, and of fruits and trees: I see

The gates of what they call their Paradise

Guarded by fiery-sworded cherubim,

Which shut them out and me: I feel the weight ¹⁷¹

Of daily toil, and constant thought: I look Around a world where I seem nothing,
with

Thoughts which arise within me, as if they Could master all things—but I thought alone ¹⁷⁵

This misery was mine. My father is Tamed down; my mother has forgot the
mind

Which made her thirst for knowledge at the risk

Of an eternal curse; my brother is ¹⁷⁹

A watching shepherd boy, who offers up

The firstlings of the flock to him who bids

The earth yield nothing to us without
sweat;

My sister Zillah sings an earlier hymn
Than the birds' matins; and my Adah, my Own and beloved, she, too, understand;

not ¹⁸⁵

The mind which overwhelms me: never till Now met I aught to sympathise with me.

'Tis well—I rather would consort with spirits.

Lucifer. And hadst thou not been fit by thine own soul

For such companionship, I would not now ¹⁹⁰

Have stood before thee as I am: a serpent
Had been enough to charm ye, as before.

Cain. Ah! didst thou tempt my mother?

Lucifer. I tempt none, Save with the truth: was not the tree the
tree

Of knowledge? and was not the tree of life
Still fruitful? Did I bid her pluck them not? ¹⁹⁶

Did I plant things prohibited within
The reach of beings innocent, and curious
By their own innocence? I would have made ye

Gods; and even He who thrust ye forth, so thrust ye 200

Because 'ye should not eat the fruits of
life,
And become gods as we.' Were those his
words?

Cain. They were, as I have heard from those who heard them,
In thunder.

Lucifer. Then who was the demon? He Who would not let ye live, or he who
would 205

Have made ye live for ever in the joy
And power of knowledge?

Cain. Would they had snatch'd both
The fruits, or neither!

Lucifer. One is yours already,
The other may be still.

Cain. How so?

Lucifer. By being Yourselves, in your resistance. Nothing
can 210

Quench the mind, if the mind will be itself
And centre of surrounding things—'tis
made

To sway.

Cain. But didst thou tempt my parents?

Lucifer. I?
Poor clay! what should I tempt them for,
or how?

Cain. They say the serpent was a
spirit. 215

Lucifer. Who
Saith that? It is not written so on high:
The proud One will not so far falsify,
Though man's vast fears and little vanity
Would make him cast upon the spiritual
nature

His own low failing. The snake was the snake— 220

No more; and yet not less than those he
tempted,

In nature being earth also—more in wisdom,

Since he could overcome them, and fore-
knew

The knowledge fatal to their narrow joys.
Think'st thou I'd take the shape of things
that die? 225

Cain. But the thing had a demon?

Lucifer. He but woke one
In those he spake to with his forked tongue.
I tell thee that the serpent was no more
Than a mere serpent: ask the cherubim
Who guard the tempting tree. When thousand ages 230

Have roll'd o'er your dead ashes, and
your seed's,

The seed of the then world may thus array

Their earliest fault in fable, and attribute
To me a shape I scorn, as I scorn all That bows to him, who made things but to bend 235

Before his sullen, sole eternity;
But we, who see the truth, must speak it.

Thy
Fond parents listen'd to a creeping thing,
And fell. For what should spirits tempt them? What

Was there to envy in the narrow bounds
Of Paradise, that spirits who pervade 241
Space—but I speak to thee of what thou know'st not,

With all thy tree of knowledge.

Cain. But thou canst not Speak aught of knowledge which I would
not know,

And do not thirst to know, and bear a
mind 245

To know.

Lucifer. And heart to look on?

Cain. Be it proved.

Lucifer. Darest thou look on Death?

Cain. He has not yet

Been seen.

Lucifer. But must be undergone.

Cain. My father

Says he is something dreadful, and my mother

Weeps when he's named; and Abel lifts his eyes 250

To heaven, and Zillah casts hers to the
earth,

And sighs a prayer; and Adah looks on
me,

And speaks not.

Lucifer. And thou?

Cain. Thoughts unspeakable
Crowd in my breast to burning, when I
hear 254

Of this almighty Death, who is, it seems,
Inevitable. Could I wrestle with him?

I wrestled with the lion, when a boy,
In play, till he ran roaring from my gripe.

Lucifer. It has no shape; but will absorb all things

That bear the form of earth-born being.

Cain. Ah! 260

I thought it was a being: who could do
Such evil things to beings save a being?

Lucifer. Ask the Destroyer.

Cain. Who?

Lucifer. The Maker—call him

Which name thou wilt: he makes but to destroy.

Cain. I knew not that, yet thought it,
since I heard 265

Of Death: although I know not what it is,
Yet it seems horrible. I have look'd out

In the vast desolate night in search of him;
And when I saw gigantic shadows in

The umbrage of the walls of Eden,
chequer'd 270

By the far-flashing of the cherubs' swords,
I watch'd for what I thought his coming:
for

With fear rose longing in my heart to know What 'twas which shook us all—but nothing came. 274

And then I turn'd my weary eyes from off
Our native and forbidden Paradise,
Up to the lights above us, in the azure,
Which are so beautiful: shall they, too,
die?

Lucifer. Perhaps—but long outlive
both thine and thee.

Cain. I'm glad of that: I would not have them die— 280

They are so lovely. What is death? I fear,
I feel, it is a dreadful thing; but what,
I cannot compass: 'tis denounced against
us,

Both them who sinn'd and sinn'd not, as an ill— 284

What ill?

Lucifer. To be resolved into the earth.

Cain. But shall I know it?

Lucifer. As I know not death,
I cannot answer.

Cain. Were I quiet earth,
That were no evil: would I ne'er had been Aught else but dust!

Lucifer. That is a grovelling wish,
Less than thy father's, for he wish'd to
know. 290

Cain. But not to live, or wherefore
pluck'd he not

The life-tree?

Lucifer. He was hinder'd.

Cain. Deadly error!

Not to snatch first that fruit:—but ere he
pluck'd

The knowledge, he was ignorant of death.
Alas! I scarcely now know what it is, 295
And yet I fear it—fear I know not what!

Lucifer. And I, who know all things,
fear nothing; see

What is true knowledge.

Cain. Wilt thou teach me all?

Lucifer. Ay, upon one condition.

Cain. Name it.

Lucifer. That

Thou dost fall down and worship me—
thy Lord. 300

Cain. Thou art not the Lord my father
worships.

Lucifer. No.

Cain. His equal?

Lucifer. No;—I have nought
in common with him!

Nor would: I would be aught above—
beneath—

Aught save a sharer or a servant of
His power. I dwell apart; but I am great:— Many there are who worship me, and
more 306

Who shall—be thou amongst the first.

Cain.

I never

As yet have bow'd unto my father's God,
Although my brother Abel oft implores
That I would join with him in sacrifice:—
Why should I bow to thee?

Lucifer. Hast thou ne'er bow'd 311
To him?

Cain. Have I not said it?—need I say
it?

Could not thy mighty knowledge teach thee that?

Lucifer. He who bows not to him has bow'd to me.

Cain. But I will bend to neither.

Lucifer. Ne'er the less, 315
Thou art my worshipper; not worshipping
Him makes thee mine the same.

Cain. And what is that?

Lucifer. Thou'lt know here—and hereafter.

Cain. Let me but

Be taught the mystery of my being.

Lucifer. Follow

Where I will lead thee.

Cain. But I must retire 320

till the earth—for I had promised—

Lucifer. What?

Cain. To cull some first-fruits.

Lucifer. Why?

Cain. To offer up

With Abel on an altar.

Lucifer. Said'st thou not

Thou ne'er hadst bent to him who made
thee?

Cain. Yes—

But Abel's earnest prayer has wrought
upon me. 325

The offering is more his than mine—and
Adah—

Lucifer. Why dost thou hesitate?

Cain. She is my sister,

Born on the same day, of the same womb;
and

She wrung from me, with tears, this promise; and

Rather than see her weep, I would, methinks, 330

Bear all—and worship aught.

Lucifer. Then follow me!

Cain. I will.

Enter ADAH.

Adah. My brother, I have come for
thee;

It is our hour of rest and joy—and we Have less without thee. Thou hast labour'd not

This morn; but I have done thy task: the fruits 335

Are ripe, and glowing as the light which ripens:

Come away.

Cain. Seest thou not?

Adah. I see an angel;

Did I plant things prohibited within
The reach of beings innocent, and curious
By their own innocence? I would have made ye

Gods; and even He who thrust ye forth, so thrust ye 200

Because 'ye should not eat the fruits of
life,
And become gods as we.' Were those his
words?

Cain. They were, as I have heard from those who heard them,
In thunder.

Lucifer. Then who was the demon? He Who would not let ye live, or he who
would 205

Have made ye live for ever in the joy
And power of knowledge?

Cain. Would they had snatch'd both
The fruits, or neither!

Lucifer. One is yours already,
The other may be still.

Cain. How so?

Lucifer. By being Yourself, in your resistance. Nothing
can 210

Quench the mind, if the mind will be itself
And centre of surrounding things—'tis
made

To sway.

Cain. But didst thou tempt my parents?

Lucifer. I?
Poor clay! what should I tempt them for,
or how?

Cain. They say the serpent was a
spirit. 215

Lucifer. Who
Saith that? It is not written so on high:
The proud One will not so far falsify,
Though man's vast fears and little vanity
Would make him cast upon the spiritual
nature

His own low failing. The snake was the
snake— 220

No more; and yet not less than those he
tempted,

In nature being earth also—more in
wisdom,

Since he could overcome them, and fore-
knew

The knowledge fatal to their narrow joys.
Think'st thou I'd take the shape of things
that die? 225

Cain. But the thing had a demon?

Lucifer. He but woke one
In those he spake to with his forked tongue.

I tell thee that the serpent was no more
Than a mere serpent: ask the cherubim
Who guard the tempting tree. When thousand ages 230

Have roll'd o'er your dead ashes, and
your seed's,

The seed of the then world may thus array

Their earliest fault in fable, and attribute
To me a shape I scorn, as I scorn all That bows to him, who made things but to
bend 235

Before his sullen, sole eternity;

But we, who see the truth, must speak it.
Thy

Fond parents listen'd to a creeping thing,
And fell. For what should spirits tempt
them? What

Was there to envy in the narrow bounds
Of Paradise, that spirits who pervade 241
Space—but I speak to thee of what
thou know'st not,

With all thy tree of knowledge.

Cain. But thou canst not Speak aught of knowledge which I would
not know,

And do not thirst to know, and bear a
mind 245

To know.

Lucifer. And heart to look on?

Cain. Be it proved.

Lucifer. Darest thou look on Death?

Cain. He has not yet
Been seen.

Lucifer. But must be undergone.

Cain. My father
Says he is something dreadful, and my mother

Weeps when he's named; and Abel lifts
his eyes 250

To heaven, and Zillah casts hers to the
earth,

And sighs a prayer; and Adah looks on
me,

And speaks not.

Lucifer. And thou?

Cain. Thoughts unspeakable
Crowd in my breast to burning, when I
hear 254

Of this almighty Death, who is, it seems,
Inevitable. Could I wrestle with him?

I wrestled with the lion, when a boy,
In play, till he ran roaring from my gripe.

Lucifer. It has no shape; but will absorb all things

That bear the form of earth-born being.

Cain. Ah! 260

I thought it was a being: who could do
Such evil things to beings save a being?

Lucifer. Ask the Destroyer.

Cain. Who?

Lucifer. The Maker—call him
Which name thou wilt: he makes but to
destroy.

Cain. I knew not that, yet thought it,
since I heard 265

Of Death: although I know not what it is,
Yet it seems horrible. I have look'd out

In the vast desolate night in search of him;
And when I saw gigantic shadows in

The umbrage of the walls of Eden,
chequer'd 270

By the far-flashing of the cherubs' swords,
I watch'd for what I thought his coming:
for

With fear rose longing in my heart to know What 'twas which shook us all—but
nothing came. 274

And then I turn'd my weary eyes from off
Our native and forbidden Paradise,
Up to the lights above us, in the azure,
Which are so beautiful: shall they, too,
die?

Lucifer. Perhaps—but long outlive
both thine and thee.

Cain. I'm glad of that: I would not have them die— 280

They are so lovely. What is death? I fear,
I feel, it is a dreadful thing; but what,
I cannot compass: 'tis denounced against
us,

Both them who sinn'd and sinn'd not, as
an ill— 284

What ill?

Lucifer. To be resolved into the earth.

Cain. But shall I know it?

Lucifer. As I know not death,
I cannot answer.

Cain. Were I quiet earth,
That were no evil: would I ne'er had been
Aught else but dust!

Lucifer. That is a grovelling wish,
Less than thy father's, for he wish'd to
know. 290

Cain. But not to live, or wherefore
pluck'd he not

The life-tree?

Lucifer. He was hinder'd.

Cain. Deadly error!
Not to snatch first that fruit:—but ere he
pluck'd

The knowledge, he was ignorant of death.
Alas! I scarcely now know what it is, 295
And yet I fear it—fear I know not what!

Lucifer. And I, who know all things,
fear nothing; see

What is true knowledge.

Cain. Wilt thou teach me all?

Lucifer. Ay, upon one condition.

Cain. Name it.

Lucifer. That
Thou dost fall down and worship me—
thy Lord. 300

Cain. Thou art not the Lord my father
worships.

Lucifer. No.

Cain. His equal?

Lucifer. No;—I have nought
in common with him!

Nor would: I would be aught above—
beneath—

Aught save a sharer or a servant of
His power. Idwell apart; but I am great:— Many there are who worship me, and
more 306

Who shall—be thou amongst the first.

Cain.

I never

As yet have bow'd unto my father's God,
Although my brother Abel oft implores
That I would join with him in sacrifice:—
Why should I bow to thee?

Lucifer. Hast thou ne'er bow'd 311
To him?

Cain. Have I not said it?—need I say
it?

Could not thy mighty knowledge teach
thee that?

Lucifer. He who bows not to him has
bow'd to me.

Cain. But I will bend to neither.

Lucifer. Ne'er the less, 315
Thou art my worshipper; not worshipping
Him makes thee mine the same.

Cain. And what is that?

Lucifer. Thou'lt know here—and hereafter.

Cain. Let me but
Be taught the mystery of my being.

Lucifer. Follow

Where I will lead thee.

Cain. But I must retire 320
till the earth—for I had promised—

Lucifer. What?

Cain. To cull some first-fruits.

Lucifer. Why?

Cain. To offer up

With Abel on an altar.

Lucifer. Said'st thou not
Thou ne'er hadst bent to him who made

Cain. Yes—

But Abel's earnest prayer has wrought
upon me. 325

The offering is more his than mine—and
Adah—

Lucifer. Why dost thou hesitate?

Cain. She is my sister,
Born on the same day, of the same womb;
and

She wrung from me, with tears, this promise; and

Rather than see her weep, I would, me-
thinks, 330

Bear all—and worship aught.

Lucifer. Then follow me!

Cain. I will.

Enter ADAH.

Adah. My brother, I have come for
thee;

It is our hour of rest and joy—and we Have less without thee. Thou hast
labour'd not

This morn; but I have done thy task: the
fruits 335

Are ripe, and glowing as the light which
ripens:

Come away.

Cain. Seest thou not?

Adah. I see an angel;

We have seen many: will he share our hour

Of rest?—he is welcome.

Cain. But he is not like The angels we have seen.

Adah. Are there, then, others? 340
But he is welcome, as they were: they deign'd

To be our guests—will he?

Cain [to Lucifer]. Wilt thou?
Lucifer. I ask

Thee to be mine.

Cain. I must away with him.

Adah. And leave us?

Cain. Ay.

Adah. And me?

Cain. Beloved Adah!

Adah. Let me go with thee.

Lucifer. No, she must not.

Adah. Who

Art thou that steppest between heart and heart? 346

Cain. He is a god.

Adah. How know'st thou?

Cain. He speaks like

A god.

Adah. So did the serpent, and it lied.

Lucifer. Thou errest, Adah!—was not the tree that 349

Of knowledge?

Adah. Ay—to our eternal sorrow.

Lucifer. And yet that grief is knowledge—so he lied not:

And if he did betray you, 'twas with truth; And truth in its own essence cannot be

But good.

Adah. But all we know of it has gather'd

Evil on ill; expulsion from our home, And dread, and toil, and sweat, and heaviness; 356

Remorse of that which was—and hope of that

Which cometh not. Cain! walk not with this spirit.

Bear with what we have borne, and love me—I Love thee.

Lucifer. More than thy mother, and thy sire? 360

Adah. I do. Is that a sin, too?

Lucifer. No, not yet;

It one day will be in your children.

Adah. What!

Must not my daughter love her brother Enoch?

Lucifer. Not as thou lovest Cain.

Adah. Oh, my God!

Shall they not love and bring forth things that love 365

Out of their love? have they not drawn their milk

Out of this bosom? was not he, their father,

Born of the same sole womb, in the same hour

With me? did we not love each other? and In multiplying our being multiply 370

Things which will love each other as we love

Them?—And as I love thee, my Cain! go not

Forth with this spirit; he is not of ours.

Lucifer. The sin I speak of is not of my making,

And cannot be a sin in you—whate'er It seem in those who will replace ye in Mortality.

Adah. What is the sin which is not Sin in itself? Can circumstance make sin

Or virtue?—if it doth, we are the slaves Of—

Lucifer. Higher things than ye are slaves: and higher 380

Than them or ye would be so, did they not Prefer an independency of torture

To the smooth agonies of adulation, In hymns and harpings, and self-seeking prayers,

To that which is omnipotent, because It is omnipotent, and not from love, 386

But terror and self-hope.

Adah. Omnipotence

Must be all goodness.

Lucifer. Was it so in Eden?

Adah. Fiend! tempt me not with beauty; thou art fairer

Than was the serpent, and as false.

Lucifer. As true. 390

Ask Eve, your mother: bears she not the knowledge

Of good and evil?

Adah. Oh, my mother! thou Hast pluck'd a fruit more fatal to thine offspring

Than to thyself; thou at the least hast pass'd

Thy youth in Paradise, in innocent 395

And happy intercourse with happy spirits; But we, thy children, ignorant of Eden,

Are girt about by demons, who assume The words of God, and tempt us with our own

Disatisfied and curious thoughts—as thou 400

Wert work'd on by the snake, in thy most flush'd

And heedless, harmless wantonness of bliss.

I cannot answer this immortal thing Which stands before me; I cannot abhor him; 404

I look upon him with a pleasing fear, And yet I fly not from him: in his eye

There is a fastening attraction which Fixes my fluttering eyes on his; my heart

Beats quick; he awes me, and yet draws me near,

Nearer and nearer:—Cain—Cain—save me from him! 410

Cain. What dreads my Adah? This is no ill spirit.

Adah. He is not God—nor God's: I have beheld

The cherubs and the seraphs; he looks not like them.

Cain. But there are spirits loftier
still—

The archangels.

Lucifer. And still loftier than the archangels. 415

Adah. Ay—but not blessed.

Lucifer. If the blessedness

Consists in slavery—no.

Adah. I have heard it said,

The seraphs love most—cherubim *know
most*—

And this should be a cherub—since he loves not.

Lucifer. And if the higher knowledge quenches love, 420

What must he be you cannot love when
known?

Since the all-knowing cherubim love
least,

The seraphs' love can be but ignorance:
That they are not compatible, the doom

Of thy fond parents, for their daring, proves. 425

Choose betwixt love and knowledge—
since there is

No other choice: your sire hath chosen
already:

His worship is but fear.

Adah. Oh, Cain! choose love.

Cain. For thee, my Adah, I choose not—it was Born with me—but I love nought else.

Adah. Our parents?

Cain. Did they love us when they snatch'd from the tree 430

That which hath driven us all from Paradise?

Adah. We were not born then—and if we had been,

Should we not love them and our children,
Cain?

Cain. My little Enoch! and his lisping sister!

Could I but deem them happy, I would half 435

Forget—but it can never be forgotten
Through thrice a thousand generations!

never Shall men love the remembrance of the
man

Who sow'd the seed of evil and mankind
In the same hour! They pluck'd the tree of science 440

And sin—and, not content with their own
sorrow,

Begot me—thee—and all the few that are,

And all the unnumber'd and innumerable Multitudes, millions, myriads, which may
be,

To inherit agonies accumulated 445
By ages!—and I must be sire of such
things!

Thy beauty and thy love—my love and joy,
The rapturous moment and the placid

hour,
All we love in our children and each other,

But lead them and ourselves through many
years 450

Of sin and pain—or few, but still of
sorrow,

Intercheck'd with an instant of brief
pleasure,

To Death—the unknown! Methinks the tree of knowledge

Hath not fulfill'd its promise:—if they sinn'd,

At least they ought to have known all things that are 455

Of knowledge—and the mystery of death.
What do they know?—that they are miserable.

What need of snakes and fruits to teach us

that?
Adah. I am not wretched, Cain, and if

thou
Wert happy—

Cain. Be thou happy, then,
alone— 460

I will have nought to do with happiness,
Which humbles me and mine.

Adah. Alone I could not,
Nor would be happy; but with those around us

I think I could be so, despite of death,

Which, as I know it not, I dread not,
though 465

It seems an awful shadow—if I may Judge from what I have heard.

Lucifer. And thou couldst not Alone, thou say'st, be happy?

Adah. Alone! Oh, my God!
Who could be happy and alone, or good?

To me my solitude seems sin; unless 470
When I think how soon I shall see my

brother,
His brother, and our children, and our

parents.
Lucifer. Yet thy God is alone; and is he happy,

Lonely, and good?

Adah. He is not so; he hath 474
The angels and the mortals to make happy,

And thus becomes so in diffusing joy.
What else can joy be, but the spreading

joy?
Lucifer. Ask of your sire, the exile

fresh from Eden;
Or of his first-born son: ask your own

heart;
It is not tranquil.

Adah. Alas! no! and you— 480
Are you of heaven?

Lucifer. If I am not, inquire
The cause of this all-spreading happiness (Which you proclaim) of the all-great and
good 483

Maker of life and living things; it is
His secret, and he keeps it. We must bear,
And some of us resist, and both in vain,
His seraphs say: but it is worth the trial,
Since better may not be without: there is
A wisdom in the spirit, which directs
To right, as in the dim blue air the eye
Of you, young mortals, lights at once upon The star which watches, welcoming the
morn.

Adah. It is a beautiful star; I love it for Its beauty.

Lucifer. And why not adore?

Adah. Our father
Adores the Invisible only.

Lucifer. But the symbols 495
Of the Invisible are the loveliest
Of what is visible; and yon bright star
Is leader of the host of heaven.

Adah. Our father
Saith that he has beheld the God himself
Who made him and our mother.

Lucifer. Hast thou seen him? 500

Adah. Yes—in his works.

Lucifer. But in his being?

Adah. No—

Save in my father, who is God's own
image;

Or in his angels, who are like to thee—
And brighter, yet less beautiful and powerful 504

In seeming: as the silent sunny noon,
All light, they look upon us; but thou seem'st

Like an ethereal night, where long white clouds

Streak the deep purple, and unnumber'd
stars

Spangle the wonderful mysterious vault
With things that look as if they would be suns; 510

So beautiful, unnumber'd, and endearing,
Not dazzling, and yet drawing us to them,
They fill my eyes with tears, and so dost
thou.

Thou seem'st unhappy: do not make us so,
And I will weep for thee.

Lucifer. Alas! those tears! 515 Couldst thou but know what oceans will be shed—

Adah. By me?

Lucifer. By all.

Adah. What all?

Lucifer. The million millions—
The myriad myriads—the all-peopled
earth—

The unpeopled earth—and the o'er-peopled hell,

Of which thy bosom is the germ.

Adah. O Cain! 520

This spirit curseth us.

Cain. Let him say on;

Him will I follow.

Adah. Whither?

Lucifer. To a place
Whence he shall come back to thee in an
hour;

But in that hour see things of many days.

Adah. How can that be? 524

Lucifer. Did not your Maker make
Out of old worlds this new one in few days?
And cannot I, who aided in this work, Show in an hour what he hath made in
many,

Or hath destroy'd in few?

Cain. Lead on.
Adah. Will he,

In sooth, return within an hour?

Lucifer. He shall. 530

With us acts are exempt from time, and we

Can crowd eternity into an hour,

Or stretch an hour into eternity:

We breathe not by a mortal measure-
ment—

But that's a mystery. Cain, come on with
me. 535

Adah. Will he return?

Lucifer. Ay, woman! he alone Of mortals from that place (the first and
last

Who shall return, save ONE), shall come back to thee,

To make that silent and expectant world
As populous as this: at present there 540
Are few inhabitants.

Adah. Where dwellest thou?

Lucifer. Throughout all space. Where should I dwell? Where are

Thy God or Gods—there am I: all things
are

Divided with me: life and death—and
time—

Eternity—and heaven and earth—and
that 545

Which is not heaven nor earth, but peopled with

Those who once peopled or shall people
both—

These are my realms! So that I do divide
His, and possess a kingdom which is not His. If I were not that which I have
said, 550

Could I stand here? His angels are within Your vision.

Adah. So they were when the fair serpent

Spoke with our mother first.

Lucifer. Cain! thou hast heard.
If thou dost long for knowledge, I can
sate

That thirst; nor ask thee to partake of
fruits 555

Which shall deprive thee of a single good
The conqueror has left thee. Follow me.

Cain. Spirit, I have said it.

[Exeunt LUCIFER and CAIN.
Adah [follows exclaiming]. Cain! my brother! Cain!

ACT II

SCENE I.—The Abyss of Space.

Cain. I tread on air, and sink not; yet
I fear

To sink.

Lucifer. Have faith in me, and thou shalt be

Borne on the air, of which I am the prince.

Cain. Can I do so without impiety?

Lucifer. Believe—and sink not!
doubt—and perish! thus

Would run the edict of the other God,
Who names me demon to his angels; they Echo the sound to miserable things, Which, knowing nought beyond their shallow senses,

Worship the word which strikes their ear,
and deem

Evil or good what is proclaim'd to them
In their abasement. I will have none such:
Worship or worship not, thou shalt behold
The worlds beyond thy little world, nor be Amerc'd for doubts beyond thy little life,
With torture of my dooming. There will
come

An hour, when, toss'd upon some water-
drops,

A man shall say to a man, 'Believe in me,
And walk the waters;' and the man shall walk

The billows and be safe. I will not say,
Believe in me, as a conditional creed
To save thee; but fly with me o'er the gulf
Of space an equal flight, and I will show
What thou dar'st not deny,—the history
Of past, and present, and of future worlds.

Cain. Oh, god, or demon, or whate'er thou art,

Is this our earth?

Lucifer. Dost thou not recognise
The dust which form'd your father?

Cain. Can it be?
Yon small blue circle, swinging in far
ether,

With an inferior circlet near it still,
Which looks like that which lit our earthly
night?

Is this our Paradise? Where are its walls,
And they who guard them?

Lucifer. Point me out the site Of Paradise.

Cain. How should I? As we move Like sunbeams onward, it grows small and smaller,

And as it waxes little, and then less,
Gathers a halo round it, like the light

Which shone the roundest of the stars,
when I

Beheld them from the skirts of Paradise:
Methinks they both, as we recede from
them,

Appear to join the innumerable stars
Which are around us; and, as we move on,
Increase their myriads.

Lucifer. And if there should be Worlds greater than thine own, inhabited
By greater things, and they themselves far
more

In number than the dust of thy dull earth,
Though multiplied to animated atoms,
All living, and all doom'd to death, and wretched,

What wouldst thou think?

Cain. I should be proud of thought
Which knew such things.

Lucifer. But if that high thought were Link'd to a servile mass of matter, and,
Knowing such things, aspiring to such
things,

And science still beyond them, were chain'd down

To the most gross and petty paltry wants,
All foul and fulsome, and the very best
Of thine enjoyments a sweet degradation,
A most enervating and filthy cheat
To lure thee on to the renewal of Fresh souls and bodies, all foredoom'd to be
As frail, and few so happy—

Cain. Spirit! I Know nought of death, save as a dreadful
thing

Of which I have heard my parents speak, as of

A hideous heritage I owe to them
No less than life; a heritage not happy,
If I may judge, till now. But, spirit! if It be as thou hast said (and I within Feel the prophetic torture of its truth),
Here let me die: for to give birth to those Who can but suffer many years, and die,
Methinks is merely propagating death,
And multiplying murder.

Lucifer. Thou canst not All die—there is what must survive.

Cain. The Other
Spake not of this unto my father, when He shut him forth from Paradise, with
death

Written upon his forehead. But at least Let what is mortal of me perish, that I may be in the rest as angels are.

Lucifer. I am angelic: wouldst thou be as I am?

Cain. I know not what thou art: I see thy power,
And see thou show'st me things beyond
my power,

Beyond all power of my born faculties,
Although inferior still to my desires
And my conceptions.

Lucifer. What are they which dwell
So humbly in their pride, as to sojourn
With worms in clay?

Cain. And what art thou who dwellest
So haughtily in spirit, and canst range
Nature and immortality—and yet 87
Seem'st sorrowful?

Lucifer. I seem that which I am;
And therefore do I ask of thee, if thou Wouldst be immortal?

Cain. Thou hast said, I must be 90
Immortal in despite of me. I knew not
This until lately—but since it must be,
Let me, or happy or unhappy, learn
To anticipate my immortality.

Lucifer. Thou didst before I came upon thee.

Cain. How? 95

Lucifer. By suffering.

Cain. And must torture be immortal?

Lucifer. We and thy sons will try.

But now, behold!
Is it not glorious?

Cain. Oh, thou beautiful
And unimaginable ether! and Ye multiplying masses of increased 100
And still increasing lights! what are ye?
what

Is this blue wilderness of interminable
Air, where ye roll along, as I have seen
The leaves along the limpid streams of Eden? 104

Is your course measured for ye? Or do ye Sweep on in your unbounded revelry
Through an ærial universe of endless Expansion—at which my soul aches to think—

Intoxicated with eternity? 109
Oh God! Oh Gods! or whatsoe'er ye are!
How beautiful ye are! how beautiful
Your works, or accidents, or whatsoe'er
They may be! Let me die, as atoms die
(If that they die), or know ye in your might And knowledge! My thoughts are not in this hour 115

Unworthy what I see, though my dust is;
Spirit! let me expire, or see them nearer.

Lucifer. Art thou not nearer? look back to thine earth!

Cain. Where is it? I see nothing save a mass
Of most innumerable lights.

Lucifer. Look there! 120

Cain. I cannot see it.

Lucifer. Yet it sparkles still.

Cain. That!—yonder!

Lucifer. Yea.

Cain. And wilt thou tell me so?

Why, I have seen the fire-flies and fire-
worms

Sprinkle the dusky groves and the green
banks

In the dim twilight, brighter than yon
world 125

Which bears them.

Lucifer. Thou hast seen both worms and worlds,
Each bright and sparkling—what dost think of them?

Cain. That they are beautiful in their own sphere,
And that the night, which makes both beautiful,

The little shining fire-fly in its flight, 130
And the immortal star in its great course, Must both be guided.

Lucifer. But by whom or what?

Cain. Show me.

Lucifer. Dar'st thou behold?

Cain. How know I what I dare behold? As yet, thou hast shown nought

I dare not gaze on further.

Lucifer. On, then, with me. 135

Wouldst thou behold things mortal or immortal?

Cain. Why, what are things?

Lucifer. Both partly: but what doth Sit next thy heart?

Cain. The things I see.

Lucifer. But what
Sate nearest it?

Cain. The things I have not seen,
Nor ever shall—the mysteries of death.

Lucifer. What, if I show to thee things which have died, 141

As I have shown thee much which cannot
die?

Cain. Do so.

Lucifer. Away, then! on our mighty
wings.

Cain. Oh! how we cleave the blue!
The stars fade from us!

The earth! where is my earth? Let me look on it, 145

For I was made of it.

Lucifer. 'Tis now beyond thee,
Less, in the universe, than thou in it;

Yet deem not that thou canst escape it;
thou

Shalt soon return to earth, and all its dust:
'Tis part of thy eternity, and mine. 150

Cain. Where dost thou lead me?

Lucifer. To what was before thee!
The phantasm of the world; of which thy
world

Is but the wreck.

Cain. What! is it not then new?

Lucifer. No more than life is; and that was ere thou 154

Or I were, or the things which seem to us Greater than either: many things will have

No end; and some, which would pretend
to have

Had no beginning, have had one as mean
As thou; and mightier things have been extinct

To make way for much meaner than we
can 160

Surmise; for moments only and the space
Have been and must be all unchangeable.
But changes make not death, except to
clay;

But thou art clay—and canst but comprehend

That which was clay, and such thou shalt
behold.

Cain. Clay, spirit! what thou wilt, I can survey.

Lucifer. Away, then!

Cain. But the lights fade from me fast,
And some till now grew larger as we approach'd,

And wore the look of worlds.

Lucifer. And such they are.

Cain. And Edens in them?

Lucifer. It may be.

Cain. And men? 170

Lucifer. Yea, or things higher.

Cain. Ay? and serpents too?

Lucifer. Wouldst thou have men without them? must no reptiles

Breathe, save the erect ones?

Cain. How the lights recede!

Where fly we?

Lucifer. To the world of phantoms,
which 174

Are beings past, and shadows still to come.

Cain. But it grows dark, and dark—the stars are gone!

Lucifer. And yet thou seest.

Cain. 'Tis a fearful light!

No sun, no moon, no lights innumerable.

The very blue of the empurpled night

Fades to a dreary twilight, yet I see 180

Huge dusky masses; but unlike the worlds

We were approaching, which, begirt with
light,

Seem'd full of life even when their atmosphere

Of light gave way, and show'd them taking shapes

Unequal, of deep valleys and vast mountains; 185

And some emitting sparks, and some displaying

Enormous liquid plains, and some begirt

With luminous belts, and floating moons, which took,

Like them, the features of fair earth:—
instead,

All here seems dark and dreadful.

Lucifer. But distinct.
Thou seekest to behold death, and dead
things? 191

Cain. I seek it not; but as I know there
are

Such, and that my sire's sin makes him and
me,

And all that we inherit, liable

To such, I would behold at once, what I Must one day see perforce.

Lucifer. Behold!

Cain. 'Tis darkness. 196

Lucifer. And so it shall be ever; but we will

Unfold its gates!

Cain. Enormous vapours roll

Apart—what's this?

Lucifer. Enter!

Cain. Can I return?

Lucifer. Return! be sure: how else should death be peopled? 200

Its present realm is thin to what it will be Through thee and thine.

Cain. The clouds still open wide And wider, and make widening circles round us.

Lucifer. Advance!

Cain. And thou!

Lucifer. Fear not—without me thou Couldst not have gone beyond thy world.

On! on! 205

[They disappear through the clouds.]

SCENE II.—Hades.

Enter LUCIFER and CAIN.

Cain. How silent and how vast are these dim worlds!

For they seem more than one, and yet more peopled

Than the huge brilliant luminous orbs which swung

So thickly in the upper air, that I Had deem'd them rather the bright populace 5

Of some all unimaginable Heaven,
Than things to be inhabited themselves,

But that on drawing near them I beheld
Their swelling into palpable immensity

Of matter, which seem'd made for life to dwell on, 10

Rather than life itself. But here, all is So shadowy, and so full of twilight, that

It speaks of a day past.

Lucifer. It is the realm

Of death.—Wouldst have it present?

Cain. Till I know 14

That which it really is, I cannot answer.
But if it be as I have heard my father

Deal out in his long homilies, 'tis a thing—
Oh God! I dare not think on't! Cursed be

He who invented life that leads to death!
Or the dull mass of life, that, being life,

Could not retain, but needs must forfeit it—
Even for the innocent!

Lucifer. Dost thou curse thy father?

Cain. Cursed he not me in giving me
my birth?

Cursed he not me before my birth, I
daring

To pluck the fruit forbidden?

Lucifer. Thou say'st well: 25
The curse is mutual 'twixt thy sire and
thee—

But for thy sons and brother?

Cain. Let them share it With me, their sire and brother! What else is Bequeath'd to me? I leave them my inheritance.
Oh, ye interminable gloomy realms 30
Of swimming shadows and enormous
shapes,
Some fully shown, some indistinct, and all Mighty and melancholy—what are ye?
Live ye, or have ye lived?

Lucifer. Somewhat of both.

Cain. Then what is death?

Lucifer. What! Hath not he who made ye 35
Said 'tis another life?

Cain. Till now he hath
Said nothing, save that all shall die.

Lucifer. Perhaps
He one day will unfold that further secret.

Cain. Happy the day!

Lucifer. Yes; happy! when unfolded, Through agonies unspeakable, and clogg'd 40

With agonies eternal, to innumerable Yet unborn myriads of unconscious atoms,

All to be animated for this only!

Cain. What are these mighty phantoms which I see Floating around me?—They wear not the
form 45

Of the intelligences I have seen
Round our regretted and unenter'd Eden, Nor wear the form of man as I have view'd
it

In Adam's and in Abel's, and in mine, Nor in my sister-bride's, nor in my children's: 50

And yet they have an aspect, which, though not

Of men nor angels, looks like something which,

If not the last, rose higher than the first,
Haughty, and high, and beautiful, and
full

Of seeming strength, but of inexplicable Shape; for I never saw such. They bear
not 56

The wing of seraph, nor the face of man,
Nor form of mightiest brute, nor aught
that is

Now breathing; mighty yet and beautiful
As the most beautiful and mighty which Live, and yet so unlike them, that I scarce
Can call them living.

Lucifer. Yet they lived.

Cain. Where?

Lucifer. Where Thou livest.

Cain. When?

Lucifer. On what thou callest earth
They did inhabit.

Cain. Adam is the first.

Lucifer. Of thine, I grant thee—but too mean to be 65
The last of these.

Cain. And what are they?

Lucifer. That which Thou shalt be.

Cain. But what were they?

Lucifer. Living, high, Intelligent, good, great, and glorious
things,

As much superior unto all thy sire, 69
Adam, could e'er have been in Eden, as
The sixty-thousandth generation shall be,
In its dull damp degeneracy, to Thee and thy son;—and how weak they are, judge

By thy own flesh.

Cain. Ah me! and did they perish?

Lucifer. Yes, from their earth, as thou wilt fade from thine. 75

Cain. But was mine theirs?

Lucifer. It was.

Cain. But not as now.
It is too little and too lowly to Sustain such creatures.

Lucifer. True, it was more glorious.

Cain. And wherefore did it fall?

Lucifer. Ask him who fell.

Cain. But how?

Lucifer. By a most crushing and inexorable 80

Destruction and disorder of the elements,
Which struck a world to chaos, as a chaos Subsiding has struck out a world: such
things,

Though rare in time, are frequent in eternity.—

Pass on, and gaze upon the past.

Cain. 'Tis awful! 85

Lucifer. And true. Behold these phantoms! they were once

Material as thou art.

Cain. And must I be

Like them?

Lucifer. Let Him who made thee answer that.

I show thee what thy predecessors are,
And what they were thou feelest, in degree
Inferior as thy petty feelings and 91

Thy pettier portion of the immortal part
Of high intelligence and earthly strength.
What ye in common have with what they had

Is life, and what ye shall have—death: the
rest 95

Of your poor attributes is such as suits
Reptiles engender'd out of the subsiding Slime of a mighty universe, crush'd into

A scarcely-yet shaped planet, peopled with Things whose enjoyment was to be in blindness— 100

A Paradise of Ignorance, from which Knowledge was barr'd as poison. But
behold

What these superior beings are or were;
Or, if it irk thee, turn thee back and till
The earth, thy task—I'll waft thee there in safety. 105

Cain. No: I'll stay here.

Lucifer. How long?

Cain. For ever! Since

I must one day return here from the earth,
I rather would remain; I am sick of all That dust has shown me—let me dwell in shadows.

Lucifer. It cannot be: thou now beholdest as 110

A vision that which is reality.

To make thyself fit for this dwelling, thou Must pass through what the things thou see'st have pass'd—

The gates of death.

Cain. By what gate have we enter'd
Even now?

Lucifer. By mine! But, plighted to return, 115

My spirit buoys thee up to bathe in regions

Where all is breathless save thyself. Gaze
on;

But do not think to dwell here till thine
hour

Is come.

Cain. And these, too; can they ne'er repass

To earth again?

Lucifer. Their earth is gone for ever—So changed by its convulsion, they would
not 121

Be conscious to a single present spot
Of its new scarcely harden'd surface—
'twas—

Oh, what a beautiful world it was!

Cain. And is.

It is not with the earth, though I must till it,
I feel at war, but that I may not profit 126

By what it bears of beautiful, untoiling,
Nor gratify my thousand swelling thoughts

With knowledge, nor allay my thousand
fears

Of death and life.

Lucifer. What thy world is thou see'st,
But canst not comprehend the shadow of
That which it was.

Cain. And those enormous creatures,
Phantoms inferior in intelligence 133

(At least so seeming) to the things we have
pass'd,

Resembling somewhat the wild habitants
Of the deep woods of earth, the hugest
which 136

Roar nightly in the forest, but ten-fold
In magnitude and terror; taller than

The cherub-guarded walls of Eden, with Eyes flashing like the fiery swords which fence them, 140

And tusks projecting like the trees stripp'd
of

Their bark and branches—what were they?
Lucifer. That which

The Mammoth is in thy world;—but these lie

By myriads underneath its surface.

Cain. But None on it?

Lucifer. No: for thy frail race to war
With them would render the curse on it useless— 146

'Twould be destroy'd so early.

Cain. But why war?

Lucifer. You have forgotten the denunciation

Which drove your race from Eden—war
with all things,

And death to all things, and disease to most things, 150

And pangs, and bitterness; these were the fruits

Of the forbidden tree.

Cain. But animals—

Did they, too, eat of it, that they must die?

Lucifer. Your Maker told ye, they were made for you,

As you for him.—You would not have
their doom 155

Superior to your own? Had Adam not Fallen, all had stood.

Cain. Alas! the hopeless wretches!
They too must share my sire's fate, like his sons;

Like them, too, without having shared the apple;

Like them, too, without the so dear-bought knowledge! 160

It was a lying tree—for we know nothing.
At least it promised knowledge at the price

Of death—but knowledge still: but what knows man?

Lucifer. It may be death leads to the highest knowledge;

And being of all things the sole thing
certain, 165

At least leads to the surest science: therefore

The tree was true, though deadly.

Cain. These dim realms!
I see them, but I know them not.

Lucifer. Because
Thy hour is yet afar, and matter cannot Comprehend spirit wholly—but 'tis something 170

To know there are such realms.

Cain. We knew already

That there was death.

Lucifer. But not what was beyond it.
Cain. Nor know I now.

Lucifer. Thou knowest that there is A state, and many states beyond thine
own—

And this thou knewest not this morn.

Cain. But all Seems dim and shadowy.

Lucifer. Be content; it will 176
Seem clearer to thine immortality.

Cain. And yon immeasurable liquid
space
Of glorious azure, which floats on beyond us,
Which looks like water, and which I should deem 180
The river which flows out of Paradise Past my own dwelling, but that it is bank-
less
And boundless, and of an ethereal hue—
What is it?

Lucifer. There is still some such on
earth,
Although inferior, and thy children shall Dwell near it—'tis the phantasm of an
ocean. 186

Cain. 'Tis like another world; a liquid
sun—
And those inordinate creatures sporting
o'er
Its shining surface?

Lucifer. Are its inhabitants,
The past leviathans.

Cain. And yon immense Serpent, which rears his dripping mane and vasty 191
Head ten times higher than the haughtiest cedar Forth from the abyss, looking as he could coil
Himself around the orbs we lately look'd
on—
Is he not of the kind which bask'd beneath
The tree in Eden?

Lucifer. Eve, thy mother, best 196
Can tell what shape of serpent tempted her.

Cain. This seems too terrible. No doubt the other
Had more of beauty.

Lucifer. Hast thou ne'er beheld him?

Cain. Many of the same kind (at least so call'd), 200
But never that precisely which persuaded
The fatal fruit, nor even of the same aspect.

Lucifer. Your father saw him not?

Cain. No: 'twas my mother Who tempted him—she tempted by the serpent.

Lucifer. Good man! whene'er thy wife, or thy sons' wives, 205 Tempt thee or them to aught that's new or strange,
Be sure thou see'st first who hath tempted
them.

Cain. Thy precept comes too late:
there is no more
For serpents to tempt woman to.

Lucifer. But there Are some things still which woman may tempt man to, 210
And man tempt woman;—let thy sons
look to it!
My counsel is a kind one; for 'tis even

Given chiefly at my own expense; 'tis true,
'Twill not be follow'd, so there's little lost.

Cain. I understand not this.

Lucifer. The happier thou!—
Thy world and thou are still too young!
Thou thinkest 216
Thyself most wicked and unhappy: is it
Not so?

Cain. For crime, I know not; but for
pain,
I have felt much.

Lucifer. First-born of the first man!
Thy present state of sin, and thou art evil—
Of sorrow, and thou sufferest—are both
Eden 221
In all its innocence compared to what Thou shortly may'st be; and that state
again,
In its redoubled wretchedness, a Paradise
To what thy sons' sons' sons, accumulating In generations like to dust (which they
In fact but add to), shall endure and do.—
Now let us back to earth!

Cain. And wherefore didst thou Lead me here only to inform me this?

Lucifer. Was not thy quest for knowledge?

Cain. Yes; as being 230
The road to happiness.

Lucifer. If truth be so,
Thou hast it.

Cain. Then my father's God did well
When he prohibited the fatal tree.

Lucifer. But had done better in not planting it.

But ignorance of evil doth not save 235
From evil; it must still roll on the same,
A part of all things.

Cain. Not of all things. No:
I'll not believe it—for I thirst for good.

Lucifer. And who and what doth not?
Who covets evil
For its own bitter sake?—None—nothing!
'tis 240
The haven of all life, and lifelessness.

Cain. Within those glorious orbs which we beheld,
Distant, and dazzling, and innumerable,
Ere we came down into this phantom
realm,
Ill cannot come: they are too beautiful.

Lucifer. Thou hast seen them from afar.

Cain. And what of that? 246
Distance can but diminish glory—they,
When nearer, must be more ineffable.

Lucifer. Approach the things of earth
most beautiful,
And judge their beauty near.

Cain. I have done this—
The loveliest thing I know is loveliest nearest. 251

Lucifer. Then there must be delusion.
—What is that

Which being nearest to thine eyes is still More beautiful than beauteous things remote?

Cain. My sister Adah.—All the stars of heaven, 255
The deep blue noon of night, lit by an orb
Which looks a spirit, or a spirit's world—
The hues of twilight—the sun's gorgeous coming—

His setting indescribable, which fills
My eyes with pleasant tears as I behold
Him sink, and feel my heart float softly
with him 261

Along that western paradise of clouds,
The forest shade, the green bough, the bird's voice—

The vesper bird's, which seems to sing of
love,

And mingles with the song of cherubim,
As the day closes over Eden's walls:—
All these are nothing, to my eyes and
heart, 267

Like Adah's face: I turn from earth and
heaven

To gaze on it.

Lucifer. 'Tis fair as frail mortality,
In the first dawn and bloom of young creation, 270

And earliest embraces of earth's parents,
Can make its offspring; still it is delusion.

Cain. You think so, being not her
brother.

Lucifer. Mortal!
My brotherhood's with those who have no children.

Cain. Then thou canst have no fellowship with us. 275

Lucifer. It may be that thine own shall be for me.

But if thou dost possess a beautiful
Being beyond all beauty in thine eyes,
Why art thou wretched?

Cain. Why do I exist?
Why art thou wretched? why are all things
so? 280

Even he who made us must be, as the maker
Of things unhappy! To produce destruction

Can surely never be the task of joy,
And yet my sire says he's omnipotent:
Then why is evil—he being good? I ask'd
This question of my father; and he said,
Because this evil only was the path 287
To good. Strange good, that must arise from out

Its deadly opposite! I lately saw A lamb stung by a reptile: the poor suckling 290

Lay foaming on the earth, beneath the
vain

And piteous bleating of its restless dam;
My father pluck'd some herbs, and laid them to

The wound; and by degrees the helpless
wretch

Resumed its careless life, and rose to drain 295

The mother's milk, who o'er it tremulous
Stood licking its reviving limbs with joy.
Behold, my son! said Adam, how from evil

Springs good!

Lucifer. What didst thou answer?

Cain. Nothing; for
He is my father: but I thought, that 'twere
A better portion for the animal 301

Never to have been stung at all, than to Purchase renewal of its little life
With agonies unutterable, though Dispell'd by antidotes.

Lucifer. But as thou saidst
Of all beloved things thou lovest her 306
Who shared thy mother's milk, and giveth
hers

Unto thy children—

Cain. Most assuredly:
What should I be without her?

Lucifer. What am I?

Cain. Dost thou love nothing?

Lucifer. What does thy God love?

Cain. All things, my father says; but I confess 311

I see it not in their allotment here.
Lucifer. And, therefore, thou canst not see if I love

Or no, except some vast and general
purpose,

To which particular things must melt like
snows. 315

Cain. Snows! what are they?

Lucifer. Be happier in not knowing What thy remoter offspring must encounter;

But bask beneath the clime which knows no winter.

Cain. But dost thou not love something like thyself? 319

Lucifer. And dost thou love thyself?

Cain. Yes, but love more
What makes my feelings more endurable,
And is more than myself, because I love it.

Lucifer. Thou lovest it, because 'tis
beautiful,

As was the apple in thy mother's eye;
And when it ceases to be so, thy love
Will cease, like any other appetite. 326

Cain. Cease to be beautiful! how can that be?

Lucifer. With time.

Cain. But time has pass'd, and hitherto

Even Adam and my mother both are fair:
Not fair like Adah and the seraphim—
But very fair.

Lucifer. All that must pass away 331
In them and her.

Cain. I'm sorry for it; but Cannot conceive my love for her the less:

And when her beauty disappears, me-
thinks 334

He who creates all beauty will lose more
Than me in seeing perish such a work.

Lucifer. I pity thee who lovest what must perish.

Cain. And I thee who lov'st nothing.

Lucifer. And thy brother—
Sits he not near thy heart?

Cain. Why should he not?

Lucifer. Thy father loves him well—so does thy God. 340

Cain. And so do I.

Lucifer. 'Tis well and meekly done.

Cain. Meekly!

Lucifer. He is the second born of flesh,
And is his mother's favourite.

Cain. Let him keep Her favour, since the serpent was the first
To win it.

Lucifer. And his father's?

Cain. What is that
To me? should I not love that which all
love? 346

Lucifer. And the Jehovah—the indulgent Lord,
And bounteous planter of barr'd Paradise—

He, too, looks smilingly on Abel.

Cain. I
Ne'er saw him, and I know not if he smiles.

Lucifer. But you have seen his angels.

Cain. Rarely.

Lucifer. But 351 Sufficiently to see they love your brother:
His sacrifices are acceptable.

Cain. So be they! wherefore speak to me of this?

Lucifer. Because thou hast thought of this ere now.

Cain. And if 355
I have thought, why recall a thought that—[he pauses, as agitated!—Spirit!

Here we are in thy world; speak not of
mine.

Thou hast shown me wonders: thou hast shown me those

Mighty pre-Adamites who walk'd the
earth

Of which ours is the wreck: thou hast pointed out 360

Myriads of starry worlds, of which our
own

Is the dim and remote companion, in Infinity of life: thou hast shown me
shadows

Of that existence with the dreaded name
Which my sire brought us—Death; thou hast shown me much— 365

But not all: show me where Jehovah
dwells,

In his especial Paradise—or thine:
Where is it?

Lucifer. Here, and o'er all space.

Cain. But ye

Have some allotted dwelling—as all
things;

Clay has its earth, and other worlds their tenants; 370

All temporary breathing creatures their Peculiar element; and things which have Long ceased to breathe our breath, have theirs, thou say'st;

And the Jehovah and thyself have thine—
Ye do not dwell together?

Lucifer. No, we reign 375
Together; but our dwellings are asunder.

Cain. Would there were only one of ye! perchance

An unity of purpose might make union
In elements which seem now jarr'd in storms.

How came ye, being spirits, wise and infinite, 380

To separate? Are ye not as brethren in Your essence, and your nature, and your
glory?

Lucifer. Art thou not Abel's brother?

Cain. We are brethren,
And so we shall remain; but were it not so,

Is spirit like to flesh? can it fall out?

Infinity with Immortality? 386

Jarring and turning space to misery—
For what?

Lucifer. To reign.

Cain. Did ye not tell me that Ye are both eternal?

Lucifer. Yea!

Cain. And what I have seen,
Yon blue immensity, is boundless?

Lucifer. Ay.

Cain. And cannot ye both reign, then?—is there not 391

Enough?—why should ye differ?

Lucifer. We both reign.

Cain. But one of you makes evil.

Lucifer. Which?

Cain. Thou! for
If thou canst do man good, why dost thou
not?

Lucifer. And why not he who made?
I made ye not; 395

Ye are his creatures, and not mine.

Cain. Then leave us

His creatures, as thou say'st we are, or show me

Thy dwelling, or his dwelling.

Lucifer. I could show thee
Both; but the time will come thou shalt see one

Of them for evermore.

Cain. And why not now?

Lucifer. Thy human mind hath scarcely grasp to gather 401

The little I have shown thee into calm
And clear thought; and thou wouldst go on aspiring

To the great double mysteries! the two Principles!

And gaze upon them on their secret thrones! 405

Dust! limit thy ambition; for to see Either of these would be for thee to perish!

Cain. And let me perish, so I see them!

Lucifer. There

The son of her who snatch'd the apple spake!

But thou wouldst only perish, and not see them; 410

That sight is for the other state.

Cain. Of death?

Lucifer. That is the prelude.

Cain. Then I dread it less,

Now that I know it leads to something definite.

Lucifer. And now I will convey thee to thy world,

Where thou shalt multiply the race of Adam, 415

Eat, drink, toil, tremble, laugh, weep, sleep, and die.

Cain. And to what end have I beheld these things

Which thou hast shown me?

Lucifer. Didst thou not require

Knowledge? And have I not, in what I show'd,

Taught thee to know thyself?

Cain. Alas! I seem

Nothing.

Lucifer. And this should be the human sum 421

Of knowledge, to know mortal nature's nothingness;

Bequeath that science to thy children, and 'Twill spare them many tortures.

Cain. Haughty spirit!

Thou speak'st it proudly; but thyself, though proud, 425

Hast a superior.

Lucifer. No! by heaven, which He Holds, and the abyss, and the immensity Of worlds and life, which I hold with him

—No!

I have a victor—true; but no superior. Homage he has from all—but none from me: 430

I battle it against him, as I battled In highest heaven. Through all eternity,

And the unfathomable gulfs of Hades, And the interminable realms of space,

And the infinity of endless ages, 435

All, all, will I dispute! And world by world,

And star by star, and universe by universe, Shall tremble in the balance, till the great

Conflict shall cease, if ever it shall cease, Which it ne'er shall, till he or I be

quench'd! 440

And what can quench our immortality, Or mutual and irrevocable hate?

He as a conqueror will call the conquer'd Evil; but what will be the good he gives?

Were I the victor, his works would be deem'd 445

The only evil ones. And you, ye new And scarce born mortals, what have been his gifts

To you already, in your little world?

Cain. But few; and some of those but bitter.

Lucifer. Back

With me, then, to thine earth, and try the rest 450

Of his celestial boons to you and yours.

Evil and good are things in their own essence,

And not made good or evil by the giver; But if he gives you good—so call him; if

Evil springs from him, do not name it mine; Till ye know better its true fount; and

judge 456

Not by words, though of spirits, but the fruits

Of your existence, such as it must be.

One good gift has the fatal apple given— Your reason:—let it not be over-sway'd

By tyrannous threats to force you into faith 461

'Gainst all external sense and inward feeling:

Think and endure,—and form an inner world

In your own bosom—where the outward fails;

So shall you nearer be the spiritual Nature, and war triumphant with your own. 466

[They disappear.]

ACT III

SCENE I.—The Earth, near Eden, as in Act I.

Enter CAIN and ADAH.

Adah. Hush, tread softly, Cain.

Cain. I will; but wherefore?

Adah. Our little Enoch sleeps upon yon bed

Of leaves, beneath the cypress.

Cain. Cypress! 'tis A gloomy tree, which looks as if it

mourn'd

O'er what it shadows; wherefore didst thou choose it 5

For our child's canopy?

Adah. Because its branches Shut out the sun like night, and therefore

seem'd

Fitting to shadow slumber.

Cain. Ay, the last— And longest; but no matter—lead me to him. [They go up to the child.]

How lovely he appears! his little cheeks, In their pure incarnation, vying with 11

The rose leaves strewn beneath them.

Adah. And his lips, too,
How beautifully parted! No; you shall not Kiss him, at least not now; he will awake
soon. 14
His hour of mid-day rest is nearly over;
But it were pity to disturb him till
'Tis closed.

Cain. You have said well; I will contain My heart till then. He smiles, and sleeps!—Sleep on,
And smile, thou little, young inheritor
Of a world scarce less young: sleep on, and
smile! 20
Thine are the hours and days when both are cheering
And innocent! thou hast not pluck'd the fruit—
Thou know'st not thou art naked! Must the time

Come thou shalt be amerced for sins
unknown,
Which were not thine nor mine? But now sleep on! 25
His cheeks are reddening into deeper
smiles,

And shining lids are trembling o'er his long Lashes, dark as the cypress which waves
o'er them;

Half open, from beneath them the clear blue Laughs out, although in slumber. He must dream— 30
Of what? Of Paradise!—Ay! dream of it,
My disinherited boy! 'Tis but a dream;
For never more thyself, thy sons, nor
fathers,

Shall walk in that forbidden place of joy!
Adah. Dear Cain! Nay, do not whisper o'er our son 35
Such melancholy yearnings o'er the past:
Why wilt thou always mourn for Paradise?
Can we not make another?

Cain. Where?
Adah. Here, or Where'er thou wilt: where'er thou art, I feel not

The want of this so much regretted Eden.
Have I not thee, our boy, our sire, and
brother, 41
And Zillah—our sweet sister, and our Eve,
To whom we owe so much besides our
birth?

Cain. Yes—death, too, is amongst the debts we owe her.

Adah. Cain! that proud spirit, who withdrew thee hence, 45 Hath sadden'd thine still deeper. I had hoped

The promised wonders which thou hast
beheld,
Visions, thou say'st, of past and present
worlds,
Would have composed thy mind into the calm

Of a contented knowledge; but I see 50
Thy guide hath done thee evil: still I thank
him,
And can forgive him all, that he so soon
Hath given thee back to us.

Cain. So soon?
Adah. 'Tis scarcely
Two hours since ye departed: two long
hours

To me, but only hours upon the sun. 55 Cain. And yet I have approach'd that sun, and seen
Worlds which he once shone on, and never
more Shall light; and worlds he never lit: me-
thought

Years had roll'd o'er my absence.
Adah. Hardly hours.
Cain. The mind then hath capacity of
time, 60

And measures it by that which it beholds,
Pleasing or painful; little or almighty.
I had beheld the immemorial works
Of endless beings; skirr'd extinguish'd
worlds;

And, gazing on eternity, methought 65
I had borrow'd more by a few drops of ages
From its immensity: but now I feel
My littleness again. Well said the spirit,
That I was nothing!

Adah. Wherefore said he so?
Jehovah said not that.

Cain. No: he contents him 70
With making us the nothing which we are;
And after flattering dust with glimpses of Eden and Immortality, resolves
It back to dust again—for what?

Adah. Thou know'st—
Even for our parents' error.

Cain. What is that 75
To us? they sinn'd, then let them die!

Adah. Thou hast not spoken well, nor is that thought Thy own, but of the spirit who was with
thee.

Would I could die for them, so they might
live!

Cain. Why, so say I—provided that one victim 80

Might satiate the insatiable of life,
And that our little rosy sleeper there Might never taste of death nor human
sorrow,
Nor hand it down to those who spring
from him.

Adah. How know we that some such atonement one day 85
May not redeem our race?

Cain. By sacrificing
The harmless for the guilty? what atonement

Were there? why, we are innocent: what have we Done, that we must be victims for a deed

Before our birth, or need have victims to Atone for this mysterious, nameless sin—
If it be such a sin to seek for knowledge?

Adah. Alas! thou sinnest now, my Cain: thy words

Sound impious in mine ears.

Cain. Then leave me!

Adah. Never,

Though thy God left thee.

Cain. Say, what have we here? 95

Adah. Two altars, which our brother
Abel made

During thine absence, whereupon to offer
A sacrifice to God on thy return.

Cain. And how knew he, that I would be so ready

With the burnt offerings, which he daily brings 100

With a meek brow, whose base humility Shows more of fear than worship, as a bribe

To the Creator?

Adah. Surely, 'tis well done.

Cain. One altar may suffice; I have no
offering.

Adah. The fruits of the earth, the early, beautiful 105

Blossom and bud, and bloom of flowers and fruits;

These are a goodly offering to the Lord,
Given with a gentle and a contrite spirit.

Cain. I have toil'd, and till'd, and sweaten in the sun,

According to the curse:—must I do more?
For what should I be gentle? for a war

With all the elements ere they will yield
The bread we eat? For what must I be grateful?

For being dust, and grovelling in the dust,
Till I return to dust? If I am nothing—
For nothing shall I be an hypocrite, 116 And seem well-pleased with pain? For what should I

Be contrite? for my father's sin, already Expiate with what we all have undergone,
And to be more than expiated by 120
The ages prophesied, upon our seed.

Little deems our young blooming sleeper,
there,

The germs of an eternal misery
To myriads is within him! better 'twere
I snatch'd him in his sleep, and dash'd him
'gainst 125

The rocks, than let him live to—

Adah. Oh, my God!

Touch not the child—my child! thy child!
Oh, Cain!

Cain. Fear not! for all the stars, and all the power

Which sways them, I would not accost yon infant 129

With ruder greeting than a father's kiss.

Adah. Then, why so awful in thy speech?

Cain.

I said,

'Twere better that he ceased to live, than
give

Life to so much of sorrow as he must Endure, and, harder still, bequeath; but
since 134

That saying jars you, let us only say—
'Twere better that he never had been born.

Adah. Oh, do not say so! Where were then the joys,

The mother's joys of watching, nourish-
ing,

And loving him? Soft! he awakes. Sweet
Enoch! [She goes to the child.]

Oh, Cain! look on him; see how full of
life, 140

Of strength, of bloom, of beauty, and of
joy,

How like to me—how like to thee, when gentle,

For then we are all alike; is't not so, Cain?
Mother, and sire, and son, our features are Reflected in each other; as they are 145

In the clear waters, when they are gentle,
and

When thou art gentle. Love us, then, my
Cain!

And love thyself for our sakes, for we love
thee.

Look! how he laughs and stretches out his arms, 149

And opens wide his blue eyes upon thine,
To hail his father; while his little form Flutters as wing'd with joy. Talk not of
pain!

The childless cherubs well might envy thee
The pleasures of a parent! Bless him,
Cain!

As yet he hath no words to thank thee,
but 155

His heart will, and thine own too.

Cain. Bless thee, boy!

If that a mortal blessing may avail thee,
To save thee from the serpent's curse!

Adah. It shall.

Surely a father's blessing may avert
A reptile's subtlety.

Cain. Of that I doubt; 160

But bless him ne'er the less.

Adah. Our brother comes.

Cain. Thy brother Abel.

Enter ABEL.

Abel. Welcome, Cain! My brother,
The peace of God be on thee!

Cain. Abel, hail!

Abel. Our sister tells me that thou hast been wandering,

In high communion with a spirit, far Beyond our wonted range. Was he of
those 166

We have seen and spoken with, like to our father?

Cain. No.

Abel. Why then commune with him? he may be A foe to the Most High.
Cain. And friend to man.
Has the Most High been so—if so you term him? 170
Abel. Term him! your words are strange to-day, my brother.
My sister Adah, leave us for awhile—
We mean to sacrifice.
Adah. Farewell, my Cain;
But first embrace thy son. May his soft spirit, 174
And Abel's pious ministry, recall thee
To peace and holiness!
[Exit ADAH, with her child.
Abel. Where hast thou been?
Cain. I know not.
Abel. Nor what thou hast seen?
Cain. The dead,
The immortal, the unbounded, the omnipotent,
The overpowering mysteries of space—
The innumerable worlds that were and are— 180
A whirlwind of such overwhelming things,
Suns, moons, and earths, upon their loud-voiced spheres
Singing in thunder round me, as have made me
Unfit for mortal converse: leave me, Abel.
Abel. Thine eyes are flashing with unnatural light— 185
Thy cheek is flush'd with an unnatural hue—
Thy words are fraught with an unnatural sound—
What may this mean?
Cain. It means—I pray thee, leave me.
Abel. Not till we have pray'd and sacrific'd together.
Cain. Abel, I pray thee, sacrifice alone— 190
Jehovah loves thee well.
Abel. Both well, I hope.
Cain. But thee the better: I care not for that;
Thou art fitter for his worship than I am;
Revere him, then—but let it be alone—
At least, without me.
Abel. Brother, I should ill 195
Deserve the name of our great father's son,
If, as my elder, I revered thee not,
And in the worship of our God, call'd not On thee to join me, and precede me in Our priesthood—'tis thy place.
Cain. But I have ne'er 200 Asserted it.
Abel. The more my grief; I pray thee
To do so now: thy soul seems labouring in Some strong delusion; it will calm thee.
Cain. No;
Nothing can calm me more. Calm! say I?
Never Knew I what calm was in the soul,
although 205
I have seen the elements still'd. My Abel, leave me!
Or let me leave thee to thy pious purpose.
Abel. Neither; we must perform our task together.
Spurn me not.
Cain. If it must be so—well, then,
What shall I do?
Abel. Choose one of those two altars. 210
Cain. Choose for me: they to me are so much turf
And stone.
Abel. Choose thou!
Cain. I have chosen.
Abel. 'Tis the highest,
And suits thee, as the elder. Now prepare Thine offerings.
Cain. Where are thine?
Abel. Behold them here—
The firstlings of the flock, and fat thereof—
A shepherd's humble offering.
Cain. I have no flocks; 216
I am a tiller of the ground, and must Yield what it yieldeth to my toil—its fruit:
[He gathers fruits.
Behold them in their various bloom and ripeness.
[They dress their altars, and kindle a flame upon them.
Abel. My brother, as the elder, offer
first 220
Thy prayer and thanksgiving with sacrifice.
Cain. No—I am new to this; lead thou
the way,
And I will follow—as I may.
Abel [kneeling]. Oh, God!
Who made us, and who breathed the breath of life
Within our nostrils, who hath blessed us,
And spared, despite our father's sin, to
make 226
His children all lost, as they might have
been,
Had not thy justice been so temper'd with
The mercy which is thy delight, as to Accord a pardon like a Paradise, 230
Compared with our great crimes:—Sole Lord of light,
Of good, and glory, and eternity!
Without whom all were evil, and with
whom
Nothing can err, except to some good end
Of thine omnipotent benevolence— 235
Inscrutable, but still to be fulfill'd—Accept from out thy humble first of shepherd's
First of the first-born flocks—an offering,
In itself nothing—as what offering can be

Aught unto thee?—but yet accept it for The thanksgiving of him who spreads it in The face of thy high heaven, bowing his
own 242
Even to the dust, of which he is, in honour
Of thee, and of thy name, for evermore!

Cain [standing erect during this speech].
Spirit! whate'er or whosoe'er thou art,
Omnipotent, it may be—and, if good,
Shown in the exemption of thy deeds from evil; 247

Jehovah upon earth! and God in heaven!
And it may be with other names, because Thine attributes seem many, as thy works:
If thou must be propitiated with prayers, Take them! If thou must be induced with altars, 252
And soften'd with a sacrifice, receive
them!

Two beings here erect them unto thee.
If thou lov'st blood, the shepherd's shrine, which smokes 255
On my right hand, hath shed it for thy service

In the first of his flock, whose limbs now reek

In sanguinary incense to thy skies;
Or if the sweet and blooming fruits of
earth,

And milder seasons, which the unstain'd turf 260

I spread them on now offers in the face
Of the broad sun which ripen'd them, may seem

Good to thee, inasmuch as they have not Suffer'd in limb or life, and rather form
A sample of thy works, than supplication To look on ours! If a shrine without victim, 266

And altar without gore, may win thy favour,

Look on it! and for him who dresseth it,
He is—such as thou mad'st him; and seeks
nothing

Which must be won by kneeling: if he's evil, 270

Strike him! thou art omnipotent, and may'st—

For what can he oppose? If he be good, Strike him, or spare him, as thou wilt!
since all

Rests upon thee; and good and evil seem To have no power themselves, save in thy
will; 275

And whether that be good or ill I know
not,

Not being omnipotent, nor fit to judge
Omnipotence, but merely to endure
Its mandate; which thus far I have endured.

[The fire upon the altar of ABEL kindles into a column of the brightest flame, and ascends to heaven; while a whirlwind throws down the altar of CAIN,

*and scatters the fruits abroad upon the
earth.*

Abel [kneeling]. Oh, brother, pray!
Jehovah's wroth with thee. 280

Cain. Why so?

Abel. Thy fruits are scatter'd on the earth.

Cain. From earth they came, to earth
let them return;

Their seed will bear fresh fruit there ere
the summer:

Thy burnt flesh-off'ring prospers better; see How heaven licks up the flames, when thick with blood! 285

Abel. Think not upon my offering's
acceptance,

But make another of thine own before
It is too late.

Cain. I will build no more altars,
Nor suffer any—

Abel [rising]. Cain! what meanest
thou?

Cain. To cast down yon vile flatt'rer of the clouds, 290

The smoky harbinger of thy dull prayers—
Thine altar, with its blood of lambs and kids,

Which fed on milk, to be destroy'd in
blood.

Abel [opposing him]. Thou shalt not:— add not impious works to impious

Words! let that altar stand—'tis hallow'd
now 295

By the immortal pleasure of Jehovah,
In his acceptance of the victims.

Cain. His!

His pleasure! what was his high pleasure in The fumes of scorching flesh and smoking
blood,

To the pain of the bleating mothers,
which 300

Still yearn for their dead offspring? or the pangs

Of the sad ignorant victims underneath Thy pious knife? Give way! this bloody

record
Shall not stand in the sun, to shame
creation!

Abel. Brother, give back! thou shalt not touch my altar 305

With violence: if that thou wilt adopt it,
To try another sacrifice, 'tis thine.

Cain. Another sacrifice! Give way, or else

That sacrifice may be—

Abel. What mean'st thou?
Cain. Give—

Give way!—thy God loves blood!—then look to it:— 310

Give way, ere he hath more!

Abel. In his great name,
I stand between thee and the shrine which

hath
Had his acceptance.

Cain. If thou lov'st thyself, Stand back till I have strew'd this turf
along
Its native soil:—else——
Abel [opposing him]. I love God far
more 315
Than life.

Cain [striking him with a brand, on the temples, which he snatches from the altar]. Then take thy life unto thy God,
Since he loves lives.

Abel [falls]. What hast thou done, my
brother?

Cain. Brother!

Abel. Oh, God! receive thy servant,
and Forgive his slayer, for he knew not what He did—Cain, give me—give me thy hand; and tell 320
Poor Zillah—

Cain [after a moment's stupefaction]. My hand! 'tis all red, and with——
What?

[A long pause.—Looking slowly round.
Where am I? alone! Where's Abel?
where

Cain? Can it be that I am he? My brother, Awake!—why liest thou so on the green
earth?

'Tis not the hour of slumber;—why so
pale? 325

What hast thou!—thou wert full of life
this morn!

Abel! I pray thee, mock me not! I smote Too fiercely, but not fatally. Ah, why Wouldst thou oppose me? This is mockery;

And only done to daunt me:—'twas a
blow— 330

And but a blow. Stir—stir—nay, only stir!

Why, so—that's well!—thou breath'st!
breathe upon me!

Oh, God! Oh, God!

Abel [very faintly]. What's he who speaks of God?

Cain. Thy murderer.

Abel. Then may God forgive him!
Cain,

Comfort poor Zillah:—she has but one
brother 335

Now. [ABEL dies.

Cain. And I none!—Who makes me
brotherless?

His eyes are open! then he is not dead!
Death is like sleep; and sleep shuts down our lids.

His lips, too, are apart; why then he breathes;

And yet I feel it not.—His heart!—his
heart! 340

Let me see, doth it beat? methinks——
No!—no!

This is a vision, else I am become
The native of another and worse world.
The earth swims round me:—what is this?—'tis wet; [Puts his hand to his brow, and then looks at it.

And yet there are no dew! 'Tis blood—
my blood— 345

My brother's and my own! and shed by
me!

Then what have I further to do with life,
Since I have taken life from my own flesh?
But he cannot be dead!—Is silence death?
No; he will wake; then let me watch by
him. 350

Life cannot be so slight, as to be quench'd
Thus quickly!—he hath spoken to me
since—

What shall I say to him?—My brother!—
No:

He will not answer to that name; for brethren

Smite not each other. Yet—yet—speak
to me. 355

Oh! for a word more of that gentle voice,
That I may bear to hear my own again!

Enter ZILLAH.

Zillah. I heard a heavy sound; what can it be?

'Tis Cain; and watching by my husband.
What

Dost thou there, brother? Doth he sleep?
Oh, heaven! 360

What means this paleness, and yon stream?—No, no!

It is not blood; for who would shed his
blood?

Abel! what's this?—who hath done this?
He moves not;

He breathes not; and his hands drop down from mine 364

With stony lifelessness! Ah! cruel Cain!
Why cam'st thou not in time to save him
from

This violence? Whatever hath assail'd
him,

Thou wert the stronger, and shouldst have stepp'd in

Between him and aggression! Father!—
Eve!— 369

Adah!—come hither! Death is in the
world!

[Exit ZILLAH, calling on her Parents,
&c.

Cain [solus]. And who hath brought him there?—I—who abhor

The name of Death so deeply, that the
thought

Empoison'd all my life, before I knew
His aspect—I have led him here, and given

My brother to his cold and still embrace,
As if he would not have asserted his 376

Inexorable claim without my aid.
I am awake at last—a dreary dream

Had madden'd me;—but he shall ne'er awake!

Enter ADAM, EVE, ADAH, and ZILLAH.

Adam. A voice of woe from Zillah brings me here.— 380

What do I see?—'Tis true!—My son!—my son!

Woman, behold the serpent's work, and thine! [To EVE.

Eve. Oh! speak not of it now: the serpent's fangs

Are in my heart. My best beloved, Abel! Jehovah! this is punishment beyond 385
A mother's sin, to take him from me!

Adam. Who, Or what hath done this deed?—speak, Cain, since thou

Wert present; was it some more hostile angel,

Who walks not with Jehovah? or some wild

Brute of the forest?

Eve. Ah! a livid light. 390

Breaks through, as from a thunder-cloud! yon brand

Massy and bloody! snatch'd from off the altar,

And black with smoke, and red with—Adam. Speak, my son!

Speak, and assure us, wretched as we are, That we are not more miserable still. 395

Adah. Speak, Cain! and say it was not thou!

Eve. It was.

I see it now—he hangs his guilty head, And covers his ferocious eye with hands Incarnadine.

Adah. Mother, thou dost him wrong— 399

Cain! clear thee from this horrible accusal, Which grief wrings from our parent.

Eve. Hear, Jehovah! May the eternal serpent's curse be on him!

For he was fitter for his seed than ours. May all his days be desolate! May—

Adah. Hold! Curse him not, mother, for he is thy son—

Curse him not, mother, for he is my brother, 406

And my betroth'd.

Eve. He hath left thee no brother—Zillah no husband—me no son! for thus

I curse him from my sight for evermore! All bonds I break between us as he broke

That of his nature, in yon—Oh death! death! 411

Why didst thou not take me, who first incurr'd thee?

Why dost thou not so now?

Adam. Eve! let not this, Thy natural grief, lead to impiety!

A heavy doom was long forespoken to us; And now that it begins, let it be borne

In such sort as may show our God that we Are faithful servants to his holy will.

Eve [pointing to Cain]. His will! the will of yon incarnate spirit

Of death, whom I have brought upon the earth. 420

To strew it with the dead. May all the curses

Of life be on him! and his agonies Drive him forth o'er the wilderness, like us

From Eden, till his children do by him

As he did by his brother! May the swords And wings of fiery cherubim pursue him

By day and night—snakes spring up in his path— 427

Earth's fruits be ashes in his mouth—the leaves

On which he lays his head to sleep be strew'd

With scorpions! May his dreams be of his victim! 430

His waking a continual dread of death! May the clear rivers turn to blood as he Stoops down to stain them with his raging lip!

May every element shun or change to him! May he live in the pangs which others die

with! 435

And death itself wax something worse than death

To him who first acquainted him with man! Hence, fratricide! henceforth that word is

Cain, Through all the coming myriads of man-kind,

Who shall abhor thee, though thou wert their sire! 440

May the grass wither from thy feet! the woods

Deny thee shelter! earth a home! the dust A grave! the sun his light! and heaven her

God! [Exit EVE.

Adam. Cain! get thee forth: we dwell no more together. 444

Depart! and leave the dead to me—I am Henceforth alone—we never must meet more. Adah. Oh, part not with him thus, my father: do not Add thy deep curse to Eve's upon his head! Adam. I curse him not: his spirit be his curse. Come, Zillah!

Zillah. I must watch my husband's corse. 450

Adam. We will return again, when he is gone

Who hath provided for us this dread office. Come, Zillah!

Zillah. Yet one kiss on yon pale clay, And those lips once so warm—my heart!

my heart! [Exeunt ADAM and ZILLAH, weeping.

Adah. Cain! thou hast heard, we must go forth. I am ready, 455
So shall our children be. I will bear Enoch,

And you his sister. Ere the sun declines
Let us depart, nor walk the wilderness
Under the cloud of night.—Nay, speak to me,

To me—thine own.

Cain. Leave me!

Adah. Why, all have left thee. 460

Cain. And wherefore lingerest thou?

Dost thou not fear

To dwell with one who hath done this?

Adah. I fear

Nothing except to leave thee, much as I

Shrink from the deed which leaves thee

brotherless.

I must not speak of this—it is between

thee

466

And the great God.

A Voice from within exclaims, Cain! Cain!

Adah. Hear'st thou that voice?

The Voice within. Cain! Cain!

Adah. It soundeth like an angel's tone.

Enter the ANGEL of the Lord.

Angel. Where is thy brother Abel?

Cain. Am I then

My brother's keeper?

Angel. Cain! what hast thou done?

The voice of thy slain brother's blood cries

out,

470

Even from the ground, unto the Lord!—

Now art thou

Cursed from the earth, which open'd late

her mouth

To drink thy brother's blood from thy rash

hand.

Henceforth, when thou shalt till the ground, it shall not

Yield thee her strength; a fugitive shalt

thou

475

Be from this day, and vagabond on earth!

Adah. This punishment is more than he can bear.

Behold, thou driv'st him from the face of

earth,

And from the face of God shall he be hid.

A fugitive and vagabond on earth, 480

'Twill come to pass, that whoso findeth him

Shall slay him.

Cain. Would they could! but who are they Shall slay me? Where are these on the lone

earth

As yet unpeopled?

Angel. Thou hast slain thy brother,

And who shall warrant thee against thy son?

485

Adah. Angel of Light! be merciful,

nor say

That this poor aching breast now

nourishes

A murderer in my boy, and of his father.

Angel. Then he would but be what his father is.

489

Did not the milk of Eve give nutriment

To him thou now see'st so besmear'd with

blood?

The fratricide might well engender parricides.—

But it shall not be so—the Lord thy God

And mine commandeth me to set his seal

On Cain, so that he may go forth in safety.

Who slayeth Cain, a sevenfold vengeance

shall 496

Be taken on his head. Come hither!

Cain.

What

Wouldst thou with me?

Angel.

To mark upon thy brow

Exemption from such deeds as thou hast

done.

Cain. No, let me die!

Angel.

It must not be.

[The ANGEL sets the mark on CAIN's brow.]

Cain.

It burns

500

My brow, but nought to that which is with-

in it.

Is there more? let me meet it as I may.

Angel.

Stern hast thou been and stubborn from the womb,

As the ground thou must henceforth till;

but he

Thou slew'st was gentle as the flocks he tended.

505

Cain. After the fall too soon was I begotten;

Ere yet my mother's mind subsided from

The serpent, and my sire still mourn'd for

Eden.

That which I am, I am; I did not seek 510

For life, nor did I make myself; but could I

With my own death redeem him from the

dust—

And why not so? let him return to day,

And I lie ghastly! so shall be restored

By God the life to him he loved; and

taken

From me a being I ne'er loved to bear.

Angel. Who shall heal murder? what is done, is done;

Go forth! fulfil thy days! and be thy deeds

Unlike the last! [The ANGEL disappears.]

Adah.

He's gone, let us go forth;

I hear our little Enoch cry within

Our bower.

Cain.

Ah! little knows he what he weeps for!

520

And I who have shed blood cannot shed

tears!

But the four rivers would not cleanse my

soul.

Think'st thou my boy will bear to look on

me?

Adah. If I thought that he would not, I

would—

Cain [interrupting her]. No,

No more of threats: we have had too many of them: 525

Go to our children; I will follow thee.

Adah. I will not leave thee lonely with
the dead;

Let us depart together.

Cain. Oh! thou dead
And everlasting witness! whose unsinking Blood darkens earth and heaven! what thou now art 530

I know not! but if thou see'st what I am,
I think thou wilt forgive him, whom his
God

Can ne'er forgive, nor his own soul.—
Farewell!

I must not, dare not touch what I have made thee.

I, who sprung from the same womb with thee, drain'd 535

The same breast, clasp'd thee often to my
own,

In fondness brotherly and boyish, I
Can never meet thee more, nor even dare
To do that for thee, which thou shouldst
have done

For me—compose thy limbs into their
grave— 540

The first grave yet dug for mortality.

But who hath dug that grave? Oh, earth!
Oh, earth!

For all the fruits thou hast render'd to me, I

Give thee back this. Now for the wilderness.

[ADAH stoops down and kisses the body of ABEL.

Adah. A dreary, and an early doom,
my brother, 545

Has been thy lot! Of all who mourn for
thee,

I alone must not weep. My office is Henceforth to dry up tears, and not to shed
them;

But yet of all who mourn, none mourn like
me,

Not only for thyself, but him who slew
thee. 550

Now, Cain! I will divide thy burden with
thee.

Cain. Eastward from Eden will we take our way;

'Tis the most desolate, and suits my steps.

Adah. Lead! thou shalt be my guide, and may our God

Be thine! Now let us carry forth our children. 555

Cain. And he who lieth there was childless. I

Have dried the fountain of a gentle race,
Which might have graced his recent marriage couch,

And might have temper'd this stern blood
of mine,

Uniting with our children Abel's offspring!
O Abel! 561

Adah. Peace be with him!

Cain. But with me!— [Exeunt.

PART I

SCENE I.—A woody and mountainous district near Mount Ararat. Time, Midnight.

Enter ANAH and AHOLIBAMAH.

Anah. Our father sleeps: it is the hour when they
Who love us are accusom'd to descend
Through the deep clouds o'er rocky Ararat:—
How my heart beats!

Aho. Let us proceed upon
Our invocation.

Anah. But the stars are hidden.
I tremble. 6

Aho. So do I, but not with fear
Of aught save their delay.

Anah. My sister, though
I love Azazel more than—oh, too much!
What was I going to say? my heart grows impious.

Aho. And where is the impiety of loving Celestial natures? 10

Anah. But, Aholibamah,
I love our God less since his angel loved
me;
This cannot be of good; and though I know not

That I do wrong, I feel a thousand fears
Which are not ominous of right.

Aho. Then wed thee 15
Unto some son of clay, and toil and spin!
There's Japhet loves thee well, hath loved thee long:

Marry, and bring forth dust!

Anah. I should have loved Azaziel not less were he mortal; yet 19
I am glad he is not. I cannot outlive him.
And when I think that his immortal wings
Will one day hover o'er the sepulchre
Of the poor child of clay which so adored
him,

As he adores the Highest, death becomes Less terrible; but yet I pity him: 25

His grief will be of ages, or at least Mine would be such for him, were I the seraph,

And he the perishable.

Aho. Rather say,
That he will single forth some other
daughter

Of earth, and love her as he once loved
Anah. 30

Anah. And if it should be so, and she
loved him,

Better thus than that he should weep for
me.

Aho. If I thought thus of Samiasa's
love,

All seraph as he is, I'd spurn him from
me.

But to our invocation!—'Tis the hour. 35
Anah. Seraph!

From thy sphere!

Whatever star contain thy glory;

In the eternal depths of heaven

Albeit thou watchest with 'the seven,' 40

Though through space infinite and
hoary

Before thy bright wings worlds be driven,

Yet hear!

Oh! think of her who holds thee dear!

And though she nothing is to thee,

Yet think that thou art all to her. 46
Thou canst not tell,—and never be Such pangs decreed to aught save
me,—

The bitterness of tears.

Eternity is in thine years, 50

Unborn, undying beauty in thine eyes;
With me thou canst not sympathise,

Except in love, and there thou must Acknowledge that more loving

dust

Ne'er wept beneath the skies. 55

Thou walk'st thy many worlds, thou
see'st

The face of him who made thee
great,

As he hath made me of the least
Of those cast out from Eden's gate;

Yet, Seraph dear! 60

Oh hear!

For thou hast loved me, and I would
not die

Until I know what I must die in knowing,

That thou forgett'st in thine eternity
Her whose heart death could not keep from o'erflowing 65

For thee, immortal essence as thou
art!

Great is their love who love in sin
and fear;

And such, I feel, are waging in my
heart

A war unworthy: to an Adamite Forgive, my Seraph! that such thoughts appear, 70

For sorrow is our element;

Delight

An Eden kept afar from sight,
Though sometimes with our visions blent.

The hour is near 75

Which tells me we are not abandon'd
quite.—

Appear! Appear!

Seraph!

My own Azaziel! be but here,

And leave the stars to their own light.
Aho. Samiasa! 81

Wheresoe'er

Thou rulest in the upper air—
Or warring with the spirits who may dare

Dispute with him 85

Who made all empires, empire; or recall-
ing

Some wandering star, which shoots
through the abyss,

Whose tenants dying, while their world
is falling,

Share the dim destiny of clay in this;
Or joining with the inferior cherubim,

Thou deignest to partake their hymn—
Samiasa!

I call thee, I await thee, and I love thee.
Many may worship thee, that will I not:

If that thy spirit down to mine may move
thee 95

Descend and share my lot!
Though I be form'd of clay,

And thou of beams
More bright than those of day

On Eden's streams, 100
Thine immortality cannot repay
With love more warm than mine

My love. There is a ray

In me, which, though forbidden yet to shine,
 I feel was lighted at thy God's and thine. 104
 It may be hidden long: death and decay
 Our mother Eve bequeath'd us—but
 my heart
 Defies it: though this life must pass away,
 Is that a cause for thee and me to part?
 Thou art immortal—so am I: I feel— 110
 I feel my immortality o'ersweep
 All pains, all tears, all time, all fears, and
 peal,
 Like the eternal thunders of the deep,
 Into my ears this truth—'Thou liv'st for
 ever!'

But if it be in joy 115
 I know not, nor would know;
 That secret rests with the Almighty giver,
 Who folds in clouds the founts of bliss and woe.
 But thee and me he never can destroy;
 Change us he may, but not o'erwhelm;
 we are 120
 Of as eternal essence, and must war
 With him if he will war with us: with thee
 I can share all things, even immortal
 sorrow;

For thou hast ventured to share life with
 me,
 And shall I shrink from thine eternity?
 No! though the serpent's sting should pierce me thorough, 126
 And thou thyself wert like the serpent,
 coil
 Around me still! and I will smile,
 And curse thee not; but hold Thee in as warm a fold 130
 As—but descend, and prove
 A mortal's love

For an immortal. If the skies contain More joy than thou canst give and take,
 remain!

Anah. Sister! sister! I view them wing-
 ing 135

Their bright way through the parted night.

Aho. The clouds from off their pinions flinging,

As though they bore to-morrow's light.

Anah. But if our father see the sight!

Aho. He would but deem it was the moon 140

Rising unto some sorcerer's tune

An hour too soon.

Anah. They come! he comes!—
 Azaziel!

Aho. Haste

To meet them! Oh! for wings to bear

My spirit, while they hover there, 145

To Samiasa's breast!

Anah. Lo! they have kindled all the
 west,

Like a returning sunset;—lo!

On Ararat's late secret crest

A mild and many-colour'd bow, 150

The remnant of their flashing path,
 Now shines! and now, behold! it hath Return'd to night, as rippling foam,
 Which the leviathan hath lash'd
 From his unfathomable home, 155
 When sporting on the face of the calm
 deep,
 Subsides soon after he again hath dash'd Down, down, to where the ocean's fountains sleep.
 Aho. They have touch'd earth! Samiasa!
 Anah. My Azaziel!
 [Exeunt.]

SCENE II

Enter IRAD and JAPHET.

Irada. Despond not: wherefore wilt thou wander thus

To add thy silence to the silent night,
 And lift thy tearful eye unto the stars?
 They cannot aid thee.

Japh. But they soothe me—now
 Perhaps she looks upon them as I look.

Methinks a being that is beautiful 6
 Becometh more so as it looks on beauty,
 The eternal beauty of undying things.

Oh, Anah!

Irada. But she loves thee not.

Japh. Alas!

Irada. And proud Aholibamah spurns me also. 10

Japh. I feel for thee too.

Irada. Let her keep her pride,
 Mine hath enabled me to bear her scorn;

It may be, time too will avenge it.

Japh. Canst thou

Find joy in such a thought?

Irada. Nor joy nor sorrow.

I loved her well, I would have loved her

better, 15

Had love been met with love: as 'tis, I leave her

To brighter destinies, if so she deems them.

Japh. What destinies?

Irada. I have some cause to think

She loves another.

Japh. Anah!

Irada. No; her sister.

Japh. What other?

Irada. That I know not; but her air,

If not her words, tells me she loves

another, 21

Japh. Ay, but not Anah: she but loves her God.

Irada. Whate'er she loveth, so she loves

thee not,

What can it profit thee?

Japh. True, nothing; but

I love.

Irada. And so did I.

Japh. And now thou lov'st not,

Or think'st thou lov'st not, art thou happier? 26

Irads. Yes. Such is the sullen or the fitful state Japh. I pity thee. Of my mind overworn. The earth's grown Irads. Me! why? wicked, 65
Japh. For being happy, And many signs and portents have Deprived of that which makes my proclaim'd misery. A change at hand, and an o'erwhelming Irads. I take thy taunt as part of thy doom distemper. To perishable beings. Oh, my Anah!
And would not feel as thou dost for more When the dread hour denounced shall shekels open wide 30
Than all our father's herds would bring, The fountains of the deep, how mightest
if weigh'd thou 70
Against the metal of the sons of Cain— Have lain within this bosom, folded from
The yellow dust they try to barter with us, The elements; this bosom, which in vain
As if such useless and discolour'd trash, Hath beat for thee, and then will beat more
The refuse of the earth, could be received vainly,
For milk, and wool, and flesh, and fruits, While thine—Oh, God! at least remit to and all her
Our flocks and wilderness afford.—Go, Thy wrath! for she is pure amidst the Japhet, failing 75
Sigh to the stars, as wolves howl to the As a star in the clouds, which cannot moon— quench,
I must back to my rest. Although they obscure it for an hour. My Japh. And so would I Anah!
If I could rest. How would I have adored thee, but thou Irads. Thou wilt not to our tents then? wouldst not;
Japh. No, Irad; I will to the cavern, And still would I redeem thee—see thee whose live 41
Mouth they say opens from the internal When ocean is earth's grave, and, un-world opposed 80
To let the inner spirits of the earth By rock or shallow, the leviathan, Forth when they walk its surface. Lord of the shoreless sea and watery Irads. Wherefore so? world,
What wouldst thou there? Shall wonder at his boundlessness of Japh. Soothe further my sad spirit 45 realm.
With gloom as sad: it is a hopeless spot, [Exit JAPHET.
And I am hopeless.
Irads. But 'tis dangerous;
Strange sounds and sights have peopled it with terrors.
I must go with thee.
Japh. Irad, no; believe me
I feel no evil thought, and fear no evil.
Irads. But evil things will be thy foe
the more 51
As not being of them: turn thy steps aside,
Or let mine be with thine. 90
Japh. No, neither, Irad;
I must proceed alone.
Irads. Then peace be with thee!
[Exit IRAD.
Japh. [solas]. Peace! I have sought it where it should be found, 55
In love—with love, too, which perhaps deserved it;
And, in its stead, a heaviness of heart,
A weakness of the spirit, listless days,
And nights inexorable to sweet sleep,
Have come upon me. Peace! what peace?
the calm 60
Of desolation, and the stillness of
The untrodden forest, only broken by The sweeping tempest through its groaning boughs;

Shem. Go not forward, father:
I will seek Japhet.

Noah. Do not fear for me:
All evil things are powerless on the man
Selected by Jehovah.—Let us on.

Shem. To the tents of the father of the sisters? 105

Noah. No; to the cavern of the Caucasus.

[Exeunt NOAH and SHEM.]

SCENE III.—The mountains.—A cavern, and the rocks of Caucasus.

Japh. [solus]. Ye wilds, that look eternal; and thou cave,
Which seem'st unfathomable; and ye mountains,

So varied and so terrible in beauty;
Here, in your rugged majesty of rocks
And toppling trees that twine their roots with stone 5

In perpendicular places, where the foot
Of man would tremble, could he reach them—yes,

Ye look eternal! Yet, in a few days,
Perhaps even hours, ye will be changed,
rent, hurl'd 9

Before the mass of waters; and yon cave,
Which seems to lead into a lower world,
Shall have its depths search'd by the sweeping wave,

And dolphins gambol in the lion's den!
And man—Oh, men! my fellow-beings!
Who

Shall weep above your universal grave, Save I? who shall be left to weep? My kinsmen, 16

Alas! what am I better than ye are,
That I must live beyond ye? Where shall be The pleasant places where I thought of Anah

While I had hope? or the more savage
haunts, 20
Scarce less beloved, where I despair'd for
her?

And can it be!—Shall yon exulting peak,
Whose glittering top is like a distant star,
Lie low beneath the boiling of the deep?
No more to have the morning sun break
forth, 25

And scatter back the mists in floating folds
From its tremendous brow? no more to
have

Day's broad orb drop behind its head at even,

Leaving it with a crown of many hues?
No more to be the beacon of the world,
For angels to alight on, as the spot 31
Nearest the stars? And can those words
'no more'

Be meant for thee, for all things, save for us,
And the predestined creeping things reserved 34

By my sire to Jehovah's bidding? May

*He preserve them, and I not have the power
To snatch the loveliest of earth's daughters
from*

A doom which even some serpent, with his mate,

Shall 'scape to save his kind to be pro-long'd,

To hiss and sting through some emerging
world, 40

Reeking and dank from out the slime, whose ooze

Shall slumber o'er the wreck of this, until
The salt morass subside into a sphere

Beneath the sun, and be the monument,
The sole and undistinguish'd sepulchre,

Of yet quick myriads of all life? How
much 46

Breath will be still'd at once! Allbeauteous world!

So young, so mark'd out for destruction, I
With a cleft heart look on thee day by day,

And night by night, thy number'd days and nights. 50

I cannot save thee, cannot save even her Whose love had made me love thee more;

but as
A portion of thy dust, I cannot think

Upon thy coming doom without a feeling
Such as—Oh God! and canst thou—

[He pauses.]

[A rushing sound from the cavern is heard, and shouts of laughter—afterwards a Spirit passes.]

Japh. In the name 55
Of the Most High, what art thou?

Spirit [laughs]. Ha! ha! ha!

Japh. By all that earth holds holiest,
speak!

Spirit [laughs]. Ha! ha! ha!

Japh. By the approaching deluge! by
the earth

Which will be strangled by the ocean! by The deep which will lay open all her fountains! 60

The heaven which will convert her clouds
to seas,

And the Omnipotent who makes and crushes!

Thou unknown, terrible, and indistinct,
Yet awful Thing of Shadows, speak to me!

Why dost thou laugh that horrid laugh?

Spirit. Why weep'st thou? 65

Japh. For earth and all her children.

Spirit. Ha! ha! ha!

[Spirit vanishes.]

Japh. How the fiend mocks the tortures of a world,

The coming desolation of an orb,
On which the sun shall rise and warm no
life!

How the earth sleeps! and all that in it is Sleep too upon the very eve of death! 71

Why should they wake to meet it? What are here,

Which look like death in life, and speak like things
Born ere this dying world? They come like clouds!
[Various Spirits pass from the cavern.
Spirits. Rejoice! 75
The abhorred race
Which could not keep in Eden their high
place,
But listen'd to the voice
Of knowledge without power,
Are nigh the hour 80
Of death!
Not slow, not single, not by sword, nor
sorrow,
Nor years, nor heart-break, nor Time's sapping motion, Shall they drop off. Behold their last tomorrow!
Earth shall be ocean! 85
And no breath,
Save of the winds, be on the unbounded
wave!
Angels shall tire their wings, but find no
spot:
Not even a rock from out the liquid grave
Shall lift its point to save, 90
Or show the place where strong Despair hath died,
After long looking o'er the ocean wide
For the expected ebb which cometh not:
All shall be void,
Destroy'd! 95
Another element shall be the lord
Of life, and the abhorr'd Children of dust be quench'd; and of each
hue
Of earth nought left but the unbroken blue;
And of the variegated mountain 100
Shall nought remain
Unchanged, or of the level plain;
Cedar and pine shall lift their tops in
vain:
All merged within the universal foun-
tain,
Man, earth, and fire, shall die, 105
And sea and sky
Look vast and lifeless in the eternal eye.
Upon the foam
Who shall erect a home?
Japh. [coming forward]. My sire! 110
Earth's seed shall not expire;
Only the evil shall be put away
From day.
Avaunt! ye exulting demons of the
waste:
Who howl your hideous joy 115
When God destroys whom you dare not
destroy;
Hence! haste!
Back to your inner caves!
Until the waves
Shall search you in your secret place,
And drive your sullen race 121

Forth, to be roll'd upon the tossing winds,
In restless wretchedness along all
space!
Spirits. Son of the saved! 124
When thou and thine have braved
The wide and warring element;
When the great barrier of the deep is rent,
Shall thou and thine be good or happy?—
No!
Thy new world and new race shall be of
woe—
Less goodly in their aspect, in their
years 130
Less than the glorious giants, who
Yet walk the world in pride,
The Sons of Heaven by many a mortal
bride.
Thine shall be nothing of the past, save
tears.
And art thou not ashamed 135
Thus to survive,
And eat, and drink, and wive?
With a base heart so far subdued and
tamed,
As even to hear this wide destruction
named,
Without such grief and courage, as should rather 140
Bid thee await the world-dissolving wave,
Than seek a shelter with thy favour'd
father,
And build thy city o'er the drown'd earth's grave?
Who would outlive their kind,
Except the base and blind? 145
Mine
Hateth thine
As of a different order in the sphere,
But not our own.
There is not one who hath not left a
throne 150
Vacant in heaven to dwell in darkness
here,
Rather than see his mates endure alone.
Go, wretch! and give
A life like thine to other wretches—live!
And when the annihilating waters roar
Above what they have done,
Envy the giant patriarchs then no more,
And scorn thy sire as the surviving one!
Thyself for being his son!
Chorus of Spirits issuing from the cavern.
Rejoice! 160
No more the human voice
Shall vex our joys in middle air
With prayer;
No more
Shall they adore; 165
And we, who ne'er for ages have adored
The prayer-exacting Lord,
To whom the omission of a sacrifice
Is vice;
We, we shall view the deep's salt sources
pour'd 170

Until one element shall do the work
Of all in chaos; until they,
The creatures proud of their poor clay,
Shall perish, and their bleached bones shall lurk

In caves, in dens, in clefts of mountains,
where 175

The deep shall follow to their latest lair;
Where even the brutes, in their despair,
Shall cease to prey on man and on each
other,

And the striped tigers shall lie down to die Beside the lamb, as though he were his
brother; 180

Till all things shall be as they were,
Silent and uncreated, save the sky:

While a brief truce

Is made with Death, who shall forbear
The little remnant of the past creation,
To generate new nations for his use;
This remnant, floating o'er the undulation
Of the subsiding deluge, from its slime,
When the hot sun hath baked the reeking
soil

Into a world, shall give again to Time
New beings—years, diseases, sorrow,
crime— 191

With all companionship of hate and toil,
Until——

Japh. [interrupting them]. The eternal
Will

Shall deign to expound this dream
Of good and evil; and redeem 195

Unto himself all times, all things;
And, gather'd under his almighty
wings,

Abolish hell!

And to the expiated Earth
Restore the beauty of her birth, 200

Her Eden in an endless paradise,
Where man no more can fall as once
he fell,

And even the very demons shall do
well!

Spirits. And when shall take effect this wondrous spell?

Japh. When the Redeemer cometh;
first in pain, 205

And then in glory.

Spirit. Meantime still struggle in the mortal chain,

Till Earth wax hoary:

War with yourselves, and hell, and heaven,
in vain,

Until the clouds look gory 210

With the blood reeking from each battle-
plain;

New times, new climes, new arts, new men; but still,

The same old tears, old crimes, and oldest
ill,

Shall be amongst your race in different forms;

But the same moral storms 215

Shall oversweep the future, as the waves
In a few hours the glorious giants' graves.

Chorus of Spirits.

Brethren, rejoice!

Mortal, farewell! 219

Hark! hark! already we can hear the voice
Of growing ocean's gloomy swell;

The winds, too, plume their piercing
wings;

The clouds have nearly fill'd their
springs;

The fountains of the great deep shall be broken,

And heaven set wide her windows;
while mankind 225

View, unacknowledged, each tremendous token——

Still, as they were from the beginning,
blind.

We hear the sound they cannot hear,
The mustering thunders of the threatening sphere;

Yet a few hours their coming is
delay'd; 230

Their flashing banners, folded still on
high,

Yet undisplay'd,

Save to the Spirit's all-pervading eye.

How! how! oh Earth!

Thy death is nearer than thy recent birth;
Tremble, ye mountains, soon to shrink
below 236

The ocean's overflow!

The wave shall break upon your cliffs;
and shells,

The little shells, of ocean's least things be Deposed where now the eagle's offspring
dwells— 240

How shall he shriek o'er the remorseless
sea!

And call his nestlings up with fruitless yell, Unanswer'd, save by the encroaching
swell;—

While man shall long in vain for his broad
wings,

The wings which could not save:—

Where could he rest them, while the whole space brings 246

Nought to his eye beyond the deep, his
grave?

Brethren, rejoice!

And loudly lift each superhuman voice—
All die, 250

Save the slight remnant of Seth's seed—
The seed of Seth,

Exempt for future sorrow's sake from
death,

But of the sons of Cain

None shall remain; 255

And all his goodly daughters

Must lie beneath the desolating waters;
Or, floating upward, with their long hair laid

Along the wave, the cruel heaven upbraid,

Which would not spare 260
 Beings even in death so fair.
 It is decreed,
 All die!
 And to the universal human cry
 The universal silence shall succeed! 265
 Fly, brethren, fly!
 But still rejoice!
 We fell!
 They fall!
 So perish all 270
 These petty foes of Heaven who shrink
 from hell!
 [The Spirits disappear, soaring upwards.
Japh. [solus]. God hath proclaim'd
 the destiny of earth;
 My father's ark of safety hath announced it;
 The very demons shriek it from their
 caves;
 The scroll of Enoch prophesied it long
 In silent books, which, in their silence,
 say 276
 More to the mind than thunder to the ear:
 And yet men listen'd not, nor listen; but Walk darkling to their doom; which,
 though so nigh,
 Shakes them no more in their dim disbelief, 280
 Than their last cries shall shake the Almighty purpose,
 Or deaf obedient ocean, which fulfils it.
 No sign yet hangs its banner in the air;
 The clouds are few, and of their wonted texture; 284
 The sun will rise upon the earth's last day
 As on the fourth day of creation, when God said unto him, 'Shine!' and he broke
 forth
 Into the dawn, which lighted not the yet Uniform'd forefather of mankind—but roused
 Before the human orison the earlier 290
 Made and far sweeter voices of the birds,
 Which in the open firmament of heaven
 Have wings like angels, and like them salute
 Heaven first each day before the Adamites:
 Their matins now draw nigh—the east is kindling— 295
 And they will sing! and day will break!
 Both near,
 So near the awful close! For these must drop
 Their outworn pinions on the deep; and
 day,
 After the bright course of a few brief morrows,— Ay, day will rise; but upon what?—a chaos, 300
 Which was ere day; and which, renew'd, makes time
 Nothing! for, without life, what are the
 hours?

No more to dust than is eternity
 Unto Jehovah, who created both.
 Without him, even eternity would be A void: without man, time, as made for
 man, 306
 Dies with man, and is swallow'd in that
 deep
 Which has no fountain; as his race will be Devour'd by that which drowns his infant
 world.—
 What have we here? Shapes of both earth
 and air? 310
 No—all of heaven, they are so beautiful.
 I cannot trace their features; but their
 forms,
 How lovelily they move along the side
 Of the grey mountain, scattering its mist!
 And after the swart savage spirits, whose Infernal immortality pour'd forth 316
 Their impious hymn of triumph, they shall
 be Welcome as Eden. It may be they come To tell me the reprieve of our young
 world,
 For which I have so often pray'd—They
 come! 320
 Anah! oh, God! and with her——

Enter SAMIASA, AZAZIEL, ANAH, and AHOLIBAMAH.

Anah. Japhet!
Sam. Lo!
 A son of Adam!
Aza. What doth the earth-
 born here,
 While all his race are slumbering?
Japh. Angel! what Dost thou on earth when thou shouldst be
 on high?
Aza. Know'st thou not, or forgett'st thou, that a part 325
 Of our great function is to guard thine
 earth?
Japh. But all good angels have forsaken earth,
 Which is condemn'd; nay, even the evil fly
 The approaching chaos. Anah! Anah! my
 In vain, and long, and still to be, beloved!
 Why walk'st thou with this spirit, in those
 hours 331
 When no good spirit longer lights below?
Anah. Japhet, I cannot answer thee;
 yet, yet
 Forgive me——
Japh. May the Heaven, which soon no
 more
 Will pardon, do so! for thou art greatly
 tempted. 335
Aho. Back to thy tents, insulting son of Noah!
 We know thee not.
Japh. The hour may come when thou May'st know me better; and thy sister
 know

Me still the same which I have ever been.

Sam. Son of the patriarch, who hath ever been 340

Upright before his God, whate'er thy gifts,
And thy words seem of sorrow, mix'd with
wrath,

How have Azazel, or myself, brought on
thee

Wrong?

Japh. Wrong! the greatest of all wrongs; but thou

Say'st well; though she be dust, I did not,
could not, 345

Deserve her. Farewell, Anah! I have said
That word so often! but now say it, ne'er

To be repeated. Angel! or whate'er Thou art, or must be soon, hast thou the
power 349

To save this beautiful—these beautiful Children of Cain?

Aza. From what?

Japh. And is it so,
That ye too know not? Angels! angels! ye

Have shared man's sin, and, it may be,
now must

Partake his punishment; or, at the least,
My sorrow.

Sam. Sorrow! I ne'er thought till
now 355

To hear an Adamite speak riddles to me.
Japh. And hath not the Most High expounded them?

Then ye are lost, as they are lost.

Aho. So be it!
If they love as they are loved, they will not shrink

More to be mortal, than I would to dare
An immortality of agonies 361

With Samiasa!
Anah. Sister! sister! speak not

Thus.

Aza. Fearest thou, my Anah?

Anah. Yes, for thee:
I would resign the greater remnant of

This little life of mine, before one hour
Of thine eternity should know a pang.

Japh. It is for him, then! for the seraph
thou

Hast left me! That is nothing, if thou hast
not

Left thy God too! for unions like to these,
Between a mortal and an immortal, can-
not 370

Be happy or be hallow'd. We are sent Upon the earth to toil and die; and they

Are made to minister on high unto
The Highest: but if he can save thee, soon

The hour will come in which celestial aid Alone can do so.

Anah. Ah! he speaks of death.

Sam. Of death to us! and those who are with us!

But that the man seems full of sorrow, I Could smile.

Japh. I grieve not for myself, nor fear;
I am safe, not for my own deserts, but
those 380

Of a well-doing sire, who hath been found Righteous enough to save his children.

Would
His power was greater of redemption! or
That by exchanging my own life for hers,

Who could alone have made mine happy,
she, 385

The last and loveliest of Cain's race, could
share

The ark which shall receive a remnant of
The seed of Seth!

Aho. And dost thou think that we,
With Cain's, the eldest born of Adam's,

blood
Warm in our veins,—strong Cain! who was begotten 390

In Paradise,—would mingle with Seth's
children?

Seth, the last offspring of old Adam's dotage?

No, not to save all earth, were earth in
peril!

Our race hath always dwelt apart from thine
From the beginning, and shall do so ever.

Japh. I did not speak to thee, Aholibamah! 396

Too much of the forefather whom thou vauntest

Has come down in that haughty blood which springs

From him who shed the first, and that a
brother's! 399

But thou, my Anah! let me call thee mine,
Albeit thou art not; 'tis a word I cannot

Part with, although I must from thee. My Anah!

Thou who dost rather make me dream that Abel

Had left a daughter, whose pure pious race
Survived in thee, so much unlike thou art

The rest of the stern Cainites, save in beauty, 406

For all of them are fairest in their favour—
Aho. [interrupting him]. And wouldst thou have her like our father's foe

In mind, in soul? If I partook thy thought,

And dream'd that aught of Abel was in
her!— 410

Get thee hence, son of Noah; thou makest
strife.

Japh. Offspring of Cain, thy father did
so!

Aho. But

He slew not Seth: and what hast thou to do With other deeds between his God and

him?

Japh. Thou speakest well: his God hath judg'd him, and 415

I had not named his deed, but that thyself
Didst seem to glory in him, nor to shrink

From what he had done.

Aho. He was our fathers' father;
The eldest born of man, the strongest,
bravest,
And most enduring:—Shall I blush for him⁴²⁰
From whom we had our being? Look
upon
Our race; behold their stature and their
beauty,
Their courage, strength, and length of
days—

Japh. They are number'd.

Aho. Be it so! but while yet their hours
endure,

I glory in my brethren and our fathers.

Japh. My sire and race but glory in their God,
Anah! and thou?—⁴²⁶

Anah. Whate'er our God decrees,
The God of Seth, as Cain, I must obey,
And will endeavour patiently to obey.
But could I dare to pray in his dread hour
Of universal vengeance (if such should be),
It would not be to live, alone exempt
Of all my house. My sister! oh, my sister!
What were the world, or other worlds, or
all

The brightest future, without the sweet past—⁴³⁵

Thy love, my father's, all the life, and all The things which sprang up with me, like the stars,

Making my dim existence radiant with Soft lights which were not mine? Aholibamah!

Oh! if there should be mercy—seek it,
find it:⁴⁴⁰

I abhor death, because that thou must die.

Aho. What, hath this dreamer, with his father's ark,

The bugbear he hath built to scare the
world,

Shaken my sister? Are we not the loved
Of seraphs? and if we were not, must we Cling to a son of Noah for our lives?⁴⁴⁶

Rather than thus—But the enthusiast
dreams

The worst of dreams, the fantasies engender'd

By hopeless love and heated vigils. Who Shall shake these solid mountains, this firm earth,⁴⁵⁰

And bid those clouds and waters take a shape

Distinct from that which we and all our sires

Have seen them wear on their eternal way?
Who shall do this?

Japh. He whose one word produced
them.

Aho. Who heard that word?

Japh. The universe, which leap'd To life before it. Ah! smilest thou still in scorn?⁴⁵⁶

Turn to thy seraphs: if they attest it not,
They are none.

Sam. Aholibamah, own thy God!

Aho. I have ever hail'd our Maker,
Samiasa,

As thine, and mine: a God of love, not sorrow.⁴⁶⁰

Japh. Alas! what else is love but sorrow? Even

He who made earth in love had soon to
grieve

Above its first and best inhabitants.

Aho. 'Tis said so.

Japh.

It is even so.

Enter NOAH and SHEM.

Noah. Japhet! What Dost thou here with these children of the wicked?⁴⁶⁵

Dread'st thou not to partake their coming
doom?

Japh. Father, it cannot be a sin to seek
To save an earth-born being; and behold,
These are not of the sinful, since they have
The fellowship of angels.

Noah. These are they, then,⁴⁷⁰ Who leave the throne of God, to take them wives

From out the race of Cain; the sons of
heaven,

Who seek earth's daughters for their beauty?

Aza. Patriarch!

Thou hast said it.

Noah. Woe, woe, woe to such communion!

Has not God made a barrier between earth⁴⁷⁵

And heaven, and limited each, kind to kind?

Sam. Was not man made in high Jehovah's image?

Did God not love what he had made?
And what

Do we but imitate and emulate

His love unto created love?

Noah. I am⁴⁸⁰
But man, and was not made to judge man-
kind,

Far less the sons of God; but as our God Has deign'd to commune with me, and reveal

His judgments, I reply, that the descent
Of seraphs from their everlasting seat
Unto a perishable and perishing,⁴⁸⁶
Even on the very eve of perishing, world,
Cannot be good.

Aza. What! though it were
to save?

Noah. Not ye in all your glory can redeem

What he who made you glorious hath condemn'd.⁴⁹⁰

Were your immortal mission safety,
'twould

Be general, not for two, though beautiful;
And beautiful they are, but not the less Condemn'd.

Japh. Oh, father! say it not.

Noah. Son! son!
If that thou wouldst avoid their doom,
forget

That they exist: they soon shall cease to be,
While thou shalt be the sire of a new
world,
And better.

Japh. Let me die with this, and
them!

Noah. Thou shouldst for such a thought, but shalt not; he Who can, redeems thee.

Sam. And why him and thee, 500
More than what he, thy son, prefers to
both?

Noah. Ask him who made thee greater than myself

And mine, but not less subject to his own Almightiness. And lo! his mildest and Least to be tempted messenger appears!

Enter RAPHAEL the Archangel.

Raph. Spirits!

Whose seat is near the throne,

What do ye here?

Is thus a seraph's duty to be shown

Now that the hour is near 510

When earth must be alone?

Return!

Adore and burn

In glorious homage with the elected
'seven.'

Your place is heaven. 515

Sam. Raphael!

The first and fairest of the sons of God,

How long hath this been law,

That earth by angels must be left untrod?

Earth! which oft saw 520

Jehovah's footsteps not disdain her sod!

The world he loved, and made

For love; and oft have we obey'd

His frequent mission with delighted pinions;

Adoring him in his least works dis-
play'd; 525

Watching this youngest star of his dominions;

And, as the latest birth of his great word,

Eager to keep it worthy of our Lord.

Why is thy brow severe?

And wherefore speak'st thou of destruction near? 530

Raph. Had Samiasa and Azazel been
In their true place, with the angelic choir,

Written in fire

They would have seen

Jehovah's late decree, 535

And not inquired their Maker's breath of
me:

But ignorance must ever be

A part of sin;

And even the spirits' knowledge shall grow less

As they wax proud within; 540

For Blindness is the first-born of Excess.

When all good angels left the world, ye stay'd,

Stung with strange passions, and debased

By mortal feelings for a mortal maid:

But ye are pardon'd thus far, and replaced 545

With your pure equals. Hence! away!
away!

Or stay,

And lose eternity by that delay!

Aza. And thou! if earth be thus for-bidden

In the decree 550

To us until this moment hidden,

Dost thou not err as we

In being here?

Raph. I came to call ye back to your fit sphere,

In the great name and at the word of
God. 555

Dear, dearest in themselves, and scarce less dear

That which I came to do: till now we trod

Together the eternal space; together

Let us still walk the stars. True, earth
must die!

Her race, return'd into her womb, must wither, 560

And much which she inherits: but oh!
why

Cannot this earth be made, or be
destroy'd,

Without involving ever some vast void

In the immortal ranks? immortal still

In their immeasurable forfeiture. 565

Our brother Satan fell; his burning will

Rather than longer worship dared endure!

But ye who still are pure!

Seraphs! less mighty than that mightiest
one,

Think how he was undone! 570

And think if tempting man can compensate

For heaven desired too late?

Long have I warr'd,

Long must I war

With him who deem'd it hard 575

To be created, and to acknowledge
him

Who midst the cherubim

Made him as suns to a dependent star,

Leaving the archangels at his right hand
dim.

I loved him—beautiful he was: oh,
heaven 580

Save his who made, what beauty and what
power

Was ever like to Satan's! Would the hour

In which he fell could ever be forgiven!
The wish is impious: but, oh ye!

Yet undestroy'd, be warn'd! Eternity

With him, or with his God, is in your choice: 586

He hath not tempted you; he cannot tempt
The angels, from his further snares
exempt:

But man hath listen'd to his voice,
And ye to woman's—beautiful she is,
The serpent's voice less subtle than her
kiss. 591

The snake but vanquish'd dust; but she will draw

A second host from heaven, to break heaven's law.

Yet, yet, oh fly!

Ye cannot die; 595

But they Shall pass away,

While ye shall fill with shrieks the upper sky

For perishable clay,

Whose memory in your immortality 600

Shall long outlast the sun which gave them day.

Think how your essence differeth from theirs

In all but suffering! why partake

The agony to which they must be heirs—

Born to be plough'd with years, and sown with cares, 605

And reap'd by Death, lord of the human
soil?

Even had their days been left to toil their
path

Through time to dust, unshorten'd by God's wrath,

Still they are Evil's prey and Sorrow's
spoil.

Aho. Let them fly! 610

I hear the voice which says that all must
die,

Sooner than our white-bearded patriarchs
died;

And that on high

An ocean is prepared,

While from below 615

The deep shall rise to meet heaven's over-
flow.

Few shall be spared,

It seems; and, of that few, the race of Cain
Must lift their eyes to Adam's God in vain.

Sister! since it is so, 620

And the eternal Lord

In vain would be implored

For the remission of one hour of woe,
Let us resign even what we have adored,

And meet the wave, as we would meet the
sword, 625

If not unmoved, yet undismay'd,
And wailing less for us than those who
shall

Survive in mortal or immortal thrall,

And, when the fatal waters are allay'd,

Weep for the myriads who can weep no
more. 630

Fly, seraphs! to your own eternal shore,
Where winds nor howl nor waters roar.

Our portion is to die,

And yours to live for ever:

But which is best, a dead eternity, 635
Or living, is but known to the great Giver.

Obeys him, as we shall obey;

I would not keep this life of mine in clay

An hour beyond his will; 639

Nor see ye lose a portion of his grace,
For all the mercy which Seth's race

Find still.

Fly!

And as your pinions bear ye back to
heaven,

Think that my love still mounts with thee
on high, 645

Samiasa!

And if I look up with a tearless eye,
'Tis that an angel's bride disdains to

weep,—

Farewell! Now rise, inexorable deep!
Anah. And must we die? 650

And must I lose thee too,

Azazel?

Oh, my heart! my heart!

Thy prophecies were true!

And yet thou wert so happy too!

The blow, though not unlook'd for, falls
as new: 656

But yet depart!

Ah! why?

Yet let me not retain thee—fly!

My pangs can be but brief; but thine
would be 660

Eternal, if repulsed from heaven for me.
Too much already hast thou deign'd

To one of Adam's race!

Our doom is sorrow; not to us alone,
But to the spirits who have not disdain'd

To love us, cometh anguish with disgrace.
The first who taught us knowledge hath been hurl'd

From his once archangelic throne

Into some unknown world:

And thou, Azazel! No— 670

Thou shalt not suffer woe

For me. Away! nor weep!

Thou canst not weep; but yet

May'st suffer more, not weeping: then
forget

Her, whom the surges of the all-strangling
deep 675

Can bring no pang like this. Fly! fly!
Being gone, 'twill be less difficult to die.

Japh. Oh, say not so!

Father! and thou, archangel, thou!
Surely celestial mercy lurks below 680

That pure severe serenity of brow:

Let them not meet this sea without a
shore,

Save in our ark, or let me be no more!

Noah. Peace, child of passion, peace!
If not within thy heart, yet with thy tongue
Do God no wrong! 686
Live as he wills it—die, when he ordains,
A righteous death, unlike the seed of Cain's.

Cease, or be sorrowful in silence; cease
To weary Heaven's ear with thy selfish plaint. 690
Wouldst thou have God commit a sin
for thee?

Such would it be
To alter his intent
For a mere mortal sorrow. Be a man!
And bear what Adam's race must bear, and can. 695

Japh. Ay, father! but when they are
gone,
And we are all alone,
Floating upon the azure desert, and
The depth beneath us hides our own dear
land,
And dearer, silent friends and brethren,
all 700

Buried in its immeasurable breast,
Who, who, our tears, our shrieks, shall then command?

Can we in desolation's peace have rest?
Oh God! be thou a God, and spare
Yet while 'tis time; 705

Renew not Adam's fall:
Mankind were then but twain,
But they are numerous now as are the waves
And the tremendous rain, Whose drops shall be less thick than would their graves, 710
Were graves permitted to the seed of
Cain.

Noah. Silence, vain boy! each word of thine's a crime,
Angel! forgive this stripling's fond despair.

Raph. Seraphs! these mortals speak in passion: Ye!
Who are, or should be, passionless and
pure, 715

May now return with me.
Sam. It may not be:
We have chosen, and will endure.

Raph. Say'st thou?
Aza. He hath said it, and I say,
Amen!

Raph. Again!
Then from this hour, 720
Shorn as ye are of all celestial power,
And aliens from your God,
Farewell!

Japh. Alas! where shall they dwell?
Hark, hark! Deep sounds, and deeper still,
Are howling from the mountain's
bosom: 726
There's not a breath of wind upon the hill,
Yet quivers every leaf, and drops each blossom:
Earth groans as if beneath a heavy load.

Noah. Hark, hark! the sea-birds cry!
In clouds they overspread the lurid sky,
And hover round the mountain, where
before

Never a white wing, wetted by the wave,
Yet dared to soar,
Even when the waters wax'd too fierce to brave. 735

Soon it shall be their only shore,
And then, no more!

Japh. The sun! the sun!
He riseth, but his better light is gone;
And a black circle, bound 740
His glaring disk around,
Proclaims earth's last of summer days hath
shone!

The clouds return into the hues of
night,
Save where their brazen-colour'd edges
streak
The verge where brighter morns were wont to break. 745

Noah. And lo! yon flash of light,
The distant thunder's harbinger, appears!
It cometh! hence, away!
Leave to the elements their evil prey!
Hence to where our all-hallow'd ark up-
rears 750

Its safe and wreckless sides!
Japh. Oh, father, stay!
Leave not my Anah to the swallowing tides!

Noah. Must we not leave all life to such?

Begone!
Japh. Not I. 755
Noah. Then die

With them!
How darest thou look on that prophetic
sky,
And seek to save what all things now
condemn,

In overwhelming unison 760
With just Jehovah's wrath!

Japh. Can rage and justice join in the same path?

Noah. Blasphemer! darest thou murmur even now?

Raph. Patriarch, be still a father!
smooth thy brow:

Thy son, despite his folly, shall not sink:
He knows not what he says, yet shall not drink 766

With sobs the salt foam of the swelling
waters:

But be, when passion passeth, good as
thou,

Nor perish like heaven's children with man's daughters.

Aho. The tempest cometh; heaven and earth unite 770

For the annihilation of all life.
Unequal is the strife
Between our strength and the Eternal Might!

WERNER; OR, THE INHERITANCE:

A TRAGEDY

TO

BY ONE OF HIS HUMBLEST ADMIRERS, THIS TRAGEDY IS DEDICATED.

PREFACE

THE following drama is taken entirely from the 'German's Tale, Kruitznér', published many years ago in 'Lee's Canterbury Tales', written (I believe) by two sisters, of whom one furnished only this story and another, both of which are considered superior to the remainder of the collection. I have adopted the characters, plan, and even the language of many parts of this story. Some of the characters are modified or altered, a few of the names changed, and one character (Ida of Stralenheim) added by myself: but in the rest the original is chiefly followed. When I was young (about fourteen, I think), I first read this tale, which made a deep impression upon me; and may, indeed, be said to contain the germ of much that I have since written. I am not sure that it ever was very popular; or, at any rate, its popularity has since been eclipsed by that of other great writers in the same department. But I have generally found that those who had read it, agreed with me in their estimate of the singular power of mind and conception which it develops. I should also add conception, rather than execution; for the story might, perhaps, have been developed with greater advantage. Amongst those whose opinions agreed with mine upon this story, I could mention some very high names: but it is not necessary, nor indeed of any use; for every one must judge according to his own feelings. I merely refer the reader to the original story, that he may see to what extent I have borrowed from it; and am not unwilling that he should find much greater pleasure in perusing it than the drama which is founded upon its contents.

I had begun a drama upon this tale so far back as 1815 (the first I ever attempted, except one at thirteen years old, called 'Ulric and Ilvina', which I had sense enough to burn), and had nearly completed an act, when I was interrupted by circumstances. This is somewhere amongst my papers in England; but as it has not been found, I have re-written the first, and added the subsequent acts.

The whole is neither intended, nor in any shape adapted, for the stage.

ACT I

SCENE I.—The Hall of a decayed Palace near a small Town on the Northern Frontier of Silesia—the Night tempestuous.

WERNER and JOSEPHINE, his Wife.

Jos. My love, be calmer!

Wer. I am calm.

Jos. To me—

Yes, but not to thyself: thy pace is hurried, And no one walks a chamber like to ours With steps like thine when his heart is at rest.

Were it a garden, I should deem thee happy,

And stepping with the bee from flower to flower;

But here!

Wer. 'Tis chill; the tapestry lets through

The wind to which it waves: my blood is frozen.

Jos. Ah, no!

Wer. [smiling]. Why! wouldst thou have it so?

Jos. I would

Have it a healthful current.

Wer. Let it flow 10
Until 'tis spilt or check'd—how soon, I care not.

Jos. And am I nothing in thy heart?

Wer. All—all.

Jos. Then canst thou wish for that which must break mine?

Wer. [approaching her slowly]. But for thee I had been—no matter what, But much of good and evil; what I am,

15

Thou knowest; what I might or should have been,

Thou knowest not: but still I love thee, nor Shall aught divide us.

[WERNER walks on abruptly, and then approaches JOSEPHINE.

The storm of the night

Perhaps affects me; I'm a thing of feelings, And have of late been sickly, as, alas! 20 Thou know'st by sufferings more than mine, my love!

In watching me.

Jos. To see thee well is much— To see thee happy—

Wer. Where hast thou seen such? Let me be wretched with the rest!

Jos. But think How many in this hour of tempest shiver Beneath the biting wind and heavy rain, Whose every drop bows them down nearer earth,

Which hath no chamber for them save beneath

Her surface.

Wer. And that's not the worst: who cares

For chambers? rest is all. The wretches whom 30

Thou namest—ay, the wind howls round them, and

The dull and dropping rain saps in their bones

The creeping marrow. I have been a soldier,

A hunter, and a traveller, and am

A beggar, and should know the thing thou talk'st of. 35

Jos. And art thou not now shelter'd from them all?

Wer. Yes. And from these alone.

Jos. And that is something.

Wer. True—to a peasant.

Jos. Should the nobly born Be thankless for that refuge which their habits

Of early delicacy render more 40

Needful than to the peasant, when the ebb Of fortune leaves them on the shoals of life?

Wer. It is not that, thou know'st it is not: we Have borne all this, I'll not say patiently, Except in thee—but we have borne it.

Jos. Well?

Wer. Something beyond our outward sufferings (though

These were enough to gnaw into our souls) Hath stung me oft, and, more than ever,

now.

When, but for this untoward sickness, which 49

Seized me upon this desolate frontier, and Hath wasted, not alone my strength, but

means,

And leaves us—no! this is beyond me!— but

For this I had been happy—thou been happy—

The splendour of my rank sustain'd—my name—

My father's name—been still upheld; and, more 55

Than those—

Jos. [abruptly]. My son—our son—our Ulric,

Been clasp'd again in these long-empty arms,

And all a mother's hunger satisfied.

Twelve years! he was but eight then:— beautiful

He was, and beautiful he must be now, My Ulric! my adored! 61

Wer. I have been full oft The chase of Fortune; now she hath o'ertaken

My spirit where it cannot turn at bay,— Sick, poor, and lonely.

Jos. Lonely! my dear husband?

Wer. Or worse—involving all I love, in this 65

Far worse than solitude. Alone, I had died,

And all been over in a nameless grave.

Jos. And I had not outlived thee; but pray take Comfort! We have struggled long; and they who strive 69

With Fortune win or weary her at last, So that they find the goal or cease to feel

Further. Take comfort,—we shall find our boy.

Wer. We were in sight of him, of everything

Which could bring compensation for past sorrow—

And to be baffled thus!

Jos. We are not baffled. 75

Wer. Are we not penniless?

Jos. We ne'er were wealthy.

Wer. But I was born to wealth, and rank, and power;

Enjoy'd them, loved them, and, alas! abused them,

And forfeited them by my father's wrath, In my o'er-fervent youth: but for the abuse 80

Long sufferings have atoned. My father's death

Left the path open, yet not without snares. This cold and creeping kinsman, who so long

Kept his eye on me, as the snake upon The fluttering bird, hath ere this time out-

stept me, 85

Become the master of my rights, and lord Of that which lifts him up to princes in Dominion and domain.

Jos. Who knows? our son

May have return'd back to his grandsire,
and

Even now uphold thy rights for thee?

Wer. 'Tis hopeless. 90 Since his strange disappearance from my
father's,

Entailing, as it were, my sins upon Himself, no tidings have reveal'd his course.

I parted with him to his grandsire, on The promise that his anger would stop
short 95

Of the third generation; but Heaven seems
To claim her stern prerogative, and visit
Upon my boy his father's faults and follies.

Jos. I must hope better still,—at least we have yet

Baffled the long pursuit of Stralenheim.

Wer. We should have done, but for this fatal sickness; 101

More fatal than a mortal malady,
Because it takes not life, but life's sole solace:

Even now I feel my spirit girt about
By the snares of this avaricious fiend:—
How do I know he hath not track'd us
here? 106

Jos. He does not know thy person;
and his spies,

Who so long watch'd thee, have been left at Hamburg.

Our unexpected journey, and this change
Of name, leaves all discovery far behind:
None hold us here for aught save what we
seem. 111

Wer. Save what we seem! save what we are—sick beggars,

Even to our very hopes.—Ha! ha!

Jos. Alas!
That bitter laugh!

Wer. Who would read in this form
The high soul of the son of a long line?

Who, in this garb, the heir of princely
lands? 116

Who, in this sunken, sickly eye, the pride
Of rank and ancestry? In this worn cheek And famine-hollow'd brow, the lord of
halls

Which daily feast a thousand vassals?

Jos. You 120
Ponder'd not thus upon these worldly
things,

My Werner! when you deign'd to choose for bride

The foreign daughter of a wandering exile.

Wer. An exile's daughter with an outcast son, 124

Were a fit marriage: but I still had hopes
To lift thee to the state we both were born
for.

Your father's house was noble, though
decay'd;

And worthy by its birth to match with ours.

Jos. Your father did not think so,
though 'twas noble;

But had my birth been all my claim to
match 130

With thee, I should have deem'd it what it is.

Wer. And what is that in thine eyes?
Jos. All which it

Has done in our behalf,—nothing?
Wer. How,—nothing?

Jos. Or worse; for it has been a canker in Thy heart from the beginning: but for this,
We had not felt our poverty but as 136

Millions of myriads feel it, cheerfully;
But for these phantoms of thy feudal
fathers,

Thou might'st have earn'd thy bread, as thousands earn it;

Or, if that seem too humble, tried by commerce, 140

Or other civic means, to amend thy fortunes.

Wer. [ironically]. And been an Han-seatic burgher? Excellent!

Jos. Whate'er thou might'st have been, to me thou art

What no state high or low can ever change,
My heart's first choice; which chose thee,
knowing neither 145

Thy birth, thy hopes, thy pride; nought,
save thy sorrows:

While they last, let me comfort or divide
them:

When they end, let mine end with them,
or thee!

Wer. My better angel! Such I have ever found thee;

This rashness, or this weakness of my temper, 150

Ne'er raised a thought to injure thee or
thine.

Thou didst not mar my fortunes: my own
nature

In youth was such as to unmake an empire,
Had such been my inheritance; but now, Chasten'd, subdued, out-worn, and taught
to know 155

Myself,—to lose this for our son and thee!

Trust me, when, in my two-and-twentieth
spring,

My father barr'd me from my fathers'
house,

The last sole scion of a thousand sires
(For I was then the last), it hurt me less

Than to behold my boy and my boy's
mother 161

Excluded in their innocence from what My faults deserved—exclusion; although
then

My passions were all living serpents, and Twined like the Gorgon's round me.

[A loud knocking is heard.]
Jos. Hark!

Wer. A knocking! 165

Jos. Who can it be at this lone hour?
We have Few visitors.

Wer. And poverty hath none,
Save those who come to make it poorer
still.

Well, I am prepared.

[*WERNER puts his hand into his bosom,
as if to search for some weapon.*]

Jos. Oh! do not look so. I Will to the door. It cannot be of import
In this lone spot of wintry desolation:—
The very desert saves man from mankind.
[She goes to the door.]

Enter IDENSTEIN.

Iden. A fair good evening to my fairer hostess

And worthy—What's your name, my
friend?

Wer. Are you
Not afraid to demand it?

Iden. Not afraid? 175
Egad! I am afraid. You look as if I ask'd for something better than your
name,

By the face you put on it.

Wer. Better, sir!
Iden. Better or worse, like matrimony:
what

Shall I say more? You have been a guest this month 180

Here in the prince's palace—to be sure,
His highness had resign'd it to the ghosts
And rats these twelve years—but 'tis still a palace)—

I say you have been our lodger, and as yet
We do not know your name.

Wer. My name is Werner. 185

Iden. A goodly name, a very worthy
name,

As e'er was gilt upon a trader's board:
I have a cousin in the lazaretto
Of Hamburg, who has got a wife who bore
The same. He is an officer of trust, 190
Surgeon's assistant (hoping to be surgeon),
And has done miracles i'the way of business.

Perhaps you are related to my relative?

Wer. To yours?
Jos. Oh, yes; we are, but distantly.
[Aside to WERNER.] Cannot you humour
the dull gossip till 195
We learn his purpose?

Iden. Well, I'm glad of that;
I thought so all along, such natural yearn-
ings

Play'd round my heart:—blood is not water, cousin;

And so let's have some wine, and drink unto

Our better acquaintance: relatives should
be 200

Friends.

Wer. You appear to have drank enough already;

And if you have not, I've no wine to offer, Else it were yours; but this you know, or should know:

You see I am poor, and sick, and will not
see

That I would be alone; but to your business! 205

What brings you here?

Iden. Why, what should bring me
here?

Wer. I know not, though I think that I could guess

That which will send you hence.

Jos. [aside]. Patience, dear Werner!

Iden. You don't know what has happen'd, then?

Jos. How should we?

Iden. The river has o'erflow'd.

Jos. Alas! we have known 210
That to our sorrow for these five days;
since

It keeps us here.

Iden. But what you don't know is,
That a great personage, who fain would cross

Against the stream and three postilions'
wishes,

Is drown'd below the ford, with five post-horses, 215

A monkey, and a mastiff, and a valet.

Jos. Poor creatures! are you sure?

Iden. Yes, of the monkey,
And the valet, and the cattle; but as yet
We know not if his excellency's dead 219
Or no; your noblemen are hard to drown,
As it is fit that men in office should be;

But what is certain is, that he has swallow'd

Enough of the Oder to have burst two peasants;

And now a Saxon and Hungarian traveller,

Who, at their proper peril, snatch'd him
from 225

The whirling river, have sent on to crave
A lodging, or a grave, according as

It may turn out with the live or dead body.

Jos. And where will you receive him?
here, I hope,

If we can be of service—say the word.

Iden. Here? no; but in the prince's own apartment, 231

As fits a noble guest:—'tis damp, no
doubt,

Not having been inhabited these twelve
years;

But then he comes from a much damper
place,

So scarcely will catch cold in't, if he be Still liable to cold—and if not, why 236

He'll be worse lodged to-morrow:
ne'ertheless,

I have order'd fire and all appliances
To be got ready for the worst—that is,
In case he should survive.

Jos. Poor gentleman, 240
I hope he will, with all my heart.

Wer. Intendant,
Have you not learn'd his name? My Josephine, [Aside to his wife.
Retire: I'll sift this fool.

[Exit JOSEPHINE.
Iden. His name? oh Lord!
Who knows if he hath now a name or no?
'Tis time enough to ask it when he's able
To give an answer; or if not, to put 246
His heir's upon his epitaph. Methought
Just now you chid me for demanding
names?

Wer. True, true, I did so: you say well and wisely.

Enter GABOR.

Gab. If I intrude, I crave—

Iden. Oh, no intrusion! 250
This is the palace; this a stranger like Yourself; I pray you make yourself at
home:

But where's his excellency? and how fares he?
Gab. Wetly and wearily, but out of
peril:

He paused to change his garments in a cottage 255 (Where I doff'd mine for these, and came on hither),
And has almost recover'd from his drench-
ing.

He will be here anon.

Iden. What ho, there! bustle!
Without there, Herman, Weilburg, Peter, Conrad! 259

[Gives directions to different servants who enter.

A nobleman sleeps here to-night—see that
All is in order in the damask chamber—Keep up the stove—I will myself to the cellar—

And Madame Idenstein (my consort, stranger)

Shall furnish forth the bed-apparel; for,
To say the truth, they are marvellous scant of this 265

Within the palace precincts, since his high-
ness

Left it some dozen years ago. And then
His excellency will sup, doubtless?

Gab. Faith!
I cannot tell; but I should think the pillow
Would please him better than the table,
after 270

His soaking in your river: but for fear
Your viands should be thrown away, I
mean

To sup myself, and have a friend without
Who will do honour to your good cheer with A traveller's appetite.

Iden. But are you sure 275
His excellency—But his name: what is it?

Gab. I do not know.

Iden. And yet you saved his life.

Gad. I help'd my friend to do so.

Iden. Well, that's strange,
To save a man's life whom you do not
know.

Gab. Not so; for there are some I know so well, 280
I scarce should give myself the trouble.

Iden. Pray,
Good friend, and who may you be?

Gab. By my family,
Hungarian.

Iden. Which is call'd?

Gab. It matters little.

Iden. [aside]. I think that all the world are grown anonymous, Since no one cares to tell me what he's
call'd! 285

Pray, has his excellency a large suite?

Gab. Sufficient.

Iden. How many?

Gab. I did not count them.
We came up by mere accident, and just In time to drag him through his carriage window.

Iden. Well, what would I give to save a great man! 290

No doubt you'll have a swingeing sum as recompense.

Gab. Perhaps.

Iden. Now, how much do you reckon
on?

Gab. I have not yet put up myself to
sale:

In the mean time, my best reward would be A glass of your Hockcheimer—a green
glass, 295

Wreath'd with rich grapes and Bacchanal devices,

O'erflowing with the oldest of your vintage:

For which I promise you, in case you e'er Run hazard of being drown'd (although I
own

It seems, of all deaths, the least likely, for
you), 300

I'll pull you out for nothing. Quick, my
friend,

And think, for every bumper I shall quaff,
A wave the less may roll above your head.

Iden. [aside]. I don't much like this fellow—close and dry

He seems,—two things which suit me not;
however, 305

Wine he shall have; if that unlock him not,
I shall not sleep to-night for curiosity.

[Exit IDENSTEIN.

Gab. [to WERNER]. This master of the ceremonies is
The intendant of the palace, I presume:
'Tis a fine building, but decay'd.

Wer. The apartment
Design'd for him you rescued will be
found 311
In fitter order for a sickly guest.
Gab. I wonder then you occupied it
not,
For you seem delicate in health.
Wer. [quickly]. Sir!
Gab. Pray
Excuse me: have I said aught to offend
you? 315
Wer. Nothing: but we are strangers to each other.
Gab. And that's the reason I would have us less so:
I thought our bustling host without had
said
You were a chance and passing guest, the counterpart
Of me and my companions.

Wer. Very true. 320
Gab. Then, as we never met before,
and never,
It may be, may again encounter, why,
I thought to cheer up this old dungeon
here
(At least to me) by asking you to share
The fare of my companions and myself.
Wer. Pray, pardon me; my health—
Gab. Even as you please.
I have been a soldier, and perhaps am blunt
In bearing.

Wer. I have also served, and can Require a soldier's greeting.
Gab. In what service?
The Imperial?

Wer. [quickly, and then interrupting himself]. I commanded—no—I mean
I served; but it is many years ago, 331
When first Bohemia raised her banner
'gainst
The Austrian.

Gab. Well, that's over now, and
peace
Has turn'd some thousand gallant hearts adrift
To live as they best may: and, to say
truth, 335
Some take the shortest.

Wer. What is that?
Gab. What'er
They lay their hands on. All Silesia and Lusatia's woods are tenanted by bands
Of the late troops, who levy on the country
Their maintenance: the Chatelains must keep 340
Their castle walls—beyond them 'tis but doubtful
Travel for your rich count or full-blown baron.
My comfort is that, wander where I may,
I've little left to lose now.

Wer. And I—nothing.
Gab. That's harder still. You say you were a soldier. 345
Wer. I was.
Gab. You look one still. All soldiers
are
Or should be comrades, even though enemies.
Our swords when drawn must cross, our engines aim (While levell'd) at each other's hearts; but
when 349
A truce, a peace, or what you will, remits
The steel into its scabbard, and lets sleep
The spark which lights the matchlock, we are brethren.
You are poor and sickly—I am not rich,
but healthy;
I want for nothing which I cannot want;
You seem devoid of this—wilt share it?
[GABOR pulls out his purse.

Wer. Who 355
Told you I was a beggar?
Gab. You yourself,
In saying you were a soldier during peace-
time.
Wer. [looking at him with suspicion].
You know me not?

Gab. I know no man, not even Myself: how should I then know one I
ne'er
Beheld till half an hour since?

Wer. Sir, I thank you. 360
Your offer's noble were it to a friend,
And not unkind as to an unknown
stranger,
Though scarcely prudent; but no less I thank you.

I am a beggar in all save his trade; 364
And when I beg of any one, it shall be
Of him who was the first to offer what Few can obtain by asking. Pardon me.

[Exit WERNER.]

Gab. [solus]. A goodly fellow by his looks, though worn,
As most good fellows are, by pain or
pleasure, 369
Which tear life out of us before our time;
I scarce know which most quickly: but he seems 371
To have seen better days, as who has not
Who has seen yesterday?—But here approaches
Our sage intendant, with the wine: how-
ever, 374
For the cup's sake I'll bear the cupbearer.

Enter IDENSTEIN.

Iden. 'Tis here! the supernaculum!
twenty years
Of age, if 'tis a day.

Gab. Which epoch makes Young women and old wine; and 'tis great
pity,

Of two such excellent things, increase of years,
Which still improves the one, should spoil the other. 380

Fill full—Here's to our hostess!—your fair wife! [Takes the glass.

Iden. Fair!—Well, I trust your taste in wine is equal
To that you show for beauty; but I pledge you Nevertheless.

Gab. Is not the lovely woman I met in the adjacent hall, who, with 385
An air, and port, and eye, which would have better

Beseem'd this palace in its brightest days (Though in a garb adapted to its present Abandonment), return'd my salutation—Is not the same your spouse?

Iden. I would she were! 390
But you're mistaken:—that's the stranger's wife.

Gab. And by her aspect she might be a prince's;
Though time hath touch'd her too, she still retains Much beauty, and more majesty.

Iden. And that Is more than I can say for Madame 395
Idenstein,

At least in beauty: as for majesty, She has some of its properties which might Be spared—but never mind!

Gab. I don't. But who May be this stranger? He too hath a bearing Above his outward fortunes.

Iden. There I differ. 400
He's poor as Job, and not so patient; but Who he may be, or what, or aught of him, Except his name (and that I only learn'd To-night), I know not.

Gab. But how came he here?
Iden. In a most miserable old caleche, About a month since, and immediately Fell sick, almost to death. He should have died.

Gab. Tender and true!—but why?

Iden. Why, what is life Without a living? He has not a stiver.

Gab. In that case, I much wonder that a person 410

Of your apparent prudence should admit Guests so forlorn into this noble mansion.

Iden. That's true: but pity, as you know, does make

One's heart commit these follies; and besides, 414

They had some valuables left at that time, Which paid their way up to the present hour;

And so I thought they might as well be lodged

Here as at the small tavern, and I gave them

The run of some of the oldest palace rooms.

They served to air them, at the least as long 420

As they could pay for firewood.

Gab. Poor souls!

Iden. Ay,

Exceeding poor.

Gab. And yet unused to poverty, If I mistake not. Whither were they going?

Iden. Oh! Heaven knows where, unless to heaven itself.

Some days ago that look'd the likeliest journey 425

For Werner.

Gab. Werner! I have heard the name: But it may be a feign'd one.

Iden. Like enough!

But hark! a noise of wheels and voices, and

A blaze of torches from without. As sure As destiny, his excellency's come. 430

I must be at my post; will you not join me, To help him from his carriage, and present

Your humble duty at the door?

Gab. I dragg'd him

From out that carriage when he would have given

His barony or county to repel 435

The rushing river from his gurgling throat.

He has valets now enough: they stood aloof then,

Shaking their dripping ears upon the shore,

All roaring 'Help!' but offering none; and as

For duty (as you call it)—I did mine then, Now do yours. Hence, and bow and cringe him here! 441

Iden. I cringe!—but I shall lose the opportunity—

Plague take it! he'll be here, and I not there! [Exit IDENSTEIN hastily.

Re-enter WERNER.

Wer. [to himself]. I heard a noise of wheels and voices. How

All sounds now jar me!

Still here! Is he not 445

[Perceiving GABOR.

A spy of my pursuer's? His frank offer So suddenly, and to a stranger, wore

The aspect of a secret enemy;

For friends are slow at such.

Gab. Sir, you seem rapt; And yet the time is not akin to thought.

These old walls will be noisy soon. The baron, 451

Or count (or whatsoe'er this half drown'd noble

May be), for whom this desolate village

and

Its lone inhabitants show more respect
Than did the elements, is come.

I den. [without]. This way— 455
This way, your excellency:—have a care,
The staircase is a little gloomy, and Somewhat decay'd; but if we had expected
So high a guest—Pray take my arm, my
lord!

Enter STRALENHEIM, IDENSTEIN, and Attendants,—partly his own, and partly Retainers of the Domain of which IDENSTEIN is Intendant.

Stral. I'll rest here a moment.

I den. [to the servants]. Ho! a chair!
Instantly, knaves! 461

[STRALENHEIM sits down.

Wer. [aside]. 'Tis he!

Stral. I'm better now.
Who are these strangers?

I den. Please you, my good lord,
One says he is no stranger.

Wer. [aloud and hastily]. Who says
that?

[They look at him with surprise.

I den. Why, no one spoke of you, or to you!—but

Here's one his excellency may be pleased To recognise. [Pointing to GABOR.

Gab. I seek not to disturb 466
His noble memory.

Stral. I apprehend
This is one of the strangers to whose aid
I owe my rescue. Is not that the other?

[Pointing to WERNER.

My state when I was succour'd must excuse 470

My uncertainty to whom I owe so much.
I den. He!—no, my lord! he rather wants for rescue

Than can afford it. 'Tis a poor sick man,
Travel-tired, and lately risen from a bed
From whence he never dream'd to rise.

Stral. Methought
That there were two.

Gab. There were, in company;
But, in the service render'd to your lordship

I needs must say but one, and he is absent.
The chief part of whatever aid was render'd 479

Was his: it was his fortune to be first.

My will was not inferior, but his strength
And youth outstripp'd me; therefore do not waste

Your thanks on me. I was but a glad second

Unto a nobler principal.

Stral. Where is he?

An Atten. My lord, he tarried in the cottage where 485

Your excellency rested for an hour,
And said he would be here to-morrow.

Stral. Till

That hour arrives, I can but offer thanks,
And then—

Gab. I seek no more, and scarce
deserve
So much. My comrade may speak for himself. 490

Stral. [fixing his eyes upon WERNER:
then aside].

It cannot be! and yet he must be look'd to.
'Tis twenty years since I beheld him with These eyes; and, though my agents still have kept

Theirs on him, policy has held aloof
My own from his, not to alarm him into Suspicion of my plan. Why did I leave At Hamburg those who would have made assurance

If this be he or no? I thought, ere now,
To have been lord of Siegendorf, and parted 499

In haste, though even the elements appear
To fight against me, and this sudden flood
May keep me prisoner here till—

[He pauses and looks at WERNER; then resumes.

This man must
Be watch'd. If it is he, he is so changed,
His father, rising from his grave again,
Would pass him by unknown. I must be wary: 505

An error would spoil all.

I den. Your lordship seems Pensive. Will it not please you to pass on?

Stral. 'Tis past fatigue, which gives my weigh'd-down spirit

An outward show of thought. I will to rest.
I den. The prince's chamber is prepared, with all 510

The very furniture the prince used when Last here, in its full splendour.

[Aside]. Somewhat tatter'd, And devilish damp, but fine enough by torchlight;

And that's enough for your right noble
blood

Of twenty quarterings upon a hatchment;
So let their bearer sleep 'neath something like one 516

Now, as he one day will for ever lie.

Stral. [rising and turning to GABOR].
Good night, good people! Sir, I trust to-morrow

Will find me apter to requite your service.
In the mean time I crave your company
A moment in my chamber. 521

Gab. I attend you.
Stral. [after a few steps, pauses, and calls
WERNER]. Friend!

Wer. Sir!

I den. Sir! Lord—oh Lord! Why don't you say
His lordship, or his excellency? Pray, My lord, excuse this poor man's want of breeding:

He hath not been accustom'd to admission
To such a presence. 526

Stral. [to IDENSTEIN]. Peace, intendant!
Iden. Oh!

I am dumb.

Stral. [to WERNER]. Have you been long here?

Wer. Long?

Stral. I sought

An answer, not an echo.

Wer. You may seek Both from the walls. I am not used to answer

Those whom I know not.

Stral. Indeed! Ne'er the less, 530
You might reply with courtesy to what Is ask'd in kindness.

Wer. When I know it such,
I will requite—that is, reply—in unison.

Stral. The intendant said you had been detain'd by sickness—

If I could aid you—journeying the same
way? 535

Wer. [quickly]. I am not journeying the same way.

Stral. How know ye
That, ere you know my route?

Wer. Because there is But one way that the rich and poor must
tread

Together. You diverged from that dread
path

Some hours ago, and I some days: hence-
forth 540

Our roads must lie asunder, though they tend

All to one home.

Stral. Your language is above
Your station.

Wer. [bitterly]. Is it?

Stral. Or, at least, beyond
Your garb.

Wer. 'Tis well that it is not beneath it,
As sometimes happens to the better clad.
But, in a word, what would you with me?

Stral. [startled]. I?

Wer. Yes—you! You know me not,
and question me,

And wonder that I answer not—not knowing

My inquisitor. Explain what you would
have, 549

And then I'll satisfy yourself, or me.

Stral. I knew not that you had reasons for reserve.

Wer. Many have such:—Have you
none?

Stral. None which can Interest a mere stranger.

Wer. Then forgive
The same unknown and humble stranger, if
He wishes to remain so to the man Who can have nought in common with
him.

Stral.

I will not balk your humour, though untoward:

I only meant you service—but good night!
Intendant, show the way! [To GABOR.]

Sir, you will with me?

[Exeunt STRALENHEIM and Attendants.
IDENSTEIN and GABOR.]

Wer. [solus]. 'Tis he! I am taken in the toils. Before 560

I quitted Hamburg, Giulio, his later
steward,

Inform'd me, that he had obtain'd am-
order

From Brandenburg's elector, for the arrest
Of Kruitznar (such the name I then bore),
when 564

I came upon the frontier; the free city
Alone preserved my freedom—till I left

Its walls—fool that I was to quit them!!
But

I deem'd this humble garb, and route
obscure,

Had baffled the slow hounds in their pursuit.

What's to be done? He knows me not by person; 570

Nor could aught, save the eye of apprehension,

Have recognised him, after twenty years,
We met so rarely and so coldly in

Our youth. But those about him! Now
I can

Divine the frankness of the Hungarian,
who 575

No doubt is a mere tool and spy of Stralenheim's,

To sound and to secure me. Without means!

Sick, poor—begirt too with the flooding rivers, 578

Impassable even to the wealthy, with
All the appliances which purchase modes

Of overpowering peril, with men's lives,—
How can I hope? An hour ago methought

My state beyond despair; and now, 'tis
such,

The past seems paradise. Another day,
And I'm detected,—on the very eve

Of honours, rights, and my inheritance,
When a few drops of gold might save me

still

In favouring an escape.

Enter IDENSTEIN and FRITZ in conversation.

Fritz. Immediately.

Iden. I tell you, 'tis impossible.

Fritz. It must

Be tried, however; and if one express Fail, you must send on others, till the

answer 591

Arrives from Frankfurt, from the commandant.

Iden. I will do what I can.

Fritz. And recollect
To spare no trouble; you will be repaid Tenfold.

Iden. The baron is retired to rest?

Fritz. He hath thrown himself into an easy chair 596
Beside the fire, and slumbers; and has order'd

He may not be disturb'd until eleven,
When he will take himself to bed.

Iden. Before
An hour is past I'll do my best to serve
him. 600

Fritz. Remember! [Exit FRITZ.]

Iden. The devil take these great men! they Think all things made for them. Now here must I

Rouse up some half a dozen shivering vassals

From their scant pallets, and, at peril of Their lives, despatch them o'er the river towards 605

Frankfort. Methinks the baron's own experience

Some hours ago might teach him fellow-
feeling:

But no, 'it must,' and there's an end. How
now?

Are you there, Mynheer Werner?

Wer. You have left
Your noble guest right quickly.

Iden. Yes—he's dozing, 610
And seems to like that none should sleep
besides.

Here is a packet for the commandant
Of Frankfort, at all risks and all expenses;
But I must not lose time: Good night!

[Exit.
Wer. 'To Frankfort!'
So, so, it thickens! Ay, 'the commandant.' 615

This tallies well with all the prior steps
Of this cool, calculating fiend, who walks Between me and my father's house. No
doubt

He writes for a detachment to convey me
Into some secret fortress.—Sooner than
This— 621

[WERNER looks around, and snatches up a knife lying on a table in a recess.

Now I am master of myself at least.
Hark,—footsteps! How do I know that Stralenheim

Will wait for even the show of that authority
Which is to overshadow usurpation?

That he suspects me's certain. I'm alone;
He with a numerous train. I weak;
he strong 626

In gold, in numbers, rank, authority.
I nameless, or involving in my name
Destruction, till I reach my own domain;
He full-blown with his titles, which impose 630

Still further on these obscure petty burghers

Than they could do elsewhere. Hark!
nearer still!

I'll to the secret passage, which communi-cates

With the—No! all is silent—'twas my fancy!— 634

Still as the breathless interval between The flash and thunder:—I must hush my
soul

Amidst its perils. Yet I will retire,
To see if still be unexplored the passage
I wot of: it will serve me as a den 639
Of secrecy for some hours, at the worst.

[WERNER draws a panel, and exits, closing it after him.

Enter GABOR and JOSEPHINE.

Gab. Where is your husband?

Jos. Here, I thought: I left him Not long since in his chamber. But these rooms

Have many outlets, and he may be gone
To accompany the intendant. 644

Gab. Baron Stralenheim
Put many questions to the intendant on
The subject of your lord, and, to be plain,
I have my doubts if he means well.

Jos. Alas!
What can there be in common with the proud

And wealthy baron, and the unknown
Werner?

Gab. That you know best.

Jos. Or, if it were so, how 650
Come you to stir yourself in his behalf,
Rather than that of him whose life you
saved?

Gab. I help'd to save him, as in peril;
but

I did not pledge myself to serve him in Oppression. I know well these nobles,
and 655

Their thousand modes of trampling on the poor.

I have proved them; and my spirit boils up when

I find them practising against the weak:—
This is my only motive.

Jos. It would be
Not easy to persuade my consort of 660
Your good intentions.

Gab. Is he so suspicious?
Jos. He was not once; but time and troubles have

Made him what you beheld.

Gab. I'm sorry for it.
Suspicion is a heavy armour, and With its own weight impedes more than protects. 665

Good night! I trust to meet with him at daybreak. [Exit GABOR.]

Re-enter IDENSTEIN and some Peasants.
JOSEPHINE retires up the Hall.

First Peasant. But if I'm drown'd?
Iden. Why, you will be well paid for't,
And have risk'd more than drowning for
as much,
I doubt not.

Second Peasant. But our wives and families?

Iden. Cannot be worse off than they are, and may 670
Be better.

Third Peasant. I have neither, and will venture.

Iden. That's right. A gallant carle, and fit to be
A soldier. I'll promote you to the ranks
In the prince's body-guard—if you succeed:

And you shall have besides, in sparkling coin, 675

Two thalers.

Third Peasant. No more!

Iden. Out upon your avarice!
Can that low vice alloy so much ambition?
I tell thee, fellow, that two thalers in Small change will subdivide into a treasure.

Do not five hundred thousand heroes
daily 680

Risk lives and souls for the tithe of one thaler?

When had you half the sum?

Third Peasant. Never—but ne'er
The less I must have three.

Iden. Have you forgot
Whose vassal you were born, knave?

Third Peasant. No—the prince's,
And not the stranger's.

Iden. Sirrah! in the prince's 685 Absence, I am sovereign; and the baron is My intimate connexion;—'Cousin Idenstein!

(Quoth he) you'll order out a dozen villains.

And so, you villains! troop—march—march, I say; 689

And if a single dog's ear of this packet
Be sprinkled by the Oder—look to it!
For every page of paper, shall a hide
Of yours be stretch'd as parchment on a
drum,

Like Ziska's skin, to beat alarm to all Refractory vassals, who can not effect
Impossibilities.—Away, ye earth-worms!

[Exit, driving them out.

Jos. [coming forward]. I fain would shun these scenes, too oft repeated,
Of feudal tyranny o'er petty victims;
I cannot aid, and will not witness such.
Even here, in this remote, unnamed, dull
spot, 700

The dimmest in the district's map, exist

The insolence of wealth in poverty O'er something poorer still—the pride of rank

In servitude, o'er something still more servile;

And vice in misery affecting still 705
A tatter'd splendour. What a state of being!

In Tuscany, my own dear sunny land,
Our nobles were but citizens and merchants,

Like Cosmo. We had evils, but not such As these; and our all-ripe and gushing
valleys 710

Made poverty more cheerful, where each herb

Was in itself a meal, and every vine Rain'd, as it were, the beverage which makes glad

The heart of man; and the ne'er unfelt sun (But rarely clouded, and when clouded, leaving 715

His warmth behind in memory of his beams)

Makes the worn mantle, and the thin robe,
less

Oppressive than an emperor's jewell'd purple.

But, here! the despots of the north appear
To imitate the ice-wind of their clime, Searching the shivering vassal through his rags, 721

To wring his soul—as the bleak elements
His form. And 'tis to be amongst these sovereigns

My husband pants! and such his pride of
birth— 724

That twenty years of usage, such as no
Father born in a humble state could nerve
His soul to persecute a son withal,
Hath changed no atom of his early nature;
But I, born nobly also, from my father's Kindness was taught a different lesson.

Father! 730
May thy long-tried and now rewarded
spirit

Look down on us and our so long desired
Ulric! I love my son, as thou didst me!
What's that? Thou, Werner! can it be?
and thus?

Enter WERNER hastily, with the knife in his hand, by the secret panel, which he closes hurriedly after him.

Wer. [not at first recognising her]. Dis-cover'd! then I'll stab—[recognising her].

Ah! Josephine, 735
Why art thou not at rest?

Jos. What rest? My God!
What doth this mean?

Wer. [showing a rouleau]. Here's gold—gold, Josephine,

Will rescue us from this detested dungeon.

Jos. And how obtain'd?—that knife!
Wer. 'Tis bloodless—yet.
 Away—we must to our chamber.
Jos. But whence comest thou? 740 Wer. Ask not! but let us think where we shall go—
 This—this will make us way—[showing the gold]—I'll fit them now.
Jos. I dare not think thee guilty of dishonour.
Wer. Dishonour!
Jos. I have said it.
Wer. Let us hence:
 'Tis the last night, I trust, that we need pass
 here. 745
Jos. And not the worst, I hope.
Wer. Hope! I make sure.
 But let us to our chamber.
Jos. Yet one question—
 What hast thou done?
Wer. [fiercely]. Left one thing undone,
 which
 Had made all well: let me not think of it!
 Away! 749
Jos. Alas, that I should doubt of thee!
 [Exeunt.]

ACT II

SCENE I.—A Hall in the same Palace.

Enter IDENSTEIN and Others.

Iden. Fine doings! goodly doings!
 honest doings!
 A baron pillaged in a prince's palace!
 Where, till this hour, such a sin ne'er was heard of.
Fritz. It hardly could, unless the rats despoil'd
 The mice of a few shreds of tapestry. 5
Iden. Oh! that I e'er should live to see
 this day!
 The honour of our city's gone for ever.
Fritz. Well, but now to discover the delinquent:
 The baron is determined not to lose
 This sum without a search.
Iden. And so am I. 10
Fritz. But whom do you suspect?
Iden. Suspect! all people Without — within — above — below —
 Heaven help me!
Fritz. Is there no other entrance to the chamber?
Iden. None whatsoever.
Fritz. Are you sure of that?
Iden. Certain. I have lived and served here since my birth, 15
 And if there were such, must have heard of such,
 Or seen it.
Fritz. Then it must be some one who Had access to the antechamber.
Iden. Doubtless.
Fritz. The man call'd Werner's poor!

Iden. Poor as a miser. 19
 But lodged so far off, in the other wing,
 By which there's no communication with The baron's chamber, that it can't be he.
 Besides, I bade him 'good night' in the
 hall,
 Almost a mile off, and which only leads
 To his own apartment, about the same
 time 25
 When this burglarious, larcenous felony Appears to have been committed.
Fritz. There's another,
 The stranger——
Iden. The Hungarian?
Fritz. He who help'd
 To fish the baron from the Oder.
Iden. Not Unlikely. But, hold—might it not have
 been 30
 One of the suite?
Fritz. How? We, sir!
Iden. No—not you,
 But some of the inferior knaves. You say
 The baron was asleep in the great chair—
 The velvet chair—in his embroider'd nightgown;
 His toilet spread before him, and upon it
 A cabinet with letters, papers, and 36
 Several rouleaux of gold; of which one only Has disappear'd:—the door unbolted,
 with
 No difficult access to any.
Fritz. Good sir,
 Be not so quick! the honour of the corps
 Which forms the baron's household's unimpeach'd 41
 From steward to scullion, save in the fair
 way
 Of peculation; such as in accompts,
 Weights, measures, larder, cellar, buttery,
 Where all men take their prey; as also in Postage of letters, gathering of rents, Purveying feasts, and understanding with The honest trades who furnish noble
 masters;
 But for your petty, picking, downright thievery, 49
 We scorn it as we do board-wages. Then
 Had one of our folks done it, he would not Have been so poor a spirit as to hazard
 His neck for one rouleau, but have swoop'd all;
 Also the cabinet, if portable.
Iden. There is some sense in that—— Fritz. No, sir, be sure 55
 'Twas none of our corps; but some petty, trivial
 Picker and stealer, without art or genius.
 The only question is—Who else could have Access, save the Hungarian and yourself?
Iden. You don't mean me?
Fritz. No, sir; I honour more 60
 Your talents——

Iden. And my principles, I hope.
Fritz. Of course. But to the point:
 What's to be done?
Iden. Nothing—but there's a good deal to be said.
 We'll offer a reward; move heaven and
 earth,
 And the police (though there's none nearer than 65
 Frankfurt); post notices in manuscript (For we've no printer); and set by my clerk
 To read them (for few can, save he and I);
 We'll send out villains to strip beggars,
 and
 Search empty pockets; also to arrest 70
 All gipsies, and ill-clothed and sallow
 people.
 Prisoners we'll have at least, if not the culprit;
 And for the baron's gold—if 'tis not
 found,
 At least he shall have the full satisfaction Of melting twice its substance in the raising 75
 The ghost of this rouleau. Here's alchemy
 For your Lord's losses!
Fritz. He hath found a better.
Iden. Where?
Fritz. In a most immense inheritance.
 The late Count Siegendorf, his distant
 kinsman,
 Is dead near Prague, in his castle, and my
 lord 80
 Is on his way to take possession.
Iden. Was there
 No heir?
Fritz. Oh, yes; but he has disappear'd Long from the world's eye, and perhaps the world.
 A prodigal son, beneath his father's ban
 For the last twenty years: for whom his
 sire 85
 Refused to kill the fatted calf; and, there-
 fore,
 If living, he must chew the husks still.
 But
 The baron would find means to silence
 him,
 Were he to re-appear: he's politic,
 And has much influence with a certain
 court. 90
Iden. He's fortunate.
Fritz. 'Tis true, there is a grandson, Whom the late count reclaim'd from his son's hands,
 And educated as his heir; but then
 His birth is doubtful.
Iden. How so?
Fritz. His sire made A left-hand, love, imprudent sort of marriage, 95
 With an Italian exile's dark-eyed
 daughter:

Noble, they say, too; but no match for
 such
 A house as Siegendorf's. The grandsire ill Could brook the alliance; and could ne'er be brought To see the parents, though he took the
 son. 100
Iden. If he's a lad of mettle, he may
 yet
 Dispute your claim, and weave a web that
 may Puzzle your baron to unravel.
Fritz. Why,
 For mettle, he has quite enough: they say,
 He forms a happy mixture of his sire 105
 And grandsire's qualities,—impetuous as
 The former, and deep as the latter; but
 The strangest is, that he too disappear'd
 Some months ago.
Iden. The devil he did!
Fritz. Why, yes:
 It must have been at his suggestion, at
 An hour so critical as was the eve 111
 Of the old man's death, whose heart was broken by it.
Iden. Was there no cause assign'd?
Fritz. Plenty, no doubt,
 And none, perhaps, the true one. Some
 averr'd 114
 It was to seek his parents; some because
 The old man held his spirit in so strictly (But that could scarce be, for he doted on
 him):
 A third believed he wish'd to serve in war,
 But peace being made soon after his departure,
 He might have since return'd, were that the motive; 120
 A fourth set charitably have surmised,
 As there was something strange and mystic in him,
 That in the wild exuberance of his nature
 He had join'd the black bands, who lay waste Lusatia,
 The mountains of Bohemia and Silesia,
 Since the last years of war had dwindled
 into 126
 A kind of general condottiero system
 Of bandit warfare; each troop with its
 chief,
 And all against mankind.
Iden. That cannot be,
 A young heir, bred to wealth and luxury,
 To risk his life and honours with disbanded 131
 Soldiers and desperadoes!
Fritz. Heaven best knows!
 But there are human natures so allied
 Unto the savage love of enterprise,
 That they will seek for peril as a pleasure.
 I've heard that nothing can reclaim your Indian, 136
 Or tame the tiger, though their infancy
 Were fed on milk and honey. After all,

Your Wallenstein, your Tilly and Gustavus,
 Your Banner, and your Torstenson and Weimar, 140
 Were but the same thing upon a grand
 scale;
 And now that they are gone, and peace
 proclaim'd,
 They who would follow the same pastime
 must Pursue it on their own account. Here
 comes 144
 The baron, and the Saxon stranger, who
 Was his chief aid in yesterday's escape,
 But did not leave the cottage by the Oder
 Until this morning.

Enter STRALENHEIM and ULRIC.

Stral. Since you have refused
 All compensation, gentle stranger, save Inadequate thanks, you almost check even
 them, 150
 Making me feel the worthlessness of
 words,
 And blush at my own barren gratitude,
 They seem so niggardly, compared with
 what
 Your courteous courage did in my behalf—

Ulr. I pray you press the theme no further.

Stral. But 155
 Can I not serve you? You are young, and
 of

That mould which throws out heroes; fair in favour;

Brave, I know, by my living now to say so;
 And, doubtlessly, with such a form and
 heart,

Would look into the fiery eyes of war,
 As ardently for glory as you dared 161

An obscure death to save an unknown
 stranger,

In an as perilous, but opposite, element.
 You are made for the service: I have

served;

Have rank by birth and soldiership, and
 friends, 165

Who shall be yours. 'Tis true this pause of
 peace

Favours such views at present scantily;
 But 'twill not last, men's spirits are too
 stirring;

And, after thirty years of conflict, peace
 is but a petty war, as the time shows us

In every forest, or a mere arm'd truce.
 War will reclaim his own; and, in the mean time,

 You might obtain a post, which would insure

A higher soon, and, by my influence, fail
 not 174

To rise. I speak of Brandenburg, wherein stand well with the Elector; in Bohemia,

Like you, I am a stranger, and we are now
 Upon its frontier.

Ulr. You perceive my garb
 Is Saxon, and of course my service due
 To my own sovereign. If I must decline Your offer, 'tis with the same feeling which Induced it.

Stral. Why, this is mere usury!
 I owe my life to you, and you refuse
 The acquittance of the interest of the debt,
 To heap more obligations on me, till
 I bow beneath them. 186

Ulr. You shall say so when I claim the payment.

Stral. Well, sir, since you will not—
 You are nobly born?

Ulr. I have heard my kinsmen say so.

Stral. Your actions show it. Might I ask your name?

Ulr. Ulríc.

Stral. Your house's?

Ulr. When I'm worthy of it, 190
 I'll answer you.

Stral. [aside]. Most probably an Austrian,

Whom these unsettled times forbid to
 boast

His lineage on these wild and dangerous
 frontiers,

Where the name of his country is abhorr'd.
 [Aloud to FRITZ and IDENSTEIN.

So, sirs! how have ye sped in your researches? 195

Iden. Indifferent well, your excellency.
Stral. Then

I am to deem the plunderer is caught?
Iden. Humph!—not exactly.

Stral. Or at least suspected?
Iden. Oh! for that matter, very much suspected.

Stral. Who may he be?

Iden. Why, don't you know, my
 lord? 200

Stral. How should I? I was fast asleep.
Iden. And so

Was I, and that's the cause I know no
 more

Than does your excellency.

Stral. Dolt!

Iden. Why, if Your lordship, being robb'd, don't recognise

The rogue; how should I, not being robb'd, identify 205

The thief among so many? In the crowd,
 May it please your excellency, your thief
 looks

Exactly like the rest, or rather better:
 'Tis only at the bar and in the dungeon,
 That wise men know your felon by his features; 210

But I'll engage, that if seen there but once,
 Whether he be found criminal or no,

His face shall be so.

Stral. [to FRITZ]. Prithee, Fritz, inform me

What hath been done to trace the fellow?

Fritz. Faith!
My lord, not much as yet, except conjecture.

Stral. Besides the loss (which, I must own, affects me

Just now materially), I needs would find

The villain out of public motives; for

So dexterous a spoiler, who could creep

Through my attendants, and so many peopled

And lighted chambers, on my rest, and

snatch
The gold before my scarce-closed eyes,

would soon
Leave bare your borough, Sir Intendant!

Iden. True:
If there were aught to carry off, my lord.

Ulr. What is all this?

Stral. You join'd us but this morning,

And have not heard that I was robb'd last

night.

Ulr. Some rumour of it reach'd me as

I pass'd
The outer chambers of the palace, but

I know no further.

Stral. It is a strange business;

The intendant can inform you of the facts.

Iden. Most willingly. You see—

Stral. [impatiently]. Defer your tale,

Till certain of the hearer's patience.

Iden. That

Can only be approved by proofs. You

see—

Stral. [again interrupting him, and addressing ULRIC]. In short, I was asleep upon my chair,

My cabinet before me, with some gold

Upon it (more than I much like to lose,

Though in part only): some ingenious

person

Contrived to glide through all my own

attendants,

Besides those of the place, and bore away

A hundred golden ducats, which to find

I would be fain, and there's an end.

Perhaps

You (as I still am rather faint) would add

To yesterday's great obligation, this,

Though slighter, yet not slight, to aid

these men

(Who seem but lukewarm) in recovering

it?

Ulr. Most willingly, and without loss of time—

[To IDENSTEIN]. Come hither, mynheer!

Iden. But so much haste bodes

Right little speed, and—

Ulr. Standing motionless

None; so let's march; we'll talk as we go

on.

Iden. But—

Ulr. Show the spot, and then I'll answer you.

Fritz. I will, sir, with his excellency's

leave.

Stral. Do so, and take yon old ass

with you.

Fritz. Hence!

Ulr. Come on, old oracle, expound thy riddle!

[Exit with IDENSTEIN and FRITZ]

Stral. [solus]. A stalwart, active soldier-looking stripling,

Handsome as Hercules ere his first labour

And with a brow of thought beyond his

years

When in repose, till his eye kindles up

In answering yours. I wish I could engage

him:

I have need of some such spirits near me

now,

For this inheritance is worth a struggle;

And though I am not the man to yield without one,

Neither are they who now rise up between

me

And my desire. The boy, they say, 's bold one;

But he hath play'd the truant in some hour

Of freakish folly, leaving fortune to Champion his claims. That's well. The father, whom

For years I've track'd, as does the blood

hound, never

In sight, but constantly in scent, had put

me

To fault; but here I have him, and that's

better.

It must be he! All circumstance proclaim

it;

And careless voices, knowing not the

cause

Of my inquiries, still confirm it.—Yes,

The man, his bearing, and the mystery

Of his arrival, and the time; the account

too,

The intendant gave (for I have not beheld

her)

Of his wife's dignified but foreign aspect

Besides the antipathy with which we meet

As snakes and lions shrink back from each

other

By secret instinct that both must be foe

Deadly, without being natural prey to

either;

All—all—confirm it to my mind. How

ever,

We'll grapple, ne'ertheless. In a few hours

The order comes from Frankfort, if these

waters

Rise not the higher (and the weather

favours

Their quick abatement), and I'll have him safe

Within a dungeon, where he may avouch

His real estate and name; and there's no harm done,
Should he prove other than I deem. This robbery (Save for the actual loss) is lucky also;
He's poor, and that's suspicious—he's unknown,
And that's defenceless.—True, we have no proofs
Of guilt,—but what hath he of innocence?
Were he a man indifferent to my prospects,
In other bearings, I should rather lay
The inculpation on the Hungarian, who Hath something which I like not; and alone
Of all around, except the intendant, and
The prince's household and my own, had ingress
Familiar to the chamber.

Enter GABOR.

Friend, how fare you?

Gab. As those who fare well everywhere, when they Have sup'd and slumber'd, no great matter how—

And you, my lord?

Stral. Better in rest than purse:
Mine inn is like to cost me dear.

Gab. I heard
Of your late loss; but 'tis a trifle to
One of your order.

Stral. You would hardly think so,
Were the loss yours.

Gab. I never had so much (At once) in my whole life, and therefore am not

Fit to decide. But I came here to seek you.
Your couriers are turn'd back—I have outstripp'd them,

In my return.

Stral. You!—Why?

Gab. I went at daybreak,
To watch for the abatement of the river,
As being anxious to resume my journey.
Your messengers were all check'd like
myself;

And, seeing the case hopeless, I await
The current's pleasure.

Stral. Would the dogs were in it!
Why did they not, at least, attempt the passage?

I order'd this at all risks.

Gab. Could you order
The Oder to divide, as Moses did
The Red Sea (scarcely redder than the flood Of the swoln stream), and be obey'd,
perhaps

They might have ventured.

Stral. I must see to it:
The knaves! the slaves!—but they shall smart for this. [Exit STRALENHEIM.]

Gab. [solus]. There goes my noble, feudal, self-will'd baron!

Epitome of what brave chivalry
The preux chevaliers of the good old times Have left us. Yesterday he would have
given

His lands (if he hath any), and, still dearer,
His sixteen quarterings, for as much fresh
air

As would have fill'd a bladder, while he lay Gurgling and foaming halfway through the window

Of his o'erset and water-logg'd conveyance;

And now he storms at half a dozen wretches

Because they love their lives too! Yet, he's right:

'Tis strange they should, when such as he may put them

To hazard at his pleasure. Oh, thou
world!

Thou art indeed a melancholy jest!

[Exit GABOR.]

SCENE II.—The Apartment of WERNER, in the Palace.

Enter JOSEPHINE and ULRIC.

Jos. Stand back, and let me look on thee again!

My Ulric!—my beloved!—can it be—
After twelve years?

Ulr. My dearest mother!
Jos. Yes!

My dream is realised—how beautiful!— How more than all I sigh'd for! Heaven receive

Another's thanks! a mother's tears of joy!
This is indeed thy work!—At such an hour, too,

He comes not only as a son, but saviour.

Ulr. If such a joy await me, it must double

What I now feel, and lighten from my
heart

A part of the long debt of duty, not
Of love (for that was ne'er withheld)—
forgive me!

This long delay was not my fault.

Jos. I know it,
But cannot think of sorrow now, and
doubt

If I e'er felt it, 'tis so dazzled from My memory by this oblivious transport!—
My son!

Enter WERNER.

Wer. What have we here,—more strangers?

Jos. No!
Look upon him! What do you see?

Wer. A stripling,
For the first time—

Ulr. [kneeling]. For twelve long years,
my father!

Wer. Oh, God!
Jos. He faints!
Wer. No—I am better now— 20
Ulric! [Embraces him].
Ulr. My father, Siegendorf!
Wer. [starting]. Hush! boy—
 The walls may hear that name!
Ulr. What then?
Wer. Why, then—
 But we will talk of that anon. Remember,
 I must be known here but as Werner.
 Come!
 Come to my arms again! Why, thou look'st all 25
 I should have been, and was not.
 Josephine!
 Sure 'tis no father's fondness dazzles me;
 But, had I seen that form amid ten thousand
 Youth of the choicest, my heart would have chosen
 This for my son!
Ulr. And yet you knew me not! 30 Wer. Alas! I have had that upon my
 soul
 Which makes me look on all men with an
 eye
 That only knows the evil at first glance.
Ulr. My memory served me far more fondly; I Have not forgotten aught; and oft-times
 in 35
 The proud and princely halls of—(I'll not name them,
 As you say that 'tis perilous)—but i' the pomp
 Of your sire's feudal mansion, I look'd back To the Bohemian mountains many a sunset,
 And wept to see another day go down
 O'er thee and me, with those huge hills between us. 41
 They shall not part us more.
Wer. I know not that.
 Are you aware my father is no more?
Ulr. Oh, heavens! I left him in a green
 old age,
 And looking like the oak, worn, but still
 steady 45
 Amidst the elements, whilst younger trees Fell fast around him. 'Twas scarce three months since.
Wer. Why did you leave him?
Jos. [embracing ULRIC]. Can you ask that question?
 Is he not here?
Wer. True; he hath sought his
 parents,
 And found them; but oh! how, and in what state! 50
Ulr. All shall be better'd. What we have to do
 Is to proceed, and to assert our rights,
 Or rather yours; for I waive all, unless

Your father has disposed in such a sort Of his broad lands as to make mine the foremost, 5
 So that I must prefer my claim for form
 But I trust better, and that all is yours.
Wer. Have you not heard of Stralenheim?
Ulr. I save
 His life but yesterday; he's here.
Wer. You save
 The serpent who will sting us all!
Ulr. You speak 6
 Riddles: what is this Stralenheim to us?
Wer. Everything. One who claims
 our father's lands:
 Our distant kinsman, and our nearest foe
Ulr. I never heard his name till now
 The count,
 Indeed, spoke sometimes of a kinsman
 who, 6
 If his own line should fail, might be remotely
 Involved in the succession; but his titles
 Were never named before me—and what
 then?
 His right must yield to ours.
Wer. Ay, if at Prague
 But here he is all-powerful; and has
 spread 7
 Snares for thy father, which, if hitherto
 He hath escaped them, is by fortune, not
 By favour.
Ulr. Doth he personally know you?
Wer. No; but he guesses shrewdly at my person,
 As he betray'd last night; and I, perhaps
 But owe my temporary liberty 7
 To his uncertainty.
Ulr. I think you wrong him
 (Excuse me for the phrase); but Stralenheim
 Is not what you prejudice him, or, if so,
 He owes me something both for past and
 present. 8
 I saved his life, he therefore trusts in me
 He hath been plunder'd too, since he came hither:
 Is sick; a stranger; and as such not now Able to trace the villain who hath robbed
 him:
 I have pledged myself to do so; and that business
 Which brought me here was chiefly that but I Have found, in searching for another dross,
 My own whole treasure—you, my
 parents!
Wer. [agitatedly]. Wh
 Taught you to mouth that name—
 'villain'?
Ulr. Wh
 More noble name belongs to common thieves?

Wer. Who taught you thus to brand an unknown being
With an infernal stigma?

Ulr. My own feelings Taught me to name a ruffian from his
deeds.

Wer. Who taught you, long-sought and ill-found boy! that It would be safe for my own son to insult
me?

Ulr. I named a villain. What is there in common

With such a being and my father?

Wer. Everything!
That ruffian is thy father!

Jos. Oh, my son!
Believe him not—and yet!—[her voice
falters].

Ulr. [starts, looks earnestly at WERNER and then says slowly,] And you avow it?

Wer. Ulric, before you dare despise your father,

Learn to divine and judge his actions.
Young,

Rash, new to life, and rear'd in luxury's lap,

Is it for you to measure passion's force,
Or misery's temptation? Wait—(not
long,

It cometh like the night, and quickly)—
Wait!—

Wait till, like me, your hopes are blighted —till

Sorrow and shame are handmaids of your cabin;

Famine and poverty your guests at table;
Despair your bed-fellow—then rise, but
not

From sleep, and judge! Should that day e'er arrive—

Should you see then the serpent, who hath coil'd

Himself around all that is dear and noble
Of you and yours, lie slumbering in your
path,

With but his folds between your steps and happiness,

When he, who lives but to tear from you
name,

Lands, life itself, lies at your mercy, with Chance your conductor—midnight for your mantle—

The bare knife in your hand, and earth asleep,

Even to your deadliest foe; and he as
'twere

Inviting death, by looking like it, while His death alone can save you:—Thank your God!

If then, like me, content with petty plunder,

You turn aside—I did so.

Ulr. But——

Wer. [abruptly]. Hear me!
I will not brook a human voice—scarce
dare

Listen to my own (if that be human still)—
Hear me! you do not know this man—I do.
He's mean, deceitful, avaricious. You Deem yourself safe, as young and brave;
but learn

None are secure from desperation, few
From subtilty. My worst foe, Stralen-

heim,
Housed in a prince's palace, couch'd
within

A prince's chamber, lay below my knife!
An instant—a mere motion—the least impulse—

Had swept him and all fears of mine from
earth.

He was within my power—my knife was raised—

Withdrawn—and I'm in his:—are you
not so?

Who tells you that he knows you not?
Who says

He hath not lured you here to end you? or To plunge you, with your parents, in a dungeon? [He pauses.]

Ulr. Proceed—proceed!

Wer. Me he hath ever known, ¹⁴⁰
And hunted through each change of time—name—fortune—

And why not you? Are you more versed in men?

He wound snares round me; flung along my path

Reptiles, whom, in my youth, I would have spurn'd

Even from my presence; but, in spurning
now, ¹⁴⁵

Fill only with fresh venom. Will you be More patient? Ulric!—Ulric!—there are crimes

Made venial by the occasion, and tempta-
tions

Which nature cannot master or forbear.

Ulr. [who looks first at him, and then at JOSEPHINE]. My mother!

Wer. Ah! I thought so: you have now
Only one parent. I have lost alike ¹⁵¹
Father and son, and stand alone.

Ulr. But stay!
[WERNER rushes out of the chamber.]

Jos. [to ULRIC]. Follow him not, until this storm of passion

Abates. Think'st thou, that were it well
for him,

I had not follow'd?

Ulr. I obey you, mother, ¹⁵⁵
Although reluctantly. My first act shall
not

Be one of disobedience.

Jos. Oh! he is good!
Condemn him not from his own mouth,

but trust

To me, who have borne so much with him,
and for him, 159
That this is but the surface of his soul,
And that the depth is rich in better things.

Ulr. These then are but my father's principles?

My mother thinks not with him?
Jos. Nor doth he Think as he speaks. Alas! long years of grief

Have made him sometimes thus.

Ulr. Explain to me 165
More clearly, then, these claims of Stralen-
heim,

That, when I see the subject in its bearings,
I may prepare to face him, or at least
To extricate you from your present perils.
I pledge myself to accomplish this—but
would 170

I had arrived a few hours sooner!

Jos. Ay!
Hadst thou but done so!

Enter GABOR and IDENSTEIN, with Attendants.

Gab. [to ULRIC]. I have sought you,
comrade.

So this is my reward!

Ulr. What do you mean?
Gab. 'Sdeath! have I lived to these years, and for this!

[To IDENSTEIN]. But for your age and folly, I would—

Iden. Help! 175
Hands off! Touch an intendant!

Gab. Do not think I'll honour you so much as save your throat

From the Ravenstone by choking you
myself.

Iden. I thank you for the respite: but there are

Those who have greater need of it than
me. 180

Ulr. Unriddle this vile wrangling,
or—

Gab. At once, then,
The baron has been robbed, and upon me
This worthy personage has deign'd to fix
His kind suspicions—me! whom he ne'er saw

Till yester evening.

Iden. Wouldst have me suspect 185
My own acquaintances? You have to learn

That I keep better company.

Gab. You shall Keep the best shortly, and the last for all
men,

The worms! you hound of malice!

[GABOR seizes on him.
Ulr. [interfering]. Nay, no violence;

He's old, unarm'd—be temperate, Gabor!

Gab. [letting go IDENSTEIN]. True:

I am a fool to lose myself because 191
Fools deem me knave: it is their homage.
Ulr. [to IDENSTEIN]. How?

Fare you?

Iden. Help!

Ulr. I have help'd you.
Iden. Kill him! then!

I'll say so.

Gab. I am calm—live on!
Iden. That's more

Than you shall do, if there be judge or judgment 195

In Germany. The baron shall decide!

Gab. Does he abet you in your accusation?

Iden. Does he not?

Gab. Then next time let him go sink Ere I go hang for snatching him from drowning.

But here he comes!

Enter STRALENHEIM.

Gab. [goes up to him]. My noble lord,
I'm here! 200

Stral. Well, sir!

Gab. Have you aught with me?
Stral. What should I

Have with you?

Gab. You know best, if yesterday's Flood has not wash'd away your memory;
But that's a trifle. I stand here accused,
In phrases not equivocal, by yon 205
Intendant, of the pillage of your person Or chamber:—is the charge your own or
his?

Stral. I accuse no man.

Gab. Then you acquit me, baron?

Stral. I know not whom to accuse, or to acquit,

Or scarcely to suspect.

Gab. But you at least 210
Should know whom not to suspect. I am insulted—

Opress'd here by these menials, and I
look

To you for remedy—teach them their
duty!

To look for thieves at home were part of it,
If duly taught; but, in one word, if I 215

Have an accuser, let it be a man

Worthy to be so of a man like me.

I am your equal.

Stral. You!

Gab. Ay, sir; and, for Aught that you know, superior; but

proceed—
I do not ask for hints, and surmises, 220

And circumstance, and proof: I know
enough

Of what I have done for you, and what you owe me,

To have at least waited your payment rather Than paid myself, had I been eager of Your gold. I also know, that were I even

The villain I am deem'd, the service
render'd 226
So recently would not permit you to Pursue me to the death, except through
shame,
Such as would leave your scutcheon but a blank.

But this is nothing: I demand of you 230
Justice upon your unjust servants, and
From your own lips a disavowal of All sanction of their insolence: thus much You owe to the unknown, who asks no
more,
And never thought to have ask'd so much.

Stral. This tone 235
May be of innocence.

Gab. 'Sdeath! who dare doubt it,
Except such villains as ne'er had it?

Stral. You
Are hot, sir.

Gab. Must I turn an icicle
Before the breath of menials, and their master?

Stral. Ulric! you know this man; I found him in 240
Your company.

Gab. We found you in the Oder,
Would we had left you there!

Stral. I give you thanks, sir.
Gab. I've earned them; but might have earn'd more from others,
Perchance, if I had left you to your fate.

Stral. Ulric! you know this man?
Gab. No more than you do 245
If he avouches not my honour.

Ulr. I
Can vouch your courage, and, as far as my Own brief connexion led me, honour.

Stral. Then
I'm satisfied.

Gab. [ironically]. Right easily, methinks.
What is the spell in his asseveration 250
More than in mine?

Stral. I merely said that I
Was satisfied—not that you are absolved.

Gab. Again! Am I accused or no?
Stral. Go to!

You wax too insolent. If circumstance
And general suspicion be against you,
Is the fault mine? Is't not enough that I Decline all question of your guilt or innocence? 257

Gab. My lord, my lord, this is mere cozenage,

A vile equivocation; you well know
Your doubts are certainties to all around
you— 260

Your looks a voice—your frowns a sentence; you

Are practising your power on me—
because

You have it; but beware! you know not
whom

You strive to tread on.

Stral. Threat'st thou?
Gab. Not so much 264

As you accuse. You hint the basest injury.
And I retort it with an open warning.

Stral. As you have said, 'tis true I owe you something,
For which you seem disposed to pay yourself.

Gab. Not with your gold.
Stral. With bootless insolence.

[To his Attendants and IDENSTEIN.
You need not further to molest this man,
But let him go his way. Ulric, good
morrow! 271

[Exit STRALENHEIM, IDENSTEIN, and Attendants.

Gab. [following]. I'll after him and—
Ulr. [stopping him]. Not a step.

Gab. Who shall Oppose me?

Ulr. Your own reason, with a moment's
Thought.

Gab. Must I bear this?
Ulr. Pshaw! we all must bear

The arrogance of something higher than Ourselves—the highest cannot temper
Satan, 276

Nor the lowest his vicegerents upon earth.
I've seen you brave the elements, and bear Things which had made this silkworm cast his skin—

And shrink you from a few sharp sneers and words? 280

Gab. Must I bear to be deem'd a thief?
If 'twere

A bandit of the woods, I could have borne
it—

There's something daring in it:—but to steal

The moneys of a slumbering man!—
Ulr. It seems, then,

You are not guilty.
Gab. Do I hear aright? 285

You too!

Ulr. I merely ask'd a simple question.
Gab. If the judge ask'd me, I would

answer 'No'—
To you I answer thus. [He draws.

Ulr. [drawing]. With all my heart!
Jos. Without there! Ho! help! help!—

Oh, God! here's murder!
[Exit JOSEPHINE, shrieking.

GABOR and ULRIC fight. GABOR is disarmed just as STRALENHEIM, JOSEPHINE,
IDENSTEIN, &c., re-enter.

Jos. Oh! glorious heaven! He's safe!
Stral. [to JOSEPHINE]. Who's safe?

Jos. My—

Ulr. [interrupting her with a stern look,
and turning afterwards to STRALEN-HEIM].

Both! 290
Here's no great harm done.

Stral. What hath caused all this?
Ulr. You, baron, I believe; but as the effect
 Is harmless, let it not disturb you.—
Gabor!
 There is your sword; and when you bare it next,
 Let it not be against your friends.
[ULRIC pronounces the last words slowly and emphatically in a low voice to GABOR.]
Gab. I thank you 295
 Less for my life than for your counsel.
Stral. These
 Brawls must end here.
Gab. [taking his sword]. They shall.
 You've wrong'd me, Ulric,
 More with your unkind thoughts than sword: I would
 The last were in my bosom rather than
 The first in yours. I could have borne yon noble's 300
 Absurd insinuations—ignorance
 And dull suspicion are a part of his Entail will last him longer than his lands.—
 But I may fit him yet:—you have vanquish'd me.
 I was the fool of passion to conceive 305
 That I could cope with you, whom I had seen Already proved by greater perils than Rest in this arm. We may meet by and by,
 However—but in friendship.
Stral. [Exit GABOR.] I will brook
 No more! This outrage following upon his insults, 310
 Perhaps his guilt, has cancell'd all the little
 I owed him heretofore for the so-vaunted
 Aid which he added to your abler succour.
 Ulric, you are not hurt?—
Ulr. Not even by a scratch.
Stral. [to IDENSTEIN]. Intendant! take your measures to secure 315
 Yon fellow: I revoke my former lenity.
 He shall be sent to Frankfort with an escort,
 The instant that the waters have abated.
Iden. Secure him! He hath got his sword again—
 And seems to know the use on't; 'tis his trade, 320
 Belike;—I'm a civilian.
Stral. Fool! are not
 Yon score of vassals dogging at your heels
 Enough to seize a dozen such? Hence! after him!
Ulr. Baron, I do beseech you!
Stral. I must be Obey'd. No words!
Iden. Well, if it must be so— 325
 March, vassals! I'm your leader, and will bring

The rear up: a wise general never should Expose his precious life—on which all rests.
 I like that article of war.
[Exit IDENSTEIN and Attendants]
Stral. Come hither, Ulric; what does that woman here? OH!
 now
 I recognise her, 'tis the stranger's wife
 Whom they name 'Werner.'
Ulr. 'Tis his name.
Stral. Indeed
 Is not your husband visible, fair dame?—
Jos. Who seeks him?
Stral. No one—for the present: but I fain would parley, Ulric, with yourself
 Alone.
Ulr. I will retire with you.
Jos. Not so: 330
 You are the latest stranger, and come
 mand
 All places here.
[Aside to ULRIC, as she goes out]. O Ulric have a care—
 Remember what depends on a rash word
Ulr. [to JOSEPHINE]. Fear not!— Stral. Ulric, I think that I may trust
 you; 340
 You saved my life—and acts like these beget
 Unbounded confidence.
Ulr. Say on.
Stral. Mysteriour
 And long-engender'd circumstances (acc
 To be now fully enter'd on) have made This man obnoxious—perhaps fatal to
 me. 344
Ulr. Who? Gabor, the Hungarian?
Stral. No—this 'Werner'—
 With the false name and habit.
Ulr. How can this be?
 He is the poorest of the poor—and yellow
 Sickness sits cavern'd in his hollow eye:
 The man is helpless.
Stral. He is—'tis no matter;— 355
 But if he be the man I deem (and that He is so, all around us here—and much
 That is not here—confirm my apprehension),
 He must be made secure ere twelve hours
 further. 358
Ulr. And what have I to do with this?
Stral. I have sent
 To Frankfort, to the governor, my friend (I have the authority to do so by An order of the house of Brandenburg),
 For a fit escort—but this cursed flood Bars all access, and may do for some
 hours. 360
Ulr. It is abating.
Stral. That is well.
Ulr. But how Am I concern'd?

Stral. As one who did so much
For me, you cannot be indifferent to That which is of more import to me than The life you rescued.—Keep your eye on
him! 365

The man avoids me, knows that I now know him.—

Watch him!—as you would watch the wild boar when

He makes against you in the hunter's gap—

Like him he must be spear'd.

Ulr.

Why so?

Stral.

He stands

Between me and a brave inheritance! 370

Oh! could you see it! But you shall.

Ulr.

I hope so.

Stral. It is the richest of the rich

Bohemia,

Unscathed by scorching war. It lies so
near

The strongest city, Prague, that fire and
sword

Have skimm'd it lightly: so that now,
besides 375

Its own exuberance, it bears double value Confronted with whole realms far and
near

Made deserts.

Ulr.

You describe it faithfully.

Stral. Ay—could you see it, you would say so—but, 379

As I have said, you shall.

Ulr.

I accept the omen.

Stral. Then claim a recompense from it and me,

Such as both may make worthy your acceptance

And services to me and mine for ever.

Ulr. And this sole, sick, and miserable
wretch—

This way-worn stranger—stands between
you and 385

This Paradise?—(As Adam did between The devil and his)—[Aside].

Stral.

He doth.

Ulr.

Hath he no right?

Stral. Right! none. A disinherited prodigal,

Who for these twenty years disgraced his lineage 389

In all his acts—but chiefly by his marriage,
And living amidst commerce-fetching

burghers,
And dabbling merchants, in a mart of Jews.

Ulr. He has a wife, then?

Stral.

You'd be sorry to Call such your mother. You have seen the woman 394

He calls his wife.

Ulr.

Is she not so?

Stral.

No more

Than he's your father:—an Italian girl,

The daughter of a banish'd man, who lives
On love and poverty with this same Werner.

Ulr. They are childless, then?

Stral.

There is or was a bastard, Whom the old man—the grandsire (as
old age 400

Is ever dotting) took to warm his bosom,
As it went chilly downward to the grave:
But the imp stands not in my path—he has fled,

No one knows whither; and if he had not,
His claims alone were too contemptible

To stand.—Why do you smile?

Ulr.

At your vain fears:
A poor man almost in his grasp—a child

Of doubtful birth—can startle a grandee!

Stral. All's to be fear'd, where all is to be gain'd.

Ulr. True; and aught done to save or to obtain it. 410

Stral. You have harp'd the very string next to my heart.

I may depend upon you?

Ulr.

'Twere too late

To doubt it.

Stral. Let no foolish pity shake Your bosom (for the appearance of the
man

Is pitiful)—he is a wretch, as likely 415
To have robb'd me as the fellow more

suspected,

Except that circumstance is less against
him;

He being lodged far off, and in a chamber Without approach to mine; and, to say

truth, 419

I think too well of blood allied to mine,
To deem he would descend to such an

act:

Besides, he was a soldier, and a brave one
Once—though too rash.

Ulr. And they, my lord, we know

By our experience, never plunder till They knock the brains out first—which makes them heirs, 425

Not thieves. The dead, who feel nought, can lose nothing,

Nor e'er be robb'd: their spoils are a bequest—

No more.

Stral. Go to! you are a wag. But say

I may be sure you'll keep an eye on this
man,

And let me know his slightest movement
towards 430

Concealment or escape?

Ulr.

You may be sure
You yourself could not watch him more than I

Will be his sentinel.

Stral.

By this you make me
Yours, and for ever.

Ulr. Such is my intention. [Exeunt.

ACT III

SCENE I.—A Hall in the same Palace, from whence the secret passage leads.

Enter WERNER and GABOR.

Gab. Sir, I have told my tale: if it so please you
To give me refuge for a few hours, well—
If not, I'll try my fortune elsewhere.

Wer. How Can I, so wretched, give to Misery
A shelter?—wanting such myself as much
As e'er the hunted deer a covert—

Gab. Or 6
The wounded lion his cool cave. Methinks

You rather look like one would turn at
bay,
And rip the hunter's entrails.

Wer. Ah!
Gab. I care not

If it be so, being much disposed to do 10
The same myself. But will you shelter me?
I am oppress'd like you—and poor like
you—

Disgraced—
Wer. [abruptly]. Who told you that I was disgraced?

Gab. No one; nor did I say you were so: with

Your poverty my likeness ended; but 15
I said I was so—and would add, with
truth,

As undeservedly as you.
Wer. Again!

As I?
Gab. Or any other honest man.

What the devil would you have? You don't believe me
Guilty of this base theft?

Wer. No, no—I cannot. 20
Gab. Why that's my heart of honour!

yon young gallant—
Your miserly intendant and dense noble—

All—all suspected me; and why? because I am the worst clothed and least named
amongst them;

Although, were Momus' lattice in your breasts, 25

My soul might brook to open it more widely

Than theirs: but thus it is—you poor and helpless—

Both still more than myself.
Wer. How knew you that?

Gab. You're right: I ask for shelter at the hand

Which I call helpless; if you now deny it,
I were well paid. But you, who seem to have proved 31

The wholesome bitterness of life, know
well,

By sympathy, that all the outspread gold

Of the New World the Spaniard boasts
about,

Could never tempt the man who knows its worth 35

Weigh'd at its proper value in the balance, Save in such guise (and there I grant its
power,

Because I feel it) as may leave no nightmare
Upon his heart o' nights.

Wer. What do you mean?

Gab. Just what I say; I thought my speech was plain; 40

You are no thief—nor I—and, as true men,
Should aid each other.

Wer. It is a damn'd world, sir.
Gab. So is the nearest of the two next, as

The priests say (and no doubt they should know best), 44

Therefore I'll stick by this—as being loth
To suffer martyrdom, at least with such An epitaph as larceny upon my tomb.

It is but a night's lodging which I crave;
To-morrow I will try the waters, as

The dove did, trusting that they have abated. 50

Wer. Abated? Is there hope of that?
Gab. There was

At noontide.
Wer. Then we may be safe.

Gab. Are you
In peril?

Wer. Poverty is ever so.
Gab. That I know by long practice.

Will you not Promise to make mine less?

Wer. Your poverty? 55
Gab. No—you don't look a leech for that disorder;

I meant my peril only: you've a roof,
And I have none; I merely seek a covert.

Wer. Rightly; for how should such a wretch as I

Have gold?
Gab. Scarce honestly, to say the truth on't, 60

Although I almost wish you had the baron's.

Wer. Dare you insinuate?
Gab. What?

Wer. Are you aware
To whom you speak?

Gab. No; and I am not used Greatly to care. [A noise heard without.]

But hark! they come!
Wer. Who come?

Gab. The intendant and his manhounds after me: 65

I'd face them—but it were in vain to expect Justice at hands like theirs. Where shall

I go?
But show me any place. I do assure you,

If there be faith in man, I am most guilt-
less:

Think if it were your own case!

Wer. [aside]. Oh, just God! 70
Thy hell is not hereafter! Am I dust still?

Gab. I see you're moved; and it shows well in you:

I may live to requite it.

Wer. Are you not
A spy of Stralenheim's?

Gab. Not I! and if I were, what is there to espy in you? 75
Although, I recollect, his frequent
question

About you and your spouse might lead to some Suspicion; but you best know—what—
and why.

I am his deadliest foe.

Wer. You?

Gab. After such
A treatment for the service which in part
I render'd him, I am his enemy: 81

If you are not his friend, you will assist me.

Wer. I will.

Gab. But how?

Wer. [showing the panel]. There is a secret spring:

Remember, I discover'd it by chance,

And used it but for safety.

Gab. Open it, 85

And I will use it for the same.

Wer. I found it,
As I have said: it leads through winding
walls

(So thick as to bear paths within their ribs, Yet lose no jot of strength or stateliness),
And hollow cells, and obscure niches, to
I know not whither; you must not advance: 91

Give me your word.

Gab. It is unnecessary:
How should I make my way in darkness
through
A Gothic labyrinth of unknown wind-
ings?

Wer. Yes, but who knows to what place it may lead? 95

I know not—(mark you!)—but who knows it might not

Lead even into the chamber of your foe?
So strangely were contrived these galleries
By our Teutonic fathers in old days,
When man built less against the elements Than his next neighbour. You must not advance 101

Beyond the two first windings; if you do (Albeit I never pass'd them), I'll not answer

For what you may be led to.

Gab. But I will.

A thousand thanks!

Wer. You'll find the spring more obvious 105

On the other side; and, when you would return,

It yields to the least touch.

Gab. I'll in—farewell!

[GABOR goes in by the secret panel.]

Wer. [solus]. What have I done? Alas!
what had I done

Before to make this fearful? Let it be Still some atonement that I save the man, Whose sacrifice had saved perhaps my
own— 111

They come! to seek elsewhere what is before them!

Enter IDENSTEIN and Others.

Iden. Is he not here? He must have vanish'd then

Through the dim Gothic glass by pious aid
Of pictured saints upon the red and yellow Casements, through which the sunset streams like sunrise 116

On long pearl-colour'd beards and crimson crosses,

And gilded crosiers, and cross'd arms,
and cowl,

And helms, and twisted armour, and long swords,

All the fantastic furniture of windows
Dim with brave knights and holy hermits,
whose 121

Likeness and fame alike rest in some panes
Of crystal, which each rattling wind pro-
claims

As frail as any other life or glory.
He's gone, however.

Wer. Whom do you seek?

Iden. A villain. 125

Wer. Why need you come so far, then?

Iden. In the search
Of him who robb'd the baron.

Wer. Are you sure
You have divined the man?

Iden. As sure as you Stand there: but where's he gone?

Wer. Who?

Iden. He we sought.

Wer. You see he is not here.

Iden. And yet we traced him 130

Up to this hall. Are you accomplices?

Or deal you in the black art?

Wer. I deal plainly,

To many men the blackest.

Iden. It may be

I have a question or two for yourself

Hereafter; but we must continue now

Our search for t'other. 135

Wer. You had best begin

Your inquisition now: I may not be

So patient always.

Iden. I should like to know,

In good sooth, if you really are the man

That Stralenheim's in quest of.

Wer. Insolent! 140

Said you not that he was not here?

Iden. Yes, one;

But there's another whom he tracks more keenly,

And soon, it may be, with authority Both paramount to his and mine. But
come!

Bustle, my boys! we are at fault.

[Exit IDENSTEIN and Attendants.

Wer. In what 145
A maze hath my dim destiny involved me!
And one base sin hath done me less ill than
The leaving undone one far greater.

Down,
Thou busy devil, rising in my heart!
Thou art too late! I'll nought to do with
blood. 150

Enter ULRIC.

Ulr. I sought you, father.

Wer. Is't not dangerous?

Ulr. No; Stralenheim is ignorant of all
Or any of the ties between us: more—
He sends me here a spy upon your actions,
Deeming me wholly his.

Wer. I cannot think it: 155
'Tis but a snare he winds about us both,
To swoop the sire and son at once.

Ulr. I cannot Pause in each petty fear, and stumble at
The doubts that rise like briars in our path,
But must break through them, as an unarm'd carle 160

Would, though with naked limbs, were the wolf rustling
In the same thicket where he hew'd for bread.

Nets are for thrushes, eagles are not caught
so:

We'll overfly or rend them.

Wer. Show me how?

Ulr. Can you not guess?

Wer. I cannot.

Ulr. That is strange. 165
Came the thought ne'er into your mind last night?

Wer. I understand you not.

Ulr. Then we shall never More understand each other. But to change

The topic—

Wer. You mean to pursue it, as
'Tis of our safety.

Ulr. Right; I stand corrected. 170
I see the subject now more clearly, and
Our general situation in its bearings.
The waters are abating; a few hours
Will bring his summon'd myrmidons from Frankfort,

When you will be a prisoner, perhaps
worse, 175

And I an outcast, bastardised by practice
Of this same baron to make way for him.

Wer. And now your remedy! I thought to escape

By means of this accursed gold; but now
I dare not use it, show it, scarce look on it.
Methinks it wears upon its face my guilt

For motto, not the mintage of the state;
And, for the sovereign's head, my own begirt

With hissing snakes, which curl around
my temples, 184

And cry to all beholders, Lo! a villain!

Ulr. You must not use it, at least now;
but take

This ring. [He gives WERNER a jewel.

Wer. A gem! It was my father's!

Ulr. And

As such is now your own. With this you
must

Bribe the intendant for his old caleche
And horses to pursue your route at sunrise, 190

Together with my mother.

Wer. And leave you,

So lately found, in peril too?

Ulr. Fear nothing!

The only fear were if we fled together,
For that would make our ties beyond all
doubt.

The waters only lie in flood between 195
This burgh and Frankfort; so far's in our favour.

The route on to Bohemia, though encum-
ber'd,

Is not impassable; and when you gain
A few hours' start, the difficulties will be The same to your pursuers. Once beyond
The frontier, and you're safe.

Wer. My noble boy!

Ulr. Hush! hush! no transports: we'll indulge in them

In Castle Siegendorf! Display no gold!
Show Idenstein the gem (I know the man,
And have look'd through him): it will answer thus 205

A double purpose. Stralenheim lost
gold—

No jewel; therefore it could not be his;
And then the man who was posses of this
Can hardly be suspected of abstracting

The baron's coin, when he could thus convert 210

This ring to more than Stralenheim has
lost

By his last night's slumber. Be not over timid

In your address, nor yet too arrogant,
And Idenstein will serve you.

Wer. I will follow

In all things your direction.

Ulr. I would have 215
Spared you the trouble; but had I appear'd
To take an interest in you, and still more
By dabbling with a jewel in your favour,
All had been known at once.

Wer. My guardian angel!

This overpays the past. But how wilt thou Fare in our absence? 221

Ulr. Stralenheim knows nothing
Of me as aught of kindred with yourself.

I will but wait a day or two with him
To lull all doubts, and then rejoin my father.

Wer. To part no more!

Ulr. I know not that; but at 225
The least we'll meet again once more.

Wer. My boy!
My friend! my only child, and sole preserver!

Oh, do not hate me!

Ulr. Hate my father!

Wer. Ay,
My father hated me. Why not my son?

Ulr. Your father knew you not as I do.
Wer. Scorpions

Are in thy words! Thou know me? in this
guise 231

Thou canst not know me, I am not myself;
Yet (hate me not) I will be soon.

Ulr. I'll wait!

In the mean time be sure that all a son
Can do for parents shall be done for mine.

Wer. I see it, and I feel it; yet I feel
Further—that you despise me.

Ulr. Wherefore should I?

Wer. Must I repeat my humiliation?

Ulr. No! 238

I have fathom'd it and you. But let us talk
Of this no more. Or if it must be ever,
Not now. Your error has redoubled all
The present difficulties of our house,
At secret war with that of Stralenheim:
All we have now to think of is to baffle
Him. I have shown one way.

Wer. The only one, 245
And I embrace it, as I did my son,
Who show'd himself and father's safety in
One day.

Ulr. You shall be safe; let that suffice.
Would Stralenheim's appearance in Bohemia

Disturb your right, or mine, if once we
were 250

Admitted to our lands?

Wer. Assuredly,
Situate as we are now; although the first Possessor might, as usual, prove the strongest,
Especially the next in blood.

Ulr. Blood! 'tis 254

A word of many meanings; in the veins,
And out of them, it is a different thing—
And so it should be, when the same in
blood

(As it is call'd) are aliens to each other,
Like Theban brethren: when a part is bad,
A few spilt ounces purify the rest. 260

Wer. I do not apprehend you.

Ulr. That may be—
And should, perhaps—and yet—but get ye ready;

You and my mother must away to-night.
Here comes the intendant: sound him with the gem; 264

'Twill sink into his venal soul like lead
Into the deep, and bring up slime and mud,
And ooze too, from the bottom, as the lead doth

With its greased understratum; but no less Will serve to warn our vessels through these shoals.

The freight is rich, so heave the line in
time! 270

Farewell! I scarce have time, but yet your
hand,

My father!—

Wer. Let me embrace thee!

Ulr. We may be Observed: subdue your nature to the
hour!

Keep off from me as from your foe!
Wer. Accursed

Be he who is the stifling cause which smothers 275
The best and sweetest feeling of our hearts;
At such an hour too!

Ulr. Yes, curse—it will ease you!
Here is the intendant.

Enter IDENSTEIN.

Master Idenstein,
How fare you in your purpose? Have you caught 279

The rogue?

Iden. No, faith!

Ulr. Well, there are plenty more:
You may have better luck another chase.
Where is the baron?

Iden. Gone back to his chamber:
And now I think on't, asking after you
With nobly-born impatience.

Ulr. Your great men Must be answer'd on the instant, as the
bound 285

Of the stung steed replies unto the spur:
'Tis well they have horses, too; for, if they had not,

I fear that men must draw their chariots,
as

They say kings did Sesostris.

Iden. Who was he?

Ulr. An old Bohemian—an imperial gipsy. 290

Iden. A gipsy or Bohemian, 'tis the
same,

For they pass by both names. And was he one?

Ulr. I've heard so; but I must take leave. Intendant,

Your servant!—Werner [to WERNER slightly], if that be your name,

Yours. [Exit ULRIC.

Iden. A well-spoken pretty-faced young man! 295

And prettily behaved! He knows his
station,

You see, sir: how he gave to each his due Precedence!

Wer. I perceived it, and applaud
His just discernment and your own.

Iden. That's well—That's very well. You also know your place, too; 300
And yet I don't know that I know your
place.

Wer. [showing the ring]. Would this assist your knowledge?

Iden. How!—What!—Eh?
A jewel.

Wer. 'Tis your own on one condition.

Iden. Mine!—Name it!

Wer. That hereafter you permit me
At thrice its value to redeem it: 'tis 305
A family ring.

Iden. A family!—yours!—a gem!
I'm breathless!

Wer. You must also furnish me,
An hour ere daybreak, with all means to quit
This place.

Iden. But is it real? Let me look on it:
Diamond, by all that's glorious!

Wer. Come, I'll trust you: 310
You have guess'd, no doubt, that I was born above

My present seeming.

Iden. I can't say I did,
Though this looks like it: this is the true
breeding
Of gentle blood!

Wer. I have important reasons
For wishing to continue privily 315
My journey hence.

Iden. So then you are the man Whom Stralenheim's in quest of?

Wer. I am not;
But being taken for him might conduct
So much embarrassment to me just now,
And to the baron's self hereafter—'tis
To spare both that I would avoid all bustle.

Iden. Be you the man or no, 'tis not my business;

Besides, I never could obtain the half From this proud, niggardly noble, who would raise 324

The country for some missing bits of coin,
And never offer a precise reward—

But this!—another look!

Wer. Gaze on it freely;
At day-dawn it is yours.

Iden. Oh, thou sweet sparkler!
Thou more than stone of the philosopher!
Thou touchstone of Philosophy herself!
Thou bright eye of the Mine! thou loadstar
of 331

The Soul! the true magnetic Pole to which All hearts point duly north, like trembling needles!

Thou flaming Spirit of the Earth! which, sitting

High on the monarch's diadem, attractest
More worship than the majesty who sweats 336

Beneath the crown which makes his head ache, like

Millions of hearts which bleed to lend it lustre!

Shalt thou bemoine? I am, methinks, already
A little king, a lucky alchymist!— 340

A wise magician, who has bound the devil
Without the forfeit of his soul. But come, Werner, or what else?

Wer. Call me Werner still;
You may yet know me by a loftier title.

Iden. I do believe in thee! thou art the
spirit 345

Of whom I long have dream'd in a low garb.—

But come, I'll serve thee: thou shalt be as
free

As air, despite the waters; let us hence:
I'll show thee I am honest—(oh, thou jewel!)

Thou shalt be furnish'd, Werner, with such means 350

Of flight, that if thou wert a snail, not birds
Should overtake thee.—Let me gaze
again!

I have a foster-brother in the mart
Of Hamburg skill'd in precious stones.
How many

Carats may it weigh?—Come, Werner, I will wing thee. [Exeunt. 355]

SCENE II.—STRALENHEIM'S Chamber.

STRALENHEIM and FRITZ.

Fritz. All's ready, my good lord!

Stral. I am not sleepy,
And yet I must to bed; I fain would say
To rest, but something heavy on my spirit, Too dull for wakefulness, too quick for
slumber,

Sits on me as a cloud along the sky, 5
Which will not let the sunbeams through, nor yet

Descend in rain and end, but spreads itself
'Twixt earth and heaven, like envy between
man

And man, an everlasting mist:—I will Unto my pillow.

Fritz. May you rest there well! 10

Stral. I feel, and fear, I shall.

Fritz. And wherefore fear?

Stral. I know not why, and therefore do fear more,
Because an undescrivable—but 'tis
All folly. Were the locks (as I desired) Changed, to-day, of this chamber? for last night's 15
Adventure makes it needful.

Fritz. Certainly,
According to your order, and beneath
The inspection of myself and the young Saxon
Who saved your life. I think they call him
'Ulric.'

Stral. You think! you supercilious slave! what right
Have you to tax your memory, which should be Quick, proud, and happy to retain the name
Of him who saved your master, as a litany
Whose daily repetition marks your duty?—
Get hence! 'You think,' indeed! you, who stood still Howling and dripping on the bank, whilst I Lay dying, and the stranger dash'd aside
The roaring torrent, and restored me to Thank him—and despise you. 'You think!' and scarce
Can recollect his name! I will not waste
More words on you. Call me betimes.
Fritz. Good night!
I trust to-morrow will restore your lordship
To renovated strength and temper.

[The scene closes.]

SCENE III.—The secret Passage.

Gab. [solus.] Four—
Five—six hours have I counted, like the guard
Of outposts on the never-merry clock;
That hollow tongue of time, which, even when
It sounds for joy, takes something from enjoyment
With every clang. 'Tis a perpetual knell,
Though for a marriage feast it rings: each stroke
Pears for a hope the less; the funeral note
Of Love deep-buried without resurrection
In the grave of Possession; while the knoll
Of long-lived parents finds a jovial echo
To triple time in the son's ear.

I'm cold—
I'm dark;—I've blown my fingers—num-ber'd o'er
And o'er my steps—and knock'd my head against
Some fifty buttresses—and roused the rats
And bats in general insurrection, till
Their cursed pattering feet and whirling wings
Leave me scarce hearing for another sound.
A light! It is at distance (if I can Measure in darkness distance): but it blinks
As through a crevice or a key-hole, in The inhibited direction: I must on,
Nevertheless, from curiosity.
A distant lamp-light is an incident
In such a den as this. Pray Heaven it lead
me
To nothing that may tempt me! Else—
Heaven aid me

To obtain or to escape it! Shining still!
Were it the star of Lucifer himself,
Or he himself girt with its beams, I could Contain no longer. Softly: mighty well!
That corner's turn'd—so—ah! no:— right! it draws Nearer. Here is a darksome angle—so,
That's weather'd.—Let me pause.—
Suppose it leads Into some greater danger than that which I have escaped—no matter, 'tis a new one;
And novel perils, like fresh mistresses,
Wear more magnetic aspects:—I will on,
And be it where it may—I have my dagger,
Which may protect me at a pinch.—Burn
still,
Thou little light! Thou art my ignis fatuus!
My stationary Will-o'-the-wisp!—So! so!
He hears my invocation, and fails not.
[The scene closes.]

SCENE IV.—A Garden.

Enter WERNER.

Wer. I could not sleep—and now the hour's at hand;
All's ready. Idenstein has kept his word;
And station'd in the outskirts of the town,
Upon the forest's edge, the vehicle Awaits us. Now the dwindling stars begin
To pale in heaven; and for the last time I Look on these horrible walls. Oh! never,
never Shall I forget them. Here I came most
poor,
But not dishonour'd: and I leave them
with
A stain,—if not upon my name, yet in My heart!—a never-dying canker-worm,
Which all the coming splendour of the
lands,
And rights, and sovereignty of Siegendorf
Can scarcely lull a moment. I must find Some means of restitution, which would
ease
My soul in part: but how, without discovery?—
It must be done, however; and I'll pause
Upon the method the first hour of safety.
The madness of my misery led to this Base infamy; repentance must retrieve it:
I will have nought of Stralenheim's upon My spirit, though he would grasp all of
mine;
Lands, freedom, life,—and yet he sleeps
as soundly,
Perhaps, as infancy, with gorgeous curtains
Spread for his canopy, o'er silken pillows, Such as when—Hark! what noise is that? Again!

The branches shake; and some loose stones have fallen
From yonder terrace.

[ULRIC leaps down from the terrace.

Ulric! ever welcome!
Thrice welcome now! this filial—

Ulric. Stop! Before

We approach, tell me—

Wer. Why look you so?

Ulric. Do I 30

Behold my father, or—

Wer. What?

Ulric. An assassin?

Wer. Insane or insolent!

Ulric. Reply, sir, as

You prize your life, or mine!

Wer. To what must I

Answer?

Ulric. Are you or are you not the assassin

Of Stralenheim?

Wer. I never was as yet 35

The murderer of any man. What mean you?

Ulric. Did not you this night (as the night before)

Retrace the secret passage? Did you not

Again revisit Stralenheim's chamber?

[ULRIC pauses.

Wer. Proceed.

Ulric. Died he not by your hand?

Wer. Great God! 40

Ulric. You are innocent, then! my father's innocent!

Embrace me! Yes,—your tone—your look—yes, yes,—

Yet say so.

Wer. If I e'er, in heart or mind,

Conceived deliberately such a thought,
But rather strove to trample back to hell

Such thoughts—if e'er they glared a moment through 46

The irritation of my oppressed spirit—
May heaven be shut for ever from my

hopes,

As from mine eyes!

Ulric. But Stralenheim is dead.

Wer. 'Tis horrible! 'tis hideous, as
'tis hateful!— 50

But what have I to do with this?

Ulric. No bolt

Is forced; no violence can be detected, Save on his body. Part of his own house-

hold

Have been alarm'd; but as the intendant is Absent, I took upon myself the care 55

Of mustering the police. His chamber has, Past doubt, been enter'd secretly. Excuse

me,

If nature—

Wer. Oh, my boy! what unknown

woes

Of dark fatality, like clouds, are gathering
Above our house!

Ulric. My father! I acquit you! 60
But will the world do so? will even the
judge,

If—But you must away this instant.

Wer. No!

I'll face it. Who shall dare suspect me?

Ulric. Yet

You had no guests—no visitors—no life

Breathing around you, save my mother's?

Wer. Ah! 65

The Hungarian!

Ulric. He is gone! he disappear'd

Ere sunset.

Wer. No; I hid him in that very Conceal'd and fatal gallery.

Ulric. There I'll find him.

[ULRIC is going.

Wer. It is too late: he had left the palace ere

I quitted it. I found the secret panel 70
Open, and the doors which lead from that

hail

Which masks it: I but thought he had snatch'd the silent

And favourable moment to escape

The myrmidons of Idenstein, who were Dogging him yester-even.

Ulric. You reclosed 75

The panel?

Wer. Yes; and not without reproach (And inner trembling for the avoided

peril)

At his dull heedlessness, in leaving thus
His shelterer's asylum to the risk

Of a discovery.

Ulric. You are sure you closed it? 80

Wer. Certain.

Ulric. That's well; but had been better, if

You ne'er had turn'd it to a den for—[He pauses.

Wer. Thieves!

Thou wouldst say: I must bear it, and deserve it;

But not—

Ulric. No, father; do not speak of this:

This is no hour to think of petty crimes,
But to prevent the consequence of great

ones. 86

Why would you shelter this man?

Wer. Could I shun it?

A man pursued by my chief foe; disgraced
For my own crime: a victim to my safety,

Imploring a few hours' concealment from
The very wretch who was the cause he needed 91

Such refuge. Had he been a wolf, I could not Have in such circumstances thrust him

forth.

Ulric. And like the wolf he hath repaid
you. But

It is too late to ponder thus:—you must Set out ere dawn. I will remain here to Trace the murderer, if 'tis possible. 97

Wer. But this my sudden flight will give the Moloch
 Suspicion: two new victims in the lieu
 Of one, if I remain. The fled Hungarian,
 Who seems the culprit, and——
Ulr. Who seems? Who else 101
 Can be so?
Wer. Not I, though just now you doubted—
 You, my son!—doubted—
Ulr. And do you doubt of him
 The fugitive?
Wer. Boy! since I fell into The abyss of crime (though not of such crime), I, 105
 Having seen the innocent oppress'd for me,
 May doubt even of the guilty's guilt.
 Your heart
 Is free, and quick with virtuous wrath to accuse Appearances; and views a criminal
 In Innocence's shadow, it may be, 110
 Because 'tis dusky.
Ulr. And if I do so,
 What will mankind, who know you not,
 or knew
 But to oppress? You must not stand the hazard.
 Away!—I'll make all easy. Idenstein
 Will for his own sake and his jewel's hold
 His peace—he also is a partner in 116
 Your flight—moreover——
Wer. Fly! and leave my name Link'd with the Hungarian's, or preferr'd as poorest,
 To bear the brand of bloodshed?
Ulr. Pshaw! leave anything
 Except our fathers' sovereignty and castles,
 For which you have so long panted, and
 in vain! 121
 What name? You have no name, since that you bear
 Is feign'd.
Wer. Most true: but still I would not have it
 Engraved in crimson in men's memories, Though in this most obscure abode of
 men—— 125
 Besides, the search——
Ulr. I will provide against Aught that can touch you. No one knows you here
 As heir of Siegendorf: if Idenstein Suspects, 'tis but suspicion, and he is A fool: his folly shall have such employ-
 ment, 130
 Too, that the unknown Werner shall give way
 To nearer thoughts of self. The laws (if e'er Laws reach'd this village) are all in abeyance
 With the late general war of thirty years,
 Or crush'd, or rising slowly from the dust,
 To which the march of armies trampled
 them. 136

Stralenheim, although noble, is unheeded
Here, save as such—without lands, influence,
 Save what hath perish'd with him. Few prolong
 A week beyond their funeral rites their
 sway 140
 O'er men, unless by relatives, whose interest
 Is roused: such is not here the case; he
 died
 Alone, unknown,—a solitary grave, Obscure as his deserts, without a scutcheon,
 Is all he'll leave, or wants. If I discover The assassin, 'twill be well—if not, believe
 me, 146
 None else; though all the full-fed train of menials
 May howl above his ashes (as they did Around him in his danger on the Oder),
 Will no more stir a finger now than then.
 Hence! hence! I must not hear your answer.—Look! 151
 The stars are almost faded, and the grey
 Begins to grizzle the black hair of night.
 You shall not answer:—Pardon me that I Am peremptory; 'tis your son that speaks,
 Your long-lost, late-found son.—Let's call my mother! 156
 Softly and swiftly step, and leave the rest
 To me: I'll answer for the event as far
 As regards you, and that is the chief point,
 As my first duty, which shall be observed.
 We'll meet in Castle Siegendorf—once
 more 161
 Our banners shall be glorious! Think of
 that
 Alone, and leave all other thoughts to me, Whose youth may better battle with them—Hence!
 And may your age be happy!—I will kiss
 My mother once more, then Heaven's speed be with you! 166
Wer. This counsel's safe—but is it honourable?
Ulr. To save a father is a child's chief honour. [Exeunt.

ACT IV

SCENE I.—A Gothic Hall in the Castle of Siegendorf, near Prague.

Enter ERIC and HENRICK, Retainers of the Count.

Eric. So, better times are come at last;
 to these Old walls new masters and high wassail—
 both

A long desideratum.

Hen. Yes, for masters,
 It might be unto those who long for novelty,

Though made by a new grave: but as for wassail, 5
Methinks the old Count Siegendorf main-
tain'd

His feudal hospitality as high
As e'er another prince of the empire.

Eric. Why
For the mere cup and trencher, we no
doubt

Fared passing well; but as for merriment
And sport, without which salt and sauces season 11

The cheer but scantily, our sizings were Even of the narrowest.

Hen. The old count loved not
The roar of revel; are you sure that this does?

Eric. As yet he hath been courteous as he's bounteous, 15
And we all love him.

Hen. His reign is as yet
Hardly a year o'erpast its honey-moon,
And the first year of sovereigns is bridal:
Anon, we shall perceive his real sway
And moods of mind.

Eric. Pray Heaven he keep the present! 20
Then his brave son, Count Ulric—there's a knight!

Pity the wars are o'er!

Hen. Why so?
Eric. Look on him!
And answer that yourself.

Hen. He's very youthful,
And strong and beautiful as a young tiger.

Eric. That's not a faithful vassal's likeness.

Hen. But 25
Perhaps a true one.

Eric. Pity, as I said,
The wars are over: in the hall, who like
Count Ulric for a well-supported pride, Which awes, but yet offends not? in the
field,

Who like him with his spear in hand,
when, gnashing 30

His tusks, and ripping up from right to left The howling hounds, the boar makes for the thicket?

Who backs a horse, or bears a hawk, or wears

A sword like him? Whose plume nods knightlier?

Hen. No one's, I grant you. Do not fear, if war 35

Be long in coming, he is of that kind
Will make it for himself, if he hath not Already done as much.

Eric. What do you mean?

Hen. You can't deny his train of followers

(But few our native fellow-vassals born
On the domain) are such a sort of knaves

As—

[Pauses. All ready for the chase?

Eric. What?

Hen. The war (you love so much) leaves living.

Like other parents, she spoils her worst
children.

Eric. Nonsense! they are all brave iron-visaged fellows,

Such as old Tilly loved.

Hen. And who loved Tilly? 45
Ask that at Magdebourg—or for that
matter

Wallenstein either;—they are gone to—

Eric. Rest!
But what beyond, 'tis not ours to pronounce.

Hen. I wish they had left us something of their rest:

The country (nominally now at peace)
Is over-run with—God knows who: they
fly 51

By night, and disappear with sunrise; but Leave us no less desolation, nay, even
more,

Than the most open warfare.

Eric. But Count Ulric—
What has all this to do with him?

Hen. With him! 55
He—might prevent it. As you say he's fond

Of war, why makes he it not on those marauders?

Eric. You'd better ask himself.

Hen. I would as soon
Ask the lion why he laps not milk.

Eric. And here he comes!

Hen. The devil! you'll hold your
tongue? 60

Eric. Why do you turn so pale?

Hen. 'Tis nothing—but
Be silent.

Eric. I will, upon what you have said.

Hen. I assure you I meant nothing,— a mere sport

Of words, no more; besides, had it been otherwise,

He is to espouse the gentle Baroness 65
Ida of Stralenheim, the late baron's heirress;

And she, no doubt, will soften whatsoever
Of fierceness the late long intestine wars

Have given all natures, and most unto
those

Who were born in them, and bred up
upon 70

The knees of Homicide; sprinkled, as it
were,

With blood even at their baptism. Prithee,
peace

On all that I have said!

Enter ULRIC and RODOLPH.

Good morrow, Count.

Ulric, is

Eric, is

All ready for the chase?

Eric. The dogs are order'd 75
Down to the forest, and the vassals out To beat the bushes, and the day looks promising.

Shall I call forth your excellency's suite?
What courser will you please to mount?

Ulr. The dun, Walstein.

Eric. I fear he scarcely has recover'd 80
The toils of Monday: 'twas a noble chase:
You spear'd four with your own hand.

Ulr. True, good Eric;
I had forgotten—let it be the grey, then,
Old Ziska: he has not been out this fort-
night.

Eric. He shall be straight caparison'd.
How many 85
Of your immediate retainers shall Escort you?

Ulr. I leave that to Weilburgh, our Master of the horse. [Exit ERIC.]

Rodolph!
Rod. My lord!
Ulr. The news

Is awkward from the—[RODOLPH points to HENRICK.
How now, Henrick? why

Loiter you here?
Hen. For your commands, my lord.

Ulr. Go to my father, and present my
duty, 91
And learn if he would aught with me
before

I mount. [Exit HENRICK.
Rodolph, our friends have had a check

Upon the frontiers of Franconia, and 'Tis rumour'd that the column sent against them 95

Is to be strengthen'd. I must join them soon.
Rod. Best wait for further and more sure advices.

Ulr. I mean it—and indeed it could not well

Have fallen out at a time more opposite
To all my plans.

Rod. It will be difficult 100
To excuse your absence to the count your father.

Ulr. Yes, but the unsettled state of our domain

In high Silesia will permit and cover
My journey. In the mean time, when we are Engaged in the chase, draw off the eighty
men 105

Whom Wolffe leads—keep the forests on your route:

You know it well?

Rod. As well as on that night
When we—

Ulr. We will not speak of that until
We can repeat the same with like success:
And when you have join'd, give Rosenberg this letter. [Gives a letter.]

Add further, that I have sent this slight addition 111
To our force with you and Wolffe, as herald of

My coming, though I could but spare them ill

At this time, as my father loves to keep
Full numbers of retainers round the castle, Until this marriage, and its feasts and fooleries, 116
Are rung out with its peal of nuptial non-
sense.

Rod. I thought you loved the lady Ida?
Ulr. Why,

I do so—but it follows not from that I would bind in my youth and glorious
years, 120

So brief and burning, with a lady's zone,
Although 'twere that of Venus:—but I
love her,
As woman should be loved, fairly and solely.

Rod. And constantly?
Ulr. I think so; for I love

Nought else.—But I have not the time to
pause 125

Upon these gewgaws of the heart. Great
things

We have to do ere long. Speed! speed!
good Rodolph!

Rod. On my return, however, I shall find

The Baroness Ida lost in Countess Siegendorf?

Ulr. Perhaps: my father wishes it; and
sooth 130

'Tis no bad policy: this union with
The last bud of the rival branch at once
Unites the future and destroys the past.

Rod. Adieu.

Ulr. Yet hold—we had better keep together

Until the chase begins; then draw thou off, 135

And do as I have said.

Rod. I will. But to Return—'twas a most kind act in the count

Your father to send up to Konigsberg
For this fair orphan of the baron, and

To hail her as his daughter.

Ulr. Wondrous kind! 140

Especially as little kindness till Then grew between them.

Rod. The late baron died
Of a fever, did he not?

Ulr. How should I know?
Rod. I have heard it whisper'd there was something strange

About his death—and even the place of
it 145

Is scarcely known.

Ulr. Some obscure village on
The Saxon or Silesian frontier.

Rod. He
Has left no testament—no farewell words?
Ulr. I am neither confessor nor notary,
So cannot say.
Rod. Ah! here's the lady Ida. 150

Enter IDA STRALENHEIM.

Ulr. You are early, my sweet cousin!
Ida. Not too early,
Dear Ulr, if I do not interrupt you.
Why do you call me 'cousin'?
Ulr. [smiling]. Are we not so?
Ida. Yes, but I do not like the name;
methinks 154
It sounds so cold, as if you thought upon
Our pedigree, and only weigh'd our blood.
Ulr. [starting]. Blood!
Ida. Why does yours start from your cheeks?

Ulr. Ay! doth it?
Ida. It doth—but no! it rushes like a torrent
Even to your brow again.
Ulr. [recovering himself]. And if it fled,
It only was because your presence sent it Back to my heart, which beats for you, sweet cousin! 161

Ida. 'Cousin' again.
Ulr. Nay, then, I'll call you sister.
Ida. I like that name still worse.—
Would we had ne'er
Been aught of kindred!
Ulr. [gloomily]. Would we never had!
Ida. Oh, heavens! and can you wish
that!

Ulr. Dearest Ida! 165
Did I not echo your own wish?
Ida. Yes, Ulr, but then I wish'd it not with such a glance,
And scarce knew what I said; but let me be Sister or cousin, what you will, so that I still to you am something.

Ulr. You shall be 170
All—all—
Ida. And you to me are so already;
But I can wait.

Ulr. Dear Ida!
Ida. Call me Ida,
Your Ida, for I would be yours, none else's—

Indeed I have none else left, since my poor father— [She pauses.

Ulr. You have mine—you have me.
Ida. Dear Ulr, how I wish 175
My father could but view my happiness,
Which wants but this!

Ulr. Indeed!
Ida. You would have loved him,
He you; for the brave ever love each other:
His manner was a little cold, his spirit Proud (as is birth's prerogative); but under 180
This grave exterior—Would you had known each other!

Had such as you been near him on his journey,
He had not died without a friend to soothe
His last and lonely moments.

Ulr. Who says that?

Ida. What?

Ulr. That he died alone.

Ida. The general rumour 185
And disappearance of his servants, who Have ne'er return'd; that fever was most deadly

Which swept them all away.

Ulr. If they were near him,
He could not die neglected or alone.

Ida. Alas! what is a menial to a death-
bed, 190

When the dim eye rolls vainly round for
what

It loves?—They say he died of a fever.

Ulr. Say!

It was so.

Ida. I sometimes dream otherwise.

Ulr. All dreams are false.

Ida. And yet I see him as

I see you.

Ulr. Where?

Ida. In sleep—I see him lie 195
Pale, bleeding, and a man with a raised knife

Beside him.

Ulr. But you do not see his face!

Ida [looking at him]. No! Oh, my God! do you?

Ulr. Why do you ask?

Ida. Because you look as if you saw a murderer!

Ulr. [agitatedly]. Ida, this is mere childishness; your weakness 200

Infects me, to my shame: but as all feelings
Of yours are common to me, it affects me.

Prithee, sweet child, change—

Ida. Child, indeed! I have Full fifteen summers! [A bugle sounds.

Rod. Hark, my lord, the bugle!

Ida [peevishly to RODOLPH]. Why need you tell him that? Can he not hear it

Without your echo?

Rod. Pardon me, fair baroness!

Ida. I will not pardon you, unless you earn it

By aiding me in my dissuasion of Count Ulr from the chase to-day.

Rod. You will not,

Lady, need aid of mine.

Ulr. I must not now 210

Forgo it.

Ida. But you shall!

Ulr. Shall!

Ida. Yes, or be

No true knight.—Come, dear Ulr!
yield to me

In this, for this one day: the day looks heavy,

And you are turn'd so pale and ill.

Ulr. You jest.
Ida. Indeed I do not:—ask of Rodolph.
Rod. Truly, 215
 My lord, within this quarter of an hour
 You have changed more than e'er I saw you change
 In years.
Ulr. 'Tis nothing; but if 'twere, the air
 Would soon restore me. I'm the true chameleon,
 And live but on the atmosphere; your feasts 220
 In castle halls, and social banquets, nurse
 not
 My spirit—I'm a forester and breather
 Of the steep mountain-tops, where I love all
 The eagle loves.
Ida. Except his prey, I hope.
Ulr. Sweet Ida, wish me a fair chase, and I 225
 Will bring you six boars' heads for trophies home.
Ida. And will you not stay, then?
 You shall not go!
 Come! I will sing to you.
Ulr. Ida, you scarcely
 Will make a soldier's wife.
Ida. I do not wish
 To be so; for I trust these wars are over,
 And you will live in peace on your domains. 231

Enter WERNER as COUNT SIEGENDORF.
Ulr. My father, I salute you, and it grieves me
 With such brief greeting.—You have heard our bugle;
 The vassals wait.
Sieg. So let them.—You forget
 To-morrow is the appointed festival 235
 In Prague for peace restored. You are apt to follow
 The chase with such an ardour as will scarce Permit you to return to-day, or if Return'd, too much fatigued to join tomorrow
 The nobles in our marshall'd ranks.
Ulr. You count, 240
 Will well supply the place of both—I am
 not
 A lover of these pageantries.
Sieg. No, Ulric:
 It were not well that you alone of all
 Our young nobility—
Ida. And far the noblest
 In aspect and demeanour.
Sieg. [to IDA]. True, dear child, 245
 Though somewhat frankly said for a fair damsel.—
 But, Ulric, recollect too our position,
 So lately reinstated in our honours.
 Believe me, 'twould be mark'd in any
 house,

But most in ours, that ONE should be found wanting 250
 At such a time and place. Besides, the
 Heaven
 Which gave us back our own, in the same moment
 It spread its peace o'er all, hath double
 claims
 On us for thanksgiving: first, for our country;
 And next, that we are here to share its blessings. 255
Ulr. [aside]. Devout, too! Well, sir,
 I obey at once.
 [Then aloud to a Servant]. Ludwig, dismiss the train without!
 [Exit LUDWIG.]
Ida. And so
 You yield at once to him what I for hours
 Might supplicate in vain.
Sieg. [smiling]. You are not jealous
 Of me, I trust, my pretty rebel! who 260
 Would sanction disobedience against all Except thyself? But fear not; thou shalt rule him
 Hereafter with a fonder sway and firmer.
Ida. But I should like to govern now.
Sieg. You shall,
 Your harp, which by the way awaits you
 with 265
 The countess in her chamber. She complains
 That you are a sad truant to your music:
 She attends you.
Ida. Then good morrow, my kind
 kinsmen!
 Ulric, you'll come and hear me?
Ulr. By and by.
Ida. Be sure I'll sound it better than your bugles; 270
 Then pray you be as punctual to its notes:
 I'll play you King Gustavus' march.
Ulr. And why not Old Tilly's?
Ida. Not that monster's! I should think
 My harp-strings rang with groans, and not with music,
 Could aught of his sound on it:—but come quickly; 275
 Your mother will be eager to receive you.
 [Exit.]
Sieg. Ulric, I wish to speak with you
 alone.
Ulr. My time's your vassal.—
 [Aside to RODOLPH]. Rodolph, hence!
 and do
 As I directed: and by his best speed
 And readiest means let Rosenberg reply.
Rod. Count Siegendorf, command
 you aught? I am bound 281
 Upon a journey past the frontier.
Sieg. [starts]. Ah!—
 Where? on what frontier?

Rod. The Silesian, on—
My way—[Aside to ULRIC].—Where shall I say?

Ulr. [aside to RODOLPH]. To Ham-burgh.

[Aside to himself.] That Word will, I think, put a firm padlock on His further inquisition.

Rod. Count, to Hamburgh. 286

Sieg. [agitated]. Hamburgh! No, I have nought to do there, nor Am aught connected with that city. Then God speed you!

Rod. Fare ye well, Count Siegendorf!
[Exit RODOLPH.]

Sieg. Ulr, this man, who has just departed, is 290
One of those strange companions whom I fain

Would reason with you on.

Ulr. My lord, he is Noble by birth, of one of the first houses
In Saxony.

Sieg. I talk not of his birth,
But of his bearing. Men speak lightly of
him. 295

Ulr. So they will do of most men.
Even the monarch
Is not fenced from his chamberlain's slander, or
The sneer of the last courtier whom he has
made

Great and ungrateful.
Sieg. If I must be plain,
The world speaks more than lightly of this Rodolph: 300

They say he is leagued with the 'black bands' who still Ravage the frontier.

Ulr. And will you believe
The world?

Sieg. In this case—yes.

Ulr. In any case,
I thought you knew it better than to take
An accusation for a sentence.

Sieg. Son! 305
I understand you: you refer to—but
My destiny has so involved about me
Her spider web, that I can only flutter Like the poor fly, but break it not. Take heed,

Ulr; you have seen to what the passions led me: 310

Twenty long years of misery and famine Quench'd them not—twenty thousand more, perchance,

Hereafter (or even here in moments which Might date for years, did Anguish make the dial)

May not obliterate or expiate 315
The madness and dishonour of an instant.
Ulr, be warn'd by a father!—I was not
By mine, and you behold me!

Ulr. I behold

The prosperous and beloved Siegendorf,
Lord of a prince's appanage, and honour'd
By those he rules and those he ranks with.

Sieg. Ah! 321

Why wilt thou call me prosperous, while
I fear

For thee? Beloved, when thou lovest me not!
All hearts but one may beat in kindness
for me—

But if my son's is cold!—

Ulr. Who dare say that? 325

Sieg. None else but I, who see it—feel it—keener

Than would your adversary, who dared
say so,

Your sabre in his heart! But mine survives

The wound.

Ulr. You err. My nature is not given To outward fondling: how should it be
so, 330

After twelve years' divorcement from my
parents?

Sieg. And did not I too pass those twelve torn years

In a like absence? But 'tis vain to urge
you—

Nature was never call'd back by remonstrance.

Let's change the theme. I wish you to consider 335

That these young violent nobles of high
name,

But dark deeds (ay, the darkest, if all
Rumour

Reports be true), with whom thou con-sortest,

Will lead thee—

Ulr. [impatently]. I'll be led by no
man.

Sieg. Nor 339

Be leader of such, I would hope: at once
To wean thee from the perils of thy youth
And haughty spirit, I have thought it well
That thou shouldst wed the lady Ida—

more

As thou appear'st to love her.

Ulr. I have said
I will obey your orders, were they to 345

Unite with Hecate—can a son say more?
Sieg. He says too much in saying this.

It is not

The nature of thine age, nor of thy blood,
Nor of thy temperament, to talk so coolly,

Or act so carelessly, in that which is 350

The bloom or blight of all men's happiness, (For Glory's pillow is but restless, if Love lay not down his cheek there): some strong bias,

Some master fiend is in thy service, to Misrule the mortal who believes him

slave, 355

And makes his every thought subservient; else

Thou'dst say at once—'I love young Ida,
and
Will wed her;' or, 'I love her not, and
all
The powers of earth shall never make me.'

—So
Would I have answer'd.

Ulr. Sir, you wed for love. 360

Sieg. I did, and it has been my only refuge

In many miseries.

Ulr. Which miseries

Had never been but for this love-match.

Sieg. Still

Against your age and nature! Who at twenty

E'er answer'd thus till now?

Ulr. Did you not warn me 365

Against your own example?

Sieg. Boyish sophist!

In a word, do you love, or love not, Ida?

Ulr. What matters it, if I am ready to Obeys you in espousing her?

Sieg. As far

As you feel, nothing, but all life for her.
She's young—all-beautiful—adores you

—is 371

Endow'd with qualities to give happiness,
Such as rounds common life into a dream
Of something which your poets cannot
paint,

And (if it were not wisdom to love virtue)

For which Philosophy might barter

Wisdom;

376

And giving so much happiness, deserves
A little in return. I would not have her Break her heart for a man who has none
to break;

Or wither on her stalk like some pale rose Deserted by the bird she thought a nightin-
gale, 381

According to the Orient tale. She is—

Ulr. The daughter of dead Stralen-heim, your foe:

I'll wed her, ne'ertheless; though, to say
truth,

Just now I am not violently transported
In favour of such unions.

Sieg. But she loves you. 386

Ulr. And I love her, and therefore would think twice.

Sieg. Alas! Love never did so.

Ulr. Then 'tis time

He should begin, and take the bandage
from

His eyes, and look before he leaps; till
now 390

He hath ta'en a jump i' the dark.

Sieg. But you consent?

Ulr. I did, and do.

Sieg. Then fix the day.

Ulr. 'Tis usual,

And certes courteous, to leave that to the lady.

Sieg. I will engage for her.

Ulr.

So will not I

For any woman: and as what I fix, 395
I fain would see unshaken, when she gives
Her answer, I'll give mine.

Sieg.

But 'tis your office

To woo.

Ulr. Count, 'tis a marriage of your
making,

So be it of your wooing; but to please you,
I will now pay my duty to my mother,
With whom, you know, the lady Ida is.— What would you have? You have forbid my stirring

For manly sports beyond the castle walls,
And I obey; you bid me turn a chamberer,
To pick up gloves, and fans, and knitting-
needles, 405

And list to songs and tunes, and watch for
smiles,

And smile at pretty prattle, and look into
The eyes of feminine, as though they were
The stars receding early to our wish

Upon the dawn of a world-winning battle— 410

What can a son or man do more?

[Exit ULRIC.]

Sieg. [solus].

Too much!—

Too much of duty, and too little love!
He pays me in the coin he owes me not:

For such hath been my wayward fate, I could not

Fulfil a parent's duties by his side 415

Till now; but love he owes me, for my thoughts

Ne'er left him, nor my eyes long'd without tears

To see my child again, and now I have found him!

But how—obedient, but with coldness;
duteous

In my sight, but with carelessness; mysterious— 420

Abstracted—distant—much given to long
absence,

And where—none know—in league with the most riotous

Of our young nobles; though, to do him
justice,

He never stoops down to their vulgar pleasures;

Yet there's some tie between them which I cannot 425

Unravel. They look up to him—consult
him—

Throng round him as a leader: but with
me

He hath no confidence! Ah! can I hope it After—what! doth my father's curse

descend
Even to my child? Or is the Hungarian
near 430

To shed more blood? or—Oh! if it should
be!

Spirit of Stralenheim, dost thou walk
these walls
To wither him and his—who, though they slew not,
Unlatch'd the door of death for thee?
'Twas not
Our fault, nor is our sin: thou wert our
foe, 435
And yet I spared thee when my own destruction
Slept with thee, to awake with thine awakening!
And only took—Accursed gold! thou liest
Like poison in my hands; I dare not use
thee,
Nor part from thee; thou camest in such a guise, 440
Methinks thou wouldst contaminate all
hands
Like mine. Yet I have done, to atone for
thee,
Thou villainous gold! and thy dead
master's doom,
Though he died not by me or mine, as
much 444
As if he were my brother! I have ta'en
His orphan Ida—cherish'd her as one Who will be mine.

Enter an ATTENDANT.

Atten. The abbot, if it please
Your excellency, whom you sent for, waits
Upon you. [Exit ATTENDANT.]

Enter the PRIOR ALBERT.

Prior. Peace be with these walls, and
all Within them!
Sieg. Welcome, welcome, holy
father! 450
And may thy prayer be heard!—all men have need
Of such, and I—
Prior. Have the first claim to all The prayers of our community. Our convent,
Erected by your ancestors, is still Protected by their children.
Sieg. Yes, good father; 455
Continue daily orisons for us
In these dim days of heresies and blood,
Though the schismatic Swede, Gustavus,
is Gone home.
Prior. To the endless home of unbelievers,
Where there is everlasting wail and woe, Gnashing of teeth, and tears of blood, and
fire 461
Eternal, and the worm which dieth not!
Sieg. True, father: and to avert those pangs from one,
Who, though of our most faultless holy church,

Yet died without its last and dearest offices, 465
Which smooth the soul through purgatorial pains,
I have to offer humbly this donation
In masses for his spirit.
[SIEGENDORF offers the gold which he had taken from STRALENHEIM.]
Prior. Count, if I Receive it, 'tis because I know too well
Refusal would offend you. Be assured
The largess shall be only dealt in alms,
And every mass no less sung for the dead.
Our house needs no donations, thanks to
yours,
Which has of old endow'd it; but from you And yours in all meet things 'tis fit we obey. 475
For whom shall mass be said?
Sieg. [faltering]. For—for—the dead.
Prior. His name?
Sieg. 'Tis from a soul, and not a
name,
I would avert perdition.
Prior. I meant not
To pry into your secret. We will pray For one unknown, the same as for the proudest. 480
Sieg. Secret! I have none: but, father, he who's gone
Might have one; or, in short, he did bequeath—
No, not bequeath—but I bestow this sum
For pious purposes.
Prior. A proper deed
In the behalf of our departed friends.
Sieg. But he who's gone was not my friend, but foe, 486
The deadliest and the stanchest.
Prior. Better still!
To employ our means to obtain heaven
for the souls
Of our dead enemies is worthy those Who can forgive them living.
Sieg. But I did not 490 Forgive this man. I loathed him to the
last,
As he did me. I do not love him now,
But—
Prior. Best of all! for this is pure religion!
You fain would rescue him you hate from
hell—
An evangelical compassion—with 495
Your own gold too!
Sieg. Father, 'tis not my gold.
Prior. Whose then? You said it was no legacy.
Sieg. No matter whose—of this be sure, that he
Who own'd it never more will need it, save In that which it may purchase from your altars: 500
'Tis yours, or theirs.

Prior. Is there no blood upon it?

Sieg. No; but there's worse than blood—eternal shame!

Prior. Did he who own'd it die in his bed?

Sieg. He did. Alas!

Prior. Son! you relapse into revenge, If you regret your enemy's bloodless death. 505

Sieg. His death was fathomlessly deep in blood.

Prior. You said he died in his bed, not battle.

Sieg. He Died, I scarce know—but—he was stabb'd i' the dark,

And now you have it—perish'd on his pillow

By a cut-throat!—Ay!—you may look upon me! 510

I am not the man. I'll meet your eye on that point,

As I can one day God's.

Prior. Nor did he die By means, or men, or instrument of yours?

Sieg. No! by the God who sees and strikes!

Prior. Nor know you Who slew him?

Sieg. I could only guess at one, 515
And he to me a stranger, unconnected,
As unemploy'd. Except by one day's knowledge,

I never saw the man who was suspected.

Prior. Then you are free from guilt.

Sieg. [eagerly]. Oh! am I?—say!

Prior. You have said so, and know best.

Sieg. Father! I have spoken 520
The truth, and nought but truth, if not the whole;

Yet say I am not guilty! for the blood Of this man weighs on me, as if I shed it,

Though, by the Power who abhorreth human blood,

I did not!—nay, once spared it, when I might 525

And could—ay, perhaps, should (if our self-safety

Be e'er excusable in such defences Against the attacks of over-potent foes):

But pray for him, for me, and all my house; 529

For, as I said, though I be innocent, I know not why, a like remorse is on me,

As if he had fallen by me or mine. Pray for me,

Father! I have pray'd myself in vain.

Prior. I will. Be comforted! You are innocent, and should Be calm as innocence.

Sieg. But calmness is not 535

Always the attribute of innocence.

I feel it is not.

Prior. But it will be so, When the mind gathers up its truth within it.

Remember the great festival to-morrow, In which you rank amidst our chiefest nobles, 540

As well as your brave son; and smooth your aspect,

Nor in the general orison of thanks For bloodshed stopt, let blood you shed not rise, A cloud, upon your thoughts. This were to be Too sensitive. Take comfort, and forget

Such things, and leave remorse unto the guilty. [Exeunt.]

ACT V

SCENE I.—A large and magnificent Gothic Hall in the Castle of Siegendorf, decorated with Trophies, Banners, and Arms of that family.

Enter ARNHEIM and MEISTER, Attendants of COUNT SIEGENDORF.

Arn. Be quick! the count will soon return: the ladies

Already are at the portal. Have you sent The messengers in search of him he seeks for?

Meis. I have, in all directions, over Prague,

As far as the man's dress and figure could By your description track him. The devil take 6 These revels and processions! All the pleasure (If such there be) must fall to the spectators. I'm sure none doth to us who make the show. Arn. Go to! my lady countess comes.

Meis. I'd rather 10 Ride a day's hunting on an outworn jade,

Than follow in the train of a great man, In these dull pageantries.

Arn. Begone! and rain Within. [Exeunt.]

Enter the COUNTESS JOSEPHINE SIEGENDORF and IDA STRALENHEIM.

Jos. Well, Heaven be praised! the show is over.

Ida. How can you say so? Never have I dreamt 15

Of aught so beautiful. The flowers, the boughs,

The banners, and the nobles, and the knights,

The gems, the robes, the plumes, the happy faces,

The coursers, and the incense, and the sun
Streaming through the stain'd windows, even the tombs, 20
Which look'd so calm, and the celestial hymns,
Which seem'd as if they rather came from
heaven
Than mounted there. The bursting organ's peal
Rolling on high like an harmonious
thunder;
The white robes and the lifted eyes; the
world 25
At peace! and all at peace with one another!
Oh, my sweet mother!

[Embracing JOSEPHINE.
Jos. My beloved child!
For such, I trust, thou shalt be shortly.

Ida. Oh!
I am so already. Feel how my heart beats!
Jos. It does, my love; and never may it throb 30
With aught more bitter.

Ida. Never shall it do so!
How should it? What should make us grieve? I hate
To hear of sorrow: how can we be sad,
Who love each other so entirely? You,
The count, and Ulric, and your daughter
Ida. 35

Jos. Poor child!
Ida. Do you pity me?
Jos. No: I but envy,
And that in sorrow, not in the world's
sense
Of the universal vice, if one vice be
More general than another.

Ida. I'll not hear
A word against a world which still contains 40
You and my Ulric. Did you ever see Aught like him? How he tower'd amongst them all!
How all eyes follow'd him! The flowers fell faster—
Rain'd from each lattice at his feet, me-
thought,
Than before all the rest; and where he trod 45
I dare be sworn that they grow still, nor e'er
Will wither.

Jos. You will spoil him, little flatterer,
If he should hear you.

Ida. But he never will.
I dare not say so much to him—I fear
him.

Jos. Why so? he loves you well.
Ida. But I can never 50 Shape my thoughts of him into words to
him:
Besides, he sometimes frightens me.

Jos. How so?

Ida. A cloud comes o'er his blue eyes suddenly,
Yet he says nothing.

Jos. It is nothing: all men, 54
Especially in these dark troublous times,
Have much to think of.

Ida. But I cannot think
Of aught save him.

Jos. Yet there are other men,
In the world's eye, as goodly. There's,
for instance,
The young Count Waldorf, who scarce once withdrew

His eyes from yours to-day.

Ida. I did not see him 60
But Ulric. Did you not see at the moment
When all knelt, and I wept? and yet me-
thought,
Through my fast tears, though they were thick and warm,

I saw him smiling on me.

Jos. I could not See aught save heaven, to which my eyes were rais'd, 65

Together with the people's.

Ida. I thought too
Of heaven, although I look'd on Ulric.

Jos. Come,
Let us retire! they will be here anon
Expectant of the banquet. We will lay Aside these nodding plumes and dragging trains. 70

Ida. And, above all, these stiff and heavy jewels,
Which make my head and heart ache, as both throb

Beneath their glitter o'er my brow and zone.

Dear mother, I am with you.

Enter COUNT SIEGENDORF, in full dress, from the solemnity, and LUDWIG.

Sieg. Is he not found?

Lud. Strict search is making everywhere; and if 75
The man be in Prague, be sure he will be
found.

Sieg. Where's Ulric?

Lud. He rode round the other way
With some young nobles; but he left them
soon;

And, if I err not, not a minute since
I heard his excellency, with his train, 80
Gallop o'er the west drawbridge.

Enter ULRIC, splendidly dressed.

Sieg. [to LUDWIG]. See they cease not Their quest of him I have described.

[Exit LUDWIG.
Oh, Ulric!

How have I long'd for thee!

Ulric. Your wish is granted—

Behold me!

Sieg. I have seen the murderer.

Ulr. Whom? Where?

Sieg. The Hungarian, who slew Stralenheim. 85

Ulr. You dream.

Sieg. I live! and as I live, I saw him—
Heard him! he dared to utter even my name.

Ulr. What name?

Sieg. Werner! 'twas mine.

Ulr. It must be so
No more: forget it.

Sieg. Never! never! all
My destinies were woven in that name:
It will not be engraved upon my tomb,
But it may lead me there.

Ulr. To the point—the Hungarian?

Sieg. Listen!—The church was throng'd: the hymn was raised;
'Te Deum' peal'd from nations rather
than

From choirs, in one great cry of 'God be praised,' 95

For one day's peace, after thrice ten dread
years,

Each bloodier than the former: I arose,
With all the nobles, and as I look'd down
Along the lines of lifted faces,—from Our banner'd and escutcheon'd gallery, I Saw, like a flash of lightning (for I saw A moment and no more), what struck me sightless

To all else—the Hungarian's face! I grew Sick; and when I recover'd from the mist
Which curl'd about my senses, and again Look'd down, I saw him not. The thanksgiving 106

Was over, and we march'd back in procession.

Ulr. Continue.

Sieg. When we reach'd the Muldau's bridge,

The joyous crowd above, the numberless Barks mann'd with revellers in their best garbs, 110

Which shot along the glancing tide below,
The decorated street, the long array,
The clashing music, and the thundering
Of far artillery, which seem'd to bid
A long and loud farewell to its great doings, 115

The standards o'er me, and the tramlings
round,

The roar of rushing thousands,—all—all
could not

Chase this man from my mind, although my senses

No longer held him palpable.

Ulr. You saw him
No more, then?

Sieg. I look'd, as a dying soldier 120
Looks at a draught of water, for this man;
But still I saw him not; but in his stead—

Ulr. What in his stead?

Sieg. My eye for ever fell

Upon your dancing crest; the loftiest,
As on the loftiest and the loveliest head,
It rose the highest of the stream of plumes,
Which overflow'd the glittering streets of Prague.

Ulr. What's this to the Hungarian?

Sieg. Much; for I

Had almost then forgot him in my son;
When just as the artillery ceased, and paused 130

The music, and the crowd embraced in lieu
Of shouting, I heard in a deep, low voice, Distinct and keener far upon my ear
Than the late cannon's volume, this word—'Werner!'

Ulr. Utter'd by—

Sieg. Him! I turn'd—and saw—
and fell. 135

Ulr. And wherefore? Were you seen?

Sieg. The officious care
Of those around me dragg'd me from the
spot,

Seeing my faintness, ignorant of the cause:
You, too, were too remote in the procession

(The old nobles being divided from their children) 140

To aid me.

Ulr. But I'll aid you now.

Sieg. In what?

Ulr. In searching for this man, or—

When he's found,

What shall we do with him?

Sieg. I know not that.

Ulr. Then wherefore seek?

Sieg. Because I cannot rest Till he is found. His fate, and Stralenheim's, 145

And ours, seem intertwined! nor can be Unravell'd, till—

Enter an ATTENDANT

Atten. A stranger to wait on Your excellency.

Sieg. Who?

Atten. He gave no name.

Sieg. Admit him, ne'ertheless.

[The ATTENDANT introduces GABOR, and afterwards exit.

Ah!

Gab. 'Tis then Werner!

Sieg. [haughtily]. The same you knew,
sir, by that name; and you! 150

Gab. [looking round]. I recognise you both: father and son,

It seems. Count, I have heard that you,
or yours,

Have lately been in search of me: I am
here.

Sieg. I have sought you, and have found you: you are charged

(Your own heart may inform you why) with such 155

A crime as—

[He pauses.

Gab. Give it utterance, and then I'll meet the consequences.

Sieg. You shall do so—Unless—

Gab. First, who accuses me?
Sieg. All things,

If not all men: the universal rumour—
My own presence on the spot—the place—the time— 160

And every speck of circumstance unite
To fix the blot on you.

Gab. And on me only?
Pause ere you answer: is no other name
Save mine, stain'd in this business?

Sieg. Trifling villain!
Who play'st with thine own guilt! Of all that breathe 165

Thou best dost know the innocence of him
'Gainst whom thy breath would blow thy bloody slander.

But I will talk no further with a wretch,
Further than justice asks. Answer at once,
And without quibbling, to my charge.

Gab. 'Tis false! 170
Sieg. Who says so?

Gab. I,
Sieg. And how disprove it?

Gab. By
The presence of the murderer.

Sieg. Name him.
Gab. He

May have more names than one. Your lordship had so

Once on a time.
Sieg. If you mean me, I dare
Your utmost.

Gab. You may do so, and in safety;
I know the assassin.

Sieg. Where is he?
Gab. [pointing to ULRIC]. Beside you!

[ULRIC rushes forward to attack
GABOR; SIEGENDORF interposes.

Sieg. Liar and fiend! but you shall not be slain;

These walls are mine, and you are safe within them. [He turns to ULRIC.

Ulric, repel this calumny, as I Will do. I avow it is a growth so monstrous, 180

I could not deem it earth-born: but be

calm;
It will refute itself. But touch him not.

[ULRIC endeavours to compose himself.
Gab. Look at him, count, and then
hear me.

Sieg. [first to GABOR, and then looking at ULRIC]. I hear thee.

My God! you look—Ulric. How?

Sieg. As on that dread night,
When we met in the garden.

Ulric. [composes himself]. It is nothing.
Gab. Count, you are bound to hear me. I came hither 186

Not seeking you, but sought. When I knelt down

Amidst the people in the church, I dream'd
not

To find the beggar'd Werner in the seat
Of senators and princes; but you have call'd me, 190

And we have met.
Sieg. Go on, sir.

Gab. Ere I do so,
Allow me to inquire, who profited
By Stralenheim's death? Was't I—as poor as ever;

And poorer by suspicion on my name!
The baron lost in that last outrage neither Jewels nor gold; his life alone was sought,—
A life which stood between the claims of others

To honours and estates scarce less than princely.

Sieg. These hints, as vague as vain, attach no less

To me than to my son.
Gab. I can't help that. 200

But let the consequence alight on him
Who feels himself the guilty one among us.

I speak to you, Count Siegendorf, because I know you innocent, and deem you just.

But ere I can proceed—dare you protect
me? 205

Dare you command me?
[SIEGENDORF first looks at the Hungarian,
and then at ULRIC, who has unbuckled his sabre, and is drawing lines with it on the floor—still in its sheath.

Ulric. [looks at his father, and says,] Let the man go on!

Gab. I am unarm'd, count—bid your son lay down

His sabre.
Ulric. [offers it to him contemptuously].

Take it.
Gab. No, sir, 'tis enough

That we are both unarm'd—I would not
choose

To wear a steel which may be stain'd with
more 210

Blood than came there in battle.
Ulric. [casts the sabre from him in contempt]. It—or some Such other weapon, in my hand—spared

yours

Once, when disarm'd and at my mercy.
Gab. True—

I have not forgotten it: you spared me for Your own especial purpose—to sustain
An ignominy not my own.

Ulric. Proceed.
The tale is doubtless worthy the relater.

But is it of my father to hear further?
[To SIEGENDORF.

Sieg. [takes his son by the hand]. My son, I know my own innocence, and doubt not

Of yours—but I have promised this man patience; 220

Let him continue.

Gab. I will not detain you,
By speaking of myself much: I began Life early—and am what the world has made me.

At Frankfort on the Oder, where I pass'd
A winter in obscurity, it was 225
My chance at several places of resort (Which I frequented sometimes, but not often)

To hear related a strange circumstance
In February last. A martial force, Sent by the state, had, after strong resistance, 230

Secured a band of desperate men, supposed

Marauders from the hostile camp.—They proved,

However, not to be so—but banditti
Whom either accident or enterprise Had carried from their usual haunt—the forests 235

Which skirt Bohemia—even into Lusatia.
Many amongst them were reported of High rank—and martial law slept for a
time.

At last they were escorted o'er the frontiers,

And placed beneath the civil jurisdiction Of the free town of Frankfort. Of their
fate 241

I know no more.

Sieg. And what is this to Ulric?

Gab. Amongst them there was said to be one man

Of wonderful endowments:—birth and
fortune,

Youth, strength, and beauty, almost superhuman, 245

And courage as unrivall'd, were pro-
claim'd

His by the public rumour; and his sway,
Not only over his associates, but
His judges, was attributed to witchcraft,
Such was his influence: I have no great
faith 250

In any magic save that of the mine—
I therefore deem'd him wealthy.—But my
soul

Was roused with various feelings to seek
out

This prodigy, if only to behold him.

Sieg. And did you so?

Gab. You'll hear. Chance favour'd
me: 255

A popular affray in the public square Drew crowds together—it was one of
those

Occasions where men's souls look out of
them,

And show them as they are—even in their
faces:

The moment my eye met his, I exclaim'd,
'This is the man!' though he was then, as
since, 261

With the nobles of the city. I felt sure I had not err'd, and watch'd him long and nearly;

I noted down his form—his gesture—
features,

Stature, and bearing—and amidst them
all, 265

'Midst every natural and acquired distinc-
tion,

I could discern, methought, the assassin's
eye

And gladiator's heart.

Ulr. [smiling]. The tale sounds well.

Gab. And may sound better.—He appear'd to me

One of those beings to whom Fortune
bends, 270

As she doth to the daring—and on whom
The fates of others oft depend; besides,

An indescribable sensation drew me
Near to this man, as if my point of fortune

Was to be fix'd by him.—There I was
wrong. 275

Sieg. And may not be right now.

Gab. I follow'd him,

Solicited his notice—and obtain'd it—Though not his friendship:—it was his intention

To leave the city privately—we left it Together—and together we arrived 280

In the poor town where Werner was con-
ceal'd,

And Stralenheim was succour'd—Now we are on

The verge—dare you hear further?
Sieg. I must do so—

Or I have heard too much.

Gab. I saw in you

A man above his station—and if not 285
So high, as now I find you, in my then

Conceptions, 'twas that I had rarely seen Men such as you appear'd in height of
mind,

In the most high of worldly rank; you
were

Poor, even to all save rags; I would have shared 290

My purse, though slender, with you—you refused it.

Sieg. Doth my refusal make a debt to
you,

That thus you urge it?

Gab. Still you owe me something,

Though not for that; and I owed you my safety, 294

At least my seeming safety, when the slaves
Of Stralenheim pursued me on the grounds

That I had robb'd him.

Sieg. I conceal'd you—I,

Whom and whose house you arraign, reviving viper!

Gab. I accuse no man—save in my defence.

You, count, have made yourself accuser—
judge: 300

Your hall's my court, your heart is my tribunal.

Be just, and I'll be merciful!

Sieg. You merciful?—
You! Base calumniator!

Gab. I. 'Twill rest
With me at last to be so. You conceal'd me—

In secret passages known to yourself, 305
You said, and to none else. At dead of night,

Weary with watching in the dark, and dubious

Of tracing back my way, I saw a glimmer,
Through distant crannies, of a twinkling light:

I follow'd it, and reach'd a door—a secret
Portal—which open'd to the chamber,
where, 311

With cautious hand and slow, having first undone

As much as made a crevice of the fastening,
I look'd through and beheld a purple bed,
And on it Stralenheim!—

Sieg. Asleep! And yet
You slew him!—Wretch!

Gab. He was already slain, 316
And bleeding like a sacrifice. My own Blood became ice.

Sieg. But he was all alone!
You saw none else? You did not see the—
[He pauses from agitation.]

Gab. No.
He, whom you dare not name, nor even I Scarce dare to recollect, was not then in The chamber.

Sieg. [to ULRIC]. Then, my boy! thou art guiltless still— 322

Thou bad'st me say I was so once—Oh!
now

Do thou as much!

Gab. Be patient! I can not Recede now, though it shake the very walls Which frown above us. You remember,— or 326

If not, your son does,—that the locks were changed

Beneath his chief inspection on the morn Which led to this same night: how he had enter'd

He best knows—but within an antechamber, 330

The door of which was half ajar, I saw A man who wash'd his bloody hands, and
oft

With stern and anxious glance gazed back
upon

The bleeding body—but it moved no more.
Sieg. Oh! God of fathers!

Gab. I beheld his features

As I see yours—but yours they were not,
though 336

Resembling them—behold them in Count Ulric's!

Distinct as I beheld them, though the expression

Is not now what it then was!—but it was so When I first charged him with the crime—so lately. 340

Sieg. This is so—
Gab. [interrupting him]. Nay—but hear me to the end!

Now you must do so.—I conceived myself
Betray'd by you and him (for now I saw
There was some tie between you) into this

Pretended den of refuge, to become 345
The victim of your guilt; and my first
thought

Was vengeance; but, though arm'd with a short poniard

(Having left my sword without), I was no
match

For him at any time, as had been proved
That morning—either in address or force.

I turn'd and fled—i' the dark: chancer rather
than 351

Skill made me gain the secret door of the
hall,

And thence the chamber where you slept:
if I

Had found you waking, Heaven alone can tell

What vengeance and suspicion might have prompted; 355

But ne'er slept guilt as Werner slept that
night.

Sieg. And yet I had horrid dreams! and such brief sleep,

The stars had not gone down when I awoke.
Why didst thou spare me? I dreamt of my father—

And now my dream is out!

Gab. 'Tis not my fault,
If I have read it.—Well! I fled and hid
me— 361

Chance led me here after so many moons—
And show'd me Werner in Count Siegendorf!

Werner, whom I had sought in huts in vain,
Inhabited the palace of a sovereign! 365

You sought me and have found me—now you know

My secret, and may weigh its worth.

Sieg. [after a pause]. Indeed!

Gab. Is it revenge or justice which inspires

Your meditation?
Sieg. Neither—I was weighing
The value of your secret.

Gab. You shall know it
At once:—When you were poor, and I, though poor, 371

Rich enough to relieve such poverty

As might have envied mine, I offer'd you

My purse—you would not share it:—I'll be franker

With you: you are wealthy, noble, trusted
by 375

The imperial powers—you understand me?

Sieg. Yes.

Gab. Not quite. You think me venal, and scarce true:

'Tis no less true, however, that my fortunes
Have made me both at present. You shall aid me:

I would have aided you—and also have Been somewhat damaged in my name to
save 381

Yours and your son's. Weigh well what I have said.

Sieg. Dare you await the event of a few minutes?

Deliberation?

Gab. [casts his eyes on ULRIC, who is leaning against a pillar]. If I should do so?

Sieg. I pledge my life for yours. Withdraw into 385

This tower. [Opens a turret door.]

Gab. [hesitatingly]. This is the second safe asylum

You have offer'd me.

Sieg. And was not the first so?

Gab. I know not that even now—but will approve

The second. I have still a further shield.—
I did not enter Prague alone; and should I
Be put to rest with Stralenheim, there are Some tongues without will wag in my behalf.

Be brief in your decision!

Sieg. I will be so.—

My word is sacred and irrevocable
Within these walls, but it extends no further. 395

Gab. I'll take it for so much.

Sieg. [points to ULRIC's sabre, still upon the ground]. Take also that—

I saw you eye it eagerly, and him Distrustfully.

Gab. [takes up the sabre]. I will; and so provide

To sell my life—not cheaply.

[GABOR goes into the turret, which SIEGENDORF closes.]

Sieg. [advances to ULRIC]. Now, Count
Ulric!

For son I dare not call thee—What say'st
thou? 400

Ulr. His tale is true.

Sieg. True, monster!

Ulr. Most true, father!

And you did well to listen to it: what We know, we can provide against. He must

Be silenced.

Sieg. Ay, with half of my domains;
And with the other half, could he and thou Unsay this villany.

Ulr. It is no time 406
For trifling or dissembling. I have said His story's true; and he too must be silenced.

Sieg. How so?

Ulr. As Stralenheim is. Are you so dull

As never to have hit on this before? 410

When we met in the garden, what except Discovery in the act could make me know
His death? Or had the prince's household
been

Then summon'd, would the cry for the police 414

Been left to such a stranger? Or should I Have loiter'd on the way? Or could you,
Werner,

The object of the baron's hate and fears,
Have fled, unless by many an hour before Suspicion woke? I sought and fathom'd
you,

Doubting if you were false or feeble; I 420
Perceived you were the latter: and yet so Confiding have I found you, that I doubted
At times your weakness.

Sieg. Parricide! no less Than common stabber! What deed of my
life,

Or thought of mine, could make you deem me fit 425

For your accomplice?

Ulr. Father, do not raise
The devil you cannot lay between us. This Is time for union and for action, not For family disputes. While you were tortured,

Could I be calm? Think you that I have
heard 430

This fellow's tale without some feeling?—
You

Have taught me feeling for you and myself;
For whom or what else did you ever teach
it?

Sieg. Oh! my dead father's curse! 'tis working now.

Ulr. Let it work on! the grave will keep it down! 435

Ashes are feeble foes: it is more easy
To baffle such, than countermine a mole,
Which winds its blind but living path beneath you.

Yet hear me still!—If you condemn me, yet Remember who hath taught me once too
often 440

To listen to him! Who proclaim'd to me That there were crimes made venial by the occasion?

That passion was our nature? that the goods 443

Of Heaven waited on the goods of fortune?
Who show'd me his humanity secured
By his nerves only? Who deprived me of All power to vindicate myself and race
In open day? By his disgrace which stamp'd

(It might be) bastardy on me, and on Himself—a felon's brand! The man who is At once both warm and weak invites to
deeds 451

He longs to do, but dare not. Is it strange
That I should act what you could think?

We have done
With right and wrong: and now must only ponder

Upon effects, not causes. Stralenheim, Whose life I saved from impulse, as, un-
known, 456

I would have saved a peasant's or a dog's,
I slew

Known as our foe—but not from vengeance. He

Was a rock in our way which I cut through As doth the bolt, because it stood between
us 460

And our true destination—but not idly.

As stranger I preserved him, and he owed me

His life: when due, I but resumed the debt.

He, you, and I stood o'er a gulf wherein

I have plunged our enemy. You kindled
first 465

The torch—you show'd the path: now trace me that

Of safety—or let me!

Sieg. I have done with life!

Ulr. Let us have done with that which cankers life—

Familiar feuds and vain recriminations

Of things which cannot be undone. We
have 470

No more to learn or hide: I know no fear,

And have within these very walls men who

(Although you know them not) dare venture all things.

You stand high with the state; what passes
here

Will not excite her too great curiosity: 475

Keep your own secret, keep a steady eye,

Stir not, and speak not;—leave the rest to
me:

We must have no third babblers thrust between us. [Exit ULRIC.]

Sieg. [solus]. Am I awake? are these my fathers' halls?

And you—my son? My son! mine! who have ever 480

Abhor'd both mystery and blood, and yet

Am plunged into the deepest hell of both!

I must be speedy, or more will be shed—

The Hungarian's!—Ulr.—he hath partisans,

It seems: I might have guess'd as much.

Oh fool! 485

Wolves prowl in company. He hath the key

(As I too) of the opposite door which leads

Into the turret. Now then! or once more

To be the father of fresh crimes, no less Than of the criminal! Ho! Gabor! Gabor!

[Exit into the turret, closing the door after him.]

SCENE II.—The Interior of the Turret.

GABOR and SIEGENDORF.

Gab. Who calls?

Sieg. I—Siegendorf! Take these and
fly!

Lose not a moment!

[Tears off a diamond star and other jewels, and thrusts them into GABOR's hand.]

Gab. What am I to do

With these?

Sieg. Whate'er you will: sell them,
or hoard,

And prosper; but delay not, or you are lost!

Gab. You pledged your honour for my safety!

Sieg. And 5

Must thus redeem it. Fly! I am not master,

It seems, of my own castle—of my own

Retainers—nay, even of these very walls,

Or I would bid them fall and crush me! Fly!

Or you will be slain by—

Gab. Is it even so? 10

Farewell, then! Recollect, however, count,

You sought this fatal interview!

Sieg. I did:

Let it not be more fatal still!—Begone!

Gab. By the same path I enter'd?

Sieg. Yes; that's safe still;

But loiter not in Prague;—you do not
know 15

With whom you have to deal.

Gab. I know too well—

And knew it ere yourself, unhappy sire!

Farewell! [Exit GABOR.]

Sieg. [solus and listening]. He hath clear'd the staircase. Ah! I hear

The door sound loud behind him! He is safe!

Safe!—Oh, my father's spirit!—I am faint— 20

[He leans down upon a stone seat, near the wall of the tower, in a drooping posture.]

Enter ULRIC, with others armed, and with weapons drawn.

Ulr. Despatch!—he's there!

Lud. The count, my lord!

Ulr. [recognising SIEGENDORF]. You here, sir!

Sieg. Yes; if you want another victim,
strike!

Ulr. [seeing him stript of his jewels].

Where is the ruffian who hath plunder'd
you?

Vassals, despatch in search of him! You see
'Twas as I said—the wretch hath stript my

father 25

Of jewels which might form a prince's heirloom!

Away. I'll follow you forthwith.

[Exeunt all but SIEGENDORF and ULRIC.]

What's this?

Where is the villain?

Sieg. There are two, sir: which Are you in quest of?

Ulr. Let us hear no more Of this: he must be found. You have not let him

Escape?

Sieg. He's gone.

Ulr. With your connivance?

Sieg. With
My fullest, freest aid.

Ulr. Then fare you well!

[ULRIC is going.]

Sieg. Stop! I command—entreat—implore! Oh, Ulric!

Will you then leave me?

Ulr. What! remain to be Denounced—drag'd, it may be, in chains;
and all

By your inherent weakness, half-humanity,
Selfish remorse, and temporising pity,
That sacrifices your whole race to save
A wretch to profit by our ruin! No, count, Henceforth you have no son!

Sieg. I never had one; 40
And would you ne'er had borne the useless
name!

Where will you go? I would not send you forth Without protection.

Ulr. Leave that unto me.
I am not alone; nor merely the vain heir
Of your domains; a thousand, ay, ten thousand

Swords, hearts, and hands are mine. 45

Sieg. The foresters!
With whom the Hungarian found you first at Frankfort!

Ulr. Yes—men—who are worthy of the name! Go tell

Your senators that they look well to Prague;

Their feast of peace was early for the times;
There are more spirits abroad than have been laid 51
With Wallenstein!

Enter JOSEPHINE and IDA.

Jos. What is't we hear? My Siegendorf!

Thank Heaven. I see you safe!

Sieg. Safe!

Ida. Yes, dear father!

Sieg. No, no; I have no children: never
more 54
Call me by that worst name of parent.

Jos. What
Means my good lord?

Sieg. That you have given birth
To a demon!

Ida [taking ULRIC's hand]. Who shall dare say this of Ulric?

Sieg. Ida, beware! there's blood upon that hand.

Ida [stooping to kiss it]. I'd kiss it off, though it were mine.

Sieg. It is so! 59

Ulr. Away! it is your father's!

[Exit ULRIC.
Ida. Oh, great God!

And I have loved this man!

[IDA falls senseless—JOSEPHINE stands speechless with horror.]

Sieg. The wretch hath slain Them both!—My Josephine! we are now
alone!

Would we had ever been so!—All is over For me!—Now open wide, my sire, thy
grave; 64

Thy curse hath dug it deeper for thy son
In mine!—The race of Siegendorf is past!

THE DEFORMED TRANSFORMED

A DRAMA

ADVERTISEMENT

THIS production is founded partly on the story of a novel called 'The Three Brothers', published many years ago, from which M. G. Lewis's 'Wood Demon' was also taken; and partly on the 'Faust' of the great Goethe. The present publication contains the two first Parts only, and the opening chorus of the third. The rest may perhaps appear hereafter.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ

STRANGER, afterwards CÆSAR.
ARNOLD.
BOURBON.
PHILIBERT.
CELLINI.

BERTHA.
OLIMPIA.

Spirits, Soldiers, Citizens of Rome, Priests, Peasants, &c.

PART I

SCENE I.—A Forest.

Enter ARNOLD and his mother BERTHA.

Bert. Out, hunchback!

Arn. I was born so, mother!

Bert. Out,
Thou incubus! Thou nightmare! Of seven
sons,

The sole abortion!

Arn. Would that I had been so,
And never seen the light!

Bert. I would so, too!

But as thou hast—hence, hence—and do thy best!

That back of thine may bear its burthen;

More high, if not so broad as that of others.

Arn. It bears its burthen;—but, my heart! Will it

Sustain that which you lay upon it, mother? I love, or, at the least, I loved you: nothing Save you, in nature, can love aught like me. You nursed me—do not kill me!

Bert. Yes—I nursed thee, Because thou wert my first-born, and I knew not

If there would be another unlike thee, That monstrous sport of nature. But get hence,

And gather wood!

Arn. I will: but when I bring it, Speak to me kindly. Though my brothers are

So beautiful and lusty, and as free As the free chase they follow, do not spurn me;

Our milk has been the same.

Bert. As is the hedgehog's, Which sucks at midnight from the wholesome dam

Of the young bull, until the milkmaid finds The nipple next day sore and udder dry.

Call not thy brothers brethren! Call me not Mother; for if I brought thee forth, it was As foolish hens at times hatch vipers, by Sitting upon strange eggs. Out, urchin,

[Exit BERTHA.]

Arn. [solus]. Oh, mother!—She is gone, and I must do

Her bidding;—wearily but willingly I would fulfil it, could I only hope

A kind word in return. What shall I do?

[ARNOLD begins to cut wood: in doing this he wounds one of his hands.]

My labour for the day is over now.

Accursed be this blood that flows so fast; For double curses will be my meed now

At home—What home? I have no home, no kin,

No kind—not made like other creatures, or To share their sports or pleasures. Must I bleed, too, Like them? Oh, that each drop which falls to earth Would rise a snake to sting them, as they have stung me!

Or that the devil, to whom they liken me, Would aid his likeness! If I must partake

His form, why not his power? Is it because I have not his will too? For one kind word

From her who bore me would still reconcile me

Even to this hateful aspect. Let me wash The wound.

[ARNOLD goes to a spring, and stoops to wash his hand: he starts back.]

They are right; and Nature's mirror shows me

What she hath made me. I will not look on it

Again, and scarce dare think on't. Hideous wretch

That I am! The very waters mock me with My horrid shadow—like a demon placed

Deep in the fountain to scare back the cattle From drinking therein. [He pauses.]

And shall I live on, A burden to the earth, myself, and shame

Unto what brought me into life! Thou blood,

Which flow'st so freely from a scratch, let me

Try if thou wilt not in a fuller stream Pour forth my woes for ever with thyself

On earth, to which I will restore at once This hateful compound of her atoms, and

Resolve back to her elements, and take The shape of any reptile save myself,

And make a world for myriads of new worms!

This knife! now let me prove if it will sever This wither'd slip of nature's nightshade—

my Vile form—from the creation, as it hath

The green bough from the forest.

[ARNOLD places the knife in the ground, with the point upwards.]

Now 'tis set, And I can fall upon it. Yet one glance

On the fair day, which sees no foul thing like Myself, and the sweet sun which warm'd me, but

In vain. The birds—how joyously they sing! So let them, for I would not be lamented:

But let their merriest notes be Arnold's knell;

The fallen leaves my monument; the murmur

Of the near fountain my sole elegy. Now, knife, stand firmly, as I fain would

fall!

[As he rushes to throw himself upon the knife, his eye is suddenly caught by the fountain, which seems in motion.]

The fountain moves without a wind: but shall

The ripple of a spring change my resolve? No. Yet it moves again! The waters stir,

Not as with air, but by some subterranean And rocking power of the internal world.

What's here? A mist! No more?—

[A cloud comes from the fountain. He stands gazing upon it: it is dispelled, and a tall black man comes towards him.]

Arn. What would you? Speak! 81 Spirit or man?

Stran. As man is both, why not Say both in one?

Arn. Your form is man's, and yet
You may be devil.

Stran. So many men are that Which is so call'd or thought, that you may add me 85
To which you please, without much wrong to either.

But come: you wish to kill yourself;—
pursue
Your purpose.

Arn. You have interrupted me.

Stran. What is that resolution which can e'er

Be interrupted? If I be the devil 90
You deem, a single moment would have made you

Mine, and for ever, by your suicide;
And yet my coming saves you.

Arn. I said not
You were the demon, but that your approach
Was like one. 95

Stran. Unless you keep company With him (and you seem scarce used to such high

Society), you can't tell how he approaches;
And for his aspect, look upon the fountain,
And then on me, and judge which of us
twain 99

Looks likest what the boors believe to be
Their cloven-footed terror.

Arn. Do you—dare you
To taunt me with my born deformity?

Stran. Were I to taunt a buffalo with this Cloven foot of thine, or the swift drome-dary 104

With thy sublime of humps, the animals
Would revel in the compliment. And yet Both beings are more swift, more strong,
more mighty

In action and endurance than thyself,
And all the fierce and fair of the same kind
With thee. Thy form is natural: 'twas only Nature's mistaken largess to bestow
The gifts which are of others upon man.

Arn. Give me the strength then of the buffalo's foot, 113

When he spurs high the dust, beholding his Near enemy; or let me have the long
And patient swiftness of the desert-ship,
The helmless dromedary!—and I'll bear Thy fiendish sarcasm with a saintly patience. 118

Stran. I will.

Arn. [with surprise]. Thou canst?

Stran. Perhaps. Would you aught else?

Arn. Thou mockest me.

Stran. Not I. Why should I mock
What all are mocking? That's poor sport,
methinks. 121

To talk to thee in human language (for Thou canst not yet speak mine), the forester Hunts not the wretched coney, but the boar,
Or wolf, or lion, leaving paltry game 125

THE DEFORMED TRANSFORMED

To petty burghers, who leave once a year
Their walls, to fill their household caldrons
with

Such scullion prey. The meanest gibe at
thee,— 128

Now I can mock the mightiest.

Arn. Then waste not Thy time on me: I seek thee not.

Stran. Your thoughts
Are not far from me. Do not send me back:
I'm not so easily recall'd to do Good service.

Arn. What wilt thou do for me?

Stran. Change
Shapes with you, if you will, since yours so irks you; 134

Or form you to your wish in any shape.

Arn. Oh! then you are indeed the demon,
for

Nought else would wittingly wear mine.

Stran. I'll show thee
The brightest which the world e'er bore, and give thee 138

Thy choice.

Arn. On what condition?

Stran. There's a question!
An hour ago you would have given your soul
To look like other men, and now you pause
To wear the form of heroes.

Arn. No; I will not.
I must not compromise my soul.

Stran. What soul,
Worth naming so, would dwell in such a carcass?

Arn. 'Tis an aspiring one, whate'er the tenement 145

In which it is mislodge'd. But name your compact:

Must it be sign'd in blood?

Stran. Not in your own.

Arn. Whose blood then?

Stran. We will talk of that hereafter.
But I'll be moderate with you, for I see Great things within you. You shall have no bond 150

But your own will, no contract save your deeds.

Are you content?

Arn. I take thee at thy word.

Stran. Now then!

[The Stranger approaches the fountain, and turns to ARNOLD.]

A little of your blood.
For what?

Stran. To mingle with the magic of the waters,

And make the charm effective.

Arn. [holding out his wounded arm]. Take it all. 155

Stran. Not now. A few drops will suffice for this.

[The Stranger takes some of ARNOLD'S blood in his hand, and casts it into the fountain.]

Shadows of beauty!
 Shadows of power!
 Rise to your duty—
 This is the hour!
 Walk lovely and pliant
 From the depth of this fountain,
 As the cloud-shapen giant Bestrides the Hartz Mountain.
 Come as ye were, 165
 That our eyes may behold
 The model in air
 Of the form I will mould,
 Bright as the Iris
 When ether is spann'd;— 170
 Such his desire is, [Pointing to ARNOLD.]
 Such my command!
 Demons heroic—
 Demons who wore
 The form of the stoic 175
 Or sophist of yore—
 From Macedon's boy,
 To each high Roman's picture,
 Who breathed to destroy— 180
 Shadows of beauty!
 Shadows of power!
 Up to your duty—
 This is the hour! 184
 [Various phantoms arise from the waters, and pass in succession before the Stranger and ARNOLD.
Arn. What do I see?
Stran. The black-eyed Roman, with The eagle's beak between those eyes which ne'er
 Beheld a conqueror, or look'd along
 The land he made not Rome's, while Rome
 became
 His, and all theirs who heir'd his very name.
Arn. The phantom's bald; my quest is beauty. Could I 190
 Inherit but his fame with his defects!
Stran. His brow was girt with laurels more than hairs.
 You see his aspect—choose it, or reject.
 I can but promise you his form; his fame
 Must be long sought and fought for.
Arn. I will fight, too, 195
 But not as a mock Cæsar. Let him pass;
 His aspect may be fair, but suits me not.
Stran. Then you are far more difficult to please
 Than Cato's sister, or than Brutus's mother,
 Or Cleopatra at sixteen—an age 200
 When love is not less in the eye than heart.
 But be it so! Shadow, pass on!
 [The phantom of Julius Cæsar disappears.
Arn. And can it be
 Be, that the man who shook the earth is
 gone,
 And left no footstep?
Stran. There you err. His substance Left graves enough, and woes enough, and
 fame 205

More than enough to track his memory;
 But for his shadow, 'tis no more than yours,
 Except a little longer and less crooked
 I' the sun. Behold another!
 [A second phantom passes.
Arn. Who is he?
Stran. He was the fairest and the bravest
 of 210
 Athenians. Look upon him well.
Arn. He is
 More lovely than the last. How beautiful!
Stran. Such was the curled son of Clini-as;—Wouldst thou
 Invest thee with his form? 215
Arn. Would that I had Been born with it! But since I may choose further,
 I will look further.
 [The shade of Alcibiades disappears.
Stran. Lo! behold again!
Arn. What! that low, swarthy, shortnosed, round-eyed satyr,
 With the wide nostrils and Silenus' aspect,
 The splay feet and low stature! I had better Remain that which I am. 220
Stran. And yet he was
 The earth's perfection of all mental beauty,
 And personification of all virtue. 222
 But you reject him?
Arn. If his form could bring me
 That which redeem'd it—no.
Stran. I have no power
 To promise that; but you may try, and find it Easier in such a form, or in your own.
Arn. No. I was not born for philosophy, Though I have that about me which has need on't. 228
 Let him fleet on.
Stran. Be air, thou hemlock-drinker!
 [The shadow of Socrates disappears: an- other rises.
Arn. What's here? whose broad brow and whose curly beard
 And manly aspect look like Hercules,
 Save that his jocund eye hath more of Bacchus 232
 Than the sad purger of the infernal world,
 Leaning dejected on his club of conquest,
 As if he knew the worthlessness of those
 For whom he had fought.
Stran. It was the man who lost
 The ancient world for love.
Arn. I cannot blame him,
 Since I have risk'd my soul because I find
 not 238
 That which he exchanged the earth for.
Stran. Since so far
 You seem congenial, will you wear his features?
Arn. No. As you leave me choice, I am difficult,
 If but to see the heroes I should ne'er
 Have seen else on this side of the dim shore
 Whence they float back before us. 240

Stran. Hence, triumvir, Thy Cleopatra's waiting.

[The shade of Antony disappears: another rises.]

Arn. Who is this?
Who truly looketh like a demigod, Blooming and bright, with golden hair, and stature,
If not more high than mortal, yet immortal
In all that nameless bearing of his limbs,
Which he wears as the sun his rays—a some-
thing 251
Which shines from him, and yet is but the flashing
Emanation of a thing more glorious still.
Was he e'er human only?

Stran. Let the earth speak,
If there be atoms of him left, or even 255
Of the more solid gold that form'd his urn.
Arn. Who was this glory of mankind?

Stran. The shame
Of Greece in peace, her thunderbolt in
war—

Demetrius the Macedonian, and Taker of cities.

Arn. Yet one shadow more.

Stran. [addressing the shadow]. Get thee to Lamia's lap!

[The shade of Demetrius Poliorcetes vanishes: another rises.]

I'll fit you still,
Fear not, my hunchback: if the shadows of
That which existed please not your nice taste,
I'll animate the ideal marble, till
Your soul be reconciled to her new gar-
ment. 265

Arn. Content! I will fix here.

Stran. I must commend Your choice. The god-like son of the sea-goddess,

The unshorn boy of Peleus, with his locks
As beautiful and clear as the amber waves
Of rich Pactolus, roll'd o'er sands of gold,
Softened by intervening crystal, and 271
Rippled like flowing waters by the wind,
All vow'd to Sperchius as they were—behold them!

And him—as he stood by Polixena,
With sanction'd and with soften'd love, before 275

The altar, gazing on his Trojan bride,
With some remorse within for Hector slain
And Priam weeping, mingled with deep
passion

For the sweet downcast virgin, whose young hand 279

Trembled in his who slew her brother. So He stood in the temple! Look upon him as Greece look'd her last upon her best, the instant

Ere Paris' arrow flew.

Arn. I gaze upon him
As if I were his soul, whose form shall soon Envelope mine.

THE DEFORMED TRANSFORMED

Stran. You have done well. The greatest Deformity should only barter with 286
The extremest beauty, if the proverb's true
Of mortals, that extremes meet.

Arn. Come! Be quick!
I am impatient.

Stran. As a youthful beauty
Before her glass. You both see what is not,
But dream it is what must be.

Arn. Must I wait?
Stran. No; that were a pity. But a word or two:

His stature is twelve cubits; would you so far Outstep these times, and be a Titan? Or (To talk canonically) wax a son 295
Of Anak?

Arn. Why not?

Stran. Glorious ambition!
I love thee most in dwarfs! A mortal of Philistine stature would have gladly pared
His own Goliath down to a slight David:
But thou, my manikin, wouldst soar a show
Rather than hero. Thou shalt be indulged,
If such be thy desire; and yet, by being
A little less removed from present men
In figure, thou canst sway them more; for all Would rise against thee now, as if to hunt
A new-found mammoth: and their cursed engines, 306

Their culverins, and so forth, would find
way

Through our friend's armour there, with greater ease
Than the adulterer's arrow through his heel,
Which Thetis had forgotten to baptize 310
In Styx.

Arn. Then let it be as thou deem'st best.

Stran. Thou shalt be beauteous as the thing thou seest,

And strong as what it was, and—

Arn. I ask not
For valour, since deformity is daring.
It is its essence to o'erake mankind 315
By heart and soul, and make itself the equal—

Ay, the superior of the rest. There is A spur in its halt movements, to become
All that the others cannot, in such things
As still are free to both, to compensate
For stepdame Nature's avarice at first.

They woo with fearless deeds the smiles of
fortune,
And oft, like Timour the lame Tartar, win
them.

Stran. Well spoken! and thou doubtless wilt remain

Form'd as thou art. I may dismiss the
mould 325

Of shadow, which must turn to flesh, to incase

This daring soul, which could achieve no less Without it.

Arn. Had no power presented me
The possibility of change, I would Have done the best which spirit may to

make 330
Its way with all deformity's dull, deadly Discouraging weight upon me, like a mountain,

In feeling, on my heart as on my shoulders—
A hateful and unsightly molehill, to The eyes of happier men. I would have
look'd 335

On beauty in that sex which is the type
Of all we know or dream of beautiful Beyond the world they brighten, with a sigh—

Not of love, but despair; nor sought to win, Though to a heart all love, what could not love me 340

In turn, because of this vile crooked clog, Which makes me lonely. Nay, I could have borne

It all, had not my mother spurn'd me from
her.

The she-bear licks her cubs into a sort Of shape;—my dam beheld my shape was hopeless. 345

Had she exposed me, like the Spartan, ere
I knew the passionate part of life, I had Been a clod of the valley,—happier nothing
Than what I am. But even thus, the lowest, Ugliest, and meanest of mankind, what courage 350

And perseverance could have done, per-
chance

Had made me something—as it has made heroes

Of the same mould as mine. You lately saw me

Master of my own life, and quick to quit it;
And he who is so is the master of 355
Whatever dreads to die.

Stran. Decide between What you have been, or will be.

Arn. I have done so.
You have open'd brighter prospects to my
eyes,

And sweeter to my heart. As I am now,
I might be fear'd, admired, respected, loved
Of all save those next to me, of whom I Would be beloved. As thou showest me
A choice of forms, I take the one I view.
Haste! haste!

Stran. And what shall I wear?

Arn. Surely, he Who can command all forms will choose the highest, 365

Something superior even to that which was Pelides now before us. Perhaps his Who slew him, that of Paris: or—still higher—

The poet's god, clothed in such limbs as are Themselves a poetry.

Stran. Less will content me; 370
For I, too, love a change.

Arn. Your aspect is Dusky, but not uncomely.

Stran. If I chose,
I might be whiter; but I have a pennant
For black—it is so honest, and besides Can neither blush with shame nor pale with fear; 375

But I have worn it long enough of late,
And now I'll take your figure.

Arn. Mine!

Stran. Yes. You

Shall change with Thetis' son, and I with Bertha,

Your mother's offspring. People have their tastes:

You have yours—I mine.

Arn. Despatch! Despatch!

Stran. Even so.

[The Stranger takes some earth and moulds it along the turf, and then addresses the phantom of Achilles.

Beautiful shadow

Of Thetis's boy!

Who sleeps in the meadow

Whose grass grows o'er Troy:

From the red earth, like Adam, 385

Thy likeness I shape,

As the being who made him,

Whose actions I ape.

Thou clay, be all glowing,

Till the rose in his cheek 390

Be as fair as, when blowing,

It wears its first streak!

Ye violets, I scatter,

Now turn into eyes!

And thou, sunshiny water, 395

Of blood take the guise!

Let these hyacinth boughs

Be his long flowing hair,

And wave o'er his brows

As thou waviest in air! 400

Let his heart be this marble

I tear from the rock!

But his voice as the warble

Of birds on yon oak!

Let his flesh be the purest 405

Of mould, in which grew

The lily-root surest,

And drank the best dew!

Let his limbs be the lightest

Which clay can compound, 410

And his aspect the brightest

On earth to be found!

Elements, near me,

Be mingled and stirr'd,

Know me, and hear me, 415

And leap to my word!

Sunbeams, awaken

This earth's animation!

'Tis done! He hath taken

His stand in creation! 420

[ARNOLD falls senseless; his soul passes into the shape of Achilles, which rises from the ground; while the phantom has disappeared, part by part, as the figure was formed from the earth.

Arn. [in his new form]. I love, and I shall be beloved! O, life!

At last I feel thee! Glorious spirit!

Stran. Stop!
What shall become of your abandon'd garment,

Yon hump, and lump, and clod of ugliness,
Which late you wore, or were?

Arn. Who cares? Let wolves
And vultures take it, if they will.

Stran. And if
They do, and are not scared by it, you'll say
It must be peace-time, and no better fare
Abroad i' the fields.

Arn. Let us but leave it there
No matter what becomes on 't.

Stran. That's ungracious,
If not ungrateful. Whatsoe'er it be,
It hath sustain'd your soul full many a day.

Arn. Ay, as the dunghill may conceal a gem

Which is now set in gold, as jewels should be.

Stran. But if I give another form, it must
be 435

By fair exchange, not robbery. For they Who make men without women's aid have
long

Had patents for the same, and do not love
Your interlopers. The devil may take men, Not make them,—though he reap the benefit 440

Of the original workmanship: and there-
fore

Some one must be found to assume the shape

You have quitted.

Arn. Who would do so?

Stran. That I know not,
And therefore I must.

Arn. You!

Stran. I said it ere You inhabited your present dome of
beauty. 445

Arn. True. I forget all things in the new
joy

Of this immortal change.

Stran. In a few moments
I will be as you were, and you shall see Yourself for ever by you, as your shadow.

Arn. I would be spared this.

Stran. But it cannot be.
What! shrink already, being what you are,
From seeing what you were?

Arn. Do as thou wilt.

Stran. [to the late form of ARNOLD, extended on the earth].

Clay! not dead, but soul-less!

Though no man would choose thee,
An immortal no less 455

Deigns not to refuse thee.

Clay thou art; and unto spirit

All clay is of equal merit.

Fire! without which nought can live;

Fire! but in which nought can live, 460

Save the fabled salamander,
Or immortal souls which wander,
Praying what doth not forgive,
Howling for a drop of water,
Burning in a quenchless lot. 465
Fire! the only element

Where nor fish, beast, bird, nor worm,
Save the worm which dieth not,
Can preserve a moment's form,
But must with thyself be blent: 470

Fire! man's safeguard and his slaughter;

Fire! Creation's first-born daughter,

And Destruction's threaten'd son,

When heaven with the world hath done:

Fire! assist me to renew 475

Life in what lies in my view

Stiff and cold!

His resurrection rests with me and you!

One little, marshy spark of flame—

And he again shall seem the same; 480

But I his spirit's place shall hold!

[An ignis-fatuus flits through the wood and rests on the brow of the body. The Stranger disappears: the body rises.]

Arn. [in his new form]. Oh! horrible!

Stran. [in ARNOLD's late shape]. What!
tremblest thou?

Arn. Not so—

I merely shudder. Where is fled the shape
Thou lately worst?

Stran. To the world of shadows.
But let us thread the present. Whither wilt
thou? 485

Arn. Must thou be my companion?

Stran. Wherefore not?

Your betters keep worse company.

Arn. My betters!

Stran. Oh! you wax proud, I see, of your new form:

I'm glad of that. Ungrateful too! That's
well;

You improve apace;—two changes in an instant, 490

And you are old in the world's ways already.

But bear with me: indeed you'll find me useful

Upon your pilgrimage. But come, pronounce

Where shall we now be errant?

Arn. Where the world
Is thickest, that I may behold it in 495
Its workings.

Stran. That's to say, where there is war
And woman in activity. Let's see!

Spain—Italy—the new Atlantic world—
Afric, with all its Moors. In very truth,

There is small choice: the whole race are just now 500

Tugging as usual at each other's hearts.

Arn. I have heard great things of Rome.

Stran. A goodly choice—

And scarce a better to be found on earth, Since Sodom was put out. The field is wide
too;

For now the Frank, and Hun, and Spanish
scion 505
Of the old Vandals, are at play along
The sunny shores of the world's garden.
Arn. How
Shall we proceed?
Stran. Like gallants, on good coursers.
What, ho! my chargers! Never yet were
better,
Since Phaeton was upset into the Po. 510
Our pages too!

Enter two Pages, with four coal-black horses.

Arn. A noble sight!
Stran. And of
A nobler breed. Match me in Barbary,
Or your Kochlini race of Araby,
With these!
Arn. The mighty steam, which volumes
high
From their proud nostrils, burns the very
air; 515
And sparks of flame, like dancing fire-flies,
wheel
Around their manes, as common insects swarm Round common steeds towards sunset.
Stran. Mount, my lord:
They and I are your servitors.

Arn. And these Our dark-eyed pages—what may be their
names? 520
Stran. You shall baptize them.
Arn. What! in holy water?
Stran. Why not? The deeper sinner, better saint.
Arn. They are beautiful, and cannot,
sure, be demons.
Stran. True; the devil's always ugly;
and your beauty
Is never diabolical.

Arn. I'll call him 525
Who bears the golden horn, and wears such bright
And blooming aspect, Huon; for he looks
Like to the lovely boy lost in the forest, And never found till now. And for the other
And darker, and more thoughtful, who smiles not, 530
But looks as serious though serene as night,
He shall be Memnon, from the Ethiop king
Whose statue turns a harper once a day.

And you?
Stran. I have ten thousand names, and twice
As many attributes: but as I wear 535
A human shape, will take a human name.
Arn. More human than the shape
(though it was mine once)
I trust.
Stran. Then call me Cæsar.
Arn. Why, that name

Belongs to empires, and has been but borne 539
By the world's lords.
Stran. And therefore fittest for The devil in disguise—since so you deem
me,

Unless you call me pope instead.
Arn. Well, then,
Cæsar thou shalt be. For myself, my name Shall be plain Arnold still.

Cæs. We'll add a title—
'Count Arnold': it hath no ungracious
sound, 545

And will look well upon a billet-doux.
Arn. Or in an order for a battle-field.
Cæs. [sings]. To horse! to horse! my coal-black steed
Paws the ground, and snuffs the air!
There's not a foal of Arab's breed 550
More knows whom he must bear;

On the hill he will not tire,
Swifter as it waxes higher;
In the marsh he will not slacken,
On the plain be overtaken; 555
In the wave he will not sink,
Nor pause at the brook's side to drink;
In the race he will not pant,
In the combat he'll not faint;
On the stones he will not stumble, 560
Time nor toil shall make him humble;
In the stall he will not stiffen,
But be winged as a griffin,
Only flying with his feet:
And will not such a voyage be sweet?
Merrily! merrily! never unsound, 566 Shall our bonny black horses skim over the ground!

From the Alps to the Caucasus, ride we,
or fly!
For we'll leave them behind in the glance of an eye.

[They mount their horses, and disappear.]

SCENE II.—*A Camp before the Walls
of Rome*

ARNOLD and CÆSAR.

Cæs. You are well enter'd now.
Arn. Ay; but my path
Has been o'er carcasses: mine eyes are full Of blood.

Cæs. Then wipe them, and see clearly.
Why!
Thou art a conqueror; the chosen knight
And free companion of the gallant Bourbon, 5
Late constable of France: and now to be Lord of the city which hath been earth's
lord
Under its emperors, and—changing sex,
Not sceptre, an hermaphrodite of empire—
Lady of the old world.

Arn. How old? What! are there
New worlds?

Cæs. To you. You'll find there are such shortly,
By its rich harvests, new disease, and gold;
From one half of the world named a whole
new one,

Because you know no better than the dull
And dubious notice of your eyes and ears.

Arn. I'll trust them. 16

Cæs. Do! they will deceive you sweetly,
And that is better than the bitter truth.

Arn. Dog!

Cæs. Man!

Arn. Devil!

Cæs. Your obedient humble servant.

Arn. Say master rather. Thou hast lured me on,

Through scenes of blood and lust, till I am
here. 20

Cæs. And where wouldst thou be?

Arn. Oh, at peace—in peace.

Cæs. And where is that which is so?
From the star

To the winding worm, all life is motion;
and

In life commotion is the extremest point
Of life. The planet wheels till it becomes A comet, and destroying as it sweeps
The stars, goes out. The poor worm winds its way,

Living upon the death of other things,
But still, like them, must live and die, the
subject

Of something which has made it live and
die. 30

You must obey what all obey, the rule
Of fix'd necessity: against her edict Rebellion prospers not.

Arn. And when it prospers—

Cæs. 'Tis no rebellion.

Arn. Will it prosper now?

Cæs. The Bourbon hath given orders for the assault, 35

And by the dawn there will be work.

Arn. Alas!

And shall the city yield? I see the giant Abode of the true God, and his true saint,
Saint Peter, rear its dome and cross into That sky whence Christ ascended from the cross, 40

Which his blood made a badge of glory
and

Of joy (as once of torture unto him,
God and God's Son, man's sole and only refuge).

Cæs. 'Tis there, and shall be.

Arn.

Cæs. What?

Cæs. The crucifix

Above, and many altar shrines below.
Also some culverins upon the walls, 46
And harquebusses, and what not; besides
The men who are to kindle them to death
Of other men.

Arn. And those scarce mortal arches,
Pile above pile of everlasting wall, 50

The theatre where emperors and their subjects

(Those subjects Romans) stood at gaze
upon

The battles of the monarchs of the wild
And wood, the lion and his tusky rebels
Of the then untamed desert, brought to joust 55

In the arena (as right well they might,
When they had left no human foe unconquer'd);

Made even the forest pay its tribute of Life to their amphitheatre, as well 59
As Dacia men to die the eternal death
For a sole instant's pastime, and 'Pass on
To a new gladiator!'—Must it fall?

Cæs. The city, or the amphitheatre?
The church, or one, or all? for you con-
found

Both them and me.

Arn. To-morrow sounds the assault
With the first cock-crow.

Cæs. Which, if it end with The evening's first nightingale, will be Something new in the annals of great sieges;

Formen must have their prey after long toil.

Arn. The sun goes down as calmly, and perhaps 70

More beautifully, than he did on Rome
On the day Remus leapt her wall.

Cæs. I saw him.

Arn. You!

Cæs. Yes, sir. You forget I am or was Spirit, till I took up with your cast shape,
And a worse name. I'm Cæsar and a hunchback 75

Now. Well! the first of Cæsars was a baldhead,

And loved his laurels better as a wig
(So history says) than as a glory. Thus
The world runs on, but we'll be merry still.

I saw your Romulus (simple as I am) 80
Slay his own twin, quick-born of the same

womb,
Because he leapt a ditch ('twas then no
wall,

Whate'er it now be); and Rome's earliest cement

Was brother's blood; and if its native
blood 84

Be spilt till the choked Tiber be as red
As e'er 'twas yellow, it will never wear

The deep hue of the ocean and the earth,
Which the great robber sons of fratricide

Have made their never-ceasing scene of slaughter

For ages.

Arn. But what have these done, their
far 90

Remote descendants, who have lived in
peace,

The peace of heaven, and in her sunshine of Piety?

Cæs. And what had they done, whom
the old

Romans o'erswept?—Hark!

Arn. They are soldiers singing
A reckless roundelay, upon the eve 95
Of many deaths, it may be of their own.

Cæs. And why should they not sing as well as swans?

They are black ones, to be sure.

Arn. So, you are learn'd,
I see, too?

Cæs. In my grammar, certes. I
Was educated for a monk of all times,
And once I was well versed in the forgotten 101

Etruscan letters, and—were I so minded—
Could make their hieroglyphics plainer than

Your alphabet.

Arn. And wherefore do you not?

Cæs. It answers better to resolve the alphabet 105

Back into hieroglyphics. Like your states-
man,

And prophet, pontiff, doctor, alchymist,
Philosopher, and what not, they have built

More Babels, without new dispersion, than The stammering young ones of the flood's dull ooze, 110

Who fail'd and fled each other. Why?
why, marry,

Because no man could understand his neighbour.

They are wiser now, and will not separate
For nonsense. Nay, it is their brotherhood,

Their Shibbleth, their Koran, Talmud,
their 115

Cabala; their best brick-work, wherewithal

They build more——

Arn. [interrupting him]. Oh, thou everlasting sneerer!

Be silent! How the soldier's rough strain seems

Soften'd by distance to a hymn-like cadence!

Listen!

Cæs. Yes. I have heard the angels
sing. 120

Arn. And demons howl.

Cæs. And man, too. Let us listen:
I love all music.

Song of the Soldiers within.

The black bands came over

The Alps and their snow;

With Bourbon, the rover, 125

They pass'd the broad Po.

We have beaten all foemen,

We have captured a king,

We have turn'd back on no men,

And so let us sing! 130

Here's the Bourbon for ever!

Though penniless all,

We'll have one more endeavour

At yonder old wall.

With the Bourbon we'll gather 135

At day-dawn before

The gates, and together

Or break or climb o'er

The wall: on the ladder

As mounts each firm foot, 140

Our shout shall grow gladder,

And death only be mute.

With the Bourbon we'll mount o'er

The walls of old Rome,

And who then shall count o'er 145

The spoils of each dome?

Up! up with the lily!

And down with the keys!

In old Rome, the seven-hilly,

We'll revel at ease. 150

Her streets shall be gory,

Her Tiber all red,

And her temples so hoary

Shall clang with our tread.

Oh, the Bourbon! the Bourbon! 155

The Bourbon for aye!

Of our song bear the burden!

And fire, fire away!

With Spain for the vanguard,

Our varied host comes; 160

And next to the Spaniard

Beat Germany's drums;

And Italy's lances

Are couch'd at their mother;

But our leader from France is, 165

Who warr'd with his brother.

Oh, the Bourbon! the Bourbon!

Sans country or home,

We'll follow the Bourbon,

To plunder old Rome. 170

Cæs. An indifferent song
For those within the walls, methinks, to
hear.

Arn. Yes, if they keep to their chorus.
But here comes

The general with his chiefs and men of trust.

A goodly rebel!

*Enter the Constable BOURBON 'cum suis,'
&c. &c.*

Phil. How now, noble prince, 175
You are not cheerful?

Bourb. Why should I be so?

Phil. Upon the eve of conquest, such as ours,

Most men would be so.

Bourb. If I were secure!

Phil. Doubt not our soldiers. Were the walls of adamant,

They'd crack them. Hunger is a sharp artillery. 180

Bourb. That they will falter is my least of fears.

That they will be repulsed, with Bourbon for Their chief, and all their kindled appetites
To marshal them on—were those hoary
walls

Mountains, and those who guard them like the gods 185

Of the old fables, I would trust my Titans;—

But now—

Phil. They are but men who war with mortals.

Bourb. True: but those walls have girded in great ages,
And sent forth mighty spirits. The past
earth

And present phantom of imperious Rome
Is peopled with those warriors; and methinks 191

They flit along the eternal city's rampart,
And stretch their glorious, gory, shadowy
hands,

And beckon me away!

Phil. So let them! Wilt thou Turn back from shadowy menaces of shadows? 195

Bourb. They do not menace me. I could have faced,

Methinks, a Sylla's menace; but they clasp,
And raise, and wring their dim and death-
like hands,

And with their thin aspen faces and fix'd
eyes

Fascinate mine. Look there!

Phil. I look upon 200
A lofty battlement.

Bourb. And there!

Phil. Not even
A guard in sight; they wisely keep below,
Shelter'd by the grey parapet from some Stray bullet of our lansquenets, who might Practise in the cool twilight.

Bourb. You are blind. 205

Phil. If seeing nothing more than may be seen

Be so.

Bourb. A thousand years have mann'd
the walls

With all their heroes,—the last Cato stands
And tears his bowels, rather than survive
The liberty of that I would enslave, 210
And the first Cæsar with his triumphs flits
From battlement to battlement.

Phil. Then conquer
The walls for which he conquer'd, and be greater!

Bourb. True: so I will, or perish.

Phil. You can not.
In such an enterprise to die is rather 215
The dawn of an eternal day, than death.

[COUNT ARNOLD and CÆSAR advance.

Cæs. And the mere men—do they too sweat beneath

The noon of this same ever-scorching
glory?

Bourb.

Welcome the bitter hunchback! and his master,

The beauty of our host, and brave as beauteous, 220

And generous as lovely. We shall find Work for you both ere morning.

Cæs. You will find.
So please your highness, no less for yourself.

Bourb. And if I do, there will not be a labourer

More forward, hunchback!

Cæs. You may well say so, 225
For you have seen that back—as general,
Placed in the rear in action—but your foes
Have never seen it.

Bourb. That's a fair retort,
For I provoked it:—but the Bourbon's
breast

Has been, and ever shall be, far advanced In danger's face as yours, were you the devil. 231

Cæs. And if I were, I might have saved
myself

The toil of coming here.

Phil.

Why so?

Cæs. One half
Of your brave bands of their own bold accord 234

Will go to him, the other half be sent,
More swiftly, not less surely.

Bourb. Arnold, your Slight crooked friend's as snake-like in his words

As his deeds.

Cæs. Your highness much mistakes me.
The first snake was a flatterer—I am none;
And for my deeds, I only sting when
stung. 240

Bourb. You are brave, and that's enough for me; and quick

In speech as sharp in action—and that's
more.

I am not alone a soldier, but the soldiers'
Comrade.

Cæs. They are but bad company, your highness;
And worse even for their friends than foes,
as being 245

More permanent acquaintance.

Phil. How now, fellow!
Thou waxest insolent, beyond the privilege
Of a buffoon.

Cæs. You mean I speak the truth.
I'll lie—it is as easy: then you'll praise me
For calling you a hero.

Bourb. Philibert! 250
Let him alone; he's brave, and ever has Been first, with that swart face and mountain shoulder,

In field or storm, and patient in starvation;
And for his tongue, the camp is full of
licence,

And the sharp stinging of a lively rogue
Is, to my mind, far preferable to 256
The gross, dull, heavy, gloomy execration
Of a mere famish'd, sullen, grumblings slave, Whom nothing can convince save a full
meal,

And wine, and sleep, and a few maravedis,
With which he deems him rich.

Cæs. It would be well
If the earth's princes ask'd no more.

Bourb. Be silent!

Cæs. Ay, but not idle. Work yourself with words!

You have few to speak.

Phil. What means the audacious prater?

Cæs. To prate, like other prophets.
Bourb. Philibert! 265

Why will you vex him? Have we not
enough

To think on? Arnold! I will lead the attack
To-morrow.

Arn. I have heard as much, my lord.

Bourb. And you will follow?

Arn. Since I must not lead.

Bourb. 'Tis necessary for the further
daring 270

Of our too needy army, that their chief Plant the first foot upon the foremost ladder's

First step.

Cæs. Upon its topmost, let us hope:
So shall he have his full deserts.

Bourb. The world's Great capital perchance is ours tomorrow. 275

Through every change the seven-hill'd city hath

Retain'd her sway o'er nations, and the Cæsars

But yielded to the Alarics, the Alarics Unto the pontiffs. Roman, Goth, or priest,

Still the world's masters! Civilized, barbarian, 280

Or saintly, still the walls of Romulus
Have been the circus of an empire. Well!
'Twas their turn—now 'tis ours; and let us hope

That we will fight as well, and rule much better.

Cæs. No doubt, the camp's the school of civic rights. 285

What would you make of Rome?

Bourb. That which it was.

Cæs. In Alaric's time?

Bourb. No, slave! in the first Cæsar's,

Whose name you bear like other curs—

Cæs. And kings!

'Tis a great name for blood-hounds.

Bourb. There's a demon

In that fierce rattlesnake thy tongue. Wilt never 290

Be serious?

Cæs. On the eve of battle, no;—
That were not soldier-like. 'Tis for the general

To be more pensive: we adventurers Must be more cheerful. Wherefore should we think?

Our tutelary deity, in a leader's shape, 295
Takes care of us. Keep thought aloof from hosts!

If the knaves take to thinking, you will
have

To crack those walls alone.

Bourb. You may sneer, since

'Tis lucky for you that you fight no worse
for't.

Cæs. I thank you for the freedom; 'tis the only 300

Pay I have taken in your highness' service.

Bourb. Well, sir, to-morrow you shall pay yourself.

Look on those towers; they hold my
treasury;

But, Philibert, we'll in to council. Arnold,
We would request your presence.

Arn. Prince, my service 305

Is yours, as in the field.

Bourb. In both we prize it,
And yours will be a post of trust at day-
break.

Cæs. And mine?

Bourb. To follow glory with the Bourbon.

Good night!

Arn. [to CÆSAR]. Prepare our armour
for the assault,

And wait within my tent.

[EXEUNT BOURBON, ARNOLD, PHILIBERT,
&c.]

Cæs. [solus]. Within thy tent! 310
Think'st thou that I pass from thee with my presence?

Or that this crooked coffer, which con-
tain'd

Thy principle of life, is aught to me Except a mask? And these are men, forsooth!

Heroes and chiefs, the flower of Adam's bastards! 315

This is the consequence of giving matter
The power of thought. It is a stubborn substance,

And thinks chaotically, as it acts,
Ever relapsing into its first elements.

Well! I must play with these poor puppets:
'tis 320

The spirit's pastime in his idler hours.

When I grow weary of it, I have business

Amongst the stars, which these poor creatures deem

Were made for them to look at. 'Twere a jest now

To bring one down amongst them, and set fire 325

Unto their anthill: how the pismires then

Would scamper o'er the scalding soil, and, ceasing
From tearing down each other's nests, pipe forth
One universal orison! Ha! ha!
[Exit CÆSAR.]

PART II

SCENE I.—Before the walls of Rome.—The Assault: the Army in motion, with ladders to scale the walls; BOURBON, with a white scarf over his armour, foremost.

Chorus of Spirits in the air.

I

'Tis the morn, but dim and dark.
Whither flies the silent lark?
Whither shrinks the clouded sun?
Is the day indeed begun?
Nature's eye is melancholy
O'er the city high and holy:
But without there is a din
Should arouse the saints within,
And revive the heroic ashes
Round which yellow Tiber dashes.
Oh, ye seven hills! awaken,
Ere your very base be shaken!

II

Hearken to the steady stamp!
Mars is in their every tramp!
Not a step is out of tune,
As the tides obey the moon!
On they march, though to self-slaughter,
Regular as rolling water,
Whose high waves o'ersweep the border
Of huge moles, but keep their order,
Breaking only rank by rank.
Hearken to the armour's clank!
Look down o'er each frowning warrior,
How he glares upon the barrier:
Look on each step of each ladder,
As the stripes that streak an adder.

III

Look upon the bristling wall,
Mann'd without an interval!
Round and round, and tier on tier,
Cannon's black mouth, shining spear,
Lit match, bell-mouth'd musqueteon,
Gaping to be murderous soon;
All the warlike gear of old,
Mix'd with what we now behold,
In this strife 'twixt old and new,
Gather like a locusts' crew.
Shade of Remus! 'tis a time
Awful as thy brother's crime:
Christians war against Christ's shrine:—
Must its lot be like to thine?

IV

Near—and near—and nearer still,
As the earthquake saps the hill,
First with trembling, hollow motion,
Like a scarce awaken'd ocean,
Then with stronger shock and louder,
Till the rocks are crush'd to powder,—
Onward sweeps the rolling host!
Heroes of the immortal boast!
Mighty chiefs! eternal shadows!
First flowers of the bloody meadows
Which encompass Rome, the mother
Of a people without brother!
Will you sleep when nations' quarrels
Plough the root up of your laurels?
Ye who weep o'er Carthage burning,
Weep not—strike! for Rome is mourning!

V

Onward sweep the varied nations!
Famine long hath dealt their rations.
To the wall, with hate and hunger,
Numerous as wolves, and stronger,
On they sweep. Oh, glorious city!
Must thou be a theme for pity?
Fight, like your first sire, each Roman!
Alaric was a gentle foeman,
Match'd with Bourbon's black banditti!
Rouse thee, thou eternal city;
Rouse thee! Rather give the torch
With thine own hand to thy porch,
Than behold such hosts pollute
Your worst dwelling with their foot.

VI

Ah! behold yon bleeding spectre!
Ilion's children find no Hector;
Priam's offspring loved their brother;
Rome's great sire forgot his mother,
When he slew his gallant twin,
With inexpiable sin.
See the giant shadow stride
O'er the ramparts high and wide!
When the first o'erleapt thy wall,
Its foundation mourn'd thy fall.
Now, though towering like a Babel,
Who to stop his steps are able?
Stalking o'er thy highest dome,
Remus claims his vengeance, Rome!

VII

Now they reach thee in their anger:
Fire and smoke and hellish clangour
Are around thee, thou world's wonder!
Death is in thy walls and under.
Now the meeting steel first clashes,
Downward then the ladder crashes,
With its iron load all gleaming,
Lying at its foot blaspheming!
Up again! for every warrior
Slain, another climbs the barrier.
Thicker grows the strife: thy ditches
Europe's mingling gore enriches.

Rome! although thy wall may perish,
Such manure thy fields will cherish,
Making gay the harvest-home;
But thy hearths, alas! oh, Rome!— 100
Yet be Rome amidst thine anguish,
Fight as thou wast wont to vanquish!

VIII

Yet once more, ye old Penates!
Let not your quench'd hearths be Até's!
Yet again, ye shadowy heroes, 105
Yield not to these stranger Neros!
Though the son who slew his mother
Shed Rome's blood, he was your brother;
'Twas the Roman curb'd the Roman;—
Brennus was a baffled foeman. 110
Yet again, ye saints and martyrs,
Rise! for yours are holier charters!
Mighty gods of temples falling,
Yet in ruin still appalling!
Mightier founders of those altars, 115
True and Christian,—strike the assaulters!
Tiber! Tiber! let thy torrent
Show even nature's self abhorrent.
Let each breathing heart dilated
Turn, as doth the lion baited! 120
Rome be crush'd to one wide tomb,
But be still the Roman's Rome!

BOURBON, ARNOLD, CÆSAR, and others,
arrive at the foot of the wall. ARNOLD is about to plant his ladder.

Bourb. Hold, Arnold! I am first.

Arn. Not so, my lord.

Bourb. Hold, sir, I charge you!

Follow! I am proud

Of such a follower, but will brook no leader. 125

[BOURBON plants his ladder, and begins to mount.

Now, boys! On! on!

[A shot strikes him, and BOURBON falls.

Cæs. And off!

Arn. Eternal powers!

The host will be appall'd,—but vengeance!
vengeance!

Bourb. 'Tis nothing—lend me your
hand.

[BOURBON takes ARNOLD by the hand, and rises; but as he puts his foot on the step, falls again.

Arnold! I am sped.

Conceal my fall—all will go well—conceal
it!

Fling my cloak o'er what will be dust
anon; 130

Let not the soldiers see it.

Arn. You must be Removed; the aid of—

Bourb. No, my gallant boy!

Death is upon me. But what is one life?
The Bourbon's spirit shall command them
still.

Keep them yet ignorant that I am but
clay, 135

Till they are conquerors—then do as you
may.

Cæs. Would not your highness choose to kiss the cross?

We have no priest here, but the hilt of
sword

May serve instead:—it did the same for Bayard.

Bourb. Thou bitter slave! to name him at this time! 140

But I deserve it.

Arn. [to CÆSAR]. Villain, hold your
peace!

Cæs. What, when a Christian dies?
Shall I not offer

A Christian 'Vade in pace'?

Arn. Silence! Oh!

Those eyes are glazing which o'erlook'd
the world,

And saw no equal.

Bourb. Arnold, shouldst thou see France—But hark! hark! the assault grows warmer—Oh! 146

For but an hour, a minute more of life,
To die within the wall! Hence, Arnold,
hence!

You lose time—they will conquer Rome without thee.

Arn. And without thee.

Bourb. Not so; I'll lead them still In spirit. Cover up my dust, and breathe
not 151

That I have ceased to breathe. Away!
and be Victorious.

Arn. But I must not leave thee thus.

Bourb. You must—farewell—Up! up!
the world is winning.

[BOURBON dies.

Cæs. [to ARNOLD]. Come, count, to business.

Arn. True. I'll weep hereafter. 155

[ARNOLD covers BOURBON's body with a mantle, mounts the ladder, crying

The Bourbon! Bourbon! On, boys! Rome is ours!

Cæs. Good night, lord constable! thou wert a man.

[CÆSAR follows ARNOLD; they reach the battlement; ARNOLD and CÆSAR are struck down.

Cæs. A precious somerset! Is your countship injured?

Arn. No. [Remounts the ladder.

Cæs. A rare blood-hound, when his own is heated!

And 'tis no boy's play. Now he strikes
them down! 160

His hand is on the battlement—he grasps it
As though it were an altar; now his foot
Is on it, and—What have we here?—a

Roman?
[A man falls.

SCENE I]

The first bird of the covey! he has fallen
On the outside of the nest. Why, how now, fellow? 165

Wounded Man. A drop of water!
Cæs. Blood's the only liquid

Nearer than Tiber.

Wounded Man. I have died for Rome.
[Dies.]

Cæs. And so did Bourbon, in another
sense.

Oh, these immortal men! and their great motives! 169

But I must after my young charge. He is
By this time i' the forum. Charge! charge!

[*CÆSAR mounts the ladder; the scene
closes.*]

SCENE II.—*The City.—Combats between the Besiegers and Besieged in the streets.
Inhabitants flying in confusion.*

Enter CÆSAR.

Cæs. I cannot find my hero; he is
mix'd

With the heroic crowd that now pursue
The fugitives, or battle with the desperate.
What have we here? A cardinal or two
That do not seem in love with martyrdom.
How the old red-shanks scamper! Could they doff 6

Their hose as they have doff'd their hats,
'twould be

A blessing, as a mark the less for plunder.
But let them fly; the crimson kennels now
Will not much stain their stockings, since the mire 10

Is of the self-same purple hue.

Enter a party fighting—ARNOLD at the head of the Besiegers.

He comes,
Hand in hand with the mild twins—Gore and Glory.

Holla! hold, count!

Arn. Away! they must not rally.

Cæs. I tell thee, be not rash; a golden bridge

Is for a flying enemy. I gave thee 15
A form of beauty, and an Exemption from some maladies of body,

But not of mind, which is not mine to give.

But though I gave the form of Thetis' son,
I dipt thee not in Styx; and 'gainst a foe
I would not warrant thy chivalric heart
More than Pelides' heel; why, then, be cautious, 22

And know thyself a mortal still.

Arn. And who

With aught of soul would combat if he were Invulnerable? That were pretty sport.

Think'st thou I beat for hares when lions roar? [ARNOLD rushes into the combat.]

Cæs. A precious sample of humanity!

THE DEFORMED TRANSFORMED

Well, his blood's up; and if a little's shed,
'Twill serve to curb his fever.

[ARNOLD engages with a Roman, who retires towards a portico.]

Arn. Yield thee, slave!

I promise quarter.

Rom. That's soon said.

Arn. And done— 30

My word is known.

Rom. So shall be my deeds.

[They re-engage. CÆSAR comes forward.]

Cæs. Why, Arnold! hold thine own:
thou hast in hand

A famous artisan, a cunning sculptor;

Also a dealer in the sword and dagger.

Not so, my musqueteer; 'twas he who slew
The Bourbon from the wall.

Arn. Ay, did he so? 36

Then he hath carved his monument.

Rom. I yet

May live to carve your better's.

Cæs. Well said, my man of marble!
Benvenuto,

Thou hast some practice in both ways;
and he 40

Who slays Cellini will have work'd as hard
As e'er thou didst upon Carrara's blocks.

[*ARNOLD disarms and wounds CELLINI, but slightly; the latter draws a pistol,
and fires; then retires, and disappears through the portico.*]

Cæs. How farest thou? Thou hast a taste, methinks,

Of red Bellona's banquet.

Arn. [staggers]. 'Tis a scratch.

Lend me thy scarf. He shall not 'scape me
thus. 45

Cæs. Where is it?

Arn. In the shoulder, not the sword
arm—

And that's enough. I am thirsty: would I had

A helm of water!

Cæs. That's a liquid now

In requisition, but by no means easiest
To come at.

Arn. And my thirst increases;—but I'll find a way to quench it.

Cæs. Or be quench'd

Thyself.

Arn. The chance is even; we will throw
The dice thereon. But I lose time in pra-tising;

Prithee be quick. [CÆSAR binds on the scarf.]

And what dost thou so idly?

Why dost not strike?

Cæs. Your old philosophers 55

Beheld mankind, as mere spectators of

The Olympic games. When I behold a prize

Worth wrestling for, I may be found a Milo.

Arn. Ay, 'gainst an oak.

Cæs. A forest, when it suits me:
I combat with a mass, or not at all. 60
Meantime, pursue thy sport as I do mine;
Which is just now to gaze, since all these labourers

Will reap my harvest gratis.

Arn. Thou art still A fiend!

Cæs. And thou—a man.

Arn. Why, such I fain would show me.

Cæs. True—as men are. 65

Arn. And what is that?

Cæs. Thou feeblest and thou see'st.

[Exit ARNOLD, joining in the combat, which still continues between detached parties. The scene closes.]

SCENE III.—St. Peter's—The Interior of the Church—The Pope at the Altar—Priests, &c., crowding in confusion, and Citizens flying for refuge, pursued by Soldiery.

Enter CÆSAR.

A Spanish Soldier. Down with them, comrades! seize upon those lamps!
Cleave yon bald-pated shaveling to the chine!

His rosary's of gold!

Lutheran Soldier. Revenge! revenge!
Plunder hereafter, but for vengeance
now—

Yonder stands Anti-Christ!

Cæs. [interposing]. How now, schismatic? 5

What wouldst thou?

Luth. Sold. In the holy name of Christ, Destroy proud Anti-Christ. I am a Christian.

Cæs. Yes, a disciple that would make the founder

Of your belief renounce it, could he see Such proselytes. Best stint thyself to plunder. 10

Luth. Sold. I say he is the devil.

Cæs. Hush! keep that secret,
Lest he should recognise you for his own.

Luth. Sold. Why would you save him?
I repeat he is

The devil, or the devil's vicar upon earth.

Cæs. And that's the reason: would you make a quarrel 15

With your best friends? You had far best be quiet;

His hour is not yet come.

Luth. Sold. That shall be seen!

[The Lutheran Soldier rushes forward: a shot strikes him from one of the Pope's Guards, and he falls at the foot of the Altar.]

Cæs. [to the Lutheran]. I told you so.

Luth. Sold. And will you not avenge
me?

Cæs. Not I! You know that 'Vengeance is the Lord's':

You see he loves no interlopers.

Luth. Sold. [dying]. Oh! 20

Had I but slain him, I had gone on high,
Crown'd with eternal glory! Heaven, forgive

My feebleness of arm that reach'd him not,
And take thy servant to thy mercy. 'Tis

A glorious triumph still; proud Babylon's
No more; the Harlot of the Seven Hills

Hath changed her scarlet raiment for sackcloth 27

And ashes! [The Lutheran dies.]

Cæs. Yes, thine own amidst the rest.

Well done, old Babel!

[The Guards defend themselves desperately, while the Pontiff escapes, by a private passage, to the Vatican and the Castle of St. Angelo.]

Cæs. Ha! right nobly battled!

Now, priest! now, soldier! the two great professions, 30

Together by the ears and hearts! I have
not

Seen a more comic pantomime since Titus Took Jewry. But the Romans had the best then;

Now they must take their turn.

Soldiers. He hath escaped!
Follow!

Another Sold. They have barr'd the narrow passage up, 35

And it is clogg'd with dead even to the
door.

Cæs. I am glad he hath escaped: he may thank me for't

In part. I would not have his bulls abolish'd—

'Twere worth one half our empire: his indulgences

Demand some in return,—no, no, he must
not 40

Fall;—and, besides, his now escape may furnish

A future miracle, in future proof

Of his infallibility.

[To the Spanish Soldiery.]

Well, cut-throats!

What do you pause for? If you make not haste, 44

There will not be a link of pious gold left.
And you, too, Catholics! Would ye return

From such a pilgrimage without a relic?
The very Lutherans have more true devo-

tion:

See how they strip the shrines!

Soldiers. By holy Peter!
He speaks the truth; the heretics will bear

The best away.

Cæs. And that were shame! Go to!
Assist in their conversion. [The Soldiers disperse; many quit the Church, others enter.]

Cæs. They are gone,
And others come: so flows the wave on
wave
Of what these creatures call eternity, Deeming themselves the breakers of the
ocean, 55
While they are but its bubbles, ignorant
That foam is their foundation. So another!

*Enter OLIMPIA, flying from the pursuit—
She springs upon the Altar.*

Sold. She's mine!

Another Sold. [opposing the former].
You lie, I track'd her first: and were
she

The Pope's niece, I'll not yield her.

[They fight.

3d Sold. [advancing towards OLIMPIA].

You may settle

Your claims; I'll make mine good.

Olimp. Infernal slave! 60

You touch me not alive.

3d Sold. Alive or dead!

Olim. [embracing a massive crucifix].

Respect your God!

3d Sold. Yes, when he shines in gold.

Girl, you but grasp your dowry.

[As he advances, OLIMPIA, with a strong and sudden effort, casts down the crucifix; it strikes the Soldier, who falls.

3d Sold. Oh, great God!

Olimp. Ah! now you recognise him.

3d. Sold. My brain's crush'd!

Comrades, help, ho! All's darkness!

[He dies.

Other Soldiers [coming up]. Slay her,
although she had a thousand lives:

She hath kill'd our comrade.

Olimp. Welcome such a death!

You have no life to give, which the worst
slave

Would take. Great God! through thy redeeming Son,

And thy Son's Mother, now receive me as I would approach thee, worthy her, and him, and thee! 71

Enter ARNOLD.

Arn. What do I see? Accursed jackals!
Forbear!

Cæs. [aside and laughing]. Ha! ha!
here's equity! The dogs

Have as much right as he. But to the issue!

Soldiers. Count, she hath slain our comrade.

Arn. With what weapon? 75

Sold. The cross, beneath which he is crush'd; behold him

Lie there, more like a worm than man; she cast it

Upon his head.

Arn. Even so; there is a woman Worthy a brave man's liking. Were ye
such,

Ye would have honour'd her. But get ye
hence, 80

And thank your meanness, other God you have none,

For your existence. Had you touch'd a hair
Of those dishevell'd locks, I would have thinn'd

Your ranks more than the enemy. Away!
Ye jackals! gnaw the bones the lion leaves
But not even these till he permits.

A Sold. [murmuring]. The lion Might conquer for himself then.

Arn. [cuts him down]. Mutineer!
Rebel in hell—you shall obey on earth!

[The Soldiers assault ARNOLD.

Arn. Come on! I'm glad on 't! I will show you, slaves,

How you should be commanded, and who led you 90

First o'er the wall you were so shy to scale,
Until I waved my banners from its height,
As you are bold within it.

[ARNOLD mows down the foremost; the rest throw down their arms.

Soldiers. Mercy! mercy!

Arn. Then learn to grant it. Have I taught you who

Led you o'er Rome's eternal battlements?

Soldiers. We saw it, and we know it;
yet forgive 96

A moment's error in the heat of conquest—
The conquest which you led to.

Arn. Get you hence!

Hence to your quarters! you will find them
fix'd

In the Colonna palace.

Olimp. [aside]. In my father's 100
House!

Arn. [to the Soldiers]. Leave your arms;
ye have no further need

Of such: the city's render'd. And mark
well

You keep your hands clean, or I'll find out a stream

As red as Tiber now runs, for your baptism.

Soldiers [deposing their arms and departing]. We obey!

Arn. [to OLIMPIA]. Lady, you are safe.

Olimp. I should be so, 105

Had I a knife even; but it matters not—Death hath a thousand gates; and on the marble,

Even at the altar foot, whence I look down
Upon destruction, shall my head be dash'd,

Ere thou ascend it. God forgive thee,
man! 110

Arn. I wish to merit his forgiveness, and Thine own, although I have not injured
thee.

Olimp. No! Thou hast only sack'd my native land,—

No injury!—and made my father's house
A den of thieves! No injury!—this temple— 115

Slippery with Roman and with holy gore!
No injury! And now thou wouldst preserve me,

To be—but that shall never be!

[She raises her eyes to heaven, folds her robe round her, and prepares to dash herself down on the side of the Altar opposite to that where ARNOLD stands.]

Arn. Hold! hold!

I swear.

Olimp. Spare thine already forfeit soul
A perjury for which even hell would loathe thee. 120

I know thee.

Arn. No, thou know'st me not; I am not
Of these men, though—

Olimp. I judge thee by thy mates;
It is for God to judge thee as thou art.

I see thee purple with the blood of Rome;
Take mine, 'tis all thou e'er shalt have of me, 125

And here, upon the marble of this temple,
Where the baptismal font baptized me
God's,

I offer him a blood less holy
But not less pure (pure as it left me then,
A redeemed infant) than the holy water
The saints have sanctified!

[OLIMPIA waves her hand to ARNOLD with disdain, and dashes herself on the pavement from the Altar.]

Arn. Eternal God!

I feel thee now! Help! help! She's gone.

Cæs. [approaches]. I am here.

Arn. Thou! but oh, save her!

Cæs. [assisting him to raise OLIMPIA].
She hath done it well!

The leap was serious.

Arn. Oh! she is lifeless!

Cæs. If

She be so, I have nought to do with that:
The resurrection is beyond me.

Arn. Slave!

Cæs. Ay, slave or master, 'tis all one:
methinks

Good words, however, are as well at times.

Arn. Words!—Canst thou aid her?

Cæs. I will try. A sprinkling

Of that same holy water may be useful.

[He brings some in his helmet from the font.]

Arn. 'Tis mix'd with blood.

Cæs. There is no cleaner now

In Rome.

Arn. How pale! how beautiful! how lifeless!

Alive or dead, thou essence of all beauty,
I love but thee!

Cæs. Even so Achilles loved Penthesilea: with his form it seems 145

You have his heart, and yet it was no soft one.

Arn. She breathes! But no, 'twas nothing, or the last

Faint flutter life disputes with death.

Cæs. She breathes.

Arn. Thou say'st it? Then 'tis truth.

Cæs. You do me right—

The devil speaks truth much oftener than he's deem'd: 150

He hath an ignorant audience.

Arn. [without attending to him]. Yes!
her heart beats.

Alas! that the first beat of the only heart
I ever wish'd to beat with mine should vibrate

To an assassin's pulse.

Cæs. A sage reflection,
But somewhat late i' the day. Where shall we bear her? 155

I say she lives.

Arn. And will she live?

Cæs. As much

As dust can.

Arn. Then she is dead!

Cæs. Bah! bah! You are so,
And do not know it. She will come to life—
Such as you think so, such as you now are:
But we must work by human means.

Arn. We will 160

Convey her unto the Colonna palace,
Where I have pitch'd my banner.

Cæs. Come then! raise her up!

Arn. Softly!

Cæs. As softly as they bear the dead, Perhaps because they cannot feel the jolting.

Arn. But doth she live indeed?

Cæs. Nay, never fear! 165

But, if you rue it after, blame not me.

Arn. Let her but live!

Cæs. The spirit of her life

Is yet within her breast, and may revive.
Count! count! I am your servant in all
things,

And this is a new office:—'tis not oft 170
I am employ'd in such; but you perceive How stanch a friend is what you call a fiend.

On earth you have often only fiends for
friends;

Now I desert not mine. Soft! bear her
hence,

The beautiful half-clay, and nearly spirit!
I am almost enamour'd of her, as 176
Of old the angels of her earliest sex.

Arn. Thou!

Cæs. I! But fear not. I'll not be your rival.

Arn. Rival!

Cæs. I could be one right formidable;
But since I slew the seven husbands of 180
Tobias' future bride (and after all Was smoked out by some incense), I have
laid

Aside intrigue: 'tis rarely worth the trouble
Of gaining, or—what is more difficult—Getting rid of your prize again; for there's
The rub! at least to mortals.

Arn. Prithee, peace!
Softly! methinks her lips move, her eyes open!

Cæs. Like stars, no doubt; for that's a metaphor
For Lucifer and Venus.

Arn. To the palace

Colonna, as I told you!

Cæs. Oh! I know

My way through Rome.

Arn. Now onward, onward! Gently!

[*Exeunt, bearing OLIMPIA. The scene
closes.*]

PART III

SCENE I.—*A Castle in the Apennines, surrounded by a wild but smiling Country.
Chorus of Peasants singing before the Gates.*

Chorus.

I

The wars are over,
The spring is come;
The bride and her lover
Have sought their home:
They are happy, we rejoice;
Let their hearts have an echo in every voice!

II

The spring is come; the violet's gone,
The first-born child of the early sun:
With us she is but a winter's flower,
The snow on the hills cannot blast her
bower, 10
And she lifts up her dewy eye of blue
To the youngest sky of the self-same hue.

III

And when the spring comes with her host
Of flowers, that flower beloved the most Shrinks from the crowd that may confuse
Her heavenly odour and virgin hues. 16

IV

Pluck the others, but still remember
Their herald out of dim December—
The morning star of all the flowers,
The pledge of daylight's lengthen'd hours;
Nor, midst the roses, e'er forget 21
The virgin—virgin violet.

Enter CÆSAR.

Cæs. [singing]. The wars are all over,
Our swords are all idle,
The steed bites the bridle. 25
The casque's on the wall.
There's rest for the rover;
But his armour is rusty,
And the veteran grows crusty,
As he yawns in the hall. 30
He drinks—but what's drinking?
A mere pause from thinking!
No bugle awakes him with life-and-death call.

Chorus.

But the hound bayeth loudly,
The boar's in the wood, 35
And the falcon longs proudly
To spring from her hood:
On the wrist of the noble
She sits like a crest,
And the air is in trouble 40
With birds from their nest.

Cæs. Oh! shadow of glory!
Dim image of war!
But the chase hath no story,
Her hero no star, 45
Since Nimrod, the founder
Of empire and chase,
Who made the woods wonder
And quake for their race.
When the lion was young, 50
In the pride of his might,
Then 'twas sport for the strong
To embrace him in fight;
To go forth, with a pine
For a spear, 'gainst the mammoth,
Or strike through the ravine 56
At the foaming behemoth;
While man was in stature
As towers in our time,
The first-born of Nature, 60
And, like her, sublime!

Chorus.

But the wars are over,
The spring is come;
The bride and her lover
Have sought their home; 65
They are happy, and we rejoice;
Let their hearts have an echo from every voice! [Exeunt the Peasantry, singing.]

BEPPPO

A VENETIAN STORY

Rosalind. Farewell, Monsieur Traveller: Look you lisp, and wear strange suits: disable all the benefits of your own country; be out of love with your Nativity, and almost chide God for making you that countenance you are; or I will scarce think that you have swam in a Gondola.—As You Like It, Act IV., Scene i.

Annotation of the Commentators.

That is, been at Venice, which was much visited by the young English gentlemen of those times, and was then what Paris is now—the seat of all dissoluteness.—S.A.

I

'Tis known, at least it should be, that throughout

All countries of the Catholic persuasion,
Some weeks before Shrove Tuesday comes
about,

The people take their fill of recreation,
And buy repentance, ere they grow devout, However high their rank, or low their
station,

With fiddling, feasting, dancing, drinking,
masking,

And other things which may be had for asking.

II

The moment night with dusky mantle covers

The skies (and the more duskily the
better),

The time less liked by husbands than by lovers

Begins, and prudery flings aside her
fetter;

And gaiety on restless tiptoe hovers,
Giggling with all the gallants who beset
her;

And there are songs and quavers, roaring,
humming,

Guitars, and every other sort of strumming.

III

And there are dresses splendid, but fantastical,

Masks of all times and nations, Turks
and Jews,

And harlequins and clowns, with feats gymnastical,

Greeks, Romans, Yankee-doodles, and Hindoos;

All kinds of dress, except the ecclesiastical,
All people, as their fancies hit, may
choose,

But no one in these parts may quiz the clergy,—

Therefore take heed, ye Freethinkers! I charge ye.

You'd better walk about begirt with briars, Instead of coat and smallclothes, than put on

A single stitch reflecting upon friars,
Although you swore it only was in fun;
They'd haul you o'er the coals, and stir the
fires

Of Phlegethon with every mother's son,
Nor say one mass to cool the caldron's bubble

That boil'd your bones, unless you paid them double.

V

But saving this, you may put on whate'er
You like by way of doublet, cape, or
cloak,

Such as in Monmouth-street, or in Rag
Fair,

Would rig you out in seriousness or joke;

And even in Italy such places are,
With prettier name in softer accents
spoke,

For, bating Covent Garden, I can hit on No place that's called 'Piazza' in Great Britain.

VI

This feast is named the Carnival, which being

Interpreted, implies 'farewell to flesh':
So call'd, because the name and thing agreeing,

Through Lent they live on fish both salt and fresh.

But why they usher Lent with so much glee in,

Is more than I can tell, although I guess
'Tis as we take a glass with friends at parting,

In the stage-coach or packet, just at starting.

VII

And thus they bid farewell to carnal dishes,
And solid meats, and highly spiced rag-
outs,
To live for forty days on ill-dress'd fishes,
Because they have no sauces to their
stews;
A thing which causes many 'pooohs' and
'pishes,'
And several oaths (which would not suit the Muse),
From travellers accustom'd from a boy
To eat their salmon, at the least, with soy;

VIII

And therefore humbly I would recommend
'The curious in fish-sauce,' before they cross
The sea, to bid their cook, or wife, or
friend,
Walk or ride to the Strand, and buy in gross
(Or if set out beforehand, these may send
By any means least liable to loss)
Ketchup, Soy, Chili-vinegar, and Harvey, Or by the Lord! a Lent will well nigh starve ye;

IX

That is to say, if your religion's Roman,
And you at Rome would do as Romans
do,
According to the proverb,—although no
man,
If foreign, is obliged to fast; and you
If Protestant, or sickly, or a woman,
Would rather dine in sin on a ragout—Dine and be d—d! I don't mean to be coarse,
But that's the penalty, to say no worse.

X

Of all the places where the Carnival
Was most facetious in the days of yore,
For dance, and song, and serenade, and
ball,
And masque, and mime, and mystery,
and more
Than I have time to tell now, or at all,
Venice the bell from every city bore,—
And at the moment when I fix my story,
That sea-born city was in all her glory.

XI

They've pretty faces yet, those same Venetians,
Black eyes, arch'd brows, and sweet expressions still;
Such as of old were copied from the Grecians,
In ancient arts by moderns mimick'd ill;

And like so many Venuses of Titian's (The best's at Florence—see it, if ye
will),
They look when leaning over the balcony,
Or stepp'd from out a picture by Giorgione,

XII

Whose tints are truth and beauty at their
best;
And when you to Manfrini's palace go,
That picture (howsoever fine the rest)
Is loveliest to my mind of all the show;
It may perhaps be also to your zest,
And that's the cause I rhyme upon it so:
'Tis but a portrait of his son, and wife,
And self; but such a woman! love in life!

XIII

Love in full life and length, not love ideal,
No, nor ideal beauty, that fine name,
But something better still, so very real,
That the sweet model must have been
the same;
A thing that you would purchase, beg, or
steal,
Were't not impossible, besides a shame:
The face recalls some face, as 'twere with
pain,
You once have seen, but ne'er will see
again.

XIV

One of those forms which flit by us, when
we
Are young, and fix our eyes on every
face;
And, oh! the loveliness at times we see
In momentary gliding, the soft grace,
The youth, the bloom, the beauty which
agree,
In many a nameless being we retrace, Whose course and home we knew not, nor shall know,
Like the lost Pleiad seen no more below.

XV

I said that like a picture by Giorgione
Venetian women were, and so they are,
Particularly seen from a balcony (For beauty's sometimes best set off
afar),
And there, just like a heroine of Goldoni,
They peep from out the blind, or o'er
the bar;
And truth to say, they're mostly very pretty,
And rather like to show it, more's the pity!

XVI

For glances beget ogles, ogles sighs,
Sighs wishes, wishes words, and words a letter,
Which flies on wings of light-heel'd Mer-curies,
Who do such things because they know
no better;
And then, God knows what mischief may
arise,
When love links two young people in
one fetter,
Vile assignations, and adulterous beds, Elovements, broken vows, and hearts, and heads.

XVII

Shakspeare described the sex in Desdemona
As very fair, but yet suspect in fame,
And to this day from Venice to Verona
Such matters may be probably the same, Except that since those times was never known a Husband whom mere suspicion could inflame
To suffocate a wife no more than twenty,
Because she had a 'cavalier servente.'

XVIII

Their jealousy (if they are ever jealous)
Is of a fair complexion altogether,
Not like that sooty devil of Othello's,
Which smothers women in a bed of feather,
But worthier of these much more jolly fellows,
When weary of the matrimonial tether
His head for such a wife no mortal bothers,
But takes at once another, or another's.

XIX

Didst ever see a Gondola? For fear
You should not, I'll describe it you exactly:
'Tis a long cover'd boat that's common here Carved at the prow, built lightly, but compactly,
Row'd by two rowers, each call'd 'Gondolier,'
It glides along the water looking blackly.
Just like a coffin clapt in a canoe,
Where none can make out what you say or do.

XX

And up and down the long canals they go,
And under the Rialto shoot along,
By night and day, all paces, swift or slow,
And round the theatres, a sable throng,
They wait in their dusk livery of woe,—
But not to them do woeful things belong,
For sometimes they contain a deal of fun,
Like mourning coaches when the funeral's
done.

XXI

But to my story.—'Twas some years ago,
It may be thirty, forty, more or less,
The Carnival was at its height, and so
Were all kinds of buffoonery and dress;
A certain lady went to see the show,
Her real name I know not, nor can guess,
And so we'll call her Laura, if you please,
Because it slips into my verse with ease.

XXII

She was not old, nor young, nor at the
years
Which certain people call a 'certain age,'
Which yet the most uncertain age appears,
Because I never heard, nor could engage
A person yet by prayers, or bribes, or tears,
To name, define by speech, or write on
page,
The period meant precisely by that word,—
Which surely is exceedingly absurd.

XXIII

Laura was blooming still, had made the
best
Of time, and time return'd the compli-
ment,
And treated her genteelly, so that, dress'd,
She look'd extremely well where'er she
went;
A pretty woman is a welcome guest,
And Laura's brow a frown had rarely
bent;
Indeed, she shone all smiles, and seem'd to flatter
Mankind with her black eyes for looking at her.

XXIV

She was a married woman; 'tis convenient,
Because in Christian countries 'tis a rule
To view their little slips with eyes more lenient;
Whereas if single ladies play the fool
(Unless within the period intervenient
A well-timed wedding makes the scandal
cool),
I don't know how they ever can get over it,
Except they manage never to discover it.

XXV

Her husband sail'd upon the Adriatic,
And made some voyages, too, in other
seas,
And when he lay in quarantine for pratique
(A forty days' precaution 'gainst disease),
His wife would mount, at times, her highest attic,
For thence she could discern the ship
with ease:
He was a merchant trading to Aleppo,
His name Giuseppe, call'd more briefly, Beppo.

XXVI

He was a man as dusky as a Spaniard,
Sunburnt with travel, yet a portly figure;
Though colour'd, as it were, within a tan-yard,

He was a person both of sense and
vigour—

A better seaman never yet did man yard;
And she, although her manners show'd
no rigour,
Was deem'd a woman of the strictest principle,
So much as to be thought almost invincible.

XXVII

But several years elapsed since they had met;

Some people thought the ship was lost,
and some

That he had somehow blunder'd into debt,
And did not like the thought of steering
home;

And there were several offer'd any bet,
Or that he would, or that he would not
come;

For most men (till by losing render'd sager)

Will back their own opinions with a wager.

XXVIII

'Tis said that their last parting was pathetic,
As partings often are, or ought to be,
And their presentiment was quite prophetic,

That they should never more each other
see,

(A sort of morbid feeling, half poetic,
Which I have known occur in two or
three,)

When kneeling on the shore upon her sad
knee

He left this Adriatic Ariadne.

XXIX

And Laura waited long, and wept a little,
And thought of wearing weeds, as well
she might;

She almost lost all appetite for victual,
And could not sleep with ease alone at
night;

She deem'd the window-frames and shutters brittle

Against a daring housebreaker or sprite,
And so she thought it prudent to connect
her

With a vice-husband, chiefly to protect her.

XXX

She chose, (and what is there they will not
choose,

If only you will but oppose their choice?)
Till Beppo should return from his long cruise,

And bid once more her faithful heart rejoice,

A man some women like, and yet abuse—
A coxcomb was he by the public voice;
A Count of wealth, they said, as well as quality,

And in his pleasures of great liberality.

XXXI

And then he was a Count, and then he
knew

Music, and dancing, fiddling, French and Tuscan;

The last not easy, be it known to you,
For few Italians speak the right Etruscan.

He was a critic upon operas, too,
And knew all niceties of the sock and buskin;

And no Venetian audience could endure a Song, scene, or air, when he cried 'seccatura!'

XXXII

His 'bravo' was decisive, for that sound
Hush'd 'Academie' sigh'd in silent awe;

The fiddlers trembled as he look'd around,
For fear of some false note's detected flaw;

The 'prima donna's' tuneful heart would
bound,

Dreading the deep damnation of his
'bah!'

Soprano, basso, even the contra-alto,
Wish'd him five fathom under the Rialto.

XXXIII

He patronised the Improvisatori, Nay, could himself extemporise some
stanzas,

Wrote rhymes, sang songs, could also tell a story,

Sold pictures, and was skilful in the dance as

Italians can be, though in this their glory
Must surely yield the palm to that which France has;

In short, he was a perfect cavaliero,
And to his very valet seem'd a hero.

XXXIV

Then he was faithful too, as well as amorous;

So that no sort of female could com-
plain,

Although they're now and then a little clamorous,

He never put the pretty souls in pain;
His heart was one of those which most enamour us,

Wax to receive, and marble to retain:

He was a lover of the good old school,
Who still become more constant as they cool.

BEPPPO

XXXV

No wonder such accomplishments should turn

A female head, however sage and steady—

With scarce a hope that Beppo could return,

In law he was almost as good as dead, he Nor sent, nor wrote, nor show'd the least concern,

And she had waited several years already;

And really if a man won't let us know That he's alive, he's dead, or should be so.

XXXVI

Besides, within the Alps, to every woman, (Although, God knows, it is a grievous sin,)

'Tis, I may say, permitted to have two men; I can't tell who first brought the custom in,

But 'Cavalier Serventes' are quite common,

And no one notices nor cares a pin; And we may call this (not to say the worst) A second marriage which corrupts the first.

XXXVII

The word was formerly a 'Cicisbeo,' But that is now grown vulgar and indecent;

The Spaniards call the person a 'Cortejo,' For the same mode subsists in Spain, though recent;

In short, it reaches from the Po to Teio, And may perhaps at last be o'er the sea sent:

But Heaven preserve Old England from such courses!

Or what becomes of damage and divorces?

XXXVIII

However, I still think, with all due deference

To the fair single part of the creation, That married ladies should preserve the preference

In tête-à-tête or general conversation— And this I say without peculiar reference To England, France, or any other nation—

Because they know the world, and are at ease,

And being natural, naturally please.

XXXIX

'Tis true, your budding Miss is very charming,

But shy and awkward at first coming out,

So much alarm'd, that she is quite alarming,

All Giggle, Blush; half Pertness, and half Pout;

And glancing at Mamma, for fear there's harm in

What you, she, it, or they, may be about, The nursery still lisps out in all they utter— Besides, they always smell of bread and butter.

XL

But 'Cavalier Servente' is the phrase

Used in politest circles to express

This supernumerary slave, who stays

Close to the lady as a part of dress,

Her word the only law which he obeys.

His is no sinecure, as you may guess; Coach, servants, gondola, he goes to call, And carries fan and tippet, gloves and shawl.

XLI

With all its sinful doings, I must say,

That Italy's a pleasant place to me,

Who love to see the Sun shine every day, And vines (not nail'd to walls) from tree to tree

Festoon'd, much like the back scene of a play,

Or melodrame, which people flock to see,

When the first act is ended by a dance In vineyards copied from the south of France.

XLII

I like on Autumn evenings to ride out,

Without being forced to bid my groom be sure

My cloak is round his middle strapp'd about,

Because the skies are not the most secure;

I know too that, if stopp'd upon my route, Where the green alleys windingly allure,

Reeling with grapes red waggons choke the way,—

In England 'twould be dung, dust, or a dray.

XLIII

I also like to dine on becaficas,

To see the Sun set, sure he'll rise to-morrow,

Not through a misty morning twinkling weak as

A drunken man's dead eye in maudlin sorrow,

But with all Heaven t'himself; the day will break as Beauteous as cloudless, nor be forced to borrow

That sort of farthing candlelight which glimmers

Where reeking London's smoky caldron simmers.

XLIV

I love the language, that soft bastard Latin,
Which melts like kisses from a female
mouth,
And sounds as if it should be writ on satin,
With syllables which breathe of the sweet South,
And gentle liquids gliding all so pat in,
That not a single accent seems uncouth,
Like our harsh northern whistling, grunting guttural,
Which we're obliged to hiss, and spit, and sputter all.

XLV

I like the women too (forgive my folly),
From the rich peasant cheek of ruddy
bronze,
And large black eyes that flash on you a volley
Of rays that say a thousand things at once,
To the high dama's brow, more melancholy,
But clear, and with a wild and liquid
glance,
Heart on her lips, and soul within her eyes,
Soft as her clime, and sunny as her skies.

XLVI

Eve of the land which still is Paradise!
Italian beauty! didst thou not inspire
Raphael, who died in thy embrace, and vies
With all we know of Heaven, or can desire,
In what he hath bequeath'd us?—in what
guise,
Though flashing from the fervour of the
lyre,
Would words describe thy past and present
glow,
While yet Canova can create below?

XLVII

'England! with all thy faults I love thee
still,'
I said at Calais, and have not forgot it;
I like to speak and lucubrate my fill;
I like the government (but that is not it);
I like the freedom of the press and quill;
I like the Habeas Corpus (when we've got it);
I like a parliamentary debate,
Particularly when 'tis not too late;

XLVIII

I like the taxes, when they're not too many;
I like a seacoal fire, when not too dear;
I like a beef-steak, too, as well as any;
Have no objection to a pot of beer;
I like the weather, when it is not rainy,
That is, I like two months of every year,
And so God save the Regent, Church, and
King!
Which means that I like all and everything.

XLIX

Our standing army, and disbanded sea-
men,
Poor's rate, Reform, my own, the nation's debt,
Our little riots just to show we are free
men,
Our trifling bankruptcies in the Gazette,
Our cloudy climate, and our chilly women,
All these I can forgive, and those forget,
And greatly venerate our recent glories,
And wish they were not owing to the Tories.

L

But to my tale of Laura,—for I find Digression is a sin, that by degrees
Becomes exceeding tedious to my mind,
And, therefore, may the reader too dis-
please—
The gentle reader, who may wax unkind,
And caring little for the author's ease,
Insist on knowing what he means, a hard
And hapless situation for a bard.

LI

Oh that I had the art of easy writing
What should be easy reading! could I scale
Parnassus, where the Muses sit inditing
Those pretty poems never known to fail,
How quickly would I print (the world de-lighting)
A Grecian, Syrian, or Assyrian tale;
And sell you, mix'd with western senti-mentalism,
Some samples of the finest Orientalism!

LII

But I am but a nameless sort of person,
(A broken Dandy lately on my travels)
And take for rhyme, to hook my rambling verse on,
The first that Walker's Lexicon unravels,
And when I can't find that, I put a worse
on,
Not caring as I ought for critics' cavils;
I've half a mind to tumble down to prose,
But verse is more in fashion—so here goes.

LIII

The Count and Laura made their new arrangement,
Which lasted, as arrangements sometimes do,
For half a dozen years without estrange-
ment;
They had their little differences, too;
Those jealous whiffs, which never any change meant;
In such affairs there probably are few Who have not had this pouting sort of squabble,
From sinners of high station to the rabble.

BEPPO

LIV

But, on the whole, they were a happy pair,
As happy as unlawful love could make
them;

The gentleman was fond, the lady fair,
Their chains so slight, 'twas not worth while to break them;

The world beheld them with indulgent air;
The pious only wish'd 'the devil take
them!'

He took them not; he very often waits,
And leaves old sinners to be young ones'
baits.

LIV

But they were young: Oh! what without our youth

Would love be! What would youth be without love!

Youth lends it joy, and sweetness, vigour,
truth,

Heart, soul, and all that seems as from
above;

But, languishing with years, it grows uncouth—

One of few things experience don't improve,

Which is, perhaps, the reason why old fellows

Are always so preposterously jealous.

LVI

It was the Carnival, as I have said

Some six and thirty stanzas back, and so
Laura the usual preparations made,

Which you do when your mind's made up to go

To—into Mrs. Boehm's masquerade,

Spectator, or partaker in the show;

The only difference known between the cases

Is—here, we have six weeks of 'varnish'd faces.'

LVII

Laura, when dress'd, was (as I sang before)

A pretty woman as was ever seen,

Fresh as the Angel o'er a new inn door,

Or frontispiece of a new Magazine,

With all the fashions which the last month
wore,

Colour'd, and silver paper leaved between

That and the title-page, for fear the press
Should soil with parts of speech the parts of dress.

LVIII

They went to the Ridotto;—'tis a hall

Where people dance, and sup, and dance
again;

Its proper name, perhaps, were a masqued
ball,

But that's of no importance to my
strain;

'Tis (on a smaller scale) like our Vauxhall,
Excepting that it can't be spoilt by rain;
The company is 'mix'd' (the phrase I quote is

As much as saying they're below your notice);

LIX

For a 'mix'd company' implies that, save Yourself and friends, and half a hundred more,

Whom you may bow to without looking
grave,

The rest are but a vulgar set, the bore
Of public places, where they basely brave

The fashionable stare of twenty score,
Of well-bred persons, call'd 'The World;'

but I,
Although I know them, really don't know
why.

LX

This is the case in England; at least was

During the dynasty of Dandies, now
Perchance succeeded by some other class

Of imitated imitators:—how

Irreparably soon decline, alas!

The demagogues of fashion: all below

Is frail; how easily the world is lost

By love, or war, and now and then by frost!

LXI

Crush'd was Napoleon by the northern Thor,

Who knock'd his army down with icy hammer,

Stopp'd by the elements, like a whaler, or A blundering novice in his new French

grammar;

Good cause had he to doubt the chance of
war,

And as for Fortune—but I dare not
d—n her,

Because, were I to ponder to infinity,
The more I should believe in her divinity.

LXII

She rules the present, past, and all to be yet,
She gives us luck in lotteries, love, and

marriage;

I cannot say that she's done much for me
yet;

Not that I mean her bounties to dis-
parage,

We've not yet closed accounts, and we shall see yet

How much she'll make amends for past miscarriage.

Meantime the Goddess I'll no more impor-
tune,

Unless to thank her when she's made my fortune.

LXIII

To turn,—and to return;—the devil take it!
 This story slips for ever through my fingers,
 Because, just as the stanza likes to make it,
 It needs must be, and so it rather lingers:
 This form of verse began, I can't well break it,
 But must keep time and tune like public singers;
 But if I once get through my present measure,
 I'll take another when I'm next at leisure.

LXIV

They went to the Ridotto ('tis a place
 To which I mean to go myself to-morrow,
 Just to divert my thoughts a little space,
 Because I'm rather hippish, and may borrow
 Some spirits, guessing at what kind of face
 May lurk beneath each mask; and as
 my sorrow
 Slackens its pace sometimes, I'll make, or
 find,
 Something shall leave it half an hour behind).

LXV

Now Laura moves along the joyous crowd, Smiles in her eyes, and simpers on her
 lips;
 To some she whispers, others speaks
 aloud;
 To some she curtsies, and to some she dips,
 Complains of warmth, and this complaint
 avow'd,
 Her lover brings the lemonade, she sips;
 She then surveys, condemns, but pities still
 Her dearest friends for being dress'd so ill.

LXVI

One has false curls, another too much
 paint,
 A third—where did she buy that frightful turban?
 A fourth's so pale she fears she's going to faint,
 A fifth's look's vulgar, dowdyish, and suburban,
 A sixth's white silk has got a yellow taint,
 A seventh's thin muslin surely will be her bane,
 And lo! an eighth appears,—'I'll see no
 more!'
 For fear, like Banquo's kings, they reach a score.

LXVII

Meantime, while she was thus at others
 gazing,
 Others were levelling their looks at her;
 She heard the men's half-whisper'd mode of praising,

And, till 'twas done, determined not to
 stir;
 The women only thought it quite amazing
 That, at her time of life, so many were Admirers still,—but men are so debased, Those brazen creatures always suit their taste.

LXVIII

For my part, now, I ne'er could understand
 Why naughty women—but I won't discuss
 A thing which is a scandal to the land,
 I only don't see why it should be thus;
 And if I were but in a gown and band,
 Just to entitle me to make a fuss,
 I'd preach on this till Wilberforce and Romilly
 Should quote in their next speeches from my homily.

LXIX

While Laura thus was seen, and seeing,
 smiling,
 Talking, she knew not why, and cared not what,
 So that her female friends, with envy broil-
 ing,
 Beheld her airs and triumph, and all
 that;
 And well-dress'd males still kept before her filing,
 And passing bow'd and mingled with her chat;
 More than the rest one person seem'd to stare
 With pertinacity that's rather rare.

LXX

He was a Turk, the colour of mahogany;
 And Laura saw him, and at first was glad,
 Because the Turks so much admire philo-gyny,
 Although their usage of their wives is
 sad;
 'Tis said they use no better than a dog any Poor woman, whom they purchase like a pad;
 They have a number, though they ne'er exhibit 'em,
 Four wives by law, and concubines 'ad libitum.'

LXXI

They lock them up, and veil, and guard them daily,
 They scarcely can behold their male relations,
 So that their moments do not pass so gaily
 As is supposed the case with northern nations;

BEPPPO

Confinement, too, must make them look quite palely;
And as the Turks abhor long conversations,
Their days are either pass'd in doing
nothing,
Or bathing, nursing, making love, and clothing.

LXXII

They cannot read, and so don't lisp in criticism;
Nor write, and so they don't affect the
muse;
Were never caught in epigram or witticism,
Have no romances, sermons, plays, reviews,—
In harams learning soon would make a pretty schism,
But luckily these beauties are no 'Blues';
No bustling Botherbys have they to show
'em
'That charming passage in the last new poem:'

LXXIII

No solemn, antique gentleman of rhyme,
Who having angled all his life for fame,
And getting but a nibble at a time,
Still fussily keeps fishing on, the same
Small 'Triton of the minnows,' the sublime
Of mediocrity, the furious tame,
The echo's echo, usher of the school
Of female wits, boy bards—in short, a fool!

LXXIV

A stalking oracle of awful phrase.
The approving 'Good!' (by no means GOOD in law,) Humming like flies around the newest
blaze,
The bluest of bluebottles you e'er saw,
Teasing with blame, excruciating with
praise,
Gorging the little fame he gets all raw,
Translating tongues he knows not even by
letter,
And sweating plays so middling, bad were better.

LXXV

One hates an author that's all author,
fellows
In foolscap uniforms turn'd up with ink,
So very anxious, clever, fine, and jealous.
One don't know what to say to them, or
think,
Unless to puff them with a pair of bellows;
Of coxcombry's worst coxcombs e'en
the pink
Are preferable to these shreds of paper,
These unquench'd snuffings of the midnight taper.

LXXVI

Of these same we see several, and of others,
Men of the world, who know the world
like men,
Scott, Rogers, Moore, and all the better
brothers,
Who think of something else besides the
pen;
But for the children of the 'mighty mother's,'
The would-be wits, and can't-be gentle-
men,
I leave them to their daily tea is ready,'
Smug coterie, and literary lady.

LXXVII

The poor dear Mussulwomen whom I mention
Have none of these instructive pleasant
people,
And one would seem to them a new inven-
tion,
Unknown as bells within a Turkish steeple;
I think 'twould almost be worth while to pension
(Though best-sown projects very often reap ill)
A missionary author, just to preach
Our Christian usage of the parts of speech.

LXXVIII

No chemistry for them unfolds her gases,
No metaphysics are let loose in lectures,
No circulating library amasses
Religious novels, moral tales, and strictures
Upon the living manners, as they pass us;
No exhibition glares with annual pictures;
They stare not on the stars from out their attics,
Nor deal (thank God for that!) in mathematics.

LXXIX

Why I thank God for that is no great
matter,
I have my reasons, you no doubt sup-
pose,
And as, perhaps, they would not highly
flatter,
I'll keep them for my life (to come) in
prose;
I fear I have a little turn for satire,
And yet methinks the older that one
grows
Inclines us more to laugh than scold, though laughter
Leaves us so doubly serious shortly after.

LXXX

Oh, mirth and innocence! Oh, milk and water!

Ye happy mixtures of more happy days!
In these sad centuries of sin and slaughter,
Abominable Man no more allays
His thirst with such pure beverage. No matter,

I love you both, and both shall have my praise:
Oh, for old Saturn's reign of sugar candy!—
Meantime I drink to your return in brandy.

LXXXI

Our Laura's Turk still kept his eyes upon her,
Less in the Mussulman than Christian way,
Which seems to say, 'Madam, I do you honour,
And while I please to stare, you'll please to stay.'
Could staring win a woman, this had won her,
But Laura could not thus be led astray;
She had stood fire too long and well, to boggle
Even at this stranger's most outlandish ogle.

LXXXII

The morning now was on the point of breaking,
A turn of time at which I would advise
Ladies who have been dancing, or partaking
In any other kind of exercise,
To make their preparations for forsaking
The ball-room ere the sun begins to rise,
Because when once the lamps and candles fail,
His blushes make them look a little pale.

LXXXIII

I've seen some balls and revels in my time,
And stay'd them over for some silly reason,
And then I look'd (I hope it was no crime)
To see what lady best stood out the season,
And though I've seen some thousands in their prime,
Lovely and pleasing, and who still may please on,
I never saw but one (the stars withdrawn)
Whose bloom could after dancing dare the dawn.

LXXXIV

The name of this Aurora I'll not mention,
Although I might, for she was nought to me
More than that patent work of God's invention,
A charming woman, whom we like to see;

But writing names would merit reprehension,
Yet if you like to find out this fair she,
At the next London or Parisian ball
You still may mark her cheek out-blooming all.

LXXXV

Laura, who knew it would not do at all
To meet the daylight after seven hours' sitting
Among three thousand people at a ball,
To make her curtsy thought it right and fitting;
The Count was at her elbow with her shawl,
And they the room were on the point of quitting,
When lo! those cursed gondoliers had got
Just in the very place where they should not.

LXXXVI

In this they're like our coachmen, and the cause
Is much the same—the crowd, and pulling, hauling,
With blasphemies enough to break their jaws,
They make a never intermitted bawling.
At home, our Bow-street gemmen keep the laws,
And here a sentry stands within your calling;
But for all that, there is a deal of swearing,
And nauseous words past mentioning or bearing.

LXXXVII

The Count and Laura found their boat at last,
And homeward floated o'er the silent tide,
Discussing all the dances gone and past;
The dancers and their dresses, too, beside;
Some little scandals eke; but all aghast
(As to their palace-stairs the rowers glide)
Sate Laura by the side of her Adorer,
When lo! the Mussulman was there before her.

LXXXVIII

'Sir,' said the Count, with brow exceeding grave,
'Your unexpected presence here will make
It necessary for myself to crave
Its import? But perhaps 'tis a mistake;
I hope it is so; and, at once to waive
All compliment, I hope so for your sake;
You understand my meaning, or you shall.
'Sir' (quoth the Turk), 'tis no mistake at all;

LXXXIX

'That lady is my wife!' Much wonder paints
The lady's changing cheek, as well it
might;
But where an Englishwoman sometimes
faints,
Italian females don't do so outright;
They only call a little on their saints,
And then come to themselves, almost or
quite;
Which saves much hartshorn, salts, and sprinkling faces,
And cutting stays, as usual in such cases.

XC

She said,—what could she say? Why, not
a word:
But the Count courteously invited in The stranger, much appeased by what he
heard:
'Such things, perhaps, we'd best discuss
within,'
Said he; 'don't let us make ourselves absurd
In public, by a scene, nor raise a din,
For then the chief and only satisfaction
Will be much quizzing on the whole transaction.'

XCI

They enter'd, and for coffee call'd—it came,
A beverage for Turks and Christians
both,
Although the way they make it's not the
same.
Now Laura, much recover'd, or less loth
To speak, cries 'Beppo! what's your pagan
name?
Bless me! your beard is of amazing
growth!
And how came you to keep away so long?
Are you not sensible 'twas very wrong?

XCII

'And are you really, truly, now a Turk?
With any other women did you wive?
Is't true they use their fingers for a fork?
Well, that's the prettiest shawl—as I'm alive!
You'll give it me? They say you eat no
pork.
And how so many years did you contrive
To—Bless me! did I ever? No, I never Saw a man grown so yellow! How's your liver?

XCIII

'Beppo! that beard of yours becomes you
not;
It shall be shaved before you're a day
older:
Why do you wear it? Oh! I had forgot—Pray don't you think the weather here is colder?

How do I look? You shan't stir from this
spot
In that queer dress, for fear that some beholder
Should find you out, and make the story
known.
How short your hair is! Lord! how grey it's grown!

XCIV

What answer Beppo made to these demands
Is more than I know. He was cast away About where Troy stood once, and nothing stands;
Became a slave of course, and for his pay
Had bread and bastinadoes, till some bands
Of pirates landing in a neighbouring bay,
He join'd the rogues and prosper'd, and
became
A renegado of indifferent fame.

XCV

But he grew rich, and with his riches grew
so
Keen the desire to see his home again,
He thought himself in duty bound to do so,
And not be always thieving on the main;
Lonely he felt, at times, as Robin Crusoe,
And so he hired a vessel come from
Spain,
Bound for Corfu: she was a fine polacca, Mann'd with twelve hands, and laden with tobacco.

XCVI

Himself, and much (Heaven knows how gotten!) cash,
He then embark'd, with risk of life and
limb,
And got clear off, although the attempt was rash;
He said that Providence protected him—
For my part, I say nothing—lest we clash
In our opinions:—well, the ship was trim,
Set sail, and kept her reckoning fairly on,
Except three days of calm when off Cape Bonn.

XCVII

They reach'd the island, he transferr'd his lading
And self and livestock to another bottom,
And pass'd for a true Turkey-merchant, trading
With goods of various names, but I've forgot 'em.
However, he got off by this evading,
Or else the people would perhaps have shot him;
And thus at Venice landed to reclaim His wife, religion, house, and Christian name.

XCVIII

His wife received, the patriarch re-baptized him
 (He made the church a present, by the way);
 He then threw off the garments which disguised him,
 And borrow'd the Count's smallclothes for a day:
 His friends the more for his long absence prized him,
 Finding he'd wherewithal to make them gay,
 With dinners, where he oft became the laugh of them,
 For stories—but I don't believe the half of them.

Whate'er his youth had suffer'd, his old age
 With wealth and talking made him some amends;
 Though Laura sometimes put him in a rage,
 I've heard the Count and he were always friends.
 My pen is at the bottom of a page,
 Which being finish'd, here the story ends;
 'Tis to be wish'd it had been sooner done,
 But stories somehow lengthen when begun.

DON JUAN

'Difficile est propriè communia dicere.'—HORACE.

'Dost thou think, because thou art virtuous, there shall be no more cakes and ale? Yes, by Saint Anne, and ginger shall be hot i' the mouth, too!'—SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, or What You Will.

CANTO THE FIRST*

FRAGMENT

On the back of the Poet's MS. of Canto I.
 I WOULD to heaven that I were so much clay,
 As I am blood, bone, marrow, passion, feeling—
 Because at least the past were pass'd away—
 And for the future—(but I write this reeling,
 Having got drunk exceedingly to-day,
 So that I seem to stand upon the ceiling)
 I say—the future is a serious matter—
 And so—for God's sake—hock and soda-water!

DEDICATION

I

BOB SOUTHEY! You're a poet—Poet-laureate,
 And representative of all the race;
 Although 'tis true that you turn'd out a Tory at Last,—yours has lately been a common case;
 And now, my Epic Renegade! what are ye at?

With all the Lakers, in and out of place?
 A nest of tuneful persons, to my eye
 Like 'four and twenty Blackbirds in a pye;

* ['Begun at Venice September 6; finished Nov. 1, 1818.—B.]

II

'Which pye being open'd they began to sing, (This old song and new simile holds good),
 'A dainty dish to set before the King,'
 Or Regent, who admires such kind of food;—
 And Coleridge, too, has lately taken wing,
 But like a hawk encumber'd with his hood,— Explaining metaphysics to the nation—
 I wish he would explain his Explanation.

III

You, Bob! are rather insolent, you know,
 At being disappointed in your wish
 To supersede all warblers here below,
 And be the only Blackbird in the dish;
 And then you overstrain yourself, or so,
 And tumble downward like the flying fish
 Gasping on deck, because you soar too high, Bob,
 And fall, for lack of moisture quite a-dry, Bob!

IV

And Wordsworth, in a rather long 'Excursion'
 (I think the quarto holds five hundred pages),
 Has given a sample from the vasty version
 Of his new system to perplex the sages;

'Tis poetry—at least by his assertion,
And may appear so when the dog-star rages—
And he who understands it would be able To add a story to the Tower of Babel.

V

You—Gentlemen! by dint of long seclusion
From better company, have kept your
own
At Keswick, and, through still continued
fusion
Of one another's minds, at last have grown
To deem as a most logical conclusion,
That Poesy has wreaths for you alone:
There is a narrowness in such a notion,
Which makes me wish you'd change your lakes for ocean.

VI

I would not imitate the petty thought,
Nor coin my self-love to so base a vice,
For all the glory your conversion brought,
Since gold alone should not have been its price.
You have your salary: was't for that you
wrought?
And Wordsworth has his place in the Excise.
You're shabby fellows—true—but poets
still,
And duly seated on the immortal hill.

VII

Your bays may hide the baldness of your brows—
Perhaps some virtuous blushes;—let them go—
To you I envy neither fruit nor boughs—
And for the fame you would engross
below,
The field is universal, and allows Scope to all such as feel the inherent
glow:
Scott, Rogers, Campbell, Moore, and Crabbe, will try
'Gainst you the question with posterity.

VIII

For me, who, wandering with pedestrian Muses,
Contend not with you on the winged
steed,
I wish your fate may yield ye, when she chooses,
The fame you envy, and the skill you
need;
And recollect a poet nothing loses
In giving to his brethren their full meed
Of merit, and complaint of present days
Is not the certain path to future praise.

IX

He that reserves his laurels for posterity (Who does not often claim the bright reversion)
Has generally no great crop to spare it, he Being only injured by his own assertion;
And although here and there some glorious rarity
Arise like Titan from the sea's immersion,
The major part of such appellants go
To—God knows where—for no one else can know.

X

If, fallen in evil days on evil tongues,
Milton appealed to the Avenger, Time,
If Time, the Avenger, execrates his wrongs,
And makes the word 'Miltonic' mean
'sublime,'
He deign'd not to belie his soul in songs,
Nor turn his very talent to a crime;
He did not loathe the Sire to laud the Son,
But closed the tyrant-hater he begun.

XI

Think'st thou, could he—the blind Old Man—arise,
Like Samuel from the grave, to freeze
once more
The blood of monarchs with his prophecies,
Or be alive again—again all hoar
With time and trials, and those helpless
eyes,
And heartless daughters—worn—and
pale—and poor;
Would he adore a sultan? he obey
The intellectual eunuch Castlereagh?

XII

Cold-blooded, smooth-faced, placid miscreant!
Dabbling its sleek young hands in Erin's
gore,
And thus for wider carnage taught to pant,
Transferr'd to gorge upon a sister shore,
The vulgarest tool that Tyranny could want,
With just enough of talent, and no more,
To lengthen fetters by another fix'd,
And offer poison long already mix'd.

XIII

An orator of such set trash of phrase
Ineffably—legitimately vile,
That even its grossest flatterers dare not
praise,
Nor foes—all nations—condescend to
smile;
Not even a sprightly blunder's spark can
blaze
From that Ixion grindstone's ceaseless
toil,
That turns and turns to give the world a notion
Of endless torments and perpetual motion.

XIV

A bungler even in its disgusting trade,
And botching, patching, leaving still behind
Something of which its masters are afraid, States to be curb'd, and thoughts to be confined,
Conspiracy or Congress to be made—
Cobbling at manacles for all mankind—
A tinkering slave-maker, who mends old
chains,
With God and man's abhorrence for its gains.

XV

If we may judge of matter by the mind,
Emasculated to the marrow It Hath but two objects, how to serve, and
bind,
Deeming the chain it wears even men,
may fit,
Eutropius of its many masters,—blind
To worth as freedom, wisdom as to wit,
Fearless—because no feeling dwells in ice,
Its very courage stagnates to a vice.

XVI

Where shall I turn me not to view its bonds,
For I will never feel them;—Italy!
Thy late reviving Roman soul desponds
Beneath the lie this State-thing breathed
o'er thee—
Thy clanking chain, and Erin's yet green
wounds,
Have voices—tongues to cry aloud for
me.
Europe has slaves, allies, kings, armies still,
And Southey lives to sing them very ill.

XVII

Meantime, Sir Laureate, I proceed to dedicate,
In honest simple verse, this song to you.
And, if in flattering strains I do not predicate,
'Tis that I still retain my 'buff and blue;'
My politics as yet are all to educate:
Apostasy's so fashionable, too,
To keep one creed's a task grown quite Herculean:
Is it not so, my Tory, ultra-Julian?

VENICE, September 16, 1818.

I

I WANT a hero: an uncommon want,
When every year and month sends forth
a new one,
Till, after cloying the gazettes with cant,
The age discovers he is not the true one:
Of such as these I should not care to vaunt,
I'll therefore take our ancient friend
Don Juan—
We all have seen him, in the pantomime,
Sent to the devil somewhat ere his time.

II

Vernon, the butcher Cumberland, Wolfe,
Hawke,
Prince Ferdinand, Granby, Burgoyne,
Keppel, Howe,
Evil and good, have had their tithe of talk,
And fill'd their sign-posts then, like Wellesley now;
Each in their turn like Banquo's monarchs
stalk,
Followers of fame, 'nine farrow' of that sow:
France, too, had Buonaparté and Du-mourier
Recorded in the Moniteur and Courier.

III

Barnave, Brissot, Condorcet, Mirabeau,
Pétion, Clotz, Danton, Marat, La Fayette,
Were French, and famous people, as we
know;
And there were others, scarce forgotten
yet,
Joubert, Hoche, Marceau, Lannes, De-
saix, Moreau,
With many of the military set,
Exceedingly remarkable at times,
But not at all adapted to my rhymes.

IV

Nelson was once Britannia's god of war,
And still should be so, but the tide is
turn'd;
There's no more to be said of Trafalgar,
'Tis with our hero quietly inurn'd;
Because the army's grown more popular,
At which the naval people are con-
cern'd,
Besides, the prince is all for the land-
service,
Forgetting Duncan, Nelson, Howe, and Jervis.

Brave men were living before Agamemnon
And since, exceeding valorous and sage,
A good deal like him too, though quite the same none;
But then they shone not on the poet's
page,
And so have been forgotten:—I condemn
none,
But can't find any in the present age
Fit for my poem (that is, for my new one);
So, as I said, I'll take my friend Don Juan.

VI

Most epic poets plunge 'in medias res' (Horace makes this the heroic turnpike road),
And then your hero tells, whene'er you
please,
What went before—by way of episode,

While seated after dinner at his ease,
Beside his mistress in some soft abode,
Palace, or garden, paradise, or cavern,
Which serves the happy couple for a tavern.

VII

That is the usual method, but not mine—
My way is to begin with the beginning;
The regularity of my design Forbids all wandering as the worst of sinning,
And therefore I shall open with a line (Although it cost me half an hour in spinning)
Narrating somewhat of Don Juan's father,
And also of his mother, if you'd rather.

VIII

In Seville was he born, a pleasant city,
Famous for oranges and women—he
Who has not seen it will be much to pity,
So says the proverb—and I quite agree;
Of all the Spanish towns is none more
pretty,
Cadiz, perhaps—but that you soon may
see:—

Don Juan's parents lived beside the river,
A noble stream, and call'd the Guadalquivir.

IX

His father's name was José—Don, of
course,
A true Hidalgo, free from every stain
Of Moor or Hebrew blood, he traced his
source
Through the most Gothic gentlemen of Spain;
A better cavalier ne'er mounted horse,
Or, being mounted, e'er got down again,
Than José, who begot our hero, who Begot—but that's to come—Well, to renew:

His mother was a learned lady, famed
For every branch of every science
known—
In every Christian language ever named,
With virtues equall'd by her wit alone:
She made the cleverest people quite
ashamed,
And even the good with inward envy
groan,
Finding themselves so very much exceeded
In their own way by all the things that she did.

XI

Her memory was a mine: she knew by heart
All Calderon and greater part of Lope,
So that if any actor miss'd his part She could have served him for the prompter's copy;

For her Feinagle's were an useless art,
And he himself obliged to shut up shop
—he Could never make a memory so fine as
That which adorn'd the brain of Donna Inez.

XII

Her favourite science was the mathematical,
Her noblest virtue was her magnanim-
ity;
Her wit (she sometimes tried at wit) was Attic all,
Her serious sayings darken'd to sublimity;
In short, in all things she was fairly what I call
A prodigy—her morning dress was dimity,
Her evening silk, or, in the summer,
muslin,
And other stuffs, with which I won't stay puzzling.

XIII

She knew the Latin—that is, 'the Lord's
prayer,'
And Greek—the alphabet—I'm nearly
sure;
She read some French romances here and
there,
Although her mode of speaking was not
pure;
For native Spanish she had no great care,
At least her conversation was obscure;
Her thoughts were theorems, her words a problem,
As if she deem'd that mystery would ennoble 'em.

XIV

She liked the English and the Hebrew
tongue,
And said there was analogy between
'em;
She proved it somehow out of sacred song,
But I must leave the proofs to those who've seen 'em,
But this I heard her say, and can't be wrong,
And all may think which way their judgments lean 'em,
"Tis strange—the Hebrew noun which means "I am,"
The English always use to govern d—n.'

XV

Some women use their tongues—she look'd a lecture,
Each eye a sermon, and her brow a
homily,
An all-in-all sufficient self-director,
Like the lamented late Sir Samuel
Romilly,

The Law's expounder, and the State's corrector,
 Whose suicide was almost an anomaly—
 One sad example more, that 'All is vanity,'—
 (The jury brought their verdict in 'Insanity.')

XVI

In short, she was a walking calculation, Miss Edgeworth's novels stepping from their covers,
 Or Mrs. Trimmer's books on education, Or 'Cœlebs' Wife' set out in quest of
 lovers,
 Morality's prim personification,
 In which not Envy's self a flaw discovers;
 To others' share let 'female errors fall,'
 For she had not even one—the worst of all.

XVII

Oh! she was perfect past all parallel—
 Of any modern female saint's comparison;
 So far above the cunning powers of hell,
 Her guardian angel had given up his garrison;
 Even her minutest motions went as well
 As of the best time-piece made by Harrison:
 In virtues nothing earthly could surpass her,
 Save thine 'incomparable oil,' Macassar!

XVIII

Perfect she was, but as perfection is Insipid in this naughty world of ours,
 Where our first parents never learn'd to
 kiss
 Till they were exiled from their earlier
 bowers,
 Where all was peace, and innocence, and bliss
 (I wonder how they got through the twelve hours),
 Don José, like a lineal son of Eve,
 Went plucking various fruit without her leave.

XIX

He was a mortal of the careless kind,
 With no great love for learning, or the
 learn'd,
 Who chose to go where'er he had a mind,
 And never dream'd his lady was concern'd;
 The world, as usual, wickedly inclined
 To see a kingdom or a house o'erturn'd, Whisper'd he had a mistress, some said
two,
 But for domestic quarrels one will do.

XX

Now Donna Inez had, with all her merit,
 A great opinion of her own good
 qualities;
 Neglect, indeed, requires a saint to bear it,
 And such, indeed, she was in her moralities;
 But then she had a devil of a spirit,
 And sometimes mix'd up fancies with realities,
 And let few opportunities escape
 Of getting her liege lord into a scrape.

XXI

This was an easy matter with a man
 Oft in the wrong, and never on his
 guard;
 And even the wisest, do the best they can,
 Have moments, hours, and days, so un-
 prepared,
 That you might 'brain them with their lady's fan';
 And sometimes ladies hit exceeding
 hard,
 And fans turn into falchions in fair hands,
 And why and wherefore no one understands.

XXII

'Tis pity learned virgins ever wed
 With persons of no sort of education,
 Or gentlemen, who, though well born and
 bred,
 Grow tired of scientific conversation;
 I don't choose to say much upon this head,
 I'm a plain man, and in a single station,
 But—Oh! ye lords of ladies intellectual,
 Inform us truly have they not hen-peck'd you all?

XXIII

Don José and his lady quarrell'd—why,
 Not any of the many could divine, Though several thousand people chose to
 try,
 'Twas surely no concern of theirs nor
 mine;
 I loathe that low vice—curiosity;
 But if there's anything in which I shine,
 'Tis in arranging all my friends' affairs,
 Not having, of my own, domestic cares.

XXIV

And so I interfered, and with the best Intentions, but their treatment was not
 kind;
 I think the foolish people were possess'd,
 For neither of them could I ever find,
 Although their porter afterwards con-
 fess'd—
 But that's no matter, and the worst's
 behind,
 For little Juan o'er me threw, down stairs,
 A pail of housemaid's water unawares.

XXV

A little curly-headed, good-for-nothing,
 And mischief-making monkey from his
 birth;
 His parents ne'er agreed except in doting
 Upon the most unquiet imp on earth;
 Instead of quarrelling, had they been but both in Their senses, they'd have sent young master forth
 To school, or had him soundly whipp'd at
 home,
 To teach him manners for the time to come.

XXVI

Don José and the Donna Inez led
 For some time an unhappy sort of life, Wishing each other, not divorced, but
 dead;
 They lived respectably as man and wife,
 Their conduct was exceedingly well-bred,
 And gave no outward signs of inward
 strife,
 Until at length the smother'd fire broke out,
 And put the business past all kind of doubt.

XXVII

For Inez call'd some druggists and physicians,
 And tried to prove her loving lord was
mad,
 But as he had some lucid intermissions,
 She next decided he was only bad;
 Yet when they ask'd her for her deposi-
 tions,
 No sort of explanation could be had,
 Save that her duty both to man and God Required this conduct—which seem'd very odd.

XXVIII

She kept a journal, where his faults were noted,
 And open'd certain trunks of books and letters,
 All which might, if occasion served, be quoted;
 And then she had all Seville for abettors, Besides her good old grandmother (who doted);
 The hearers of her case became re-peaters,
 Then advocates, inquisitors, and judges,
 Some for amusement, others for old grudges.

XXIX

And then this best and meekest woman
 bore
 With such serenity her husband's woes,
 Just as the Spartan ladies did of yore,
 Who saw their spouses kill'd, and nobly chose

Never to say a word about them more—Calmly she heard each calumny that
 rose,
 And saw his agonies with such sublimity,
 That all the world exclaim'd, 'What magnanimity!'

XXX

No doubt this patience, when the world is damning us,
 Is philosophic in our former friends;
 'Tis also pleasant to be deem'd magnanimous,
 The more so in obtaining our own ends;
 And what the lawyers call a 'malus
animus'
 Conduct like this by no means compre-
 hends:
 Revenge in person's certainly no virtue,
 But then 'tis not my fault, if others hurt
 you.

XXXI

And if our quarrels should rip up old stories,
 And help them with a lie or two additional,
 I'm not to blame, as you well know—no more is Any one else—they were become traditional;
 Besides, their resurrection aids our glories;
 By contrast, which is what we just were wishing all:
 And science profits by this resurrection—
 Dead scandals form good subjects for dissection.

XXXII

Their friends had tried at reconciliation,
 Then their relations, who made matters
 worse,
 ('Twere hard to tell upon a like occasion
 To whom it may be best to have re-
 course—
 I can't say much for friend or yet relation):
 The lawyers did their utmost for divorce;
 But scarce a fee was paid on either side
 Before, unluckily, Don José died.

XXXIII

He died: and most unluckily, because,
 According to all hints I could collect From counsel learned in those kinds of
 laws
 (Although their talk's obscure and cir-cumspect),
 His death contrived to spoil a charming
 cause;
 A thousand pities also with respect
 To public feeling, which on this occasion
 Was manifested in a great sensation.

XXXIV

But ah! he died; and buried with him lay
 The public feeling and the lawyers' fees:
 His house was sold, his servants sent
 away,
 A Jew took one of his two mistresses,
 A priest the other—at least so they say:
 I ask'd the doctors after his disease—
 He died of the slow fever called the tertian,
 And left his widow to her own aversion.

XXXV

Yet José was an honourable man,
 That I must say, who knew him very
 well;
 Therefore his frailties I'll no further scan, Indeed there were not many more to
 tell:
 And if his passions now and then outran
 Discretion, and were not so peaceable
 As Numa's (who was also named Pompilius),
 He had been ill brought up, and was born bilious.

XXXVI

Whate'er might be his worthlessness or
 worth,
 Poor fellow! he had many things to wound him,
 Let's own—since it can do no good on
 earth—
 It was a trying moment that which found him
 Standing alone beside his desolate hearth,
 Where all his household gods lay shiver'd round him:
 No choice was left his feelings or his pride, Save death or Doctors' Commons—so he
 died.

XXXVII

Dying intestate, Juan was sole heir
 To a chancery suit, and messuages and
 lands,
 Which, with a long minority and care,
 Promised to turn out well in proper
 hands:
 Inez became sole guardian, which was fair,
 And answer'd but to nature's just demands;
 An only son left with an only mother Is brought up much more wisely than another.

XXXVIII

Sagest of women, even of widows, she Resolved that Juan should be quite a paragon,
 And worthy of the noblest pedigree:
 (His sire was of Castile, his dam from Aragon).

Then for accomplishments of chivalry,
 In case our lord the king should go to war again,
 He learn'd the arts of riding, fencing, gunnery,
 And how to scale a fortress—or a nunnery.

XXXIX

But that which Donna Inez most desired,
 And saw into herself each day before all The learned tutors whom for him she hired,
 Was, that his breeding should be strictly moral:
 Much into all his studies she inquired,
 And so they were submitted first to her,
 all,
 Arts, sciences, no branch was made a mystery
 To Juan's eyes, excepting natural history.

XL

The languages, especially the dead,
 The sciences, and most of all the abstruse,
 The arts, at least all such as could be said
 To be the most remote from common
 use,
 In all these he was much and deeply read:
 But not a page of anything that's loose,
 Or hints continuation of the species,
 Was ever suffer'd, lest he should grow vicious.

XLI

His classic studies made a little puzzle,
 Because of filthy loves of gods and goddesses,
 Who in the earlier ages raised a bustle,
 But never put on pantaloons or bodices;
 His reverend tutors had at times a tussle,
 And for their Æneids, Iliads, and Odysseys,
 Were forced to make an odd sort of apology,
 For Donna Inez dreaded the Mythology.

XLII

Ovid's a rake, as half his verses show him, Anacreon's morals are a still worse
 sample,
 Catullus scarcely has a decent poem,
 I don't think Sappho's Ode a good example,
 Although Longinus tells us there is no
 hymn
 Where the sublime soars forth on wings
 more ample;
 But Virgil's songs are pure, except that horrid one Beginning with 'Formosum Pastor Cory-don.'

XLIII

Lucretius' irreligion is too strong
 For early stomachs, to prove wholesome food;
 I can't help thinking Juvenal was wrong,
 Although no doubt his real intent was
 good,
 For speaking out so plainly in his song,
 So much indeed as to be downright
 rude;
 And then what proper person can be partial
 To all those nauseous epigrams of Martial?

XLIV

Juan was taught from out the best edition,
 Expurgated by learned men, who place,
 Judiciously, from out the schoolboy's
 vision,
 The grosser parts; but, fearful to deface Too much their modest bard by this omission,
 And pitying sore this mutilated case,
 They only add them all in an appendix,
 Which saves, in fact, the trouble of an index;

XLV

For there we have them all 'at one fell swoop,' Instead of being scatter'd through the pages;
 They stand forth marshall'd in a handsome
 troop,
 To meet the ingenuous youth of future
 ages,
 Till some less rigid editor shall stoop
 To call them back into their separate cages,
 Instead of standing staring all together,
 Like garden gods—and not so decent either.

XLVI

The Missal too (it was the family Missal)
 Was ornamented in a sort of way Which ancient mass-books often are, and this all Kinds of grotesques illumined; and how
 they,
 Who saw those figures on the margin kiss
 all,
 Could turn their optics to the text and
 pray,
 Is more than I know—But Don Juan's
 mother
 Kept this herself, and gave her son another.

XLVII

Sermons he read, and lectures he endured;
 And homilies, and lives of all the saints;
 To Jerome and to Chrysostom inured,
 He did not take such studies for restraints;

But how faith is acquired, and then insured,

So well not one of the aforesaid paints
 As Saint Augustine in his fine Confessions, Which make the reader envy his transgressions.

XLVIII

This, too, was a seal'd book to little Juan—
 I can't but say that his mamma was right,
 If such an education was the true one.
 She scarcely trusted him from out her
 sight;
 Her maids were old, and if she took a new
 one,
 You might be sure she was a perfect
 fright,
 She did this during even her husband's
 life—
 I recommend as much to every wife.

XLIX

Young Juan wax'd in godliness and grace;
 At six a charming child, and at eleven
 With all the promise of as fine a face
 As e'er to man's maturer growth was
 given.
 He studied steadily and grew apace,
 And seem'd, at least, in the right road to
 heaven,
 For half his days were pass'd at church,
 the other
 Between his tutors, confessor, and mother.

L

At six, I said, he was a charming child,
 At twelve he was a fine, but quiet boy;
 Although in infancy a little wild,
 They tamed him down amongst them:
 to destroy
 His natural spirit not in vain they toil'd,
 At least it seem'd so; and his mother's
 joy
 Was to declare how sage, and still, and
 steady,
 Her young philosopher was grown already.

LI

I had my doubts, perhaps I have them still,
 But what I say is neither here nor there:
 I knew his father well, and have some skill
 In character—but it would not be fair
 From sire to son to augur good or ill:
 He and his wife were an ill sorted pair—
 But scandal's my aversion—I protest Against all evil speaking, even in jest.

LII

For my part I say nothing—nothing—but This I will say—my reasons are my
 own—
 That if I had an only son to put To school (as God be praised that I have
 none),

'Tis not with Donna Inez I would shut
Him up to learn his catechism alone,
No—no—I'd send him out betimes to college,
For there it was I pick'd up my own knowledge.

LIII

For there one learns—'tis not for me to
boast,
Though I acquired—but I pass over
that,
As well as all the Greek I since have lost:
I say that there's the place—but '*Verbum
sat*,'
I think I pick'd up too, as well as most,
Knowledge of matters—but no matter
what—
I never married—but, I think, I know
That sons should not be educated so.

LIV

Young Juan now was sixteen years of age,
Tall, handsome, slender, but well knit:
he seem'd
Active, though not so sprightly, as a page;
And everybody but his mother deem'd
Him almost man; but she flew in a rage
And bit her lips (for else she might have scream'd)
If any said so, for to be precocious
Was in her eyes a thing the most atrocious.

LV

Amongst her numerous acquaintance, all
Selected for discretion and devotion,
There was the Donna Julia, whom to call Pretty were but to give a feeble notion
Of many charms in her as natural As sweetness to the flower, or salt to
ocean,
Her zone to Venus, or his bow to Cupid
(But this last simile is trite and stupid).

LVI

The darkness of her Oriental eye
Accorded with her Moorish origin;
(Her blood was not all Spanish, by the by;
In Spain, you know, this is a sort of sin).
When proud Granada fell, and, forced to
fly,
Boabdil wept, of Donna Julia's kin
Some went to Africa, some stay'd in Spain,
Her great great grandmamma chose to remain.

LVII

She married (I forget the pedigree)
With an Hidalgo, who transmitted down
His blood less noble than such blood
should be;
At such alliances his sires would frown,

In that point so precise in each degree
That they bred in and in, as might be
shown,
Marrying their cousins—nay, their aunts,
and nieces,
Which always spoils the breed, if it increases.

LVIII

This heathenish cross restored the breed
again,
Ruin'd its blood, but much improved
its flesh;
For from a root the ugliest in old Spain Sprung up a branch as beautiful as fresh;
The sons no more were short, the daughters
plain:
But there's a rumour which I fain would
hush,
'Tis said that Donna Julia's grandmamma Produced her Don more heirs at love than law.

LIX

However this might be, the race went on Improving still through every genera-
tion,
Until it centred in an only son,
Who left an only daughter: my narra-
tion
May have suggested that this single one Could be but Julia (whom on this occasion
I shall have much to speak about), and she Was married, charming, chaste, and twenty-three.

LX

Her eye (I'm very fond of handsome eyes)
Was large and dark, suppressing half its
fire
Until she spoke, then through its soft disguise
Flash'd an expression more of pride than ire,
And love than either; and there would
arise
A something in them which was not desire,
But would have been, perhaps, but for the
soul
Which struggled through and chasten'd down the whole.

LXI

Her glossy hair was cluster'd o'er a brow Bright with intelligence, and fair, and smooth;
Her eyebrow's shape was like the aerial
bow,
Her cheek all purple with the beam of
youth,

Mounting, at times, to a transparent glow,
 As if her veins ran lightning; she, in
 sooth,
 Possess'd an air and grace by no means
 common:
 Her stature tall—I hate a dumpy woman.

LXII

Wedded she was some years, and to a man
 Of fifty, and such husbands are in plenty;
 And yet, I think, instead of such a ONE
 'Twere better to have TWO of five-and-
 twenty,
 Especially in countries near the sun:
 And now I think on't, 'mi vien in mente,' Ladies even of the most uneasy virtue Prefer a spouse whose age is short of thirty.

LXIII

'Tis a sad thing, I cannot choose but say,
 And all the fault of that indecent sun,
 Who cannot leave alone our helpless clay,
 But will keep baking, broiling, burning
 on,
 That howsoever people fast and pray,
 The flesh is frail, and so the soul undone:
 What men call gallantry, and gods
 adultery,
 Is much more common where the climate's sultry.

LXIV

Happy the nations of the moral North!
 Where all is virtue, and the winter season
 Sends sin, without a rag on, shivering forth ('Twas snow that brought St. Anthony to reason);
 Where juries cast up what a wife is worth,
 By laying whate'er sum, in mulct, they please on
 The lover, who must pay a handsome price,
 Because it is a marketable vice.

LXV

Alfonso was the name of Julia's lord,
 A man well looking for his years, and
 who Was neither much beloved nor yet
 abhorr'd:
 They lived together as most people do,
 Suffering each other's foibles by accord,
 And not exactly either one or two;
 Yet he was jealous, though he did not show it,
 For jealousy dislikes the world to know it.

LXVI

Julia was—yet I never could see why—
 With Donna Inez quite a favourite
 friend;
 Between their tastes there was small sympathy,
 For not a line had Julia ever penn'd:

Some people whisper (but, no doubt, they
 lie,
 For malice still imputes some private end)
 That Inez had, ere Don Alfonso's marriage,
 Forgot with him her very prudent carriage;

LXVII

And that still keeping up the old connexion,
 Which time had lately render'd much more chaste,
 She took his lady also in affection,
 And certainly this course was much the
 best:
 She flatter'd Julia with her sage protection,
 And complimented Don Alfonso's
 taste;
 And if she could not (who can?) silence scandal,
 At least she left it a more slender handle.

LXVIII

I can't tell whether Julia saw the affair
 With other people's eyes, or if her own Discoveries made, but none could be aware
 Of this, at least no symptom e'er was
 shown;
 Perhaps she did not know, or did not care,
 Indifferent from the first, or callous
 grown:
 I'm really puzzled what to think or say,
 She kept her counsel in so close a way.

LXIX

Juan she saw, and, as a pretty child, Caress'd him often—such a thing might
 be Quite innocently done, and harmless
 styled,
 When she had twenty years, and thirteen
 he;
 But I am not so sure I should have smiled
 When he was sixteen, Julia twenty-
 three;
 These few short years make wondrous alterations,
 Particularly amongst sun-burnt nations.

LXX

Whate'er the cause might be, they had become Changed; for the dame grew distant, the youth shy,
 Their looks cast down, their greetings
 almost dumb,
 And much embarrassment in either eye;
 There surely will be little doubt with some
 That Donna Julia knew the reason why,
 But as for Juan, he had no more notion
 Than he who never saw the sea of ocean.

LXXI

Yet Julia's very coldness still was kind,
 And tremulously gentle her small hand
 Withdrew itself from his, but left behind
 A little pressure, thrilling, and so bland
 And slight, so very slight, that to the mind
 'Twas but a doubt; but ne'er magician's wand
 Wrought change with all Armida's fairy
 Like what this light touch left on Juan's
 heart.

LXXII

And if she met him, though she smiled no
 more,
 She look'd a sadness sweeter than her
 smile,
 As if her heart had deeper thoughts in store
 She must not own, but cherish'd more the while
 For that compression in its burning core;
 Even innocence itself has many a wile,
 And will not dare to trust itself with truth,
 And love is taught hypocrisy from youth.

LXXIII

But passion most dissembles, yet betrays
 Even by its darkness; as the blackest sky
 Foretells the heaviest tempest, it displays
 Its workings through the vainly guarded
 eye,
 And in whatever aspect it arrays
 Itself, 'tis still the same hypocrisy:
 Coldness or anger, even disdain or hate,
 Are masks it often wears, and still too late.

LXXIV

Then there were sighs, the deeper for suppression,
 And stolen glances, sweeter for the theft,
 And burning blushes, though for no transgression,
 Tremblings when met, and restlessness
 when left;
 All these are little preludes to possession,
 Of which young passion cannot be be-
 reft,
 And merely tend to show how greatly love is Embarrass'd at first starting with a novice.

LXXV

Poor Julia's heart was in an awkward
 state;
 She felt it going, and resolved to make
 The noblest efforts for herself and mate,
 For honour's, pride's, religion's, virtue's sake.
 Her resolutions were most truly great,
 And almost might have made a Tarquin
 quake:
 She pray'd the Virgin Mary for her grace,
 As being the best judge of a lady's case.

LXXVI

She vow'd she never would see Juan more,
 And next day paid a visit to his mother,
 And look'd extremely at the opening door,
 Which, by the Virgin's grace, let in
 another;
 Grateful she was, and yet a little sore—
 Again it opens, it can be no other,
 'Tis surely Juan now—No! I'm afraid That night the Virgin was no further pray'd.

LXXVII

She now determined that a virtuous
 woman
 Should rather face and overcome
 temptation,
 That flight was base and dastardly, and no
 man
 Should ever give her heart the least sensation;
 That is to say, a thought beyond the common
 Preference, that we must feel upon occasion,
 For people who are pleasanter than others,
 But then they only seem so many brothers.

LXXVIII

And even if by chance—and who can tell?
 The devil's so very sly—she should discover
 That all within was not so very well,
 And, if still free, that such or such a lover
 Might please perhaps, a virtuous wife can quell
 Such thoughts, and be the better when they're over;
 And if the man should ask, 'tis but denial:
 I recommend young ladies to make trial.

LXXIX

And then there are such things as love
 divine,
 Bright and immaculate, unmix'd and
 pure,
 Such as the angels think so very fine,
 And matrons, who would be no less
 secure,
 Platonic, perfect, 'just such love as mine':
 Thus Julia said—and thought so, to be
 sure;
 And so I'd have her think, were I the man
 On whom her reveries celestial ran.

LXXX

Such love is innocent, and may exist Between young persons without any
 danger:
 A hand may first, and then a lip be kist;
 For my part, to such doings I'm a
 stranger,

But hear these freedoms form the utmost list

Of all o'er which such love may be a ranger:

If people go beyond, 'tis quite a crime,
But not my fault—I tell them all in time.

LXXXI

Love, then, but love within its proper limits

Was Julia's innocent determination
In young Don Juan's favour, and to him its Exertion might be useful on occasion;

And, lighted at too pure a shrine to dim its Ethereal lustre, with what sweet persuasion

He might be taught, by love and her together—

I really don't know what, nor Julia either.

LXXXII

Fraught with this fine intention, and well fenced

In mail of proof—her purity of soul,
She, for the future of her strength convinced,

And that her honour was a rock, or mole,
Exceeding sagely from that hour dispensed

With any kind of troublesome control;
But whether Julia to the task was equal
Is that which must be mention'd in the sequel.

LXXXIII

Her plan she deem'd both innocent and feasible,

And, surely, with a stripling of sixteen
Not scandal's fangs could fix on much that's seizable,

Or if they did so, satisfied to mean Nothing but what was good, her breast was peaceable:

A quiet conscience makes one so serene!
Christians have burnt each other, quite persuaded

That all the Apostles would have done as they did.

LXXXIV

And if in the mean time her husband died,
But Heaven forbid that such a thought should cross

Her brain, though in a dream! (and then she sigh'd)

Never could she survive that common
loss;

But just suppose that moment should be-
tide,

I only say suppose it—inter nos.
(This should be entre nous, for Julia
thought

In French, but then the rhyme would go for nought.)

LXXXV

I only say, suppose this supposition:
Juan being then grown up to man's estate

Would fully suit a widow of condition, Even seven years hence it would not be too late;

And in the interim (to pursue this vision)
The mischief, after all, could not be
great,

For he would learn the rudiments of love,
I mean the seraph way of those above.

LXXXVI

So much for Julia. Now we'll turn to Juan.
Poor little fellow! he had no idea

Of his own case, and never hit the true one;
In feelings quick as Ovid's Miss Medea,

He puzzled over what he found a new one,
But not as yet imagined it could be a Thing quite in course, and not at all alarm-

ing,

Which, with a little patience, might grow charming.

LXXXVII

Silent and pensive, idle, restless, slow,
His home deserted for the lonely wood,

Tormented with a wound he could not
know,

His, like all deep grief, plunged in solitude:

I'm fond myself of solitude or so,
But then, I beg it may be understood,

By solitude I mean a Sultan's, not
A hermit's, with a haram for a grot.

LXXXVIII

'Oh Love! in such a wilderness as this,
Where transport and security entwine,

Here is the empire of thy perfect bliss,
And here thou art a god indeed divine.'

The bard I quote from does not sing amiss,
With the exception of the second line,

For that same twining 'transport and
security'

Are twisted to a phrase of some obscurity.

LXXXIX

The poet meant, no doubt, and thus appeals

To the good sense and senses of man-
kind,

The very thing which everybody feels,
As all have found on trial, or may find,

That no one likes to be disturb'd at meals
Or love.—I won't say more about 'en-
twined'

Or 'transport,' as we knew all that before,
But beg 'Security' will bolt the door.

XC

Young Juan wander'd by the glassy brooks,
Thinking unutterable things; he threw Himself at length within the leafy nooks
Where the wild branch of the cork forest grew;
There poets find materials for their books,
And every now and then we read them
through,
So that their plan and prosody are eligible,
Unless, like Wordsworth, they prove unintelligible.

XCI

He, Juan (and not Wordsworth), so pursued
His self-communion with his own high
soul,
Until his mighty heart, in its great mood,
Had mitigated part, though not the whole
Of its disease; he did the best he could
With things not very subject to control,
And turn'd, without perceiving his condition,
Like Coleridge, into a metaphysician.

XCII

He thought about himself, and the whole
earth,
Of man the wonderful, and of the stars,
And how the deuce they ever could have
birth;
And then he thought of earthquakes,
and of wars,
How many miles the moon might have in girth,
Of air-balloons, and of the many bars
To perfect knowledge of the boundless
skies;—
And then he thought of Donna Julia's eyes.

XCIII

In thoughts like these true wisdom may discern
Longings sublime, and aspirations high,
Which some are born with, but the most part learn
To plague themselves withal, they know not why:
'Twas strange that one so young should thus concern
His brain about the action of the sky;
If you think 'twas philosophy that this did,
I can't help thinking puberty assisted.

XCIV

He pored upon the leaves, and on the
flowers,
And heard a voice in all the winds; and
then
He thought of wood-nymphs and immortal bowers,
And how the goddesses came down to
men:

He miss'd the pathway, he forgot the
hours,
And when he look'd upon his watch
again,
He found how much old Time had been a winner—
He also found that he had lost his dinner.

XCV

Sometimes he turn'd to gaze upon his book,
Boscan, or Garcilasso;—by the wind
Even as the page is rustled while we look,
So by the poesy of his own mind
Over the mystic leaf his soul was shook,
As if 'twere one whereon magicians bind
Their spells, and give them to the passing
gale
According to some good old woman's tale.

XCVI

Thus would he while his lonely hours away Dissatisfied, nor knowing what he wanted;
Nor glowing reverie, nor poet's lay,
Could yield his spirit that for which it panted,
A bosom whereon he his head might lay,
And hear the heart beat with the love it
granted,
With—several other things, which I forget,
Or which, at least, I need not mention yet.

XCVII

Those lonely walks, and lengthening reveries,
Could not escape the gentle Julia's eyes;
She saw that Juan was not at his ease;
But that which chiefly may, and must surprise,
Is, that the Donna Inez did not tease
Her only son with question or surmise;
Whether it was she did not see, or would
not,
Or, like all very clever people, could not.

XCVIII

This may seem strange, but yet 'tis very common;
For instance—gentlemen, whose ladies
take Leave to o'erstep the written rights of
woman,
And break the—Which commandment is't they break?
(I have forgot the number, and think no
man
Should rashly quote, for fear of a mistake.)
I say, when these same gentlemen are jealous,
They make some blunder, which their ladies tell us.

XCIX

A real husband always is suspicious,
 But still no less suspects in the wrong
 place,
 Jealous of some one who had no such
 wishes,
 Or pandering blindly to his own disgrace,
 By harbouring some dear friend extremely
 vicious;
 The last indeed is infallibly the case:
 And when the spouse and friend are gone off wholly,
 He wonders at their vice, and not his folly.

C

Thus parents also are at times short-sighted;
 Though watchful as the lynx, they ne'er
 discover,
 The while the wicked world beholds delighted,
 Young Hopeful's mistress, or Miss Fanny's lover,
 Till some confounded escapade has blighted
 The plan of twenty years, and all is over;
 And then the mother cries, the father
 swears,
 And wonders why the devil he got heirs.

CI

But Inez was so anxious, and so clear
 Of sight, that I must think, on this occasion,
 She had some other motive much more
 near
 For leaving Juan to this new temptation,
 But what that motive was, I shan't say
 here;
 Perhaps to finish Juan's education,
 Perhaps to open Don Alfonso's eyes,
 In case he thought his wife too great a prize.

CII

It was upon a day, a summer's day;—
 Summer's indeed a very dangerous
 season,
 And so is spring about the end of May;
 The sun, no doubt, is the prevailing reason;
 But whatsoe'er the cause is, one may say,
 And stand convicted of more truth than
 treason,
 That there are months which nature grows more merry in,— March has its hares, and May must have its heroine.

CIII

'Twas on a summer's day—the sixth of June:—
 I like to be particular in dates,
 Not only of the age, and year, but moon;
 They are a sort of post-house, where the Fates

Change horses, making history change its
 tune,
 Then spur away o'er empires and o'er
 states,
 Leaving at last not much besides chronology,
 Excepting the post-obits of theology.

CIV

'Twas on the sixth of June, about the hour
 Of half-past six—perhaps still nearer seven—
 When Julia sate within as pretty a bower
 As e'er held houri in that heathenish
 heaven
 Described by Mahomet, and Anacreon
 Moore,
 To whom the lyre and laurels have been
 given,
 With all the trophies of triumphant song—
 He won them well, and may he wear them
 long!

CV

She sate, but not alone; I know not well
 How this same interview had taken
 place,
 And even if I knew, I should not tell—People should hold their tongues in any case;
 No matter how or why the thing befell,
 But there were she and Juan, face to
 face—
 When two such faces are so, 'twould be
 wise,
 But very difficult, to shut their eyes.

CVI

How beautiful she look'd! her conscious
 heart
 Glow'd in her cheek, and yet she felt no
 wrong,
 Oh Love! how perfect is thy mystic art,
 Strengthening the weak, and trampling on the strong!
 How self-deceitful is the sagest part Of mortals whom thy lure hath led
 along!—
 The precipice she stood on was immense,
 So was her creed in her own innocence.

CVII

She thought of her own strength, and Juan's youth,
 And of the folly of all prudish fears,
 Victorious virtue, and domestic truth,
 And then of Don Alfonso's fifty years:
 I wish these last had not occur'd, in sooth,
 Because that number rarely much en-
 dears,
 And through all climes, the snowy and the sunny,
 Sounds ill in love, whate'er it may in money.

CVIII

When people say, 'I've told you fifty times,'

They mean to scold, and very often do;
When poets say, 'I've written fifty rhymes,'

They make you dread that they'll recite them too;

In gangs of fifty, thieves commit their crimes;

At fifty love for love is rare, 'tis true,
But then, no doubt, it equally as true is,
A good deal may be bought for fifty Louis.

CIX

Julia had honour, virtue, truth, and love
For Don Alfonso; and she inly swore,
By all the vows below to powers above,
She never would disgrace the ring she wore,

Nor leave a wish which wisdom might reprove;

And while she ponder'd this, besides much more,

One hand on Juan's carelessly was thrown,
Quite by mistake—she thought it was her own;

CX

Unconsciously she lean'd upon the other,
Which play'd within the tangles of her hair;

And to contend with thoughts she could not smother

She seem'd, by the distraction of her air.
'Twas surely very wrong in Juan's mother
To leave together this imprudent pair,
She who for many years had watch'd her son so—

I'm very certain mine would not have done so.

CXI

The hand which still held Juan's, by degrees

Gently, but palpably confirm'd its grasp,
As if it said, 'Detain me, if you please';

Yet there's no doubt she only meant to clasp

His fingers with a pure Platonic squeeze;
She would have shrunk as from a toad, or asp,

Had she imagined such a thing could rouse

A feeling dangerous to a prudent spouse.

CXII

I cannot know what Juan thought of this,
But what he did, is much what you would do;

His young lip thank'd it with a grateful kiss,

And then, abash'd at its own joy, withdrew

In deep despair, lest he had done amiss,—
Love is so very timid when 'tis new:
She blush'd, and frown'd not, but she strove to speak,
And held her tongue, her voice was grown so weak.

CXIII

The sun set, and up rose the yellow moon:
The devil's in the moon for mischief; they

Who call'd her CHASTE, methinks, began too soon

Their nomenclature; there is not a day,
The longest, not the twenty-first of June,
Sees half the business in a wicked way,
On which three single hours of moonshine smile—

And then she looks so modest all the while.

CXIV

There is a dangerous silence in that hour,
A stillness, which leaves room for the full soul

To open all itself, without the power
Of calling wholly back its self-control;
The silver light which, hallowing tree and tower,

Sheds beauty and deep softness o'er the whole,

Breathes also to the heart, and o'er it throws
A loving languor, which is not repose.

CXV

And Julia sate with Juan, half embraced
And half retiring from the glowing arm,
Which trembled like the bosom where 'twas placed;

Yet still she must have thought there was no harm,

Or else 'twere easy to withdraw her waist;
But then the situation had its charm,

And then—God knows what next—I can't go on;

I'm almost sorry that I e'er begun.

CXVI

Oh Plato! Plato! you have paved the way,
With your confounded fantasies, to more

Immoral conduct by the fancied sway
Your system feigns o'er the controllerless core

Of human hearts, than all the long array
Of poets and romancers:—You're a bore,

A charlatan, a coxcomb—and have been,
At best, no better than a go-between.

CXVII

And Julia's voice was lost, except in sighs,
Until too late for useful conversation;

The tears were gushing from her gentle eyes,

I wish, indeed, they had not had occasion;

But who, alas! can love, and then be wise?
 Not that remorse did not oppose tempta-
 tion;
 A little still she strove, and much repented,
 And whispering 'I will ne'er consent'— consented.

CXVIII

'Tis said that Xerxes offer'd a reward
 To those who could invent him a new
 pleasure.
 Methinks the requisition's rather hard,
 And must have cost his majesty a treasure:
 For my part, I'm a moderate-minded bard,
 Fond of a little love (which I call leisure);
 I care not for new pleasures, as the old
 Are quite enough for me, so they but hold.

CXIX

Oh Pleasure! you're indeed a pleasant thing,
 Although one must be damn'd for you,
 no doubt:
 I make a resolution every spring
 Of reformation, ere the year run out,
 But somehow, this my vestal vow takes
 wing,
 Yet still, I trust, it may be kept through-
 out:
 I'm very sorry, very much ashamed,
 And mean, next winter, to be quite re-
 claim'd.

CXX

Here my chaste Muse a liberty must take—Start not! still chaster reader—she'll be nice hence—Forward, and there is no great cause to
 quake;
 This liberty is a poetic licence,
 Which some irregularity may make
 In the design, and as I have a high sense
 Of Aristotle and the Rules, 'tis fit
 To beg his pardon when I err a bit.

CXXI

This licence is to hope the reader will Suppose from June the sixth (the fatal
 day
 Without whose epoch my poetic skill
 For want of facts would all be thrown
 away),
 But keeping Julia and Don Juan still In sight, that several months have pass'd; we'll say
 'Twas in November, but I'm not so sure
 About the day—the era's more obscure.

CXXII

We'll talk of that anon.—'Tis sweet to hear
 At midnight on the blue and moonlit
 deep
 The song and oar of Adria's gondolier,
 By distance mellow'd, o'er the waters
 sweep;

'Tis sweet to see the evening star appear;
 'Tis sweet to listen as the night-winds
 creep
 From leaf to leaf; 'tis sweet to view on
 high
 The rainbow, based on ocean, span the sky.

CXXIII

'Tis sweet to hear the watch-dog's honest
 bark
 Bay deep-mouth'd welcome as we draw near home;
 'Tis sweet to know there is an eye will mark
 Our coming, and look brighter when we come;
 'Tis sweet to be awaken'd by the lark,
 Or lull'd by falling waters; sweet the
 hum
 Of bees, the voice of girls, the song of birds,
 The lisp of children, and their earliest words.

CXXIV

Sweet is the vintage, when the showering grapes
 In Bacchanal profusion reel to earth,
 Purple and gushing; sweet are our escapes
 From civic revelry to rural mirth;
 Sweet to the miser are his glittering heaps,
 Sweet to the father is his first-born's
 birth,
 Sweet is revenge—especially to women,
 Pillage to soldiers, prize-money to seamen.

CXXV

Sweet is a legacy, and passing sweet
 The unexpected death of some old lady
 Or gentleman of seventy years complete, Who've made 'us youth' wait too—too long already
 For an estate, or cash, or country seat,
 Still breaking, but with stamina so
 steady
 That all the Israelites are fit to mob its Next owner for their double-damn'd postobits.

CXXVI

'Tis sweet to win, no matter how, one's laurels,
 By blood or ink; 'tis sweet to put an end
 To strife; 'tis sometimes sweet to have our quarrels,
 Particularly with a tiresome friend:
 Sweet is old wine in bottles, ale in barrels;
 Dear is the helpless creature we defend Against the world; and dear the schoolboy
 spot
 We ne'er forget, though there we are forgot.

CXXVII

But sweeter still than this, than these, than
all,
Is first and passionate love—it stands
alone,
Like Adam's recollection of his fall;
The tree of knowledge has been pluck'd
—all's known—
And life yields nothing further to recall
Worthy of this ambrosial sin, so shown,
No doubt in fable, as the unforgiven Fire which Prometheus filch'd for us from heaven.

CXXVIII

Man's a strange animal, and makes strange use
Of his own nature, and the various arts,
And likes particularly to produce
Some new experiment to show his parts;
This is the age of oddities let loose,
Where different talents find their different marts;
You'd best begin with truth, and when you've lost your Labour, there's a sure market for imposture.

CXXIX

What opposite discoveries we have seen!
(Signs of true genius, and of empty pockets.)
One makes new noses, one a guillotine,
One breaks your bones, one sets them
in their sockets;
But vaccination certainly has been
A kind antithesis to Congreve's rockets,
With which the Doctor paid off an old pox,
By borrowing a new one from an ox.

CXXX

Bread has been made (indifferent) from potatoes;
And galvanism has set some corpses
grinning,
But has not answer'd like the apparatus
Of the Humane Society's beginning,
By which men are unsuffocated gratis:
What wondrous new machines have late been spinning!
I said the small pox has gone out of late;
Perhaps it may be follow'd by the great.

CXXXI

'Tis said the great came from America;
Perhaps it may set out on its return,—
The population there so spreads, they say
'Tis grown high time to thin it in its
turn,
With war, or plague, or famine, any way,
So that civilisation they may learn;
And which in ravage the more loathsome evil is—
Their real lues, or our pseudo-syphilis?

CXXXII

This is the patent age of new inventions
For killing bodies, and for saving souls,
All propagated with the best intentions;
Sir Humphry Davy's lantern, by which coals
Are safely mined for in the mode he men-
tions,
Tombuctoo travels, voyages to the Poles,
Are ways to benefit mankind, as true,
Perhaps, as shooting them at Waterloo.

CXXXIII

Man's a phenomenon, one knows not
what,
And wonderful beyond all wondrous
measure;
'Tis pity though, in this sublime world,
that Pleasure's a sin, and sometimes sin's a
pleasure;
Few mortals know what end they would
be at,
But whether glory, power, or love, or
treasure,
The path is through perplexing ways, and
when
The goal is gain'd, we die, you know—
and then——

CXXXIV

What then?—I do not know, no more do
you—
And so good night.—Return we to our
story:
'Twas in November, when fine days are
few,
And the far mountains wax a little
hoary,
And clap a white cape on their mantles
blue;
And the sea dashes round the promontory,
And the loud breaker boils against the
rock,
And sober suns must set at five o'clock.

CXXXV

'Twas, as the watchmen say, a cloudy
night;
No moon, no stars, the wind was low or loud
By gusts, and many a sparkling hearth was
bright
With the piled wood, round which the family crowd;
There's something cheerful in that sort of
light,
Even as a summer sky's without a cloud:
I'm fond of fire, and crickets, and all that,
A lobster salad, and champagne, and chat.

CXXXVI

'Twas midnight—Donna Julia was in bed,
 Sleeping, most probably,—when at her door
 Arose a clatter might awake the dead,
 If they had never been awake before,
 And that they have been so we all have read,
 And are to be so, at the least, once more;—
 The door was fasten'd, but with voice and fist
 First knocks were heard, then 'Madam—Madam—hist!

CXXXVII

'For God's sake, Madam—Madam—
 here's my master,
 With more than half the city at his back—
 Was ever heard of such a curst disaster!
 'Tis not my fault—I kept good watch—Alack!
 Do pray undo the bolt a little faster—
 They're on the stair just now, and in a crack
 Will all be here; perhaps he yet may fly—
 Surely the window's not so very high!'

CXXXVIII

By this time Don Alfonso was arrived,
 With torches, friends, and servants in great number;
 The major part of them had long been wived,
 And therefore paused not to disturb the slumber
 Of any wicked woman, who contrived
 By stealth her husband's temples to encumber:
 Examples of this kind are so contagious,
 Were one not punish'd, all would be outrageous.

CXXXIX

I can't tell how, or why, or what suspicion
 Could enter into Don Alfonso's head;
 But for a cavalier of his condition
 It surely was exceedingly ill-bred,
 Without a word of previous admonition,
 To hold a levee round his lady's bed,
 And summon lackeys, arm'd with fire and sword,
 To prove himself the thing he most abhorr'd.

CXL

Poor Donna Julia! starting as from sleep
 (Mind—that I do not say—she had not slept),
 Began at once to scream, and yawn, and weep;
 Her maid, Antonia, who was an adept,

Contrived to fling the bed-clothes in a heap,
 As if she had just now from out them crept:
 I can't tell why she should take all this trouble
 To prove her mistress had been sleeping double.

CXLII

But Julia mistress, and Antonia maid, Appear'd like two poor harmless women, who
 Of goblins, but still more of men afraid,
 Had thought one man might be deterr'd by two,
 And therefore side by side were gently laid,
 Until the hours of absence should run through,
 And truant husband should return, and say,
 'My dear, I was the first who came away.'

CXLIII

Now Julia found at length a voice, and cried,
 'In heaven's name, Don Alfonso, what d'ye mean?
 Has madness seized you? would that I had died
 Ere such a monster's victim I had been!
 What may this midnight violence betide,
 A sudden fit of drunkenness or spleen?
 Dare you suspect me, whom the thought would kill?
 Search, then, the room!'—Alfonso said,
 'I will.'

CXLIII

He search'd, they search'd, and rummaged everywhere,
 Closet and clothes-press, chest and window-seat,
 And found much linen, lace, and several pair
 Of stockings, slippers, brushes, combs, complete,
 With other articles of ladies fair,
 To keep them beautiful, or leave them neat:
 Arras they prick'd and curtains with their swords,
 And wounded several shutters, and some boards.

CXLIV

Under the bed they search'd, and there they found—
 No matter what—it was not that they sought;
 They open'd windows, gazing if the ground
 Had signs or footmarks, but the earth said nought;

And then they stared each other's faces
round:
'Tis odd, not one of all these seekers
thought,
And seems to me almost a sort of blunder,
Of looking in the bed as well as under.

CXLV

During this inquisition Julia's tongue
Was not asleep—'Yes, search and search,' she cried,
'Insult on insult heap, and wrong on wrong!
It was for this that I became a bride!
For this in silence I have suffer'd long
A husband like Alfonso at my side;
But now I'll bear no more, nor here
remain,
If there be law or lawyers in all Spain.

CXLVI

'Yes, Don Alfonso! husband now no more,
If ever you indeed deserved the name, Is't worthy of your years?—you have threescore—
Fifty, or sixty, it is all the same—
Is't wise or fitting, causeless to explore For facts against a virtuous woman's
fame?
Ungrateful, perjured, barbarous Don Alfonso,
How dare you think your lady would go on so?

CXLVII

'Is it for this I have disdain'd to hold
The common privileges of my sex?
That I have chosen a confessor so old
And deaf, that any other it would vex,
And never once he has had cause to scold,
But found my very innocence perplex
So much, he always doubted I was married—
How sorry you will be when I've miscarried!

CXLVIII

'Was it for this that no Cortejo e'er
I yet have chosen from out the youth of Seville?
Is it for this I scarce went anywhere,
Except to bull-fights, mass, play, rout,
and revel?
Is it for this, whate'er my suitors were,
I favour'd none—nay, was almost uncivil?
Is it for this that General Count O'Reilly,
Who took Algiers, declares I used him vilely?

CXLIX

'Did not the Italian Musico Cazzani Sing at my heart six months at least in
vain?
Did not his countryman, Count Corniani,
Call me the only virtuous wife in Spain?

Were there not also Russians, English,
many?
The Count Strongstroganoff I put in
pain,
And Lord Mount Coffeehouse, the Irish
peer,
Who kill'd himself for love (with wine) last year.

CL

'Have I not had two bishops at my feet?
The Duke of Ichar, and Don Fernan Nunez?
And is it thus a faithful wife you treat?
I wonder in what quarter now the moon
is:
I praise your vast forbearance not to beat Me also, since the time so opportune
is—
Oh, valiant man! with sword drawn and cock'd trigger,
Now, tell me, don't you cut a pretty figure?

CLI

'Was it for this you took your sudden
journey,
Under pretence of business indispensable,
With that sublime of rascals your attorney, Whom I see standing there, and looking sensible
Of having play'd the fool? though both I spurn, he Deserves the worst, his conduct's less defensible,
Because, no doubt, 'twas for his dirty fee,
And not from any love to you nor me.

CLII

'If he comes here to take a deposition,
By all means let the gentleman proceed;
You've made the apartment in a fit condition:—
There's pen and ink for you, sir, when you need—
Let everything be noted with precision,
I would not you for nothing should be fee'd—
But as my maid's undrest, pray turn your spies out.'
'Oh!' sobb'd Antonia, 'I could tear their eyes out.'

CLIII

'There is the closet, there the toilet, there
The antechamber—search them under,
over;
There is the sofa, there the great arm-
chair,
The chimney—which would really hold a lover.

I wish to sleep, and beg you will take care
And make no further noise, till you discover
The secret cavern of this lurking treasure—
And when 'tis found, let me, too, have that pleasure.

CLIV

'And now, Hidalgo! now that you have thrown
Doubt upon me, confusion over all,
Pray have the courtesy to make it known
Who is the man you search for? how d'y'e call Him? what's his lineage? let him but be
shown—
I hope he's young and handsome—is he tall?
Tell me—and be assured, that since you
stain
Mine honour thus, it shall not be in vain.

CLV

'At least, perhaps, he has not sixty years,
At that age he would be too old for
slaughter,
Or for so young a husband's jealous
fears—
(Antonia! let me have a glass of water.)
I am ashamed of having shed these tears,
They are unworthy of my father's
daughter;
My mother dream'd not in my natal hour,
That I should fall into a monster's power.

CLVI

'Perhaps 'tis of Antonia you are jealous,
You saw that she was sleeping by my
side,
When you broke in upon us with your
fellows;
Look where you please—we've nothing,
sir, to hide;
Only another time, I trust, you'll tell us,
Or for the sake of decency abide
A moment at the door, that we may be Drest to receive so much good company.

CLVII

'And now, sir, I have done, and say no
more;
The little I have said may serve to show
The guileless heart in silence may grieve
o'er
The wrongs to whose exposure it is
slow:—
I leave you to your conscience as before,
'Twill one day ask you, why you used me
so?
God grant you feel not then the bitterest
grief!
Antonia! where's my pocket-handkerchief?'

CLVIII

She ceased, and turn'd upon her pillow;
pale
She lay, her dark eyes flashing through their tears,
Like skies that rain and lighten; as a veil,
Waved and o'ershading her wan cheek,
appears
Her streaming hair; the black curls strive,
but fail,
To hide the glossy shoulder, which uprears
Its snow through all;—her soft lips lie
apart,
And louder than her breathing beats her
heart.

CLIX

The Senhor Don Alfonso stood confused; Antonia bustled round the ransack'd
room,
And, turning up her nose, with looks abused
Her master, and his myrmidons, of
whom
Not one, except the attorney, was amused;
He, like Achates, faithful to the tomb,
So there were quarrels, cared not for the
cause,
Knowing they must be settled by the laws.

CLX

With prying snub-nose, and small eyes,
he stood,
Following Antonia's motions here and
there,
With much suspicion in his attitude;
For reputations he had little care;
So that a suit or action were made good,
Small pity had he for the young and fair,
And ne'er believed in negatives, till these Were proved by competent false witnesses.

CLXI

But Don Alfonso stood with downcast
looks,
And, truth to say, he made a foolish
figure;
When, after searching in five hundred nooks,
And treating a young wife with so much
rigour,
He gain'd no point, except some self-
rebukes,
Added to those his lady with such
vigour
Had pour'd upon him for the last half
hour,
Quick, thick, and heavy—as a thunder-shower.

CLXII

At first he tried to hammer an excuse,
 To which the sole reply was tears and sobs,
 And indications of hysterics, whose Prologue is always certain throes, and throbs,
 Gasps, and whatever else the owners
 choose:
 Alfonso saw his wife, and thought of Job's;
 He saw too, in perspective, her relations,
 And then he tried to muster all his patience.

CLXIII

Hestood in act to speak, or rather stammer,
 But sage Antonia cut him short before
 The anvil of his speech received the hammer,
 With 'Pray, sir, leave the room, and say
 no more,
 Or madam dies.'—Alfonso mutter'd,
 'D—n her,'
 But nothing else, the time of words was
 o'er;
 He cast a rueful look or two, and did,
 He knew not wherefore, that which he was bid.

CLXIV

With him retired his 'posse comitatus,'
 The attorney last, who linger'd near the
 door
 Reluctantly, still tarrying there as late as Antonia let him—not a little sore
 At this most strange and unexplain'd
 'hiatus'
 In Don Alfonso's facts, which just now
 wore
 An awkward look; as he revolved the case,
 The door was fasten'd in his legal face.

CLXV

No sooner was it bolted, than—Oh shame!
 Oh sin! Oh sorrow! and Oh woman-
 kind!
 How can you do such things and keep your
 fame,
 Unless this world, and t'other too, be
 blind?
 Nothing so dear as an unfilch'd good name!
 But to proceed—for there is more
 behind:
 With much heartfelt reluctance be it said, Young Juan slipp'd, half-smother'd, from the bed.

CLXVI

He had been hid—I don't pretend to say How, nor can I indeed describe the
 where—
 Young, slender, and pack'd easily, he lay,
 No doubt, in little compass, round or
 square;

But pity him I neither must nor may
 His suffocation by that pretty pair;
 'Twere better, sure, to die so, than be shut
 With maudlin Clarence in his Malmsey butt.

CLXVII

And, secondly, I pity not, because
 He had no business to commit a sin, Forbid by heavenly, fined by human
 laws;
 At least 'twas rather early to begin;
 But at sixteen the conscience rarely gnaws
 So much as when we call our old debts in At sixty years, and draw the accompts of
 evil,
 And find a deuced balance with the devil.

CLXVIII

Of his position I can give no notion;
 'Tis written in the Hebrew Chronicle,
 How the physicians, leaving pill and potion, Prescribed, by way of blister, a young
 belle,
 When old King David's blood grew dull
 in motion,
 And that the medicine answer'd very
 well;
 Perhaps 'twas in a different way applied,
 For David lived, but Juan nearly died.

CLXIX

What's to be done? Alfonso will be back
 The moment he has sent his fools away.
 Antonia's skill was put upon the rack,
 But no device could be brought into
 play—
 And how to parry the renew'd attack?
 Besides, it wanted but few hours of day:
 Antonia puzzled; Julia did not speak,
 But press'd her bloodless lip to Juan's cheek.

CLXX

He turn'd his lip to hers, and with his hand
 Call'd back the tangles of her wandering
 hair;
 Even then their love they could not all
 command,
 And half forgot their danger and
 despair:
 Antonia's patience now was at a stand—
 'Come, come, 'tis no time now for fooling there,'
 She whisper'd, in great wrath—'I must deposit
 This pretty gentleman within the closet:

CLXXI

'Pray, keep your nonsense for some luckier night—
 Who can have put my master in this
 mood?
 What will become on't—I'm in such a
 fright,
 The devil's in the urchin, and no good—

Is this a time for giggling? this a plight?

Why, don't you know that it may end
in blood?

You'll lose your life, and I shall lose my
place,

My mistress all, for that half-girlish face.

CLXXII

'Had it but been for a stout cavalier Of twenty-five or thirty—(come, make haste)

But for a child, what piece of work is here!

I really, madam, wonder at your taste—(Come, sir, get in)—my master must be
near:

There, for the present, at the least, he's
fast,

And if we can but till the morning keep Our counsel—(Juan, mind, you must not sleep).'

CLXXIII

Now, Don Alfonso entering, but alone,

Closed the oration of the trusty maid:

She loiter'd, and he told her to be gone,

An order somewhat sullenly obey'd;

However, present remedy was none,

And no great good seem'd answer'd if she staid;

Regarding both with slow and sidelong
view,

She snuff'd the candle, curtsied, and withdrew.

CLXXIV

Alfonso paused a minute—then begun

Some strange excuses for his late proceeding:

He would not justify what he had done,

To say the best, it was extreme ill-
breeding;

But there were ample reasons for it, none

Of which he specified in this his plead-
ing:

His speech was a fine sample, on the whole,

Of rhetoric, which the learn'd call
'rigmarole.'

CLXXV

Julia said nought; though all the while there rose

A ready answer, which at once enables

A matron, who her husband's foible
knows,

By a few timely words to turn the tables,
Which, if it does not silence, still must
pose,—

Even if it should comprise a pack of fables;

'Tis to retort with firmness, and when he

Suspects with one, do you reproach with three.

CLXXVI

Julia, in fact, had tolerable grounds,—

Alfonso's loves with Inez were well
known;

But whether 'twas that one's own guilt
confound—

But that can't be, as has been often
shown,

A lady with apologies abounds;—

It might be that her silence sprang alone

From delicacy to Don Juan's ear,

To whom she knew his mother's fame was
dear.

CLXXVII

There might be one more motive, which makes two,

Alfonso ne'er to Juan had alluded,—

Mentioned his jealousy, but never who

Had been the happy lover, he concluded,

Conceal'd amongst his premises; 'tis true,

His mind the more o'er this its mystery
brooded

To speak of Inez now were, one may say,

Like throwing Juan in Alfonso's way.

CLXXVIII

A hint, in tender cases, is enough;

Silence is best: besides there is a tact—
(That modern phrase appears to me sad
stuff,

But it will serve to keep my verse compact)—

Which keeps, when push'd by questions rather rough,

A lady always distant from the fact:

The charming creatures lie with such a
grace,

There's nothing so becoming to the face.

CLXXIX

They blush, and we believe them, at least I

Have always done so; 'tis of no great
use,

In any case, attempting a reply,

For then their eloquence grows quite profuse;

And when at length they're out of breath,
they sigh,

And cast their languid eyes down, and let loose

A tear or two, and then we make it up;

And then—and then—and then—sit down and sup.

CLXXX

Alfonso closed his speech, and begg'd her pardon,

Which Julia half withheld, and then half granted,

And laid conditions, he thought very hard,
on,

Denying several little things he wanted:

He stood like Adam lingering near his garden,
 With useless penitence perplex'd and haunted,
 Beseeching she no further would refuse,
 When, lo! he stumbled o'er a pair of shoes.

CLXXXI

A pair of shoes!—what then? not much, if they Are such as fit with ladies' feet, but these (No one can tell how much I grieve to say)
 Were masculine; to see them, and to seize,
 Was but a moment's act.—Ah! well-a-day!

My teeth begin to chatter, my veins freeze—
 Alfonso first examined well their fashion,
 And then flew out into another passion.

CLXXXII

He left the room for his relinquish'd sword,
 And Julia instant to the closet flew.
 'Fly, Juan, fly! for heaven's sake—not a word—
 The door is open—you may yet slip through

The passage you so often have explored—
 Here is the garden-key—Fly—fly—
 Adieu!

Haste—haste! I hear Alfonso's hurrying feet—
 Day has not broke—there's no one in the street.'

CLXXXIII

None can say that this was not good advice,

The only mischief was, it came too late;
 Of all experience 'tis the usual price,

A sort of income-tax laid on by fate:
 Juan had reach'd the room-door in a trice,
 And might have done so by the garden-gate,

But met Alfonso in his dressing-gown,
 Who threaten'd death—so Juan knock'd him down.

CLXXXIV

Dire was the scuffle, and out went the light;

Antonia cried out 'Rape!' and Julia
 'Fire!'

But not a servant stirr'd to aid the fight.
 Alfonso, pommell'd to his heart's desire,

Swore lustily he'd be revenged this night;
 And Juan, too, blasphemed an octave higher;

His blood was up: though young, he was a Tartar,

And not at all disposed to prove a martyr.

CLXXXV

Alfonso's sword had dropp'd ere he could draw it,

And they continued battling hand to hand,

For Juan very luckily ne'er saw it;
 His temper not being under great command,

If at that moment he had chanced to claw it,

Alfonso's days had not been in the land
 Much longer.—Think of husbands', lovers' lives!

 And how ye may be doubly widows—

wives!

CLXXXVI

Alfonso grappled to detain the foe,
 And Juan throttled him to get away,

And blood ('twas from the nose) began to flow;

At last, as they more faintly wrestling lay,

Juan contrived to give an awkward blow,
 And then his only garment quite gave away;

He fled, like Joseph, leaving it; but there,
 I doubt, all likeness ends between the pair.

CLXXXVII

Lights came at length, and men, and maids, who found

An awkward spectacle their eyes before;
 Antonia in hysterics, Julia swoon'd,

Alfonso leaning, breathless, by the door;

Some half-torn drapery scatter'd on the ground,

Some blood, and several footsteps, but no more:

Juan the gate gain'd, turn'd the key about,
 And liking not the inside, lock'd the out.

CLXXXVIII

Here ends this canto.—Need I sing, or say,
 How Juan, naked, favour'd by the night,

Who favours what she should not, found his way,

And reach'd his home in an unseemly plight?

The pleasant scandal which arose next day,
 The nine days' wonder which was brought to light,

And how Alfonso sued for a divorce,
 Were in the English newspapers, of course.

CLXXXIX

If you would like to see the whole proceedings,

The depositions and the cause at full,
 The names of all the witnesses, the pleadings

Of counsel to nonsuit, or to annul,

There's more than one edition, and the readings
Are various, but they none of them are dull;
The best is that in short-hand ta'en by Gurney,
Who to Madrid on purpose made a journey.

CXC

But Donna Inez, to divert the train
Of one of the most circulating scandals
That had for centuries been known in Spain,
At least since the retirement of the Vandals,
First vow'd (and never had she vow'd in vain)
To Virgin Mary several pounds of candles;
And then, by the advice of some old ladies,
She sent her son to be shipp'd off from Cadiz.

CXCI

She had resolved that he should travel through
All European climes, by land or sea,
To mend his former morals, and get new,
Especially in France and Italy
(At least this is the thing most people do).
Julia was sent into a convent: she Grieved, but, perhaps, her feelings may be better Shown in the following copy of her Letter:—

CXCI

'They tell me 'tis decided you depart:
'Tis wise—'tis well, but not the less a pain;
I have no further claim on your young heart,
Mine is the victim, and would be again:
To love too much has been the only art
I used;—I write in haste, and if a stain
Be on this sheet, 'tis not what it appears;
My eyeballs burn and throb, but have no tears.

CXCI

'I loved, I love you, for this love have lost
State, station, heaven, mankind's, my own esteem,
And yet cannot regret what it hath cost,
So dear is still the memory of that dream;
Yet, if I name my guilt, 'tis not to boast,
None can deem harshlier of me than I deem:
I trace this scrawl because I cannot rest—
I've nothing to reproach or to request.

CXCI

'Man's love is of man's life a thing apart,
'Tis woman's whole existence; man may range

The court, camp, church, the vessel, and the mart;
Sword, gown, gain, glory, offer in exchange
Pride, fame, ambition, to fill up his heart,
And few there are whom these cannot estrange;
Men have all these resources, we but one,
To love again, and be again undone.

CXC

'You will proceed in pleasure, and in pride,
Beloved and loving many; all is o'er
For me on earth, except some years to hide
My shame and sorrow deep in my heart's core:
These I could bear, but cannot cast aside
The passion which still rages as before,—
And so farewell—forgive me, love me—
No,
That word is idle now—but let it go.

CXC

'My breast has been all weakness, is so yet;
But still I think I can collect my mind;
My blood still rushes where my spirit's set,
As roll the waves before the settled wind;
My heart is feminine, nor can forget—
To all, except one image, madly blind;
So shakes the needle, and so stands the pole,
As vibrates my fond heart to my fix'd soul.

CXC

'I have no more to say, but linger still,
And dare not set my seal upon this sheet,
And yet I may as well the task fulfil.
My misery can scarce be more complete;
I had not lived till now, could sorrow kill;
Death shuns the wretch who fain the blow would meet,
And I must even survive this last adieu,
And bear with life to love and pray for you!'

CXC

This note was written upon gilt-edged paper
With a neat little crow-quill, slight and new;
Her small white hand could hardly reach the taper,
It trembled as magnetic needles do,
And yet she did not let one tear escape her;
The seal a sun-flower; 'Elle vous suit partout,'
The motto, cut upon a white cornelian;
The wax was superfine, its hue vermilion.

CXC

This was Don Juan's earliest scrape; but whether I shall proceed with his adventures is Dependent on the public altogether;
We'll see, however, what they say to this,

Their favour in an author's cap's a feather,
And no great mischief's done by their caprice;
And if their approbation we experience,
Perhaps they'll have some more about a year hence.

CC

My poem's epic, and is meant to be Divided in twelve books; each book containing,
With love, and war, a heavy gale at sea,
A list of ships, and captains, and kings reigning,
New characters; the episodes are three:
A panoramic view of hell's in training,
After the style of Virgil and of Homer,
So that my name of Epic's no misnomer.

CCI

All these things will be specified in time,
With strict regard to Aristotle's rules,
The Vade Mecum of the true sublime,
Which makes so many poets, and some
fools:
Prose poets like blank-verse, I'm fond of
rhyme,
Good workmen never quarrel with their
tools;
I've got new mythological machinery,
And very handsome supernatural scenery.

CCII

There's only one slight difference between
Me and my epic brethren gone before,
And here the advantage is my own, I ween
(Not that I have not several merits more,
But this will more peculiarly be seen);
They so embellish, that 'tis quite a bore
Their labyrinth of fables to thread through,
Whereas this story's actually true.

CCIII

If any person doubt it, I appeal
To history, tradition, and to facts,
To newspapers, whose truth all know and
feel,
To plays in five, and operas in three acts;
All these confirm my statement a good deal,
But that which more completely faith exacts
Is, that myself, and several now in Seville,
Saw Juan's last elopement with the devil.

CCIV

If ever I should condescend to prose,
I'll write poetical commandments, which Shall supersede beyond all doubt all those
That went before; in these I shall enrich My text with many things that no one
knows,
And carry precept to the highest pitch:
I'll call the work 'Longinus o'er a Bottle,
Or, Every Poet his own Aristotle.'

CCV

Thou shalt believe in Milton, Dryden, Pope; Thou shalt not set up Wordsworth, Coleridge, Southey;
Because the first is crazed beyond all hope,
The second drunk, the third so quaint and mouthy:
With Crabbe it may be difficult to cope,
And Campbell's Hippocrene is somewhat drouthy:
Thou shalt not steal from Samuel Rogers,
nor Commit—flirtation with the muse of Moore.

CCVI

Thou shalt not covet Mr. Sotheby's Muse,
His Pegasus, nor anything that's his;
Thou shalt not bear false witness like 'the Blues'— (There's one, at least, is very fond of
this);
Thou shalt not write, in short, but what I
choose;
This is true criticism, and you may kiss—
Exactly as you please, or not,—the rod;
But if you don't, I'll lay it on, by G—d!

CCVII

If any person should presume to assert
This story is not moral, first, I pray,
That they will not cry out before they're hurt,
Then that they'll read it o'er again, and
say
(But, doubtless, nobody will be so pert),
That this is not a moral tale, though gay;
Besides, in Canto Twelfth, I mean to show
The very place where wicked people go.

CCVIII

If, after all, there should be some so blind
To their own good this warning to despise,
Let by some tortuosity of mind,
Not to believe my verse and their own
eyes,
And cry that they 'the moral cannot find,'
I tell him, if a clergyman, he lies;
Should captains the remark, or critics, make,
They also lie too—under a mistake.

CCIX

The public approbation I expect,
And beg they'll take my word about the moral,
Which I with their amusement will connect (So children cutting teeth receive a coral);
Meantime they'll doubtless please to recollect
My epical pretensions to the laurel:
For fear some prudish readers should grow
skittish,
I've bribed my Grandmother's Review—
the British.

CCX

I sent it in a letter to the Editor,
 Who thank'd me duly by return of post—
 I'm for a handsome article his creditor;
 Yet, if my gentle Muse he please to roast,
 And break a promise after having made it
 her,
 Denying the receipt of what it cost,
 And smear his page with gall instead of
 honey,
 All I can say is—that he had the money.

CCXI

I think that with this holy new alliance
 I may ensure the public, and defy
 All other magazines of art or science,
 Daily, or monthly, or three monthly; I
 Have not essay'd to multiply their clients,
 Because they tell me 'twere in vain to try,
 And that the Edinburgh Review and Quarterly
 Treat a dissenting author very martyrly.

CCXII

'Non ego hoc ferrem calida juventa Consule Planco,' Horace said, and so Say I; by which quotation there is meant a Hint that some six or seven good years
 ago (Long ere I dreamt of dating from the Brenta)
 I was most ready to return a blow,
 And would not brook at all this sort of
 thing
 In my hot youth—when George the Third was King.

CCXIII

But now at thirty years my hair is gray—
 (I wonder what it will be like at forty?
 I thought of a peruke the other day—)
 My heart is not much greener; and, in short, I Have squander'd my whole summer while
 'twas May,
 And feel no more the spirit to retort; I Have spent my life, both interest and principal,
 And deem not, what I deem'd, my soul invincible.

CCXIV

No more—no more—Oh! never more on
 me
 The freshness of the heart can fall like
 dew,
 Which out of all the lovely things we see Extracts emotions beautiful and new;
 Hived in our bosoms like the bag o' the bee.
 Think'st thou the honey with those objects grew?
 Alas! 'twas not in them, but in thy power
 To double even the sweetness of a flower.

CCXV

No more—no more—Oh! never more, my
 heart,
 Canst thou be my sole world, my uni-
 verse!
 Once all in all, but now a thing apart,
 Thou canst not be my blessing or my
 curse:
 The illusion's gone for ever, and thou art
 Insensible, I trust, but none the worse,
 And in thy stead I've got a deal of judg-
 ment,
 Though heaven knows how it ever found a lodgment.

CCXVI

My days of love are over; me no more
 The charms of maid, wife, and still less of widow,
 Can make the fool of which they made
 before,—
 In short, I must not lead the life I did do;
 The credulous hope of mutual minds is
 o'er,
 The copious use of claret is forbid too,
 So for a good old-gentlemanly vice,
 I think I must take up with avarice.

CCXVII

Ambition was my idol, which was broken
 Before the shrines of Sorrow, and of Pleasure;
 And the two last have left me many a token O'er which reflection may be made at leisure;
 Now, like Friar Bacon's brazen head, I've spoken,
 'Time is, Time was, Time's past':—a chymic treasure
 Is glittering youth, which I have spent be-
 times—
 My heart in passion, and my head on rhymes.

CCXVIII

What is the end of fame? 'tis but to fill
 A certain portion of uncertain paper:
 Some liken it to climbing up a hill,
 Whose summit, like all hills, is lost in
 vapour;
 For this men write, speak, preach, and heroes kill,
 And bards burn what they call their 'midnight taper,'
 To have, when the original is dust,
 A name, a wretched picture, and worse bust.

CCXIX

What are the hopes of man? Old Egypt's
 King
 Cheops erected the first pyramid
 And largest, thinking it was just the thing
 To keep his memory whole, and mummy
 hid:

But somebody or other rummaging,
Burglariously broke his coffin's lid:
Let not a monument give you or me hopes,
Since not a pinch of dust remains of Cheops.

CCXX

But I, being fond of true philosophy,
Say very often to myself, 'Alas!
All things that have been born were born to die,
And flesh (which Death mows down to
hay) is grass;
You've pass'd your youth not so unpleasantly,
And if you had it o'er again—'twould
pass—
So thank your stars that matters are no
worse,
And read your Bible, sir, and mind your purse.'

CCXXI

But for the present, gentle reader! and Still gentler purchaser! the bard—that's
I—Must, with permission, shake you by the
hand,
And so your humble servant, and goodbye!
We meet again, if we should understand
Each other; and if not, I shall not try Your patience further than by this short sample—
'Twere well if others follow'd my example.

CCXXII

'Go, little book, from this my solitude!
I cast thee on the waters—go thy ways!
And if, as I believe, thy vein be good,
The world will find thee after many days.'
When Southey's read, and Wordsworth understood,
I can't help putting in my claim to praise—
The four first rhymes are Southey's, every
line:
For God's sake, reader! take them not for
mine!

CANTO THE SECOND*

I

OH ye! who teach the ingenuous youth of
nations,
Holland, France, England, Germany, or
Spain,
I pray ye flog them upon all occasions,
It mends their morals, never mind the
pain:
The best of mothers and of educations
In Juan's case were but employ'd in vain, Since, in a way that's rather of the oddest, he Became divested of his native modesty.

* ['Begun at Venice, December 13, 1818,— finished January 20, 1819.'—B.]

II

Had he but been placed at a public school,
In the third form, or even in the fourth,
His daily task had kept his fancy cool,
At least, had he been nurtured in the north;
Spain may prove an exception to the rule,
But then exceptions always prove its
worth—
A lad of sixteen causing a divorce
Puzzled his tutors very much, of course.

III

I can't say that it puzzles me at all,
If all things be consider'd; first, there
was
His lady-mother, mathematical,
A ——— never mind;—his tutor, an old
ass;
A pretty woman—(that's quite natural,
Or else the thing had hardly come to
pass)
A husband rather old, not much in unity
With his young wife—a time, and opportunity.

IV

Well—well; the world must turn upon its axis,
And all mankind turn with it, heads or tails,
And live and die, make love and pay our taxes,
And as the veering wind shifts, shift our sails;
The king commands us, and the doctor
quacks us,
The priest instructs, and so our life exhales,
A little breath, love, wine, ambition, fame,
Fighting, devotion, dust,—perhaps a name.

V

I said, that Juan had been sent to Cadiz—
A pretty town, I recollect it well—
'Tis there the mart of the colonial trade is,
(Or was, before Peru learn'd to rebel.)
And such sweet girls—I mean, such graceful ladies,
Their very walk would make your bosom
swell;
I can't describe it, though so much it strike,
Nor liken it—I never saw the like:

VI

An Arab horse, a stately stag, a barb
New broke, a cameleopard, a gazelle,
No—none of these will do;—and then their
garb,
Their veil and petticoat—Alas! to dwell

Upon such things would very near absorb
 A canto—then their feet and ankles,—
 well,
 Thank Heaven I've got no metaphor quite
 ready,
 (And so, my sober Muse—come, let's be steady—

VII

Chaste Muse!—well, if you must, you must)—the veil
 Thrown back a moment with the glancing hand,
 While the o'erpowering eye, that turns you
 pale,
 Flashes into the heart:—All sunny land
 Of love! when I forget you, may I fail
 To——say my prayers—but never was there plann'd
 A dress through which the eyes give such a volley,
 Excepting the Venetian Fazzioli.

VIII

But to our tale: the Donna Inez sent
 Her son to Cadiz only to embark;
 To stay there had not answer'd her intent,
 But why?—we leave the reader in the dark—
 'Twas for a voyage the young man was meant,
 As from a Spanish ship were Noah's ark,
 To wean him from the wickedness of earth,
 And send him like a dove of promise forth.

IX

Don Juan bade his valet pack his things
 According to direction, then received
 A lecture and some money: for four springs
 He was to travel; and though Inez grieved
 (As every kind of parting has its stings),
 She hoped he would improve—perhaps believed:
 A letter, too, she gave (he never read it)
 Of good advice—and two or three of credit.

X

In the mean time, to pass her hours away,
 Brave Inez now set up a Sunday school
 For naughty children, who would rather
 play
 (Like truant rogues) the devil, or the fool;
 Infants of three years old were taught that
 day,
 Dunces were whipt, or set upon a stool:
 The great success of Juan's education
 Spurr'd her to teach another generation.

XI

Juan embark'd—the ship got under way,
 The wind was fair, the water passing
 rough;

A devil of a sea rolls in that bay,
 As I, who've cross'd it oft, know well
 enough;
 And, standing upon deck, the dashing
 spray
 Flies in one's face, and makes it weather-
 tough:
 And there he stood to take, and take again,
 His first—perhaps his last—farewell of Spain.

XII

I can't but say it is an awkward sight
 To see one's native land receding through
 The growing waters; it unmans one quite,
 Especially when life is rather new:
 I recollect Great Britain's coast looks
 white,
 But almost every other country's blue,
 When gazing on them, mystified by distance,
 We enter on our nautical existence.

XIII

So Juan stood, bewilder'd on the deck:
 The wind sung, cordage strain'd, and sailors swore,
 And the ship creak'd, the town became a speck,
 From which away so fair and fast they
 bore.
 The best of remedies is a beef-steak
 Against sea-sickness: try it, sir, before
 You sneer, and I assure you this is true,
 For I have found it answer—so may you.

XIV

Don Juan stood, and, gazing from the
 stern,
 Beheld his native Spain receding far:
 First partings form a lesson hard to learn,
 Even nations feel this when they go to
 war;
 There is a sort of unexpressed concern,
 A kind of shock that sets one's heart
 ajar:
 At leaving even the most unpleasant people
 And places, one keeps looking at the steple.

XV

But Juan had got many things to leave,
 His mother, and a mistress, and no wife,
 So that he had much better cause to grieve
 Than many persons more advanced in
 life;
 And if we now and then a sigh must heave
 At quitting even those we quit in strife,
 No doubt we weep for those the heart en-
 dears—
 That is, till deeper griefs congeal our tears.

XVI

So Juan wept, as wept the captive Jews
 By Babel's waters, still remembering
 Sion:
 I'd weep,—but mine is not a weeping
 Muse,
 And such light griefs are not a thing to die on;
 Young men should travel, if but to amuse Themselves; and the next time their servants tie on Behind their carriages their new portmanteau,
 Perhaps it may be lined with this my canto.

XVII

And Juan wept, and much he sigh'd and
 thought,
 While his salt tears dropp'd into the salt
 sea,
 'Sweets to the sweet;' (I like so much to quote;
 You must excuse this extract,—'tis where
 she,
 The Queen of Denmark, for Ophelia
 brought Flowers to the grave;) and, sobbing often, he Reflected on his present situation,
 And seriously resolved on reformation.

XVIII

'Farewell, my Spain! a long farewell!' he
 cried,
 'Perhaps I may revisit thee no more,
 But die, as many an exiled heart hath died,
 Of its own thirst to see again thy shore:
 Farewell, where Guadalquivir's waters
 glide!
 Farewell, my mother! and, since all is
 o'er,
 Farewell, too, dearest Julia!—(here he
 drew
 Her letter out again, and read it through.)

XIX

And oh! if e'er I should forget, I swear—
 But that's impossible, and cannot be—
 Sooner shall this blue ocean melt to air,
 Sooner shall earth resolve itself to sea,
 Than I resign thine image, oh, my fair!
 Or think of anything, excepting thee;
 A mind diseased no remedy can physic—(Here the ship gave a lurch, and he grew sea-sick.)

XX

'Sooner shall heaven kiss earth—(here he fell sicker)
 Oh, Julia! what is every other woe?— (For God's sake let me have a glass of liquor;
 Pedro, Battista, help me down below.)

Julia, my love—(you rascal, Pedro, quicker)—
 Oh, Julia!—(this curst vessel pitches
 so)—
 Beloved Julia, hear me still beseeching!'
 (Here he grew inarticulate with retching.)

XXI

He felt that chilling heaviness of heart,
 Or rather stomach, which, alas! attends,
 Beyond the best apothecary's art,
 The loss of love, the treachery of friends,
 Or death of those we dote on, when a part
 Of us dies with them as each fond hope ends:
 No doubt he would have been much more
 pathetic,
 But the sea acted as a strong emetic.

XXII

Love's a capricious power: I've known it
 hold
 Out through a fever caused by its own
 heat,
 But be much puzzled by a cough and cold,
 And find a quinsy very hard to treat;
 Against all noble maladies he's bold,
 But vulgar illnesses don't like to meet,
 Nor that a sneeze should interrupt his sigh,
 Nor inflammations redden his blind eye.

XXIII

But worst of all is nausea, or a pain
 About the lower region of the bowels;
 Love, who heroically breathes a vein,
 Shrinks from the application of hot towels,
 And purgatives are dangerous to his reign,
 Sea-sickness death: his love was perfect,
 how else
 Could Juan's passion, while the billows
 roar,
 Resist his stomach, ne'er at sea before?

XXIV

The ship, call'd the most holy 'Trinidad,'
 Was steering duly for the port Leghorn;
 For there the Spanish family Moncada Were settled long ere Juan's sire was
 born:
 They were relations, and for them he had a Letter of introduction, which the morn
 Of his departure had been sent him by His Spanish friends for those in Italy.

XXV

His suite consisted of three servants and
 A tutor, the licentiate Pedrillo,
 Who several languages did understand,
 But now lay sick and speechless on his
 pillow,

And, rocking in his hammock, long'd for land,
 His headache being increased by every billow;
 And the waves oozing through the port-hole made
 His berth a little damp, and him afraid.

XXVI

'Twas not without some reason, for the wind
 Increased at night, until it blew a gale;
 And though 'twas not much to a naval mind,
 Some landsmen would have look'd a little pale,
 For sailors are, in fact, a different kind:
 At sunset they began to take in sail,
 For the sky show'd it would come on to blow,
 And carry away, perhaps, a mast or so.

XXVII

At one o'clock the wind with sudden shift
 Threw the ship right into the trough of the sea,
 Which struck her aft, and made an awkward rift, Started the stern-post, also shatter'd the Whole of her stern-frame, and, ere she could lift
 Herself from out her present jeopardy,
 The rudder tore away: 'twas time to sound
 The pumps, and there were four feet water found.

XXVIII

One gang of people instantly was put Upon the pumps, and the remainder set
 To get up part of the cargo, and what not;
 But they could not come at the leak as yet;
 At last they did get at it really, but Still their salvation was an even bet:
 The water rush'd through in a way quite puzzling,
 While they thrust sheets, shirts, jackets,
 Bales of muslin,

XXIX

Into the opening; but all such ingredients
 Would have been vain, and they must have gone down,
 Despite of all their efforts and expedients,
 But for the pumps: I'm glad to make them known
 To all the brother tars who may have need hence,
 For fifty tons of water were upthrown
 By them per hour, and they all had been undone,
 But for the maker, Mr. Mann, of London.

XXX

As day advanced the weather seem'd to abate,
 And then the leak they reckon'd to reduce,
 And keep the ship afloat, though three feet yet
 Kept two hand- and one chain-pump still in use.
 The wind blew fresh again: as it grew late
 A squall came on, and while some guns broke loose,
 A gust—which all descriptive power transcends—
 Laid with one blast the ship on her beam ends.

XXXI

There she lay, motionless, and seem'd upset;
 The water left the hold, and wash'd the decks,
 And made a scene men do not soon forget;
 For they remember battles, fires, and wrecks,
 Or any other thing that brings regret,
 Or breaks their hopes, or hearts, or heads, or necks;
 Thus drownings are much talk'd of by the divers,
 And swimmers, who may chance to be survivors.

XXXII

Immediately the masts were cut away,
 Both main and mizen: first the mizen went,
 The main-mast follow'd; but the ship still lay
 Like a mere log, and baffled our intent.
 Foremast and bowsprit were cut down, and they Eased her at last (although we never meant To part with all till every hope was blighted),
 And then with violence the old ship righted.

XXXIII

It may be easily supposed, while this
 Was going on, some people were unquiet,
 That passengers would find it much amiss
 To lose their lives, as well as spoil their diet;
 That even the able seaman, deeming his Days nearly o'er, might be disposed to riot,
 As upon such occasions tars will ask
 For grog, and sometimes drink rum from the cask.

XXXIV

There's nought, no doubt, so much the spirit calms
 As rum and true religion: thus it was,
 Some plunder'd, some drank spirits, some sung psalms,
 The high wind made the treble, and as bass
 The hoarse harsh waves kept time; fright cured the qualms
 Of all the luckless landmen's sea-sick
 maws:
 Strange sounds of wailing, blasphemy, devotion,
 Clamour'd in chorus to the roaring ocean.

XXXV

Perhaps more mischief had been done, but
 for
 Our Juan, who, with sense beyond his
 years,
 Got to the spirit-room, and stood before
 It with a pair of pistols; and their fears,
 As if Death were more dreadful by his door
 Of fire than water, spite of oaths and
 tears,
 Kept still aloof the crew, who, ere they sunk,
 Thought it would be becoming to die drunk.

XXXVI

'Give us more grog,' they cried, 'for it
 will be
 All one an hour hence.' Juan answer'd,
 'No!
 'Tis true that death awaits both you and
 me,
 But let us die like men, not sink below
 Like brutes':—and thus his dangerous post kept he,
 And none liked to anticipate the blow;
 And even Pedrillo, his most reverend tutor,
 Was for some rum a disappointed suitor.

XXXVII

The good old gentleman was quite aghast,
 And made a loud and pious lamenta-
 tion;
 Repented all his sins, and made a last Irrevocable vow of reformation;
 Nothing should tempt him more (this peril
 past)
 To quit his academic occupation,
 In cloisters of the classic Salamanca,
 To follow Juan's wake, like Sancho Panca.

XXXVIII

But now there came a flash of hope once
 more;
 Day broke, and the wind lull'd: the masts were gone;
 The leak increased; shoals round her, but no shore,
 The vessel swam, yet still she held her
 own.

They tried the pumps again, and though
 before
 Their desperate efforts seem'd all useless
 grown,
 A glimpse of sunshine set some hands to bale—
 The stronger pump'd, the weaker thrumm'd a sail.

XXXIX

Under the vessel's keel the sail was pass'd,
 And for a moment it had some effect;
 But with a leak, and not a stick of mast,
 Nor rag of canvas, what could they expect?
 But still 'tis best to struggle to the last,
 'Tis never too late to be wholly wreck'd:
 And though 'tis true that man can only die
 once,
 'Tis not so pleasant in the Gulf of Lyons.

XL

There winds and waves had hurl'd them,
 and from thence,
 Without their will, they carried them
 away;
 For they were forced with steering to dispense,
 And never had as yet a quiet day
 On which they might repose, or even commence
 A jurymast or rudder, or could say
 The ship would swim an hour, which, by good luck,
 Still swam—though not exactly like a duck.

XLI

The wind, in fact, perhaps, was rather less,
 But the ship labour'd so, they scarce could hope
 To weather out much longer; the distress
 Was also great with which they had to cope
 For want of water, and their solid mess
 Was scant enough; in vain the telescope Was used—nor sail nor shore appear'd in
 sight,
 Nought but the heavy sea, and coming
 night.

XLII

Again the weather threaten'd,—again blew
 A gale, and in the fore and after hold Water appear'd; yet, though the people
 knew
 All this, the most were patient, and some bold,
 Until the chains and leathers were worn
 through
 Of all our pumps:—a wreck complete
 she roll'd,
 At mercy of the waves, whose mercies are Like human beings during civil war.

XLIII

Then came the carpenter, at last, with tears
 In his rough eyes, and told the captain,
 he
 Could do no more: he was a man in years,
 And long had voyaged through many a stormy sea,
 And if he wept at length, they were not fears
 That made his eyelids as a woman's be,
 But he, poor fellow, had a wife and children,
 Two things for dying people quite bewildering.

XLIV

The ship was evidently settling now Fast by the head; and, all distinction
 gone,
 Some went to prayers again, and made a vow
 Of candles to their saints—but there were none
 To pay them with; and some look'd o'er
 the bow;
 Some hoisted out the boats; and there was one
 That begg'd Pedrillo for an absolution,
 Who told him to be damn'd—in his confusion.

XLV

Some lash'd them in their hammocks;
 some put on
 Their best clothes, as if going to a fair;
 Some cursed the day on which they saw
 the sun,
 And gnash'd their teeth, and howling,
 tore their hair;
 And others went on as they had begun,
 Getting the boats out, being well aware
 That a tight boat will live in a rough sea,
 Unless with breakers close beneath her lee.

XLVI

The worst of all was, that in their condition,
 Having been several days in great distress,
 'Twas difficult to get out such provision
 As now might render their long suffering
 less:
 Men, even when dying, dislike inanition;
 Their stock was damaged by the weather's stress:
 Two casks of biscuit, and a keg of butter,
 Were all that could be thrown into the cutter.

XLVII

But in the long-boat they contrived to stow
 Some pounds of bread, though injured
 by the wet;
 Water, a twenty-gallon cask or so;
 Six flasks of wine: and they contrived to get

A portion of their beef up from below,
 And with a piece of pork, moreover, met,
 But scarce enough to serve them for a luncheon—
 Then there was rum, eight gallons in a puncheon.

XLVIII

The other boats, the yawl and pinnace, had Been stove in the beginning of the gale;
 And the long-boat's condition was but bad,
 As there were but two blankets for a sail,
 And one oar for a mast, which a young lad Threw in by good luck over the ship's rail;
 And two boats could not hold, far less be stored,
 To save one half the people then on board.

XLIX

'Twas twilight, and the sunless day went
 down
 Over the waste of waters; like a veil,
 Which, if withdrawn, would but disclose the frown
 Of one whose hate is mask'd but to assail.
 Thus to their hopeless eyes the night was
 shown,
 And grimly darkled o'er the faces pale,
 And the dim desolate deep: twelve days had Fear Been their familiar, and now Death was here.

L

Some trial had been making at a raft,
 With little hope in such a rolling sea,
 A sort of thing at which one would have
 laugh'd,
 If any laughter at such times could be,
 Unless with people who too much have
 quaff'd,
 And have a kind of wild and horrid glee,
 Half epileptical, and half hysterical:— Their preservation would have been a miracle.

LI

At half-past eight o'clock, booms, hencoops, spars,
 And all things, for a chance, had been cast loose
 That still could keep afloat the struggling tars,
 For yet they strove, although of no great
 use:
 There was no light in heaven but a few
 stars,
 The boats put off o'er-crowded with their crews;
 She gave a heel, and then a lurch to port,
 And, going down head foremost—sunk,
 in short.

LI

Then rose from sea to sky the wild farewell—

Then shriek'd the timid, and stood still the brave—

Then some leap'd overboard with dreadful yell,

As eager to anticipate their grave;

And the sea yawn'd around her like a hell,

And down she suck'd with her the whirling wave,

Like one who grapples with his enemy,

And strives to strangle him before he die.

LIII

And first one universal shriek there rush'd,

Louder than the loud ocean, like a crash

Of echoing thunder; and then all was hush'd,

Save the wild wind and the remorseless dash

Of billows; but at intervals there gush'd,

Accompanied with a convulsive splash,

A solitary shriek, the bubbling cry

Of some strong swimmer in his agony.

LIV

The boats, as stated, had got off before,

And in them crowded several of the crew;

And yet their present hope was hardly more

Than what it had been, for so strong it blew

There was slight chance of reaching any shore;

And then they were too many, though so few—

Nine in the cutter, thirty in the boat,

Were counted in them when they got afloat.

LV

All the rest perish'd; near two hundred souls

Had left their bodies; and what's worse, alas!

When over Catholics the ocean rolls,

They must wait several weeks before a mass

Takes off one peck of purgatorial coals,

Because, till people know what's come to pass,

They won't lay out their money on the dead—

It costs three francs for every mass that's said.

LVI

Juan got into the long-boat, and there

Contrived to help Pedrillo to a place;

It seem'd as if they had exchanged their care,

For Juan wore the magisterial face

Which courage gives, while poor Pedrillo's pair

Of eyes were crying for their owner's case:

Battista, though (a name call'd shortly Tita),

Was lost by getting at some aqua-vita.

LVII

Pedro, his valet, too, he tried to save,

But the same cause, conducive to his loss,

Left him so drunk, he jump'd into the wave,

As o'er the cutter's edge he tried to cross,

And so he found a wine-and-watery grave;

They could not rescue him although so close,

Because the sea ran higher every minute,

And for the boat—the crew kept crowding in it.

LVIII

A small old spaniel—which had been Don José's,

His father's, whom he loved, as ye may think,

For on such things the memory reposes

With tenderness—stood howling on the brink,

Knowing, (dogs have such intellectual noses!)

No doubt, the vessel was about to sink;

And Juan caught him up, and ere he stepp'd

Off threw him in, then after him he leap'd.

LIX

He also stuff'd his money where he could

About his person, and Pedrillo's too,

Who let him do, in fact, whate'er he would,

Not knowing what himself to say, or do,

As every rising wave his dread renew'd;

But Juan, trusting they might still get through,

And deeming there were remedies for any ill,

Thus re-embark'd his tutor and his spaniel.

LX

'Twas a rough night, and blew so stiffly yet,

That the sail was becalm'd between the seas,

Though on the wave's high top too much to set,

They dared not take it in for all the breeze:

Each sea curl'd o'er the stern, and kept them wet,

And made them bale without a moment's ease,

So that themselves as well as hopes were damp'd,

And the poor little cutter quickly swamp'd

LXI

Nine souls more went in her: the long-boat still

Kept above water, with an oar for mast,
Two blankets stitch'd together, answering ill

Instead of sail, were to the oar made fast:
Though every wave roll'd menacing to fill,
And present peril all before surpass'd,
They grieved for those who perish'd with the cutter,
And also for the biscuit-casks and butter.

LXII

The sun rose red and fiery, a sure sign
Of the continuance of the gale: to run
Before the sea until it should grow fine,
Was all that for the present could be done:

A few tea-spoonfuls of their rum and wine
Were served out to the people, who begun
To faint, and damaged bread wet through the bags,
And most of them had little clothes but rags.

LXIII

They counted thirty, crowded in a space
Which left scarce room for motion or exertion;
They did their best to modify their case,
One half sate up, though numb'd with the immersion,
While t'other half were laid down in their place,
At watch and watch; thus, shivering like the tertian
Ague in its cold fit, they fill'd their boat,
With nothing but the sky for a great coat.

LXIV

'Tis very certain the desire of life
Prolongs it: this is obvious to physicians,
When patients, neither plagued with friends nor wife,
Survive through very desperate conditions,
Because they still can hope, nor shines the knife
Nor shears of Atropos before their visions:
Despair of all recovery spoils longevity,
And makes men's miseries of alarming brevity.

LXV

'Tis said that persons living on annuities
Are longer lived than others,—God knows why, Unless to plague the grantors,—yet so true it is,
That some, I really think, do never die;

Of any creditors the worst a Jew it is,
And that's their mode of furnishing supply:
In my young days they lent me cash that way,
Which I found very troublesome to pay.

LXVI

'Tis thus with people in an open boat,
They live upon the love of life, and bear
More than can be believed, or even thought,
And stand like rocks the tempest's wear and tear;
And hardship still has been the sailor's lot,
Since Noah's ark went cruising here and there;
She had a curious crew as well as cargo,
Like the first old Greek privateer, the Argo.

LXVII

But man is a carnivorous production,
And must have meals, at least one meal a day;
He cannot live, like woodcocks, upon suction,
But, like the shark and tiger, must have prey;
Although his anatomical construction
Bears vegetables, in a grumbling way,
Your labouring people think beyond all question
Beef, veal, and mutton, better for digestion.

LXVIII

And thus it was with this our hapless crew;
For on the third day there came on a calm,
And though at first their strength it might renew,
And lying on their weariness like balm,
Lull'd them like turtles sleeping on the blue
Of ocean, when they woke they felt a qualm,
And fell all ravenously on their provision,
Instead of hoarding it with due precision.

LXIX

The consequence was easily foreseen—
They ate up all they had, and drank their wine,
In spite of all remonstrances, and then
On what, in fact, next day were they to dine?
They hoped the wind would rise, these foolish men!
And carry them to shore; these hopes were fine,
But as they had but one oar, and that brittle,
It would have been more wise to save their victual.

LXX

The fourth day came, but not a breath of air,
 And Ocean slumber'd like an unwean'd child:
 The fifth day, and their boat lay floating there,
 The sea and sky were blue, and clear, and mild—
 With their one oar (I wish they had had a pair)
 What could they do? and hunger's rage grew wild:
 So Juan's spaniel, spite of his entreating,
 Was kill'd, and portion'd out for present eating.

LXXI

On the sixth day they fed upon his hide,
 And Juan, who had still refused, because
 The creature was his father's dog that died,
 Now feeling all the vulture in his jaws,
 With some remorse received (though first denied)
 As a great favour one of the fore-paws,
 Which he divided with Pedrillo, who Devour'd it, longing for the other too.

LXXII

The seventh day, and no wind—the burning sun
 Blister'd and scorch'd, and, stagnant on the sea,
 They lay like carcasses; and hope was none,
 Save in the breeze that came not: savagely
 They glared upon each other—all was done,
 Water, and wine, and food,—and you might see
 The longings of the cannibal arise
 (Although they spoke not) in their wolfish eyes.

LXXIII

At length one whisper'd his companion, who Whisper'd another, and thus it went round,
 And then into a hoarser murmur grew,
 An ominous, and wild, and desperate sound;
 And when his comrade's thought each sufferer knew,
 'Twas but his own, suppress'd till now, he found:
 And out they spoke of lots for flesh and blood,
 And who should die to be his fellow's food.

LXXIV

But ere they came to this, they that day shared
 Some leathern caps, and what remain'd of shoes;

And then they look'd around them, and despair'd,
 And none to be the sacrifice would choose;
 At length the lots were torn up, and prepared,
 But of materials that must shock the Muse—
 Having no paper, for the want of better,
 They took by force from Juan Julia's letter.

LXXV

Then lots were made, and mark'd, and mix'd, and handed
 In silent horror, and their distribution
 Lull'd even the savage hunger which demanded,
 Like the Promethean vulture, this pollution;
 None in particular had sought or plann'd it,
 'Twas Nature gnaw'd them to this resolution,
 By which none were permitted to be neuter—
 And the lot fell on Juan's luckless tutor.

LXXVI

He but requested to be bled to death:
 The surgeon had his instruments, and bled
 Pedrillo, and so gently ebb'd his breath,
 You hardly could perceive when he was dead.
 He died as born, a Catholic in faith,
 Like most in the belief in which they're bred,
 And first a little crucifix he kiss'd,
 And then held out his jugular and wrist.

LXXVII

The surgeon, as there was no other fee,
 Had his first choice of morsels for his pains;
 But being thirstiest at the moment, he Prefer'd a draught from the fast-flowing veins:
 Part was divided, part thrown in the sea,
 And such things as the entrails and the brains
 Regaled two sharks, who follow'd o'er the billow—
 The sailors ate the rest of poor Pedrillo.

LXXVIII

The sailors ate him, all save three or four,
 Who were not quite so fond of animal food;
 To these was added Juan, who, before Refusing his own spaniel, hardly could Feel now his appetite increased much more;
 'Twas not to be expected that he should,
 Even in extremity of their disaster,
 Dine with them on his pastor and his master.

LXXIX

'Twas better that he did not; for, in fact,
The consequence was awful in the extreme;
For they, who were most ravenous in the act,

Went raging mad—Lord! how they did blaspheme!
And foam, and roll, with strange convulsions rack'd,
Drinking salt-water like a mountain-stream;
Tearing, and grinning, howling, screeching, swearing,
And, with hyæna-laughter, died despairing.

LXXX

Their numbers were much thinn'd by this infiction,
And all the rest were thin enough,
Heaven knows;
And some of them had lost their recollection,
Happier than they who still perceived their woes;
But others ponder'd on a new dissection,
As if not warn'd sufficiently by those Who had already perish'd, suffering madly,
For having used their appetites so sadly.

LXXXI

And next they thought upon the master's mate,
As fatter; but he saved himself, because,
Besides being much averse from such a fate,
There were some other reasons: the first was,
He had been rather indisposed of late;
And that which chiefly proved his saving clause,
Was a small present made to him at Cadiz,
By general subscription of the ladies.

LXXXII

Of poor Pedrillo something still remain'd,
But was used sparingly,—some were afraid,
And others still their appetites constrain'd,
Or but at times a little supper made;
Allexcept Juan, who throughout abstain'd,
Chewing a piece of bamboo, and some lead:
At length they caught two boobies, and a noddy,
And then they left off eating the dead body.

LXXXIII

And if Pedrillo's fate should shocking be,
Remember Ugolino condescends
To eat the head of his arch-enemy
The moment after he politely ends

His tale: if foes be food in hell, at sea
'Tis surely fair to dine upon our friends,
When shipwreck's short allowance grows too scanty,
Without being much more horrible than Dante.

LXXXIV

And the same night there fell a shower of rain,
For which their mouths gaped, like the cracks of earth
When dried to summer dust; till taught by pain,
Men really know not what good water's worth;
If you had been in Turkey or in Spain,
Or with a famish'd boat's-crew had your berth,
Or in the desert heard the camel's bell,
You'd wish yourself where Truth is—in a well.

LXXXV

It pour'd down torrents, but they were no richer,
Until they found a ragged piece of sheet,
Which served them as a sort of spongy pitcher,
And when they deem'd its moisture was complete,
They wrung it out, and though a thirsty ditcher
Might not have thought the scanty draught so sweet
As a full pot of porter, to their thinking
They ne'er till now had known the joys of drinking.

LXXXVI

And their baked lips, with many a bloody crack,
Suck'd in the moisture, which like nectar stream'd;
Their throats were ovens, their swoln tongues were black
As the rich man's in hell, who vainly scream'd
To beg the beggar, who could not rain back
A drop of dew, when every drop had seem'd
To taste of heaven—If this be true, indeed,
Some Christians have a comfortable creed.

LXXXVII

There were two fathers in this ghastly crew,
And with them their two sons, of whom the one
Was more robust and hardy to the view,
But he died early; and when he was gone,

His nearest messmate told his sire, who
threw
One glance at him, and said, 'Heaven's will be done!
I can do nothing,' and he saw him thrown Into the deep without a tear or groan.

LXXXVIII

The other father had a weaklier child,
Of a soft cheek, and aspect delicate;
But the boy bore up long, and with a mild
And patient spirit held aloof his fate;
Little he said, and now and then he smiled,
As if to win a part from off the weight
He saw increasing on his father's heart,
With the deep deadly thought, that they must part.

LXXXIX

And o'er him bent his sire, and never raised His eyes from off his face, but wiped the
foam
From his pale lips, and ever on him gazed,
And when the wish'd-for shower at length was come,
And the boy's eyes, which the dull film
half glazed,
Brighten'd, and for a moment seem'd
to roam,
He squeezed from out a rag some drops of rain
Into his dying child's mouth—but in vain.

XC

The boy expired—the father held the clay,
And look'd upon it long, and when at
last Death left no doubt, and the dead burthen
lay Stiff on his heart, and pulse and hope were past,
He watch'd it wistfully, until away
'Twas borne by the rude wave wherein
'twas cast;
Then he himself sunk down all dumb and shivering,
And gave no sign of life, save his limbs quivering.

XCI

Now overhead a rainbow, bursting through The scattering clouds, shone, spanning the dark sea,
Resting its bright base on the quivering
blue;
And all within its arch appear'd to be Clearer than that without, and its wide hue Wax'd broad and waving, like a banner
free,
Then changed like to a bow that's bent,
and then
Forsook the dim eyes of these shipwreck'd
men.

XCII

It changed, of course; a heavenly chameleon,
The airy child of vapour and the sun, Brought forth in purple, cradled in vermilion,
Baptized in molten gold, and swathed
in dun,
Glittering like crescents o'er a Turk's pavilion,
And blending every colour into one,
Just like a black eye in a recent scuffle (For sometimes we must box without the muffle).

XCIII

Our shipwreck'd seamen thought it a good omen—
It is as well to think so, now and then;
'Twas an old custom of the Greek and Roman,
And may become of great advantage
when Folks are discouraged; and most surely no men
Had greater need to nerve themselves
again
Than these, and so this rainbow look'd like hope—
Quite a celestial kaleidoscope.

XCIV

About this time a beautiful white bird,
Web-footed, not unlike a dove in size And plumage (probably it might have err'd Upon its course), pass'd oft before their
eyes,
And tried to perch, although it saw and
heard
The men within the boat, and in this
guise
It came and went, and flutter'd round them till Night fell;—this seem'd a better omen
still.

XCV

But in this case I also must remark,
'Twas well this bird of promise did not perch,
Because the tackle of our shatter'd bark
Was not so safe for roosting as a church;
And had it been the dove from Noah's
ark,
Returning there from her successful
search,
Which in their way that moment chanced
to fall,
They would have eat her, olive-branch
and all.

XCVI

With twilight it again came on to blow,
 But not with violence; the stars shone
 out,
 The boat made way; yet now they were so
 low,
 They knew not where nor what they were about;
 Some fancied they saw land, and some said 'No!'
 The frequent fog-banks gave them cause to doubt—
 Some swore that they heard breakers,
 others guns,
 And all mistook about the latter once.

XCVII

As morning broke, the light wind died
 away,
 When he who had the watch sung out
 and swore,
 If 'twas not land that rose with the sun's
 ray,
 He wish'd that land he never might see
 more:
 And the rest rubb'd their eyes, and saw a bay,
 Or thought they saw, and shaped their course for shore;
 For shore it was, and gradually grew Distinct, and high, and palpable to view.

XCVIII

And then of these some part burst into
 tears,
 And others, looking with a stupid stare,
 Could not yet separate their hopes from
 fears,
 And seem'd as if they had no further
 care;
 While a few pray'd—(the first time for some years)—
 And at the bottom of the boat three
 were Asleep: they shook them by the hand and
 head,
 And tried to awaken them, but found them
 dead.

XCIX

The day before, fast sleeping on the water,
 They found a turtle of the hawk's-bill
 kind,
 And by good fortune, gliding softly,
 caught her,
 Which yielded a day's life, and to their
 mind
 Proved even still a more nutritious matter, Because it left encouragement behind:
 They thought that in such perils, more than chance
 Had sent them this for their deliverance.

C

The land appear'd a high and rocky coast,
 And higher grew the mountains as they
 drew,
 Set by a current, toward it: they were lost
 In various conjectures, for none knew To what part of the earth they had been tost,
 So changeable had been the winds that
 blew;
 Some thought it was Mount Ætna, some the highlands
 Of Candia, Cyprus, Rhodes, or other islands.

CI

Meantime the current, with a rising gale,
 Still set them onwards to the welcome
 shore,
 Like Charon's bark of spectres, dull and
 pale:
 Their living freight was now reduced to four,
 And three dead, whom their strength could not avail
 To heave into the deep with those before,
 Though the two sharks still follow'd them,
 and dash'd
 The spray into their faces as they splash'd.

CII

Famine, despair, cold, thirst, and heat,
 had done
 Their work on them by turns, and thinn'd them to Such things a mother had not known her
 son
 Amidst the skeletons of that gaunt
 crew;
 By night chill'd, by day scorch'd, thus one by one
 They perish'd, until wither'd to these
 few,
 But chiefly by a species of self-slaughter,
 In washing down Pedrillo with salt water.

CIII

As they drew nigh the land, which now was seen
 Unequal in its aspect here and there,
 They felt the freshness of its growing
 green,
 That waved in forest-tops, and
 smooth'd the air,
 And fell upon their glazed eyes like a
 screen
 From glistening waves, and skies so hot and bare—Lovely seem'd any object that should sweep
 Away the vast, salt, dread, eternal deep.

CIV

The shore look'd wild, without a trace of
 man,
 And girt by formidable waves; but they Were mad for land, and thus their course they ran,
 Though right ahead the roaring breakers lay:
 A reef between them also now began
 To show its boiling surf and bounding
 spray,
 But finding no place for their landing
 better,
 They ran the boat for shore,—and upset
 her.

CV

But in his native stream, the Guadalquivir, Juan to lave his youthful limbs was
 wont;
 And having learnt to swim in that sweet
 river,
 Had often turn'd the art to some account:
 A better swimmer you could scarce see
 ever,
 He could, perhaps, have pass'd the Hellespont,
 As once (a feat on which ourselves we prided)
 Leander, Mr. Ekenhead, and I did.

CVI

So here, though faint, emaciated, and
 stark,
 He buoy'd his boyish limbs, and strove
 to ply
 With the quick wave, and gain, ere it was dark,
 The beach which lay before him, high
 and dry:
 The greatest danger here was from a shark,
 That carried off his neighbour by the thigh;
 As for the other two, they could not swim,
 So nobody arrived on shore but him.

CVII

Nor yet had he arrived but for the oar,
 Which, providentially for him, was wash'd
 Just as his feeble arms could strike no
 more,
 And the hard wave o'erwhelm'd him
 as 'twas dash'd
 Within his grasp; he clung to it, and sore
 The waters beat while he thereto was lash'd;
 At last, with swimming, wading, scrambling, he Roll'd on the beach, half senseless, from the sea:

CVIII

There, breathless, with his digging nails
 he clung
 Fast to the sand, lest the returning wave,
 From whose reluctant roar his life he
 wrung,
 Should suck him back to her insatiate
 grave:
 And there he lay, full length, where he was
 flung,
 Before the entrance of a cliff-worn cave,
 With just enough of life to feel its pain,
 And deem that it was saved, perhaps in vain.

CIX

With slow and staggering effort he arose,
 But sunk again upon his bleeding knee
 And quivering hand; and then he look'd for those Who long had been his mates upon the
 sea;
 But none of them appear'd to share his
 woes,
 Save one, a corpse, from out the famish'd three,
 Who died two days before, and now had
 found
 An unknown barren beach for burial-
 ground.

CX

And as he gazed, his dizzy brain spun fast,
 And down he sunk; and as he sunk, the
 sand
 Swam round and round, and all his senses
 pass'd:
 He fell upon his side, and his stretch'd
 hand Droop'd dripping on the oar (their jury-mast),
 And, like a wither'd lily, on the land
 His slender frame and pallid aspect lay,
 As fair a thing as e'er was form'd of clay.

CXI

How long in his damp trance young Juan
 lay
 He knew not, for the earth was gone
 for him,
 And time had nothing more of night nor
 day
 For his congealing blood, and senses
 dim;
 And how this heavy faintness pass'd away
 He knew not, till each painful pulse and
 limb,
 And tingling vein, seem'd throbbing back to life,
 For Death, though vanquish'd, still retired with strife.

CXII

His eyes he open'd, shut, again unclosed,
 For all was doubt and dizziness; he
 thought
 He still was in the boat, and had but dozed,
 And felt again with his despair o'er-
 wrought,
 And wish'd it death in which he had
 reposed,
 And then once more his feelings back were brought,
 And slowly by his swimming eyes was
 seen
 A lovely female face of seventeen.

CXIII

'Twas bending close o'er his, and the small mouth
 Seem'd almost prying into his for
 breath;
 And chafing him, the soft warm hand of
 youth
 Recall'd his answering spirits back from death;
 And, bathing his chill temples, tried to soothe
 Each pulse to animation, till beneath
 Its gentle touch and trembling care, a sigh
 To these kind efforts made a low reply.

CXIV

Then was the cordial pour'd, and mantle
 flung Around his scarce-clad limbs; and the fair arm
 Raised higher the faint head which o'er it
 hung;
 And her transparent cheek, all pure and
 warm,
 Pillow'd his death-like forehead; then she wrung
 His dewy curls, long drench'd by every
 storm;
 And watch'd with eagerness each throb that drew
 A sigh from his heaved bosom—and hers,
 too.

CXV

And lifting him with care into the cave,
 The gentle girl, and her attendant,—
 one Young, yet her elder, and of brow less
 grave,
 And more robust of figure—then begun
 To kindle fire, and as the new flames gave Light to the rocks that roof'd them, which the sun
 Had never seen, the maid, or whatsoe'er
 She was, appear'd distinct, and tall, and fair.

CXVI

Her brow was overhung with coins of gold,
 That sparkled o'er the auburn of her hair,
 Her clustering hair, whose longer locks were roll'd
 In braids behind; and though her stature were
 Even of the highest for a female mould,
 They nearly reach'd her heel; and in her
 air
 There was a something which bespoke
 command,
 As one who was a lady in the land.

CXVII

Her hair, I said, was auburn; but her eyes Were black as death, their lashes the same hue,
 Of downcast length, in whose silk shadow
 lies
 Deepest attraction; for when to the view Forth from its raven fringe the full glance
 flies,
 Ne'er with such force the swiftest arrow
 flew;
 'Tis as the snake late coil'd, who pours his
 length,
 And hurls at once his venom and his strength.

CXVIII

Her brow was white and low, her cheek's pure dye
 Like twilight rosy still with the set sun;
 Short upper lip—sweet lips! that make us
 sigh
 Ever to have seen such; for she was one
 Fit for the model of a statuary
 (A race of mere impostors, when all's
 done—
 I've seen much finer women, ripe and real,
 Than all the nonsense of their stone ideal).

CXIX

I'll tell you why I say so, for 'tis just One should not rail without a decent
 cause:
 There was an Irish lady, to whose bust
 I ne'er saw justice done, and yet she was A frequent model; and if e'er she must Yield to stern Time and Nature's wrinkling laws,
 They will destroy a face which mortal
 thought
 Ne'er compass'd, nor less mortal chisel
 wrought.

CXX

And such was she, the lady of the cave:
 Her dress was very different from the Spanish,
 Simpler, and yet of colours not so grave;
 For, as you know, the Spanish women banish

Bright hues when out of doors, and yet, while wave Around them (what I hope will never vanish)
 The basquina and the mantilla, they Seem at the same time mystical and gay.

CXXI

But with our damsel this was not the case:
 Her dress was many-colour'd, finely spun;
 Her locks curl'd negligently round her
 face,
 But through them gold and gems profusely shone:
 Her girdle sparkled, and the richest lace
 Flow'd in her veil, and many a precious
 stone
 Flash'd on her little hand; but, what was shocking,
 Her small snow feet had slippers, but no stocking.

CXXII

The other female's dress was not unlike,
 But of inferior materials: she
 Had not so many ornaments to strike,
 Her hair had silver only, bound to be
 Her dowry; and her veil, in form alike,
 Was coarser; and her air, though firm,
 less free;
 Her hair was thicker, but less long; her eyes
 As black, but quicker, and of smaller size.

CXXIII

And these two tended him, and cheer'd him both
 With food and raiment, and those soft attentions,
 Which are—(as I must own)—of female
 growth,
 And have ten thousand delicate inven-
 tions:
 They made a most superior mess of broth,
 A thing which poesy but seldom men-
 tions,
 But the best dish that e'er was cook'd
 since Homer's
 Achilles order'd dinner for new comers.

CXXIV

I'll tell you who they were, this female
 pair,
 Lest they should seem princesses in disguise;
 Besides, I hate all mystery, and that air
 Of clap-trap, which your recent poets
 prize;
 And so, in short, the girls they really were They shall appear before your curious
 eyes,
 Mistress and maid; the first was only
 daughter
 Of an old man, who lived upon the water.

CXXV

A fisherman he had been in his youth,
 And still a sort of fisherman was he;
 But other speculations were, in sooth,
 Added to his connexion with the sea,
 Perhaps not so respectable, in truth:
 A little smuggling, and some piracy,
 Left him, at last, the sole of many masters
 Of an ill-gotten million of piastres.

CXXVI

A fisher, therefore, was he,—though of
 men,
 Like Peter the Apostle,—and he fish'd
 For wandering merchant vessels, now and
 then,
 And sometimes caught as many as he wish'd;
 The cargoes he confiscated, and gain
 He sought in the slave-market too, and dish'd
 Full many a morsel for that Turkish trade,
 By which, no doubt, a good deal may be
 made.

CXXVII

He was a Greek, and on his isle had built
 (One of the wild and smaller Cyclades)
 A very handsome house from out his guilt,
 And there he lived exceedingly at ease;
 Heaven knows what cash he got, or blood
 he spilt,
 A sad old fellow was he, if you please;
 But this I know, it was a spacious building,
 Full of barbaric carving, paint, and gilding.

CXXVIII

He had an only daughter, call'd Haidée,
 The greatest heiress of the Eastern Isles;
 Besides, so very beautiful was she,
 Her dowry was as nothing to her smiles:
 Still in her teens, and like a lovely tree
 She grew to womanhood, and between whiles
 Rejected several suitors, just to learn How to accept a better in his turn.

CXXIX

And walking out upon the beach, below
 The cliff,—towards sunset, on that day
 she found,
 Insensible,—not dead, but nearly so,— Don Juan, almost famish'd, and half drown'd;
 But being naked, she was shock'd, you know,
 Yet deem'd herself in common pity bound,
 As far as in her lay, 'to take him in,
 A stranger' dying, with so white a skin.

CXXX

But taking him into her father's house
 Was not exactly the best way to save,
 But like conveying to the cat the mouse,
 Or people in a trance into their grave;

Because the good old man had so much
 'vous,'
 Unlike the honest Arab thieves so
 brave,
 He would have hospitably cured the
 stranger
 And sold him instantly when out of danger.

CXXXI

And therefore, with her maid, she thought it best
 (A virgin always on her maid relies)
 To place him in the cave for present rest:
 And when, at last, he open'd his black
 eyes,
 Their charity increased about their guest;
 And their compassion grew to such a
 size,
 It open'd half the turnpike gates to
 heaven—
 (St. Paul says, 'tis the toll which must be given).

CXXXII

They made a fire,—but such a fire as they Upon the moment could contrive with
 such Materials as were cast up round the
 bay,—
 Some broken planks, and oars, that to the touch
 Were nearly tinder, since so long they lay,
 A mast was almost crumbled to a crutch;
 But, by God's grace, here wrecks were in such plenty,
 That there was fuel to have furnish'd twenty.

CXXXIII

He had a bed of furs, and a pelisse,
 For Haidée stripp'd her sables off to
 make
 His couch; and, that he might be more at
 ease,
 And warm, in case by chance he should
 awake,
 They also gave a petticoat apiece,
 She and her maid,—and promised by daybreak
 To pay him a fresh visit, with a dish
 For breakfast, of eggs, coffee, bread, and fish.

And thus they left him to his lone repose:
 Juan slept like a top, or like the dead,
 Who sleep at last, perhaps (God only
 knows),
 Just for the present; and in his lull'd
 head
 Not even a vision of his former woes Throbb'd in accursed dreams, which sometimes spread

Unwelcome visions of our former years,
 Till the eye, cheated, opens thick with tears.

CXXXV

Young Juan slept all dreamless:—but the maid,
 Who smooth'd his pillow, as she left the
 den
 Look'd back upon him, and a moment stayed,
 And turn'd, believing that he call'd again.
 He slumber'd; yet she thought, at least she
 said
 (The heart will slip, even as the tongue and pen),
 He had pronounced her name—but she
 forgot
 That at this moment Juan knew it not.

CXXXVI

And pensive to her father's house she went,
 Enjoining silence strict to Zoe, who Better than her knew what, in fact, she
 meant,
 She being wiser by a year or two:
 A year or two's an age when rightly spent,
 And Zoe spent hers, as most women do,
 In gaining all that useful sort of knowledge
 Which is acquired in Nature's good old college.

CXXXVII

The morn broke, and found Juan slumbering still Fast in his cave, and nothing clash'd
 upon
 His rest: the rushing of the neighbouring
 rill,
 And the young beams of the excluded
 sun,
 Troubled him not, and he might sleep his
 fill;
 And need he had of slumber yet, for
 none
 Had suffer'd more—his hardships were comparative
 To those related in my grand-dad's 'Narrative.'

CXXXVIII

Not so Haidée: she sadly toss'd and tumbled,
 And started from her sleep, and,
 turning o'er,
 Dream'd of a thousand wrecks, o'er which she stumbled,
 And handsome corpses strew'd upon
 the shore;
 And woke her maid so early that she grumbled,
 And call'd her father's old slaves up,
 who swore

In several oaths—Armenian, Turk, and Greek—
They knew not what to think of such a freak.

CXXXIX

But up she got, and up she made them get,
With some pretence about the sun, that makes Sweet skies just when he rises, or is set;
And 'tis, no doubt, a sight to see when breaks
Bright Phœbus, while the mountains still are wet
With mist, and every bird with him awakes,
And night is flung off like a mourning suit
Worn for a husband,—or some other brute.

CXLI

I say, the sun is a most glorious sight:
I've seen him rise full oft, indeed of late
I have sat up on purpose all the night,
Which hastens, as physicians say, one's fate;
And so all ye, who would be in the right
In health and purse, begin your day to date
From daybreak, and when coffin'd at four-score
Engrave upon the plate, you rose at four.

CXLI

And Haidée met the morning face to face;
Her own was freshest, though a feverish flush
Had dyed it with the headlong blood, whose race
From heart to cheek is curb'd into a blush,
Like to a torrent which a mountain's base,
That overpowers some Alpine river's rush,
Checks to a lake, whose waves in circles spread;
Or the Red Sea—but the sea is not red.

CXLI

And down the cliff the island virgin came,
And near the cave her quick light foot-steps drew,
While the sun smiled on her with his first flame,
And young Aurora kiss'd her lips with dew,
Taking her for a sister; just the same Mistake you would have made on seeing the two,
Although the mortal, quite as fresh and fair,
Had all the advantage, too, of not being air.

CXLIII

And when into the cavern Haidée stepp'd
All timidly, yet rapidly, she saw
That like an infant Juan sweetly slept;
And then she stopp'd, and stood as if in awe
(For sleep is awful), and on tiptoe crept
And wrapt him closer, lest the air, too raw,
Should reach his blood, then o'er him still as death
Bent, with hush'd lips, that drank his scarce-drawn breath.

CXLIV

And thus like to an angel o'er the dying
Who die in righteousness, she lean'd;
And there
All tranquilly the shipwreck'd boy was lying,
As o'er him lay the calm and stirless air:
But Zoe the meantime some eggs was frying,
Since, after all, no doubt the youthful pair
Must breakfast, and betimes—lest they should ask it,
She drew out her provision from the basket.

CXLV

She knew that the best feelings must have victual,
And that a shipwreck'd youth would hungry be;
Besides, being less in love, she yawn'd a little,
And felt her veins chill'd by the neighbouring sea;
And so, she cook'd their breakfast to a tittle;
I can't say that she gave them any tea,
But there were eggs, fruit, coffee, bread, fish, honey,
With Scio wine,—and all for love, not money.

CXLVI

And Zoe, when the eggs were ready, and
The coffee made, would fain have waken'd Juan;
But Haidée stopp'd her with her quick small hand,
And without word, a sign her finger drew on
Her lip, which Zoe needs must understand;
And, the first breakfast spoilt, prepared a new one,
Because her mistress would not let her break
That sleep which seem'd as it would ne'er awake.

CXLVII

For still he lay, and on his thin worn cheek
 A purple hectic play'd like dying day
 On the snow-tops of distant hills; the streak
 Of sufferance yet upon his forehead lay,
 Where the blue veins look'd shadowy,
 shrunk, and weak;
 And his black curls were dewy with the
 spray,
 Which weigh'd upon them yet, all damp
 and salt,
 Mix'd with the stony vapours of the vault.

CXLVIII

And she bent o'er him, and he lay beneath, Hush'd as the babe upon its mother's
 breast,
 Droop'd as the willow when no winds can
 breathe,
 Lull'd like the depth of ocean when at
 rest,
 Fair as the crowning rose of the whole
 wreath,
 Soft as the callow cygnet in its nest;
 In short, he was a very pretty fellow,
 Although his woes had turn'd him rather yellow.

CXLIX

He woke and gazed, and would have slept
 again,
 But the fair face which met his eyes forbade
 Those eyes to close, though weariness and
 pain
 Had further sleep a further pleasure
 made;
 For woman's face was never form'd in
 vain
 For Juan, so that even when he pray'd
 He turn'd from grisly saints, and martyrs hairy,
 To the sweet portraits of the Virgin Mary.

CL

And thus upon his elbow he arose,
 And look'd upon the lady, in whose
 cheek
 The pale contended with the purple rose,
 As with an effort she began to speak;
 Her eyes were eloquent, her words would
 pose,
 Although she told him, in good modern
 Greek,
 With an Ionian accent, low and sweet,
 That he was faint, and must not talk, but eat.

CLI

Now Juan could not understand a word,
 Being no Grecian; but he had an ear,
 And her voice was the warble of a bird,
 So soft, so sweet, so delicately clear,

That finer, simpler music ne'er was heard;
 The sort of sound we echo with a tear,
 Without knowing why—an overpowering
 tone,
 Whence melody descends as from a
 throne.

CLII

And Juan gazed as one who is awoke
 By a distant organ, doubting if he be
 Not yet a dreamer, till the spell is broke
 By the watchman, or some such reality,
 Or by one's early valet's cursed knock;
 At least it is a heavy sound to me,
 Who like a morning slumber—for the night
 Shows stars and women in a better light.

CLIII

And Juan, too, was help'd out from his
 dream,
 Or sleep, or whatsoever it was, by feeling
 A most prodigious appetite; the steam
 Of Zoe's cookery no doubt was stealing
 Upon his senses, and the kindling beam
 Of the new fire, which Zoe kept up, kneeling,
 To stir her viands, made him quite awake
 And long for food, but chiefly a beef-steak.

CLIV

But beef is rare within these oxless isles;
 Goat's flesh there is, no doubt, and kid,
 and mutton,
 And, when a holiday upon them smiles,
 A joint upon their barbarous spits they put on:
 But this occurs but seldom, between
 whiles,
 For some of these are rocks with scarce
 a hut on;
 Others are fair and fertile, among which This, though not large, was one of the most rich.

CLV

Isay that beef is rare, and can't help thinking
 That the old fable of the Minotaur—
 From which our modern morals, rightly shrinking, Condemn the royal lady's taste who
 wore
 A cow's shape for a mask—was only (sinking
 The allegory) a mere type, no more,
 That Pasiphae promoted breeding cattle,
 To make the Cretans bloodier in battle.

CLVI

For we all know that English people are Fed upon beef—I won't say much of beer,
 Because 'tis liquor only, and being far
 From this my subject, has no business
 here;

We know, too, they are very fond of war,
 A pleasure—like all pleasures—rather
 dear;
 So were the Cretans—from which I infer That beef and battles both were owing to her.

CLVII

But to resume. The languid Juan raised
 His head upon his elbow, and he saw
 A sight on which he had not lately gazed,
 As all his latter meals had been quite
 raw,
 Three or four things, for which the Lord
 he praised,
 And, feeling still the famish'd vulture
 gnaw,
 He fell upon whate'er was offer'd, like
 A priest, a shark, an alderman, or pike.

CLVIII

He ate, and he was well supplied; and she,
 Who watch'd him like a mother, would have fed
 Him past all bounds, because she smiled
 to see
 Such appetite in one she had deem'd
 dead:
 But Zoe, being older than Haidée, Knew (by tradition, for she ne'er had read)
 That famish'd people must be slowly
 nurst,
 And fed by spoonfuls, else they always burst.

CLIX

And so she took the liberty to state, Rather by deeds than words, because the case
 Was urgent, that the gentleman, whose
 fate
 Had made her mistress quit her bed to
 trace
 The sea-shore at this hour, must leave his
 plate,
 Unless he wish'd to die upon the place—
 She snatch'd it, and refused another morsel,
 Saying, he had gorged enough to make a horse ill.

CLX

Next they—he being naked, save a tatter'd Pair of scarce decent trowsers—went to
 work,
 And in the fire his recent rags they
 scatter'd,
 And dress'd him, for the present, like a Turk,
 Or Greek—that is, although it not much matter'd,
 Omitting turban, slippers, pistols,
 dirk,—

They furnish'd him, entire, except some stitches,
 With a clean shirt, and very spacious breeches.

CLXI

And then fair Haidée tried her tongue at speaking,
 But not a word could Juan comprehend.
 Although he listen'd so that the young Greek in Her earnestness would ne'er have made an end;
 And, as he interrupted not, went eking
 Her speech out to her protégé and
 friend,
 Till pausing at the last her breath to take,
 She saw he did not understand Romaic.

CLXII

And then she had recourse to nods, and signs,
 And smiles, and sparkles of the speaking
 eye,
 And read (the only book she could) the
 lines
 Of his fair face, and found, by sympathy,
 The answer eloquent, where the soul
 shines
 And darts in one quick glance a long
 reply;
 And thus in every look she saw exprest
 A world of words, and things at which she guess'd.

CLXIII

And now, by dint of fingers and of eyes,
 And words repeated after her, he took
 A lesson in her tongue; but by surmise,
 No doubt, less of her language than her
 look:
 As he who studies fervently the skies Turns oftener to the stars than to his
 book,
 Thus Juan learn'd his alpha beta better
 From Haidée's glance than any graven letter.

CLXIV

'Tis pleasing to be school'd in a strange
 tongue
 By female lips and eyes—that is, I mean,
 When both the teacher and the taught are
 young,
 As was the case, at least, where I have
 been;
 They smile so when one's right, and when one's wrong
 They smile still more, and then there intervene
 Pressure of hands, perhaps even a chaste
 kiss;—
 I learn'd the little that I know by this:

CLXV

That is, some words of Spanish, Turk, and Greek,
 Italian not at all, having no teachers;
 Much English I cannot pretend to speak,
 Learning that language chiefly from its preachers,
 Barrow, South, Tillotson, whom every week

I study, also Blair, the highest reachers
 Of eloquence in piety and prose—
 I hate your poets, so read none of those.

CLXVI

As for the ladies, I have nought to say,
 A wanderer from the British world of fashion,
 Where I, like other 'dogs, have had my day,'
 Like other men, too, may have had my passion—
 But that, like other things, has pass'd away,
 And all her fools whom I could lay the lash on:

Foes, friends, men, women, now are nought to me
 But dreams of what has been, no more to be.

CLXVII

Return we to Don Juan. He begun
 To hear new words, and to repeat them;
 but
 Some feelings, universal as the sun,
 Were such as could not in his breast be shut

More than within the bosom of a nun:
 He was in love,—as you would be, no doubt,
 With a young benefactress,—so was she,
 Just in the way we very often see.

CLXVIII

And every day by daybreak—rather early
 For Juan, who was somewhat fond of rest—
 She came into the cave, but it was merely
 To see her bird reposing in his nest;
 And she would softly stir his locks so curly,
 Without disturbing her yet slumbering guest,
 Breathing all gently o'er his cheek and mouth,
 As o'er a bed of roses the sweet south.

CLXIX

And every morn his colour freshlier came,
 And every day help'd on his convalescence;
 'Twas well, because health in the human frame
 Is pleasant, besides being true love's essence,

For health and idleness to passion's flame
 Are oil and gunpowder; and some good lessons
 Are also learnt from Ceres and from Bacchus,
 Without whom Venus will not long attack us.

CLXX

While Venus fills the heart (without heart really Love, though good always, is not quite so good),
 Ceres presents a plate of vermicelli,—
 For love must be sustain'd like flesh and blood,
 While Bacchus pours out wine, or hands a jelly:
 Eggs, oysters, too, are amatory food;
 But who is their purveyor from above
 Heaven knows,—it may be Neptune, Pan, or Jove.

CLXXI

When Juan woke he found some good things ready,
 A bath, a breakfast, and the finest eyes
 That ever made a youthful heart less steady,
 Besides her maid's, as pretty for their size;
 But I have spoken of all this already—
 And repetition's tiresome and unwise,—
 Well—Juan, after bathing in the sea,
 Came always back to coffee and Haidée.

CLXXII

Both were so young, and one so innocent,
 That bathing pass'd for nothing: Juan seem'd
 To her, as 'twere, the kind of being sent,
 Of whom these two years she had nightly dream'd,
 A something to be loved, a creature meant
 To be her happiness, and whom she deem'd
 To render happy: all who joy would win
 Must share it,—Happiness was born a twin.

CLXXIII

It was such pleasure to behold him, such Enlargement of existence to partake
 Nature with him, to thrill beneath his touch,
 To watch him slumbering, and to see him wake;
 To live with him for ever were too much;
 But then the thought of parting made her quake:
 He was her own, her ocean-treasure, cast
 Like a rich wreck—her first love, and her last.

CLXXIV

And thus a moon roll'd on, and fair
 Haidée
 Paid daily visits to her boy, and took Such plentiful precautions, that still he Remain'd unknown within his craggy
 nook;
 At last her father's prows put out to sea,
 For certain merchantmen upon the
 look,
 Not as of yore to carry off an Io,
 But three Ragusan vessels bound for Scio.

CLXXV

Then came her freedom, for she had no
 mother,
 So that, her father being at sea, she was Free as a married woman, or such other Female, as where she likes may freely
 pass,
 Without even the encumbrance of a
 brother,
 The freest she that ever gazed on glass:
 I speak of Christian lands in this comparison,
 Where wives, at least, are seldom kept in garrison.

CLXXVI

Now she prolong'd her visits and her talk (For they must talk), and he had learnt
 to say
 So much as to propose to take a walk,—
 For little had he wander'd since the day
 On which, like a young flower snapp'd from the stalk,
 Drooping and dewy on the beach he
 lay,—
 And thus they walk'd out in the afternoon,
 And saw the sun set opposite the moon.

CLXXVII

It was a wild and breaker-beaten coast,
 With cliffs above, and a broad sandy
 shore,
 Guarded by shoals and rocks as by an
 host,
 With here and there a creek, whose aspect wore
 A better welcome to the tempest-tost;
 And rarely ceased the haughty billow's
 roar,
 Save on the dead long summer days,
 which make
 The outstretch'd ocean glitter like a lake.

CLXXVIII

And the small ripple spilt upon the beach Scarcely o'erpass'd the cream of your champagne,
 When o'er the brim the sparkling bumpers
 reach,
 That spring-dew of the spirit! the heart's rain!

Few things surpass old wine; and they may preach
 Who please,—the more because they preach in vain,—
 Let us have wine and women, mirth and
 laughter,
 Sermons and soda-water the day after.

CLXXXIX

Man, being reasonable, must get drunk;
 The best of life is but intoxication:
 Glory, the grape, love, gold, in these are sunk
 The hopes of all men, and of every
 nation;
 Without their sap, how branchless were the trunk
 Of life's strange tree, so fruitful on occasion!
 But to return,—Get very drunk; and when You wake with headache, you shall see what then.

CLXXX

Ring for your valet—bid him quickly bring Some hock and soda-water, then you'll
 know
 A pleasure worthy Xerxes the great king;
 For not the blest sherbet, sublimed with
 snow,
 Nor the first sparkle of the desert spring,
 Nor Burgundy in all its sunset glow,
 After long travel, ennui, love, or slaughter,
 Vie with that draught of hock and soda-
 water.

CLXXXI

The coast—I think it was the coast that I Was just describing—Yes, it was the
 coast—
 Lay at this period quiet as the sky,
 The sands untumbled, the blue waves
 untost,
 And all was stillness, save the sea-bird's cry,
 And dolphin's leap, and little billow crost
 By some low rock or shelve, that made it fret
 Against the boundary it scarcely wet.

CLXXXII

And forth they wander'd, her sire being
 gone,
 As I have said, upon an expedition;
 And mother, brother, guardian, she had
 none,
 Save Zoe, who, although with due precision
 She waited on her lady with the sun, Thought daily service was her only
 mission,
 Bringing warm water, wreathing her long tresses,
 And asking now and then for cast-off dresses.

CLXXXIII

It was the cooling hour, just when the rounded
 Red sun sinks down behind the azure hill,
 Which then seems as if the whole earth it bounded,
 Circling all nature, hush'd, and dim, and still,
 With the far mountain-crescent half surrounded
 On one side, and the deep sea calm and chill,
 Upon the other, and the rosy sky,
 With one star sparkling through it like an eye.

CLXXXIV

And thus they wander'd forth, and hand in hand,
 Over the shining pebbles and the shells,
 Glided along the smooth and harden'd sand,
 And in the worn and wild receptacles
 Work'd by the storms, yet work'd as it were plann'd,
 In hollow halls, with sparry roofs and cells,
 They turn'd to rest; and, each clasp'd by an arm,
 Yielded to the deep twilight's purple charm.

CLXXXV

They look'd up to the sky, whose floating glow
 Spread like a rosy ocean, vast and bright;
 They gazed upon the glittering sea below,
 Whence the broad moon rose circling into sight;
 They heard the waves splash, and the wind so low,
 And saw each other's dark eyes darting light
 Into each other—and, beholding this,
 Their lips drew near, and clung into a kiss;

CLXXXVI

A long, long kiss, a kiss of youth, and love,
 And beauty, all concentrating like rays
 Into one focus, kindled from above;
 Such kisses as belong to early days,
 Where heart, and soul, and sense, in concert move,
 And the blood's lava, and the pulse a blaze,
 Each kiss a heart-quake,—for a kiss's strength,
 I think it must be reckon'd by its length.

CLXXXVII

By length I mean duration; they endured Heaven knows how long—no doubt they never reckon'd;

And if they had, they could not have secured
 The sum of their sensations to a second:
 They had not spoken; but they felt allured,
 As if their souls and lips each other beckon'd,
 Which, being join'd, like swarming bees they clung—
 Their hearts the flowers from whence the honey sprung.

CLXXXVIII

They were alone, but not alone as they
 Who shut in chambers think it loneliness;
 The silent ocean, and the starlight bay,
 The twilight glow, which momentarily grew less,
 The voiceless sands, and dropping caves, that lay
 Around them, made them to each other press,
 As if there were no life beneath the sky
 Save theirs, and that their life could never die.

CLXXXIX

They fear'd no eyes nor ears on that lone beach,
 They felt no terrors from the night; they were
 All in all to each other; though their speech
 Was broken words, they thought a language there,—
 And all the burning tongues the passions teach
 Found in one sigh the best interpreter
 Of nature's oracle—first love,—that all
 Which Eve has left her daughters since her fall.

Haidée spoke not of scruples, ask'd no vows,
 Nor offer'd any; she had never heard
 Of plight and promises to be a spouse,
 Or perils by a loving maid incur'd;
 She was all which pure ignorance allows,
 And flew to her young mate like a young bird,
 And never having dreamt of falsehood, she
 Had not one word to say of constancy.

CXCI

She loved, and was beloved—she adored,
 And she was worshipp'd; after nature's fashion,
 Their intense souls, into each other pour'd,
 If souls could die, had perish'd in that passion,—

But by degrees their senses were restored,
 Again to be o'ercome, again to dash
 on;
 And, beating 'gainst his bosom, Haidée's
 heart
 Felt as if never more to beat apart.

CXCH

Alas! they were so young, so beautiful,
 So lonely, loving, helpless, and the hour
 Was that in which the heart is always full,
 And, having o'er itself no further
 power,
 Prompts deeds eternity cannot annul,
 But pays off moments in an endless
 shower
 Of hell-fire—all prepared for people
 giving
 Pleasure or pain to one another living.

CXCM

Alas! for Juan and Haidée! they were
 So loving and so lovely—till then never,
 Excepting our first parents, such a pair
 Had run the risk of being damn'd for
 ever;
 And Haidée, being devout as well as fair,
 Had, doubtless, heard about the Stygian river,
 And hell and purgatory—but forgot
 Just in the very crisis she should not.

CXCV

They look upon each other, and their eyes Gleam in the moonlight; and her white arm clasps
 Round Juan's head, and his around her
 lies
 Half buried in the tresses which it grasps;
 She sits upon his knee, and drinks his
 sighs,
 He hers, until they end in broken gasps;
 And thus they form a group that's quite antique,
 Half naked, loving, natural, and Greek.

CXCV

And when those deep and burning moments pass'd,
 And Juan sunk to sleep within her arms,
 She slept not, but all tenderly, though
 fast,
 Sustain'd his head upon her bosom's
 charms;
 And now and then her eye to heaven is
 cast,
 And then on the pale cheek her breast
 now warms,
 Pillow'd on her o'erflowing heart, which pants
 With all it granted, and with all it grants.

CXCVI

An infant when it gazes on a light,
 A child the moment when it drains the
 breast,
 A devotee when soars the Host in sight,
 An Arab with a stranger for a guest,
 A sailor when the prize has struck in fight,
 A miser filling his most hoarded chest, Feel rapture; but not such true joy are reaping
 As they who watch o'er what they love while sleeping.

CXCVII

For there it lies so tranquil, so beloved,
 All that it hath of life with us is living;
 So gentle, stirless, helpless, and unmoved,
 And all unconscious of the joy 'tis
 giving;
 All it hath felt, inflicted, pass'd, and
 proved,
 Hush'd into depths beyond the watcher's diving;
 There lies the thing we love with all its errors
 And all its charms, like death without its terrors.

CXCVIII

The lady watch'd her lover—and that hour
 Of Love's, and Night's, and Ocean's solitude,
 O'erflow'd her soul with their united
 power;
 Amidst the barren sand and rocks so
 rude
 She and her wave-worn love had made their bower,
 Where nought upon their passion could
 intrude,
 And all the stars that crowded the blue
 space
 Saw nothing happier than her glowing face.

CXCVIX

Alas! the love of women! it is known
 To be a lovely and a fearful thing;
 For all of theirs upon that die is thrown,
 And if 'tis lost, life hath no more to
 bring
 To them but mockeries of the past alone,
 And their revenge is as the tiger's spring, Deadly, and quick, and crushing; yet, as real
 Torture is theirs, what they inflict they feel.

CC

They are right; for man, to man so oft unjust,
 Is always so to women; one sole bond
 Awaits them, treachery is all their trust;
 Taught to conceal, their bursting hearts
 despond

Over their idol, till some wealthier lust
 Buys them in marriage—and what rests beyond?
 A thankless husband, next a faithless
 lover,
 Then dressing, nursing, praying, and all's
 over.

CCI

Some take a lover, some take drams or prayers,
 Some mind their household, others dis-
 sipation,
 Some run away, and but exchange their
 cares,
 Losing the advantage of a virtuous
 station;
 Few changes e'er can better their affairs,
 Theirs being an unnatural situation,
 From the dull palace to the dirty hovel:
 Some play the devil, and then write a novel.

CCII

Haidée was Nature's bride, and knew not
 this:
 Haidée was Passion's child, born where
 the sun
 Showers triple light, and scorches even the kiss
 Of his gazelle-eyed daughters; she was
 one
 Made but to love, to feel that she was his Who was her chosen: what was said or
 done
 Elsewhere was nothing. She had nought to fear,
 Hope, care, nor love beyond,—her heart beat here.

CCIII

And oh! that quickening of the heart, that beat!
 How much it costs us! yet each rising throb
 Is in its cause as its effect so sweet,
 That Wisdom, ever on the watch to rob
 Joy of its alchemy, and to repeat Fine truths; even Conscience, too, has a tough job
 To make us understand each good old maxim,
 So good—I wonder Castlereagh don't tax
 'em.

CCIV

And now 'twas done—on the lone shore were plighted
 Their hearts; the stars, their nuptial torches, shed
 Beauty upon the beautiful they lighted:
 Ocean their witness, and the cave their
 bed,

By their own feelings hallow'd and united,
 Their priest was Solitude, and they were
 wed:
 And they were happy, for to their young
 eyes
 Each was an angel, and earth paradise.

CCV

Oh, Love! of whom great Cæsar was the suitor,
 Titus the master, Antony the slave,
 Horace, Catullus, scholars, Ovid tutor, Sappho the sage blue-stocking, in whose
 grave
 All those may leap who rather would be neuter—(Leucadia's rock still overlooks the
 wave)—
 Oh, Love! thou art the very god of evil,
 For, after all, we cannot call thee devil.

CCVI

Thou mak'st the chaste connubial state precarious,
 And jestest with the brows of mightiest
 men:
 Cæsar and Pompey, Mahomet, Belisarius, Have much employ'd the muse of history's pen:
 Their lives and fortunes were extremely various,
 Such worthies Time will never see again;
 Yet to these four in three things the same luck holds,
 They all were heroes, conquerors, and cuckolds.

CCVII

Thou mak'st philosophers; there's Epicurus
 And Aristippus, a material crew!
 Who to immoral courses would allure us
 By theories quite practicable too;
 If only from the devil they would insure
 us,
 How pleasant were the maxim (not quite new),
 'Eat, drink, and love; what can the rest avail us?'
 So said the royal sage Sardanapalus.

CCVIII

But Juan! had he quite forgotten Julia?
 And should he have forgotten her so
 soon?
 I can't but say it seems to me most truly a Perplexing question; but, no doubt,
 the moon
 Does these things for us, and whenever newly a Strong palpitation rises, 'tis her boon,
 Else how the devil is it that fresh features Have such a charm for us poor human creatures?

CCIX

I hate inconstancy—I loathe, detest, Abhor, condemn, abjure the mortal
 made
 Of such quicksilver clay that in his breast
 No permanent foundations can be laid;
 Love, constant love, has been my constant
 guest,
 And yet last night, being at a masquerade,
 I saw the prettiest creature, fresh from Milan,
 Which gave me some sensations like a villain.

CCX

But soon Philosophy came to my aid,
 And whisper'd, 'Think of every sacred tie!'
 'I will, my dear Philosophy!' I said,
 'But then her teeth, and then, oh,
 Heaven! her eye!
 I'll just inquire if she be wife or maid,
 Or neither—out of curiosity.'
 'Stop!' cried Philosophy, with air so Grecian
 (Though she was masqued then as a fair Venetian);

CCXI

'Stop!' so I stopp'd.—But to return: that
 which
 Men call inconstancy is nothing more Than admiration due where nature's rich Profusion with young beauty covers
 o'er
 Some favour'd object; and as in the niche
 A lovely statue we almost adore,
 This sort of adoration of the real
 Is but a heightening of the beau idéal.

CCXII

'Tis the perception of the beautiful,
 A fine extension of the faculties,
 Platonic, universal, wonderful,
 Drawn from the stars, and filter'd
 through the skies,
 Without which life would be extremely
 dull;
 In short, it is the use of our own eyes,
 With one or two small senses added, just
 To hint that flesh is form'd of fiery dust.

CCXIII

Yet 'tis a painful feeling, and unwilling,
 For surely if we always could perceive
 In the same object graces quite as killing
 As when she rose upon us like an Eve,
 'Twould save us many a heart-ache, many a shilling (For we must get them any how, or grieve),
 Whereas, if one sole lady pleased for ever,
 How pleasant for the heart, as well as liver!

CCXIV

The heart is like the sky, a part of heaven,
 But changes night and day, too, like the
 sky;
 Now o'er it clouds and thunder must be
 driven,
 And darkness and destruction as on high;
 But when it hath been scorch'd, and pierced, and riven,
 Its storms expire in water-drops; the eye
 Pours forth at last the heart's blood turn'd
 to tears,
 Which make the English climate of our
 years.

CCXV

The liver is the lazaret of bile,
 But very rarely executes its function,
 For the first passion stays there such a while,
 That all the rest creep in and form a
 junction,
 Like knots of vipers on a dunghill's soil,
 Rage, fear, hate, jealousy, revenge, compunction,
 So that all mischiefs spring up from this entrail,
 Like earthquakes from the hidden fire call'd 'central.'

CCXVI

In the mean time, without proceeding more
 In this anatomy, I've finish'd now
 Two hundred and odd stanzas as before,
 That being about the number I'll allow
 Each canto of the twelve, or twenty-four;
 And, laying down my pen, I make my bow,
 Leaving Don Juan and Haidée to plead
 For them and theirs with all who deign to read.

CANTO THE THIRD

I

HAIL, Muse! et cætera.—We left Juan sleeping,
 Pillow'd upon a fair and happy breast,
 And watch'd by eyes that never yet knew weeping,
 And loved by a young heart, too deeply
 blest
 To feel the poison through her spirit creeping,
 Or know who rested there, a foe to rest,
 Had soil'd the current of her sinless years,
 And turn'd her pure heart's purest blood
 to tears!

II

Oh, Love! what is it in this world of ours
 Which makes it fatal to be loved? Ah
 why
 With cypress branches hast thou wreathed
 thy bowers,
 And made thy best interpreter a sigh?

As those who dote on odours pluck the
flowers,
And place them on their breast—but place to die—
Thus the frail beings we would fondly cherish
Are laid within our bosoms but to perish.

III

In her first passion woman loves her lover,
In all the others all she loves is love,
Which grows a habit she can ne'er get over
And fits her loosely—like an easy glove,
As you may find, whene'er you like to prove her:

One man alone at first her heart can
move;
She then prefers him in the plural number,
Not finding that the additions much en-cumber.

IV

I know not if the fault be men's or theirs;
But one thing's pretty sure; a woman
planted (Unless at once she plunge for life in prayers)—

After a decent time must be gallanted;
Although, no doubt, her first of love affairs
Is that to which her heart is wholly
granted;

Yet there are some, they say, who have had
none,
But those who have ne'er end with only one.

'Tis melancholy, and a fearful sign
Of human frailty, folly, also crime,
That love and marriage rarely can combine,
Although they both are born in the same
clime;

Marriage from love, like vinegar from
wine—

A sad, sour, sober beverage—by time
Is sharpen'd from its high celestial flavour,
Down to a very homely household savour.

VI

There's something of antipathy, as 'twere, Between their present and their future
state;

A kind of flattery that's hardly fair
Is used until the truth arrives too late—
Yet what can people do, except despair?
The same things change their names at such a rate;

For instance—passion in a lover's glorious,
But in a husband is pronounced uxorious.

VII

Men grow ashamed of being so very fond;
They sometimes also get a little tired

(But that, of course, is rare), and then de-spond:

The same things cannot always be admired,

Yet 'tis 'so nominated in the bond,'
That both are tied till one shall have expired.

Sad thought! to lose the spouse that was adorning

Our days, and put one's servants into mourning.

VIII

There's doubtless something in domestic doings

Which forms, in fact, true love's antithesis;

Romances paint at full length people's
wooings,

But only give a bust of marriages;
For no one cares for matrimonial cooings,
There's nothing wrong in a connubial
kiss:

Think you, if Laura had been Petrarch's
wife,

He would have written sonnets all his life?

IX

All tragedies are finish'd by a death,
All comedies are ended by a marriage;

The future states of both are left to faith,
For authors fear description might dis-
parage

The worlds to come of both, or fall beneath,

And then both worlds would punish their miscarriage;

So leaving each their priest and prayer-book ready,

They say no more of Death or of the Lady.

X

The only two that in my recollection
Have sung of heaven and hell, or marriage, are

Dante and Milton, and of both the affection

Was hapless in their nuptials, for some bar

Of fault or temper ruin'd the connexion (Such things, in fact, it don't ask much to mar);

But Dante's Beatrice and Milton's Eve
Were not drawn from their spouses, you conceive.

XI

Some persons say that Dante meant theology

By Beatrice, and not a mistress—I,
Although my opinion may require

apology,
Deem this a commentator's phantasy,

Unless indeed it was from his own knowledge he Decided thus, and show'd good reason
why;
I think that Dante's more abstruse ecsta-tics
Meant to personify the mathematics.

XII

Haidée and Juan were not married, but The fault was theirs, not mine: it is not
fair,
Chaste reader, then, in any way to put The blame on me, unless you wish they
were;
Then if you'd have them wedded, please to shut
The book which treats of this erroneous
pair,
Before the consequences grow too awful;
'Tis dangerous to read of loves unlawful.

XIII

Yet they were happy,—happy in the illicit Indulgence of their innocent desires;
But more imprudent grown with every visit,
Haidée forgot the island was her sire's:
When we have what we like, 'tis hard to miss it,
At least in the beginning, ere one tires;
Thus she came often, not a moment losing,
Whilst her piratical papa was cruising.

XIV

Let not his mode of raising cash seem
strange,
Although he fleeced the flags of every
nation,
For into a prime minister but change
His title, and 'tis nothing but taxation;
But he, more modest, took an humbler
range
Of life, and in an honester vocation Pursued o'er the high seas his watery
journey,
And merely practised as a sea-attorney.

XV

The good old gentleman had been detain'd
By winds and waves, and some important captures;
And, in the hope of more, at sea remain'd,
Although a squall or two had damp'd
his raptures,
By swamping one of the prizes; he had chain'd
His prisoners, dividing them like chapters
In number'd lots; they all had cuffs and collars,
And averaged each from ten to a hundred dollars.

XVI

Some he disposed of off Cape Matapan, Among his friends the Mainots; some
he sold
To his Tunis correspondents, save one man Toss'd overboard unsaleable (being
old);
The rest—save here and there some richer
one,
Reserved for future ransom—in the hold,
Were link'd alike, as for the common people he Had a large order from the Dey of Tripoli.

XVII

The merchandise was served in the same
way,
Pieced out for different marts in the Levant,
Except some certain portions of the prey,
Light classic articles of female want,
French stuffs, lace, tweezers, toothpicks,
teapot, tray,
Guitars and castanets from Alicant,
All which selected from the spoil he gathers,
Robb'd for his daughter by the best of fathers.

XVIII

A monkey, a Dutch mastiff, a mackaw, Two parrots, with a Persian cat and kittens,
He chose from several animals he saw—
A terrier, too, which once had been a Briton's,
Who dying on the coast of Ithaca,
The peasants gave the poor dumb thing
a pittance.
These to secure in this strong blowing
weather,
He caged in one huge hamper all together.

XIX

Then having settled his marine affairs, Despatching single cruisers here and
there,
His vessel having need of some repairs,
He shaped his course to where his daughter fair
Continued still her hospitable cares;
But that part of the coast being shoal
and bare,
And rough with reefs which ran out many
a mile,
His port lay on the other side o' the isle.

XX

And there he went ashore without delay,
Having no custom-house nor quarantine
To ask him awkward questions on the way,
About the time and place where he had
been:

He left his ship to be hove down next day,
 With orders to the people to careen;
 So that all hands were busy beyond
 measure,
 In getting out goods, ballast, guns, and treasure.

XXI

Arriving at the summit of a hill
 Which overlook'd the white walls of his
 home,
 He stopp'd.—What singular emotions fill Their bosoms who have been induced to roam!
 With fluttering doubts if all be well or ill—
 With love for many, and with fears for some;
 All feelings which o'erleap the years long
 lost,
 And bring our hearts back to their starting-post.

XXII

The approach of home to husbands and to
 sires,
 After long travelling by land or water,
 Most naturally some small doubt inspires—
 A female family's a serious matter; (None trusts the sex more, or so much admires—
 But they hate flattery, so I never flatter;) Wives in their husbands' absences grow subtler,
 And daughters sometimes run off with the butler.

XXIII

An honest gentleman at his return
 May not have the good fortune of Ulysses;
 Not all lone matrons for their husbands
 mourn,
 Or show the same dislike to suitors'
 kisses;
 The odds are that he finds a handsome urn
 To his memory—and two or three young misses Born to some friend, who holds his wife and riches;—
 And that his Argus bites him by—the breeches.

XXIV

If single, probably his plighted fair
 Has in his absence wedded some rich
 miser;
 But all the better, for the happy pair
 May quarrel, and the lady growing wiser,
 He may resume his amatory care
 As cavalier servente, or despise her;
 And that his sorrow may not be a dumb
 one,
 Write odes on the Inconstancy of Woman.

XXV

And oh! ye gentlemen who have already Some chaste liaison of the kind—I
 mean
 An honest friendship with a married
 lady—
 The only thing of this sort ever seen
 To last—of all connexions the most
 steady,
 And the true Hymen, (the first's but a screen)—
 Yet for all that keep not too long away;
 I've known the absent wrong'd four times a day.

XXVI

Lambro, our sea-solicitor, who had Much less experience of dry land than
 ocean,
 On seeing his own chimney-smoke, felt
 glad;
 But not knowing metaphysics, had no
 notion
 Of the true reason of his not being sad,
 Or that of any other strong emotion;
 He loved his child, and would have wept
 the loss of her,
 But knew the cause no more than a philosopher.

XXVII

He saw his white walls shining in the sun,
 His garden trees all shadowy and green;
 He heard his rivulet's light bubbling run,
 The distant dog-bark; and perceived
 between
 The umbrage of the wood so cool and dun,
 The moving figures, and the sparkling
 sheen
 Of arms (in the East all arm)—and various
 dyes
 Of colour'd garbs, as bright as butterflies.

XXVIII

And as the spot where they appear he nears,
 Surprised at these unwonted signs of idling,
 He hears—alas! no music of the spheres,
 But an unhallow'd, earthly sound of fiddling!
 A melody which made him doubt his ears,
 The cause being past his guessing or un-riddling;
 A pipe, too, and a drum, and shortly after,
 A most unoriental roar of laughter.

XXIX

And still more nearly to the place advancing,
 Descending rather quickly the declivity,
 Through the waved branches, o'er the greensward glancing,
 'Midst other indications of festivity,

Seeing a troop of his domestics dancing
 Like dervises, who turn as on a pivot,
 he Perceived it was the Pyrrhic dance so martial,
 To which the Levantines are very partial.

XXX

And further on a group of Grecian girls,
 The first and tallest her white kerchief
 waving,
 Were strung together like a row of pearls, Link'd hand in hand, and dancing: each too having Down her white neck long floating auburn curls—
 (The least of which would set ten poets raving);
 Their leader sang—and bounded to her
 song,
 With choral step and voice, the virgin throng.

XXXI

And here, assembled cross-legg'd round
 their trays,
 Small social parties just begun to dine;
 Pilaus and meats of all sorts met the gaze,
 And flasks of Samian and of Chian wine,
 And sherbet cooling in the porous vase;
 Above them their dessert grew on its
 vine,
 The orange and pomegranate nodding o'er Dropp'd in their laps, scarce pluck'd, their mellow store.

XXXII

A band of children, round a snow-white ram,
 There wreath his venerable horns with
 flowers;
 While peaceful as if still an unwean'd lamb,
 The patriarch of the flock all gently
 cowers
 His sober head, majestically tame,
 Or eats from out the palm, or playful
 lowers
 His brow, as if in act to butt, and then Yielding to their small hands, draws back
 again.

XXXIII

Their classical profiles, and glittering dresses,
 Their large black eyes, and soft seraphic
 cheeks,
 Crimson as cleft pomegranates, their long
 tresses,
 The gesture which enchants, the eye that speaks,
 The innocence which happy childhood
 blesses,
 Made quite a picture of these little Greeks;

So that the philosophical beholder Sigh'd for their sakes—that they should e'er grow older.

XXXIV

Afar, a dwarf buffoon stood telling tales
 To a sedate grey circle of old smokers,
 Of secret treasures found in hidden vales,
 Of wonderful replies from Arab jokers,
 Of charms to make good gold and cure bad ails,
 Of rocks bewitch'd that open to the knockers,
 Of magic ladies who, by one sole act, Transform'd their lords to beasts (but that's a fact).

XXXV

Here was no lack of innocent diversion
 For the imagination or the senses, Song, dance, wine, music, stories from the Persian,
 All pretty pastimes in which no offence
 is;
 But Lambro saw all these things with aversion,
 Perceiving in his absence such expenses,
 Dreading that climax of all human ills
 The inflammation of his weekly bills.

XXXVI

Ah! what is man? what perils still environ
 The happiest mortals even after dinner!
 A day of gold from out an age of iron
 Is all that life allows the luckiest sinner;
 Pleasure (whene'er she sings, at least)'s a siren,
 That lures, to flay alive, the young beginner;
 Lambro's reception at his people's banquet
 Was such as fire accords to a wet blanket.

XXXVII

He—being a man who seldom used a word
 Too much, and wishing gladly to surprise
 (In general he surprised men with the
 sword)
 His daughter—had not sent before to advise
 Of his arrival, so that no one stirr'd;
 And long he paused to reasssure his eyes,
 In fact much more astonish'd than de-
 lighted,
 To find so much good company invited.

XXXVIII

He did not know (alas! how men will lie!)
 That a report (especially the Greeks) Avouch'd his death (such people never
 die),
 And put his house in mourning several weeks,—

But now their eyes and also lips were dry;
 The bloom, too, had return'd to Haidée's cheeks.
 Her tears, too, being return'd into their
 fount,
 She now kept house upon her own account.

XXXIX

Hence all this rice, meat, dancing, wine,
 and fiddling,
 Which turn'd the isle into a place of
 pleasure;
 The servants all were getting drunk or
 idling,
 A life which made them happy beyond measure.
 Her father's hospitality seem'd middling, Compared with what Haidée did with his treasure;
 'Twas wonderful how things went on improving,
 While she had not one hour to spare from loving.

XL

Perhaps you think, in stumbling on this feast,
 He flew into a passion, and in fact
 There was no mighty reason to be pleased;
 Perhaps you prophesy some sudden act,
 The whip, the rack, or dungeon at the
 least,
 To teach his people to be more exact,
 And that, proceeding at a very high rate,
 He show'd the royal penchants of a pirate.

XLI

You're wrong.—He was the mildest man-ner'd man
 That ever scuttled ship or cut a throat,
 With such true breeding of a gentleman,
 You never could divine his real thought;
 No courtier could, and scarcely woman can Gird more deceit within a petticoat;
 Pity he loved adventurous life's variety,
 He was so great a loss to good society.

XLII

Advancing to the nearest dinner tray, Tapping the shoulder of the nighest
 guest,
 With a peculiar smile, which, by the way,
 Boded no good, whatever it express'd,
 He asked the meaning of this holiday;
 The vinous Greek to whom he had ad-dress'd

His question, how too merry to divine
 The questioner, fill'd up a glass of wine,

XLIII

And without turning his facetious head,
 Over his shoulder, with a Bacchant air,
 Presented the o'erflowing cup, and said,
 'Talking's dry work, I have no time to spare.'

A second hiccup'd, 'Our old master's
 dead,
 You'd better ask our mistress who's his heir.'
 'Our mistress!' quoth a third: 'Our mistress!—pooh—
 You mean our master—not the old, but new.'

XLIV

These rascals, being new comers, knew not whom They thus address'd—and Lambro's visage fell—
 And o'er his eye a momentary gloom
 Pass'd, but he strove quite courteously to quell
 The expression, and endeavouring to resume
 His smile, requested one of them to tell
 The name and quality of his new patron,
 Who seem'd to have turn'd Haidée into a matron.

XLV

'I know not,' quoth the fellow, 'who or
 what
 He is, nor whence he came—and little
 care;
 But this I know, that this roast capon's fat,
 And that good wine ne'er wash'd down
 better fare;
 And if you are not satisfied with that,
 Direct your questions to my neighbour
 there;
 He'll answer all for better or for worse,
 For none likes more to hear himself converse.'

XLVI

I said that Lambro was a man of patience,
 And certainly he show'd the best of
 breeding,
 Which scarce even France, the paragon of
 nations,
 E'er saw her most polite of sons exceeding;
 He bore these sneers against his near relations,
 His own anxiety, his heart, too, bleed-
 ing,
 The insults, too, of every servile glutton,
 Who all the time was eating up his mutton.

XLVII

Now in a person used to much command—
 To bid men come, and go, and come
 again—
 To see his orders done, too, out of hand—
 Whether the word was death, or but the
 chain—

It may seem strange to find his manners
bland;
Yet such things are, which I cannot explain,
Though doubtless he who can command
himself
Is good to govern—almost as a Guelf.

XLVIII

Not that he was not sometimes rash or so,
But never in his real and serious mood;
Then calm, concentrated, and still, and
slow,
He lay coil'd like the boa in the wood;
With him it never was a word and blow,
His angry word once o'er, he shed no
blood,
But in his silence there was much to rue,
And his one blow left little work for two.

XLIX

He ask'd no further questions, and proceeded
On to the house, but by a private way,
So that the few who met him hardly heeded,
So little they expected him that day;
If love paternal in his bosom pleaded For Haidée's sake, is more than I can
say,
But certainly to one deem'd dead return-
ing,
This revel seem'd a curious mode of mourning.

L

If all the dead could now return to life, (Which God forbid!) or some, or a great many,
For instance, if a husband or his wife (Nuptial examples are as good as any),
No doubt, whate'er might be their former
strife,
The present weather would be much more rainy—
Tears shed into the grave of the connexion
Would share most probably its resurrection.

LI

He enter'd in the house no more his home,
A thing to human feelings the most trying,
And harder for the heart to overcome,
Perhaps, than even the mental pangs of
dying;
To find our hearthstone turn'd into a
tomb,
And round its once warm precincts palely lying
The ashes of our hopes, is a deep grief,
Beyond a single gentleman's belief.

LII

He enter'd in the house—his home no
more,
For without hearts there is no home;—
and felt
The solitude of passing his own door Without a welcome: there he long had
dwelt,
There his few peaceful days Time had swept o'er,
There his warm bosom and keen eye
would melt
Over the innocence of that sweet child,
His only shrine of feelings undefined.

LIII

He was a man of a strange temperament,
Of mild demeanour though of savage
mood,
Moderate in all his habits, and content
With temperance in pleasure, as in food, Quick to perceive, and strong to bear, and
meant
For something better, if not wholly
good;
His country's wrongs and his despair to save her
Had stung him from a slave to an enslaver.

LIV

The love of power, and rapid gain of gold,
The hardness by long habitude produced,
The dangerous life in which he had grown
old,
The mercy he had granted oft abused,
The sights he was accusom'd to behold,
The wild seas, and wild men with whom he cruised,
Had cost his enemies a long repentance,
And made him a good friend, but bad acquaintance.

LV

But something of the spirit of old Greece
Flash'd o'er his soul a few heroic rays,
Such as lit onward to the Golden Fleece
His predecessors in the Colchian days;
'Tis true he had no ardent love for peace—
Alas! his country show'd no path to
praise:
Hate to the world and war with every
nation
He waged, in vengeance of her degradation.

LVI

Still o'er his mind the influence of the
clime
Shed its Ionian elegance, which show'd Its power unconsciously full many a
time,—
A taste seen in the choice of his abode,

A love of music and of scenes sublime,
 A pleasure in the gentle stream that
 flow'd
 Past him in crystal, and a joy in flowers,
 Bedew'd his spirit in his calmer hours.

LVII

But whatsoe'er he had of love reposed
 On that beloved daughter; she had been
 The only thing which kept his heart un-
 closed
 Amidst the savage deeds he had done and
 seen,
 A lonely pure affection unopposed:
 There wanted but the loss of this to wean
 His feelings from all milk of human kind-
 ness,
 And turn him like the Cyclops mad with blindness.

LVIII

The cubless tigress in her jungle raging Is dreadful to the shepherd and the flock;
 The ocean when its yeasty war is waging
 Is awful to the vessel near the rock;
 But violent things will sooner bear assuaging,
 Their fury being spent by its own shock,
 Than the stern, single, deep, and wordless ire
 Of a strong human heart, and in a sire.

LIX

It is a hard although a common case
 To find our children running restive—
 they
 In whom our brightest days we would re-
 trace,
 Our little selves re-formed in finer clay,
 Just as old age is creeping on apace,
 And clouds come o'er the sunset of our
 day,
 They kindly leave us, though not quite
 alone,
 But in good company—the gout or stone.

LX

Yet a fine family is a fine thing (Provided they don't come in after dinner);
 'Tis beautiful to see a matron bring Her children up (if nursing them don't thin her);
 Like cherubs round an altar-piece they cling
 To the fire-side (a sight to touch a sinner).
 A lady with her daughters or her nieces Shine like a guinea and seven-shilling pieces.

LXI

Old Lambro pass'd unseen a private gate,
 And stood within his hall at eventide;
 Meantime the lady and her lover sate
 At wassail in their beauty and their pride:

An ivory inlaid table spread with state Before them, and fair slaves on every
 side;
 Gems, gold, and silver, form'd the service mostly,
 Mother of pearl and coral the less costly.

LXII

The dinner made about a hundred dishes;
 Lamb and pistachio nuts—in short, all meats,
 And saffron soups, and sweetbreads; and the fishes
 Were of the finest that e'er flounced in nets,
 Drest to a Sybarite's most pamper'd wishes;
 The beverage was various sherbets
 Of raisin, orange, and pomegranate juice, Squeezed through the rind, which makes it best for use.

LXIII

These were ranged round, each in its crystal ewer,
 And fruits, and date-bread loaves closed the repast,
 And Mocha's berry, from Arabia pure,
 In small fine China cups, came in at last;
 Gold cups of filigree made to secure
 The hand from burning underneath them placed;
 Cloves, cinnamon, and saffron too were boil'd
 Up with the coffee, which (I think) they spoil'd.

LXIV

The hangings of the room were tapestry,
 made
 Of velvet panels, each of different hue,
 And thick with damask flowers of silk inlaid;
 And round them ran a yellow border
 too;
 The upper border, richly wrought, dis-
 play'd,
 Embroider'd delicately o'er with blue,
 Soft Persian sentences, in lilac letters,
 From poets, or the moralists their betters.

LXV

These Oriental writings on the wall,
 Quite common in those countries, are a
 kind
 Of monitors adapted to recall,
 Like skulls at Memphian banquets, to
 the mind
 The words which shook Belshazzar in his
 hall,
 And took his kingdom from him: You will find,
 Though sages may pour out their wisdom's
 treasure,
 There is no sterner moralist than Pleasure.

LXVI

A beauty at the season's close grown hectic,
 A genius who has drunk himself to death,
 A rake turn'd methodistic, or Eclectic—(For that's the name they like to pray
 beneath)—

But most, an alderman struck apoplectic, Are things that really take away the
 breath,—

And show that late hours, wine, and love are able

To do not much less damage than the table.

LXVII

Haidée and Juan carpeted their feet
 On crimson satin, border'd with pale
 blue;

Their sofa occupied three parts complete
 Of the apartment—and appear'd quite
 new;

The velvet cushions (for a throne more
 meet)

Were scarlet, from whose glowing centre
 grew

A sun emboss'd in gold, whose rays of tissue,
 Meridian-like, were seen all light to issue.

LXVIII

Crystal and marble, plate and porcelain,
 Had done their work of splendour;
 Indian mats

And Persian carpets, which the heart bled
 to stain,

Over the floors were spread; gazelles
 and cats,

And dwarfs and blacks, and such like things that gain

Their bread as ministers and favourites —(that's

To say, by degradation)—mingled there
 As plentiful as in a court or fair.

LXIX

There was no want of lofty mirrors, and
 The tables, most of ebony inlaid

With mother of pearl or ivory, stood at
 hand,

Or were of tortoise-shell or rare woods
 made,

Fretted with gold or silver:—by command,
 The greater part of these were ready
 spread

With viands and sherbets in ice—and
 wine—

Kept for all comers at all hours to dine.

LXX

Of all the dresses I select Haidée's:

She wore two jelicks—one was of pale
 yellow;

Of azure, pink, and white was her chemise—

'Neath which her breast heaved like a little billow,

With buttons form'd of pearls as large as peas,

All gold and crimson shone her jelick's
 fellow,

And the striped white gauze baracan that bound her,

Like fleecy clouds about the moon, flow'd round her.

LXXI

One large gold bracelet clasp'd each lovely
 arm,

Lockless—so pliable from the pure gold
 That the hand stretch'd and shut it without harm,

The limb which it adorn'd its only
 mould;

So beautiful—its very shape would charm,
 And clinging as if loath to lose its hold,

The purest ore enclosed the whitest skin
 That e'er by precious metal was held in.

LXXII

Around, as princess of her father's land,
 A like gold bar above her instep roll'd

Announced her rank; twelve rings were on her hand;

Her hair was starr'd with gems; her veil's fine fold

Below her breast was fasten'd with a band
 Of lavish pearls, whose worth could scarce be told;

Her orange silk full Turkish trousers
 furl'd

About the prettiest ankle in the world.

LXXIII

Her hair's long auburn waves down to her heel

Flow'd like an Alpine torrent which
 the sun

Dyes with his morning light,—and would conceal

Her person if allow'd at large to run,
 And still they seem'd resentfully to feel

The silken fillet's curb, and sought to
 shun

Their bonds whene'er some Zephyr caught began

To offer his young pinion as her fan.

LXXIV

Round her she made an atmosphere of
 life,

The very air seem'd lighter from her
 eyes,

They were so soft and beautiful, and rife
 With all we can imagine of the skies,

And pure as Psyche ere she grew a wife—Too pure even for the purest human

ties;

Her overpowering presence made you feel
 It would not be idolatry to kneel.

LXXV

Her eyelashes, though dark as night, were tinged
 (It is the country's custom), but in vain;
 For those large black eyes were so blackly fringed,
 The glossy rebels mock'd the jetty stain,
 And in their native beauty stood avenged:
 Her nails were touch'd with henna; but
 again
 The power of art was turn'd to nothing,
 for
 They could not look more rosy than before.

LXXVI

The henna should be deeply dyed to make
 The skin relieved appear more fairly
 fair;
 She had no need of this, day ne'er will
 break
 On mountain-tops more heavenly white than her:
 The eye might doubt if it were well awake,
 She was so like a vision; I might err,
 But Shakspeare also says, 'tis very silly
 'To gild refined gold, or paint the lily.'

LXXVII

Juan had on a shawl of black and gold,
 But a white baracan, and so transparent
 The sparkling gems beneath you might
 behold,
 Like small stars through the milky way
 apparent;
 His turban furl'd in many a graceful fold,
 An emerald aigrette with Haidée's hair
 in't
 Surmounted, as its clasp, a glowing crescent,
 Whose rays shone ever trembling, but incessant.

LXXVIII

And now they were diverted by their suite, Dwarfs, dancing-girls, black eunuchs,
 and a poet,
 Which made their new establishment complete;
 The last was of great fame, and liked to
 show it;
 His verses rarely wanted their due feet—
 And for his theme—he seldom sung below it,
 He being paid to satirise or flatter,
 As the psalm says, 'inditing a good matter.'

LXXIX

He praised the present, and abused the
 past,
 Reversing the good custom of old days,
 An Eastern anti-jacobin at last
 He turn'd, preferring pudding to no
 praise—

For some few years his lot had been o'er-
 cast
 By his seeming independent in his lays,
 But now he sung the Sultan and the Pacha
 With truth like Southey, and with verse like Crashaw.

LXXX

He was a man who had seen many changes,
 And always changed as true as any needle;
 His polar star being one which rather ranges,
 And not the fix'd—he knew the way to wheedle:
 So vile he 'scaped the doom which oft avenges;
 And being fluent (save indeed when fee'd ill),
 He lied with such a fervour of intention—
 There was no doubt he earn'd his laureate pension.

LXXXI

But he had genius,—when a turncoat has it,
 The 'Vates irritabilis' takes care That without notice few full moons shall pass it;
 Even good men like to make the public
 stare:—
 But to my subject—let me see—what was
 it?—
 Oh!—the third canto—and the pretty
 pair—
 Their loves, and feasts, and house, and dress, and mode
 Of living in their insular abode.

LXXXII

Their poet, a sad trimmer, but no less
 In company a very pleasant fellow,
 Had been the favourite of full many a mess
 Of men, and made them speeches when half mellow;
 And though his meaning they could rarely
 guess,
 Yet still they deign'd to hiccup or to bellow
 The glorious meed of popular applause,
 Of which the first ne'er knows the second
 cause.

LXXXIII

But now being lifted into high society,
 And having pick'd up several odds and ends
 Of free thoughts in his travels, for variety,
 He deem'd, being in a lone isle, among
 friends,
 That without any danger of a riot, he Might for long lying make himself
 amends;
 And singing as he sung in his warm youth,
 Agree to a short armistice with truth.

LXXXIV

He had travell'd 'mongst the Arabs,
 Turks, and Franks,
 And knew the self-loves of the different
 nations;
 And having lived with people of all ranks,
 Had something ready upon most occasions—
 Which got him a few presents and some thanks.
 He varied with some skill his adulations;
 To 'do at Rome as Romans do,' a piece
 Of conduct was which he observed in Greece.

LXXXV

Thus, usually, when he was asked to sing,
 He gave the different nations something national;
 'Twas all the same to him—'God save the
 king,'
 Or 'Ca ira,' according to the fashion all:
 His muse made increment of anything,
 From the high lyric down to the low rational:
 If Pindar sang horse-races, what should hinder
 Himself from being as pliable as Pindar?

LXXXVI

In France, for instance, he would write a chanson;
 In England a six-canto quarto tale;
 In Spain he'd make a ballad or romance on The last war—much the same in Portugal;
 In Germany, the Pegasus he'd prance on Would be old Goethe's—(see what says
 De Staël);
 In Italy he'd ape the 'Trecentisti';
 In Greece, he'd sing some sort of hymn like this t' ye:

1

The isles of Greece, the isles of Greece!
 Where burning Sappho loved and
 sung,
 Where grew the arts of war and peace,
 Where Delos rose, and Phœbus
 sprung!
 Eternal summer gilds them yet,
 But all, except their sun, is set.

2

The Scian and the Teian muse,
 The hero's harp, the lover's lute,
 Have found the fame your shores refuse:
 Their place of birth alone is mute
 To sounds which echo further west
 Than your sires' 'Islands of the Blest.'

3

The mountains look on Marathon—
 And Marathon looks on the sea;
 And musing there an hour alone,

I dream'd that Greece might still be
 free;
 For standing on the Persians' grave,
 I could not deem myself a slave.

4

A king sate on the rocky brow
 Which looks o'er sea-born Salamis;
 And ships, by thousands, lay below,
 And men in nations;—all were his!
 He counted them at break of day—
 And when the sun set where were they?

5

And where are they? and where art thou,
 My country? On thy voiceless shore
 The heroic lay is tuneless now—
 The heroic bosom beats no more!
 And must thy lyre, so long divine,
 Degenerate into hands like mine?

6

'Tis something, in the dearth of fame,
 Though link'd among a fetter'd race,
 To feel at least a patriot's shame,
 Even as I sing, suffuse my face;
 For what is left the poet here?
 For Greeks a blush—for Greece a tear.

7

Must we but weep o'er days more blest?
 Must we but blush?—Our fathers bled.
 Earth! render back from out thy breast
 A remnant of our Spartan dead!
 Of the three hundred grant but three,
 To make a new Thermopylæ!

8

What, silent still? and silent all?
 Ah! no;—the voices of the dead
 Sound like a distant torrent's fall,
 And answer, 'Let one living head,
 But one arise,—we come, we come!'
 'Tis but the living who are dumb.

9

In vain—in vain: strike other chords;
 Fill high the cup with Samian wine!
 Leave battles to the Turkish hordes,
 And shed the blood of Scio's vine!
 Hark! rising to the ignoble call—
 How answers each bold Bacchanal!

10

You have the Pyrrhic dance as yet;
 Where is the Pyrrhic phalanx gone?
 Of two such lessons, why forget
 The nobler and the manlier one?
 You have the letters Cadmus gave—
 Think ye he meant them for a slave?

11

Fill high the bowl with Samian wine!
 We will not think of themes like these!
 It made Anacreon's song divine:
 He served—but served Polycrates—
 A tyrant; but our masters then
 Were still, at least, our countrymen.

12

The tyrant of the Chersonese
 Was freedom's best and bravest
 friend;
That tyrant was Miltiades!
 Oh! that the present hour would lend
 Another despot of the kind!
 Such chains as his were sure to bind.

13

Fill high the bowl with Samian wine:
 On Suli's rock, and Parga's shore,
 Exists the remnant of a line
 Such as the Doric mothers bore;
 And there, perhaps, some seed is sown,
 The Heracleidan blood might own.

14

Trust not for freedom to the Franks—
 They have a king who buys and sells;
 In native swords, and native ranks,
 The only hope of courage dwells:
 But Turkish force, and Latin fraud,
 Would break your shield, however broad.

15

Fill high the bowl with Samian wine!
 Our virgins dance beneath the shade—
 I see their glorious black eyes shine;
 But gazing on each glowing maid,
 My own the burning tear-drop laves,
 To think such breasts must suckle slaves.

16

Place me on Sunium's marbled steep,
 Where nothing, save the waves and I,
 May hear our mutual murmurs sweep;
 There, swan-like, let me sing and die:
 A land of slaves shall ne'er be mine—
 Dash down yon cup of Samian wine!

LXXXVII

Thus sung, or would, or could, or should have sung,
 The modern Greek, in tolerable verse;
 If not like Orpheus quite, when Greece
 was young,
 Yet in these times he might have done much worse:
 His strain display'd some feeling—right or
 wrong;
 And feeling, in a poet, is the source
 Of others' feeling; but they are such liars,
 And take all colours—like the hands of dyers.

LXXXVIII

But words are things, and a small drop of
 ink,
 Falling like dew, upon a thought, produces
 That which makes thousands, perhaps millions, think;
 'Tis strange, the shortest letter which man uses
 Instead of speech, may form a lasting link
 Of ages; to what straits old Time reduces
 Frail man, when paper—even a rag like
 this,
 Survives himself, his tomb, and all that's his!

LXXXIX

And when his bones are dust, his grave a
 blank,
 His station, generation, even his nation,
 Become a thing, or nothing, save to rank
 In chronological commemoration,
 Some dull MS. oblivion long has sank,
 Or graven stone found in a barrack's
 station
 In digging the foundation of a closet,
 May turn his name up, as a rare deposit.

XC

And glory long has made the sages smile;
 'Tis something, nothing, words, illusion,
 wind—
 Depending more upon the historian's style Than on the name a person leaves behind:
 Troy owes to Homer what whist owes to Hoyle:
 The present century was growing blind
 To the great Marlborough's skill in giving knocks,
 Until his late Life by Archdeacon Cox.

XCI

Milton's the prince of poets—so we say;
 A little heavy, but no less divine:
 An independent being in his day—Learn'd, pious, temperate in love and
 wine;
 But his life falling into Johnson's way,
 We're told this great high priest of all the Nine
 Was whipt at college—a harsh sire—odd
 spouse,
 For the first Mrs. Milton left his house.

XCII

All these are, certainly, entertaining facts,
 Like Shakespeare's stealing deer, Lord
 Bacon's bribes;
 Like Titus' youth, and Cæsar's earliest
 acts;
 Like Burns (whom Doctor Currie well describes);

Like Cromwell's pranks;—but although truth exacts
These amiable descriptions from the scribes,
As most essential to their hero's story,
They do not much contribute to his glory.

XCIII

All are not moralists, like Southey, when He prated to the world of 'Pantiso-
cracy';
Or Wordsworth unexcised, unhired, who
then Season'd his pedlar poems with democracy;
Or Coleridge, long before his flighty pen
Let to the Morning Post its aristocracy;
When he and Southey, following the same
path,
Espoused two partners (milliners of Bath).

XCIV

Such names at present cut a convict figure,
The very Botany Bay in moral geography;
Their loyal treason, renegado rigour,
Are good manure for their more bare biography,
Wordsworth's last quarto, by the way, is bigger
Than any since the birthday of typo-
graphy;
A drowsy frowzy poem, call'd the 'Excursion,'
Writ in a manner which is my aversion.

XCV

He there builds up a formidable dyke
Between his own and others' intellect;
But Wordsworth's poem, and his followers, like Joanna Southcote's Shiloh, and her sect,
Are things which, in this century don't
strike
The public mind,—so few are the elect;
And the new births of both their stale virginites
Have proved but dropsies, taken for divinities.

XCVI

But let me to my story: I must own,
If I have any fault, it is digression,
Leaving my people to proceed alone,
While I soliloquize beyond expression:
But these are my addresses from the throne,
Which put off business to the ensuing session:
Forgetting each omission is a loss to
The world, not quite so great as Ariosto.

XCVII

I know that what our neighbours call
'longueurs,' (We've not so good a word, but have the
thing,

In that complete perfection which insures
An epic from Bob Southey every
Spring—)
Form not the true temptation which allures
The reader; but 'twould not be hard to bring
Some fine examples of the épopée,
To prove its grand ingredient is ennui.

XCVIII

We learn from Horace, 'Homer sometimes sleeps;'
We feel without him, Wordsworth
sometimes wakes,—
To show with what complacency he creeps,
With his dear 'Waggoners,' around his lakes.
He wishes for 'a boat' to sail the deeps—
Of ocean?—No, of air; and then he makes
Another outcry for 'a little boat,'
And drivels seas to set it well afloat.

XCIX

If he must fain sweep o'er the ethereal
plain,
And Pegasus runs restive in his 'Waggon',
Could he not beg the loan of Charles's Wain?
Or pray Medea for a single dragon?
Or if, too classic for his vulgar brain,
He fear'd his neck to venture such a nag
on,
And he must needs mount nearer to the moon,
Could not the blockhead ask for a balloon?

'Pedlars,' and 'Boats,' and 'Waggons!'
Oh! ye shades
Of Pope and Dryden, are we come to
this?
That trash of such sort not alone evades
Contempt, but from the bathos' vast abyss Floats scumlike uppermost, and these Jack Cades
Of sense and song above your graves may hiss—
The 'little boatman' and his 'Peter Bell'
Can sneer at him who drew 'Achitophel'!

CI

T' our tale.—The feast was over, the slaves
gone,
The dwarfs and dancing girls had all
retired;
The Arab lore and poet's song were done,
And every sound of revelry expired;
The lady and her lover, left alone,
The rosy flood of twilight's sky admired;—
Ave Maria! o'er the earth and sea,
That heavenliest hour of Heaven is worthiest thee!

CII

Ave Maria! blessed be the hour!
 The time, the clime, the spot, where I so
 oft
 Have felt that moment in its fullest power
 Sink o'er the earth so beautiful and soft,
 While swung the deep bell in the distant
 tower,
 Or the faint dying day-hymn stole aloft,
 And not a breath crept through the rosy
 air,
 And yet the forest leaves seem'd stirr'd with prayer.

CIII

Ave Maria! 'tis the hour of prayer!
 Ave Maria! 'tis the hour of love!
 Ave Maria! may our spirits dare
 Look up to thine and to thy Son's above!
 Ave Maria! oh that face so fair!
 Those downcast eyes beneath the Almighty dove—
 What though 'tis but a pictured image?
 —strike,
 That painting is no idol,—'tis too like.

CIV

Some kinder casuists are pleased to say,
 In nameless print—that I have no devo-
 tion;
 But set those persons down with me to
 pray,
 And you shall see who has the properest
 notion
 Of getting into heaven the shortest way;
 My altars are the mountains and the
 ocean,
 Earth, air, stars,—all that springs from the great Whole,
 Who hath produced, and will receive the
 soul.

CV

Sweet hour of twilight!—in the solitude
 Of the pine forest, and the silent shore
 Which bounds Ravenna's immemorial
 wood,
 Rooted where once the Adrian wave
 flow'd o'er,
 To where the last Cæsarean fortress stood,
 Evergreen forest! which Boccaccio's lore
 And Dryden's lay made haunted ground
 to me,
 How have I loved the twilight hour and
 thee!

CVI

The shrill cicalas, people of the pine,
 Making their summer lives one ceaseless song,
 Were the sole echoes, save my steed's and
 mine,
 And vesper bell's that rose the boughs
 along;

The spectre huntsman of Onesti's line,
 His hell-dogs, and their chase, and the fair throng
 Which learn'd from this example not to fly
 From a true lover,—shadow'd my mind's
 eye.

CVII

Oh, Hesperus! thou bringest all good
 things—
 Home to the weary, to the hungry cheer,
 To the young bird the parent's brooding
 wings,
 The welcome stall to the o'erlabour'd
 steer;
 Whate'er of peace about our hearthstone
 clings,
 Whate'er our household gods protect of
 dear,
 Are gather'd round us by thy look of rest;
 Thou bring'st the child, too, to the mother's breast.

CVIII

Soft hour! which wakes the wish and melts
 the heart
 Of those who sail the seas, on the first
 day
 When they from their sweet friends are torn apart;
 Or fills with love the pilgrim on his way
 As the far bell of vesper makes him start,
 Seeming to weep the dying day's decay:
 Is this a fancy which our reason scorns?
 Ah! surely nothing dies but something mourns!

CIX

When Nero perish'd by the justest doom
 Which ever the destroyer yet destroy'd,
 Amidst the roar of liberated Rome,
 Of nations freed, and the world overjoy'd,
 Some hands unseen strew'd flowers upon his tomb:
 Perhaps the weakness of a heart not void
 Of feeling for some kindness done, when
 power
 Had left the wretch an uncorrupted hour.

CX

But I'm digressing; what on earth has Nero,
 Or any such like sovereign buffoons,
 To do with the transactions of my hero,
 More than such madmen's fellow man
 —the moon's?
 Sure my invention must be down at zero,
 And I grown one of many 'wooden spoons'
 Of verse (the name with which we Cantabs
 please
 To dub the last of honours in degrees).

CXI

I feel this tediousness will never do—
 'Tis being too epic, and I must cut down
 (In copying) this long canto into two;
 They'll never find it out, unless I own
 The fact, excepting some experienced few;
 And then as an improvement 'twill be
 shown:
 I'll prove that such the opinion of the critic is
 From Aristotle passim.—See ΠΟΙΗΤΙΚΗΣ.

CANTO THE FOURTH

I

NOTHING so difficult as a beginning
 In poesy, unless perhaps the end;
 For oftentimes when Pegasus seems winning
 The race, he sprains a wing, and down
 we tend,
 Like Lucifer when hurl'd from heaven for
 sinning;
 Our sin the same, and hard as his to
 mend,
 Being pride, which leads the mind to soar
 too far,
 Till our own weakness shows us what we are.

II

But time, which brings all beings to their level,
 And sharp Adversity, will teach at last Man,—and, as we would hope,—perhaps the devil,
 That neither of their intellects are vast:
 While youth's hot wishes in our red veins
 revel,
 We know not this—the blood flows on too fast:
 But as the torrent widens towards the ocean,
 We ponder deeply on each past emotion.

III

As boy, I thought myself a clever fellow,
 And wish'd that others held the same opinion;
 They took it up when my days grew more mellow,
 And other minds acknowledged my dominion:
 Now my sere fancy 'falls into the yellow Leaf,' and Imagination droops her pinion,
 And the sad truth which hovers o'er my desk
 Turns what was once romantic to burlesque.

IV

And if I laugh at any mortal thing,
 'Tis that I may not weep; and if I weep,
 'Tis that our nature cannot always bring Itself to apathy, for we must steep

Our hearts first in the depths of Lethe's
 spring,
 Ere what we least wish to behold will
 sleep:
 Thetis baptized her mortal son in Styx;
 A mortal mother would on Lethe fix.

V

Some have accused me of a strange design Against the creed and morals of the
 land,
 And trace it in this poem every line;
 I don't pretend that I quite understand
 My own meaning when I would be very fine;
 But the fact is that I have nothing plann'd,
 Unless it were to be a moment merry,
 A novel word in my vocabulary.

VI

To the kind reader of our sober clime
 This way of writing will appear exotic;
 Pulci was sire of the half-serious rhyme,
 Who sang when chivalry was more Quixotic,
 And revell'd in the fancies of the time,
 True knights, chaste dames, huge giant kings despotic:
 But all these, save the last, being obsolete,
 I chose a modern subject as more meet.

VII

How I have treated it, I do not know;
 Perhaps no better than they have treated
 me,
 Who have imputed such designs as show
 Not what they saw, but what they wish'd to see;
 But if it gives them pleasure, be it so,
 This is a liberal age, and thoughts are
 free:
 Meantime Apollo plucks me by the ear,
 And tells me to resume my story here.

Young Juan and his lady-love were left
 To their own hearts' most sweet society;
 Even Time the pitiless in sorrow cleft
 With his rude scythe such gentle bosoms; he
 Sigh'd to behold them of their hours bereft, Though foe to love; and yet they could
 not be
 Meant to grow old, but die in happy spring,
 Before one charm or hope had taken wing.

IX

Their faces were not made for wrinkles,
 their Pure blood to stagnate, their great hearts to fail;
 The blank grey was not made to blast their
 hair,
 But like the climes that know nor snow
 nor hail,

They were all summer; lightning might
assail

And shiver them to ashes, but to trail
A long and snake-like life of dull decay
Was not for them—they had too little clay.

X

They were alone once more; for them to be Thus was another Eden; they were never Weary, unless when separate: the tree

Cut from its forest root of years—the
river

Damm'd from its fountain—the child from the knee

And breast maternal wean'd at once for
ever,—

Would wither less than these two torn apart;
Alas! there is no instinct like the heart—

XI

The heart—which may be broken: happy
they!

Thrice fortunate! who of that fragile
mould,

The precious porcelain of human clay,
Break with the first fall: they can ne'er
behold

The long year link'd with heavy day on day,
And all which must be borne, and never
told;

While life's strange principle will often lie
Deepest in those who long the most to die.

XII

'Whom the gods love die young' was said
of yore,

And many deaths do they escape by this:
The death of friends, and that which slays even more—

The death of friendship, love, youth, all
that is,

Except mere breath; and since the silent
shore

Awaits at last even those who longest
miss

The old archer's shafts, perhaps the early
grave

Which men weep over may be meant to save.

XIII

Haidée and Juan thought not of the dead.
The heavens, and earth, and air, seem'd made for them:

They found no fault with Time, save that he fled;

They saw not in themselves ought to condemn;

Each was the other's mirror, and but read
Joy sparkling in their dark eyes like a

gem,
And knew such brightness was but the reflection

Of their exchanging glances of affection.

XIV

The gentle pressure, and the thrilling
touch,

The least glance better understood than
words,

Which still said all, and ne'er could say
too much;

A language, too, but like to that of birds,
Known but to them, at least appearing
such

As but to lovers a true sense affords;
Sweet playful phrases, which would seem absurd

To those who have ceased to hear such, or ne'er heard.

XV

All these were theirs, for they were children
still,

And children still they should have ever
been;

They were not made in the real world to fill
A busy character in the dull scene,

But like two beings born from out a rill,
A nymph and her beloved, all unseen

To pass their lives in fountains and on
flowers,

And never know the weight of human hours.

XVI

Moons changing had roll'd on, and changeless found

Those their bright rise had lighted to such joys

As rarely they beheld throughout their
round;

And these were not of the vain kind which cloys,

For theirs were buoyant spirits, never
bound

By the mere senses; and that which destroys

Most love, possession, unto them appear'd
A thing which each endearment more en-dear'd.

XVII

Oh beautiful! and rare as beautiful!
But theirs was love in which the mind
delights

To lose itself, when the old world grows
dull,

And we are sick of its hack sounds and sights,

Intrigues, adventures of the common
school,

Its petty passions, marriages, and flights,
Where Hymen's torch but brands one strumpet more,

Whose husband only knows her not a whore.

XVIII

Hard words; harsh truth; a truth which many know.

Enough.—The faithful and the fairy
pair,

Who never found a single hour too slow,
What was it made them thus exempt from care?

Young innate feelings all have felt below,
Which perish in the rest, but in them
were

Inherent; what we mortals call romantic,
And always envy, though we deem it frantic.

XIX

This is in others a factitious state,
An opium dream of too much youth and
reading,

But was in them their nature or their fate:
No novels e'er had set their young hearts
bleeding,

For Haidée's knowledge was by no means
great,

And Juan was a boy of saintly breeding;
So that there was no reason for their loves
More than for those of nightingales or doves.

XX

They gazed upon the sunset; 'tis an hour
Dear unto all, but dearest to their eyes,
For it had made them what they were: the
power

Of love had first o'erwhelm'd them from such skies,

When happiness had been their only dower,
And twilight saw them link'd in passion's ties;

Charm'd with each other, all things
charm'd that brought

The past still welcome as the present thought.

XXI

I know not why, but in that hour to-night,
Even as they gazed, a sudden tremor
came,

And swept, as 'twere, across their hearts'
delight,

Like the wind o'er a harp-string, or a
flame,

When one is shook in sound, and one in
sight:

And thus some boding flash'd through either frame,

And call'd from Juan's breast a faint low
sigh,

While one new tear arose in Haidée's eye.

XXII

That large black prophet eye seem'd to dilate

And follow far the disappearing sun,

As if their last day of a happy date

With his broad, bright, and dropping orb were gone.

Juan gazed on her as to ask his fate—

He felt a grief, but knowing cause for
none,

His glance inquired of hers for some excuse
For feelings causeless, or at least abstruse.

XXIII

She turn'd to him, and smiled, but in that sort

Which makes not others smile; then turn'd aside:

Whatever feeling shook her, it seem'd
short,

And master'd by her wisdom or her
pride;

When Juan spoke, too—it might be in sport—

Of this their mutual feeling, she replied—

'If it should be so,—but—it cannot be—
Or I at least shall not survive to see.'

XXIV

Juan would question further, but she
press'd

His lips to hers, and silenced him with
this,

And then dismiss'd the omen from her
breast,

Defying augury with that fond kiss;

And no doubt of all methods 'tis the best:
Some people prefer wine—'tis not
amiss;

I have tried both; so those who would a part take

May choose between the headache and the heartache.

XXV

One of the two according to your choice,
Woman or wine, you'll have to undergo;

Both maladies are taxes on our joys:
But which to choose, I really hardly
know;

And if I had to give a casting voice,
For both sides I could many reasons
show,

And then decide, without great wrong to
either,

It were much better to have both than neither.

XXVI

Juan and Haidée gazed upon each other
With swimming looks of speechless tenderness,

Which mix'd all feelings, friend, child,
lover, brother;

All that the best can mingle and express
When two pure hearts are pour'd in one
another,

And love too much, and yet cannot love
less;

But almost sanctify the sweet excess
By the immortal wish and power to bless.

XXVII

Mix'd in each other's arms, and heart in heart,
 Why did they not then die?—they had lived too long
 Should an hour come to bid them breathe apart;
 Years could but bring them cruel things or wrong;
 The world was not for them, nor the world's art
 For beings passionate as Sappho's song;
 Love was born with them, in them, so intense,
 It was their very spirit—not a sense.

XXVIII

They should have lived together deep in woods,
 Unseen as sings the nightingale; they were Unfit to mix in these thick solitudes
 Call'd social, haunts of Hate, and Vice, and Care;
 How lonely every freeborn creature broods!
 The sweetest song-birds nestle in a pair;
 The eagle soars alone; the gull and crow
 Flock o'er their carrion, just like men below.

XXIX

Now pillow'd cheek to cheek, in loving sleep,
 Haidée and Juan their siesta took,
 A gentle slumber, but it was not deep,
 For ever and anon a something shook
 Juan, and shuddering o'er his frame would creep;
 And Haidée's sweet lips murmur'd like a brook
 A wordless music, and her face so fair
 Stirr'd with her dream, as rose-leaves with the air;

XXX

Or as the stirring of a deep clear stream
 Within an Alpine hollow, when the wind
 Walks o'er it, was she shaken by the dream,
 The mystical usurper of the mind—
 O'erpowering us to be whate'er may seem
 Good to the soul which we no more can bind:
 Strange state of being! (for 'tis still to be),
 Senseless to feel, and with seal'd eyes to see.

XXXI

She dream'd of being alone on the sea-shore,
 Chain'd to a rock; she knew not how, but stir
 She could not from the spot, and the loud roar
 Grew, and each wave rose roughly, threatening her;

And o'er her upper lip they seem'd to pour,
 Until she sobb'd for breath, and soon they were Foaming o'er her lone head, so fierce and high—
 Each broke to drown her, yet she could not die.

XXXII

Anon—she was released, and then she stray'd
 O'er the sharp shingles with her bleeding feet,
 And stumbled almost every step she made;
 And something roll'd before her in a sheet,
 Which she must still pursue howe'er afraid:
 'Twas white and indistinct, nor stopp'd to meet
 Her glance nor grasp, for still she gazed and grasp'd,
 And ran, but it escaped her as she clasp'd.

XXXIII

The dream changed:—in a cave she stood, its walls
 Were hung with marble icicles; the work
 Of ages on its water-fretted halls,
 Where waves might wash, and seals might breed and lurk;
 Her hair was dripping, and the very balls
 Of her black eyes seem'd turn'd to tears, and mirk
 The sharp rocks look'd below each drop they caught,
 Which froze to marble as it fell,—she thought.

XXXIV

And wet, and cold, and lifeless at her feet,
 Pale as the foam that froth'd on his dead brow,
 Which she essay'd in vain to clear, (how sweet Were once her cares, how idle seem'd they now!)
 Lay Juan, nor could aught renew the beat
 Of his quench'd heart; and the sea dirges low
 Rang in her sad ears like a mermaid's song,
 And that brief dream appear'd a life too long.

XXXV

And gazing on the dead, she thought his face Faded, or alter'd into something new—
 Like to her father's features, till each trace
 More like and like to Lambro's aspect grew—
 With all his keen worn look and Grecian grace;
 And starting, she awoke, and what to view?
 Oh! Powers of Heaven! what dark eye meets she there?
 'Tis—'tis her father's—fix'd upon the pair!

XXXVI

Then shrieking, she arose, and shrieking
 fell,
 With joy and sorrow, hope and fear, to
 see Him whom she deem'd a habitant where
 dwell
 The ocean-buried, risen from death, to
 be Perchance the death of one she loved too
 well:
 Dear as her father had been to Haidée,
 It was a moment of that awful kind—
 I have seen such—but must not call to mind.

XXXVII

Up Juan sprang to Haidée's bitter shriek, And caught her falling, and from off the
 wall Snatch'd down his sabre, in hot haste to wreak
 Vengeance on him who was the cause of
 all:
 Then Lambro, who till now forbore to
 speak, Smiled scornfully, and said, 'Within my
 call,
 A thousand scimitars await the word;
 Put up, young man, put up your silly
 sword.'

XXXVIII

And Haidée clung around him; 'Juan,
 'tis—
 'Tis Lambro—'tis my father! Kneel
 with me—
 He will forgive us—yes—it must be—yes.
 Oh! dearest father, in this agony
 Of pleasure and of pain—even while I kiss Thy garment's hem with transport, can it be
 That doubt should mingle with my filial
 joy?
 Deal with me as thou wilt, but spare this boy.'

XXXIX

High and inscrutable the old man stood, Calm in his voice, and calm within his
 eye—
 Not always signs with him of calmest
 mood:
 He look'd upon her, but gave no reply;
 Then turn'd to Juan, in whose cheek the
 blood
 Oft came and went, as there resolved to
 die;
 In arms, at least, he stood, in act to spring
 On the first foe whom Lambro's call might bring.

XL

'Young man, your sword;' so Lambro
 once more said:
 Juan replied, 'Not while this arm is
 free.'
 The old man's cheek grew pale, but not with dread,
 And drawing from his belt a pistol, he Replied, 'Your blood be then on your own
 head.'
 Then look'd close at the flint, as if to see
 'Twas fresh—for he had lately used the lock—
 And next proceeded quietly to cock.

XLI

It has a strange quick jar upon the ear,
 That cocking of a pistol, when you know
 A moment more will bring the sight to bear Upon your person, twelve yards off, or
 so;
 A gentlemanly distance, not too near,
 If you have got a former friend for foe;
 But after being fired at once or twice,
 The ear becomes more Irish, and less nice.

XLII

Lambro presented, and one instant more
 Had stopp'd this Canto, and Don Juan's
 breath,
 When Haidée threw herself her boy be-
 fore;
 Stern as her sire: 'On me,' she cried,
 'let death
 Descend—the fault is mine; this fatal
 shore
 He found—but sought not. I have pledged my faith;
 I love him—I will die with him: I knew
 Your nature's firmness—know your daughter's too.'

XLIII

A minute past, and she had been all tears,
 And tenderness, and infancy; but now
 She stood as one who champion'd human
 fears—
 Pale, statue-like, and stern, she woo'd
 the blow;
 And tall beyond her sex, and their com-
 peers,
 She drew up to her height, as if to show
 A fairer mark; and with a fix'd eye scann'd
 Her father's face—but never stopp'd his hand.

XLIV

He gazed on her, and she on him; 'twas strange
 How like they look'd! the expression was the same;
 Serenely savage, with a little change
 In the large dark eye's mutual-darted
 flame;

For she, too, was as one who could
 avenge,
 If cause should be—a lioness, though
 tame;
 Her father's blood before her father's face
 Boil'd up, and proved her truly of his race.

XLV

I said they were alike, their features and Their stature, differing but in sex and
 years:
 Even to the delicacy of their hand
 There was resemblance, such as true blood wears;
 And now to see them, thus divided, stand
 In fix'd ferocity, when joyous tears,
 And sweet sensations, should have welcomed both,
 Show what the passions are in their full growth.

XLVI

The father paused a moment, then with-
 drew
 His weapon, and replaced it; but stood
 still,
 And looking on her, as to look her through,
 'Not I,' he said, 'have sought this stranger's ill;
 Not I have made this desolation: few Would bear such outrage, and forbear to kill;
 But I must do my duty—how thou hast Done thine, the present vouches for the past.

XLVII

'Let him disarm; or, by my father's head,
 His own shall roll before you like a
 ball!'
 He raised his whistle as the word he said,
 And blew; another answer'd to the call,
 And rushing in disorderly, though led,
 And arm'd from boot to turban, one
 and all,
 Some twenty of his train came, rank on
 rank;
 He gave the word, 'Arrest or slay the Frank.'

XLVIII

Then, with a sudden movement, he with-
 drew
 His daughter; while compress'd within his clasp,
 'Twixt her and Juan interposed the crew;
 In vain she struggled in her father's grasp—
 His arms were like a serpent's coil: then flew
 Upon their prey, as darts an angry asp,
 The file of pirates: save the foremost, who Had fallen, with his right shoulder half cut through.

XLIX

The second had his cheek laid open; but
 The third, a wary, cool old swords-took
 The blows upon his cutlass, and then put His own well in; so well, ere you could
 look,
 His man was floor'd, and helpless at his
 foot,
 With the blood running like a little brook
 From two smart sabre gashes, deep and
 red—
 One on the arm, the other on the head.

L

And then they bound him where he fell,
 and bore
 Juan from the apartment: with a sign Old Lambro bade them take him to the
 shore,
 Where lay some ships which were to sail
 at nine.
 They laid him in a boat, and plied the oar
 Until they reach'd some galliots, placed in line;
 On board of one of these, and under hatches,
 They stow'd him, with strict orders to the watches.

LI

The world is full of strange vicissitudes,
 And here was one exceedingly unpleasant:
 A gentleman so rich in the world's goods, Handsome and young, enjoying all the
 present,
 Just at the very time when he least broods
 On such a thing, is suddenly to sea sent, Wounded and chain'd, so that he cannot
 move,
 And all because a lady fell in love.

LII

Here I must leave him, for I grow pathetic, Moved by the Chinese nymph of tears,
 green tea!
 Than whom Cassandra was not more prophetic;
 For if my pure libations exceed three,
 I feel my heart become so sympathetic,
 That I must have recourse to black Bohea:
 'Tis pity wine should be so deleterious,
 For tea and coffee leave us much more serious,

LIII

Unless when qualified with thee, Cogniac!
 Sweet Naiad of the Phlegethontic rill!
 Ah! why the liver wilt thou thus attack,
 And make, like other nymphs, thy lovers
 ill?

I would take refuge in weak punch, but rack
 (In each sense of the word), whene'er I fill
 My mild and midnight beakers to the brim,
 Wakes me next morning with its synonym.

LIV

I leave Don Juan for the present, safe—
 Not sound, poor fellow, but severely wounded;
 Yet could his corporal pangs amount to
 half
 Of those with which his Haidée's bosom bounded!
 She was not one to weep, and rave, and chafe,
 And then give way, subdued because surrounded;
 Her mother was a Moorish maid from Fez,
 Where all is Eden, or a wilderness.

LV

There the large olive rains its amber store
 In marble founts; there grain, and flour,
 and fruit,
 Gush from the earth until the land runs
 o'er;
 But there, too, many a poison-tree has
 root,
 And midnight listens to the lion's roar,
 And long, long deserts scorch the camel's foot,
 Or heaving whelm the helpless caravan;
 And as the soil is, so the heart of man.

LVI

Afric is all the sun's, and as her earth
 Her human clay is kindled; full of power
 For good or evil, burning from its birth,
 The Moorish blood partakes the planet's
 hour,
 And like the soil beneath it will bring
 forth:
 Beauty and love were Haidée's mother's
 dower;
 But her large dark eye show'd deep Passion's force,
 Though sleeping like a lion near a source.

LVII

Her daughter, temper'd with a milder ray,
 Like summer clouds all silvery, smooth,
 and fair,
 Till slowly charged with thunder they dis-
 play
 Terror to earth, and tempest to the air,
 Had held till now her soft and milky way;
 But overwrought with passion and des-
 pair,
 The fire burst forth from her Numidian
 veins,
 Even as the Simoom sweeps the blasted
 plains.

LVIII

The last sight which she saw was Juan's
 gore,
 And he himself o'er-master'd and cut
 down;
 His blood was running on the very floor
 Where late he trod, her beautiful, her
 own;
 Thus much she view'd an instant and no
 more,—
 Her struggles ceased with one convul-sive groan;
 On her sire's arm, which until now scarce
 held
 Her writhing, fell she like a cedar fell'd.

LIX

A vein had burst, and her sweet lips' pure
 dyes
 Were dabbled with the deep blood which ran o'er;
 And her head droop'd, as when the lily lies O'ercharged with rain: her summon'd handmaids bore
 Their lady to her couch with gushing eyes;
 Of herbs and cordials they produced their store,
 But she defied all means they could employ,
 Like one life could not hold, nor death
 destroy.

LX

Days lay she in that state unchanged, though chill—
 With nothing livid, still her lips were
 red;
 She had no pulse, but death seem'd absent
 still;
 No hideous sign proclaim'd her surely
 dead;
 Corruption came not in each mind to kill
 All hope; to look upon her sweet face
 bred
 New thoughts of life, for it seem'd full of
 soul—
 She had so much, earth could not claim the whole.

LXI

The ruling passion, such as marble shows
 When exquisitely chisell'd, still lay
 there,
 But fix'd as marble's unchanged aspect
 throws
 O'er the fair Venus, but for ever fair;
 O'er the Laocoön's all eternal throes,
 And ever-dying Gladiator's air,
 Their energy like life forms all their fame,
 Yet looks not life, for they are still the
 same.

LXII

She woke at length, but not as sleepers
wake,
Rather the dead, for life seem'd something new,
A strange sensation which she must par-
take
Perforce, since whatsoever met her view Struck not on memory, though a heavy ache
Lay at her heart, whose earliest beat still true Brought back the sense of pain without the
cause,
For, for a while, the furies made a pause.

LXIII

She look'd on many a face with vacant eye,
On many a token without knowing
what;
She saw them watch her without asking
why,
And reck'd not who around her pillow
sat;
Not speechless, though she spoke not; not
a sigh
Relieved her thoughts; dull silence and quick chat
Were tried in vain by those who served;
she gave
No sign, save breath, of having left the grave.

LXIV

Her handmaids tended, but she heeded
not;
Her father watch'd, she turn'd her eyes
away;
She recognised no being, and no spot,
However dear or cherish'd in their day;
They changed from room to room, but all
forgot,
Gentle, but without memory she lay;
At length those eyes, which they would fain be weaning
Back to old thoughts, wax'd full of fearful meaning.

LXV

And then a slave bethought her of a harp;
The harper came, and tuned his instru-
ment;
At the first notes, irregular and sharp,
On him her flashing eyes a moment bent,
Then to the wall she turn'd as if to warp
Her thoughts from sorrow through her heart re-sent;
And he began a long low island song
Of ancient days, ere tyranny grew strong.

LXVI

Anon her thin wan fingers beat the wall
In time to his old tune; he changed the
theme,

And sung of love; the fierce name struck through all Her recollection; on her flash'd the
dream
Of what she was, and is, if ye could call
To be so being; in a gushing stream
The tears rush'd forth from her o'erclouded
brain,
Like mountain mists at length dissolved in rain.

LXVII

Short solace, vain relief!—thought came too quick,
And whirl'd her brain to madness; she arose
As one who ne'er had dwelt among the sick,
And flew at all she met, as on her foes;
But no one ever heard her speak or shriek,
Although her paroxysm drew towards its close;— Hers was a phrensy which disdain'd to
rave,
Even when they smote her, in the hope to save.

LXVIII

Yet she betray'd at times a gleam of sense;
Nothing could make her meet her father's face,
Though on all other things with looks
intense
She gazed, but none she ever could re-
trace;
Food she refused, and raiment; no pre-
tence Avail'd for either; neither change of
place,
Nor time, nor skill, nor remedy, could give
her Senses to sleep—the power seem'd gone
for ever.

LXIX

Twelve days and nights she wither'd thus;
at last,
Without a groan, or sigh, or glance, to
show
A parting pang, the spirit from her passed:
And they who watch'd her nearest could not know
The very instant, till the change that cast
Her sweet face into shadow, dull and
slow,
Glazed o'er her eyes—the beautiful, the
black—
Oh! to possess such lustre—and then lack!

LXX

She died, but not alone; she held within
A second principle of life, which might Have dawn'd a fair and sinless child of sin;
But closed its little being without light,

And went down to the grave unborn, wherein Blossom and bough lie wither'd with one blight;
In vain the dews of Heaven descend above
The bleeding flower and blasted fruit of love.

LXXI

Thus lived—thus died she; never more on
her Shall sorrow light, or shame. She was not made Through years or moons the inner weight
to bear,
Which colder hearts endure till they are
laid
By age in earth: her days and pleasures
were Brief, but delightful—such as had not stayed
Long with her destiny; but she sleeps well
By the sea-shore, whereon she loved to dwell.

LXXII

That isle is now all desolate and bare,
Its dwellings down, its tenants pass'd
away;
None but her own and father's grave is
there,
And nothing outward tells of human
clay;
Ye could not know where lies a thing so
fair,
No stone is there to show, no tongue to
say,
What was; no dirge, except the hollow
sea's,
Mourns o'er the beauty of the Cyclades.

LXXIII

But many a Greek maid in a loving song Sighs o'er her name; and many an islander
With her sire's story makes the night less
long;
Valour was his, and beauty dwelt with
her;
If she loved rashly, her life paid for
wrong—
A heavy price must all pay who thus err,
In some shape; let none think to fly the
danger,
For soon or late Love is his own avenger.

LXXIV

But let me change this theme, which grows too sad,
And lay this sheet of sorrows on the shelf;
I don't much like describing people mad,
For fear of seeming rather touch'd myself—

Besides, I've no more on this head to add;
And as my Muse is a capricious elf,
We'll put about, and try another tack
With Juan, left half-kill'd some stanzas back.

LXXV

Wounded and fetter'd, 'cabin'd, cribb'd, confined,'
Some days and nights elapsed before that he Could altogether call the past to mind;
And when he did, he found himself at
sea,
Sailing six knots an hour before the wind;
The shores of Ilion lay beneath their lee—
Another time he might have liked to see
'em,
But now was not much pleased with Cape Sigæum.

LXXVI

There, on the green and village-cotted hill,
is (Flank'd by the Hellespont, and by the sea)
Entomb'd the bravest of the brave,
Achilles;
They say so—(Bryant says the contrary):
And further downward, tall and towering still, is The tumulus—of whom? Heaven knows; 't may be Patroclus, Ajax, or Protesilaus;
All heroes, who if living still would slay us.

LXXVII

High barrows, without marble, or a name,
A vast, untill'd, and mountain-skirted
plain,
And Ida in the distance, still the same,
And old Scamander (if 'tis he), remain;
The situation seems still form'd for fame—
A hundred thousand men might fight
again,
With ease; but where I sought for Ilion's
walls,
The quiet sheep feeds, and the tortoise
crawls;

LXXVIII

Troops of untended horses; here and there,
Some little hamlets, with new names un-
couth;
Some shepherds (unlike Paris), led to stare
A moment at the European youth Whom to the spot their school-boy feelings bear;
A Turk, with beads in hand, and pipe
in mouth,
Extremely taken with his own religion,
Are what I found there—but the devil a Phrygian.

LXXIX

Don Juan, here permitted to emerge
 From his dull cabin, found himself a
 slave;
 Forlorn, and gazing on the deep blue surge,
 O'ershadow'd there by many a hero's
 grave;
 Weak still with loss of blood, he scarce could urge
 A few brief questions; and the answers
 gave
 No very satisfactory information
 About his past or present situation.

LXXX

He saw some fellow-captives, who ap-
 pear'd
 To be Italians, as they were in fact;
 From them, at least, their destiny he
 heard,
 Which was an odd one; a troop going to act
 In Sicily—all singers, duly rear'd
 In their vocation; had not been attack'd
 In sailing from Livorno by the pirate,
 But sold by the impresario at no high rate.

LXXXI

By one of these, the buffo of the party,
 Juan was told about their curious case;
 For although destined to the Turkish mart, he Still kept his spirits up—at least his face;
 The little fellow really look'd quite hearty,
 And bore him with some gaiety and
 grace,
 Showing a much more reconciled demeanour,
 Than did the prima-donna and the tenor.

LXXXII

In a few words he told their hapless story,
 Saying, 'Our Machiavelian impresario,
 Making a signal off some promontory,
 Hail'd a strange brig; Corpo di Caio Mario!
 We were transferr'd on board her in a hurry,
 Without a single scudo of salario;
 But if the Sultan has a taste for song,
 We will revive our fortunes before long.

LXXXIII

'The prima-donna, though a little old,
 And haggard with a dissipated life,
 And subject, when the house is thin, to
 cold,
 Has some good notes; and then the tenor's wife,
 With no great voice, is pleasing to behold;
 Last carnival she made a deal of strife,
 By carrying off Count Cesare Cicogna
 From an old Roman princess at Bologna.

LXXXIV

'And then there are the dancers; there's the Nini,
 With more than one profession gains
 by all;
 Then there's that laughing slut the Pele-grini,
 She, too, was fortunate last carnival,
 And made at least five hundred good zecchini,
 But spends so fast, she has not now a
 paul;
 And then there's the Grotesca—such a dancer!
 Where men have souls or bodies she must answer.

LXXXV

'As for the figuranti, they are like
 The rest of all that tribe; with here and
 there
 A pretty person, which perhaps may strike,
 The rest are hardly fitted for a fair;
 There's one, though tall and stiffer than a pike,
 Yet has a sentimental kind of air
 Which might go far, but she don't dance with vigour;
 The more's the pity, with her face and
 figure.

LXXXVI

'As for the men, they are a middling set;
 The musico is but a crack'd old basin,
 But being qualified in one way yet,
 May the seraglio do to set his face in,
 And as a servant some preferment get;
 His singing I no further trust can place
 in:
 From all the Pope makes yearly 'twould perplex
 To find three perfect pipes of the third sex.

LXXXVII

'The tenor's voice is spoilt by affectation,
 And for the bass, the beast can only
 bellow;
 In fact, he had no singing education,
 An ignorant, noteless, timeless, tuneless
 fellow;
 But being the prima-donna's near relation,
 Who swore his voice was very rich and
 mellow,
 They hired him, though to hear him you'd believe
 An ass was practising recitative.

LXXXVIII

'Twould not become myself to dwell upon
 My own merits, and though young—
 I see, sir—you
 Have got a travell'd air, which speaks you
 one
 To whom the opera is by no means new:

You've heard of Raucocanti?—I'm the man:

The time may come when you may hear me too;

You was not last year at the fair of Lugo,
But next, when I'm engaged to sing there—do go.

LXXXIX

'Our baritone I almost had forgot,
A pretty lad, but bursting with conceit;
With graceful action, science not a jot,
A voice of no great compass, and not
sweet,

He always is complaining of his lot, Forsooth, scarce fit for ballads in the street;

In lovers' parts his passion more to
breathe,

Having no heart to show, he shows his teeth.'

XC

Here Raucocanti's eloquent recital
Was interrupted by the pirate crew,
Who came at stated moments to invite all
The captives back to their sad berths;
each threw

A rueful glance upon the waves, (which bright all

From the blue skies derived a double
blue,

Dancing all free and happy in the sun,)
And then went down the hatchway one by one.

XCI

They heard next day—that in the Dardanelles,

Waiting for his Sublimity's firman,
The most imperative of sovereign spells,

Whicheverbody does without who can,
More to secure them in their naval cells,

Lady to lady, well as man to man,
Were to be chain'd and lotted out per couple,

For the slave-market of Constantinople.

XCII

It seems when this allotment was made
out,

There chanced to be an odd male, and odd female,

Who (after some discussion and some doubt,
If the soprano might be deem'd to be
male,

They placed him o'er the woman as a scout)

Were link'd together, and it happen'd
the male

Was Juan, who,—an awkward thing at
his age,

Pair'd off with a Bacchante blooming visage.

XCIII

With Raucocanti lucklessly was chain'd
The tenor; these two hated with a hate Found only on the stage, and each more pain'd

With this his tuneful neighbour than his
fate;

Sad strife arose, for they were so cross-
grain'd,

Instead of bearing up without debate,
That each pull'd different ways with many an oath,

'Arcades ambo,' id est—blackguards both.

XCIV

Juan's companion was a Romagnole,
But bred within the March of old Ancona,

With eyes that look'd into the very soul (And other chief points of a 'bella donna'),

Bright—and as black and burning as a coal;
And through her clear brunette complexion shone a

Great wish to please—a most attractive
dower,

Especially when added to the power.

XCV

But all that power was wasted upon him,
For sorrow o'er each sense held stern
command;

Her eye might flash on his, but found it dim:
And though thus chain'd, as natural her
hand

Touch'd his, nor that—nor any handsome
limb

(And she had some not easy to withstand)

Could stir his pulse, or make his faith feel brittle;

Perhaps his recent wounds might help a little.

XCVI

No matter; we should ne'er too much
inquire,

But facts are facts: no knight could be more true,

And firmer faith no ladye-love desire;

We will omit the proofs, save one or two:

'Tis said no one in hand 'can hold a fire
By thought of frosty Caucasus;' but
few,

I really think; yet Juan's then ordeal
Was more triumphant, and not much less real.

XCVII

Here I might enter on a chaste description, Having withstood temptation in my
youth,

But hear that several people take exception
At the first two books having too much
truth;

Therefore I'll make Don Juan leave the ship soon,
 Because the publisher declares, in sooth,
 Through needles' eyes it easier for the camel is
 To pass, than those two cantos into families.

XCVIII

'Tis all the same to me; I'm fond of yield-
 ing,
 And therefore leave them to the purer
 page
 Of Smollett, Prior, Ariosto, Fielding, Who say strange things for so correct an
 age;
 I once had great alacrity in wielding
 My pen, and liked poetic war to wage,
 And recollect the time when all this cant
 Would have provoked remarks which now it shan't.

XCIX

As boys love rows, my boyhood liked a
 squabble;
 But at this hour I wish to part in peace,
 Leaving such to the literary rabble, Whether my verse's fame be doom'd to
 cease
 While the right hand which wrote it still is able,
 Or of some centuries to take a lease;
 The grass upon my grave will grow as long,
 And sigh to midnight winds, but not to song.

C

Of poets who come down to us through distance
 Of time and tongues, the foster-babes of
 Fame,
 Life seems the smallest portion of existence;
 Where twenty ages gather o'er a name,
 'Tis as a snow-ball which derives assistance
 From every flake, and yet rolls on the
 same,
 Even till an iceberg it may chance to grow;
 But, after all, 'tis nothing but cold snow.

CI

And so great names are nothing more than nominal,
 And love of glory's but an airy lust,
 Too often in its fury overcoming all
 Who would as 'twere identify their dust
 From out the wide destruction, which,
 entombing all,
 Leaves nothing till 'the coming of the
 just'—
 Save change: I've stood upon Achilles'
 tomb,
 And heard Troy doubted; time will doubt of Rome.

CII

The very generations of the dead
 Areswept away, and tomb inherits tomb,
 Until the memory of an age is fled,
 And, buried, sinks beneath its off-
 spring's doom:
 Where are the epitaphs our fathers read?
 Save a few glean'd from the sepulchral
 gloom
 Which once-named myriads nameless lie
 beneath,
 And lose their own in universal death.

CIII

I canter by the spot each afternoon
 Where perish'd in his fame the hero-
 boy,
 Who lived too long for men, but died too
 soon
 For human vanity, the young De Foix!
 A broken pillar, not uncouthly hewn,
 But which neglect is hastening to destroy,
 Records Ravenna's carnage on its face, While weeds and ordure rankle round the base.

CIV

I pass each day where Dante's bones are
 laid:
 A little cupola, more neat than solemn,
 Protects his dust, but reverence here is paid
 To the bard's tomb, and not the warrior's column:
 The time must come, when both alike
 decay'd,
 The chieftain's trophy, and the poet's volume,
 Will sink where lie the songs and wars of
 earth,
 Before Pelides' death, or Homer's birth.

CV

With human blood that column was cemented,
 With human filth that column is defiled,
 As if the peasant's coarse contempt were vented
 To show his loathing of the spot he soil'd:
 Thus is the trophy used, and thus lamented
 Should ever be those blood-hounds, from whose wild
 Instinct of gore and glory earth has known
 Those sufferings Dante saw in hell alone.

CVI

Yet there will still be bards: though fame
 is smoke,
 Its fumes are frankincense to human
 thought;
 And the inquiet feelings, which first woke Song in the world, will seek what then
 they sought:

As on the beach the waves at last are broke,
 Thus to their extreme verge the passions
 brought
 Dash into poetry, which is but passion,
 Or at least was so ere it grew a fashion.

CVII

If in the course of such a life as was
 At once adventurous and contemplative,
 Men who partake all passions as they pass,
 Acquire the deep and bitter power to give Their images again as in a glass,
 And in such colours that they seem to
 live;
 You may do right forbidding them to show
 'em,
 But spoil (I think) a very pretty poem.

CVIII

Oh! ye, who make the fortunes of all books!
 Benign Ceruleans of the second sex!
 Who advertise new poems by your looks,
 Your 'imprimatur' will ye not annex?
 What! must I go to the oblivious cooks,
 Those Cornish plunderers of Parnassian wrecks?
 Ah! must I then the only minstrel be,
 Proscribed from tasting your Castalian tea?

CIX

What! can I prove 'a lion' then no more?
 A ball-room bard, a foolscap, hot-press darling?
 To bear the compliments of many a bore,
 And sigh, 'I can't get out,' like Yorick's starling?
 Why then I'll swear, as poet Wordy swore (Because the world won't read him, always snarling),
 That taste is gone, that fame is but a lottery,
 Drawn by the blue-coat misses of a coterie.

CX

Oh! 'darkly, deeply, beautifully blue,'
 As some one somewhere sings about the
 sky,
 And I, ye learned ladies, say of you;
 They say your stockings are so—(Heaven knows why,
 I have examined few pair of that hue);
 Blue as the garters which serenely lie
 Round the patrician left-legs, which adorn
 The festal midnight, and the levée morn.

CXI

Yet some of you are most seraphic creatures—
 But times are alter'd since, a rhyming
 lover,
 You read my stanzas, and I read your
 features:
 And—but no matter, all those things are over;

Still I have no dislike to learned natures,
 For sometimes such a world of virtues
 cover;
 I knew one woman of that purple school,
 The loveliest, chastest, best, but—quite a fool.

CXII

Humboldt, 'the first of travellers,' but not
 The last, if late accounts be accurate,
 Invented, by some name I have forgot,
 As well as the sublime discovery's date,
 An airy instrument, with which he sought
 To ascertain the atmospheric state,
 By measuring 'the intensity of blue':
 Oh, Lady Daphne! let me measure you!

CXIII

But to the narrative:—The vessel bound
 With slaves to sell off in the capital,
 After the usual process, might be found
 At anchor under the seraglio wall;
 Her cargo, from the plague being safe and
 sound,
 Were landed in the market, one and all,
 And there with Georgians, Russians, and Circassians, Bought up for different purposes and passions.

CXIV

Some went off dearly; fifteen hundred dollars
 For one Circassian, a sweet girl, were
 given,
 Warranted virgin; beauty's brightest colours
 Had deck'd her out in all the hues of
 heaven:
 Her sale sent home some disappointed
 bawlers,
 Who bade on till the hundreds reached eleven;
 But when the offer went beyond, they
 knew
 'Twas for the Sultan, and at once withdrew.

CXV

Twelve negresses from Nubia brought a
 price
 Which the West Indian market scarce could bring,
 Though Wilberforce, at last, has made it
 twice
 What 'twas ere Abolition; and the thing
 Need not seem very wonderful, for vice Is always much more splendid than a
 kind:
 The virtues, even the most exalted,
 Charity,
 Are saying—vice spares nothing for a rarity.

CXVI

But for the destiny of this young troop,
 How some were bought by pachas,
 some by Jews,
 How some to burdens were obliged to
 stoop,
 And others rose to the command of crews
 As renegadoes; while in hapless group,
 Hoping no very old vizier might choose,
 The females stood, as one by one they pick'd 'em,
 To make a mistress, or fourth wife, or victim:

CXVII

All this must be reserved for further song;
 Also our hero's lot, howe'er unpleasant
 (Because this Canto has become too long), Must be postponed discreetly for the
 present;
 I'm sensible redundancy is wrong,
 But could not for the muse of me put less in't:
 And now delay the progress of Don Juan,
 Till what is call'd in Ossian the fifth Duan.

CANTO THE FIFTH

I

WHEN amatory poets sing their loves
 In liquid lines mellifluously bland,
 And pair their rhymes as Venus yokes her doves,
 They little think what mischief is in
 hand;
 The greater their success the worse it
 proves,
 As Ovid's verse may give to understand;
 Even Petrarch's self, if judged with due severity,
 Is the Platonic pimp of all posterity.

II

I therefore do denounce all amorous writing,
 Except in such a way as not to attract;
 Plain—simple—short, and by no means inviting,
 But with a moral to each error tack'd,
 Form'd rather for instructing than del-ighting,
 And with all passions in their turn
 attack'd;
 Now, if my Pegasus should not be shod ill,
 This poem will become a moral model.

III

The European with the Asian shore
 Sprinkled with palaces; the Ocean
 stream
 Here and there studded with a seventy-
 four;
 Sophia's cupola with golden gleam;

The cypress groves; Olympus high and
 hoar;
 The twelve isles, and the more than I could dream,
 Far less describe, present the very view
 Which charm'd the charming Mary Montagu.

IV

I have a passion for the name of 'Mary,'
 For once it was a magic sound to me;
 And still it half calls up the realms of fairy,
 Where I beheld what never was to be;
 All feelings changed, but this was last to vary,
 A spell from which even yet I am not quite free:

But I grow sad—and let a tale grow cold,
 Which must not be pathetically told.

V

The wind swept down the Euxine, and the
 wave
 Broke foaming o'er the blue Symple-gades;
 'Tis a grand sight from off 'the Giant's
 Grave'
 To watch the progress of those rolling
 seas
 Between the Bosphorus, as they lash and
 lave
 Europe and Asia, you being quite at ease:
 There's not a sea the passenger e'er pukes
 in,
 Turns up more dangerous breakers than the Euxine.

VI

'Twas a raw day of Autumn's bleak beginning,
 When nights are equal, but not so the
 days:
 The Parcae then cut short the further spinning
 Of seamen's fates, and the loud tempests
 raise
 The waters, and repentance for past sin-
 ning
 In all, who o'er the great deep take their
 ways:
 They vow to amend their lives, and yet
 they don't;
 Because if drown'd, they can't—if spared,
 they won't.

VII

A crowd of shivering slaves of every
 nation,
 And age, and sex, were in the market
 ranged;
 Each bevy with the merchant in his station:
 Poor creatures! their good looks were sadly changed.

All save the blacks seem'd jaded with vexation,
 From friends, and home, and freedom far estranged;
 The negroes more philosophy display'd,—
 Used to it, no doubt, as eels are to be flay'd.

VIII

Juan was juvenile, and thus was full,
 As most at his age are, of hope, and health;
 Yet I must own, he look'd a little dull,
 And now and then a tear stole down by stealth;
 Perhaps his recent loss of blood might pull
 His spirit down; and then the loss of wealth,
 A mistress, and such comfortable quarters,
 To be put up for auction amongst Tartars,

IX

Were things to shake a stoic; ne'ertheless,
 Upon the whole his carriage was serene:
 His figure, and the splendour of his dress,
 Of which some gilded remnants still were seen,
 Drew all eyes on him, giving them to guess
 He was above the vulgar by his mien;
 And then, though pale, he was so very handsome;
 And then—they calculated on his ransom.

Like a backgammon board the place was dotted
 With whites and blacks, in groups on show for sale,
 Though rather more irregularly spotted:
 Some bought the jet, while others chose the pale.
 It chanced amongst the other people lotted,
 A man of thirty, rather stout and hale,
 With resolution in his dark grey eye,
 Next Juan stood, till some might choose to buy.

XI

He had an English look; that is, was square
 In make, of a complexion white and ruddy,
 Good teeth, with curling rather dark brown hair,
 And, it might be from thought, or toil, or study,
 An open brow a little mark'd with care:
 One arm had on a bandage rather bloody;
 And there he stood with such sang froid,
 That greater
 Could scarce be shown even by a mere spectator.

XII

But seeing at his elbow a mere lad,
 Of a high spirit evidently, though
 At present weigh'd down by a doom which had O'erthrown even men, he soon began to show
 A kind of blunt compassion for the sad
 Lot of so young a partner in the woe,
 Which for himself he seem'd to deem no worse
 Than any other scrape, a thing of course.

XIII

'My boy!'—said he, 'amidst this motley crew
 Of Georgians, Russians, Nubians, and what not,
 All ragamuffins differing but in hue,
 With whom it is our luck to cast our lot,
 The only gentlemen seem I and you;
 So let us be acquainted, as we ought:
 If I could yield you any consolation,
 'Twould give me pleasure.—Pray, what is your nation?'

XIV

When Juan answer'd—'Spanish!' he replied,
 'I thought, in fact, you could not be a Greek;
 Those servile dogs are not so proudly eyed:
 Fortune has play'd you here a pretty freak,
 But that's her way with all men, till they're tried;
 But never mind,—she'll turn, perhaps, next week;
 She has served me also much the same as you,
 Except that I have found it nothing new.'

XV

'Pray, sir,' said Juan, 'if I may presume,
 What brought you here?'—'Oh! nothing very rare—
 Six Tartars and a drag-chain——'—'To this doom
 But what conducted, if the question's fair,
 Is that which I would learn.'—'I served for some Months with the Russian army here and there;
 And taking lately, by Suwarrow's bidding,
 A town, was ta'en myself instead of Widdin.'

XVI

'Have you no friends?'—'I had—but, by God's blessing,
 Have not been troubled with them lately. Now
 I have answer'd all your questions without pressing,
 And you an equal courtesy should show.'

'Alas!' said Juan, 'twere a tale distress-
ing,
And long besides.'—'Oh! if 'tis really
so,
You're right on both accounts to hold your tongue;
A sad tale saddens doubly when 'tis long.

XVII

'But droop not: Fortune at your time of
life,
Although a female moderately fickle,
Will hardly leave you (as she's not your wife)
For any length of days in such a pickle.
To strive, too, with our fate were such a
strife
As if the corn-sheaf should oppose the sickle:
Men are the sport of circumstances, when
The circumstances seem the sport of men.'

XVIII

'Tis not,' said Juan, 'for my present doom
I mourn, but for the past;—I loved a
maid:—
He paused, and his dark eye grew full of
gloom;
A single tear upon his eyelash stayed
A moment, and then dropp'd; 'but to resume,
'Tis not my present lot, as I have said,
Which I deplore so much; for I have borne Hardships which have the hardest over-
worn,

XIX

'On the rough deep. But this last blow—' and here
He stopp'd again, and turn'd away his
face.
'Ay,' quoth his friend, 'I thought it would appear
That there had been a lady in the case;
And these are things which ask a tender
tear,
Such as I, too, would shed if in your
place:
I cried upon my first wife's dying day,
And also when my second ran away:

XX

'My third——'—'Your third!' quoth
Juan, turning round;
'You scarcely can be thirty: have you
three?'
'No—only two at present above ground:
Surely, 'tis nothing wonderful to see
One person thrice in holy wedlock bound!'
'Well, then, your third,' said Juan;
'what did she?
She did not run away, too,—did she, sir?'
'No, faith.'—'What then?'—'I ran away from her.'

XXI

'You take things coolly, sir,' said Juan.
'Why,'
Replied the other, 'what can a man do?
There still are many rainbows in your sky,
But mine have vanish'd. All, when life is new,
Commence with feelings warm, and prospects high;
But time strips our illusions of their hue,
And one by one in turn, some grand mistake Casts off its bright skin yearly like the snake.

XXII

'Tis true, it gets another bright and fresh,
Or fresher, brighter; but the year gone
through,
This skin must go the way, too, of all flesh,
Or sometimes only wear a week or
two;— Love's the first net which spreads its deadly mesh;
Ambition, Avarice, Vengeance, Glory, glue
The glittering lime-twigs of our latter days, Where still we flutter on for pence or praise.'

XXIII

'All this is very fine, and may be true,'
Said Juan, 'but I really don't see how,
It betters present times with me or you.'
'No?' quoth the other; 'yet you will allow
By setting things in their right point of view, Knowledge, at least, is gain'd; for instance, now,
We know what slavery is, and our disasters
May teach us better to behave when masters.'

XXIV

'Would we were masters now, if but to try Their present lessons on our Pagan friends here,'
Said Juan—swallowing a heart-burning
sigh:
'Heaven help the scholar, whom his fortune sends here!'
'Perhaps we shall be one day, by and by,
Rejoin'd the other, 'when our bad luck
mends here;
Meantime (yon old black eunuch seems to eye us)
I wish to G—d that somebody would buy
us!

XXV

'But after all, what is our present state?
'Tis bad, and may be better—all men's
lot:
Most men are slaves, none more so than the great,
To their own whims and passions, and
what not;

Society itself, which should create

Kindness, destroys what little we had got:

To feel for none is the true social art
Of the world's stoics—men without a heart.'

XXVI

Just now a black old neutral personage
Of the third sex stept up, and peering
over

The captives, seem'd to mark their looks and age,

And capabilities, as to discover
If they were fitted for the purposed cage:
No lady e'er is ogled by a lover,

Horse by a blackleg, broadcloth by a tailor,

Fee by a counsel, felon by a jailor,

XXVII

As is a slave by his intended bidder.

'Tis pleasant purchasing our fellow-
creatures;

And all are to be sold, if you consider Their passions, and are dext'rous; some by features

Are bought up, others by a warlike leader,
Some by a place—as tend their years or
natures;

The most by ready cash—but all have prices,

From crowns to kicks, according to their vices.

XXVIII

The eunuch, having eyed them o'er with
care,

Turn'd to the merchant, and began to bid

First but for one, and after for the pair;
They haggled, wrangled, swore, too—so
they did!

As though they were in a mere Christian
fair,

Cheapening an ox, an ass, a lamb, or kid;

So that their bargain sounded like a battle
For this superior yoke of human cattle.

XXIX

At last they settled into simple grumbling,
And pulling out reluctant purses, and Turning each piece of silver o'er, and tumbling

Some down, and weighing others in their hand,
And by mistake sequins with paras jumb-
ling,

Until the sum was accurately scann'd,
And then the merchant giving change, and signing

Receipts in full, began to think of dining.

XXX

I wonder if his appetite was good?

Or, if it were, if also his digestion?

Methinks at meals some odd thoughts might intrude,

And conscience ask a curious sort of
question,

About the right divine how far we should Sell flesh and blood. When dinner has oppress one,

I think it is perhaps the gloomiest hour
Which turns up out of the sad twenty-four.

XXXI

Voltaire says 'No'; he tells you that Candide

Found life most tolerable after meals;
He's wrong—unless man were a pig, indeed,

Repletion rather adds to what he feels,
Unless he's drunk, and then no doubt he's freed

From his own brain's oppression while it reels.

Of food I think with Philip's son, or rather Ammon's (ill pleased with one world and one father);

XXXII

I think with Alexander, that the act

Of eating, with another act or two,

Makes us feel our mortality in fact
Redoubled; when a roast and a ragout,

And fish, and soup, by some side dishes
back'd,

Can give us either pain or pleasure, who Would pique himself on intellects, whose
use

Depends so much upon the gastric juice?

XXXIII

The other evening ('twas on Friday last)—

This is a fact, and no poetic fable—

Just as my great coat was about me cast,

My hat and gloves still lying on the table,

I heard a shot—'twas eight o'clock scarce
past—

And, running out as fast as I was able,
I found the military commandant

Stretch'd in the street, and able scarce to pant.

XXXIV

Poor fellow! for some reason, surely bad,
They had slain him with five slugs; and left him there

To perish on the pavement: so I had Him borne into the house and up the stair,

And stripp'd, and look'd to,—But why should I add

More circumstances? vain was every
care;

The man was gone: in some Italian quarrel
Kill'd by five bullets from an old gun-barrel.

XXXV

I gazed upon him, for I knew him well;
 And though I have seen many corpses,
 never
 Saw one, whom such an accident befell,
 So calm; though pierced through stomach, heart, and liver,
 He seem'd to sleep,—for you could scarcely tell
 (As he bled inwardly, no hideous river Of gore divulged the cause) that he was
 dead:
 So as I gazed on him, I thought or said—

XXXVI

'Can this be death? then what is life or
 death?
 Speak!' but he spoke not: 'wake!' but still he slept:—
 'But yesterday, and who had mightier
 breath?
 A thousand warriors by his word were kept
 In awe: he said, as the centurion saith,
 "Go," and he goeth; "come," and forth
 he stepp'd.
 The trump and bugle till he spake were
 dumb—
 And now nought left him but the muffled drum.'

XXXVII

And they who waited once and worshipp'd—they
 With their rough faces throng'd about
 the bed
 To gaze once more on the commanding
 clay
 Which for the last, though not the first,
 time bled;
 And such an end! that he who many a day
 Had faced Napoleon's foes until they
 fled,—
 The foremost in the charge or in the sally,
 Should now be butcher'd in a civic alley.

XXXVIII

The scars of his old wounds were near his
 new,
 Those honourable scars which brought
 him fame;
 And horrid was the contrast to the
 view—
 But let me quit the theme; as such things
 claim
 Perhaps even more attention than is due From me: I gazed (as oft I have gazed
 the same)
 To try if I could wrench aught out of death
 Which should confirm, or shake, or make a faith;

XXXIX

But it was all a mystery. Here we are,
 And there we go:—but where? five bits
 of lead,
 Or three, or two, or one, send very far!
 And is this blood, then, form'd but to
 be shed?
 Can every element our elements mar?
 And air—earth—water—fire live—and we dead?
 We, whose minds comprehend all things.
 No more;
 But let us to the story as before.

XL

The purchaser of Juan and acquaintance
 Bore off his bargains to a gilded boat, Embark'd himself and them, and off they went thence
 As fast as oars could pull and water float;
 They look'd like persons being led to sentence,
 Wond'ring what next, till the caïque was brought
 Up in a little creek below a wall O'ertopp'd with cypresses, dark-green and tall.

Here their conductor tapping at the wicket
 Of a small iron door, 'twas open'd, and He led them onward, first through a low thicket
 Flank'd by large groves, which tower'd on either hand:
 They almost lost their way, and had to pick it—
 For night was closing ere they came to
 land.
 The eunuch made a sign to those on board,
 Who row'd off, leaving them without a word.

XLII

As they were plodding on their winding way
 Through orange bowers, and jasmine,
 and so forth:
 (Of which I might have a good deal to say,
 There being no such profusion in the North
 Of oriental plants, 'et cetera,'
 But that of late your scribblers think it
 worth
 Their while to rear whole hotbeds in their
 works,
 Because one poet travell'd 'mongst the Turks:)

XLIII

As they were threading on their way,
 there came
 Into Don Juan's head a thought, which he Whisper'd to his companion:—'twas the
 same
 Which might have then occur'd to you or me.

'Methinks,'—said he,—'it would be no great shame

If we should strike a stroke to set us free;
Let's knock that old black fellow on the head,
And march away—'twere easier done than said.'

XLIV

'Yes,' said the other, 'and when done, what then?

How get out? how the devil got we in?
And when we once were fairly out, and when

From Saint Bartholomew we have saved our skin,

To-morrow'd see us in some other den,
And worse off than we hitherto have been;
Besides, I'm hungry, and just now would take,

Like Esau, for my birthright a beef-steak.

XLV

'We must be near some place of man's abode;—

For the old negro's confidence in creeping,

With his two captives, by so queer a road,
Shows that he thinks his friends have not been sleeping;

A single cry would bring them all abroad:
'Tis better therefore looking before leaping—

And there, you see, this turn has brought us through,

By Jove, a noble palace!—lighted too.'

XLVI

It was indeed a wide extensive building
Which open'd on their view, and o'er the front

There seem'd to be besprent a deal of gilding

And various hues, as is the Turkish wont,—

A gaudy taste, for they are little skill'd in
The arts of which these lands were once the font:

Each villa on the Bosphorus looks a screen
New painted, or a pretty opera-scene.

XLVII

And nearer as they came, a genial savour
Of certain stews, and roast-meats, and pilaus,

Things which in hungry mortals' eyes find favour,

Made Juan in his harsh intentions pause,
And put himself upon his good behaviour:

His friend, too, adding a new saving clause,

Said, 'In Heaven's name let's get some supper now,

And then I'm with you, if you're for a row.'

XLVIII

Some talk of an appeal unto some passion,
Some to men's feelings, others to their reason;

The last of these was never much the fashion,

For reason thinks all reasoning out of season:

Some speakers whine, and others lay the lash on,

But more or less continue still to tease on,

With arguments according to their 'forte';
But no one ever dreams of being short.—

XLIX

But I digress: of all appeals,—although
I grant the power of pathos, and of gold,

Of beauty, flattery, threats, a shilling,—no
Method's more sure at moments to take hold

Of the best feelings of mankind, which grow
More tender, as we every day behold,

Than that all-softening, overpowering knell,

The tocsin of the soul—the dinner-bell.

L

Turkey contains no bells, and yet men dine;

And Juan and his friend, albeit they heard

No Christian knoll to table, saw no line
Of lackeys usher to the feast prepared,

Yet smelt roast-meat, beheld a huge fire shine,

And cooks in motion with their clean arms bared,

And gazed around them to the left and right,

With the prophetic eye of appetite.

LI

And giving up all notions of resistance,
They follow'd close behind their sable guide,

Who little thought that his own crack'd existence
Was on the point of being set aside:

He motion'd them to stop at some small distance,

And knocking at the gate, 'twas open'd wide,

And a magnificent large hall display'd
The Asian pomp of Ottoman parade.

LII

I won't describe; description is my forte,
But every fool describes in these bright days

His wondrous journey to some foreign court,

And spawns his quarto, and demands your praise—

Death to his publisher, to him 'tis sport;
While Nature, tortured twenty thou sand ways,
Resigns herself with exemplary patience
To guide-books, rhymes, tours, sketches, illustrations.

LIII

Along this hall, and up and down, some, squatted
Upon their hams, were occupied at chess;
Others in monosyllable talk chatted,
And some seem'd much in love with their own dress;
And divers smoked superb pipes, decorated With amber mouths of greater price or
less;
And several strutted, others slept, and some
Prepared for supper with a glass of rum.

LIV

As the black eunuch enter'd with his brace
Of purchased Infidels, some raised their eyes
A moment, without slackening from their
pace;
But those who sate, ne'er stirr'd in any
wise:
One or two stared the captives in the face,
Just as one views a horse to guess his
price;
Some nodded to the negro from their
station,
But no one troubled him with conversa-
tion.

LV

He leads them through the hall, and, without stopping,
On through a farther range of goodly
rooms,
Splendid but silent, save in one, where,
dropping,
A marble fountain echoes through the glooms
Of night, which robe the chamber, or where popping
Some female head most curiously presumes
To thrust its black eyes through the door or lattice,
As wondering what the devil noise that is.

LVI

Some faint lamps gleaming from the lofty
walls
Gave light enough to hint their farther
way,
But not enough to show the imperial halls
In all the flashing of their full array;

Perhaps there's nothing—I'll not say
appals,
But saddens more by night as well as
day,
Than an enormous room without a soul.
To break the lifeless splendour of the whole.

LVII

Two or three seem so little, one seems
nothing:
In deserts, forests, crowds, or by the
shore,
There solitude, we know, has her full growth in The spots which were her realms for-
evermore;
But in a mighty hall or gallery, both in More modern buildings and those built
of yore,
A kind of death comes o'er us all alone,
Seeing what's meant for many with but
one.

LVIII

A neat, snug study on a winter's night,
A book, friend, single lady, or a glass
Of claret, sandwich, and an appetite,
Are things which make an English
evening pass;
Though certainly by no means so grand a
sight
As is a theatre lit up by gas.
I pass my evenings in long galleries solely
And that's the reason I'm so melancholy

LIX

Alas! man makes that great which makes him little:
I grant you in a church 'tis very well:
What speaks of heaven should by no means be brittle,
But strong and lasting, till no tongue
can tell
Their names who rear'd it; but huge houses fit ill—
And huge tombs worse—mankind
since Adam fell:
Methinks the story of the tower of Babe-
l
Might teach them this much better than I'm able.

LX

Babel was Nimrod's hunting-box, and there
A town of gardens, walls, and wealth amazing,
Where Nebuchadonozor, king of men, Reign'd, till one summer's day he took to grazing,
And Daniel tamed the lions in their den
The people's awe and admiration raising
'Twas famous, too, for Thisbe and for Pyramus,
And the calumniated queen Semiramis.—

LXI

That injured Queen, by chroniclers so
coarse,
Has been accused (I doubt not by conspiracy)
Of an improper friendship for her horse (Love, like religion, sometimes runs to heresy):
This monstrous tale had probably its source (For such exaggerations here and there I see)
In writing 'Courser' by mistake for 'Courier';
I wish the case would come before a jury
here.

LXII

But to resume,—should there be (what may
not Be in these days?) some infidels, who don't,
Because they can't, find out the very spot
Of that same Babel, or because they won't (Though Claudius Rich, Esquire, some bricks has got,
And written lately two memoirs upon't)
Believe the Jews, those unbelievers, who Must be believed, though they believe not
you,

LXIII

Yet let them think that Horace has exprest
Shortly and sweetly the masonic folly
Of those, forgetting the great place of rest,
Who give themselves to architecture wholly;
We know where things and men must end
at best:
A moral (like all morals) melancholy,
And 'Et sepulchri immemor struis domos', Shows that we build when we should but entomb us.

LXIV

At last they reach'd a quarter most retired,
Where echo woke as if from a long
slumber;
Though full of all things which could be desired,
One wonder'd what to do with such a number
Of articles which nobody required;
Here wealth had done its utmost to en-
cumber
With furniture an exquisite apartment,
Which puzzled Nature much to know what Art meant.

LXV

It seem'd, however, but to open on A range or suite of further chambers,
which Might lead to heaven knows where; but in this one
The moveables were prodigally rich:

Sofas 'twas half a sin to sit upon,
So costly were they; carpets every stitch
Of workmanship so rare, they made you wish
You could glide o'er them like a golden fish.

LXVI

The black, however, without hardly deign-
ing
A glance at that which wrapt the slaves in wonder,
Trampled what they scarce trod for fear
of staining,
As if the milky way their feet was under
With all its stars; and with a stretch attain-
ing
A certain press or cupboard niched in yonder,
In that remote recess which you may see—
Or if you don't the fault is not in me,—

LXVII

I wish to be perspicuous; and the black,
I say, unlocking the recess, pull'd forth
A quantity of clothes fit for the back
Of any Mussulman, whate'er his worth;
And of variety there was no lack—
And yet, though I have said there was no dearth,—
He chose himself to point out what he
thought
Most proper for the Christians he had bought.

LXVIII

The suit he thought most suitable to each
Was, for the elder and the stouter, first A Candiot cloak, which to the knee might reach,
And trousers not so tight that they would burst,
But such as fit an Asiatic breech;
A shawl, whose folds in Cashmire had been nurst,
Slippers of saffron, dagger rich and handy;
In short, all things which form a Turkish dandy.

LXIX

While he was dressing, Baba, their black
friend,
Hinted the vast advantages which they Might probably obtain both in the end,
If they would but pursue the proper
way
Which Fortune plainly seem'd to recommend;
And then he added, that he needs must
say,
"Twould greatly tend to better their condition,
If they would condescend to circumcision.

LXX

'For his own part, he really should rejoice
To see them true believers, but no less Would leave his proposition to their choice.'

The other, thanking him for this excess
Of goodness, in thus leaving them a voice
In such a trifle, scarcely could express
'Sufficiently' (he said) 'his approbation
Of all the customs of this polish'd nation.

LXXI

'For his own share—he saw but small objection

To so respectable an ancient rite;
And, after swallowing down a slight refection,

For which he own'd a present appetite,
He doubted not a few hours of reflection
Would reconcile him to the business
quite.'

'Will it?' said Juan, sharply: 'Strike me
dead,
But they as soon shall circumcise my head!

LXXII

'Cut off a thousand heads, before——'—

'Now, pray,
Replied the other, 'do not interrupt:
You put me out in what I had to say.

Sir!—as I said, as soon as I have supped,
I shall perpend if your proposal may
Be such as I can properly accept;
Provided always your great goodness still Remits the matter to our own free-will.'

LXXIII

Baba eyed Juan, and said, 'Be so good
As dress yourself——' and pointed out a suit

In which a Princess with great pleasure
would

Array her limbs; but Juan standing mute,
As not being in a masquerading mood,
Gave it a slight kick with his Christian
foot;

And when the old negro told him to 'Get ready,'

Replied, 'Old gentleman, I'm not a lady.'

LXXIV

'What you may be, I neither know nor
care,'

Said Baba; 'but pray do as I desire:
I have no more time nor many words to
spare.'

'At least,' said Juan, 'sure I may inquire
The cause of this odd travesty?'—'For-
bear,'

Said Baba, 'to be curious; 'twill
transpire,
No doubt, in proper place, and time, and
season:

I have no authority to tell the reason.'

LXXV

'Then if I do,' said Juan, 'I'll be——'—
'Hold!'

Rejoin'd the negro, 'pray be not provoking;

This spirit's well, but it may wax too bold,
And you will find us not too fond of joking.'

'What, sir,' said Juan, 'shall it e'er be told That I unsex'd my dress?' But Baba, stroking

The things down, said, 'Incense me, and I
call

Those who will leave you of no sex at all.

LXXVI

'I offer you a handsome suit of clothes:
A woman's, true; but then there is a
cause

Why you should wear them.'—'What,
though my soul loathes
The effeminate garb?'—thus, after a short pause,

Sigh'd Juan, muttering also some slight oaths,

'What the devil shall I do with all this gauze?'

Thus he profanely term'd the finest lace
Which e'er set off a marriage-morning face.

LXXVII

And then he swore; and, sighing, on he slipp'd

A pair of trousers of flesh-colour'd silk;
Next with a virgin zone he was equipp'd,
Which girt a slight chemise as white as milk;

But tugging on his petticoat, he tripp'd,
Which—as we say—or as the Scotch say, whilk,

(The rhyme obliges me to this; sometimes Monarchs are less imperative than rhymes)—

LXXVIII

Whilk, which (or what you please), was owing to

His garment's novelty, and his being;
awkward:

And yet at last he managed to get through:
His toilet, though no doubt a little back-
ward:

The negro Baba help'd a little too,
When some untoward part of raiment stuck hard;

And, wrestling both his arms into a gown,
He paused, and took a survey up and down.

LXXIX

One difficulty still remain'd—his hair
Was hardly long enough; but Baba found:

So many false long tresses all to spare,
That soon his head was most completely
crown'd,

After the manner then in fashion there;
 And this addition with such gems was
 bound
 As suited the ensemble of his toilet, While Baba made him comb his head and oil it.

LXXX

And now being femininely all array'd,
 With some small aid from scissors,
 paint, and tweezers,
 He look'd in almost all respects a maid,
 And Baba smilingly exclaim'd, 'You see, sirs,
 A perfect transformation here display'd;
 And now, then, you must come along with me, sirs,
 That is—the Lady:' clapping his hands
 twice,
 Four blacks were at his elbow in a trice.

LXXXI

'You, sir,' said Baba, nodding to the one,
 'Will please to accompany those gentle-
 men
 To supper; but you, worthy Christian nun,
 Will follow me: no trifling, sir; for
 when
 I say a thing, it must at once be done.
 What fear you? think you this a lion's
 den?
 Why, 'tis a palace; where the truly wise
 Anticipate the Prophet's paradise.

LXXXII

'You fool! I tell you no one means you
 harm.'
 'So much the better,' Juan said, 'for
 them;
 Else they shall feel the weight of this my
 arm,
 Which is not quite so light as you may
 deem.
 I yield thus far; but soon will break the charm,
 If any take me for that which I seem:
 So that I trust for everybody's sake,
 That this disguise may lead to no mistake.'

LXXXIII

'Blockhead! come on, and see,' quoth
 Baba; while Don Juan, turning to his comrade, who Though somewhat grieved, could scarce forbear a smile
 Upon the metamorphosis in view,—
 'Farewell!' they mutually exclaim'd: 'this
 soil Seems fertile in adventures strange and
 new;
 One's turn'd half Mussulman, and one a
 maid,
 By this old black enchanter's unsought
 aid.'

LXXXIV

'Farewell!' said Juan: 'should we meet
 no more,
 I wish you a good appetite.'—'Farewell!'
 Replied the other; 'though it grieves me
 sore:
 When we next meet, we'll have a tale to
 tell:
 We needs must follow when Fate puts from shore.
 Keep your good name; though Eve herself once fell.'
 'Nay,' quoth the maid, 'the Sultan's self shan't carry me,
 Unless his highness promises to marry me.'

LXXXV

And thus they parted, each by separate doors;
 Baba led Juan onward room by room
 Through glittering galleries, and o'er marble floors,
 Till a gigantic portal through the gloom,
 Haughty and huge, along the distance
 lowers;
 And wafted far arose a rich perfume:
 It seem'd as though they came upon a
 shrine,
 For all was vast, still, fragrant, and divine.

LXXXVI

The giant door was broad, and bright,
 and high,
 Of gilded bronze, and carved in curious
 guise;
 Warriors thereon were battling furiously;
 Here stalks the victor, there the vanquish'd lies;
 There captives led in triumph droop the eye,
 And in perspective many a squadron flies:
 It seems the work of times before the line
 Of Rome transplanted fell with Constantine.

LXXXVII

This massy portal stood at the wide close
 Of a huge hall, and on its either side
 Two little dwarfs, the least you could suppose,
 Were sate, like ugly imps, as if allied In mockery to the enormous gate which
 rose
 O'er them in almost pyramidal pride:
 The gate so splendid was in all its features,
 You never thought about those little creatures,

LXXXVIII

Until you nearly trod on them, and then
 You started back in horror to survey
 The wondrous hideousness of those small
 men,
 Whose colour was not black, nor white,
 nor grey,

But an extraneous mixture, which no pen
Can trace, although perhaps the pencil
may;
They were mis-shapen pigmies, deaf and dumb,— Monsters, who cost a no less monstrous sum.

LXXXIX

Their duty was—for they were strong, and though
They look'd so little, did strong things at times—
To ope this door, which they could really do,
The hinges being as smooth as Rogers'
rhymes;
And now and then, with tough strings of
the bow,
As is the custom of those Eastern climes,
To give some rebel Pacha a cravat;
For mutes are generally used for that.

XC

They spoke by signs—that is, not spoke
at all;
And looking like two incubi, they glared
As Baba with his fingers made them fall
To heaving back the portal folds: it scared
Juan a moment, as this pair so small,
With shrinking serpent optics on him
stared;
It was as if their little looks could poison
Or fascinate whome'er they fix'd their eyes
on.

XCI

Before they enter'd, Baba paused to hint
To Juan some slight lessons as his guide:
'If you could just contrive,' he said, 'to stint
That somewhat manly majesty of stride, 'Twould be as well, and—(though there's not much in't),
To swing a little less from side to side,
Which has at times an aspect of the oddest:—
And also could you look a little modest,

XCII

'Twould be convenient; for these mutes have eyes
Like needles, which may pierce those petticoats;
And if they should discover your disguise,
You know how near us the deep Bosphorus floats;
And you and I may chance, ere morning
rise,
To find our way to Marmora without boats,
Stitch'd up in sacks—a mode of navigation
A good deal practised here upon occasion.'

XCIII

With this encouragement, he led the way
Into a room still nobler than the last;
A rich confusion form'd a disarray
In such sort, that the eye along it cast
Could hardly carry anything away, Object on object flash'd so bright and
fast;
A dazzling mass of gems, and gold, and glitter,
Magnificently mingled in a litter.

XCIV

Wealth had done wonders—taste not much; such things
Occur in Orient palaces, and even In the more chaste'n'd domes of Western
kings
(Of which I have also seen some six or seven),
Where I can't say or gold or diamond
flings
Great lustre, there is much to be for-
given;
Groups of bad statues, tables, chairs, and
pictures,
On which I cannot pause to make my strictures.

XCV

In this imperial hall, at distance lay
Under a canopy, and there reclined
Quite in a confidential queenly way,
A lady; Baba stopp'd, and kneeling sign'd
To Juan, who, though not much used to
pray,
Knelt down by instinct, wondering in his mind
What all this meant: while Baba bow'd and bended
His head, until the ceremony ended.

XCVI

The lady rising up with such an air
As Venus rose with from the wave, on
them
Bent like an antelope a Paphian pair
Of eyes, which put out each surrounding gem;
And raising up an arm as moonlight fair,
She sign'd to Baba, who first kiss'd the hem
Of her deep purple robe, and speaking
low,
Pointed to Juan, who remain'd below.

XCVII

Her presence was as lofty as her state;
Her beauty of that overpowering kind,
Whose force description only would
abate:
I'd rather leave it much to your own
mind,

Than lessen it by what I could relate
Of forms and features; it would strike you blind
Could I do justice to the full detail;
So, luckily for both, my phrases fail.

XCVIII

Thus much however I may add,—her years Were ripe, they might make six-and-twenty springs,
But there are forms which Time to touch
forbears,
And turns aside his scythe to vulgar
things:
Such as was Mary's Queen of Scots; true—
tears
And love destroy; and sapping sorrow
wrings
Charms from the charmer, yet some never grow
Ugly; for instance—Ninon de l'Enclos.

XCIX

She spake some words to her attendants,
who Composed a choir of girls, ten or a dozen,
And were all clad alike; like Juan, too,
Who wore their uniform, by Baba
chosen:
They form'd a very nymph-like looking
crew,
Which might have called Diana's chorus 'cousin,'
As far as outward show may correspond;
I won't be bail for anything beyond.

C

They bow'd obeisance and withdrew,
retiring,
But not by the same door through which came in
Baba and Juan, which last stood admiring,
At some small distance, all he saw within This strange saloon, much fitted for inspiring
Marvel and praise; for both or none things win;
And I must say, I ne'er could see the very Great happiness of the 'Nil Admirari.'

CI

'Not to admire is all the art I know (Plain truth, dear Murray, needs few flowers of speech)
To make men happy, or to keep them so'
(So take it in the very words of Creech)—
Thus Horace wrote we all know long ago;
And thus Pope quotes the precept to re-teach
From his translation; but had none
admired,
Would Pope have sung, or Horace been inspired?

CII

Baba, when all the damsels were withdrawn,
Motion'd to Juan to approach, and then
A second time desired him to kneel down,
And kiss the lady's foot; which maxim
when
He heard repeated, Juan with a frown
Drew himself up to his full height again,
And said, 'It grieved him, but he could not stoop
To any shoe, unless it shod the Pope.'

CIII

Baba, indignant at this ill-timed pride,
Made fierce remonstrances, and then a threat
He mutter'd (but the last was given aside)
About a bow-string—quite in vain;
not yet
Would Juan bend, though 'twere to Mahomet's bride:
There's nothing in the world like etiquette
In kingly chambers or imperial halls,
As also at the race and county balls.

CIV

He stood like Atlas, with a world of words
About his ears, and nathless would not
bend;
The blood of all his line's Castilian lords Boil'd in his veins, and rather than descend
To stain his pedigree, a thousand swords
A thousand times of him had made an
end;
At length perceiving the 'foot' could not
stand,
Baba proposed that he should kiss the
hand.

CV

Here was an honourable compromise,
A half-way house of diplomatic rest,
Where they might meet in much more peaceful guise;
And Juan now his willingness exprest
To use all fit and proper courtesies, Adding, that this was commonest and
best,
For through the South, the custom still commands
The gentleman to kiss the lady's hands.

CVI

And he advanced, though with but a bad
grace,
Though on more thorough-bred or fairer fingers
No lips e'er left their transitory trace:
On such as these the lip too fondly lingers,

And for one kiss would fain imprint a
brace,
As you will see, if she you love shall bring hers
In contact; and sometimes even a fair
stranger's
An almost twelvemonth's constancy endangers.

CVII

The lady eyed him o'er and o'er, and bade
Baba retire, which he obey'd in style,
As if well used to the retreating trade;
And taking hints in good part all the
while,
He whisper'd Juan not to be afraid,
And looking on him with a sort of smile,
Took leave, with such a face of satisfaction,
As good men wear who have done a virtuous action.

CVIII

When he was gone, there was a sudden
change:
I know not what might be the lady's
thought,
But o'er her bright brow flash'd a tumult
strange,
And into her clear cheek the blood was
brought,
Blood-red as sunset summer clouds which range
The verge of Heaven; and in her large eyes wrought,
A mixture of sensations might be scann'd,
Of half-voluptuousness and half-command.

CIX

Her form had all the softness of her sex,
Her features all the sweetness of the devil,
When he put on the cherub to perplex
Eve, and paved (God knows how) the road to evil;
The sun himself was scarce more free from specks
Than she from aught at which the eye could cavil;
Yet, somehow, there was something somewhere wanting,
As if she rather order'd than was granting.—

CX

Something imperial, or imperious, threw
A chain o'er all she did; that is, a chain Was thrown as 'twere about the neck of
you,—
And rapture's self will seem almost a pain
With aught which looks like despotism in
view;
Our souls at least are free, and 'tis in
vain

We would against them make the flesh
obey—
The spirit in the end will have its way.

CXI

Her very smile was haughty, though so
sweet;
Her very nod was not an inclination:
There was a self-will even in her small feet,
As though they were quite conscious of her station—
They trod as upon necks; and to complete
Her state (it is the custom of her nation),
A poniard deck'd her girdle, as the sign
She was a sultan's bride (thank Heaven, not mine!)

CXII

'To hear and to obey' had been from birth
The law of all around her; to fulfil
All phantasies which yielded joy or mirth,
Had been her slaves' chief pleasure, as her will;
Her blood was high, her beauty scarce of
earth:
Judge, then, if her caprices e'er stood still;
Had she but been a Christian, I've a notion
We should have found out the 'perpetual motion.'

CXIII

Whate'er she saw and coveted was
brought;
Whate'er she did not see, if she supposed
It might be seen, with diligence was sought,
And when 'twas found straightway the bargain closed:
There was no end unto the things she
bought,
Nor to the trouble which her fancies caused;
Yet even her tyranny had such a grace,
The women pardon'd all except her face.

CXIV

Juan, the latest of her whims, had caught
Her eye in passing on his way to sale;
She order'd him directly to be bought,
And Baba, who had ne'er been known to fail
In any kind of mischief to be wrought,
At all such auctions knew how to
prevail:
She had no prudence, but he had; and this Explains the garb which Juan took amiss.

CXV

His youth and features favour'd the
disguise,
And should you ask how she, a sultan's
bride,
Could risk or compass such strange phantasies,
This I must leave sultanas to decide:

Emperors are only husbands in wives' eyes,
 And kings and consorts oft are mystified,
 As we may ascertain with due precision,
 Some by experience, others by tradition.

CXVI

But to the main point, where we have been tending:—
 She now conceived all difficulties past,
 And deem'd herself extremely condescending
 When, being made her property at last,
 Without more preface, in her blue eyes blending Passion and power, a glance on him she cast,
 And merely saying, 'Christian, canst thou love?'
 Conceived that phrase was quite enough to move.

CXVII

And so it was, in proper time and place;
 But Juan, who had still his mind o'er-flowing
 With Haidée's isle and soft Ionian face,
 Felt the warm blood, which in his face was glowing,
 Rush back upon his heart, which fill'd apace,
 And left his cheeks as pale as snow-drops blowing:
 These words went through his soul like Arab spears,
 So that he spoke not, but burst into tears.

CXVIII

She was a good deal shock'd; not shock'd at tears,
 For women shed and use them at their liking;
 But there is something when man's eye appears
 Wet, still more disagreeable and striking:
 A woman's tear-drop melts, a man's half sears,
 Like molten lead, as if you thrust a pike in His heart to force it out, for (to be shorter)
 To them 'tis a relief, to us a torture.

CXIX

And she would have consoled, but knew not how:
 Having no equals, nothing which had e'er
 Infected her with sympathy till now,
 And never having dreamt what 'twas to bear

Aught of a serious, sorrowing kind, although There might arise some pouting petty care
 To cross her brow, she wonder'd how so near
 Her eyes another's eye could shed a tear.

CXX

But nature teaches more than power can spoil,
 And, when a strong although a strange sensation
 Moves—female hearts are such a genial soil
 For kinder feelings, whatsoe'er their nation,
 They naturally pour the 'wine and oil,'
 Samaritans in every situation;
 And thus Gulbeyaz, though she knew not why,
 Felt an odd glistening moisture in her eye.

CXXI

But tears must stop like all things else; and soon
 Juan, who for an instant had been moved
 To such a sorrow by the intrusive tone
 Of one who dared to ask if 'he had loved,' Call'd back the stoic to his eyes, which shone
 Bright with the very weakness he re-proved;
 And although sensitive to beauty, he Felt most indignant still at not being free.

CXXII

Gulbeyaz, for the first time in her days,
 Was much embarrass'd, never having met
 In all her life with aught save prayers and praise;
 And as she also risk'd her life to get Him whom she meant to tutor in love's ways,
 Into a comfortable tête-à-tête,
 To lose the hour would make her quite a martyr,
 And they had wasted now almost a quarter.

CXXIII

I also would suggest the fitting time,
 To gentlemen in any such like case,
 That is to say—in a meridian clime,
 With us there is more law given to the chase,
 But here a small delay forms a great crime:
 So recollect that the extremest grace
 Is just two minutes for your declaration—
 A moment more would hurt your reputation.

CXXIV

Juan's was good; and might have been still better,

But he had got Haidée into his head:
However strange, he could not yet forget
her,

Which made him seem exceedingly ill-
bred.

Gulbeyaz, who look'd on him as her debtor
For having had him to her palace led,
Began to blush up to the eyes, and then Grow deadly pale, and then blush back
again.

CXXV

At length, in an imperial way, she laid Her hand on his, and bending on him
eyes,

Which needed not an empire to persuade,
Look'd into his for love, where none
replies:

Her brow grew black, but she would not
upbraid,

That being the last thing a proud woman tries;

She rose, and pausing one chaste moment,
threw

Herself upon his breast, and there she grew.

CXXVI

This was an awkward test, as Juan found,
But he was steel'd by sorrow, wrath,
and pride:

With gentle force her white arms he unwound,

And seated her all drooping by his side,
Then rising haughtily he glanced around,

And looking coldly in her face, he cried,
'The prison'd eagle will not pair, nor I Serve a sultana's sensual phantasy.

CXXVII

'Thou ask'st, if I can love? be this the proof

How much I have loved—that I love not thee!

In this vile garb, the distaff, web, and woof,
Were fitter for me: Love is for the free!

I am not dazzled by this splendid roof;
Whate'er thy power, and great it seems
to be,

Heads bow, knees bend, eyes watch
around a throne,

And hands obey—our hearts are still our
own.'

CXXVIII

This was a truth to us extremely trite;
Not so to her, who ne'er had heard such
things:

She deem'd her least command must yield delight,

Earth being only made for queens and
kings.

If hearts lay on the left side or the right
She hardly knew, to such perfection
brings

Legitimacy its born votaries, when Aware of their due royal rights o'er men.

CXXIX

Besides, as has been said, she was so fair
As even in a much humbler lot had
made

A kingdom or confusion anywhere,
And also, as may be presumed, she laid

Some stress on charms, which seldom are,
if e'er,

By their possessors thrown into the
shade:

She thought hers gave a double 'right
divine';

And half of that opinion's also mine.

CXXX

Remember, or (if you can not) imagine, Ye! who have kept your chastity when
young,

While some more desperate dowager has been waging

Love with you, and been in the dog-days stung

By your refusal, recollect her raging!
Or recollect all that was said or sung

On such a subject; then suppose the
face

Of a young downright beauty in this case.

CXXXI

Suppose,—but you already have supposed,

The spouse of Potiphar, the Lady Booby,

Phædra, and all which story has disclosed
Of good examples; pity that so few by Poets and private tutors are exposed,

To educate—ye youth of Europe—you by!

But when you have supposed the few we
know,

You can't suppose Gulbeyaz' angry brow.

CXXXII

A tigress robb'd of young, a lioness,
Or any interesting beast of prey,
Are similes at hand for the distress

Of ladies who cannot have their own
way;

But though my turn will not be served with less,

These don't express one half what I should say:

For what is stealing young ones, few or
many,

To cutting short their hopes of having any?

CXXXIII

The love of offspring's nature's general law,
 From tigresses and cubs to ducks and ducklings;
 There's nothing whets the beak, or arms the claw,
 Like an invasion of their babes and sucklings;
 And all who have seen a human nursery, saw
 How mothers love their children's squalls and chucklings:
 This strong extreme effect (to tire no longer
 Your patience) shows the cause must still be stronger.

CXXXIV

If I said fire flash'd from Gulbeyaz' eyes,
 'Twere nothing—for her eyes flash'd always fire;
 Or said her cheeks assumed the deepest dyes,
 I should but bring disgrace upon the dyer,
 So supernatural was her passion's rise;
 For ne'er till now she knew a check'd desire:
 Even ye who know what a check'd woman is (Enough, God knows!) would much fall short of this.

CXXXV

Her rage was but a minute's, and 'twas well—
 A moment's more had slain her; but the while
 It lasted 'twas like a short glimpse of hell:
 Nought's more sublime than energetic bile,
 Though horrible to see, yet grand to tell,
 Like ocean warring 'gainst a rocky isle;
 And the deep passions flashing through her form
 Made her a beautiful embodied storm.

CXXXVI

A vulgar tempest 'twere to a typhoon
 To match a common fury with her rage,
 And yet she did not want to reach the moon,
 Like moderate Hotspur on the immortal page;
 Her anger pitch'd into a lower tune,
 Perhaps the fault of her soft sex and age—
 Her wish was but to 'kill, kill, kill,' like Lear's,
 And then her thirst of blood was quench'd in tears.

CXXXVII

A storm it raged, and like the storm it pass'd,
 Pass'd without words—in fact she could not speak;
 And then her sex's shame broke in at last,
 A sentiment till then in her but weak,
 But now it flow'd in natural and fast,
 As water through an unexpected leak;
 For she felt humbled—and humiliation
 Is sometimes good for people in her station.

CXXXVIII

It teaches them that they are flesh and blood
 It also gently hints to them that others,
 Although of clay, are yet not quite of mud;
 That urns and pipkins are but fragile brothers,
 And works of the same pottery, bad or good,
 Though not all born of the same sires and mothers;
 It teaches—Heaven knows only what it teaches,
 But sometimes it may mend, and often reaches.

CXXXIX

Her first thought was to cut off Juan's head;
 Her second, to cut only his—acquaintance;
 Her third, to ask him where he had been bred;
 Her fourth, to rally him into repentance;
 Her fifth, to call her maids and go to bed;
 Her sixth, to stab herself; her seventh, to sentence
 The lash to Baba:—but her grand resource
 Was to sit down again, and cry of course.

CXL

She thought to stab herself, but then she had
 The dagger close at hand, which made it awkward;
 For Eastern stays are little made to pad,
 So that a poniard pierces if 'tis stuck hard:
 She thought of killing Juan—but, poor lad!
 Though he deserved it well for being so backward,
 The cutting off his head was not the art
 Most likely to attain her aim—his heart.

CXLI

Juan was moved: he had made up his mind
 To be impaled, or quarter'd as a dish
 For dogs, or to be slain with pangs refined,
 Or thrown to lions, or made baits for fish,

And thus heroically stood resign'd,
 Rather than sin—except to his own
 wish:
 But all his great preparatives for dying Dissolved like snow before a woman crying.

CXLII

As through his palms Bob Acres' valour
 oozed,
 So Juan's virtue ebb'd, I know not how;
 And first he wonder'd why he had refused;
 And then, if matters could be made up
 now;
 And next his savage virtue he accused,
 Just as a friar may accuse his vow,
 Or as a dame repents her of her oath,
 Which mostly ends in some small breach of both.

CXLIII

So he began to stammer some excuses;
 But words are not enough in such a
 matter,
 Although you borrow'd all that e'er the muses
 Have sung, or even a Dandy's dandiest chatter,
 Or all the figures Castlereagh abuses;
 Just as a languid smile began to flatter
 His peace was making, but before he ventured
 Further, old Baba rather briskly enter'd.

CXLIV

'Bride of the Sun! and Sister of the Moon!'
 ('Twas thus he spake,) 'and Empress of the Earth!
 Whose frown would put the spheres all out of tune,
 Whose smile makes all the planets
 dance with mirth,
 Your slave brings tidings—he hopes not too soon—
 Which your sublime attention may be
 worth:
 The Sun himself has sent me like a ray,
 To hint that he is coming up this way.'

CXLV

'Is it,' exclaim'd Gulbeyaz, 'as you say?
 I wish to heaven he would not shine till morning!
 But bid my women form the Milky-way.
 Hence, my old comet! give the stars due warning—
 And, Christian! mingle with them as you
 may,
 And as you'd have me pardon your past scorning'—
 Here they were interrupted by a humming Sound, and then by a cry, 'The Sultan's coming!'

CXLVI

First came her damsels, a decorous file,
 And then his Highness' eunuchs, black and white;
 The train might reach a quarter of a mile:
 His majesty was always so polite
 As to announce his visits a long while Before he came, especially at night;
 For being the last wife of the Emperor,
 She was of course the favourite of the four.

CXLVII

His Highness was a man of solemn port, Shawl'd to the nose, and bearded to the
 eyes,
 Snatch'd from a prison to preside at court,
 His lately bowstrung brother caused his rise;
 He was as good a sovereign of the sort
 As any mentioned in the histories
 Of Cantemir, or Knöllës, where few shine
 Save Solymán, the glory of their line.

CXLVIII

He went to mosque in state, and said his prayers
 With more than 'Oriental scrupulosity';
 He left to his vizier all state affairs,
 And show'd but little royal curiosity:
 I know not if he had domestic cares—
 No process proved connubial animosity;
 Four wives and twice five hundred maids,
 unseen,
 Were ruled as calmly as a Christian queen.

CXLIX

If now and then there happen'd a slight slip,
 Little was heard of criminal or crime;
 The story scarcely pass'd a single lip—
 The sack and sea had settled all in time,
 From which the secret nobody could rip:
 The public knew no more than does this
 rhyme;
 No scandals made the daily press a curse—
 Morals were better, and the fish no worse.

CL

He saw with his own eyes the moon was
 round,
 Was also certain that the earth was square,
 Because he had journey'd fifty miles, and
 found
 No sign that it was circular anywhere:
 His empire also was without a bound:
 'Tis true, a little troubled here and there,
 By rebel pachas, and encroaching gíajours,
 But then they never came to 'the Seven Towers';

CLI

Except in shape of envoys, who were sent
 To lodge there when a war broke out, according
 To the true law of nations, which ne'er
 meant
 Those scoundrels, who have never had a sword in
 Their dirty diplomatic hands, to vent Their spleen in making strife, and safely wording
 Their lies, yclept despatches, without risk
 or
 The singeing of a single inky whisker.

CLII

He had fifty daughters and four dozen sons,
 Of whom all such as came of age were
 stow'd,
 The former in a palace, where like nuns
 They lived till some Bashaw was sent
 abroad,
 When she, whose turn it was, was wed at
 once,
 Sometimes at six years old—though this seems odd,
 'Tis true; the reason is, that the Bashaw
 Must make a present to his sire-in-law.

CLIII

His sons were kept in prison, till they grew
 Of years to fill a bowstring or the throne,
 One or the other, but which of the two
 Could yet be known unto the fates alone;
 Meantime the education they went
 through
 Was princely, as the proofs have always
 shown;
 So that the heir-apparent still was found No less deserving to be hang'd than crown'd.

CLIV

His Majesty saluted his fourth spouse
 With all the ceremonies of his rank, Who clear'd her sparkling eyes and smooth'd her brows,
 As suits a matron who has play'd a
 prank;
 These must seem doubly mindful of their vows,
 To save the credit of their breaking bank:
 To no men are such cordial greetings given
 As those whose wives have made them fit for heaven.

His Highness cast around his great black
 eyes,
 And looking, as he always look'd, perceived
 Juan amongst the damsels in disguise,
 At which he seem'd no whit surprised nor grieved,

But just remark'd with air sedate and wise,
 While still a fluttering sigh Gulbeyaz heaved,
 'I see you've bought another girl; 'tis pity
 That a mere Christian should be half so pretty.'

CLVI

This compliment, which drew all eyes
 upon
 The new-bought virgin, made her blush and shake.
 Her comrades, also, thought themselves
 undone:
 Oh! Mahomet! that his Majesty should take Such notice of a giaour, while scarce to
 one
 Of them his lips imperial ever spake!
 There was a general whisper, toss, and wriggle,
 But etiquette forbade them all to giggle.

CLVII

The Turks do well to shut—at least, sometimes—
 The women up—because, in sad reality,
 Their chastity in these unhappy climes
 Is not a thing of that astringent quality
 Which in the north prevents precocious
 crimes,
 And makes our snow less pure than our morality;
 The sun, which yearly melts the polar ice,
 Has quite the contrary effect on vice.

CLVIII

Thus in the East they are extremely strict,
 And wedlock and a padlock mean the
 same:
 Excepting only when the former's pick'd
 It ne'er can be replaced in proper frame;
 Spoilt, as a pipe of claret is when prick'd:
 But then their own polygamy's to
 blame;
 Why don't they knead two virtuous souls
 for life
 Into that moral centaur, man and wife?

CLIX

Thus far our chronicle; and now we pause,
 Though not for want of matter; but 'tis
 time,
 According to the ancient epic laws,
 To slacken sail, and anchor with our
 rhyme.
 Let this fifth canto meet with due applause,
 The sixth shall have a touch of the sub-
 lime;
 Meanwhile, as Homer sometimes sleeps,
 perhaps You'll pardon to my Muse a few short naps.

PREFACE TO CANTOS VI, VII, AND VIII

THE details of the siege of Ismail in two of the following cantos (i.e. the seventh and eighth) are taken from a French Work, entitled 'Histoire de la Nouvelle Russie.' Some of the incidents attributed to Don Juan really occurred, particularly the circumstance of his saving the infant, which was the actual case of the late Duc de Richelieu, then a young volunteer in the Russian service, and afterward the founder and benefactor of Odessa, where his name and memory can never cease to be regarded with reverence.

In the course of these cantos, a stanza or two will be found relative to the late Marquis of Londonderry, but written some time before his decease. Had that person's oligarchy died with him, they would have been suppressed; as it is, I am aware of nothing in the manner of his death or of his life to prevent the free expression of the opinions of all whom his whole existence was consumed in endeavouring to enslave. That he was an amiable man in private life, may or may not be true: but with this the public have nothing to do; and as to lamenting his death, it will be time enough when Ireland has ceased to mourn for his birth. As a minister, I, for one of millions, looked upon him as the most despotic in intention, and the weakest in intellect, that ever tyrannised over a country. It is the first time indeed since the Normans that England has been insulted by a minister (at least) who could not speak English, and that parliament permitted itself to be dictated to in the language of Mrs. Malaprop.

Of the manner of his death little need be said, except that if a poor radical, such as Waddington or Watson, had cut his throat, he would have been buried in a cross-road, with the usual appurtenances of the stake and mallet. But the minister was an elegant lunatic—a sentimental suicide—he merely cut the 'carotid artery,' (blessings on their learning!) and lo! the pageant, and the Abbey! and 'the syllables of dolour yelled forth' by the newspapers—and the harangue of the Coroner in a eulogy over the bleeding body of the deceased—(an Anthony worthy of such a Cæsar)—and the nauseous and atrocious cant of a degraded crew of conspirators against all that is sincere and honourable. In his death he was necessarily one of two things by the *law—a felon or a madman—and in either case no great subject for panegyric. In his life he was—what all the world knows, and half of it will feel for years to come, unless his death prove a 'moral lesson' to the surviving† Sejani of Europe. It may at least serve as some consolation to the nations, that their oppressors are not happy, and in some instances judge so justly of their own actions as to anticipate the sentence of mankind.—Let us hear no more of this man; and let Ireland remove the ashes of her Grattan from the sanctuary of Westminster. Shall the patriot of humanity repose by the Werther of politics!!!

* I say by the law of the land—the laws of humanity judge more gently; but as the legitimates have always the law in their mouths, let them here make the most of it.

† From this number must be excepted Canning. Canning is a genius, almost a universal one, an orator, a wit, a poet, a statesman; and no man of talent can long pursue the path of his late predecessor, Lord C. If ever man saved his country, Canning can; but will he? I, for one, hope so.

With regard to the objections which have been made on another score to the already published cantos of this poem, I shall content myself with two quotations from Voltaire:—'La pudeur s'est enfuite des cœurs, et s'est réfugiée sur les lèvres,' 'Plus les mœurs sont dépravées, plus les expressions deviennent mesurées; on croit regagner en langage ce qu'on a perdu en vertu.'

This is the real fact, as applicable to the degraded and hypocritical mass which leavens the present English generation, and is the only answer they deserve. The hackneyed and lavished title of Blasphemer—which, with Radical, Liberal, Jacobin, Reformer, &c., are the changes which the hirelings are daily ringing in the ears of those who will listen—should be welcome to all who recollect on whom it was originally bestowed. Socrates and Jesus Christ were put to death publicly as blasphemers, and so have been and may be many who dare to oppose the most notorious abuses of the name of God and the mind of man. But persecution is not refutation, nor even triumph: the 'wretched infidel,' as he is called, is probably happier in his prison than the proudest of his assailants. With his opinions I have nothing to do—they may be right or wrong—but he has suffered for them, and that very suffering for conscience' sake will make more proselytes to deism than the example of heterodox prelates to Christianity, suicide statesmen to oppression, or over-pensioned homicides to the impious alliance which insults the world with the name of 'Holy'! I have no wish to trample on the dishonoured or the dead; but it would be well if the adherents to the classes from whence those persons sprung should abate a little of the cant which is the crying sin of this double-dealing and false-speaking time of selfish spoilers, and—but enough for the present.

PISA, July, 1822.

CANTO THE SIXTH

I

'THERE is a tide in the affairs of men,
Which, taken at the flood,—you know
the rest,
And most of us have found it now and
then:
At least we think so, though but few
have guess'd
The moment, till too late to come again.
But no doubt everything is for the best—
Of which the surest sign is in the end:
When things are at the worst they sometimes mend.

II

There is a tide in the affairs of women,
Which, taken at the flood, leads—God knows where:
Those navigators must be able seamen
Whose charts lay down its current to a
hair,
Not all the reveries of Jacob Behmen
With its strange whirls and eddies can compare:
Men with their heads reflect on this and
that—
But women with their hearts on heaven knows what!

III

And yet a headlong, headstrong, downright she,
Young, beautiful, and daring—who would risk
A throne, the world, the universe, to be Beloved in her own way, and rather whisk
The stars from out the sky, than not be
free
As are the billows when the breeze is brisk—Though such a she's a devil (if there be
one),
Yet she would make full many a Manichean.

IV

Thrones, worlds, et cetera, are so oft upset
By commonest ambition, that when
passion
O'erthrows the same, we readily forget,
Or at the least forgive, the loving rash
one.
If Anthony be well remember'd yet,
'Tis not his conquests keep his name in fashion,
But Actium, lost for Cleopatra's eyes,
Outbalances all Cæsar's victories.

He died at fifty for a queen of forty;
I wish their years had been fifteen and
twenty,
For then wealth, kingdoms, worlds are but a sport—I Remember when, though I had no great plenty
Of worlds to lose, yet still, to pay my court, I Gave what I had—a heart; as the world went, I Gave what was worth a world; for worlds could never Restore me those pure feelings, gone for ever.

VI

'Twas the boy's 'mite,' and, like the 'widow's,' may Perhaps be weigh'd hereafter, if not
now;
But whether such things do or do not weigh,
All who have loved, or love, will still allow Life has thought like it. God is love, they
say,
And Love's a god, or was before the
brow
Of earth was wrinkled by the sins and
tears
Of—but Chronology best knows the
years.

VII

We left our hero and third heroine in A kind of state more awkward than uncommon,
For gentlemen must sometimes risk their skin
For that sad tempter, a forbidden
woman:
Sultans too much abhor this sort of sin,
And don't agree at all with the wise
Roman,
Heroic, stoic Cato, the sententious,
Who lent his lady to his friend Hortensius.

VIII

I know Gulbeyaz was extremely wrong;
I own it, I deplore it, I condemn it;
But I detest all fiction even in song,
And so must tell the truth, howe'er you blame it.
Her reason being weak, her passions
strong,
She thought that her lord's heart (even could she claim it)
Was scarce enough; for he had fifty-nine Years, and a fifteen-hundredth concubine.

IX

I am not, like Cassio, 'an arithmetician,'
But by the 'bookish theoretic' it appears,
If 'tis summ'd up with feminine precision,
That, adding to the account his Highness' years,
The fair Sultana erred from inanition;
For, were the Sultan just to all his dears,
She could but claim the fifteen-hundredth
part
Of what should be monopoly—the heart.

X

It is observed that ladies are litigious
Upon all legal objects of possession,
And not the least so when they are religious,
Which doubles what they think of the transgression:
With suits and prosecutions they besiege
us,
As the tribunals show through many a
session,
When they suspect that any one goes shares
In that to which the law makes them sole heirs.

XI

Now, if this holds good in a Christian land,
The heathen also, though with lesser latitude,
Are apt to carry things with a high hand,
And take, what kings call 'an imposing attitude';

And for their rights connubial make a stand,
 When their liege husbands treat them with ingratitude;
 And as four wives must have quadruple claims,
 The Tigris hath its jealousies like Thames.

XII

Gulbeyaz was the fourth, and (as I said)
 The favourite; but what's favour amongst four?

Polygamy may well be held in dread,
 Not only as a sin, but as a bore:
 Most wise men with one moderate woman wed,

Will scarcely find philosophy for more;
 And all (except Mahometans) forbear
 To make the nuptial couch a 'Bed of Ware.'

XIII

His Highness, the sublimest of mankind,—

So styled according to the usual forms
 Of every monarch, till they are consign'd
 To those sad hungry Jacobins the worms,
 Who on the very loftiest kings have dined,—

His Highness gazed upon Gulbeyaz' charms,
 Expecting all the welcome of a lover
 (A 'Highland welcome' all the wide world over).

XIV

Now here we should distinguish; for how'er

Kisses, sweet words, embraces, and all that,
 May look like what is—neither here nor there,

They are put on as easily as a hat,
 Or rather bonnet, which the fair sex wear,
 Trimm'd either heads or hearts to decorate,
 Which form an ornament, but no more part

Of heads, than their caresses of the heart.

XV

A slight blush, a soft tremor, a calm kind
 Of gentle feminine delight, and shown
 More in the eyelids than the eyes, resign'd
 Rather to hide what pleases most unknown,

Are the best tokens (to a modest mind)
 Of love, when seated on his loveliest throne,

A sincere woman's breast,—for over-warm
 Or over-cold annihilates the charm.

XVI

For over-warmth, if false, is worse than truth;

If true, 'tis no great lease of its own fire;
 For no one, save in very early youth,
 Would like (I think) to trust all to desire,
 Which is but a precarious bond, in sooth,
 And apt to be transferr'd to the first buyer

At a sad discount: while your over-chilly
 Women, on t'other hand, seem somewhat silly.

XVII

That is, we cannot pardon their bad taste,
 For so it seems to lovers swift or slow,
 Who fain would have a mutual flame confess'd,

And see a sentimental passion glow,
 Even were St. Francis' paramour their guest,
 In his monastic concubine of snow;—
 In short, the maxim for the amorous tribe is Horatian, 'Medio tu tutissimus ibis.'

XVIII

The 'tu' 's too much,—but let it stand,— the verse

Requires it, that's to say, the English rhyme,

And not the pink of old hexameters;
 But, after all, there's neither tune nor time

In the last line, which cannot well be worse,
 And was thrust in to close the octave's chime:

I own no prosody can ever rate it
 As a rule, but truth may, if you translate it.

XIX

If fair Gulbeyaz overdid her part,
 I know not—it succeeded, and success
 Is much in most things, not less in the heart

Than other articles of female dress.
 Self-love in man, too, beats all female art;
 They lie, we lie, all lie, but love no less:
 And no one virtue yet, except starvation,
 Could stop that worst of vices—propagation.

XX

We leave this royal couple to repose:

A bed is not a throne, and they may sleep,

Whate'er their dreams be, if of joys or woes:

Yet disappointed joys are woes as deep
 As any man's clay mixture undergoes.

Our least of sorrows are such as we weep;

'Tis the vile daily drop on drop which wears

The soul out (like the stone) with petty cares.

XXI

A scolding wife, a sullen son, a bill
 To pay, unpaid, protested or discounted
 At a per-centage; a child cross, dog ill,
 A favourite horse fallen lame just as he's mounted,
 A bad old woman making a worse will,
 Which leaves you minus of the cash you counted
 As certain;—these are paltry things, and
 yet
 I've rarely seen the man they did not fret.

XXII

I'm a philosopher; confound them all!
 Bills, beasts, and men, and—no! not
 womankind!
 With one good hearty curse I vent my gall,
 And then my stoicism leaves nought
 behind
 Which it can either pain or evil call,
 And I can give my whole soul up to
 mind;
 Though what is soul, or mind, their birth or growth,
 Is more than I know—the deuce take them both!

XXIII

So now all things are d—n'd one feels at
 ease,
 As after reading Athanasius' curse,
 Which doth your true believer so much
 please:
 I doubt if any now could make it worse
 O'er his worst enemy when at his knees,
 'Tis so sententious, positive, and terse,
 And decorates the Book of Common
 Prayer,
 As doth a rainbow the just clearing air.

XXIV

Gulbeyaz and her lord were sleeping, or
 At least one of them!—Oh, the heavy
 night,
 When wicked wives, who love some bachelor,
 Lie down in dudgeon to sigh for the
 light
 Of the grey morning, and look vainly for Its twinkle through the lattice dusky
 quite—
 To toss, to tumble, doze, revive, and quake Lest their too lawful bed-fellow should wake!

XXV

These are beneath the canopy of heaven,
 Also beneath the canopy of beds Four-posted and silk-curtain'd, which are
 given
 For rich men and their brides to lay their heads

Upon, in sheets white as what bards call
 'driven Snow.' Well! 'tis all hap-hazard when one weds.
 Gulbeyaz was an empress, but had been Perhaps as wretched if a peasant's quean.

XXVI

Don Juan in his feminine disguise,
 With all the damsels in their long array,
 Had bow'd themselves before th' imperial
 eyes,
 And at the usual signal ta'en their way Back to their chambers, those long galleries
 In the seraglio, where the ladies lay Their delicate limbs; a thousand bosoms
 there
 Beating for love, as the caged bird's for air.

XXVII

I love the sex, and sometimes would reverse
 The tyrant's wish, 'that mankind only
 had
 One neck, which he with one fell stroke might pierce.'
 My wish is quite as wide, but not so bad,
 And much more tender on the whole than
 fierce;
 It being (not now, but only while a lad)
 That womankind had but one rosy
 mouth,
 To kiss them all at once from North to South.

XXVIII

Oh, enviable Briareus! with thy hands
 And heads, if thou hadst all things multiplied
 In such proportion!—But my Muse withstands
 The giant thought of being a Titan's
 bride,
 Or travelling in Patagonian lands;
 So let us back to Lilliput, and guide
 Our hero through the labyrinth of love
 In which we left him several lines above.

XXIX

He went forth with the lovely Odalises,
 At the given signal join'd to their array:
 And though he certainly ran many risks,
 Yet he could not at times keep, by the
 way,
 (Although the consequences of such frisks
 Are worse than the worst damages men
 pay
 In moral England, where the thing's a tax.)
 From ogling all their charms from breasts to backs.

XXX

Still he forgot not his disguise:—along
 The galleries from room to room they walk'd,
 A virgin-like and edifying throng,
 By eunuchs flank'd; while at their head
 there stalk'd
 A dame who kept up discipline among The female ranks, so that none stirr'd or talk'd,
 Without her sanction on their she-parades:
 Her title was 'the Mother of the Maids.'

XXXI

Whether she was a 'mother,' I know not,
 Or whether they were 'maids' who call'd her mother;
 But this is her seraglio title, got
 I know not how, but good as any other;
 So Cantemir can tell you, or De Tott:
 Her office was to keep aloof or smother
 All bad propensities in fifteen hundred Young women, and correct them when they blunder'd.

XXXII

A goodly sinecure, no doubt! but made
 More easy by the absence of all men—
 Except his majesty,—who, with her aid,
 And guards, and bolts, and walls, and now and then,
 A slight example, just to cast a shade
 Along the rest, contrived to keep this
 den
 Of beauties cool as an Italian convent, Where all the passions have, alas! but one vent.

XXXIII

And what is that? Devotion, doubtless—
 how Could you ask such a question?—but
 we will Continue. As I said, this goodly row
 Of ladies of all countries at the will
 Of one good man, with stately march and
 slow,
 Like water-lilies floating down a rill—
 Or rather lake—for rills do not run
slowly,— Paced on most maiden-like and melancholy.

XXXIV

But when they reach'd their own apartments, there,
 Like birds, or boys, or bedlamites
 broke loose,
 Waves at spring-tide, or women any-
 where
 When freed from bonds (which are of no great use

After all), or like Irish at a fair,
 Their guards being gone, and as it were a truce
 Establish'd between them and bondage,
 they Began to sing, dance, chatter, smile, and
 play.

XXXV

Their talk, of course, ran most on the new comer;
 Her shape, her hair, her air, her every-
 thing:
 Some thought her dress did not so much become her,
 Or wonder'd at her ears without a ring;
 Some said her years were getting nigh
 their summer,
 Others contended they were but in
 spring;
 Some thought her rather masculine in
 height,
 While others wish'd that she had been so quite.

XXXVI

But no one doubted on the whole, that she Was what her dress bespoke, a damsel
 fair,
 And fresh, and 'beautiful exceedingly,'
 Who with the brightest Georgians might compare:
 They wonder'd how Gulbeyaz, too, could
 be
 So silly as to buy slaves who might share
 (If that his Highness wearied of his bride)
 Her throne and power, and everything beside.

XXXVII

But what was strangest in this virgin crew,
 Although her beauty was enough to vex,
 After the first investigating view,
 They all found out as few, or fewer,
 specks
 In the fair form of their companion new.
 Than is the custom of the gentle sex,
 When they survey, with Christian eyes on Heathen,
 In a new face 'the ugliest creature breathing.'

XXXVIII

And yet they had their little jealousies,
 Like all the rest; but upon this occasion, Whether there are such things as sympathies
 Without our knowledge or our approbation,
 Although they could not see through his
 disguise,
 All felt a soft kind of concatenation,
 Like magnetism, or devilism, or what You please—we will not quarrel about
 that:

XXXIX

But certain 'tis they all felt for their new Companion something newer still, as
'twere
A sentimental friendship through and
through,
Extremely pure, which made them all concur
In wishing her their sister, save a few Who wish'd they had a brother just like
her,
Whom, if they were at home in sweet Circassia,
They would prefer to Padisha or Pacha.

XL

Of those who had most genius for this sort
Of sentimental friendship, there were
three,
Lolah, Katinka, and Dudù; in short (To save description), fair as fair can be
Were they, according to the best report,
Though differing in stature and degree,
And clime and time, and country and complexion;
They all alike admired their new connexion.

XLI

Lolah was dusk as India and as warm;
Katinka was a Georgian, white and red,
With great blue eyes, a lovely hand and
arm,
And feet so small they scarce seem'd
made to tread,
But rather skim the earth; while Dudù's
form
Look'd more adapted to be put to bed,
Being somewhat large, and languishing,
and lazy,
Yet of a beauty that would drive you crazy.

XLII

A kind of sleepy Venus seem'd Dudù, Yet very fit to 'murder sleep' in those Who gazed upon her cheek's transcendent hue,
Her Attic forehead, and her Phidian
nose:
Few angles were there in her form, 'tis true,
Thinner she might have been, and yet scarce lose:
Yet, after all, 'twould puzzle to say where
It would not spoil some separate charm to pare.

XLIII

She was not violently lively, but Stole on your spirit like a May-day
breaking;
Her eyes were not too sparkling, yet, halfshut,
They put beholders in a tender taking;

She look'd (this simile's quite new) just cut
From marble, like Pygmalion's statue
waking,
The mortal and the marble still at strife,
And timidly expanding into life.

XLIV

Lolah demanded the new damsel's
name—
'Juanna,'—Well, a pretty name enough.
Katinka ask'd her also whence she came—
'From Spain.'—'But where is Spain?'—'Don't ask such stuff, Nor show your Georgian ignorance—for
shame!'
Said Lolah, with an accent rather rough,
To poor Katinka: 'Spain's an island near Morocco, betwixt Egypt and Tangier.'

XLV

Dudù said nothing, but sat down beside Juanna, playing with her veil or hair;
And looking at her stedfastly, she sigh'd,
As if she pitied her for being there,
A pretty stranger, without friend or guide,
And all abash'd, too, at the general stare
Which welcomes hapless strangers in all
places,
With kind remarks upon their mien and faces.

XLVI

But here the Mother of the Maids drew
near,
With 'Ladies, it is time to go to rest:
I'm puzzled what to do with you, my
dear,'
She added to Juanna, their new guest:
'Your coming has been unexpected here,
And every couch is occupied; you had
best
Partake of mine; but by to-morrow early
We will have all things settled for you fairly.'

XLVII

Here Lolah interposed—'Mamma, you
know
You don't sleep soundly, and I cannot
bear
That anybody should disturb you so;
I'll take Juanna; we're a slenderer pair Than you would make the half of;—don't say no;
And I of your young charge will take due
care.'
But here Katinka interfered, and said,
'She also had compassion and a bed.'

XLVIII

'Besides, I hate to sleep alone,' quoth she.
The matron frown'd: 'Why so?'—
'For fear of ghosts,' Replied Katinka; 'I am sure I see
A phantom upon each of the four posts;

And then I have the worst dreams that can be,
Of Guebres, Giaours, and Ginns, and Gouls in hosts.'

The dame replied, 'Between your dreams
and you,
I fear Juanna's dreams would be but few.

XLIX

'You, Lolah, must continue still to lie Alone, for reasons which don't matter;
you

The same, Katinka, until by and by:
And I shall place Juanna with Dudù,
Who's quiet, inoffensive, silent, shy,
And will not toss and chatter the night
through.

What say you, child?'—Dudù said nothing, as

Her talents were of the more silent class;

L

But she rose up, and kiss'd the matron's
brow

Between the eyes, and Lolah on both
cheeks,

Katinka too; and with a gentle bow (Curt'sies are neither used by Turks nor Greeks)

She took Juanna by the hand to show Their place of rest, and left to both their piques,

The others pouting at the matron's preference

Of Dudù, though they held their tongues from deference.

LI

It was a spacious chamber (Oda is The Turkish title), and ranged round the wall

Were couches, toilets—and much more than this

I might describe, as I have seen it all,
But it suffices—little was amiss;

'Twas on the whole a nobly furnish'd
hall,

With all things ladies want, save one or
two,

And even those were nearer than they knew.

LII

Dudù, as has been said, was a sweet creature,

Not very dashing, but extremely winning,

With the most regulated charms of feature,
Which painters cannot catch like faces
sinning

Against proportion—the wild strokes of
nature

Which they hit off at once in the beginning,

Full of expression, right or wrong, that
strike,

And pleasing, or displeasing, still are like.

LIII

But she was a soft landscape of mild earth,
Where all was harmony, and calm, and
quiet,

Luxuriant, budding; cheerful without
mirth,

Which, if not happiness, is much more nigh it

Than are your mighty passions and so
forth,

Which some call 'the sublime': I wish they'd try it:

I've seen your stormy seas and stormy
women,

And pity lovers rather more than seamen.

LIV

But she was pensive more than melancholy,

And serious more than pensive, and
serene,

It may be, more than either—not unholy
Her thoughts, at least till now, appear to have been.

The strangest thing was, beauteous, she was wholly

Unconscious, albeit turn'd of quick seventeen,

That she was fair, or dark, or short, or
tall;

She never thought about herself at all.

LV

And therefore was she kind and gentle as The Age of Gold (when gold was yet
unknown,

By which its nomenclature came to pass;
Thus most appropriately has been
shown

'Lucus à non lucendo,' not what was,
But what was not; a sort of style that's
grown

Extremely common in this age, whose metal

The devil may decompose, but never settle:

LVI

I think it may be of 'Corinthian Brass,'
Which was a mixture of all metals, but

The brazen uppermost). Kind reader!
pass

This long parenthesis: I could not shut
it sooner for the soul of me, and class

My faults even with your own! which meaneth, Put

A kind construction upon them and me:
But that you won't—then don't—I am not less free.

LVII

'Tis time we should return to plain
 narration,
 And thus my narrative proceeds:—
 Dudù,
 With every kindness short of ostentation, Show'd Juan, or Juanna, through and
 through
 This labyrinth of females, and each
 station
 Described—what's strange—in words
 extremely few:
 I have but one simile, and that's a blunder,
 For wordless woman, which is silent
 thunder.

LVIII

And next she gave her (I say her, because
 The gender still was epicene, at least
 In outward show, which is a saving clause)
 An outline of the customs of the East,
 With all their chaste integrity of laws,
 By which the more a harem is increased,
 The stricter doubtless grow the vestal
 duties
 Of any supernumerary beauties.

LIX

And then she gave Juanna a chaste kiss:
 Dudù was fond of kissing—which I'm
 sure
 That nobody can ever take amiss,
 Because 'tis pleasant, so that it be pure,
 And between females means no more than
 this—
 That they have nothing better near, or newer.
 'Kiss' rhymes to 'bliss' in fact as well as
 verse—
 I wish it never led to something worse.

LX

In perfect innocence she then unmade
 Her toilet, which cost little, for she
 was
 A child of Nature carelessly array'd:
 If fond of a chance ogle at her glass,
 'Twas like the fawn, which, in the lake
 display'd,
 Beholds her own shy, shadowy image
 pass,
 When first she starts, and then returns to
 peep,
 Admiring this new native of the deep.

LXI

And one by one her articles of dress
 Were laid aside; but not before she offer'd
 Her aid to fair Juanna, whose excess
 Of modesty declined the assistance proffer'd:

Which pass'd well off—as she could do
 no less;
 Though by this politesse she rather suffer'd,
 Pricking her fingers with those cursed pins,
 Which surely were invented for our sins,—

LXII

Making a woman like a porcupine,
 Not to be rashly touch'd. But still more
 dread,
 Oh, ye! whose fate it is, as once 'twas
 mine,
 In early youth, to turn a lady's maid;—
 I did my very boyish best to shine
 In tricking her out for a masquerade:
 The pins were placed sufficiently, but not Stuck all exactly in the proper spot.

LXIII

But these are foolish things to all the wise,
 And I love wisdom more than she loves
 me;
 My tendency is to philosophise
 On most things, from a tyrant to a tree;
 But still the spouseless virgin Knowledge
 flies.
 What are we? and whence came we?
 what shall be
 Our ultimate existence? what's our
 present?
 Are questions answerless, and yet incessant.

LXIV

There was deep silence in the chamber:
 dim
 And distant from each other burn'd the lights,
 And slumber hover'd o'er each lovely limb
 Of the fair occupants: if there be sprites,
 They should have walk'd there in their sprightliest trim,
 By way of change from their sepulchral sites,
 And shown themselves as ghosts of better
 taste
 Than haunting some old ruin or wild waste.

LXV

Many and beautiful lay those around,
 Like flowers of different hue, and clime,
 and root,
 In some exotic garden sometimes found,
 With cost, and care, and warmth,
 induced to shoot.
 One with her auburn tresses lightly bound,
 And fair brows gently drooping, as the fruit
 Nods from the tree, was slumbering with soft breath,
 And lips apart, which show'd the pearls
 beneath.

LXVI

One with her flush'd cheek laid on her white arm,
And raven ringlets gather'd in dark
crowd
Above her brow, lay dreaming soft and
warm;
And smiling through her dream, as through a cloud
The moon breaks, half unveil'd each further charm,
As, slightly stirring in her snowys shroud,
Her beauties seized the unconscious hour of night
All bashfully to struggle into light.

LXVII

This is no bull, although it sounds so; for 'Twas night, but there were lamps, as hath been said.
A third's all pallid aspect offer'd more
The traits of sleeping sorrow, and betray'd
Through the heaved breast the dream of some far shore
Beloved and deplored; while slowly
stray'd
(As night-dew, on a cypress glittering, tinges
The black bough) tear-drops through her eyes' dark fringes.

LXVIII

A fourth as marble, statue-like and still,
Lay in a breathless, hush'd, and stony
sleep;
White, cold, and pure, as looks a frozen rill,
Or the snow minaret on an Alpine steep,
Or Lot's wife done in salt,—or what you
will;—
My similes are gather'd in a heap,
So pick and choose—perhaps you'll be content
With a carved lady on a monument.

LXIX

And lo! a fifth appears;—and what is she?
A lady of a 'certain age,' which means Certainly aged—what her years might be
I know not, never counting past their teens;
But there she slept, not quite so fair to see,
As ere that awful period intervenes Which lays both men and women on the shelf,
To meditate upon their sins and self.

LXX

But all this time how slept, or dream'd, Dudù?
With strict inquiry I could ne'er discover,
And scorn to add a syllable untrue;
But ere the middle watch was hardly
over,

Just when the fading lamps waned dim
and blue,
And phantoms hover'd, or might seem
to hover,
To those who like their company, about
The apartment, on a sudden she scream'd
out:

LXXI

And that so loudly, that upstart'd all
The Oda, in a general commotion:
Matron and maids, and those whom you may call Neither, came crowding like the waves of ocean,
One on the other, throughout the whole
hall,
All trembling, wondering, without the least notion
More than I have myself of what could
make
The calm Dudù so turbulently wake.

LXXII

But wide awake she was, and round her bed
With floating draperies and with flying
hair,
With eager eyes, and light but hurried
tread,
And bosoms, arms, and ankles glancing
bare,
And bright as any meteor ever bred
By the North Pole,—they sought her cause of care,
For she seem'd agitated, flush'd, and frighten'd,
Her eye dilated, and her colour heighten'd.

LXXIII

But what is strange—and a strong proof how great
A blessing is sound sleep—Juanna lay
As fast as ever husband by his mate
In holy matrimony snores away.
Not all the clamour broke her happy state
Of slumber, ere they shook her,—so
they say
At least,—and then she, too, unclosed
her eyes,
And yawned a good deal with discreet surprise.

LXXIV

And now commenced a strict investigation,
Which, as all spoke at once, and more than once
Conjecturing, wondering, asking a narra-
tion,
Alike might puzzle either wit or dunce
To answer in a very clear oration.
Dudù had never pass'd for wanting
sense,
But being 'no orator as Brutus is,'
Could not at first expound what was amiss.

LXXV

At length she said, that in a slumber
 sound
 She dream'd a dream, of walking in a
 wood—
 A 'wood obscure,' like that where Dante
 found Himself in at the age when all grow
 good;
 Life's half-way house, where dames with virtue crown'd
 Run much less risk of lovers turning
 rude;
 And that this wood was full of pleasant
 fruits,
 And trees of goodly growth and spreading roots;

LXXVI

And in the midst a golden apple grew,—
 A most prodigious pippin—but it
 hung
 Rather too high and distant; that she threw
 Her glances on it, and then, longing,
 flung Stones and whatever she could pick up, to Bring down the fruit, which still perversely clung
 To its own bough, and dangled yet in sight,
 But always at a most provoking height;—

LXXVII

That on a sudden, when she least had hope,
 It fell down of its own accord before Her feet; that her first movement was to stoop
 And pick it up, and bite it to the core;
 That just as her young lip began to ope
 Upon the golden fruit the vision bore,
 A bee flew out, and stung her to the heart,
 And so—she woke with a great scream and start.

LXXVIII

All this she told with some confusion and Dismay, the usual consequence of
 dreams
 Of the unpleasant kind, with none at hand
 To expound their vain and visionary
 gleams.
 I've known some odd ones which seem'd really plann'd Prophetically, or that which one deems
 A 'strange coincidence,' to use a phrase
 By which such things are settled now-a-
 days.

LXXIX

The damsels, who had thoughts of some great harm,
 Began, as is the consequence of fear,
 To scold a little at the false alarm
 That broke for nothing on their sleeping ear.

The matron, too, was wroth to leave her
 warm
 Bed for the dream she had been obliged to hear,
 And chafed at poor Dudù, who only sigh'd,
 And said, that she was sorry she had cried.

LXXX

'I've heard of stories of a cock and bull;
 But visions of an apple and a bee,
 To take us from our natural rest, and pull
 The whole Oda from their beds at half-past three,
 Would make us think the moon is at its
 full.
 You surely are unwell, child! we must
 see,
 To-morrow, what his Highness's physician
 Will say to this hysteric of a vision.

LXXXI

'And poor Juanna, too, the child's first
 night
 Within these walls, to be broke in upon
 With such a clamour—I had thought it
 right
 That the young stranger should not lie
 alone,
 And, as the quietest of all, she might
 With you, Dudù, a good night's rest
 have known:
 But now I must transfer her to the charge
 Of Lolah—though her couch is not so large.'

LXXXII

Lolah's eyes sparkled at the proposition;
 But poor Dudù, with large drops in her
 own,
 Resulting from the scolding or the vision, Implored that present pardon might be
 shown
 For this first fault, and that on no condition
 (She added in a soft and piteous tone) Juanna should be taken from her, and Her future dreams should be all kept in hand.

LXXXIII

She promised never more to have a dream,
 At least to dream so loudly as just now;
 She wonder'd at herself how she could scream—
 'Twas foolish, nervous, as she must allow,
 A fond hallucination, and a theme
 For laughter—but she felt her spirits
 low,
 And begg'd they would excuse her; she'd get over
 This weakness in a few hours, and recover.

LXXXIV

And here Juanna kindly interposed,
And said she felt herself extremely well
Where she then was, as her sound sleep disclosed,

When all around rang like a tocsin bell;
She did not find herself the least disposed
To quit her gentle partner, and to dwell
Apart from one who had no sin to show,
Save that of dreaming once 'malá-propos.'

LXXXV

As thus Juanna spoke, Dudù turn'd round
And hid her face within Juanna's
breast:

Her neck alone was seen, but that was
found

The colour of a budding rose's crest.
I can't tell why she blush'd, nor can expound

The mystery of this rupture of their rest
All that I know is, that the facts I state
Are true as truth has ever been of late.

LXXXVI

And so good night to them—or, if you will,
Good morrow—for the cock had crown, and light

Began to clothe each Asiatic hill,
And the mosque crescent struggled into sight

Of the long caravan, which in the chill
Of dewy dawn wound slowly round each
height

That stretches to the stony belt, which girds Asia, where Kaff looks down upon the Kurds.

LXXXVII

With the first ray, or rather grey of morn, Gulbeyaz rose from restlessness; and
pale

As Passion rises, with its bosom worn, Array'd herself with mantle, gem, and
veil.

The nightingale that sings with the deep
thorn,

Which fable places in her breast of wail,
Is lighter far of heart and voice than those Whose headlong passions form their proper woes.

LXXXVIII

And that's the moral of this composition,
If people would but see its real drift;—
But that they will not do without suspicion,
Because all gentle readers have the gift
Of closing 'gainst the light their orbs of
vision

While gentle writers also love to lift Their voices 'gainst each other, which is natural,

The numbers are too great for them to flatter all.

LXXXIX

Rose the sultana from a bed of splendour, Softer than the soft Sybarite's, who
cried

Aloud because his feelings were too tender
To brook a ruffled rose-leaf by his side,—

So beautiful that art could little mend her,
Though pale with conflicts between love
and pride;

So agitated was she with her error,
She did not even look into the mirror.

XC

Also arose about the self-same time,
Perhaps a little later, her great lord,
Master of thirty kingdoms so sublime,
And of a wife by whom he was abhorr'd;
A thing of much less import in that
clime—

At least to those of incomes which afford

The filling up their whole connubial cargo—

Than where two wives are under an embargo.

XCI

He did not think much on the matter, nor Indeed on any other: as a man

He liked to have a handsome paramour
At hand, as one may like to have a fan,
And therefore of Circassians had good
store,

As an amusement after the Divan;
Though an unusual fit of love, or duty,
Had made him lately bask in his bride's beauty.

XCII

And now he rose; and after due ablutions
Exacted by the customs of the East,

And prayers and other pious evolutions,
He drank six cups of coffee at the least,

And then withdrew to hear about the Russians,

Whose victories had recently increased.
In Catherine's reign, whom glory still adores,

As greatest of all sovereigns and w—s.

XCIII

But oh, thou grand legitimate Alexander!
Her son's son, let not this last phrase offend

Thine ear, if it should reach—and now rhymes wander

Almost as far as Petersburg, and lend
A dreadful impulse to each loud meander:

Of murmuring Liberty's wide waves, which blend

Their roar even with the Baltic's—so you
be

Your father's son, 'tis quite enough for me.

XCIV

To call men love-begotten, or proclaim Their mothers as the antipodes of Timon,
 That hater of mankind, would be a shame,
 A libel, or whate'er you please to rhyme on:
 But people's ancestors are history's game;
 And if one lady's slip could leave a crime on
 All generations, I should like to know What pedigree the best would have to show?

XCV

Had Catherine and the sultan understood Their own true interests, which kings rarely know,
 Until 'tis taught by lessons rather rude,
 There was a way to end their strife,
 although Perhaps precarious, had they but thought
 good,
 Without the aid of prince or plenipo:
 She to dismiss her guards and he his
 harem,
 And for their other matters, meet and share 'em.

XCVI

But as it was, his Highness had to hold
 His daily council upon ways and means
 How to encounter with this martial scold,
 This modern Amazon and queen of queans;
 And the perplexity could not be told
 Of all the pillars of the state, which leans
 Sometimes a little heavy on the backs
 Of those who cannot lay on a new tax.

XCVII

Meantime Gulbeyaz, when her king was
 gone,
 Retired into her boudoir, a sweet place
 For love or breakfast; private, pleasing,
 lone,
 And rich with all contrivances which
 grace
 Those gay recesses:—many a precious
 stone Sparkled along its roof, and many a vase
 Of porcelain held in the fetter'd flowers
 Those captive soothers of a captive's hours.

XCVIII

Mother of pearl, and porphyry, and
 marble,
 Vied with each other on this costly spot;
 And singing birds without were heard to warble;
 And the stain'd glass which lighted this fair grot

Varied each ray;—but all descriptions
 garble
 The true effect, and so we had better
 not
 Be too minute; an outline is the best,—
 A lively reader's fancy does the rest.

XCIX

And here she summon'd Baba, and required
 Don Juan at his hands, and information
 Of what had pass'd since all the slaves
 retired,
 And whether he had occupied their
 station:
 If matters had been managed as desired,
 And his disguise with due consideration Kept up; and above all, the where and
 how
 He had pass'd the night, was what she wish'd to know.

Baba, with some embarrassment, replied
 To this long catechism of questions,
 ask'd
 More easily than answer'd,—that he had tried
 His best to obey in what he had been task'd;
 But there seem'd something that he
 wish'd to hide,
 Which hesitation more betray'd than
 mask'd;
 He scratch'd his ear, the infallible resource
 To which embarrass'd people have recourse.

CI

Gulbeyaz was no model of true patience, Nor much disposed to wait in word or
 deed;
 She liked quick answers in all conversa-
 tions;
 And when she saw him stumbling like a
 steed
 In his replies, she puzzled him for fresh
 ones;
 And as his speech grew still more broken-kneed,
 Her cheek began to flush, her eyes to sparkle,
 And her proud brow's blue veins to swell and darkle.

CII

When Baba saw these symptoms, which he knew
 To bode him no great good, he deprecated
 Her anger, and beseech'd she'd hear him
 through—
 He could not help the thing which he related:

Then out it came at length, that to Dudù Juan was given in charge, as hath been stated;
 But not by Baba's fault, he said, and swore on
 The holy camel's hump, besides the Koran.

CIII

The chief dame of the Oda, upon whom
 The discipline of the whole harem bore,
 As soon as they reënter'd their own room,
 For Baba's function stopt short at the
 door,
 Had settled all; nor could he then presume
 (The aforesaid Baba) just then to do more, Without exciting such suspicion as Might make the matter still worse than it was.

CIV

He hoped, indeed he thought, he could be
 sure,
 Juan had not betray'd himself; in fact
 'Twas certain that his conduct had been
 pure,
 Because a foolish or imprudent act
 Would not alone have made him insecure,
 But ended in his being found out and sack'd,
 And thrown into the sea.—Thus Baba
 spoke
 Of all save Dudù's dream, which was no joke.

CV

This he discreetly kept in the back ground,
 And talk'd away—and might have talk'd till now,
 For any further answer that he found,
 So deep an anguish wrung Gulbeyaz'
 brow:
 Her cheek turn'd ashes, ears rung, brain
 whirl'd round,
 As if she had received a sudden blow,
 And the heart's dew of pain sprang fast and chilly
 O'er her fair front, like Morning's on a lily.

CVI

Although she was not of the fainting sort, Baba thought she would faint, but there he err'd—
 It was but a convulsion, which though
 short
 Can never be described; we all have
 heard,
 And some of us have felt thus 'all amont,'
 When things beyond the common have occur'd;—
 Gulbeyaz proved in that brief agony
 What she could ne'er express—then how should I?

CVII

She stood a moment as a Pythoness
 Stands on her tripod, agonised, and full
 Of inspiration gather'd from distress,
 When all the heart-strings like wild horses pull
 The heart asunder;—then, as more or
 less
 Their speed abated or their strength grew dull,
 She sunk down on her seat by slow
 degrees,
 And bow'd her throbbing head o'er trembling knees.

CVIII

Her face declined and was unseen; her
 hair
 Fell in long tresses like the weeping
 willow,
 Sweeping the marble underneath her
 chair,
 Or rather sofa (for it was all pillow,
 A low, soft ottoman), and black despair Stirr'd up and down her bosom like a
 billow,
 Which rushes to some shore whose shingles check
 Its farther course, but must receive its wreck.

CIX

Her head hung down, and her long hair in stooping Conceal'd her features better than a
 veil;
 And one hand o'er the ottoman lay drooping,
 White, waxen, and as alabaster pale:
 Would that I were a painter! to be group-
 ing
 All that a poet drags into detail!
 Oh that my words were colours! but their tints
 May serve perhaps as outlines or slight hints.

CX

Baba, who knew by experience when to talk
 And when to hold his tongue, now held it till
 This passion might blow o'er, nor dared to balk
 Gulbeyaz' taciturn or speaking will.
 At length she rose up, and began to walk
 Slowly along the room, but silent still,
 And her brow clear'd, but not her troubled eye;
 The wind was down but still the sea ran
 high.

CXI

She stopp'd, and raised her head to speak—but paused,
And then moved on again with rapid pace;
Then slacken'd it, which is the march most caused
By deep emotion:—you may sometimes trace
A feeling in each footstep, as disclosed
By Sallust in his Catiline, who, chased
By all the demons of all passions, show'd
Their work even by the way in which he trode.

CXII

Gulbeyaz stopp'd and beckon'd Baba:—
'Slave!
Bring the two slaves!' she said in a low tone,
But one which Baba did not like to brave,
And yet he shudder'd, and seem'd rather prone
To prove reluctant, and begg'd leave to crave
(Though he well knew the meaning) to be shown
What slaves her highness wish'd to indicate,
For fear of any error, like the late.

CXIII

'The Georgian and her paramour,' replied
The imperial bride—and added, 'Let the boat
Be ready by the secret portal's side:
You know the rest.' The words stuck in her throat,
Despite her injured love and fiery pride;
And of this Baba willingly took note,
And begg'd by every hair of Mahomet's beard,
She would revoke the order he had heard.

CXIV

'To hear is to obey,' he said; 'but still,
Sultana, think upon the consequence:
It is not that I shall not all fulfil
Your orders, even in their severest sense;
But such precipitation may end ill,
Even at your own imperative expense:
I do not mean destruction and exposure,
In case of any premature disclosure;

CXV

'But your own feelings. Even should all the rest
Be hidden by the rolling waves, which hide
Already many a once love-beaten breast
Deep in the caverns of the deadly tide—

You love this boyish, new, seraglio guest,
And if this violent remedy be tried—
Excuse my freedom, when I here assure you,
That killing him is not the way to cure you.'

CXVI

'What dost thou know of love or feeling!—Wretch!
Begone!' she cried, with kindling eyes—
'and do
My bidding!' Baba vanish'd, for to stretch
His own remonstrance further he well knew Might end in acting as his own 'Jack Ketch';
And though he wish'd extremely to get through
This awkward business without harm to others,
He still prefer'd his own neck to another's.

CXVII

Away he went then upon his commission,
Growling and grumbling in good Turkish phrase
Against all women of whate'er condition,
Especially sultanas and their ways;
Their obstinacy, pride, and indecision,
Their never knowing their own mind two days,
The trouble that they gave, their immorality,
Which made him daily bless his own neutrality.

CXVIII

And then he call'd his brethren to his aid,
And sent one on a summons to the pair,
That they must instantly be well array'd,
And above all be comb'd even to a hair,
And brought before the empress, who had made
Inquiries after them with kindest care:
At which Dudù look'd strange, and Juan silly;
But go they must at once, and will I—nill I.

CXIX

And here I leave them at their preparation
For the imperial presence, wherein whether Gulbeyaz show'd them both commiseration,
Or got rid of the parties altogether,
Like other angry ladies of her nation,—
Are things the turning of a hair or feather
May settle; but far be't from me to anticipate
In what way feminine caprice may dissipate.

CXX

I leave them for the present with good wishes,
 Though doubts of their well doing, to arrange
 Another part of history; for the dishes
 Of this our banquet we must sometimes change;
 And trusting Juan may escape the fishes,
 Although his situation now seems strange,
 And scarce secure, as such digressions are fair,
 The Muse will take a little touch at warfare.

CANTO THE SEVENTH

I

O Love! O Glory! what are you who fly
 Around us ever, rarely to alight?
 There's not a meteor in the Polar sky
 Of such transcendent and more fleeting flight.
 Chill, and chain'd to cold earth, we lift on high
 Our eyes in search of either lovely light;
 A thousand and a thousand colours they Assume, then leave us on our freezing way.

II

And such as they are, such my present tale is,
 A nondescript and ever-varying rhyme,
 A versified Aurora Borealis,
 Which flashes o'er a waste and icy clime.
 When we know what all are, we must bewail us,
 But ne'ertheless I hope it is no crime
 To laugh at all things—for I wish to know
 What, after all, are all things—but a show?

III

They accuse me—Me—the present writer of
 The present poem—of—I know not what—
 A tendency to under-rate and scoff
 At human power and virtue, and all that;
 And this they say in language rather rough.
 Good God! I wonder what they would be at!
 I say no more than hath been said in Dante's
 Verse, and by Solomon and by Cervantes;

IV

By Swift, by Machiavel, by Rochefoucault,
 By Fénelon, by Luther, and by Plato;
 By Tillotson, and Wesley, and Rousseau,
 Who knew this life was not worth a potato.

'Tis not their fault, nor mine, if this be so,—
 For my part, I pretend not to be Cato,
 Nor even Diogenes.—We live and die,
 But which is best, you know no more than I.

V

Socrates said, our only knowledge was
 'To know that nothing could be known'; a pleasant
 Science enough, which levels to an ass
 Each man of wisdom, future, past, or present.
 Newton (that proverb of the mind), alas!
 Declared, with all his grand discoveries recent,
 That he himself felt only 'like a youth
 Picking up shells by the great ocean—Truth.'

VI

Ecclesiastes said, 'that all is vanity'—
 Most modern preachers say the same, or show it
 By their examples of true Christianity:
 In short, all know, or very soon may know it;
 And in this scene of all-confess'd inanity,
 By saint, by sage, by preacher, and by poet,
 Must I restrain me, through the fear of strife,
 From holding up the nothingness of life?

Dogs, or men!—for I flatter you in saying
 That ye are dogs—your betters far—ye may Read, or read not, what I am now essaying
 To show ye what ye are in every way.
 As little as the moon stops for the baying
 Of wolves, will the bright Muse withdraw one ray
 From out her skies—then howl your idle wrath!
 While she still silvers o'er your gloomy path.

VIII

'Fierce loves and faithless wars'—I am not sure
 If this be the right reading—'tis no matter;
 The fact's about the same, I am secure;
 I sing them both, and am about to batter
 A town which did a famous siege endure,
 And was beleagu'ed both by land and water
 By Souvaroff, or Anglicè Suvarrow,
 Who loved blood as an alderman loves marrow.

IX

The fortress is call'd Ismail, and is placed Upon the Danube's left branch and left bank,
 With buildings in the Oriental taste,
 But still a fortress of the foremost rank,
 Or was at least, unless 'tis since defaced,
 Which with your conquerors is a common
 prank:
 It stands some eighty versts from the high
 sea,
 And measures round of toises thousands three.

X

Within the extent of this fortification
 A borough is comprised along the
 height
 Upon the left, which from its loftier
 station
 Commands the city, and upon its site
 A Greek had raised around this elevation
 A quantity of palisades upright,
 So placed as to impede the fire of those Who held the place, and to assist the foe's.

XI

This circumstance may serve to give a notion
 Of the high talents of this new Vauban:
 But the town ditch below was deep as
 ocean,
 The rampart higher than you'd wish to hang:
 But then there was a great want of precaution
 (Prithee, excuse this engineering slang), Nor work advanced, nor cover'd way was
 there,
 To hint at least 'Here is no thoroughfare.'

XII

But a stone bastion, with a narrow gorge,
 And walls as thick as most skulls born
 as yet;
 Two batteries, cap-à-pie, as our St.
 George,
 Casemated one, and t'other 'à barbette,'
 Of Danube's bank took formidable
 charge;
 While two-and-twenty cannon duly set Rose over the town's right side, in bristling tier,
 Forty feet high, upon a cavalier.

XIII

But from the river the town's open quite,
 Because the Turks could never be persuaded
 A Russian vessel e'er would heave in
 sight;
 And such their creed was till they were invaded,

When it grew rather late to set things right:
 But as the Danube could not well be
 waded,
 They look'd upon the Muscovite flotilla,
 And only shouted, 'Allah!' and 'Bis Millah!'

XIV

The Russians now were ready to attack;
 But oh, ye goddesses of war and glory!
 How shall I spell the name of each
 Cossacque
 Who were immortal, could one tell their story?
 Alas! what to their memory can lack?
 Achilles' self was not more grim and gory
 Than thousands of this new and polish'd
 nation,
 Whose names want nothing but—pronunciation.

XV

Still I'll record a few, if but to increase Our euphony: there was Strongenoff, and Strokonoff,
 Meknop, Serge Low, Arséniew of modern
 Greece,
 And Tschitsshakoff, and Roguenoff,
 and Chokenoff,
 And others of twelve consonants apiece;
 And more might be found out, if I could poke enough Into gazettes; but Fame (capricious strumpet),
 It seems, has got an ear as well as trumpet,

XVI

And cannot tune those discords of narra-
 tion,
 Which may be names at Moscow, into
 rhyme;
 Yet there were several worth commemora-
 tion,
 As e'er was virgin of a nuptial chime;
 Soft words, too, fitted for the peroration
 Of Londonderry drawling against time,
 Ending in 'ischskin,' 'ousckin,' 'iffskchy,'
 'ouski,'
 Of whom we can insert but Rousamouski,

XVII

Scherematoff and Chrematoff, Koklophti,
 Koclobski, Kourakin, and Mouskin Pouskin,
 All proper men of weapons, as e'er scoff'd
 high
 Against a foe, or ran a sabre through
 skin:
 Little cared they for Mahomet or Mufti, Unless to make their kettle-drums a new skin
 Out of their hides, if parchment had grown dear,
 And no more handy substitute been near.

XVIII

Then there were foreigners of much renown,
Of various nations, and all volunteers;
Not fighting for their country or its crown,
But wishing to be one day brigadiers;
Also to have the sacking of a town;
A pleasant thing to young men at their
years.
'Mongst them were several Englishmen of pith,
Sixteen call'd Thomson, and nineteen named Smith.

XIX

Jack Thomson and Bill Thomson;—all
the rest
Had been call'd 'Jemmy,' after the great bard;
I don't know whether they had arms or
crest,
But such a godfather's as good a card.
Three of the Smiths were Peters; but the
best Amongst them all, hard blows to inflict or ward,
Was he, since so renown'd 'in country
quarters
At Halifax'; but now he served the Tartars.

XX

The rest were Jacks and Gills and Wills and Bills,
But when I've added that the elder Jack
Smith
Was born in Cumberland among the hills,
And that his father was an honest black-
smith,
I've said all I know of a name that fills Three lines of the despatch in taking 'Schmacksmith,'
A village of Moldavia's waste, wherein
He fell, immortal in a bulletin.

XXI

I wonder (although Mars no doubt's a god I Praise) if a man's name in a bulletin
May make up for a bullet in his body?
I hope this little question is no sin,
Because, though I am but a simple noddy,
I think one Shakespeare puts the same thought in The mouth of some one in his plays so doting,
Which many people pass for wits by quoting.

XXII

Then there were Frenchmen, gallant,
young, and gay;
But I'm too great a patriot to record
Their Gallic names upon a glorious day;
I'd rather tell ten lies than say a word

Of truth;—such truths are treason; they betray
Their country; and as traitors are ab-
horr'd,
Who name the French in English, save to
show
How Peace should make John Bull the Frenchman's foe.

XXIII

The Russians, having built two batteries
on
An isle near Ismail, had two ends in
view;
The first was to bombard it, and knock
down
The public buildings and the private
too,
No matter what poor souls might be undone.
The city's shape suggested this, 'tis
true;
Form'd like an amphitheatre, each dwell-
ing
Presented a fine mark to throw a shell in.

XXIV

The second object was to profit by
The moment of the general consternation,
To attack the Turk's flotilla, which lay
nigh, Extremely tranquil, anchor'd at its
station:
But a third motive was as probably
To frighten them into capitulation;
A phantasy which sometimes seizes
warriors,
Unless they are game as bull-dogs and fox-terriers.

XXV

A habit rather blameable, which is
That of despising those we combat with,
Common in many cases, was in this
The cause of killing Tchitchitzkoff and Smith;
One of the valorous 'Smiths' whom we shall miss
Out of those nineteen who late rhymed
to 'pith';
But 'tis a name so spread o'er 'Sir' and 'Madam,'
That one would think the first who bore it 'Adam'.

XXVI

The Russian batteries were incomplete,
Because they were constructed in a hurry;
Thus the same cause which makes a verse want feet,
And throws a cloud o'er Longman and John Murray,

When the sale of new books is not so fleet
As they who print them think is necessary,
May likewise put off for a time what story
Sometimes calls 'murder,' and at others
'glory.'

XXVII

Whether it was their engineer's stupidity,
Their haste, or waste, I neither know
nor care,
Or some contractor's personal cupidity,
Saving his soul by cheating in the ware
Of homicide, but there was no solidity
In the new batteries erected there;
They either miss'd, or they were never miss'd,
And added greatly to the missing list.

XXVIII

A sad miscalculation about distance
Made all their naval matters incorrect;
Three fireships lost their amiable existence
Before they reach'd a spot to take effect;
The match was lit too soon, and no assistance
Could remedy this lubberly defect;
They blew up in the middle of the river,
While, though 'twas dawn, the Turks slept fast as ever.

XXIX

At seven they rose, however, and survey'd
The Russ flotilla getting under way;
'Twas nine, when still advancing undismay'd,
Within a cable's length their vessels lay Off Ismail, and commenced a cannonade, Which was return'd with interest, I may
say,
And by a fire of musketry and grape,
And shells and shot of every size and shape.

XXX

For six hours bore they without intermission
The Turkish fire, and, aided by their own Land batteries, work'd their guns with great precision;
At length they found mere cannonade
alone
By no means would produce the town's submission,
And made a signal to retreat at one.
One bark blew up, a second near the works
Running aground, was taken by the Turks.

XXXI

The Moslem, too, had lost both ships and
men;
But when they saw the enemy retire,
Their Delhis mann'd some boats, and sail'd again,
And gall'd the Russians with a heavy
fire,

And tried to make a landing on the main;
But here the effect fell short of their
desire:
Count Damas drove them back into the
water
Pell-mell, and with a whole gazette of slaughter.

XXXII

'If' (says the historian here) 'I could report
All that the Russians did upon this day,
I think that several volumes would fall short,
And I should still have many things to
say';
And so he says no more—but pays his
court
To some distinguish'd strangers in that
fray;
The Prince de Ligne, and Langeron, and Damas,
Names great as any that the roll of Fame has.

XXXIII

This being the case, may show us what Fame is:
For out of these three 'preux Cheva-liers,' how
Many of common readers give a guess
That such existed? (and they may live
now
For aught we know.) Renown's all hit or
miss;
There's fortune even in fame, we must allow.
'Tis true, the Memoirs of the Prince de Ligne
Have half withdrawn from him oblivion's screen.

XXXIV

But here are men who fought in gallant actions
As gallantly as ever heroes fought,
But buried in the heap of such transactions
Their names are rarely found, nor often
sought.
Thus even good fame may suffer sad contractions,
And is extinguish'd sooner than she
ought:
Of all our modern battles, I will bet
You can't repeat nine names from each Gazette.

XXXV

In short, this last attack, though rich in
glory,
Show'd that somewhere, somehow,
there was a fault,
And Admiral Ribas (known in Russian
story)
Most strongly recommended an assault;

In which he was opposed by young and hoary,
Which made a long debate; but I must halt,
For if I wrote down every warrior's speech,
I doubt few readers e'er would mount the breach.

XXXVI

There was a man, if that he was a man,
Not that his manhood could be call'd in question,
For had he not been Hercules, his span
Had been as short in youth as indigestion
Made his last illness, when, all worn and wan,
He died beneath a tree, as much unblest on
The soil of the green province he had wasted,
As e'er was locust on the land it blasted.

XXXVII

This was Potemkin—a great thing in days
When homicide and harlotry made great;
If stars and titles could entail long praise,
His glory might half equal his estate.
This fellow, being six foot high, could raise
A kind of phantasy proportionate
In the then sovereign of the Russian people,
Who measured men as you would do a steuple.

XXXVIII

While things were in abeyance, Ribas sent
A courier to the prince, and he succeeded
In ordering matters after his own bent;
I cannot tell the way in which he pleaded,
But shortly he had cause to be content.
In the mean time the batteries proceeded,
And fourscore cannon on the Danube's border
Were briskly fired and answer'd in due order.

XXXIX

But on the thirteenth, when already part
Of the troops were embark'd, the siege to raise,
A courier on the spur inspired new heart
Into all panthers for newspaper praise,
As well as dilettanti in war's art,
By his despatches couch'd in pithy phrase;
Announcing the appointment of that lover of Battles to the command, Field-Marshal Souvaroff.

XL

The letter of the prince to the same marshal
Was worthy of a Spartan, had the cause
Been one to which a good heart could be partial—
Defence of freedom, country, or of laws;
But as it was mere lust of power to o'er-arch all
With its proud brow, it merits slight applause,
Save for its style, which said, all in a trice,
'You will take Ismail at whatever price.'

XLI

'Let there be light!' said God, 'and there was light!'
'Let there be blood!' says man, and there's a sea!
The fiat of this spoil'd child of the Night
(For Day ne'er saw his merits) could decree
More evil in an hour, than thirty bright Summers could renovate, though they should be Lovely as those which ripen'd Eden's fruit;
For war cuts up not only branch, but root.

XLII

Our friends, the Turks, who with loud 'Allahs' now
Began to signalise the Russ retreat,
Were damnably mistaken; few are slow
In thinking that their enemy is beat,
(Or beaten, if you insist on grammar, though
I never think about it in a heat,)
But here I say the Turks were much mistaken,
Who hating hogs, yet wish'd to save their bacon.

XLIII

For, on the sixteenth, at full gallop, drew
In sight two horsemen, who were deem'd Cossacques
For some time, till they came in nearer view.
They had but little baggage at their backs,
For there were but three shirts between the two;
But on they rode upon two Ukraine hacks,
Till, in approaching, were at length descried
In this plain pair, Suwarrow and his guide.

XLIV

'Great joy to London now!' says some great fool,
When London had a grand illumination,
Which to that bottle-conjurer, John Bull,
Is of all dreams the first hallucination;

So that the streets of colour'd lamps are full,

That sage (said John) surrenders at discretion

His purse, his soul, his sense, and even his nonsense,

To gratify, like a huge moth, this one sense.

XLV

'Tis strange that he should further 'Damn his eyes,'

For they are damn'd; that once all-famous oath

Is to the devil now no further prize,
Since John has lately lost the use of both.

Debt he calls wealth, and taxes Paradise;
And Famine, with her gaunt and bony growth,

Which stare him in the face, he won't examine,

Or swears that Ceres hath begotten Famine.

XLVI

But to the tale;—great joy unto the camp!
To Russian, Tartar, English, French,
Cossacque,

O'er whom Suwarrow shone like a gas lamp,

Presaging a most luminous attack;

Or like a wisp along the marsh so damp,
Which leads beholders on a boggy walk,

He flitted to and fro a dancing light,

Which all who saw it follow'd, wrong or right.

XLVII

But certes matters took a different face;
There was enthusiasm and much applause,

The fleet and camp saluted with great grace,

And all presaged good fortune to their cause.

Within a cannon-shot length of the place
They drew, constructed ladders, repair'd flaws

In former works, made new, prepared fascines,

And all kinds of benevolent machines.

XLVIII

'Tis thus the spirit of a single mind
Makes that of multitudes take one direction,

As roll the waters to the breathing wind,
Or roams the herd beneath the bull's protection;

Or as a little dog will lead the blind,
Or a bell-wether form the flock's connexion

By tinkling sounds, when they go forth to victual;

Such is the sway of your great men o'er little.

XLIX

The whole camp rung with joy; you would have thought

That they were going to a marriage feast

(This metaphor, I think, holds good as aught, Since there is discord after both at least):

There was not now a luggage boy but sought

Danger and spoil with ardour much increased;

And why? because a little—odd—old man,

Strip to his shirt, was come to lead the van.

L

But so it was; and every preparation

Was made with all alacrity: the first

Detachment of three columns took its station,

And waited but the signal's voice to burst

Upon the foe: the second's ordination

Was also in three columns, with a thirst

For glory gaping o'er a sea of slaughter:
The third, in columns two, attack'd by water.

LI

New batteries were erected, and was held

A general council, in which unanimity,

That stranger to most councils, here prevail'd,

As sometimes happens in a great extremity;

And every difficulty being dispell'd,

Glory began to dawn with due sublimity,

While Souvaroff, determined to obtain it,
Was teaching his recruits to use the bayonet.

LII

It is an actual fact, that he, commander
In chief, in proper person deign'd to drill

The awkward squad, and could afford to squander

His time, a corporal's duty to fulfil;

Just as you'd break a sucking salamanmander

To swallow flame, and never take it ill:
He show'd them how to mount a ladder

(which Was not like Jacob's) or to cross a ditch.

LIII

Also he dress'd up, for the nonce, fascines Like men with turbans, scimitars, and dirks,
 And made them charge with bayonet these machines,
 By way of lesson against actual Turks;
 And when well practised in these mimic
 scenes,
 He judged them proper to assail the
 works;
 At which your wise men sneer'd in phrases
 witty:
 He made no answer; but he took the city.

LIV

Most things were in this posture on the eve
 Of the assault, and all the camp was in A stern repose; which you would scarce
 conceive;
 Yet men resolved to dash through thick and thin
 Are very silent when they once believe
 That all is settled:—there was little din,
 For some were thinking of their home and
 friends,
 And others of themselves and latter ends.

LV

Suwarrow chiefly was on the alert,
 Surveying, drilling, ordering, jesting,
 pondering,
 For the man was, we safely may assert,
 A thing to wonder at beyond most wondering;
 Hero, buffoon, half-demon, and half-dirt,
 Praying, instructing, desolating, plunder-
 ing;
 Now Mars, now Momus; and when bent to storm
 A fortress, Harlequin in uniform.

LVI

The day before the assault, while upon drill—
 For this great conqueror play'd the corporal—
 Some Cossacques, hovering like hawks round a hill,
 Had met a party towards the twilight's
 fall,
 One of whom spoke their tongue—or well or ill,
 'Twas much that he was understood at
 all;
 But whether from his voice, or speech, or manner,
 They found that he had fought beneath their banner.

LVII

Whereon immediately at his request
 They brought him and his comrades to head-quarters;

Their dress was Moslem, but you might have guess'd
 That these were merely masquerading
 Tartars,
 And that beneath each Turkish-fashion'd
 vest
 Lurk'd Christianity; which sometimes barters
 Her inward grace for outward show, and makes
 It difficult to shun some strange mistakes.

LVIII

Suwarrow, who was standing in his shirt
 Before a company of Calmucks, drilling,
 Exclaiming, fooling, swearing at the inert,
 And lecturing on the noble art of killing,—
 For deeming human clay but common dirt,
 This great philosopher was thus instilling
 His maxims, which to martial comprehension
 Proved death in battle equal to a pension;—

LIX

Suwarrow, when he saw this company
 Of Cossacques and their prey, turn'd round and cast
 Upon them his slow brow and piercing
 eye:—
 'Whence come ye?'—'From Constantinople last,
 Captives just now escaped,' was the reply.
 'What are ye?'—'What you see us.'
 Briefly pass'd
 This dialogue; for he who answer'd knew
 To whom he spoke, and made his words but few.

LX

'Your names?'—'Mine's Johnson, and my comrade's Juan;
 The other two are women, and the third Is neither man nor woman.' The chief threw on
 The party a slight glance, then said, 'I have heard
 Your name before, the second is a new
 one:
 To bring the other three here was absurd:
 But let that pass:—I think I have heard your name
 In the Nikolaiew regiment?'—'The same.'

LXI

'You served at Widdin?'—'Yes.'—'You led the attack?'
 'I did.'—'What next?'—'I really hardly
 know.'
 'You were the first i' the breach?'—'I was not slack
 At least to follow those who might be so.'

'What follow'd?'—'A shot laid me on my back,
And I became a prisoner to the foe.'
'You shall have vengeance, for the town
surrounded
Is twice as strong as that where you were wounded.

LXII

'Where will you serve?'—'Where'er you please.'—'I know
You like to be the hope of the forlorn,
And doubtless would be foremost on the
foe

After the hardships you've already
borne.
And this young fellow—say what can he do?
He with the beardless chin and garments torn?'
'Why, general, if he hath no greater fault
In war than love, he had better lead the assault.'

LXIII

'He shall if that he dare.' Here Juan bow'd Low as the compliment deserved. Suwarrow
By special providence, to lead to-
morrow,
Or it may be to-night, the assault: I have vow'd
To several saints, that shortly plough or harrow Shall pass o'er what was Ismail, and its tusk
Be unimpeded by the proudest mosque.

LXIV

'So now, my lads, for glory!'—Here he
turn'd
And drill'd away in the most classic
Russian,
Until each high, heroic bosom burn'd
For cash and conquest, as if from a cushion
A preacher had held forth (who nobly
spurn'd
All earthly goods save tithes) and bade them push on
To slay the Pagans who resisted, battering
The armies of the Christian Empress Catherine.

LXV

Johnson, who knew by this long colloquy
Himself a favourite, ventured to address
Suwarrow, though engaged with accents
high
In his resumed amusement. 'I confess
My debt in being thus allow'd to die
Among the foremost; but if you'd express
Explicitly our several posts, my friend
And self would know what duty to attend.'

LXVI

'Right! I was busy, and forgot. Why, you Will join your former regiment, which should be Now under arms. Ho! Katskoff, take him
to—
(Here he call'd up a Polish orderly)
His post, I mean the regiment Nikolaiew:
The stranger stripling may remain with
me;
He's a fine boy. The women may be sent
To the other baggage, or to the sick tent.'

LXVII

But here a sort of scene began to ensue:
The ladies,—who by no means had been
bred
To be disposed of in a way so new,
Although their harem education led Doubtless to that of doctrines the most
true,
Passive obedience,—now raised up the
head,
With flashing eyes and starting tears, and
flung,
Their arms, as hens their wings about their young,

LXVIII

O'er the promoted couple of brave men Who were thus honour'd by the greatest chief
That ever peopled hell with heroes slain,
Or plunged a province or a realm in
grief.
Oh, foolish mortals! Always taught in
vain!
Oh, glorious laurel! since for one sole leaf
Of thine imaginary deathless tree,
Of blood and tears must flow the unebbing
sea.

LXIX

Suwarrow, who had small regard for tears,
And not much sympathy for blood, survey'd
The women with their hair about their ears
And natural agonies, with a slight shade
Of feeling; for however habit sears
Men's hearts against whole millions,
when their trade
Is butchery, sometimes a single sorrow
Will touch even heroes—and such was Suwarrow.

LXX

He said,—and in the kindest Calmuck
tone,—
'Why, Johnson, what the devil do you
mean
By bringing women here? They shall be
shown
All the attention possible, and seen

In safety to the waggons, where alone In fact they can be safe. You should have been Aware this kind of baggage never thrives;
 Save wed a year, I hate recruits with wives."

LXXI

'May it please your excellency,' thus replied
 Our British friend, 'these are the wives of others,
 And not our own. I am too qualified
 By service with my military brothers
 To break the rules by bringing one's own
 bride
 Into a camp: I know that nought so bothers
 The hearts of the heroic on a charge,
 As leaving a small family at large.

LXXII

'But these are but two Turkish ladies, who
 With their attendant aided our escape,
 And afterwards accompanied us through
 A thousand perils in this dubious shape.
 To me this kind of life is not so new;
 To them, poor things, it is an awkward scrape.
 I therefore, if you wish me to fight freely,
 Request that they may both be used gen-teely.'

LXXIII

Meantime these two poor girls, with swimming eyes,
 Look'd on as if in doubt if they could
 trust
 Their own protectors; nor was their surprise
 Less than their grief (and truly not less just)
 To see an old man, rather wild than wise
 In aspect, plainly clad, besmear'd with
 dust,
 Stript to his waistcoat, and that not too
 clean,
 More fear'd than all the sultans ever seen.

LXXIV

For everything seem'd resting on his nod,
 As they could read in all eyes. Now to
 them,
 Who were accustom'd, as a sort of god,
 To see the sultan, rich in many a gem,
 Like an imperial peacock stalk abroad
 (That royal bird, whose tail's a diadem)
 With all the pomp of power, it was a doubt How power could condescend to do without.

LXXV

John Johnson, seeing their extreme dismay, Though little versed in feelings oriental,
 Suggested some slight comfort in his way:
 Don Juan, who was much more sentimental,

Swore they should see him by the dawn of
 day,
 Or that the Russian army should repent
 all:
 And, strange to say, they found some consolation
 In this—for females like exaggeration.

LXXVI

And then with tears, and sighs, and some slight kisses,
 They parted for the present—these to await,
 According to the artillery's hits or misses,
 What sages call Chance, Providence, or
 Fate—
 (Uncertainty is one of many blisses,
 A mortgage on Humanity's estate)—
 While their beloved friends began to arm,
 To burn a town which never did them
 harm.

LXXVII

Suwarrow,—who but saw things in the gross,
 Being much too gross to see them in detail,
 Who calculated life as so much dross,
 And as the wind a widow'd nation's wail,
 And cared as little for his army's loss
 (So that their efforts should at length prevail)
 As wife and friends did for the boils of Job,—
 What was't to him to hear two women sob?

LXXVIII

Nothing.—The work of glory still went on
 In preparations for a cannonade
 As terrible as that of Iliion,
 If Homer had found mortars ready
 made;
 But now, instead of slaying Priam's son,
 We only can but talk of escalade,
 Bombs, drums, guns, bastions, batteries,
 bayonets, bullets;
 Hard words, which stick in the soft Muses' gullets.

LXXIX

Oh, thou eternal Homer! who couldst charm
 All ears, though long; all ages, though so short,
 By merely wielding with poetic arm Arms to which men will never more
 resort,
 Unless gunpowder should be found to harm
 Much less than is the hope of every
 court,
 Which now is leagued young Freedom to annoy;
 But they will not find Liberty a Troy:—

LXXX

Oh, thou eternal Homer! I have now
 To paint a siege, wherein more men were slain,
 With deadlier engines and a speedier blow,
 Than in thy Greek gazette of that campaign;
 And yet, like all men else, I must allow,
 To vie with thee would be about as vain
 As for a brook to cope with ocean's flood;
 But still we moderns equal you in blood;

LXXXI

If not in poetry, at least in fact;
 And fact is truth, the grand desideratum!
 Of which, howe'er the Muse describes each act,
 There should be ne'ertheless a slight substratum.
 But now the town is going to be attack'd;
 Great deeds are doing—how shall I relate 'em?
 Souls of immortal generals! Phœbus
 watches
 To colour up his rays from your despatches.

LXXXII

Oh, ye great bulletins of Bonaparte!
 Oh, ye less grand long lists of kill'd and
 wounded!
 Shade of Leonidas, who fought so hearty,
 When my poor Greece was once, as now, surrounded!
 Oh, Cæsar's Commentaries! now impart,
 ye Shadows of glory! (lest I be confounded),
 A portion of your fading twilight hues,
 So beautiful, so fleeting, to the Muse.

LXXXIII

When I call 'fading' martial immortality,
 I mean, that every age and every year,
 And almost every day, in sad reality,
 Some sucking hero is compell'd to rear,
 Who, when we come to sum up the totality
 Of deeds to human happiness most dear,
 Turns out to be a butcher in great business,
 Afflicting young folks with a sort of dizziness.

LXXXIV

Medals, rank, ribands, lace, embroidery,
 scarlet,
 Are things immortal to immortal man,
 As purple to the Babylonian harlot:
 An uniform to boys is like a fan
 To women; there is scarce a crimson varlet
 But deems himself the first in Glory's van.
 But Glory's glory; and if you would find What that is—ask the pig who sees the wind!

LXXXV

At least he feels it, and some say he sees,
 Because he runs before it like a pig;
 Or, if that simple sentence should dis-
 please,
 Say, that he scuds before it like a brig,
 A schooner, or—but it is time to cease
 This Canto, ere my Muse perceives fatigue.
 The next shall ring a peal to shake all
 people,
 Like a bob-major from a village steeple.

LXXXVI

Hark! through the silence of the cold, dull
 night,
 The hum of armies gathering rank on
 rank!
 Lo! dusky masses steal in dubious sight
 Along the leaguer'd wall and bristling
 bank
 Of the arm'd river, while with straggling
 light
 The stars peep through the vapours dim and dank,
 Which curl in curious wreaths:—how soon
 the smoke
 Of Hell shall pall them in a deeper cloak!

LXXXVII

Here pause we for the present—as even
 then
 That awful pause, dividing life from
 death,
 Struck for an instant on the hearts of
 men,
 Thousands of whom were drawing their last breath!
 A moment—and all will be life again!
 The march! the charge! the shouts of either faith,
 Hurrah! and Allah! and—one moment
 more—
 The death-cry drowning in the battle's
 roar.

CANTO THE EIGHTH

I

OH, blood and thunder! and oh, blood and
 wounds!
 These are but vulgar oaths, as you may
 deem,
 Too gentle reader! and most shocking
 sounds:
 And so they are; yet thus is Glory's
 dream
 Unriddled, and as my true Muse expounds
 At present such things, since they are her theme,
 So be they her inspirers! Call them Mars, Bellona, what you will—they mean but wars.

II

All was prepared—the fire, the sword, the men
 To wield them in their terrible array.
 The army, like a lion from his den,
 March'd forth with nerve and sinews bent to slay,—
 A human Hydra, issuing from its fen
 To breathe destruction on its winding
 way,
 Whose heads were heroes, which, cut off
 in vain,
 Immediately in others grew again.

III

History can only take things in the gross;
 But could we know them in detail, per-
 chance
 In balancing the profit and the loss,
 War's merit it by no means might enhance,
 To waste so much gold for a little dross,
 As hath been done, mere conquest to
 advance.
 The drying up a single tear has more
 Of honest fame, than shedding seas of gore.

IV

And why?—because it brings self-approbation;
 Whereas the other, after all its glare,
 Shouts, bridges, arches, pensions from a
 nation,
 Which (it may be) has not much left to
 spare,
 A higher title, or a loftier station,
 Though they may make Corruption
 gape or stare,
 Yet, in the end, except in freedom's battles,
 Are nothing but a child of Murder's rattles.

V

And such they are—and such they will be
 found:
 Not so Leonidas and Washington,
 Whose every battle-field is holy ground,
 Which breathes of nations saved, not worlds undone.
 How sweetly on the ear such echoes
 sound!
 While the mere victor's may appal or stun
 The servile and the vain, such names will
 be
 A watchword till the future shall be free.

VI

The night was dark, and the thick mist
 allow'd
 Nought to be seen save the artillery's
 flame,
 Which arch'd the horizon like a fiery cloud,
 And in the Danube's waters shone the
 same—

A mirror'd hell! the volleying roar, and
 loud
 Long booming of each peal on peal, o'ercame
 The ear far more than thunder; for Heaven's flashes
 Spare, or smite rarely—man's make millions ashes!

The column order'd on the assault scarce
 pass'd
 Beyond the Russian batteries a few toises,
 When up the bristling Moslem rose at last,
 Answering the Christian thunders with like voices:
 Then one vast fire, air, earth, and stream embraced,
 Which rock'd as 'twere beneath the mighty noises;
 While the whole rampart blazed like Etna,
 when
 The restless Titan hiccups in his den;

VIII

And one enormous shout of 'Allah!' rose
 In the same moment, loud as even the roar
 Of war's most mortal engines, to their foes Hurling defiance: city, stream, and
 shore
 Resounded 'Allah!' and the clouds which
 close
 With thick'ning canopy the conflict o'er, Vibrate to the Eternal name. Hark!
 through
 All sounds it pierceth, 'Allah! Allah! Hu!'

IX

The columns were in movement one and
 all,
 But of the portion which attack'd by
 water,
 Thicker than leaves the lives began to fall,
 Though led by Arseniew, that great son
 of slaughter,
 As brave as ever faced both bomb and ball.
 'Carnage, (so Wordsworth tells you) is God's daughter.'
 If he speak truth, she is Christ's sister, and Just now behaved as in the Holy Land.

X

The Prince de Ligne was wounded in the
 knee;
 Count Chapeau-Bras, too, had a ball
 between
 His cap and head, which proves the head
 to be Aristocratic as was ever seen,
 Because it then received no injury
 More than the cap; in fact, the ball could mean
 No harm unto a right legitimate head;
 'Ashes to ashes'—why not lead to lead?

XI

Also the General Markow, Brigadier,
 Insisting on removal of the prince
 Amidst some groaning thousands dying
 near,—
 All common fellows, who might writhe
 and wince,
 And shriek for water into a deaf ear,—
 The General Markow, who could thus evince
 His sympathy for rank, by the same token,
 To teach him greater, had his own leg broken.

XII

Three hundred cannon threw up their emetic,
 And thirty thousand muskets flung their pills
 Like hail, to make a bloody diuretic.
 Mortality! thou hast thy monthly bills:
 Thy plagues, thy famines, thy physicians,
 yet tick,
 Like the death-watch, within our ears
 the ills
 Past, present, and to come;—but all may
 yield
 To the true portrait of one battle-field;

XIII

There the still varying pangs, which multiply
 Until their very number makes men hard
 By the infinities of agony,
 Which meet the gaze, whate'er it may regard—
 The groan, the roll in dust, the all-white eye Turn'd back within its socket,—these reward
 Your rank and file by thousands, while the
 rest
 May win perhaps a riband at the breast!

XIV

Yet I love glory;—glory's a great thing:—
 Think what it is to be in your old age Maintain'd at the expense of your good
 king:
 A moderate pension shakes full many a sage,
 And heroes are but made for bards to sing,
 Which is still better; thus in verse to wage
 Your wars eternally, besides enjoying Half-pay for life, make mankind worth destroying.

XV

The troops, already disembark'd, push'd on
 To take a battery on the right: the others,
 Who landed lower down, their landing
 done,
 Had set to work as briskly as their
 brothers:

Being grenadiers, they mounted one by
 one,
 Cheerful as children climb the breasts of
 mothers,
 O'er the intrenchment and the palisade,
 Quite orderly, as if upon parade.

XVI

And this was admirable; for so hot
 The fire was, that were red Vesuvius loaded,
 Besides its lava, with all sorts of shot
 And shells or hells, it could not more have goaded.
 Of officers a third fell on the spot,
 A thing which victory by no means boded
 To gentlemen engaged in the assault:
 Hounds, when the huntsman tumbles, are at fault.

XVII

But here I leave the general concern,
 To track our hero on his path of fame:
 He must his laurels separately earn;
 For fifty thousand heroes, name by
 name,
 Though all deserving equally to turn
 A couplet, or an elegy to claim,
 Would form a lengthy lexicon of glory,
 And what is worse still, a much longer
 story:

XVIII

And therefore we must give the greater number
 To the Gazette—which doubtless fairly dealt
 By the deceased, who lie in famous
 slumber
 In ditches, fields, or wheresoe'er they felt Their clay for the last time their souls encumber;—
 Thrice happy he whose name has been well spelt
 In the despatch: I knew a man whose loss
 Was printed Grove, although his name was Grose.

XIX

Juan and Johnson join'd a certain corps,
 And fought away with might and main,
 not knowing
 The way which they had never trod before,
 And still less guessing where they might be going;
 But on they march'd, dead bodies trampling o'er,
 Firing, and thrusting, slashing, sweating, glowing,
 But fighting thoughtlessly enough to win,
 To their two selves, one whole bright bulletin.

XX

Thus on they wallow'd in the bloody mire
 Of dead and dying thousands,—sometimes gaining
 A yard or two of ground, which brought them nigher
 To some odd angle for which all were straining;
 At other times, repulsed by the close fire,
 Which really pour'd as if all hell were raining
 Instead of heaven, they stumbled backwards o'er
 A wounded comrade, sprawling in his gore.

XXI

Though 'twas Don Juan's first of fields, and though
 The nightly muster and the silent march
 In the chill dark, when courage does not
 glow
 So much as under a triumphal arch, Perhaps might make him shiver, yawn, or throw
 A glance on the dull clouds (as thick as starch,
 Which stiffen'd heaven) as if he wish'd for
 day;—
 Yet for all this he did not run away.

XXII

Indeed he could not. But what if he had?
 There have been and are heroes who
 begun
 With something not much better, or as bad:
 Frederick the Great from Molwitz
 deign'd to run,
 For the first and last time; for, like a pad,
 Or hawk, or bride, most mortals after
 one Warm bout are broken in to their new tricks,
 And fight like fiends for pay or politics.

XXIII

He was what Erin calls, in her sublime
 Old Erse or Irish, or it may be Punic;—
 (The antiquarians who can settle time,
 Which settles all things, Roman, Greek,
 or Runic, Swear that Pat's language sprung from the same clime
 With Hannibal, and wears the Tyrian tunic
 Of Dido's alphabet; and this is rational
 As any other notion, and not national;—)

XXIV

But Juan was quite 'a broth of a boy,'
 A thing of impulse and a child of song;
 Now swimming in the sentiment of joy,
 Or the sensation (if that phrase seem
 wrong),

And afterward, if he must needs destroy,
 In such good company as always throng
 To battles, sieges, and that kind of
 pleasure,
 No less delighted to employ his leisure;

XXV

But always without malice: if he warr'd
 Or loved, it was with what we call 'the
 best Intentions,' which form all mankind's
trump card,
 To be produced when brought up to the test.
 The statesman, hero, harlot, lawyer—ward
 Off each attack, when people are in quest
 Of their designs, by saying they meant
well;
 'Tis pity 'that such meaning should pave hell.'

XXVI

I almost lately have begun to doubt Whether hell's pavement—if it be so paved—
 Must not have latterly been quite worn out,
 Not by the numbers good intent hath
 saved,
 But by the mass who go below without Those ancient good intentions, which once shaved
 And smooth'd the brimstone of that street
 of hell
 Which bears the greatest likeness to Pall Mall.

XXVII

Juan, by some strange chance, which oft divides
 Warrior from warrior in their grim
 career,
 Like chastest wives from constant husbands' sides
 Just at the close of the first bridal year,
 By one of those odd turns of Fortune's
 tides,
 Was on a sudden rather puzzled here,
 When, after a good deal of heavy firing,
 He found himself alone, and friends retiring.

XXVIII

I don't know how the thing occur'd—it
 might
 Be that the greater part were kill'd or wounded,
 And that the rest had faced unto the right
 About; a circumstance which has confounded
 Cæsar himself, who, in the very sight
 Of his whole army, which so much abounded
 In courage, was obliged to snatch a shield,
 And rally back his Romans to the field.

XXXIX

Juan, who had no shield to snatch, and
 was No Cæsar, but a fine young lad, who fought
 He knew not why, arriving at this pass, Stopp'd for a minute, as perhaps he
 ought
 For a much longer time; then, like an ass (Start not, kind reader, since great Homer thought
 This simile enough for Ajax, Juan Perhaps may find it better than a new
 one);

XXX

Then, like an ass, he went upon his way,
 And, what was stranger, never look'd
 behind;
 But seeing, flashing forward, like the day
 Over the hills, a fire enough to blind
 Those who dislike to look upon a fray,
 He stumbled on, to try if he could find A path, to add his own slight arm and forces
 To corps, the greater part of which were corses.

XXXI

Perceiving then no more the commandant
 Of his own corps, nor even the corps, which had Quite disappear'd—the gods know how!
 (I can't Account for everything which may look
 bad
 In history; but we at least may grant
 It was not marvellous that a mere lad,
 In search of glory, should look on before, Nor care a pinch of snuff about his corps:—)

XXXII

Perceiving nor commander nor commanded,
 And left at large, like a young heir, to
 make
 His way to—where he knew not—single-handed;
 As travellers follow over bog and brake
 An 'ignis fatuus'; or as sailors stranded
 Unto the nearest hut themselves betake;
 So Juan, following honour and his nose,
 Rush'd where the thickest fire announced most foes.

XXXIII

He knew not where he was, nor greatly cared,
 For he was dizzy, busy, and his veins
 Fill'd as with lightning—for his spirit
 shared
 The hour, as is the case with lively
 brains;

And where the hottest fire was seen and
 heard,
 And the loud cannon peal'd his hoarsest strains,
 He rush'd, while earth and air were sadly shaken
 By thy humane discovery, Friar Bacon!

XXXIV

And as he rush'd along, it came to pass he Fell in with what was late the second column,
 Under the orders of the General Lascy,
 But now reduced, as is a bulky volume
 Into an elegant extract (much less massy)
 Of heroism, and took his place with solemn Air 'midst the rest, who kept their valiant
 faces
 And levell'd weapons still against the glaxis.

XXXV

Just at this crisis up came Johnson too,
 Who had 'retreated,' as the phrase is
 when Men run away much rather than go
 through
 Destruction's jaws into the devil's den;
 But Johnson was a clever fellow, who Knew when and how 'to cut and come
 again,'
 And never ran away, except when running
 Was nothing but a valorous kind of cunning.

XXXVI

And so, when all his corps were dead or
 dying,
 Except Don Juan, a mere novice, whose
 More virgin valour never dreamt of flying,
 From ignorance of danger, which induces
 Its votaries, like innocence relying On its own strength, with careless nerves and thews,— Johnson retired a little, just to rally
 Those who catch cold in 'shadows of death's valley.'

XXXVII

And there, a little shelter'd from the shot,
 Which rain'd from bastion, battery,
 parapet,
 Rampart, wall, casement, house—for there
 was not
 In this extensive city, sore beset
 By Christian soldiery, a single spot Which did not combat like the devil, as
 yet,—
 He found a number of Chasseurs, all
 scatter'd
 By the resistance of the chase they batter'd.

XXXVIII

And these he call'd on; and, what's strange, they came Unto his call, unlike 'the spirits from The vasty deep,' to whom you may ex-
claim,
Says Hotspur, long ere they will leave
their home.
Their reasons were uncertainty, or shame
At shrinking from a bullet or a bomb,
And that odd impulse, which in wars or creeds
Makes men, like cattle, follow him who leads.

XXXIX

By Jove! he was a noble fellow, Johnson,
And though his name, than Ajax or Achilles,
Sounds less harmonious, underneath the sun soon
We shall not see his likeness: he could kill his Man quite as quietly as blows the monsoon
Her steady breath (which some months the same still is):
Seldom he varied feature, hue, or muscle,
And could be very busy without bustle;

XL

And therefore, when he ran away, he did so
Upon reflection, knowing that behind
He would find others who would fain be rid so
Of idle apprehensions, which like wind Trouble heroic stomachs. Though their lids so Often are soon closed, all heroes are not
blind,
But when they light upon immediate
death,
Retire a little, merely to take breath.

XLI

But Johnson only ran off, to return
With many other warriors, as we said,
Unto that rather somewhat misty bourne,
Which Hamlet tells us is a pass of dread.
To Jack, howe'er, this gave but slight concern:

His soul (like galvanism upon the dead)
Acted upon the living as on wire,
And led them back into the heaviest fire.

XLII

Egad! they found the second time what
they
The first time thought quite terrible
enough
To fly from, malgré all which people say
Of glory, and all that immortal stuff
Which fills a regiment (besides their pay,
That daily shilling which makes warriors tough)—

They found on their return the self-same welcome,
Which made some think, and others know,
a hell come.

XLIII

They fell as thick as harvests beneath hail, Grass before scythes, or corn below the
sickle,
Proving that trite old truth, that life's as frail
As any other boon for which men stickle.
The Turkish batteries thrash'd them like a flail,
Or a good boxer, into a sad pickle
Putting the very bravest, who were knock'd Upon the head before their guns were cock'd.

XLIV

The Turks behind the traverses and flanks
Of the next bastion, fired away like devils,
And swept, as gales sweep foam away,
whole ranks:
However, Heaven knows how, the Fate who levels
Towns, nations, worlds, in her revolving pranks,
So order'd it, amid these sulphury
revels,
That Johnson, and some few who had not
scamper'd,
Reach'd the interior talus of the rampart.

XLV

First one or two, then five, six, and a dozen
Came mounting quickly up, for it was
now
All neck or nothing, as, like pitch or rosin, Flame was shower'd forth above, as well's below,
So that you scarce could say who best had chosen,
The gentlemen that were the first to show
Their martial faces on the parapet,
Or those who thought it brave to wait as
yet.

XLVI

But those who scaled found out that their
advance
Was favour'd by an accident or blunder:
The Greek or Turkish Cohorn's ignorance
Had palisado'd in a way you'd wonder
To see in forts of Netherlands or France—(Though these to our Gibraltar must knock under)—
Right in the middle of the parapet
Just named, these palisades were primly
set:

XLVII

So that on either side some nine or ten Paces were left, whereon you could contrive
 To march; a great convenience to our men,
 At least to all those who were left alive,
 Who thus could form a line and fight again;
 And that which further aided them to strive
 Was, that they could kick down the palisades,
 Which scarcely rose much higher than grass blades.

XLVIII

Among the first—I will not say the first,
 For such precedence upon such occasions
 Will oftentimes make deadly quarrels burst
 Out between friends as well as allied
 nations:
 The Briton must be bold who really durst Put to such trial John Bull's partial patience,
 As say that Wellington at Waterloo
 Was beaten,—though the Prussians say so
 too;—

XLIX

And that if Blücher, Bulow, Gneisenau,
 And God knows who besides in 'au'
 and 'ow,'
 Had not come up in time to cast an awe
 Into the hearts of those who fought till
 now
 As tigers combat with an empty craw,
 The Duke of Wellington had ceased to
 show
 His orders, also to receive his pensions;
 Which are the heaviest that our history mentions.

L

But never mind;—'God save the king!'
 and kings!
 For if he don't, I doubt if men will longer—
 I think I hear a little bird, who sings
 The people by and by will be the stronger:
 The veriest jade will wince whose harness
 wrings
 So much into the raw as quite to wrong
 her
 Beyond the rules of posting,—and the mob
 At last fall sick of imitating Job.

LI

At first it grumbles, then it swears, and
 then,
 Like David, flings smooth pebbles
 'gainst a giant;
 At last it takes to weapons such as men Snatch when despair makes human hearts less pliant.

Then comes the 'tug of war';—'twill come
 again,
 I rather doubt; and I would fain say 'fie on't,'
 If I had not perceived that revolution Alone can save the earth from hell's pollution.

LII

But to continue:—I say not the first,
 But of the first, our little friend Don Juan, Walk'd o'er the walls of Ismail, as if nursed
 Amidst such scenes—though this was quite a new one
 To him, and I should hope to most. The thirst
 Of glory, which so pierces through and through one,
 Pervaded him—although a generous creature,
 As warm in heart as feminine in feature.

LIII

And here he was—who upon woman's
 breast,
 Even from a child, felt like a child;
 howe'er
 The man in all the rest might be confest,
 To him it was Elysium to be there;
 And he could even withstand that awkward test
 Which Rousseau points out to the dubious fair,
 'Observe your lover when he leaves your
 arms';
 But Juan never left them while they had charms,

LIV

Unless compell'd by fate, or wave, or
 wind,
 Or near relations, who are much the
 same.
 But here he was!—where each tie that can bind
 Humanity must yield to steel and flame:
 And he whose very body was all mind,
 Flung here by fate or circumstance,
 which tame
 The loftiest, hurried by the time and place, Dash'd on like a spur'd blood-horse in a race.

LV

So was his blood stirr'd while he found resistance,
 As is the hunter's at the five-bar gate,
 Or double post and rail, where the existence
 Of Britain's youth depends upon their
 weight,

The lightest being the safest: at a distance
 He hated cruelty, as all men hate Blood, until heated—and even then his
 own
 At times would curdle o'er some heavy groan.

LVI

The General Lascy, who had been hard
 press'd,
 Seeing arrive an aid so opportune
 As were some hundred youngsters all abreast,
 Who came as if just dropp'd down from
 the moon,
 To Juan, who was nearest him, address'd
 His thanks, and hopes to take the city
 soon,
 Not reckoning him to be a 'base Bezonian'
 (As Pistol calls it), but a young Livonian.

LVII

Juan, to whom he spoke in German, knew
 As much of German as of Sanscrit, and In answer made an inclination to
 The general who held him in command;
 For seeing one with ribands, black and
 blue,
 Stars, medals, and a bloody sword in
 hand,
 Addressing him in tones which seem'd to thank,
 He recognised an officer of rank.

LVIII

Short speeches pass between two men who
 speak
 No common language; and besides, in
 time
 Of war and taking towns, when many a shriek
 Rings o'er the dialogue, and many a
 crime
 Is perpetrated ere a word can break
 Upon the ear, and sounds of horror
 chime
 In like church-bells, with sigh, howl,
 groan, yell, prayer,
 There cannot be much conversation there.

LIX

And therefore all we have related in Two long octaves, pass'd in a little minute;
 But in the same small minute, every sin
 Contrived to get itself comprised with-
 in it.
 The very cannon, deafen'd by the din,
 Grew dumb, for you might almost hear a linnet,
 As soon as thunder, 'midst the general
 noise
 Of human nature's agonising voice!

LX

The town was enter'd. Oh eternity!—
 'God made the country, and man made the town,'
 So Cowper says—and I begin to be
 Of his opinion, when I see cast down
 Rome, Babylon, Tyre, Carthage, Nineveh,
 All walls men know, and many never
 known;
 And pondering on the present and the
 past,
 To deem the woods shall be our home at last:—

LXI

Of all men, saving Sylla the man-slayer,
 Who passes for in life and death most lucky,
 Of the great names which in our faces stare,
 The General Boon, back-woodsman of Kentucky,
 Was happiest amongst mortals anywhere,
 For killing nothing but a bear or buck, he Enjoy'd the lonely, vigorous, harmless days
 Of his old age in wilds of deepest maze.

LXII

Crime came not near him—she is not the
 child
 Of solitude; Health shrank not from him—for
 Her home is in the rarely trodden wild,
 Where if men seek her not, and death be
 more
 Their choice than life, forgive them, as beguiled
 By habit to what their own hearts
 abhor—
 In cities caged. The present case in point I Cite is, that Boon lived hunting up to ninety;

LXIII

And what's still stranger, left behind a name
 For which men vainly decimate the
 throng,
 Not only famous, but of that good fame
 Without which glory's but a tavern
 song—
 Simple, serene, the antipodes of shame,
 Which hate nor envy e'er could tinge
 with wrong;
 An active hermit, even in age the child
 Of Nature, or the Man of Ross run wild.

LXIV

'Tis true he shrank from men even of his
 nation,
 When they built up unto his darling
 trees,—
 He moved some hundred miles off, for a
 station
 Where there were fewer houses and
 more ease;

The inconvenience of civilisation

Is, that you neither can be pleased nor
please;

But where he met the individual man,
He show'd himself as kind as mortal can.

LXV

He was not all alone: around him grew
A sylvan tribe of children of the chase, Whose young, unawaken'd world was ever new,

Nor sword nor sorrow yet had left a
trace

On her unwrinkled brow, nor could you
view

A frown on Nature's or on human face;
The free-born forest found and kept them
free,

And fresh as is a torrent or a tree.

LXVI

And tall, and strong, and swift of foot were they,

Beyond the dwarfing city's pale abor-
tions,

Because their thoughts had never been the
prey

Of care or gain: the green woods were their portions;

No sinking spirits told them they grew grey,
No fashion made them apes of her distortions;

Simple they were, not savage; and their rifles,

Though very true, were not yet used for trifles.

LXVII

Motion was in their days, rest in their slumbers,

And cheerfulness the handmaid of their
toil;

Nor yet too many nor too few their numbers;

Corruption could not make their hearts
her soil;

The lust which stings, the splendour which encumbers,

With the free foresters divide no spoil;
Serene, not sullen, were the solitudes
Of this unsighing people of the woods.

LXVIII

So much for Nature:—by way of variety,
Now back to thy great joys, Civilisation!
And the sweet consequence of large society,

War, pestilence, the despot's desolation,
The kingly scourge, the lust of notoriety,
The millions slain by soldiers for their ration,

The scenes like Catherine's boudoir at
three-score,

With Ismail's storm to soften it the more.

LXX

The town was enter'd: first one column
made

Its sanguinary way good—then another;
The reeking bayonet and the flashing blade

Clash'd 'gainst the scimitar, and babe and mother

With distant shrieks were heard Heaven to upbraid:—

Still closer sulphury clouds began to smother

The breath of morn and man, where foot
by foot

The madden'd Turks their city still dispute.

LXXI

Koutousow, he who afterwards beat back (With some assistance from the frost
and snow)

Napoleon on his bold and bloody track,
It happen'd was himself beat back just
now:

He was a jolly fellow, and could crack
His jest alike in face of friend or foe,

Though life, and death, and victory were
at stake;

But here it seem'd his jokes had ceased to take:

LXXII

For having thrown himself into a ditch,
Follow'd in haste by various grenadiers,
Whose blood the puddle greatly did enrich,

He climb'd to where the parapet appears;

But there his project reach'd its utmost pitch

('Mongst other deaths the General Ribauptierre's

Was much regretted), for the Moslem men
Threw them all down into the ditch again.

LXXIII

And had it not been for some stray troops landing

They knew not where, being carried by the stream

To some spot, where they lost their understanding,

And wander'd up and down as in a
dream,

Until they reach'd, as daybreak was expanding,

That which a portal to their eyes did
seem,—

The great and gay Koutousow might have lain

Where three parts of his column yet remain.

LXXIII

And scrambling round the rampart, these same troops,
 After the taking of the 'Cavalier,'
 Just as Koutousow's most 'forlorn' of
 'hopes'

Took, like chameleons, some slight tinge of fear,
 Open'd the gate call'd 'Kilia,' to the groups
 Of baffled heroes, who stood shyly near,
 Sliding knee-deep in lately frozen mud,
 Now thaw'd into a marsh of human blood.

LXXIV

The Kozacks, or, if so you please, Cos-sacques—
 (I don't much pique myself upon orthography,
 So that I do not grossly err in facts,
 Statistics, tactics, politics, and geography)—

Having been used to serve on horses' backs,
 And no great dilettanti in topography
 Of fortresses, but fighting where it pleases
 Their chiefs to order,—were all cut to pieces.

LXXV

Their column, though the Turkish batteries thunder'd
 Upon them, ne'ertheless had reach'd
 the rampart,
 And naturally thought they could have plunder'd

The city, without being further ham-per'd;
 But as it happens to brave men, they blunder'd—

The Turks at first pretended to have
 scamper'd,
 Only to draw them 'twixt two bastion corners,
 From whence they sallied on those Christian scorners.

LXXVI

Then being taken by the tail—a taking Fatal to bishops as to soldiers—these Cossacks were all cut off as day was breaking,
 And found their lives were let at a short lease—

But perish'd without shivering or shaking,
 Leaving as ladders their heap'd carcasses,
 O'er which Lieutenant-Colonel Yesouskoi March'd with the brave battalion of Polouzki:—

LXXVII

This valiant man kill'd all the Turks he met,
 But could not eat them, being in his turn Slain by some Mussulmans, who would
 not yet,
 Without resistance, see their city burn.

The walls were won, but 'twas an even bet
 Which of the armies would have cause to mourn:
 'Twas blow for blow, disputing inch by inch,
 For one would not retreat, nor t' other flinch.

LXXVIII

Another column also suffer'd much:— And here we may remark with the historian,
 You should but give few cartridges to such Troops as are meant to march with greatest glory on:
 When matters must be carried by the touch
 Of the bright bayonet, and they all should hurry on,
 They sometimes, with a hankering for
 existence,
 Keep merely firing at a foolish distance.

LXXIX

A junction of the General Meknop's men (Without the General, who had fallen some time
 Before, being badly seconded just then)
 Was made at length with those who dared to climb
 The death-disgorging rampart once again;
 And though the Turks' resistance was
 sublime,
 They took the bastion, which the Seraskier Defended at a price extremely dear.

LXXX

Juan and Johnson, and some volunteers
 Among the foremost, offer'd him good quarter,
 A word which little suits with Seraskiers,
 Or at least suited not this valiant Tartar.
 He died, deserving well his country's tears,
 A savage sort of military martyr.
 An English naval officer, who wish'd
 To make him prisoner, was also dish'd:

LXXXI

For all the answer to his proposition
 Was from a pistol-shot that laid him dead;
 On which the rest, without more intermis-
 sion,
 Began to lay about with steel and lead—
 The pious metals most in requisition
 On such occasions: not a single head
 Was spared;—three thousand Moslems
 perish'd here,
 And sixteen bayonets pierced the Seraskier.

LXXXII

The city's taken—only part by part—
 And death is drunk with gore: there's not a street
 Where fights not to the last some desperate
 heart
 For those for whom it soon shall cease to beat.

Here War forgot his own destructive art
 In more destroying Nature; and the heat
 Of carnage, like the Nile's sun-sodden
 slime,
 Engender'd monstrous shapes of every
 crime.

LXXXIII

A Russian officer, in martial tread
 Over a heap of bodies, felt his heel
 Seized fast, as if 'twere by the serpent's
 head

Whose fangs Eve taught her human seed
 to feel:

In vain he kick'd, and swore, and writhed,
 and bled,

And howl'd for help as wolves do for a meal—

The teeth still kept their gratifying hold,
 As do the subtle snakes described of old.

LXXXIV

A dying Moslem, who had felt the foot
 Of a foe o'er him, snatch'd at it, and bit
 The very tendon which is most acute—(That which some ancient Muse or modern wit Named after thee, Achilles) and quite through't

He made the teeth meet, nor relinquish'd it

Even with his life—for (but they lie) 'tis
 said

To the live leg still clung the sever'd head.

LXXXV

However this may be, 'tis pretty sure
 The Russian officer for life was lamed,
 For the Turk's teeth stuck faster than a skewer,

 And left him 'midst the invalid and
 maim'd:

The regimental surgeon could not cure
 His patient, and perhaps was to be blamed

 More than the head of the inveterate foe,
 Which was cut off, and scarce even then let go.

LXXXVI

But then the fact's a fact—and 'tis the part
 Of a true poet to escape from fiction

Whene'er he can; for there is little art
 In leaving verse more free from the restriction

 Of truth than prose, unless to suit the mart
 For what is sometimes call'd poetic

diction
 And that outrageous appetite for lies Which Satan angles with for souls, like flies.

LXXXVII

The city's taken, but not render'd!—No!
 There's not a Moslem that hath yielded

sword:

The blood may gush out, as the Danube's
 flow

Rolls by the city wall; but deed nor
 word

Acknowledge aught of dread of death or
 foe:

In vain the yell of victory is roar'd
 By the advancing Muscovite—the groan
 Of the last foe is echoed by his own.

LXXXVIII

The bayonet pierces and the sabre cleaves,
 And human lives are lavish'd every-

where,
 As the year closing whirls the scarlet leaves
 When the stripp'd forest bows to the bleak air,

 And groans; and thus the peopled city
 grieves,

Shorn of its best and loveliest, and left
 bare;

But still it falls in vast and awful splinters,
 As oaks blown down with all their thousand winters.

LXXXIX

It is an awful topic—but 'tis not
 My cue for any time to be terrific:

For checker'd as is seen our human lot
 With good, and bad, and worse, alike prolific

 Of melancholy merriment, to quote
 Too much of one sort would be soporific;—

 Without, or with, offence to friends or
 foes,

I sketch your world exactly as it goes.

XC

And one good action in the midst of crimes
 Is 'quite refreshing,' in the affected

phrase
 Of these ambrosial, Pharisaic times,
 With all their pretty milk-and-water

ways,
 And may serve therefore to bedew these
 rhymes,

A little scorch'd at present with the blaze
 Of conquest and its consequences, which Make epic poesy so rare and rich.

XCI

Upon a taken bastion, where there lay Thousands of slaughter'd men, a yet

warm group
 Of murder'd women, who had found their
 way

To this vain refuge, made the good heart droop

And shudder;—while, as beautiful as May,
A female child of ten years tried to stoop
And hide her little palpitating breast
Amidst the bodies lull'd in bloody rest.

XCII

Two villainous Cossacques pursued the
child
With flashing eyes and weapons:
match'd with them,
The rudest brute that roams Siberia's wild
Has feelings pure and polish'd as a gem,—
The bear is civilised, the wolf is mild:
And whom for this at last must we condemn?
Their natures? or their sovereigns, who employ
All arts to teach their subjects to destroy?

XCIII

Their sabres glitter'd o'er her little head, Whence her fair hair rose twining with affright,
Her hidden face was plunged amidst the
dead:
When Juan caught a glimpse of this sad
sight,
I shall not say exactly what he said,
Because it might not solace 'ears polite';
But what he did, was to lay on their backs,
The readiest way of reasoning with Cossacques.

XCIV

One's hip he slash'd, and split the other's shoulder,
And drove them with their brutal yells to seek
If there might be surgeons who could solder
The wounds they richly merited, and shriek
Their baffled rage and pain; while waxing colder
As he turn'd o'er each pale and gory
cheek,
Don Juan raised his little captive from
The heap a moment more had made her
tomb.

XCV

And she was chill as they, and on her face
A slender streak of blood announced how near
Her fate had been to that of all her race;
For the same blow which laid her mother here
Had scarr'd her brow, and left its crimson
trace,
As the last link with all she had held
dear;
But else unhurt, she open'd her large eyes,
And gazed on Juan with a wild surprise.

Just at this instant, while their eyes were
fix'd
Upon each other, with dilated glance,
In Juan's look, pain, pleasure, hope, fear,
mix'd
With joy to save, and dread of some mis-
chance
Unto his protégée; while hers, transfix'd
With infant terrors, glared as from a trance,
A pure, transparent, pale, yet radiant face,
Like to a lighted alabaster vase;—

Up came John Johnson (I will not say 'Jack,'
For that were vulgar, cold, and commonplace
On great occasions, such as an attack
On cities, as hath been the present case):
Up Johnson came, with hundreds at his
back,
Exclaiming—'Juan! Juan! On, boy!
brace
Your arm, and I'll bet Moscow to a dollar,
'That you and I will win St. George's collar.

XCVIII

'The Seraskier is knock'd upon the head,
But the stone bastion still remains, wherein
The old Pacha sits among some hundreds
dead,
Smoking his pipe quite calmly 'midst
the din
Of our artillery and his own: 'tis said
Our kill'd, already piled up to the chin,
Lie round the battery; but still it batters,
And grape in volleys, like a vineyard, scatters.

XCIX

'Then up with me!'—But Juan answer'd,
'Look Upon this child—I saved her—must not leave
Her life to chance; but point me out some nook
Of safety, where she less may shrink and
grieve,
And I am with you.'—Whereon Johnson took
A glance around—and shrugg'd—and twitch'd his sleeve
And black silk neckcloth—and replied,
'You're right;
Poor thing! what's to be done? I'm puzzled quite.'

C

Said Juan—'Whatsoever is to be Done, I'll not quit her till she seems secure
Of present life a good deal more than
we.'— Quoth Johnson—'Neither will I quite insure;

But at the least you may die gloriously.—
 Juan replied—‘At least I will endure
 Whate’er is to be borne—but not resign
 This child, who is parentless, and therefore mine.’

CI

Johnson said—‘Juan, we’ve no time to
 lose;
 The child’s a pretty child—a very pretty—
 I never saw such eyes—but hark! now
 choose Between your fame and feelings, pride and pity:—
 Hark! how the roar increases!—no excuse
 Will serve when there is plunder in a
 city:—
 I should be loth to march without you, but,
 By God! we’ll be too late for the first cut.’

CII

But Juan was immovable; until Johnson, who really loved him in his
 way, Pick’d out amongst his followers with some skill
 Such as he thought the least given up to
 prey;
 And swearing if the infant came to ill
 That they should all be shot on the next
 day;
 But if she were deliver’d safe and sound,
 They should at least have fifty rubles
 round,

CIII

And all allowances besides of plunder
 In fair proportion with their comrades;—then Juan consented to march on through
 thunder,
 Which thinn’d at every step their ranks
 of men:
 And yet the rest rush’d eagerly—no
 wonder,
 For they were heated by the hope of
 gain,
 A thing which happens everywhere each
 day—
 No hero trusteth wholly to half pay.

CIV

And such is victory, and such is man!
 At least nine-tenths of what we call so:—God
 May have another name for half we scan
 As human beings, or his ways are odd.
 But to our subject: a brave Tartar khan—
 Or ‘sultan,’ as the author (to whose nod
 In prose I bend my humble verse) doth call This chieftain—somehow would not yield
 at all

CV

But flank’d by five brave sons (such is polygamy,
 That she spawns warriors by the score,
 where none
 Are prosecuted for that false crime bigamy),
 He never would believe the city won
 While courage clung but to a single twig.—
 Am I
 Describing Priam’s Peleus’, or Jove’s
 son?
 Neither—but a good, plain, old, temperate
 man,
 Who fought with his five children in the van.

CVI

To take him was the point. The truly brave,
 When they behold the brave oppress’d with odds,
 Are touch’d with a desire to shield and
 save;—
 A mixture of wild beasts and demi-gods
 Are they—now furious as the sweeping
 wave,
 Now moved with pity; even as sometimes nods
 The rugged tree unto the summer wind, Compassion breathes along the savage
 mind.

CVII

But he would not be taken, and replied
 To all the propositions of surrender
 By mowing Christians down on every side,
 As obstinate as Swedish Charles at Bender.
 His five brave boys no less the foe defied;
 Whereon the Russian pathos grew less tender,
 As being a virtue, like terrestrial patience,
 Apt to wear out on trifling provocations.

CVIII

And spite of Johnson and of Juan, who Expended all their Eastern phraseology
 In begging him, for God’s sake, just to show
 So much less fight as might form an apology
 For them in saving such a desperate foe—
 He hew’d away, like doctors of theology
 When they dispute with sceptics; and with curses
 Struck at his friends, as babies beat their nurses.

CIX

Nay, he had wounded, though but slightly,
 both
 Juan and Johnson; whereupon they fell,
 The first with sighs, the second with an
 oath,
 Upon his angry sultanship, pell-mell,

And all around were grown exceeding wroth
At such a pertinacious infidel,
And pour'd upon him and his sons like rain,
Which they resisted like a sandy plain

CX

That drinks and still is dry. At last they perish'd—

His second son was levell'd by a shot;
His third was sabred; and the fourth, most
cherish'd

Of all the five, on bayonets met his lot;
The fifth, who, by a Christian mother
nourish'd,

Had been neglected, ill-used, and what
not,

Because deform'd, yet died all game and bottom,

To save a sire, who blush'd that he begot
him.

CXI

The eldest was a true and tameless Tartar,
As great a scorner of the Nazarene

As ever Mahomet pick'd out for a martyr, Who only saw the black-eyed girls in
green,

Who make the beds of those who won't take quarter

On earth, in Paradise; and when once
seen,

Those houris, like all other pretty creatures,

Do just whate'er they please, by dint of features.

CXII

And what they pleased to do with the young khan

In heaven I know not, nor pretend to
guess;

But doubtless they prefer a fine young man
To tough old heroes, and can do no less;

And that's the cause no doubt why, if we scan

A field of battle's ghastly wilderness,
For one rough, weather-beaten, veteran
body,

You'll find ten thousand handsome coxcombs bloody.

CXIII

Your houris also have a natural pleasure
In lopping off your lately married men,

Before the bridal hours have danced their
measure,

And the sad, second moon grows dim
again,

Or dull repentance hath had dreary leisure
To wish him back a bachelor now and
then:

And thus your houri (it may be) disputes
Of these brief blossoms the immediate fruits.

CXIV

Thus the young khan, with houris in his
sight,

Thought not upon the charms of four young brides,

But bravely rush'd on his first heavenly
night.

In short, howe'er our better faith derides,

These black-eyed virgins make the Moslems fight,

As though there were one heaven and none besides—

Whereas, if all be true we hear of heaven
And hell, there must at least be six or seven.

CXV

So fully flash'd the phantom on his eyes,
That when the very lance was in his heart,

He shouted 'Allah!' and saw Paradise
With all its veil of mystery drawn apart,

And bright eternity without disguise
On his soul, like a ceaseless sunrise,

dart:—
With prophets, houris, angels, saints, desried

In one voluptuous blaze,—and then he died:

CXVI

But with a heavenly rapture on his face,
The good old khan, who long had ceased to see

Houris, or aught except his florid race

Who grew like cedars round him gloriously—

When he beheld his latest hero grace
The earth, which he became like a fell'd

tree,
Paused for a moment from the fight, and

cast
A glance on that slain son, his first and last.

CXVII

The soldiers, who beheld him drop his point,
Stopp'd as if once more willing to concede

Quarter, in case he bade them not 'aroynt!'
As he before had done. He did not heed

Their pause nor signs: his heart was out of joint,

And shook (till now unshaken) like a reed,

As he look'd down upon his children gone:
And felt—though done with life—he was alone.

CXVIII

But 'twas a transient tremor;—with a
spring

Upon the Russian steel his breast he
flung,

As carelessly as hurls the moth her wing Against the light wherein she dies: he clung

Closer, that all the deadlier they might wring,
Unto the bayonets which had pierced his young;
And throwing back a dim look on his sons,
In one wide wound pour'd forth his soul
at once.

CXIX

'Tis strange enough—the rough, tough soldiers who Spared neither sex nor age in their career
Of carnage, when this old man was pierced
through,
And lay before them with his children
near,
Touch'd by the heroism of him they slew,
Were melted for a moment; though no
tear Flow'd from their bloodshot eyes, all red with strife,
They honour'd such determined scorn of
life.

CXX

But the stone bastion still kept up its fire,
Where the chief pacha calmly held his
post:
Some twenty times he made the Russ retire,
And baffled the assaults of all their host;
At length he condescended to inquire,
If yet the city's rest were won or lost;
And being told the latter, sent a bey
To answer Ribas' summons to give way.

CXXI

In the mean time, between legg'd, with great sang-froid,
Among the scorching ruins he sat smoking
Tobacco on a little carpet;—Troy
Saw nothing like the scene around;—yet looking
With martial stoicism, nought seem'd to annoy
His stern philosophy; but gently strok-
ing
His beard, he puff'd his pipe's ambrosial
gales,
As if he had three lives, as well as tails.

CXXII

The town was taken—whether he might
yield
Himself or bastion, little matter'd now:
His stubborn valour was no future shield.
Ismail's no more! The crescent's silver
bow
Sunk, and the crimson cross glared o'er
the field,
But red with no redeeming gore: the
glow

Of burning streets, like moonlight on the
water,
Was imaged back in blood, the sea of slaughter.

CXXIII

All that the mind would shrink from of excesses;
All that the body perpetrates of bad;
All that we read, hear, dream, of man's distresses;
All that the devil would do if run stark
mad;
All that defies the worst which pen expresses;
All by which hell is peopled, or as sad
As hell—mere mortals who their power abuse—
Was here (as heretofore and since) let loose.

CXXIV

If here and there some transient trait of
pity
Was shown, and some more noble heart broke through Its bloody bond, and saved, perhaps, some pretty
Child, or an aged, helpless man or two—
What's this in one annihilated city, Where thousand loves, and ties, and duties grew?
Cockneys of London! Muscadins of Paris!
Just ponder what a pious pastime war is.

CXXV

Think how the joys of reading a Gazette Are purchased by all agonies and
crimes:
Or if these do not move you, don't forget
Such doom may be your own in after-
times.
Meantime the Taxes, Castlereagh, and Debt,
Are hints as good as sermons, or as
rhymes.
Read your own hearts and Ireland's present story,
Then feed her famine fat with Wellesley's
glory.

CXXVI

But still there is unto a patriot nation,
Which loves so well its country and its
king,
A subject of sublimest exultation—
Bear it, ye Muses, on your brightest wing!
Howe'er the mighty locust, Desolation Strip your green fields, and to your harvest cling,
Gaunt famine never shall approach the
throne—
Though Ireland starve, great George weighs twenty stone.

CXXVII

But let me put an end unto my theme:
 There was an end of Ismail—hapless
 town!
 Far flash'd her burning towers o'er Danube's stream,
 And redly ran his blushing waters down.
 The horrid war-whoop and the shriller
 scream
 Rose still; but fainter were the thunders
 grown:
 Off forty thousand who had mann'd the wall,
 Some hundreds breathed—the rest were silent all!

CXXVIII

In one thing ne'ertheless 'tis fit to praise
 The Russian army upon this occasion,
 A virtue much in fashion now-a-days,
 And therefore worthy of commemora-
 tion:
 The topic's tender, so shall be my phrase—
 Perhaps the season's chill, and their long
 station
 In winter's depth, or want of rest and victual, Had made them chaste;—they ravish'd very little.

CXXIX

Much did they slay, more plunder, and no
 less Might here and there occur some violation
 In the other line;—but not to such excess
 As when the French, that dissipated
 nation,
 Take towns by storm: no causes can I guess,
 Except cold weather and commiseration;
 But all the ladies, save some twenty score,
 Were almost as much virgins as before.

CXXX

Some odd mistakes, too, happen'd in the dark,
 Which show'd a want of lanterns, or of
 taste—
 Indeed the smoke was such they scarce could mark
 Their friends from foes,—besides, such things from haste
 Occur, though rarely, when there is a spark
 Of light to save the venerably chaste:
 But six old damsels, each of seventy years,
 Were all deflower'd by different grenadiers.

CXXXI

But on the whole their continence was great;
 So that some disappointment there ensued
 To those who had felt the inconvenient
 state
 Of 'single blessedness,' and thought it
 good

(Since it was not their fault, but only fate,
 To bear these crosses) for each waning
 prude
 To make a Roman sort of Sabine wedding, Without the expense and the suspense of bedding.

CXXXII

Some voices of the buxom middle-aged
 Were also heard to wonder in the din (Widows of forty were these birds long caged)
 'Wherefore the ravishing did not begin!'
 But while the thirst for gore and plunder
 raged,
 There was small leisure for superfluous
 sin;
 But whether they escaped or no, lies hid
 In darkness—I can only hope they did.

CXXXIII

Suwarrow now was conqueror—a match
 For Timour or for Zinghis in his trade.
 While mosques and streets, beneath his eyes, like thatch
 Blazed, and the cannon's roar was scarce allay'd,
 With bloody hands he wrote his first despatch;
 And here exactly follows what he
 said:—
 'Glory to God and to the Empress!'
 (Powers Eternal! such names mingled!) 'Ismail's ours.'

CXXXIV

Methinks these are the most tremendous
 words,
 Since 'Mené, Mené, Tekel,' and 'Uphar-
 sin,'
 Which hands or pens have ever traced off
 swords.
 Heaven help me! I'm but little of a parson:
 What Daniel read was short-hand of the Lord's,
 Severe, sublime; the prophet wrote no farce on
 The fate of nations;—but this Russ so
 witty
 Could rhyme, like Nero, o'er a burning city.

CXXXV

He wrote this Polar melody, and set it, Duly accompanied by shrieks and
 groans,
 Which few will sing, I trust, but none forget it—
 For I will teach, if possible, the stones

To rise against earth's tyrants. Never let it Be said that we still truckle unto thrones;—
 But ye—our children's children! think how we Show'd what things were before the world was free!

CXXXVI

That hour is not for us, but 'tis for you.
 And as, in the great joy of your millennium,
 You hardly will believe such things were
 true
 As now occur, I thought that I would pen you 'em;
 But may their very memory perish too!—
 Yet if perchance remember'd, still disdain you 'em
 More than you scorn the savages of yore,
 Who painted their bare limbs, but not with gore.

CXXXVII

And when you hear historians talk of
 thrones,
 And those that sate upon them, let it be
 As we now gaze upon the mammoth's
 bones,
 And wonder what old world such things could see,
 Or hieroglyphics on Egyptian stones,
 The pleasant riddles of futurity—
 Guessing at what shall happily be hid,
 As the real purpose of a pyramid.

CXXXVIII

Reader! I have kept my word,—at least so
 far As the first canto promised. You have
 now
 Had sketches of love, tempest, travel,
 war,—
 All very accurate, you must allow,
 And epic, if plain truth should prove no
 bar;
 For I have drawn much less with a long
 bow
 Than my forerunners. Carelessly I sing,
 But Phœbus lends me now and then a string,

CXXXIX

With which I still can harp, and carp, and fiddle.
 What further hath befallen or may be-
 fall
 The hero of this grand poetic riddle,
 I by and by may tell you, if at all:
 But now I choose to break off in the middle,
 Worn out with battering Ismail's stubborn wall,
 While Juan is sent off with the despatch,
 For which all Petersburg is on the watch.

CXL

This special honour was conferr'd, be-
 cause
 He had behaved with courage and humanity—
 Which last men like, when they have time to pause
 From their ferocities produced by vanity.
 His little captive gain'd him some applause
 For saving her amidst the wild insanity
 Of carnage,—and I think he was more glad in her Safety, than his new order of St. Vladimir.

The Moslem orphan went with her protector,
 For she was homeless, houseless, helpless; all
 Her friends, like the sad family of Hector, Had perish'd in the field or by the
 wall:
 Her very place of birth was but a spectre
 Of what it had been; there the Muezzin's
 call
 To prayer was heard no more! and Juan
 wept,
 And made a vow to shield her, which he kept.

CANTO THE NINTH

I

OH, Wellington! (or 'Villainton'—for
 Fame
 Sounds the heroic syllables both ways;
 France could not even conquer your great
 name,
 But punn'd it down to this facetious
 phrase—
 Beating or beaten she will laugh the same)
 You have obtain'd great pensions and much praise:
 Glory like yours should any dare gainsay,
 Humanity would rise, and thunder 'Nay!'

II

I don't think that you used Kinnaird quite
 well
 In Marinet's affair—in fact 'twas shabby,
 And like some other things won't do to tell Upon your tomb in Westminster's old abbey.
 Upon the rest 'tis not worth while to
 dwell,
 Such tales being for the tea-hours of some tabby;
 But though your years as man tend fast to zero,
 In fact your grace is still but a young hero.

III

Though Britain owes (and pays you too)
 so much Yet Europe doubtless owes you greatly
 more:
 You have repair'd Legitimacy's crutch,
 A prop not quite so certain as before:
 The Spanish, and the French, as well as Dutch,
 Have seen, and felt, how strongly you
restore;
 And Waterloo has made the world your debtor
 (I wish your bards would sing it rather better).

IV

You are 'the best of cut-throats':—do not
 start;
 The phrase is Shakspeare's, and not misapplied:—
 War's a brain-spattering, windpipe-slitting art,
 Unless her cause by right be sanctified.
 If you have acted once a generous part,
 The world, not the world's masters, will decide,
 And I shall be delighted to learn who,
 Save you and yours, have gain'd by Waterloo?

V

I am no flatterer—you've supp'd full of flattery:
 They say you like it too—'tis no great
 wonder.
 He whose whole life has been assault and battery,
 At last may get a little tired of thunder;
 And swallowing eulogy much more than satire, he May like being praised for every lucky
 blunder,
 Call'd 'Saviour of the Nations'—not yet
 saved,
 And 'Europe's Liberator'—still enslaved.

VI

I've done. Now go and dine from off the plate
 Presented by the Prince of the Brazils,
 And send the sentinel before your gate
 A slice or two from your luxurious meals:
 He fought, but has not fed so well of late.
 Some hunger, too, they say the people feels:—
 There is no doubt that you deserve your ration,
 But pray give back a little to the nation.

VII

I don't mean to reflect—a man so great as You, my lord duke! is far above reflection:

The high Roman fashion, too, of Cincinnatus,
 With modern history has but small con-
 nexion:
 Though as an Irishman you love potatoes,
 You need not take them under your
 direction;
 And half a million for your Sabine farm
 Is rather dear!—I'm sure I mean no harm.

VIII

Great men have always scorn'd great recompenses:
 Epaminondas saved his Thebes, and
 died,
 Not leaving even his funeral expenses:
 George Washington had thanks, and nought beside,
 Except the all-cloudless glory (which few men's is)
 To free his country: Pitt too had his
 pride,
 And as a high-soul'd minister of state is Renown'd for ruining Great Britain gratis.

IX

Never had mortal man such opportunity,
 Except Napoleon, or abused it more:
 You might have freed fallen Europe from the unity
 Of tyrants, and been blest from shore to
 shore:
 And now—what is your fame? Shall the Muse tune it ye?
 Now—that the rabble's first vain shouts are o'er?
 Go! hear it in your famish'd country's cries!
 Behold the world! and curse your victories!

As these new cantos touch on warlike feats,
 To you the unflattering Muse deigns to inscribe
 Truths, that you will not read in the Gazettes,
 But which 'tis time to teach the hireling
 tribe
 Who fatten on their country's gore, and debts,
 Must be recited—and without a bribe.
 You did great things; but not being great
 in mind,
 Have left undone the greatest—and mankind.

XI

Death laughs—Go ponder o'er the skeleton
 With which men image out the unknown
 thing
 That hides the past world, like to a set sun
 Which still elsewhere may rouse a brighter spring—

Death laughs at all you weep for:—look upon This hourly dread of all! whose threaten'd sting
 Turns life to terror, even though in its sheath:
 Mark! how its lipless mouth grins without breath!

XII

Mark! how it laughs and scorns at all you
 are!
 And yet was what you are; from ear to ear
 It laughs not—there is now no fleshy bar
 So call'd; the Antic long hath ceased to
hear,
 But still he smiles; and whether near or far
 He strips from man that mantle (far more dear
 Than even the tailor's), his incarnate skin, White, black, or copper—the dead bones will grin.

XIII

And thus Death laughs,—it is sad merri-
 ment,
 But still it is so; and with such example
 Why should not Life be equally content
 With his superior, in a smile to trample
 Upon the nothings which are daily spent Like bubbles on an ocean much less ample
 Than the eternal deluge, which devours
 Suns as rays—worlds like atoms—years like hours?

XIV

'To be, or not to be? that is the question,' Says Shakspeare, who just now is much in fashion.
 I am neither Alexander nor Hephæstion,
 Nor ever had for abstract fame much
 passion;
 But would much rather have a sound digestion,
 Than Buonaparte's cancer:—could I dash on
 Through fifty victories to shame or fame,
 Without a stomach—what were a good
 name?

XV

'O dura ilia messorum!'—'Oh
 Ye rigid guts of reapers!' I translate
 For the great benefit of those who know
 What indigestion is—that inward fate
 Which makes all Styx through one small liver flow.
 A peasant's sweat is worth his lord's
 estate:
 Let this one toil for bread—that rack for
 rent,
 He who sleeps best may be the most content.

XVI

'To be, or not to be?'—Ere I decide,
 I should be glad to know that which is being;
 'Tis true we speculate both far and wide,
 And deem, because we see, we are all-seeing:
 For my part, I'll enlist on neither side,
 Until I see both sides for once agreeing.
 For me, I sometimes think that life is
 death,
 Rather than life a mere affair of breath.

XVII

'Que sçais-je?' was the motto of Montaigne,
 As also of the first academicians;
 That all is dubious which man may attain,
 Was one of their most favourite positions.
 There's no such thing as certainty, that's
 plain
 As any of Mortality's conditions;
 So little do we know what we're about in This world, I doubt if doubt itself be doubting.

XVIII

It is a pleasant voyage perhaps to float,
 Like Pyrrho, on a sea of speculation;
 But what if carrying sail capsize the boat?
 Your wise men don't know much of navigation;
 And swimming long in the abyss of thought
 Is apt to tire: a calm and shallow station
 Well nigh the shore, where one stoops down and gathers
 Some pretty shell, is best for moderate bathers.

XIX

'But heaven,' as Cassio says, 'is above
 all—
 No more of this, then, let us pray!' We have Souls to save, since Eve's slip and Adam's
 fall,
 Which tumbled all mankind into the grave, Besides fish, beasts, and birds. 'The sparrow's fall
 Is special providence,' though how it
 gave Offence, we know not; probably it perch'd
 Upon the tree which Eve so fondly search'd.

XX

Oh! ye immortal Gods! what is theogony?
 Oh! thou, too, mortal man! what is philanthropy?
 Oh! world, which was and is, what is cosmogony?
 Some people have accused me of misan-thropy;

And yet I know no more than the mahogany
That forms this desk, of what they mean; lykanthropy
I comprehend, for without transformation
Men become wolves on any slight occasion.

XXI

But I, the mildest, meekest of mankind,
Like Moses, or Melancthon, who have ne'er Done anything exceedingly unkind,—
And (though I could not now and then forbear Following the bent of body or of mind)
Have always had a tendency to spare,—
Why do they call me misanthrope? Because They hate me, not I them:—and here we'll pause.

XXII

'Tis time we should proceed with our good poem,—
For I maintain that it is really good,
Not only in the body but the proem,
However little both are understood
Just now,—but by and by the Truth will show 'em
Herself in her sublimest attitude:
And till she doth, I fain must be content
To share her beauty and her banishment.

XXIII

Our hero (and, I trust, kind reader! yours)
Was left upon his way to the chief city
Of the immortal Peter's polish'd boors,
Who still have shown themselves more brave than witty.
I know its mighty empire now allures
Much flattery—even Voltaire's, and that's a pity.
For me, I deem an absolute autocrat
Not a barbarian, but much worse than that.

XXIV

And I will war, at least in words (and—should My chance so happen—deeds), with all who war
With Thought;—and of Thought's foes
by far most rude,
Tyrants and sycophants have been and are.
I know not who may conquer: if I could Have such a prescience, it should be no bar
To this my plain, sworn, downright detestation
Of every despotism in every nation.

XXV

It is not that I adulate the people:
Without me, there are demagogues enough,
And infidels, to pull down every steeple,
And set up in their stead some proper stuff.
Whether they may sow scepticism to reap hell,
As is the Christian dogma rather rough,
I do not know;—I wish men to be free
As much from mobs as kings—from you as me.

XXVI

The consequence is, being of no party,
I shall offend all parties:—never mind!
My words, at least, are more sincere and hearty
Than if I sought to sail before the wind.
He who has nought to gain can have small art: he
Who neither wishes to be bound nor bind,
May still expatiate freely, as will I,
Nor give my voice to slavery's jackal cry.

XXVII

That's an appropriate simile, that jackal;
—al;
I've heard them in the Ephesian ruins howl
By night, as do that mercenary pack all,
Power's base purveyors, who for pickings prowl,
And scent the prey their masters would attack all.
However, the poor jackals are less foul
(As being the brave lions' keen providers)
Than human insects, catering for spiders.

XXVIII

Raise but an arm! 'twill brush their webs away,
And without that, their poison and their claws
Are useless. Mind, good people! what I say—(Or rather peoples)—go on without pause!
The web of these tarantulas each day
Increases, till you shall make common cause:
None, save the Spanish fly and Attic bee,
As yet are strongly stinging to be free.

XXIX

Don Juan, who had shone in the late slaughter,
Was left upon his way with the despatch.
Where blood was talk'd of as we would of water;
And carcasses that lay as thick as thatch

O'er silenced cities, merely served to flatter Fair Catherine's pastime—who look'd on the match
 Between these nations as a main of cocks, Wherein she liked her own to stand like rocks.

XXX

And there in a kibitka he roll'd on,
 (A cursed sort of carriage without
 springs,
 Which on rough roads leaves scarcely a whole bone,)
 Pondering on glory, chivalry, and kings,
 And orders, and on all that he had done—
 And wishing that post-horses had the
 wings
 Of Pegasus, or at the least post-chaises
 Had feathers, when a traveller on deep ways is.

XXXI

At every jolt—and they were many—still
 He turn'd his eyes upon his little charge,
 As if he wish'd that she should fare less ill
 Than he, in these sad highways left at large Toruts, and flints, and lovely Nature's skill,
 Who is no paviour, nor admits a barge
 On her canals, where God takes sea and
 land,
 Fishery and farm, both into his own hand.

XXXII

At least he pays no rent, and has best right
 To be the first of what we used to call
 'Gentlemen farmers', a race worn out quite,
 Since lately there have been no rents at all,
 And 'gentlemen' are in a piteous plight,
 And 'farmers' can't raise Ceres from
 her fall:
 She fell with Buonaparte—What strange
 thoughts
 Arise, when we see emperors fall with oats!

XXXIII

But Juan turn'd his eyes on the sweet child Whom he had saved from slaughter—
 what a trophy!
 Oh! ye who build up monuments, defiled
 With gore, like Nadir Shah, that costive
 sophy,
 Who, after leaving Hindostan a wild,
 And scarce to the Mogul a cup of coffee
 To soothe his woes withal, was slain, the sinner!
 Because he could no more digest his dinner;—

XXXIV

Oh ye! or we! or he! or she! reflect,
 That one life saved, especially if young
 Or pretty, is a thing to recollect Far sweeter than the greenest laurels
 sprung

From the manure of human clay, though deck'd

With all the praises ever said or sung:
 Though hymn'd by every harp, unless within
 Your heart joins chorus, Fame is but a din.

XXXV

Oh! ye great authors luminous, voluminous!
 Ye twice ten hundred thousand daily
 scribes!
 Whose pamphlets, volumes, newspapers,
 illumine us!
 Whether you're paid by government in bribes,
 To prove the public debt is not consuming
 us—
 Or, roughly treading on the 'courtier's
 kibes'
 With clownish heel, your popular circulation Feeds you by printing half the realm's starvation;—

XXXVI

Oh, ye great authors!—À propos des bottes,—
 I have forgotten what I meant to say,
 As sometimes have been greater sages'
 lots;—
 'Twas something calculated to allay
 All wrath in barracks, palaces, or cots:
 Certes it would have been but thrown
 away,
 And that's one comfort for my lost advice,
 Although no doubt it was beyond all price.

XXXVII

But let it go:—it will one day be found
 With other relics of 'a former world,' When this world shall be former, under-
 ground,
 Thrown topsy-turvy, twisted, crisp'd,
 and curl'd,
 Baked, fried, or burnt, turn'd inside-out,
 or drown'd,
 Like all the worlds before, which have been hurl'd
 First out of, and then back again to chaos,
 The superstratum which will overlay us.

XXXVIII

So Cuvier says:—and then shall come
 again
 Unto the new creation, rising out
 From our old crash, some mystic, ancient
 strain
 Of things destroy'd and left in airy
 doubt;
 Like to the notions we now entertain
 Of Titans, giants, fellows of about Some hundred feet in height, not to say miles,
 And mammoths, and your winged crocodiles.

XXXIX

Think if then George the Fourth should be dug up,
How the new worldlings of the then new
East
Will wonder where such animals could sup!

(For they themselves will be but of the
least:
Even worlds miscarry, when too oft they pup,
And every new creation hath decreased
In size, from overworking the material—
Men are but maggots of some huge Earth's burial).

XL

How will—to these young people, just thrust out
From some fresh Paradise, and set to
plough,
And dig, and sweat, and turn themselves
about,
And plant, and reap, and spin, and grind, and sow,
Till all the arts at length are brought about,
Especially of war and taxing,—how,
I say, will these great relics, when they see 'em,
Look like the monsters of a new museum!

XLI

But I am apt to grow too metaphysical:
'The time is out of joint,'—and so am I;
I quite forget this poem's merely quizzical,
And deviate into matters rather dry.
I ne'er decide what I shall say, and this I
call
Much too poetical: men should know
why
They write, and for what end; but, note or text,
I never know the word which will come next.

XLII

So on I ramble, now and then narrating, Now pondering:—it is time we should narrate.
I left Don Juan with his horses baiting—
Now we'll get o'er the ground at a great rate.

I shall not be particular in stating His journey, we've so many tours of
late:
Suppose him then at Petersburg; suppose
That pleasant capital of painted snows;

XLIII

Suppose him in a handsome uniform;
A scarlet coat, black facings, a long
plume,
Waving, like sails new shiver'd in a storm,
Over a cock'd hat in a crowded room,

And brilliant breeches, bright as a Cairn Gorme,
Of yellow casimere we may presume, White stockings drawn uncurdled as new milk
O'er limbs whose symmetry set off the silk;

XLIV

Suppose him sword by side, and hat in
hand,
Made up by youth, fame, and an army
tailor—
That great enchanter, at whose rod's command
Beauty springs forth, and Nature's self turns paler,
Seeing how Art can make her work more grand (When she don't pin men's limbs in like a gaoler),— Behold him placed as if upon a pillar! He Seems Love turn'd a lieutenant of artillery!

XLV

His bandage slipp'd down into a cravat;
His wings subdued to epaulettes; his quiver
Shrunk to a scabbard, with his arrows at His side as a small sword, but sharp as
ever;
His bow converted into a cock'd hat;
But still so like, that Psyche were more clever
Than some wives (who make blunders no less stupid),
If she had not mistaken him for Cupid.

XLVI

The courtiers stared, the ladies whisper'd,
and
The empress smiled: the reigning favourite frown'd—
I quite forget which of them was in hand
Just then; as they are rather numerous
found,
Who took by turns that difficult command
Since first her majesty was singly
crown'd:
But they were mostly nervous six-foot
fellows,
All fit to make a Patagonian jealous.

XLVII

Juan was none of these, but slight and slim, Blushing and beardless; and yet ne'ertheless
There was a something in his turn of limb,
And still more in his eye, which seem'd
to express,
That though he look'd like one of the seraphim,
There lurk'd a man beneath the spirit's
dress.
Besides, the empress sometimes liked a boy,
And had just buried the fair-faced Lanskoï.

XLVIII

No wonder then that Yermoloff, or Monomoff,
Or Scherbatoff, or any other off
Or on, might dread her majesty had not room enough

Within her bosom (which was not too tough)

For a new flame; a thought to cast of gloom enough

Along the aspect, whether smooth or rough,

Of him who, in the language of his station,
Then held that 'high official situation.'

XLIX

Oh, gentle ladies! should you seek to know
The import of this diplomatic phrase, Bid Ireland's Londonderry's Marquess
show

His parts of speech; and in the strange displays

Of that odd string of words, all in a row,
Which none divine, and every one obeys,
Perhaps you may pick out some queer no
meaning,

Of that weak word harvest the sole glean-
ing.

L

I think I can explain myself without
That sad inexplicable beast of prey—
That Sphinx, whose words would ever be a doubt,

Did not his deeds unriddle them each
day—

That monstrous hieroglyphic—that long spout

Of blood and water, leaden Castlereagh!

And here I must an anecdote relate,
But luckily of no great length or weight.

LI

An English lady ask'd of an Italian,
What were the actual and official duties
Of the strange thing, some women set a value on,

Which hovers oft about some married
beauties,

Call'd 'Cavalier servente'? a Pygmalion Whose statues warm (I fear, alas! too true 'tis)

Beneath his art. The dame, press'd to disclose them,

Said—'Lady, I beseech you to suppose
them.'

LII

And thus I supplicate your supposition,
And mildest, matron-like interpretation,
Of the imperial favourite's condition.

'Twas a high place, the highest in the
nation

In fact, if not in rank! and the suspicion
Of any one's attaining to his station
No doubt gave pain, where each new pair of shoulders,
If rather broad, made stocks rise and their holders.

LIII

Juan, I said, was a most beauteous boy,
And had retain'd his boyish look beyond

The usual hirsute seasons which destroy,
With beards and whiskers, and the like,
the fond

Parisian aspect, which upset old Troy
And founded Doctors' Commons:—I have conn'd

The history of divorces, which, though chequer'd,

Calls Ilion's the first damages on record.

LIV

And Catherine, who loved all things (save her lord,

Who was gone to his place), and pass'd
for much,

Admiring those (by dainty dames abhorr'd)

Gigantic gentlemen, yet had a touch
Of sentiment: and he she most adored
Was the lamented Lanskoï, who was
such

A lover as had cost her many a tear,
And yet but made a middling grenadier.

LV

Oh thou 'teterrima causa' of all 'belli'— Thou gate of life and death—thou non-descript!

Whence is our exit and our entrance, well I May pause in pondering how all souls are dipt

In thy perennial fountain: how man fell I Know not, since knowledge saw her branches stript

Of her first fruit; but how he falls and rises

Since, thou hast settled beyond all surmises.

LVI

Some call thee 'the worst cause of war,'
but I

Maintain thou art the best: for after all,
From thee we come, to thee we go, and
why

To get at thee not batter down a wall,
Or waste a world? since no one can deny

Thou dost replenish worlds both great and small:

With, or without thee, all things at a stand
Are, or would be, thou sea of life's dry
land!

LVII

Catherine, who was the grand epitome
Of that great cause of war, or peace, or
what
You please (it causes all the things which be,
So you may take your choice of this or
that)—

Catherine, I say, was very glad to see
The handsome herald, on whose plumage sat
Victory; and, pausing as she saw him kneel
With his despatch, forgot to break the seal.

LVIII

Then recollecting the whole empress, nor Forgetting quite the woman (which composed

At least three parts of this great whole), she tore

The letter open with an air which posed
The court, that watch'd each look her visage wore,

Until a royal smile at length disclosed Fair weather for the day. Though rather spacious,

Her face was noble, her eyes fine, mouth gracious.

LIX

Great joy was hers, or rather joys: the first
Was a ta'en city, thirty thousand slain.
Glory and triumph o'er her aspect burst,
As an East Indian sunrise on the main.
These quench'd a moment her ambition's
thirst—

So Arab deserts drink in summer's rain:
In vain!—As fall the dews on quenchless
sands,
Blood only serves to wash Ambition's hands!

LX

Her next amusement was more fanciful;
She smiled at mad Suwarrow's rhymes, who threw

Into a Russian couplet rather dull
The whole gazette of thousands whom he slew.

Her third was feminine enough to annul
The shudder which runs naturally
through

Our veins, when things call'd sovereigns think it best

To kill, and generals turn it into jest.

LXI

The two first feelings ran their course complete,

And lighted first her eye, and then her
mouth:

The whole court look'd immediately most
sweet,

Like flowers well water'd after a long drouth:—

But when on the lieutenant at her feet
Her majesty, who liked to gaze on youth!
Almost as much as on a new despatch, Glanced mildly, all the world was on the watch.

LXII

Though somewhat large, exuberant, and truculent,

When wroth—while pleased, she was as fine a figure

As those who like things rosy, ripe, and succulent,

Would wish to look on, while they are in
vigour.

She could repay each amatory look you-lent

With interest, and in turn was wont with
rigour

To exact of Cupid's bills the full amount.
At sight, nor would permit you to discount.

LXIII

With her the latter, though at times convenient,

Was not so necessary; for they tell
That she was handsome, and though fierce look'd lenient,

And always used her favourites too well.

If once beyond her boudoir's precincts in-ye went,

Your 'fortune' was in a fair way 'to
swell

A man' (as Giles says); for though she would widow all

Nations, she liked man as an individual.

LXIV

What a strange thing is man! and what a stranger

Is woman! What a whirlwind is her
head,

And what a whirlpool full of depth and
danger

Is all the rest about her! Whether wed, Or widow, maid, or mother, she can change her

Mind like the wind: whatever she has
said

Or done, is light to what she'll say or do;—
The oldest thing on record, and yet new!

LXV

Oh Catherine! (for of all interjections,
To thee both oh! and ah! belong of right)

In love and war) how odd are the connexions

Of human thoughts, which jostle in their flight!

Just now yours were cut out in different sections:

First Ismail's capture caught your fancy
quite;

Next of new knights, the fresh and glorious
batch;
And thirdly he who brought you the despatch!

LXVI

Shakespeare talks of 'the herald Mercury
New lighted on a heaven-kissing hill':
And some such visions cross'd her majesty,
While her young herald knelt before her
still.

'Tis very true the hill seem'd rather high,
For a lieutenant to climb up; but skill Smooth'd even the Simplon's steep, and by God's blessing,
With youth and health all kisses are 'heaven-kissing.'

LXVII

Her majesty look'd down, the youth look'd
up—

And so they fell in love;—she with his face,
His grace, his God-knows-what: for Cupid's cup

With the first draught intoxicates apace;
A quintessential laudanum or 'black drop,'
Which makes one drunk at once, without the base
Expedient of full bumpers; for the eye
In love drinks all life's fountains (save tears) dry.

LXVIII

He, on the other hand, if not in love,
Fell into that no less imperious passion, Self-love—which, when some sort of thing above

Ourselves, a singer, dancer, much in
fashion,
Or duchess, princess, empress, 'deigns to
prove'
('Tis Pope's phrase) a great longing, though a rash one,
For one especial person out of many,
Makes us believe ourselves as good as any.

LXIX

Besides, he was of that delighted age
Which makes all female ages equal—
when

We don't much care with whom we may engage,

As bold as Daniel in the lions' den,
So that we can our native sun assuage
In the next ocean, which may flow just
then,

To make a twilight in, just as Sol's heat is Quench'd in the lap of the salt sea, or Thetis.

LXX

And Catherine (we must say thus much for Catherine),

Though bold and bloody, was the kind of thing

Whose temporary passion was quite flattering,

Because each lover look'd a sort of king,
Made up upon an amatory pattern,
A royal husband in all save the ring—
Which, being the damn'dest part of matrimony,

Seem'd taking out the sting to leave the honey.

LXXI

And when you add to this, her womanhood
In its meridian, her blue eyes or gray—
(The last, if they have soul, are quite as good,
Or better, as the best examples say:
Napoleon's, Mary's (queen of Scotland),
should

Lend to that colour a transcendent ray;
And Pallas also sanctions the same hue, Too wise to look through optics black or blue)—

LXXII

Her sweet smile, and her then majestic
figure,

Her plumpness, her imperial condescen-
sion,

Her preference of a boy to men much bigger

(Fellows whom Messalina's self would pension),

Her prime of life, just now in juicy vigour,
With other extras, which we need not mention,—

All these, or any one of these, explain
Enough to make a stripling very vain.

LXXIII

And that's enough, for love is vanity,
Selfish in its beginning as its end,

Except where 'tis a mere insanity,
A maddening spirit which would strive to blend

Itself with beauty's frail inanity,
On which the passion's self seems to depend;

And hence some heathenish philosophers
Make love the main-spring of the universe.

LXXIV

Besides Platonic love, besides the love

Of God, the love of sentiment, the loving Of faithful pairs—(I needs must rhyme with dove,

That good old steam-boat which keeps verses moving

'Gainst reason—Reason ne'er was hand-
and-glove

With rhyme, but always leant less to improving

The sound than sense) besides all these pretences

To love, there are those things which words name senses;

LXXV

Those movements, those improvements in our bodies
Which make all bodies anxious to get
out

Of their own sand-pits, to mix with a goddess,

For such all women are at first no doubt.
How beautiful that moment! and how odd is

That fever which precedes the languid rout

Of our sensations! What a curious way
The whole thing is of clothing souls in clay!

LXXVI

The noblest kind of love is love Platonical,
To end or to begin with; the next grand
Is that which may be christen'd love canonical,

Because the clergy take the thing in
hand;

The third sort to be noted in our chronicle

As flourishing in every Christian land,
Is, when chaste matrons to their other ties
Add what may be call'd marriage in disguise.

LXXVII

Well, we won't analyse—our story must Tell for itself: the sovereign was smitten,

Juan much flatter'd by her love, or lust;—
I cannot stop to alter words once written,

And the two are so mix'd with human dust,
That he who names one, both perchance may hit on:

But in such matters Russia's mighty empress

Behaved no better than a common semp-stress.

LXXVIII

The whole court melted into one wide
whisper,

And all lips were applied unto all ears!
The elder ladies' wrinkles curl'd much crisper

As they beheld; the younger cast some leers

On one another, and each lovely lisper Smiled as she talk'd the matter o'er; but
tears

Of rivalry rose in each clouded eye

Of all the standing army who stood by.

LXXIX

All the ambassadors of all the powers
Inquired, Who was this very new young
man,

Who promised to be great in some few
hours?

Which is full soon (though life is but a span).

Already they beheld the silver showers

Of rubles rain, as fast as specie can,
Upon his cabinet, besides the presents
Of several ribands, and some thousand peasants.

LXXX

Catherine was generous,—all such ladies
are:

Love—that great opener of the heart
and all

The ways that lead there, be they near or
far,

Above, below, by turnpikes great or small,—

Love—(though she had a cursed taste for
war,

And was not the best wife, unless we
call

Such Clytemnestra, though perhaps 'tis
better

That one should die, than two drag on the fetter)—

LXXXI

Love had made Catherine make each lover's fortune,

Unlike our own half-chaste Elizabeth,
Whose avarice all disbursements did im-portune,

If history, the grand liar, ever saith
The truth; and though grief her old age might shorten,

Because she put a favourite to death,
Her vile, ambiguous method of flirtation,
And stinginess, disgrace her sex and station.

LXXXII

But when the levée rose, and all was bustle
In the dissolving circle, all the nations'

Ambassadors began as 'twere to hustle Round the young man with their congratulations.

Also the softer silks were heard to rustle
Of gentle dames, among whose recrea-
tions

It is to speculate on handsome faces,
Especially when such lead to high places.

LXXXIII

Juan, who found himself, he knew not
how,

A general object of attention, made
His answers with a very graceful bow,

As if born for the ministerial trade.
Though modest, on his unembarrass'd
brow

Nature had written 'gentleman.' He
said

Little, but to the purpose; and his manner Flung hovering graces o'er him like a banner.

LXXXIV

An order from her majesty consign'd
 Our young lieutenant to the genial care
 Of those in office: all the world look'd kind,
 (As it will look sometimes with the first
 stare,
 Which youth would not act ill to keep in
 mind,)
 As also did Miss Protasoff then there, Named from her mystic office 'l'Eprouveuse,'
 A term inexplicable to the Muse.

LXXXV

With her then, as in humble duty bound,
 Juan retired,—and so will I, until
 My Pegasus shall tire of touching ground.
 We have just lit on a 'heaven-kissing hill,'
 So lofty that I feel my brain turn round,
 And all my fancies whirling like a mill;
 Which is a signal to my nerves and brain,
 To take a quiet ride in some green lane.

CANTO THE TENTH

I

WHEN Newton saw an apple fall, he found
 In that slight startle from his contemplation—
 'Tis said (for I'll not answer above ground
 For any sage's creed or calculation)—
 A mode of proving that the earth turn'd
 round
 In a most natural whirl, called 'gravitation';
 And this is the sole mortal who could grapple,
 Since Adam, with a fall, or with an apple.

II

Man fell with apples, and with apples rose,
 If this be true; for we must deem the mode
 In which Sir Isaac Newton could disclose Through the then unpaved stars the turnpike road,
 A thing to counterbalance human woes:
 For ever since immortal man hath
 glow'd
 With all kinds of mechanics, and full soon Steam-engines will conduct him to the moon.

III

And wherefore this exordium?—Why,
 just now,
 In taking up this paltry sheet of paper,
 My bosom underwent a glorious glow,
 And my internal spirit cut a caper:
 And though so much inferior, as I know,
 To those who, by the dint of glass and
 vapour,
 Discover stars, and sail in the wind's eye,
 I wish to do as much by poesy.

IV

In the wind's eye I have sail'd, and sail;
 but for
 The stars, I own my telescope is dim;
 But at the least I have shunn'd the common shore,
 And leaving land far out of sight, would
 skim
 The ocean of eternity: the roar
 Of breakers has not daunted my slight,
 trim,
 But still sea-worthy skiff; and she may float
 Where ships have foundered'd, as doth many a boat.

We left our hero, Juan, in the bloom
 Of favouritism, but not yet in the blush;—
 And far be it from my Muses to presume
 (For I have more than one Muse at a push)
 To follow him beyond the drawing-room:
 It is enough that Fortune found him
 flush
 Of youth, and vigour, beauty, and those
 things
 Which for an instant clip enjoyment's wings.

VI

But soon they grow again and leave their nest.
 'Oh!' saith the Psalmist, 'that I had a dove's
 Pinions to flee away, and be at rest!'
 And who that recollects young years and loves,— Though hoary now, and with a withering
 breast,
 And palsied fancy, which no longer roves Beyond its dimm'd eye's sphere,—but would much rather Sigh like his son, than cough like his grandfather?

VII

But sighs subside, and tears (even widows')
 shrink,
 Like Arno in the summer, to a shallow,
 So narrow as to shame their wintry brink,
 Which threatens inundations deep and yellow!
 Such difference doth a few months make.
 You'd think Grief a rich field which never would lie fallow;
 No more it doth, its ploughs but change
 their boys,
 Who furrow some new soil to sow for joys.

VIII

But coughs will come when sighs depart—
 and now
 And then before sighs cease; for oft the
 one
 Will bring the other, ere the lake-like brow
 Is ruffled by a wrinkle, or the sun
 Of life reach'd ten o'clock: and while a glow,
 Hectic and brief as summer's day nigh
 done,
 O'erspreads the cheek which seems too
 pure for clay,
 Thousands blaze, love, hope, die,—how happy they!—

IX

But Juan was not meant to die so soon.
 We left him in the focus of such glory
 As may be won by favour of the moon
 Or ladies' fancies—rather transitory
 Perhaps; but who would scorn the month of June,
 Because December, with his breath so
 hoary,
 Must come? Much rather should he court
 the ray,
 To hoard up warmth against a wintry day.

X

Besides, he had some qualities which fix Middle-aged ladies even more than
 young:
 The former know what's what; while new-fledged chicks
 Know little more of love than what is
 sung
 In rhymes, or dreamt (for fancy will play tricks)
 In visions of those skies from whence Love sprung.
 Some reckon women by their suns or years,
 I rather think the moon should date the dears.

XI

And why? because she's changeable and chaste.
 I know no other reason, whatsoe'er
 Suspicious people, who find fault in haste,
 May choose to tax me with; which is not fair,
 Nor flattering to 'their temper or their taste,'
 As my friend Jeffrey writes with such an
 air:
 However, I forgive him, and I trust
 He will forgive himself;—if not, I must.

XII

Old enemies who have become new friends Should so continue—'tis a point of
 honour;
 And I know nothing which could make amends
 For a return to hatred: I would shun her

Like garlic, howsoever she extends Her hundred arms and legs, and fain outrun her.
 Old flames, new wives, become our bitterest foes—
 Converted foes should scorn to join with those.

XIII

This were the worst desertion:—rene-gadoes,
 Even shuffling Southey, that incarnate lie,
 Would scarcely join again the 'reforma-
 does',
 Whom he forsook to fill the laureate's
 sty:
 And honest men from Iceland to Barbadoes,
 Whether in Caledon or Italy,
 Should not veer round with every breath, nor seize
 To pain, the moment when you cease to please.

XIV

The lawyer and the critic but behold
 The baser sides of literature and life,
 And nought remains unseen, but much untold,
 By those who scour those double vales
 of strife.
 While common men grow ignorantly old,
 The lawyer's brief is like the surgeon's
 knife,
 Dissecting the whole inside of a question,
 And with it all the process of digestion.

XV

A legal broom's a moral chimney-sweeper,
 And that's the reason he himself 's so dirty!
 The endless soot bestows a tint far deeper Than can be hid by altering his shirt; he Retains the sable stains of the dark creeper,
 At least some twenty-nine do out of thirty,
 In all their habits;—not so you, I own;
 As Cæsar wore his robe you wear your gown.

XVI

And all our little feuds, at least all mine,
 Dear Jeffrey, once my most redoubted
 foe
 (As far as rhyme and criticism combine
 To make such puppets of us things
 below),
 Are over: Here's a health to 'Auld Lang
 Syne!'
 I do not know you, and may never know Your face—but you have acted on the whole
 Most nobly, and I own it from my soul.

XVII

And when I use the phrase of 'Auld Lang Syne!'
 'Tis not address'd to you—the more's the pity
 For me, for I would rather take my wine
 With you, than aught (save Scott) in your proud city.
 But somehow—it may seem a schoolboy's whine,
 And yet I seek not to be grand nor witty,
 But I am half a Scot by birth, and bred
 A whole one, and my heart flies to my head,—

XVIII

As 'Auld Lang Syne' brings Scotland, one and all, Scotch plaids, Scotch snoods, the blue hills, and clear streams,
 The Dee, the Don, Balgounie's brig's black wall,
 All myboy feelings, all my gentler dreams
 Of what I then dreamt, clothed in their own pall,
 Like Banquo's offspring:—floating past me seems
 My childhood in this childishness of mine;
 I care not—'tis a glimpse of 'Auld Lang Syne.'

XIX

And though, as you remember, in a fit
 Of wrath and rhyme, when juvenile and curly,
 I rail'd at Scots to show my wrath and wit,
 Which must be own'd was sensitive and surly,
 Yet 'tis in vain such sallies to permit,
 They cannot quench young feelings fresh and early:
 I 'scotch'd not kill'd' the Scotchman in my blood,
 And love the land of 'mountain and of flood.'

XX

Don Juan, who was real, or ideal,—
 For both are much the same, since what men think Exists when the once thinkers are less real
 Than what they thought, for mind can never sink,
 And 'gainst the body makes a strong appeal;
 And yet 'tis very puzzling on the brink
 Of what is call'd eternity, to stare,
 And know no more of what is here, than there;—

XXI

Don Juan grew a very polish'd Russian—
How we won't mention, why we need not say:
 Few youthful minds can stand the strong concussion
 Of any slight temptation in their way;

But his just now were spread as is a cushion
 Smooth'd for a monarch's seat of honour: gay
 Damsels, and dances, revels, ready money,
 Made ice seem paradise, and winter sunny.

XXII

The favour of the empress was agreeable;
 And though the duty wax'd a little hard,
 Young people at his time of life should be able To come off handsomely in that regard.
 He was now growing up like a green tree,
 For love, war, or ambition, which reward
 Their luckier votaries, till old age's tedium
 Make some prefer the circulating medium.

XXIII

About this time, as might have been anticipated,
 Seduced by youth and dangerous examples,
 Don Juan grew, I fear, a little dissipated;
 Which is a sad thing, and not only tramples
 On our fresh feelings, but—as being participated
 With all kinds of incorrigible samples
 Of frail humanity—must make us selfish,
 And shut our souls up in us like a shell-fish.

XXIV

This we pass over. We will also pass
 The usual progress of intrigues between Unequal matches, such as are, alas!
 A young lieutenant's with a not old queen,
 But one who is not so youthful as she was
 In all the royalty of sweet seventeen.
 Sovereigns may sway materials, but not matter,
 And wrinkles, the d—d democrats, won't flatter.

XXV

And death, the sovereign's sovereign, though the great Gracchus of all mortality, who levels,
 With his Agrarian laws, the high estate
 Of him who feasts, and fights, and roars, and revels,
 To one small grass-grown patch (which must await Corruption for its crop) with the poor devils
 Who never had a foot of land till now,— Death's a reformer, all men must allow.

XXVI

He lived (not Death, but Juan) in a hurry
 Of waste, and haste, and glare, and gloss, and glitter,
 In this gay clime of bear-skins black and furry—
 Which (though I hate to say a thing that's bitter)

Peep out sometimes, when things are in a flurry,
Through all the 'purple and fine linen,' fitter
For Babylon's than Russia's royal har-
lot—
And neutralise her outward show of scarlet.

XXVII

And this same state we won't describe: we
would Perhaps from hearsay, or from recollec-
tion;
But getting nigh grim Dante's 'obscure
wood,'
That horrid equinox, that hateful section
Of human years, that half-way house, that
rude
Hut, whence wise travellers drive with circumspection
Life's sad post-horses o'er the dreary
frontier
Of age, and looking back to youth, give one tear;—

XXVIII

I won't describe,—that is, if I can help Description; and I won't reflect,—that
is,
If I can stave off thought, which—as a whelp
Clings to its teat—sticks to me through the abyss
Of this odd labyrinth; or as the kelp
Holds by the rock; or as a lover's kiss Drains its first draught of lips:—but, as I
said,
I won't philosophise, and will be read.

XXIX

Juan, instead of courting courts, was courted,—
A thing which happens rarely: this he owed
Much to his youth, and much to his reported Valour; much also to the blood he
show'd,
Like a race-horse; much to each dress he sport'd,
Which set the beauty off in which he
glow'd,
As purple clouds befringe the sun; but
most
He owed to an old woman and his post.

XXX

He wrote to Spain;—and all his near relations,
Perceiving he was in a handsome way
Of getting on himself, and finding stations
For cousins also, answer'd the same day.

Several prepared themselves for emigra-
tions;
And eating ices, were o'erheard to say,
That with the addition of a slight pelisse, Madrid's and Moscow's climes were of a piece.

XXXI

His mother, Donna Inez, finding, too,
That in the lieu of drawing on his banker,
Where his assets were waxing rather few,
He had brought his spending to a handsome anchor,—
Replied, 'that she was glad to see him
through Those pleasures after which wild youth will hanker;
As the sole sign of man's being in his senses
Is, learning to reduce his past expenses.

XXXII

'She also recommended him to God,
And no less to God's Son, as well as
Mother,
Warn'd him against Greek worship, which looks odd
In Catholic eyes; but told him, too, to smother
Outward dislike, which don't look well
abroad;
Inform'd him that he had a little brother
Born in a second wedlock; and above
All, praised the empress's maternal love.

XXXIII

'She could not too much give her approbation
Unto an empress, who preferr'd young
men
Whose age, and what was better still,
whose nation
And climate, stopp'd all scandal (now
and then);—
At home it might have given her some vexation;
But where thermometers sink down to
ten,
Or five, or one, or zero, she could never Believe that virtue thaw'd before the river.'

XXXIV

Oh for a forty-parson power to chant
Thy praise, Hypocrisy! Oh for a hymn
Loud as the virtues thou dost loudly vaunt,
Not practise! Oh for trump of cheru-bim!
Or the ear-trumpet of my good old aunt,
Who, though her spectacles at last grew
dim,
Drew quiet consolation through its hint,
When she no more could read the pious print.

XXXV

She was no hypocrite at least, poor soul,
 But went to heaven in as sincere a way
 As anybody on the elected roll,
 Which portions out upon the judgment
 day
 Heaven's freeholds, in a sort of doomsday scroll,
 Such as the conqueror William did re-
 pay
 His knights with, lotting others' properties
 Into some sixty thousand new knights' fees.

XXXVI

I can't complain, whose ancestors are
 there,
 Erneis, Radulphus—eight-and-forty manors
 (If that my memory doth not greatly err)
 Were their reward for following Billy's
 banners:
 And though I can't help thinking 'twas scarce fair
 To strip the Saxons of their hydes, like tanners;
 Yet as they founded churches with the
 produce,
 You'll deem, no doubt, they put it to a good use.

XXXVII

The gentle Juan flourish'd, though at times
 He felt like other plants call'd sensitive,
 Which shrink from touch, as monarchs do from rhymes,
 Save such as Southey can afford to give.
 Perhaps he long'd in bitter frosts for climes
 In which the Neva's ice would cease to
 live
 Before May-day: perhaps, despite his duty,
 In royalty's vast arms he sigh'd for beauty:

XXXVIII

Perhaps—but, sans perhaps, we need not seek
 For causes young or old: the canker-
 worm
 Will feed upon the fairest, freshest cheek,
 As well as further drain the wither'd
 form:
 Care, like a housekeeper, brings every week
 His bills in, and however we may storm,
 They must be paid: though six days smoothly run,
 The seventh will bring blue devils or a dun.

XXXIX

I don't know how it was, but he grew sick:
 The empress was alarm'd, and her physician
 (The same who physick'd Peter) found the tick
 Of his fierce pulse betoken a condition

Which augur'd of the dead, however quick Itself, and show'd a feverish disposi-
 tion;
 At which the whole court was extremely troubled,
 The sovereign shock'd, and all his medicines doubled.

XL

Low were the whispers, manifold the rumours,
 Some said he had been poison'd by Potemkin;
 Others talk'd learnedly of certain tumours,
 Exhaustion, or disorders of the same
 kin;
 Some said 'twas a concoction of the humours,
 Which with the blood too readily will claim kin;
 Others again were ready to maintain,
 'Twas only the fatigue of last campaign.'

XLI

But here is one prescription out of many:
'Sodæ sulphat. ʒvj. ʒfs. Mannæ optim.
Aq. fervent. f. ʒ ifs. ʒij. tinct. Sennæ Haustus' (and here the surgeon came and cupp'd him),
'R. Pulv. Com. gr. iij. Ipecacuanhæ' (With more beside if Juan had not stopp'd 'em).
'Bolis Potassæ Sulphuret. sumendus, Et haustus ter in die capiendus.'

XLII

This is the way physicians mend or end
 us, Secundum artem: but although we
 sneer
 In health—when ill, we call them to attend
 us,
 Without the least propensity to jeer:
 While that 'hiatus maxime deflendus,'
 To be fill'd up by spade or mattock,
 's near,
 Instead of gliding graciously down Lethe,
 We tease mild Baillie, or soft Abernethy.

XLIII

Juan demurr'd at this first notice to Quit; and though death had threaten'd an ejection,
 His youth and constitution bore him
 through,
 And sent the doctors in a new direction.
 But still his state was delicate: the hue
 Of health but flicker'd with a faint reflection
 Along his wasted cheek, and seem'd to gravel
 The faculty—who said that he must travel.

XLIV

The climate was too cold, they said, for him,
 Meridian-born, to bloom in. This opinion
 Made the chaste Catherine look a little grim,
 Who did not like at first to lose her minion:
 But when she saw his dazzling eye wax dim,
 And drooping like an eagle's with clipt pinion,
 She then resolved to send him on a mission,
 But in a style becoming his condition.

XLV

There was just then a kind of a discussion,
 A sort of treaty or negotiation,
 Between the British cabinet and Russian,
 Maintain'd with all the due prevarication
 With which great states such things are apt to push on;
 Something about the Baltic's navigation,
 Hides, train-oil, tallow, and the rights of Thetis,
 Which Britons deem their uti possidetis.

XLVI

So Catherine, who had a handsome way
 Of fitting out her favourites, conferr'd
 This secret charge on Juan, to display
 At once her royal splendour, and reward
 His services. He kiss'd hands the next day, Received instructions how to play his card,
 Was laden with all kinds of gifts and honours,
 Which show'd what great discernment was the donor's.

XLVII

But she was lucky, and luck's all. Your queens
 Are generally prosperous in reigning;
 Which puzzles us to know what Fortune means:
 But to continue: though her years were waning,
 Her climacteric teased her like her teens;
 And though her dignity brook'd no complaining,
 So much did Juan's setting off distress her,
 She could not find at first a fit successor.

XLVIII

But time, the comforter, will come at last;
 And four-and-twenty hours, and twice that number
 Of candidates requesting to be placed,
 Made Catherine taste next night a quiet slumber:—

Not that she meant to fix again in haste,
 Nor did she find the quantity encumber,
 But always choosing with deliberation,
 Kept the place open for their emulation.

XLIX

While this high post of honour's in abeyance,
 For one or two days, reader, we request
 You'll mount with our young hero the conveyance
 Which wafted him from Petersburg: the best Barouche, which had the glory to display
 once
 The fair Czarina's autocratic crest
 When, a new Iphigene, she went to Tauris,
 Was given to her favourite, and now bore
his.

L

A bull-dog, and a bull-finch, and an ermine,
 All private favourites of Don Juan;—
 for (Let deeper sages the true cause determine)
 He had a kind of inclination, or Weakness, for what most people deem mere vermin,
 Live animals: an old maid of threescore
 For cats and birds more penchant ne'er
 display'd,
 Although he was not old, nor even a maid;—

LI

The animals aforesaid occupied
 Their station: there were valets, secretaries,
 In other vehicles; but at his side
 Sat little Leila, who survived the parries
 He made 'gainst Cossacque sabres in the wide Slaughter of Ismail. Though my wild Muse varies
 Her note, she don't forget the infant girl Whom he preserved, a pure and living pearl.

LII

Poor little thing! She was as fair as docile,
 And with that gentle, serious character,
 As rare in living beings as a fossile
 Man, 'midst thy mouldy mammoths,
 'grand Cuvier!'
 Ill fitted was her ignorance to jostle
 With this o'erwhelming world, where all must err:
 But she was yet but ten years old, and therefore Was tranquil, though she knew not why or wherefore.

LIII

Don Juan loved her, and she loved him, as Nor brother, father, sister, daughter
love.

I cannot tell exactly what it was;
He was not yet quite old enough to
prove

Parental feelings, and the other class, Call'd brotherly affection, could not
move

His bosom,—for he never had a sister:
Ah! if he had, how much he would have miss'd her!

LIV

And still less was it sensual; for besides
That he was not an ancient debauchee, (Who like sour fruit, to stir their veins'
salt tides,

As acids rouse a dormant alkali,) Although ('twill happen as our planet guides)

His youth was not the chastest that might be,

There was the purest Platonism at bottom
Of all his feelings—only he forgot 'em.

LV

Just now there was no peril of temptation;
He loved the infant orphan he had saved,
As patriots (now and then) may love a
nation;

His pride, too, felt that she was not enslaved

Owing to him;—as also her salvation
Through his means and the church's might be paved.

But one thing's odd, which here must be inserted,

The little Turk refused to be converted.

LVI

'Twas strange enough she should retain the impression

Through such a scene of change, and dread, and slaughter;

But though three bishops told her the
transgression,

She show'd a great dislike to holy water:
She also had no passion for confession;

Perhaps she had nothing to confess:—
no matter

Whate'er the cause, the church made little of it—

She still held out that Mahomet was a prophet.

LVII

In fact, the only Christian she could bear Was Juan; whom she seem'd to have selected

In place of what her home and friends once were.

He naturally loved what he protected:

And thus they form'd a rather curious
pair,

A guardian green in years, a ward connected

In neither clime, time, blood, with her defender;

And yet this want of ties made theirs more tender.

LVIII

They journey'd on through Poland and through Warsaw,

Famous for mines of salt and yokes of iron:

Through Courland also, which that famous farce saw

Which gave her dukes the graceless
name of 'Biron.'

'Tis the same landscape which the modern Mars saw

Who march'd to Moscow, led by Fame, the siren!

To lose by one month's frost some twenty
years

Of conquest, and his guard of grenadiers.

LIX

Let this not seem an anti-climax:—'Oh!
My guard! my old guard!' exclaim'd that god of clay.

Think of the Thunderer's falling down
below

Carotid-artery-cutting Castlereagh!
Alas! that glory should be chill'd by
snow!

But should we wish to warm us on our
way

Through Poland, there is Kosciusko's name Might scatter fire through ice, like Hecla's flame.

LX

From Poland they came on through Prussia Proper.

And Königsberg, the capital, whose vaunt,

Besides some veins of iron, lead, or copper,

Has lately been the great Professor Kant.
Juan, who cared not a tobacco-stopper

About philosophy, pursued his jaunt
To Germany, whose somewhat tardy

millions
Have princes who spur more than their postilions.

LXI

And thence through Berlin, Dresden, and the like,

Until he reach'd the castellated
Rhine:—

Ye glorious Gothic scenes! how much ye
strike

All phantasies, not even excepting mine!

A grey wall, a green ruin, rusty pike,
 Make my soul pass the equinoctial line Between the present and past worlds, and hover
 Upon their airy confines, half-seas-over.

LXII

But Juan posted on through Mannheim,
 Bonn,
 Which Drachenfels frowns over like a spectre
 Of the good feudal times for ever gone,
 On which I have not time just now to lecture.
 From thence he was drawn onwards to Cologne,
 A city which presents to the inspector
 Eleven thousand maidenheads of bone,
 The greatest number flesh hath ever known.

LXIII

From thence to Holland's Hague and Helvoetsluys,
 That water-land of Dutchmen and of ditches,
 Where juniper expresses its best juice,
 The poor man's sparkling substitute for riches.
 Senates and sages have condemn'd its use—
 But to deny the mob a cordial, which is Too often all the clothing, meat, or fuel, Good government has left them, seems but cruel.

LXIV

Here he embark'd, and with a flowing sail
 Went bounding for the island of the free, Towards which the impatient wind blew
 half a gale;
 High dash'd the spray, the bows dipp'd
 in the sea,
 And sea-sick passengers turn'd somewhat
 pale;
 But Juan, season'd, as he well might be,
 By former voyages, stood to watch the skiffs,
 Which pass'd, or catch the first glimpse of the cliffs.

LXV

At length they rose, like a white wall
 along
 The blue sea's border; and Don Juan felt—
 What even young strangers feel a little strong
 At the first sight of Albion's chalky belt—
 A kind of pride that he should be among Those haughty shopkeepers, who sternly dealt
 Their goods and edicts out from pole to pole
 And made the very billows pay them toll.

LXVI

I've no great cause to love that spot of
 earth,
 Which holds what might have been the noblest nation;
 But though I owe it little but my birth,
 I feel a mix'd regret and veneration
 For its decaying fame and former worth.
 Seven years (the usual term of transportation)
 Of absence lay one's old resentments level,
 When a man's country's going to the devil.

LXVII

Alas! could she but fully, truly, know How her great name is now throughout abhorr'd;
 How eager all the earth is for the blow:
 Which shall lay bare her bosom to the
 sword;
 How all the nations deem her their worst
 foe,
 That worse than worst of foes, the once
 adored
 False friend, who held out freedom to
 mankind,
 And now would chain them, to the very
mind;

LXVIII

Would she be proud, or boast herself the
 free,
 Who is but first of slaves? The nations are
 In prison,—but the gaoler, what is he?
 No less a victim to the bolt and bar.
 Is the poor privilege to turn the key
 Upon the captive, freedom? He's as far From the enjoyment of the earth and air
 Who watches o'er the chain, as they who wear.

LXIX

Don Juan now saw Albion's earliest
 beauties,
 Thy cliffs, dear Dover! harbour, and hotel;
 Thy custom-house, with all its delicate
 duties;
 Thy waiters running mucks at every bell;
 Thy packets, all whose passengers are booties
 To those who upon land or water dwell;
 And last, not least, to strangers uninstructed,
 Thy long, long bills, whence nothing is deducted.

LXX

Juan, though careless, young, and magnifique,
 And rich in rubles, diamonds, cash, and
 credit,
 Who did not limit much his bills per week,
 Yet stared at this a little, though he paid
 it—

(His Maggior Duomo, a smart, subtle Greek,
Before him summ'd the awful scroll and read it):
But, doubtless, as the air, though seldom sunny,
Is free, the respiration's worth the money.

LXXI

On with the horses! Off to Canterbury!
Tramp, tramp o'er pebble, and splash,
splash through puddle;
Hurrah! how swiftly speeds the post so merry!
Not like slow Germany, wherein they muddle
Along the road, as if they went to bury
Their fare; and also pause besides, to fuddle,
With 'schnapps'—sad dogs! whom
'Hundsfoot,' or 'Verflucter,' Affect no more than lightning a conductor.

LXXII

Now there is nothing gives a man such spirits,
Leavening his blood as cayenne doth a curry,
As going at full speed—no matter where its Direction be, so 'tis but in a hurry,
And merely for the sake of its own merits;
For the less cause there is for all this flurry,
The greater is the pleasure in arriving
And the great end of travel—which is driving.

LXXIII

They saw at Canterbury the cathedral;
Black Edward's helm, and Becket's bloody stone,
Were pointed out as usual by the bedral,
In the same quaint, uninterested tone:—
There's glory again for you, gentle reader!
All
Ends in a rusty casque and dubious bone,
Half-solved into these sodas or magnesias,
Which form that bitter draught, the human species.

LXXIV

The effect on Juan was of course sublime:
He breathed a thousand Cressys, as he saw
That casque, which never stoop'd except to Time.
Even the bold Churchman's tomb excited awe,
Who died in the then great attempt to climb
O'er kings, who now at least must talk of law
Before they butcher. Little Leila gazed,
And ask'd why such a structure had been raised;

LXXV

And being told it was 'God's house,' she said
He was well lodged, but only wonder'd how
He suffer'd Infidels in his homestead,
The cruel Nazarenes, who had laid low
His holy temples in the lands which bred
The True Believers;—and her infant brow
Was bent with grief that Mahomet should resign
A mosque so noble, flung like pearls to swine.

LXXVI

On! on! through meadows, managed like a garden,
A paradise of hops and high production;
For, after years of travel by a bard in Countries of greater heat, but lesser suction,
A green field is a sight which makes him pardon
The absence of that more sublime construction
Which mixes up vines, olives, precipices,
Glaciers, volcanos, oranges, and ices.

LXXVII

And when I think upon a pot of beer—
But I won't weep!—and so drive on,
postilions!
As the smart boys spurr'd fast in their career,
Juan admired these highways of free millions;
A country in all senses the most dear
To foreigner or native, save some silly ones,
Who 'kick against the pricks' just at this juncture,
And for their pains get only a fresh puncture.

LXXVIII

What a delightful thing's a turnpike road!
So smooth, so level, such a mode of shaving
The earth, as scarce the eagle in the broad Air can accomplish, with his wide wings waving.
Had such been cut in Phaeton's time, the god
Had told his son to satisfy his craving
With the York mail;—but onward as we roll,
Surgit amari aliquid—the toll!

LXXIX

Alas! how deeply painful is all payment!
Take lives, take wives, take aught except men's purses.
As Machiavel shows those in purple raiment,
Such is the shortest way to general curses.

They hate a murderer much less than a claimant
 On that sweet ore which everybody nurses.—
 Kill a man's family, and he may brook it,
 But keep your hands out of his breeches' pocket:

LXXX

So said the Florentine; ye monarchs, hearken
 To your instructor. Juan now was borne,
 Just as the day began to wane and darken,
 O'er the high hill, which looks with pride or scorn Toward the great city.—Ye who have a spark in Your veins of Cockney spirit, smile or mourn
 According as you take things well or ill;
 Bold Britons, we are now on Shooter's Hill!

LXXXI

The sun went down, the smoke rose up, as from
 A half-unquench'd volcano, o'er a space
 Which well beseem'd the 'Devil's drawing-room,'
 As some have qualified that wondrous place:
 But Juan felt, though not approaching home,
 As one who, though he were not of the race,
 Revered the soil, of those true sons the mother,
 Who butcher'd half the earth, and bullied t'other.

LXXXII

A mighty mass of brick, and smoke, and shipping,
 Dirty and dusky, but as wide as eye
 Could reach, with here and there a sail just skipping
 In sight, then lost amidst the forestry
 Of masts; a wilderness of steeples peeping
 On tiptoe through their sea-coal canopy;
 A huge, dun cupola, like a foolscap crown
 On a fool's head—and there is London Town.

LXXXIII

But Juan saw not this: each wreath of smoke
 Appear'd to him but as the magic vapour
 Of some alchymic furnace, from whence broke
 The wealth of worlds (a wealth of tax and paper):

The gloomy clouds, which o'er it as a yoke
 Are bow'd, and put the sun out like a taper,
 Were nothing but the natural atmosphere,
 Extremely wholesome, though but rarely clear.

LXXXIV

He paused—and so will I; as doth a crew
 Before they give their broadside. By and by,
 My gentle countrymen, we will renew
 Our old acquaintance; and at least I'll try
 To tell you truths you will not take as true,
 Because they are so;—a male Mrs. Fry,
 With a soft besom will I sweep your halls,
 And brush a web or two from off the walls.

LXXXV

Oh Mrs. Fry! Why go to Newgate? Why
 Preach to poor rogues? And wherefore not begin With Carlton, or with other houses? Try
 Your hand at harden'd and imperial sin.
 To mend the people's an absurdity,
 A jargon, a mere philanthropic din,
 Unless you make their betters better:—
 Fry!
 I thought you had more religion, Mrs. Fry.

LXXXVI

Teach them the decencies of good three-score;
 Cure them of tours, hussar and high-land dresses;
 Tell them that youth once gone returns no more,
 That hired huzzas redeem no land's distresses;
 Tell them Sir William Curtis is a bore,
 Too dull even for the dullest of excesses,
 The witless Falstaff of a hoary Hal,
 A fool whose bells have ceased to ring at all.

LXXXVII

Tell them, though it may be perhaps too late
 On life's worn confine, jaded, bloated, sated,
 To set up vain pretences of being great,
 'Tis not so to be good; and be it stated,
 The worthiest kings have ever loved least state;
 And tell them—But you won't, and I have prated
 Just now enough; but by and by I'll prattle
 Like Roland's horn in Roncesvalles' battle.

CANTO THE ELEVENTH

I

WHEN Bishop Berkeley said 'there was no matter,'

And proved it—'twas no matter what he said:

They say his system 'tis in vain to batter,
Too subtle for the airiest human head;
And yet who can believe it? I would shatter

Gladly all matters down to stone or lead,

Or adamant, to find the world a spirit,
And wear my head, denying that I wear it.

II

What a sublime discovery 'twas to make the Universe universal egotism,

That all's ideal—all ourselves! I'll stake the World (be it what you will) that that's no schism:

Oh Doubt!—if thou be'st Doubt, for which some take thee,

But which I doubt extremely—thou sole prism

Of the Truth's rays, spoil not my draught of spirit!

Heaven's brandy, though our brain can hardly bear it.

III

For ever and anon comes Indigestion
(Not the most 'dainty Ariel'), and perplexes

Our soarings with another sort of question:

And that which after all my spirit vexes,
Is, that I find no spot where man can rest eye on,

Without confusion of the sorts and sexes,

Of beings, stars, and this unriddled wonder,

The world, which at the worst's a glorious blunder—

IV

If it be chance; or if it be according To the old text, still better:—lest it should

Turn out so, we'll say nothing 'gainst the wording,

As several people think such hazards rude.

They're right; our days are too brief for affording

Space to dispute what no one ever could Decide, and everybody one day will Know very clearly—or at least lie still.

V

And therefore will I leave off meta-physical

Discussion, which is neither here nor there:

If I agree that what is, is; then this I call
Being quite perspicuous and extremely fair;

The truth is, I've grown lately rather phthetical:

I don't know what the reason is—the air
Perhaps; but as I suffer from the shocks
Of illness, I grow much more orthodox.

VI

The first attack at once proved the Divinity

(But that I never doubted, nor the Devil);

The next, the Virgin's mystical virginity;
The third, the usual Origin of Evil;

The fourth at once establish'd the whole Trinity

On so uncontrovertible a level,

That I devoutly wish'd the three were four
On purpose to believe so much the more.

VII

To our theme.—The man who has stood on the Acropolis

And look'd down over Attica; or he Who has sail'd where picturesque Constantinople is,

Or seen Timbuctoo, or hath taken tea

In small-eyed China's crockery-ware metropolis,

Or sat amidst the bricks of Nineveh,
May not think much of London's first appearance—

But ask him what he thinks of it a year

hence?

VIII

Don Juan had got out on Shooter's Hill; Sunset the time, the place the same declivity

Which looks along that vale of good and ill

Where London streets ferment in full activity;

While everything around was calm and still,

Except the creak of wheels, which on their pivot he Heard,—and that bee-like, bubbling, busy hum

Of cities, that boil over with their scum:—

IX

I say, Don Juan, wrapt in contemplation, Walk'd on behind his carriage, o'er the summit,

And lost in wonder of so great a nation,

Gave way to't, since he could not overcome it.

'And here,' he cried, 'is Freedom's chosen station;
Here peals the people's voice, nor can entomb it
Racks, prisons, inquisitions; resurrection
Awaits it, each new meeting or election.

X

'Here are chaste wives, pure lives; here people pay
But what they please; and if that things
be dear,
'Tis only that they love to throw away
Their cash, to show how much they have a year.

Here laws are all inviolate; none lay Traps for the traveller; every highway's
clear;

Here—'he was interrupted by a knife,
With—'Damn your eyes! your money or your life!'

XI

These freeborn sounds proceeded from four pads
In ambush laid, who had perceived him loiter

Behind his carriage; and, like handy lads,
Had seized the lucky hour to reconnoitre,
In which the heedless gentleman who gads

Upon the road, unless he prove a fighter,
May find himself within that isle of riches
Exposed to lose his life as well as breeches.

XII

Juan, who did not understand a word
Of English, save their shibboleth, 'God
damn!'

And even that he had so rarely heard,
He sometimes thought 'twas only their
'Salām,'

Or 'God be with you!'—and 'tis not absurd

To think so: for half English as I am
(To my misfortune), never can I say I heard them wish 'God with you,' save that way;—

XIII

Juan yet quickly understood their gesture,
And being somewhat choleric and
sudden,

Drew forth a pocket-pistol from his vesture,
And fired it into one assailant's pudding—

Who fell, as rolls an ox o'er in his pasture,
And roar'd out, as he writhed his native mud in,

Unto his nearest follower or henchman,
'Oh Jack! I'm floor'd by that 'ere bloody Frenchman!'

XIV

On which Jack and his train set off at
speed,
And Juan's suite, late scatter'd at a distance,
Came up, all marvelling at such a deed,
And offering, as usual, late assistance.
Juan, who saw the moon's late minion
bleed
As if his veins would pour out his existence,
Stood calling out for bandages and lint,
And wish'd he had been less hasty with his flint.

XV

'Perhaps,' thought he, 'it is the country's
wont

To welcome foreigners in this way: now
I recollect some innkeepers who don't Differ, except in robbing with a bow,
In lieu of a bare blade and brazen front.
But what is to be done? I can't allow
The fellow to lie groaning on the road:
So take him up; I'll help you with the load.'

XVI

But ere they could perform this pious
duty,

The dying man cried, 'Hold! I've got my gruel!
Oh! for a glass of max! We've miss'd our booty;

Let me die where I am!' And as the fuel

Of life shrunk in his heart, and thick and sooty

The drops fell from his death-wound, and he drew ill

His breath,—he from his swelling throat untied

A kerchief, crying 'Give Sal that!'—and
died.

XVII

The cravat stain'd with bloody drops fell
down

Before Don Juan's feet: he could not tell

Exactly why it was before him thrown,
Nor what the meaning of the man's farewell.

Poor Tom was once a kiddy upon town,
A thorough varmint, and a real swell,
Full flash, all fancy, until fairly diddled,
His pockets first and then his body riddled.

XVIII

Don Juan, having done the best he could
In all the circumstances of the case,

As soon as 'Crowners' quest' allow'd,
pursued

His travels to the capital apace;—

Esteeming it a little hard he should In twelve hours' time, and very little
 space,
 Have been obliged to slay a free-born native
 In self-defence: this made him meditative.

XIX

He from the world had cut off a great man,
 Who in his time had made heroic bustle.
 Who in a row like Tom could lead the
 van,
 Booze in the ken, or at the spellken hustle?
 Who queer a flat? Who (spite of Bowstreet's ban)
 On the high toby-spice so flash the muzzle?
 Who on a lark, with black-eyed Sal (his blowing),
 So prime, so swell, so nutty, and so knowing?

XX

But Tom's no more—and so no more of Tom.
 Heroes must die; and by God's blessing
 'tis
 Not long before the most of them go home.
 Hail! Thamis, hail! Upon thy verge it is That Juan's chariot, rolling like a drum
 In thunder, holds the way it can't well
 miss,
 Through Kennington and all the other
 'tons,'
 Which make us wish ourselves in town at once;—

XXI

Through Groves, so call'd as being void of trees,
 (Like lucus from no light); through prospects named Mount Pleasant, as containing nought to
 please,
 Nor much to climb; through little boxes framed
 Of bricks, to let the dust in at your ease,
 With 'To be let,' upon their doors pro-
 claim'd;
 Through 'Rows' most modestly call'd
 'Paradise,'
 Which Eve might quit without much sacrifice;—

XXII

Through coaches, drays, choked turnpikes, and a whirl
 Of wheels, and roar of voices, and confusion;
 Here taverns wooing to a pint of 'purl,'
 There mails fast flying off like a delusion;

There barbers' blocks with periwigs in curl
 In windows; here the lamplighter's infusion
 Slowly distill'd into the glimmering glass (For in those days we had not got to gas—);

XXIII

Through this, and much, and more, is the approach
 Of travellers to mighty Babylon:
 Whether they come by horse, or chaise,
 or coach,
 With slight exceptions, all the ways seem
 one.
 I could say more, but do not choose to encroach Upon the Guide-book's privilege. The
 sun
 Had set some time, and night was on the ridge
 Of twilight, as the party cross'd the bridge.

XXIV

That's rather fine, the gentle sound of Thamis—
 Who vindicates a moment, too, his
 stream—
 Though hardly heard through multifarious 'damme's.'
 The lamps of Westminster's more regular gleam,
 The breadth of pavement, and yon shrine where fame is
 A spectral resident—whose pallid beam
 In shape of moonshine hovers o'er the pile—
 Make this a sacred part of Albion's isle.

XXV

The Druid's groves are gone—so much the better:
 Stonehenge is not—but what the devil
 is it?—
 But Bedlam still exists with its sage fetter,
 That madmen may not bite you on a
 visit;
 The Bench too seats or suits full many a
 debtor;
 The Mansion-House, too (though some people quiz it),
 To me appears a stiff yet grand erection;
 But then the Abbey's worth the whole collection.

XXVI

The line of lights, too, up to Charing
 Cross,
 Pall Mall, and so forth, have a corusca-
 tion
 Like gold as in comparison to dross, Match'd with the Continent's illumina-
 tion,

Whose cities Night by no means deigns to gloss.

The French were not yet a lamp-lighting nation,
And when they grew so—on their new-found lantern,
Instead of wicks, they made a wicked man turn.

XXVII

A row of gentlemen along the streets
Suspended, may illuminate mankind;
As also bonfires made of country-seats;
But the old way is best for the purblind:
The other looks like phosphorus on sheets,
A sort of ignis fatuus to the mind,
Which, though 'tis certain to perplex and frighten,
Must burn more mildly ere it can enlighten.

XXVIII

But London's so well lit, that if Diogenes
Could recommence to hunt his honest man,
And found him not amidst the various progenies
Of this enormous city's spreading spawn,
'Twere not for want of lamps to aid his dodging his Yet undiscover'd treasure. What I can,
I've done to find the same throughout life's journey,
But see the world is only one attorney.

XXIX

Over the stones still rattling, up Pall Mall,
Through crowds and carriages, but waxing thinner
As thunder'd knockers broke the long-seal'd spell
Of doors 'gainst duns, and to an early dinner
Admitted a small party as night fell,—
Don Juan, our young diplomatic sinner,
Pursued his path, and drove past some hotels,
St. James's Palace and St. James's 'Hells.'

XXX

They reach'd the hotel: forth stream'd from the front door
A tide of well-clad waiters, and around
The mob stood, and as usual several score
Of those pedestrian Paphians who abound
In decent London when the daylight's o'er;
Commodious but immoral, they are found Useful, like Malthus, in promoting marriage.—
But Juan now is stepping from his carriage

XXXI

Into one of the sweetest of hotels, Especially for foreigners—and mostly
For those whom favour or whom fortune swells,
And cannot find a bill's small items costly.
There many an envoy either dwelt or dwells
(The den of many a diplomatic lost lie),
Until to some conspicuous square they pass,
And blazon o'er the door their names in brass.

XXXII

Juan, whose was a delicate commission,
Private, though publicly important bore
No title to point out with due precision
The exact affair on which he was sent o'er.
'Twas merely known, that on a secret mission
A foreigner of rank had graced our shore,
Young, handsome, and accomplish'd—who was said
(In whispers) to have turn'd his sovereign's head.

XXXIII

Some rumour also of some strange adventures
Had gone before him, and his wars and loves;
And as romantic heads are pretty painters
And, above all, an Englishwoman's roves
Into the excursive, breaking the indentures
Of sober reason, wheresoe'er it moves:
He found himself extremely in the fashion
Which serves our thinking people for a passion.

XXXIV

I don't mean that they are passionless;
but quite
The contrary; but then 'tis in the head
Yet as the consequences are as bright
As if they acted with the heart instead
What after all can signify the site
Of ladies' lucubrations? So they lead
In safety to the place for which you start
What matters if the road be head or heart?

XXXV

Juan presented in the proper place,
To proper placemen, every Russian credential,
And was received with all the due grimace
By those who govern in the moon's potential,

Who, seeing a handsome stripling with smooth face, Thought (what in state affairs is most essential)
That they as easily might do the youngster,
As hawks may pounce upon a woodland songster.

XXXVI

They err'd, as aged men will do; but by
And by we'll talk of that; and if we don't,
'Twill be because our notion is not high
Of politicians and their double front,
Who live by lies, yet dare not boldly lie:—
Now what I love in women is, they
won't
Or can't do otherwise than lie, but do it
So well, the very truth seems falsehood to
it.

XXXVII

And, after all, what is a lie? 'Tis but
The truth in masquerade; and I defy Historians, heroes, lawyers, priests, to put
A fact without some leaven of a lie.
The very shadow of true Truth would shut
Up annals, revelations, poesy,
And prophecy—except it should be dated
Some years before the incidents related.

XXXVIII

Praised be all liars and all lies! Who now Can tax my mild Muse with mis-anthropy?
She rings the world's 'Te Deum,' and her
brow
Blushes for those who will not:—but
to sigh
Is idle; let us like most others bow,
Kiss hands, feet, any part of majesty,
After the good example of 'Green Erin,' Whose Shamrock now seems rather worse for wearing.

XXXIX

Don Juan was presented, and his dress
And mien excited general admiration—
I don't know which was more admired or
less:
One monstrous diamond drew much observation,
Which Catherine in a moment of 'ivresse'
(In love or brandy's fervent fermenta-
tion)
Bestow'd upon him, as the public learn'd;
And, to say truth, it had been fairly earn'd.

XL

Besides the ministers and underlings,
Who must be courteous to the accredited Diplomatists of rather wavering kings,
Until their royal riddle's fully read,

The very clerks,—those somewhat dirty
springs
Of office, or the house of office, fed
By foul corruption into streams,—even
they
Were hardly rude enough to earn their pay:

XLI

And insolence no doubt is what they are Employ'd for, since it is their daily
labour,
In the dear offices of peace or war;
And should you doubt, pray ask of your next neighbour,
When for a passport, or some other bar
To freedom, he applied (a grief and a
bore),
If he found not in this spawn of taxborn
riches,
Like lap-dogs, the least civil sons of b——s.

XLII

But Juan was received with much 'em-pressement':—
These phrases of refinement I must borrow
From our next neighbour's land, where,
like a chessman,
There is a move set down for joy or
sorrow,
Not only in mere talking, but the press.
Man
In islands is, it seems, downright and
thorough,
More than on continents—as if the sea
(See Billingsgate) made even the tongue more free.

XLIII

And yet the British 'Damme's rather Attic;
Your continental oaths are but incontinent,
And turn on things which no aristocratic Spirit would name, and therefore even
I won't anent
This subject quote; as it would be schis-matic
In politesse, and have a sound affronting
in't;—
But 'Damme's quite ethereal, though too
daring—
Platonic blasphemy, the soul of swearing.

XLIV

For downright rudeness, ye may stay at
home;
For true or false politeness (and scarce
that
Now) you may cross the blue deep and white foam—
The first the emblem (rarely though) of
what

You leave behind, the next of much you
come

To meet. However, 'tis no time to chat
On general topics: poems must confine Themselves to unity, like this of mine.

XLV

In the great world,—which, being interpreted, Meaneth the west or worst end of a

city,
And about twice two thousand people
bred

By no means to be very wise or witty,
But to sit up while others lie in bed,
And look down on the universe with
pity,—

Juan, as an inveterate patrician,
Was well received by persons of condition.

XLVI

He was a bachelor, which is a matter
Of import both to virgin and to bride,
The former's hymeneal hopes to flatter;
And (should she not hold fast by love or pride)

'Tis also of some moment to the latter:
A rib's a thorn in a wed gallant's side,
Requires decorum, and is apt to double
The horrid sin—and what's still worse, the trouble.

XLVII

But Juan was a bachelor—of arts,
And parts, and hearts: he danced and sung, and had

An air as sentimental as Mozart's
Softest of melodies; and could be sad
Or cheerful, without any 'flaws or starts,'
Just at the proper time: and though a lad,
Had seen the world—which is a curious
sight,

And very much unlike what people write.

XLVIII

Fair virgins blush'd upon him; wedded dames

Bloom'd also in less transitory hues;
For both commodities dwell by the Thames,

The painting and the painted; youth,
ceruse,
Against his heart preferr'd their usual
claims,

Such as no gentleman can quite refuse;
Daughters admired his dress, and pious
mothers

Inquired his income, and if he had brothers.

XLIX

The milliners who furnish 'drapery Misses'
Throughout the season, upon speculation

Of payment ere the honeymoon's last
kisses

Have waned into a crescent's coruscation,

Thought such an opportunity as this is,
Of a rich foreigner's initiation,
Not to be overlook'd—and gave such
credit,

That future bridegrooms swore, and sigh'd, and paid it.

L

The Blues, that tender tribe, who sigh o'er sonnets,

And with the pages of the last Review
Line the interior of their heads or bonnets, Advanced in all their azure's highest
hue:

They talk'd bad French or Spanish, and upon its

Late authors ask'd him for a hint or
two;

And which was softest, Russian or Castilian?

And whether in his travels he saw Ilion?

LI

Juan, who was a little superficial,
And not in literature a great Draw-
cansir,

Examined by this learned and especial Jury of matrons, scarce knew what to
answer:

His duties warlike, loving, or official,
His steady application as a dancer,

Had kept him from the brink of Hippocrene,

Which now he found was blue instead of green.

LII

However, he replied at hazard, with A modest confidence and calm assurance,

Which lent his learned lucubrations pith,
And pass'd for arguments of good endurance.

That prodigy, Miss Araminta Smith (Who at sixteen translated 'Hercules Furens')

Into as furious English), with her best
look,

Set down his sayings in her commonplace book.

LIII

Juan knew several languages—as well
He might—and brought them up with skill, in time

To save his fame with each accomplish'd
belle,

Who still regretted that he did not
rhyme.

There wanted but this requisite to swell
 His qualities (with them) into sublime:
 Lady Fitz-Frisky, and Miss Mævia Mannish,
 Both long'd extremely to be sung in Spanish.

LIV

However, he did pretty well, and was Admitted as an aspirant to all
 The coteries, and, as in Banquo's glass,
 At great assemblies or in parties small,
 He saw ten thousand living authors pass,
 That being about their average numeral;
 Also the eighty 'greatest living poets,'
 As every paltry magazine can show it's.

LV

In twice five years the 'greatest living poet,'
 Like to the champion in the fisty ring,
 Is call'd on to support his claim, or show it,
 Although 'tis an imaginary thing.
 Even I—albeit I'm sure I did not know it, Nor sought of foolscap subjects to be
 king,—
 Was reckon'd, a considerable time,
 The grand Napoleon of the realms of
 rhyme.

LVI

But Juan was my Moscow, and Faliero
 My Leipsic, and my Mont Saint Jean seems Cain:

La Belle Alliance of dunces down at zero,
 Now that the Lion's fall'n, may rise
 again:

But I will fall at least as fell my hero;
 Nor reign at all, or as a monarch reign;
 Or to some lonely isle of gaolers go,
 With turncoat Southey for my turnkey Lowe.

LVII

Sir Walter reign'd before me; Moore and
 Campbell

Before and after: but now grown more holy,
 The Muses upon Sion's hill must ramble
 With poets almost clergymen, or wholly:

And Pegasus has a psalmodic amble
 Beneath the very Reverend Rowley Powley,

Who shoes the glorious animal with stilts,
 A modern Ancient Pistol—by the hilts!

LVIII

Still he excels at artificial hard Labourer in the same vineyard, though the vine

Yields him but vinegar for his reward,—
 That neutralised dull Dorus of the Nine;

That swarthy Sporus, neither man nor bard;
 That ox of verse, who ploughs for every
 line:—

Cambyses' roaring Romans beat at least
 The howling Hebrews of Cybele's priest.—

LIX

Then there's my gentle Euphues; who,
 they say,

Sets up for being a sort of moral me;
 He'll find it rather difficult some day

To turn out both, or either, it may be.
 Some persons think that Coleridge hath the sway;

And Wordsworth has supporters, two or three;

And that deep-mouth'd Bæotian 'Savage
 Lander'

Has taken for a swan rogue Southey's gander.

LX

John Keats, who was kill'd off by one critique,

Just as he really promised something
 great,

If not intelligible, without Greek

Contrived to talk about the Gods of late,
 Much as they might have been supposed to speak.

Poor fellow! His was an untoward fate;
 'Tis strange the mind, that very fiery particle,
 Should let itself be snuff'd out by an article.

LXI

The list grows long of live and dead pre-tenders

To that which none will gain—or none will know

The conqueror at least; who, ere Time renders

His last award, will have the long grass

Above his burnt-out brain, and sapless cinders.

If I might augur, I should rate but low
 Their chances;—they're too numerous,
 like the thirty

Mock tyrants, when Rome's annals wax'd but dirty.

LXII

This is the literary lower empire,

Where the prætorian bands take up the
 matter;—

A 'dreadful trade,' like his who 'gathers samphire,'

The insolent soldiery to soothe and
 flatter,

With the same feelings as you'd coax a vampire.

Now, were I once at home, and in good satire,

I'd try conclusions with those Janizaries,
 And show them what an intellectual war is.

LXIII

I think I know a trick or two, would turn Their flanks;—but it is hardly worth my while
 With such small gear to give myself concern:
 Indeed I've not the necessary bile;
 My natural temper's really aught but
 stern,
 And even my Muse's worst reproof's
 a smile;
 And then she drops a brief and modern curtsy,
 And glides away, assured she never hurts
 ye.

LXIV

My Juan, whom I left in deadly peril
 Amongst live poets and blue ladies,
 pass'd
 With some small profit through that field
 so sterile,
 Being tired in time, and neither least nor last,
 Left it before he had been treated very
 ill;
 And henceforth found himself more gaily class'd
 Amongst the higher spirits of the day,
 The sun's true son, no vapour, but a ray.

LXV

His morns he pass'd in business—which dissected,
 Was like all business, a laborious
 nothing
 That leads to lassitude, the most infected
 And Centaur Nessus garb of mortal
 clothing,
 And on our sofas makes us lie dejected,
 And talk in tender horrors of our loathing
 All kinds of toil, save for our country's
 good—
 Which grows no better, though 'tis time it should.

LXVI

His afternoons he pass'd in visits,
 luncheons,
 Lounging, and boxing; and the twilight
 hour
 In riding round those vegetable puncheons Call'd 'Parks,' where there is neither fruit nor flower
 Enough to gratify a bee's slight munch-
 ings;
 But after all it is the only 'bower'
 (In Moore's phrase) where the fashionable
 fair
 Can form a slight acquaintance with fresh
 air.

LXVII

Then dress, then dinner, then awakes the
 world!
 Then glare the lamps, then whirl the wheels, then roar
 Through street and square fast flashing chariots hurl'd
 Like harness'd meteors; then along the floor
 Chalk mimics painting; then festoons are twirl'd;
 Then roll the brazen thunders of the
 door,
 Which opens to the thousand happy few
 An earthly Paradise of Or Molu.

LXVIII

There stands the noble hostess, nor shall sink
 With the three-thousandth curtsy;
 there the waltz,
 The only dance which teaches girls to
 think,
 Makes one in love even with its very faults.
 Saloon, room, hall, o'erflow beyond their
 brink,
 And long the latest of arrivals halts,
 'Midst royal dukes and dames condemn'd
 to climb,
 And gain an inch of staircase at a time.

LXIX

Thrice happy he who, after a survey
 Of the good company, can win a corner,
 A door that's in or boudoir out of the way,
 Where he may fix himself like small
 'Jack Horner,'
 And let the Babel round run as it may,
 And look on as a mourner, or a scornee,
 Or an approver, or a mere spectator,
 Yawning a little as the night grows later.

LXX

But this won't do, save by and by; and he Who, like Don Juan, takes an active
 share,
 Must steer with care through all that glittering sea
 Of gems and plumes and pearls and silks, to where
 He deems it is his proper place to be;
 Dissolving in the waltz to some soft air,
 Or prouder prancing with mercurial skill,
 Where Science marshals forth her own quadrille.

LXXI

Or, if he dance not, but hath higher views
 Upon an heiress or his neighbour's
 bride,
 Let him take care that that which he pursues
 Is not at once too palpably descried.

Full many an eager gentleman oft rues
 His haste; impatience is a blundering
 guide,
 Amongst a people famous for reflection,
 Who like to play the fool with circumspec-
 tion.

LXXII

But, if you can contrive, get next at supper;
 Or if forestall'd, get opposite and ogle:—
 Oh, ye ambrosial moments! always upper
 In mind, a sort of sentimental bogle,
 Which sits for ever upon memory's
 crupper,
 The ghost of vanish'd pleasures once in vogue! Ill
 Can tender souls relate the rise and fall
 Of hopes and fears which shake a single ball.

LXXIII

But these precautionary hints can touch
 Only the common run, who must pursue,
 And watch, and ward; whose plans a word
 too much
 Or little overturns; and not the few Or many (for the number's sometimes
 such)
 Whom a good mien, especially if new,
 Or fame, or name, for wit, war, sense, or nonsense,
 Permits whate'er they please, or did not long since.

LXXIV

Our hero, as a hero, young and handsome,
 Noble, rich, celebrated, and a stranger,
 Like other slaves of course must pay his ransom,
 Before he can escape from so much
 danger
 As will environ a conspicuous man. Some Talk about poetry, and 'rack and manger,'
 And ugliness, disease, as toil and trouble;—
 I wish they knew the life of a young noble.

LXXV

They are young, but know not youth—it is anticipated;
 Handsome but wasted, rich without a sou;
 Their vigour in a thousand arms is dissipated;
 Their cash comes from, their wealth
 goes to a Jew;
 Both senates see their nightly votes participated
 Between the tyrant's and the tribunes'
 crew;

And having voted, dined, drank, gamed,
 and whored,
 The family vault receives another lord.

LXXVI

'Where is the world?' cries Young, at eighty—'Where
 The world in which a man was born?'
 Alas!
 Where is the world of eight years past?
 'Twas there—
 I look for it—'tis gone, a globe of glass!
 Crack'd, shiver'd, vanish'd, scarcely gazed on, ere
 A silent change dissolves the glittering mass.
 Statesmen, chiefs, orators, queens,
 patriots, kings,
 And dandies, all are gone on the wind's
 wings.

LXXVII

Where is Napoleon the Grand? God
 knows:
 Where little Castlereagh? The devil
 can tell:
 Where Grattan, Curran, Sheridan, all
 those
 Who bound the bar or senate in their
 spell?
 Where is the unhappy Queen, with all her
 woes?
 And where the Daughter, whom the Isles loved well?
 Where are those martyr'd saints the Five per Cent?
 And where—oh, where the devil are the Rents?

LXXVIII

Where's Brummel? Dish'd. Where's Long Pole Wellesley? Diddled.
 Where's Whitbread? Romilly? Where's
 George the Third?
 Where is his will? (That's not so soon unriddled.)
 And where is 'Fum' the Fourth, our 'royal bird'?
 Gone down, it seems, to Scotland to be fiddled
 Unto by Sawney's violin, we have heard:
 'Caw me, caw thee'—for six months hath been hatching
 This scene of royal itch and loyal scratch-
 ing.

LXXIX

Where is Lord This? And where my Lady
 That?
 The Honourable Mistresses and Misses?
 Some laid aside like an old Opera hat,
 Married, unmarried, and remarried (this is An evolution oft performed of late).

Where are the Dublin shouts—and London hisses?
Where are the Grenvilles? Turn'd as usual. Where My friends the Whigs? Exactly where they were.

LXXX

Where are the Lady Carolines and Fran-ceses?
Divorced or doing thereanent. Ye annals
So brilliant, where the list of routs and dances is,— Thou Morning Post, sole record of the panels
Broken in carriages, and all the phantasies
Of fashion,—say what streams now fill those channels?
Some die, some fly, some languish on the Continent,
Because the times have hardly left them
one tenant.

LXXXI

Some who once set their caps at cautious
dukes,
Have taken up at length with younger
brothers:
Some heiresses have bit at sharpeners' hooks:
Some maids have been made wives,
some merely mothers:
Others have lost their fresh and fairy
looks:
In short, the list of alterations bothers.
There's little strange in this, but something strange is
The unusual quickness of these common changes.

LXXXII

Talk not of seventy years as age; in seven
I have seen more changes, down from monarchs to
The humblest individual under heaven,
Than might suffice a moderate century
through.
I knew that nought was lasting, but now
even Change grows too changeable, without being new:
Nought's permanent among the human
race,
Except the Whigs not getting into place.

LXXXIII

I have seen Napoleon, who seem'd quite a Jupiter,
Shrink to a Saturn. I have seen a Duke (No matter which) turn politician
stupider,
If that can well be, than his wooden
look;

But it is time that I should hoist my 'blue
Peter,'
And sail for a new theme:—I have seen—and shook
To see it—the king hiss'd, and then caressed;
But don't pretend to settle which was
best.

LXXXIV

I have seen the Landholders without a rap—
I have seen Joanna Southcote—I have
seen
The House of Commons turn'd to a tax-trap—
I have seen that sad affair of the late Queen—
I have seen crowns worn instead of a fool's cap—
I have seen a Congress doing all that's
mean—
I have seen some nations, like o'erloaded asses,
Kick off their burthens—meaning the high classes.

LXXXV

I have seen small poets, and great prozers,
and Interminable—not eternal—speakers—
I have seen the funds at war with house and land—
I have seen the country gentlemen turn squeakers—
I have seen the people ridden o'er like
sand
By slaves on horseback—I have seen malt liquors
Exchanged for 'thin potations' by John Bull—
I have seen John half detect himself a fool.—

LXXXVI

But 'carpe diem,' Juan, 'carpe, carpe!'
To-morrow sees another race as gay
And transient, and devour'd by the same harpy.
'Life's a poor player,'—then 'play out
the play,
Ye villains!' and above all keep a sharp
eye
Much less on what you do than what you say:
Be hypocritical, be cautious, be
Not what you seem, but always what you see.

LXXXVII

But how shall I relate in other cantos
Of what befell our hero in the land,
Which 'tis the common cry and lie to vaunt as
A moral country? But I hold my hand—

For I disdain to write an Ataiantis,
 But 'tis as well at once to understand
 You are not a moral people, and you know
 it
 Without the aid of too sincere a poet.

LXXXVIII

What Juan saw and underwent shall be My topic, with of course the due restriction
 Which is required by proper courtesy;
 And recollect the work is only fiction,
 And that I sing of neither mine nor me,
 Though every scribe, in some slight turn of diction,
 Will hint allusions never meant. Ne'er
 doubt
 This—when I speak, I don't hint, but speak out.

LXXXIX

Whether he married with the third or fourth
 Offspring of some sage husband-hunting countess,
 Or whether with some virgin of more
 worth
 (I mean in Fortune's matrimonial bounties),
 He took to regularly peopling Earth,
 Of which your lawful, awful wedlock fount is,—
 Or whether he was taken in for damages,
 For being too excursive in his homages,—

XC

Is yet within the unread events of time.
 Thus far, go forth, thou lay, which I will
 back
 Against the same given quantity of rhyme,
 For being as much the subject of attack
 As ever yet was any work sublime,
 By those who love to say that white is black.
 So much the better!—I may stand alone,
 But would not change my free thoughts for a throne.

CANTO THE TWELFTH

I

Of all the barbarous middle ages, that Which is most barbarous is the middle
 age
 Of man! it is—I really scarce know what;
 But when we hover between fool and
 sage,
 And don't know justly what we would be at—
 A period something like a printed page,
 Black letter upon foolscap, while our hair Grows grizzled, and we are not what we were;—

II

Too old for youth,—too young, at thirty-five,
 To herd with boys, or hoard with good threescore,—
 I wonder people should be left alive;
 But since they are, that epoch is a bore;
 Love lingers still, although 'twere late to wive:
 And as for other love, the illusion's
 o'er;
 And money, that most pure imagina-
 tion,
 Gleams only through the dawn of its creation.

III

O Gold! Why call we misers miserable?
 Theirs is the pleasure that can never pall;
 Theirs is the best bower anchor, the chain cable
 Which holds fast other pleasures great
 and small.
 Ye who but see the saving man at table,
 And scorn his temperate board, as none
 at all,
 And wonder how the wealthy can be sparing,
 Know not what visions spring from each cheeseparer.

IV

Love or lust makes man sick, and wine much sicker;
 Ambition rends, and gaming gains a
 loss;
 But making money, slowly first, then quicker,
 And adding still a little through each cross
 (Which will come over things), beats love or liquor,
 The gamester's counter, or the statesman's dross.
 O Gold! I still prefer thee unto paper,
 Which makes bank credit like a bank of vapour.

V

Who hold the balance of the world? Who
 reign
 O'er congress, whether royalist or liberal?
 Who rouse the shirtless patriots of Spain?
 (That make old Europe's journals squeak and gibber all).
 Who keep the world, both old and new,
 in pain
 Or pleasure? Who make politics run gibber all?
 The shade of Buonaparte's noble daring?
 Jew Rothschild, and his fellow-Christian, Baring.

VI

Those, and the truly liberal Lafitte, Are the true lords of Europe. Every loan
 Is not a merely speculative hit,
 But seats a nation or upsets a throne.
 Republics also get involved a bit;
 Columbia's stock hath holders not unknown
 On 'Change, and even thy silver soil, Peru,
 Must get itself discounted by a Jew.

Why call the miser miserable? as I said before: the frugal life is his,
 Which in a saint or cynic ever was The theme of praise: a hermit would not miss
 Canonization for the self-same cause,
 And wherefore blame gaunt wealth's austerities?
 Because, you'll say, nought calls for such a trial;—
 Then there's more merit in his self-denial.

VIII

He is your only poet;—passion, pure
 And sparkling on from heap to heap,
 displays,
Possess'd, the ore, of which mere hopes allure
 Nations athwart the deep: the golden rays
 Flash up in ingots from the mine obscure:
 On him the diamond pours its brilliant
 blaze,
 While the mild emerald's beam shades down the dies
 Of other stones, to soothe the miser's eyes.

IX

The lands on either side are his; the ship
 From Ceylon, Inde, or far Cathay, unloads
 For him the fragrant produce of each trip; Beneath his cars of Ceres groan the roads,
 And the vine blushes like Aurora's lip;
 His very cellars might be kings' abodes;
 While he, despising every sensual call,
 Commands—the intellectual lord of all.

X

Perhaps he hath great projects in his mind,
 To build a college, or to found a race,
 A hospital, a church,—and leave behind
 Some dome surmounted by his meagre
 face:
 Perhaps he fain would liberate mankind
 Even with the very ore which makes them base;
 Perhaps he would be wealthiest of his
 nation,
 Or revel in the joys of calculation.

XI

But whether all, or each, or none of
 these
 May be the hoarder's principle of
 action,
 The fool will call such mania a disease:—
 What is his own? Go—look at each transaction,
 Wars, revels, loves—do these bring men
 more ease
 Than the mere plodding through each 'vulgar fraction'?
 Or do they benefit mankind? Lean miser!
 Let spendthrifts' heirs inquire of yours—
 who's wiser?

XII

How beauteous are rouleaus! how charming chests
 Containing ingots, bags of dollars, coins (Not of old victors, all whose heads and crests
 Weigh not the thin ore where their visage shines,
 But) of fine unclipt gold, where dully rests
 Some likeness, which the glittering cirque confines,
 Of modern, reigning, sterling, stupid stamp:
 Yes! ready money is Aladdin's lamp.

XIII

'Love rules the camp, the court, the grove,
 —for love
 Is heaven, and heaven is love':—so sings the bard;
 Which it were rather difficult to prove (A thing with poetry in general hard).
 Perhaps there may be something in 'the grove,'
 At least it rhymes to 'love:' but I'm prepared
 To doubt (no less than landlords of their rental)
 If 'courts' and 'camps' be quite so sentimental.

XIV

But if Love don't, Cash does, and Cash
 alone:
 Cash rules the grove, and fells it too
 beside;
 Without cash, camps were thin, and courts were none;
 Without cash, Malthus tells you—
 'take no brides.'
 So Cash rules Love the ruler, on his own High ground, as virgin Cynthia sways
 the tides:
 And as for 'Heaven being Love,' why not say honey
 Is wax? Heaven is not Love, 'tis Matrimony.

XV

Is not all love prohibited whatever, Excepting marriage? which is love, no
 doubt,
 After a sort; but somehow people never
 With the same thought the two words have help'd out.
 Love may exist with marriage, and should
 ever,
 And marriage also may exist without;
 But love sans banns is both a sin and shame,
 And ought to go by quite another name.

XVI

Now if the 'court,' and 'camp,' and 'grove,' be not
 Recruited all with constant married men,
 Who never coveted their neighbour's lot,
 I say that line's a lapsus of the pen;—
 Strange too in my buon camerado Scott,
 So celebrated for his morals, when My Jeffrey held him up as an example
 To me;—of which these morals are a sample.

XVII

Well, if I don't succeed, I have succeeded,
 And that's enough; succeeded in my
 youth,
 The only time when much success is
 needed:
 And my success produced what I, in
 sooth,
 Cared most about; it need not now be pleaded—Whate'er it was, 'twas mine; I've paid,
 in truth,
 Of late, the penalty of such success,
 But have not learn'd to wish it any less.

XVIII

That suit in Chancery,—which some persons plead
 In an appeal to the unborn, whom they,
 In the faith of their procreative creed,
 Baptize posterity, or future clay,—
 To me seems but a dubious kind of need
 To lean on for support in any way;
 Since odds are that posterity will know
 No more of them, than they of her, I trow.

XIX

Why, I'm posterity—and so are you;
 And whom do we remember? Not a hundred.
 Were every memory written down all true,
 The tenth or twentieth name would be but blundered;
 Even Plutarch's Lives have but pick'd out a few,
 And 'gainst those few your annalists
 have thunder'd;
 And Mitford in the nineteenth century
 Gives, with Greek truth, the good old Greek the lie.

XX

Good people all, of every degree,
 Ye gentle readers and ungentle writers,
 In this twelfth Canto 'tis my wish to be
 As serious as if I had for inditers Malthus and Wilberforce:—the last set
 free
 The Negroes, and is worth a million
 fighters;
 While Wellington has but enslaved the Whites,
 And Malthus does the thing 'gainst which he writes.

XXI

I'm serious—so are all men upon paper;
 And why should I not form my specula-
 tion,
 And hold up to the sun my little taper?
 Mankind just now seem wrapt in meditation
 On constitutions and steam-boats of
 vapour;
 While sages write against all pro-
 creation,
 Unless a man can calculate his means
 Of feeding brats the moment his wife weans.

XXII

That's noble! That's romantic! For my
 part,
 I think that 'Philo-genitiveness' is—(Now here's a word quite after my own
 heart,
 Though there's a shorter a good deal
 than this
 If that politeness set it not apart;
 But I'm resolved to say nought that's amiss)—
 I say, methinks that 'Philo-genitiveness' Might meet from men a little more forgiveness.

XXIII

And now to business.—O my gentle Juan!
 Thou art in London—in that pleasant
 place,
 Where every kind of mischief's daily brew-
 ing,
 Which can await warm youth in its wild
 race.
 'Tis true, that thy career is not a new one;
 Thou art no novice in the headlong
 chase
 Of early life; but this is a new land,
 Which foreigners can never understand.

XXIV

What with a small diversity of climate,
 Of hot or cold, mercurial or sedate,
 I could send forth my mandate like a primate
 Upon the rest of Europe's social state;

But thou art the most difficult to rhyme at,
Great Britain, which the Muse may penetrate.
All countries have their 'Lions,' but in
thee
There is but one superb menagerie.

XXV

But I am sick of politics. Begin,
'Paulo Majora,' Juan, undecided
Amongst the paths of being 'taken in,'
Above the ice had like a skater glided:
When tired of play, he flirted without sin
With some of those fair creatures who have prided
Themselves on innocent tantalisation,
And hate all vice except its reputation.

XXVI

But these are few, and in the end they
make
Some devilish escapade or stir, which shows
That even the purest people may mistake
Their way through virtue's primrose paths of snows;
And then men stare, as if a new ass spake
To Balaam, and from tongue to ear o'erflows Quicksilver small talk, ending (if you note
it)
With the kind world's amen—'Who would have thought it?'

XXVII

The little Leila, with her Orient eyes,
And taciturn Asiatic disposition, (Which saw all Western things with small
surprise,
To the surprise of people of condition,
Who think that novelties are butterflies
To be pursued as food for inanition.)
Her charming figure and romantic history
Became a kind of fashionable mystery.

XXVIII

The women much divided—as is usual
Amongst the sex in little things or great.
Think not, fair creatures, that I mean to abuse you all—
I have always liked you better than I
state:
Since I've grown moral, still I must accuse
you all
Of being apt to talk at a great rate;
And now there was a general sensation
Amongst you, about Leila's education.

XXIX

In one point only were you settled—and You had reason; 'twas that a young child of grace,
As beautiful as her own native land,
And far away, the last bud of her race,

How'er our friend Don Juan might command
Himself for five, four, three, or two years' space,
Would be much better taught beneath the
eye
Of peeresses whose follies had run dry.

XXX

So first there was a generous emulation,
And then there was a general competi-
tion,
To undertake the orphan's education.
As Juan was a person of condition,
It had been an affront on this occasion
To talk of a subscription or petition;
But sixteen dowagers, ten unwed she sages,
Whose tale belongs to 'Hallam's Middle Ages,'

XXXI

And one or two sad, separate wives, with-
out
A fruit to bloom upon their withering
bough—
Begg'd to bring up the little girl, and
'out,'—
For that's the phrase that settles all things now,
Meaning a virgin's first blush at a rout,
And all her points as thorough-bred to
show:
And I assure you, that like virgin honey Tastes their first season (mostly if they have money).

XXXII

How all the needy honourable misters,
Each out-at-elbow peer, or desperate
dandy,
The watchful mothers, and the careful
sisters,
(Who, by the by, when clever, are more handy
At making matches, where 'tis gold that glisters,
Than their he relatives), like flies o'er candy
Buzz round 'the Fortune' with their busy
battery,
To turn her head with waltzing and with flattery!

XXXIII

Each aunt, each cousin, hath her specula-
tion;
Nay, married dames will now and then discover
Such pure disinterestedness of passion, I've known them court an heiress for their lover.

'Tantæne!' Such the virtues of high station,
 Even in the hopeful Isle, whose outlet's 'Dover!'
 While the poor rich wretch, object of these cares,
 Has cause to wish her sire had had male heirs.

XXXIV

Some are soon bagg'd, and some reject three dozen.
 'Tis fine to see them scattering refusals
 And wild dismay o'er every angry cousin
 (Friends of the party), who begin accusals
 Such as—'Unless Miss (Blank) meant to have chosen Poor Frederick, why did she accord perusals
 To his billets? Why waltz with him? Why, I pray,
 Look yes last night, and yet say no to-day?

XXXV

'Why?—Why?—Besides, Fred really was attach'd;
 'Twas not her fortune—he has enough without:
 The time will come she'll wish that she had snatch'd
 So good an opportunity, no doubt:—
 But the old Marchioness some plan had hatch'd,
 As I'll tell Aurea at to-morrow's rout:
 And after all poor Frederick may do better—
 Pray did you see her answer to his letter?'

XXXVI

Smart uniforms and sparkling coronets
 Are spurn'd in turn, until her turn arrives,
 After male loss of time, and hearts, and bets
 Upon the sweepstakes for substantial wives;
 And when at last the pretty creature gets
 Some gentleman, who fights, or writes, or drives,
 It soothes the awkward squad of the rejected
 To find how very badly she selected.

XXXVII

For sometimes they accept some long pursuer,
 Worn out with importunity; or fall
 (But here perhaps the instances are fewer)
 To the lot of him who scarce pursued at all.
 A hazy widower turn'd of forty's sure (If 'tis not vain examples to recall)
 To draw a high prize: now, howe'er he got her, I See nought more strange in this than t'other lottery.

XXXVIII

I, for my part—(one 'modern instance' more,
 'True, 'tis a pity—pity 'tis, 'tis true')—
 Was chosen from out an amatory score,
 Albeit my years were less discreet than few;
 But though I also had reform'd before
 Those became one who soon were to be two,
 I'll not gainsay the generous public's voice,
 That the young lady made a monstrous choice.

XXXIX

Oh, pardon my digression—or at least
 Peruse! 'Tis always with a moral end
 That I dissert, like grace before a feast:
 For like an aged aunt, or tiresome friend,
 A rigid guardian, or a zealous priest,
 My Muse by exhortation means to mend
 All people, at all times, and in most places,
 Which puts my Pegasus to these grave paces.

XL

But now I'm going to be immoral; now
 I mean to show things really as they are,
 Not as they ought to be: for I avow,
 That till we see what's what in fact,
 we're far
 From much improvement with that virtuous plough
 Which skims the surface, leaving scarce a scar
 Upon the black loam long manured by Vice,
 Only to keep its corn at the old price.

XLI

But first of little Leila we'll dispose;
 For like a day-dawn she was young and pure,
 Or like the old comparison of snows,
 Which are more pure than pleasant to be sure.
 Like many people everybody knows,
 Don Juan was delighted to secure
 A goodly guardian for his infant charge,
 Who might not profit much by being at large.

XLII

Besides, he had found out he was no tutor
 (I wish that others would find out the same),
 And rather wish'd in such things to stand neuter,
 For silly wards will bring their guardians blame:

So when he saw each ancient dame a suitor
 To make his little wild Asiatic tame, Consulting 'the Society for Vice Suppression,' Lady Pinchbeck was his choice.

XLIII

Olden she was—but had been very young;
 Virtuous she was—and had been, I
 believe;
 Although the world has such an evil
 tongue
 That—but my chaster ear will not receive

An echo of a syllable that's wrong;
 In fact, there's nothing makes me so much grieve,
 As that abominable tittle-tattle,
 Which is the cud eschew'd by human cattle.

XLIV

Moreover I've remark'd (and I was once
 A slight observer in a modest way),
 And so may every one except a dunce,
 That ladies in their youth a little gay,
 Besides their knowledge of the world, and
 sense

Of the sad consequence of going astray,
 Are wiser in their warnings 'gainst the woe
 Which the mere passionless can never know.

XLV

While the harsh prude indemnifies her virtue
 By railing at the unknown and envied
 passion,
 Seeking far less to save you than to hurt
 you,
 Or, what's still worse, to put you out of fashion,—

The kinder veteran with calm words will court you,

Entreating you to pause before you
 dash on;

Expounding and illustrating the riddle
 Of epic Love's beginning, end, and middle.

XLVI

Now whether it be thus, or that they are stricter,

As better knowing why they should be so,
 I think you'll find from many a family picture,

That daughters of such mothers as may
 know

The world by experience rather than by lecture,

Turn out much better for the Smithfield
 Show

Of vestals brought into the marriage mart,
 Than those bred up by prudes without a heart.

XLVII

I said that Lady Pinchbeck had been talk'd
 about—

As who has not, if female, young, and
 pretty?

But now no more the ghost of Scandal
 stalk'd about;

She merely was deem'd amiable and
 witty,

And several of her best bons-mots were hawk'd about:

Then she was given to charity and pity,
 And pass'd (at least the latter years of life)
 For being a most exemplary wife.

XLVIII

High in high circles, gentle in her own,
 She was the mild reprover of the young,

Whenever—which means every day—they'd shown

An awkward inclination to go wrong.
 The quantity of good she did's unknown,
 Or at the least would lengthen out my
 song:

In brief, the little orphan of the East Had raised an interest in her, which increased.

XLIX

Juan, too, was a sort of favourite with her,
 Because she thought him a good heart

at bottom,
 A little spoil'd, but not so altogether;

Which was a wonder, if you think who got him,

And how he had been toss'd, he scarce
 knew whither:

Though this might ruin others, it did not him,

At least entirely—for he had seen too
 many

Changes in youth, to be surprised at any.

And these vicissitudes tell best in youth;
 For when they happen at a riper age,

People are apt to blame the Fates, for—
 sooth,

And wonder Providence is not more
 sage.

Adversity is the first path to truth:
 He who hath proved war, storm, or woman's rage,

 Whether his winters be eighteen or eighty,

Hath won the experience which is deem'd so weighty.

LI

How far it profits is another matter.—
 Our hero gladly saw his little charge

Safe with a lady, whose last grown-up
 daughter

Being long married, and thus set at large,

Had left all the accomplishments she taught her
To be transmitted, like the Lord
Mayor's barge,
To the next comer; or—as it will tell
More Muse-like—like to Cytherea's shell.

LII

I call such things transmission; for there is
A floating balance of accomplishment,
Which forms a pedigree from Miss to Miss,
According as their minds or backs are bent.

Some waltz; some draw; some fathom the
abyss

Of metaphysics; others are content With music; the most moderate shine as wits;

While others have a genius turn'd for fits.

LIII

But whether fits, or wits, or harpsichords,
Theology, fine arts, or finer stays,

May be the baits for gentlemen or lords
With regular descent, in these our days,
The last year to the new transfers its hoards;

New vestals claim men's eyes with the same praise

Of 'elegant' et cætera, in fresh batches—
All matchless creatures, and yet bent on matches.

LIV

But now I will begin my poem. 'Tis Perhaps a little strange, if not quite new,
That from the first of Cantos up to this I've not begun what we have to go
through.

These first twelve books are merely flourishes,

Preludios, trying just a string or two
Upon my lyre, or making the pegs sure;
And when so, you shall have the overture.

LV

My Muses do not care a pinch of rosin
About what's call'd success, or not succeeding:

Such thoughts are quite below the strain
they have chosen;

'Tis a 'great moral lesson' they are reading.

I thought, at setting off, about two dozen Cantos would do; but at Apollo's pleading,

If that my Pegasus should not be founder'd,

I think to canter gently through a hundred.

LVI

Don Juan saw that microcosm on stilts, Yclept the Great World; for it is the
least,

Although the highest: but as swords have hilt

By which their power of mischief is increased,

When man in battle or in quarrel tilts,
Thus the low world, north, south, or west, or east,

Must still obey the high—which is their handle,

Their moon, their sun, their gas, their farthing candle.

LVII

He had many friends who had many wives, and was

Well look'd upon by both, to that extent
Of friendship which you may accept or
pass,

It does nor good, nor harm: being merely meant

To keep the wheels going of the higher
class,

And draw them nightly when a ticket's sent;

And what with masquerades, and fêtes,
and balls,

For the first season such a life scarce palls.

LVIII

A young unmarried man, with a good name
And fortune, has an awkward part to
play;

For good society is but a game,
'The royal game of Goose,' as I may
say,

Where everybody has some separate aim,
An end to answer, or a plan to lay—

The single ladies wishing to be double,
The married ones to save the virgins trouble.

LIX

I don't mean this as general, but particular Examples may be found of such pursuits:

Though several also keep their perpendicular

Like poplars, with good principles for
roots;

Yet many have a method more reticular—
'Fishers for men,' like sirens with soft lutes:

For talk six times with the same single lady,
And you may get the wedding dresses ready.

LX

Perhaps you'll have a letter from the
mother,

To say her daughter's feelings are tre-pann'd;

Perhaps you'll have a visit from the
brother,

All strut, and stays, and whiskers, to demand

What 'your intentions are?'—One way or other

It seems the virgin's heart expects your
hand:

And between pity for her case and yours,
You'll add to Matrimony's list of cures.

LXI

I've known a dozen weddings made even
thus,

And some of them high names: I have also known

Young men who—though they hated to discuss

Pretensions which they never dream'd to have shown—

Yet neither frighten'd by a female fuss,
Nor by mustachios moved, were let alone,

And lived, as did the broken-hearted fair,
In happier plight than if they form'd a pair.

LXII

There's also nightly, to the uninitiated,
A peril—not indeed like love or

marriage,
But not the less for this to be depreciated:

It is—I meant and mean not to dis-
parage

The show of virtue even in the vitiated—
It adds an outward grace unto their carriage—

But to denounce the amphibious sort of harlot,

Couleur de rose, who's neither white nor scarlet.

LXIII

Such is your cold coquette, who can't say
'No,'

And won't say 'Yes,' and keeps you on and off-ing

On a lee-shore, till it begins to blow—
Then sees your heart wreck'd with an inward scoffing.

This works a world of sentimental woe,

And sends new Werters yearly to their coffin;

But yet is merely innocent flirtation,
Not quite adultery, but adulteration.

LXIV

'Ye gods, I grow a talker!' Let us prate.
The next of perils, though I place it sternest,

Is when, without regard to 'church or state,'

A wife makes or takes love in upright earnest.

Abroad, such things decide few women's
fate—

(Such, early traveller! is the truth thou learnest)—

But in old England, when a young bride
errs,

Poor thing! Eve's was a trifling case to hers.

LXV

For 'tis a low, newspaper, humdrum, lawsuit

Country, where a young couple of the same ages

Can't form a friendship, but the world o'erawes it.

Then there's the vulgar trick of those d——d damages!

A verdict—grievous foe to those who cause it!—

Forms a sad climax to romantic homages;

Besides those soothing speeches of the pleaders,

And evidences which regale all readers.

LXVI

But they who blunder thus are raw beginners;

A little genial sprinkling of hypocrisy
Has saved the fame of thousand splendid sinners,

The loveliest oligarchs of our gyno-
cracy;

You may see such at all the balls and dinners,

Among the proudest of our aristocracy,
So gentle, charming, charitable, chaste—

And all by having tact as well as taste.

LXVII

Juan, who did not stand in the predica-
ment

Of a mere novice, had one safeguard
more;

For he was sick—no, 'twas not the word sick I meant—

But he had seen so much good love
before,

That he was not in heart so very weak;—
I meant

But thus much, and no sneer against the
shore

Of white cliffs, white necks, blue eyes, bluer stockings,

Tithes, taxes, duns, and doors with double knockings.

LXVIII

But coming young from lands and scenes romantic,

Where lives, not lawsuits, must be risk'd for Passion,

And Passion's self must have a spice of frantic,

Into a country where 'tis half a fashion,
Seem'd to him half commercial, half pedantic, Howe'er he might esteem this moral

nation:
Besides (alas! his taste—forgive and pity!)
At first he did not think the women pretty.

LXIX

I say at first—for he found out at last,
 But by degrees, that they were fairer far
 Than the more glowing dames whose lot is cast

Beneath the influence of the eastern star.
 A further proof we should not judge in
 haste;

Yet inexperience could not be his bar
 To taste:—the truth is, if men would confess,
 That novelties please less than they impress.

LXX

Though travell'd, I have never had the luck to

Trace up those shuffling negroes, Nile or Niger,
 To that impracticable place Timbuctoo,
 Where Geography finds no one to oblige
 her

With such a chart as may be safely stuck
 to—

For Europe ploughs in Afric like 'bos piger';
 But if I had been at Timbuctoo, there
 No doubt I should be told that black is fair.

LXXI

It is. I will not swear that black is white;
 But I suspect in fact that white is black,
 And the whole matter rests upon eye-
 sight.

Ask a blind man, the best judge. You'll attack

Perhaps this new position—but I'm right;
 Or if I'm wrong, I'll not be ta'en aback:—

He hath no morn nor night, but all is dark Within; and what seest thou? A dubious spark.

LXXII

But I'm relapsing into metaphysics,
 That labyrinth, whose clue is of the same Construction as your cures for hectic
 phthistics,

Those bright moths fluttering round a dying flame:

And this reflection brings me to plain physics,

And to the beauties of a foreign dame,
 Compared with those of our pure pearls of
 price,
 Those polar summers, all sun, and some ice.

LXXIII

Or say they are like virtuous mermaids,
 whose Beginnings are fair faces, ends mere fishes;—

Not that there's not a quantity of those Who have a due respect for their own wishes.

Like Russians rushing from hot baths to snows

Are they, at bottom virtuous even when vicious;

They warm into a scrape, but keep of course,
 As a reserve, a plunge into remorse.

LXXIV

But this has nought to do with their out-
 sides.

I said that Juan did not think them pretty
 At the first blush; for a fair Briton hides Half her attractions—probably from
 pity—

And rather calmly into the heart glides,
 Than storms it as a foe would take a
 city;

But once there (if you doubt this, prithee try)
 She keeps it for you like a true ally.

LXXV

She cannot step as does an Arab barb,
 Or Andalusian girl from mass returning,
 Nor wear as gracefully as Gauls her garb,
 Nor in her eye Ausonia's glance is burn-
 ing;

Her voice, though sweet, is not so fit to warble those bravuras (which I still am learning

To like, though I have been seven years in Italy,

And have, or had, an ear that served me prettily);—

LXXVI

She cannot do these things, nor one or two Others, in that off-hand and dashing style

Which takes so much—to give the devil
 his due;

Nor is she quite so ready with her smile,
 Nor settles all things in one interview

(A thing approved as saving time and toil);—

But though the soil may give you time and trouble,

Well cultivated, it will render double.

LXXVII

And if in fact she takes to a *grande
 passion*,

It is a very serious thing indeed:
 Nine times in ten 'tis but caprice or
 fashion,

Coquetry, or a wish to take the lead,
 The pride of a mere child with a new sash
 on,

Or wish to make a rival's bosom bleed:
 But the tenth instance will be a tornado,
 For there's no saying what they will or may do.

LXXVIII

The reason's obvious: if there's an éclat,
 They lose their caste at once, as do the Parias;
 And when the delicacies of the law
 Have fill'd their papers with their comments various,
 Society, that china without flaw,
 (The hypocrite!) will banish them like Marius,
 To sit amidst the ruins of their guilt:
 For Fame's a Carthage not so soon rebuilt.

LXXIX

Perhaps this is as it should be;—it is A comment on the Gospel's 'Sin no
 more,
 And be thy sins forgiven';—but upon this
 I leave the saints to settle their own score.
 Abroad, though doubtless they do much
 amiss,
 An erring woman finds an opener door
 For her return to Virtue—as they call
 That lady, who should be at home to all.

LXXX

For me, I leave the matter where I find it, Knowing that such uneasy virtue leads People some ten times less in fact to mind
 it,
 And care but for discoveries, and not
 deeds.
 And as for chastity, you'll never bind it
 By all the laws the strictest lawyer
 pleads,
 But aggravate the crime you have not prevented,
 By rendering desperate those who had else repented.

LXXXI

But Juan was no casuist, nor had ponder'd
 Upon the moral lessons of mankind:
 Besides, he had not seen of several hundred
 A lady altogether to his mind.
 A little blasé—'tis not to be wonder'd
 At, that his heart had got a tougher
 rind:
 And though not vainer from his past
 success,
 No doubt his sensibilities were less.

LXXXII

He also had been busy seeing sights—
 The Parliament and all the other houses;
 Had sat beneath the gallery at nights,
 To hear debates whose thunder roused (not rouses)

The world to gaze upon those northern lights,
 Which flash'd as far as where the musk-
 bull browses;
 He had also stood at times behind the
 throne—
 But Grey was not arrived, and Chatham
 gone.

LXXXIII

He saw, however, at the closing session,
 That noble sight, when really free the
 nation,
 A king in constitutional possession
 Of such a throne as is the proudest
 station,
 Though despots know it not—till the progression
 Of freedom shall complete their education.
 'Tis not mere splendour makes the show
 august
 To eye or heart—it is the people's trust.

LXXXIV

There, too, he saw (whate'er he may be
 now)
 A Prince, the prince of princes at the
 time,
 With fascination in his very bow,
 And full of promise, as the spring of prime.
 Though royalty was written on his brow,
 He had then the grace, too, rare in every clime,
 Of being, without alloy of fop or beau,
 A finish'd gentleman from top to toe.

LXXXV

And Juan was received, as hath been said,
 Into the best society; and there
 Occurr'd what often happens, I'm afraid,
 However disciplined and debonnaire:—
 The talent and good humour he display'd, Besides the mark'd distinction of his
 air,
 Exposed him, as was natural, to tempta-
 tion,
 Even though himself avoided the occasion.

LXXXVI

But what, and where, with whom, and when, and why,
 Is not to be put hastily together;
 And as my object is morality
 (Whatever people say), I don't know whether
 I'll leave a single reader's eyelid dry,
 But harrow up his feelings till they
 wither,
 And hew out a huge monument of pathos,
 As Philip's son proposed to do with Athos.

LXXXVII

Here the twelfth Canto of our introduction Ends. When the body of the book's
begun,
You'll find it of a different construction
From what some people say 'twill be when done;
The plan at present's simply in concoction.
I can't oblige you, reader, to read on;
That's your affair, not mine: a real spirit
Should neither court neglect, nor dread to bear it.

LXXXVIII

And if my thunderbolt not always rattles, Remember, reader! you have had
before
The worst of tempests and the best of battles,
That e'er were brew'd from elements or
gore,
Besides the most sublime of—Heaven knows what else;
An usurer could scarce expect much
more—
But my best canto, save one on astronomy,
Will turn upon 'political economy.'

LXXXIX

That is your present theme for popularity:
Now that the public hedge hath scarce
a stake,
It grows an act of patriotic charity,
To show the people the best way to
break.
My plan (but I, if but for singularity, Reserve it) will be very sure to take.
Meantime, read all the national-debt
sinks,
And tell me what you think of our great thinkers.

CANTO THE THIRTEENTH

I

I NOW mean to be serious;—it is time, Since laughter now-a-days is deem'd too serious;
A jest at Vice by Virtue's call'd a crime,
And critically held as deleterious:
Besides, the sad's a source of the sublime,
Although when long a little apt to weary us;
And therefore shall my lay soar high and solemn,
As an old temple dwindled to a column.

II

The Lady Adeline Amundeville ('Tis an old Norman name, and to be
found
In pedigrees, by those who wander still Along the last fields of that Gothic
ground)

Was high-born, wealthy by her father's
will,
And beauteous, even where beauties
most abound,
In Britain—which of course true patriots
find
The goodliest soil of body and of mind.

III

I'll not gainsay them; it is not my cue;
I'll leave them to their taste, no doubt
the best:
An eye's an eye, and whether black or
blue,
Is no great matter, so 'tis in request;
'Tis nonsense to dispute about a hue—
The kindest may be taken as a test.
The fair sex should be always fair; and no
man
Till thirty, should perceive there's a plain woman.

IV

And after that serene and somewhat dull Epoch, that awkward corner turn'd for
days
More quiet, when our moon's no more at
full,
We may presume to criticise or praise;
Because indifference begins to lull
Our passions, and we walk in wisdom's
ways;
Also because the figure and the face
Hint, that 'tis time to give the younger place.

V

I know that some would fain postpone this era,
Reluctant as all placemen to resign
Their post; but theirs is merely a chimera,
For they have pass'd life's equinoctial
line:
But then they have their claret and Madeira
To irrigate the dryness of decline;
And county meetings, and the parliament,
And debt, and what not, for their solace sent.

VI

And is there not religion, and reform,
Peace, war, the taxes, and what's called
the 'Nation'?
The struggle to be pilots in a storm?
The landed and the monied specula-
tion?
The joys of mutual hate to keep them
warm,
Instead of love, that mere hallucina-
tion?
Now hatred is by far the longest pleasure;
Men love in haste, but they detest at leisure.

VII

Rough Johnson, the great moralist, profess'd,
 Right honestly, 'he liked an honest
 hater!'

The only truth that yet has been confest Within these latest thousand years or later.

Perhaps the fine old fellow spoke in jest:—

For my part, I am but a mere spectator,
 And gaze where'er the palace or the hovel
 is,
 Much in the mode of Goethe's Mephistopheles;

VIII

But neither love nor hate in much excess;
 Though 'twas not once so. If I sneer
 sometimes,

It is because I cannot well do less,
 And now and then it also suits my
 rhymes.

I should be very willing to redress Men's wrongs, and rather check than punish crimes,
 Had not Cervantes, in that too true tale
 Of Quixote, shown how all such efforts fail.

IX

Of all tales 'tis the saddest—and more sad,
 Because it makes us smile: his hero's
 right,
 And still pursues the right;—to curb the
 bad

His only object, and 'gainst odds to fight
 His guerdon: 'tis his virtue makes him mad!
 But his adventures form a sorry sight;—
 A sorrier still is the great moral taught By that real epic unto all who have thought.

X

Redressing injury, revenging wrong,
 To aid the damsel and destroy the catiff;
 Opposing singly the united strong,
 From foreign yoke to free the helpless
 native:—

Alas! must noblest views, like an old song,
 Be for mere fancy's sport a theme creative,

A jest, a riddle, Fame through thick and thin sought!

And Socrates himself but Wisdom's Quixote?

XI

Cervantes smiled Spain's chivalry away;
 A single laugh demolish'd the right arm
 Of his own country;—seldom since that
 day

Has Spain had heroes. While Romance could charm,

The world gave ground before her bright
 array;

And therefore have his volumes done
 such harm,
 That all their glory, as a composition,
 Was dearly purchased by his land's perdition.

XII

I'm 'at my old lunes'—digression, and
 forget

The Lady Adeline Amundeville;
 The fair most fatal Juan ever met,
 Although she was not evil nor meant
 ill;

But Destiny and Passion spread the net (Fate is a good excuse for our own will),
 And caught them;—what do they not catch methinks?
 But I'm not Œdipus, and life's a Sphinx.

XIII

I tell the tale as it is told, nor dare
 To venture a solution: 'Davus sum!'
 And now I will proceed upon the pair.
 Sweet Adeline, amidst the gay world's
 hum,
 Was the Queen-Bee, the glass of all that's
 fair;

Whose charms made all men speak,
 and women dumb.
 The last's a miracle, and such was
 reckon'd,
 And since that time there has not been a second.

XIV

Chaste was she, to detraction's despera-
 tion,
 And wedded unto one she had loved
 well—

A man known in the councils of the
 nation,
 Cool, and quite English, imperturbable,
 Though apt to act with fire upon occasion.
 Proud of himself and her: the world could tell Nought against either, and both seem'd
 secure—

She in her virtue, he in his hauteur.

XV

It chanced some diplomatical relations, Arising out of business, often brought Himself and Juan in their mutual stations
 Into close contact. Though reserved, nor caught

By specious seeming, Juan's youth, and
 patience,
 And talent, on his haughty spirit
 wrought,
 And form'd a basis of esteem, which ends
 In making men what courtesy calls friends.

XVI

And thus Lord Henry, who was cautious as Reserve and pride could make him, and full slow
 In judging men—when once his judgment
 was Determined, right or wrong, on friend or foe,
 Had all the pertinacity pride has,
 Which knows no ebb to its imperious
 flow,
 And loves or hates, disdaining to be guided,
 Because its own good pleasure hath decided.

XVII

His friendships, therefore, and no less aversions,
 Though oft well founded, which con-firm'd but more
 His prepossessions, like the laws of Persians
 And Medes, would ne'er revoke what went before.
 His feelings had not those strange fits, like tertians,
 Of common likings, which make some deplore
 What they should laugh at—the mere ague
 still
 Of men's regard, the fever or the chill.

XVIII

"'Tis not in mortals to command success:
 But do you more, Sempronius—don't deserve it,'
 And take my word, you won't have any less.
 Be wary, watch the time, and always serve it;
 Give gently way, when there's too great a
 press;
 And for your conscience only learn to nerve it,
 For, like a racer, or a boxer training,
 'Twill make, if proved, vast efforts without paining.

XIX

Lord Henry also liked to be superior,
 As most men do, the little or the great;
 The very lowest find out an inferior,
 At least they think so, to exert their state
 Upon: for there are very few things wearier
 Than solitary Pride's oppressive weight,
 Which mortals generously would divide,
 By bidding others carry while they ride.

XX

In birth, in rank, in fortune likewise equal,
 O'er Juan he could no distinction claim;
 In years he had the advantage of time's sequel;
 And, as he thought, in country much
 the same—

Because bold Britons have a tongue and free quill,
 At which all modern nations vainly aim;
 And the Lord Henry was a great debater,
 So that few members kept the House up later.

XXI

These were advantages: and then he
 thought—
 It was his foible, but by no means sinister—
 That few or none more than himself had
 caught
 Court mysteries, having been himself a minister:
 He liked to teach that which he had been
 taught,
 And greatly shone whenever there had been a stir;
 And reconciled all qualities which grace
 man,
 Always a patriot, and sometimes a place-
 man.

XXII

He liked the gentle Spaniard for his gravity;
 He almost honour'd him for his docility;
 Because, though young, he acquiesced with suavity,
 Or contradicted but with proud humility.
 He knew the world, and would not see depravity
 In faults which sometimes show the soil's fertility,
 If that the weeds o'erlive not the first crop—
 For then they are very difficult to stop.

XXIII

And then he talk'd with him about Madrid,
 Constantinople, and such distant
 places;
 Where people always did as they were bid,
 Or did what they should not with foreign graces.
 Of coursers also spake they: Henry rid Well, like most Englishmen, and loved the races;
 And Juan, like a true-born Andalusian,
 Could back a horse, as despots ride a Russian.

XXIV

And thus acquaintance grew, at noble
 routs,
 And diplomatic dinners, or at other—
 For Juan stood well both with Ins and Outs,
 As in freemasonry a higher brother.

Upon his talent Henry had no doubts;
 His manner show'd him sprung from a high mother;
 And all men like to show their hospitality
 To him whose breeding matches with his quality.

XXV

At Blank-Blank Square;—for we will break no squares

By naming streets: since men are so censorious,

And apt to sow an author's wheat with tares,

Reaping allusions private and inglorious,

Where none were dreamt of, unto love's affairs,

Which were, or are, or are to be notorious,

That therefore do I previously declare,
 Lord Henry's mansion was in Blank-Blank Square.

XXVI

Also there bin another pious reason

For making squares and streets
 anonymous;

Which is, that there is scarce a single season

Which doth not shake some very splendid house

With some slight heart-quake of domestic treason—

A topic scandal doth delight to rouse:
 Such I might stumble over unawares,
 Unless I knew the very chastest squares.

XXVII

'Tis true, I might have chosen Piccadilly,
 A place where peccadillos are unknown;

But I have motives, whether wise or silly,
 For letting that pure sanctuary alone.

Therefore I name not square, street, place, until I

Find one where nothing naughty can be
 shown,

A vestal shrine of innocence of heart:
 Such are—but I have lost the London Chart.

XXVIII

At Henry's mansion then, in Blank-Blank
 Square,

Was Juan a recherché, welcome guest,
 As many other noble scions were;

And some who had but talent for their
 crest;

Or wealth, which is a passport everywhere;
 Or even mere fashion, which indeed's
 the best

Recommendation; and to be well drest
 Will very often supersede the rest.

XXIX

And since 'there's safety in a multitude
 Of counsellors,' as Solomon has said,
 Or some one for him, in some sage,
 grave mood;—

Indeed we see the daily proof display'd
 In senates, at the bar, in wordy feud,
 Where'er collective wisdom can parade,
 Which is the only cause that we can guess
 Of Britain's present wealth and happiness;—

XXX

But as 'there's safety' grafted in the number
 'Of counsellors' for men,—thus for the sex

A large acquaintance lets not Virtue
 slumber;

Or should it shake, the choice will more
 perplex—

Variety itself will more encumber.
 'Midst many rocks we guard more against wrecks;

And thus with women: howsoe'er it shocks some's

Self-love, there's safety in a crowd of coxcombs.

XXXI

But Adeline had not the least occasion
 For such a shield, which leaves but little merit

To virtue proper, or good education.
 Her chief resource was in her own high
 spirit,

Which judged mankind at their due estimation;

And for coquetry, she disdain'd to wear
 it:

Secure of admiration, its impression
 Was faint as of an every-day possession.

XXXII

To all she was polite without parade;
 To some she show'd attention of that kind
 Which flatters, but is flattery convey'd

In such a sort as cannot leave behind
 A trace unworthy either wife or maid;—

A gentle, genial courtesy of mind,
 To those who were, or pass'd for meritorious,

Just to console sad glory for being glorious;

XXXIII

Which is in all respects, save now and then,
 A dull and desolate appendage. Gaze

Upon the shades of those distinguish'd men Who were or are the puppet-shows of
 praise,

The praise of persecution. Gaze again
 On the most favour'd; and amidst the
 blaze

Of sunset halos o'er the laurel-brow'd,
 What can ye recognize?—a gilded cloud.

XXXIV

There also was of course in Adeline That calm patrician polish in the address,
Which ne'er can pass the equinoctial line
Of anything which nature would express;
Just as a mandarin finds nothing fine,—
At least his manner suffers not to guess,
That anything he views can greatly please.
Perhaps we have borrow'd this from the Chinese—

XXXV

Perhaps from Horace: his 'Nil admirari'
Was what he call'd the 'Art of Happiness'—
An art on which the artists greatly vary,
And have not yet attain'd to much
success.
However, 'tis expedient to be wary:
Indifference certes don't produce distress;
And rash enthusiasm in good society
Were nothing but a moral inebriety.

XXXVI

But Adeline was not indifferent: for (Now for a common-place!) beneath the
snow,
As a volcano holds the lava more Within—et cætera. Shall I go on?—No,
I hate to hunt down a tired metaphor,
So let the often-used volcano go.
Poor thing! How frequently, by me and
others,
It hath been stirr'd up till its smoke quite smothers!

XXXVII

I'll have another figure in a trice:—
What say you to a bottle of champagne?
Frozen into a very vinous ice,
Which leaves few drops of that immortal rain,
Yet in the very centre, past all price,
About a liquid glassful will remain;
And this is stronger than the strongest grape
Could e'er express in its expanded shape:

XXXVIII

'Tis the whole spirit brought to a quintessence;
And thus the chilliest aspects may concentre
A hidden nectar under a cold presence.
And such are many—though I only meant her
From whom I now deduce these moral lessons,
On which the Muse has always sought to enter.
And your cold people are beyond all price,
When once you've broken their confounded ice.

XXXIX

But after all they are a North-West
Passage
Unto the glowing India of the soul;
And as the good ships sent upon that message
Have not exactly ascertain'd the Pole (Though Parry's efforts look a lucky presage),
Thus gentlemen may run upon a shoal;
For if the Pole's not open, but all frost
(A chance still), 'tis a voyage or vessel lost.

XL

And young beginners may as well commence
With quiet cruising o'er the ocean
Woman;
While those who are not beginners should have sense Enough to make for port, ere Time shall summon
With his grey signal-flag; and the past
tense,
The dreary 'Fuimus' of all things
human,
Must be declined, while life's thin thread's spun out Between the gaping heir and gnawing gout.

XLI

But heaven must be diverted; its diversion Is sometimes truculent—but never
mind;
The world upon the whole is worth the assertion (If but for comfort) that all things are
kind:
And that same devilish doctrine of the Persian,
Of the 'Two Principles', but leaves behind
As many doubts as any other doctrine
Has ever puzzled faith withal, or yoked her in.

XLII

The English winter—ending in July,
To recommence in August—now was
done.
'Tis the postilion's paradise: wheels fly;
On roads, east, south, north, west, there is a run.
But for post-horses who finds sympathy?
Man's pity for himself, or for his son,
Always premising that said son at college Has not contracted much more debt than knowledge.

XLIII

The London winter's ended in July—
Sometimes a little later. I don't err
In this: whatever other blunders lie
Upon my shoulders, here I must aver

My Muse a glass of Weatherology;
 For parliament is our barometer:
 Let radicals its other acts attack,
 Its sessions form our only almanack.

XLIV

When its quicksilver's down at zero,—lo!
 Coach, chariot, luggage, baggage, equipage!
 Wheels whirl from Carlton palace to Soho,
 And happiest they who horses can engage;
 The turnpikes glow with dust; and Rotten
 Row
 Sleeps from the chivalry of this bright
 age;
 And tradesmen, with long bills and longer
 faces,
 Sigh—as the postboys fasten on the traces.

XLV

They and their bills, 'Arcadians both,' are left
 To the Greek kalends of another session.
 Alas! to them of ready cash bereft,
 What hope remains? Of hope the full possession
 Or generous draft, conceded as a gift,
 At a long date—till they can get a fresh
 one—Hawk'd about at a discount, small or large;
 Also the solace of an overcharge.

XLVI

But these are trifles. Downward flies my
 lord,
 Nodding beside my lady in his carriage.
 Away! away! 'Fresh horses!' are the
 word,
 And changed as quickly as hearts after
 marriage;
 The obsequious landlord hath the change
 restored;
 The postboys have no reason to disparage
 Their fee; but ere the water'd wheels may hiss hence,
 The ostler pleads too for a reminiscence.

XLVII

'Tis granted; and the valet mounts the dickey—
 That gentleman of lords and gentlemen;
 Also my lady's gentlewoman, tricky, Trick'd out, but modest more than poet's pen
 Can paint,—'Così viaggino i Ricchi!' (Excuse a foreign slipslop now and then,
 If but to show I've travell'd: and what's travel,
 Unless it teaches one to quote and cavil?)

XLVIII

The London winter and the country summer
 Were well nigh over. 'Tis perhaps a
 pity,
 When nature wears the gown that doth become her.
 To lose those best months in a sweaty
 city,
 And wait until the nightingale grows
 dumber,
 Listening debates not very wise or
 witty,
 Ere patriots their true country can remember;—
 But there's no shooting (save grouse) till September.

XLIX

I've done with my tirade. The world was
 gone;
 The twice two thousand, for whom earth was made,
 Were vanish'd to be what they call alone—
 That is, with thirty servants for parade,
 As many guests, or more; before whom
 groan
 As many covers, duly, daily laid.
 Let none accuse old England's hospitality—
 Its quantity is but condensed to quality.

L

Lord Henry and the Lady Adeline
 Departed like the rest of their compeers,
 The peerage, to a mansion very fine;
 The Gothic Babel of a thousand years.
 None than themselves could boast a longer line,
 Where time through heroes and through beauties steers;
 And oaks as olden as their pedigree
 Told of their sires, a tomb in every tree.

LI

A paragraph in every paper told
 Of their departure: such is modern
 fame:
 'Tis pity that it takes no further hold Than an advertisement, or much the
 same;
 When, ere the ink be dry, the sound grows
 cold.
 The Morning Post was foremost to proclaim—
 'Departure, for his country seat, to-day,
 Lord H. Amundeville and Lady A.

LII

'We understand the splendid host intends
 To entertain, this autumn, a select
 And numerous party of his noble friends;
 'Midst whom we have heard, from sources quite correct,

The Duke of D—— the shooting season spends,
With many more by rank and fashion
deck'd;
Also a foreigner of high condition,
The envoy of the secret Russian mission.'

LIII

And thus we see—who doubts the Morning Post?
(Whose articles are like the 'Thirty-
nine,'
Which those most swear to who believe them most)—
Our gay Russ Spaniard was ordain'd to shine,
Deck'd by the rays reflected from his host,
With those who, Pope says, 'greatly daring dine.'—
'Tis odd, but true,—last war the News
abounded
More with these dinners than the kill'd or wounded;—

LIV

As thus: 'On Thursday there was a grand
dinner;
Present, Lords A.B.C.'—Earls, dukes, by name
Announced with no less pomp than victory's winner:
Then underneath, and in the very same Column: date, 'Falmouth. There has lately been here
The Slap-dash regiment, so well known
to fame,
Whose loss in the late action we regret:
The vacancies are fill'd up—see Gazette.'

LV

To Norman Abbey whirl'd the noble
pair,—
An old, old monastery once, and now
Still older mansion,—of a rich and rare
Mix'd Gothic, such as artists all allow Few specimens yet left us can compare
Withal: it lies perhaps a little low,
Because the monks prefer'd a hill behind,
To shelter their devotion from the wind.

LVI

It stood embosom'd in a happy valley,
Crown'd by high woodlands, where the Druid oak
Stood, like Caractacus, in act to rally His host, with broad arms 'gainst the thunderstroke,
And from beneath his boughs were seen to sally
The dappled foresters; as day awoke,
The branching stag swept down with all his herd,
To quaff a brook which murmur'd like a bird.

LVII

Before the mansion lay a lucid lake, Broad as transparent, deep, and freshly fed
By a river, which its soften'd way did take
In currents through the calmer water
spread
Around: the wildfowl nestled in the brake
And sedges, brooding in their liquid
bed:
The woods sloped downwards to its brink,
and stood
With their green faces fix'd upon the flood.

LVIII

Its outlet dash'd into a deep cascade, Sparkling with foam, until again subsiding,
Its shriller echoes—like an infant made
Quiet—sank into softer ripples, gliding
Into a rivulet: and thus allay'd, Pursued its course, now gleaming, and now hiding
Its windings through the woods; now clear, now blue,
According as the skies their shadows threw.

LIX

A glorious remnant of the Gothic pile (While yet the church was Rome's) stood half apart
In a grand arch, which once screen'd many an aisle.
These last had disappear'd—a loss to
art:
The first yet frown'd superbly o'er the soil,
And kindled feelings in the roughest
heart,
Which mourn'd the power of time's or tempest's march,
In gazing on that venerable arch.

LX

Within a niche, nigh to its pinnacle, Twelve saints had once stood sanctified
in stone;
But these had fallen, not when the friars
fell,
But in the war which struck Charles from his throne,
When each house was a fortalice—as tell
The annals of full many a line undone,—
The gallant cavaliers, who fought in vain
For those who knew not to resign or reign.

LXI

But in a higher niche, alone, but crown'd,
The Virgin-Mother of the God-born
Child,
With her Son in her blessed arms, look'd
round;
Spared by some chance when all beside was spoil'd;

She made the earth below seem holy ground.

This may be superstition, weak or wild,
But even the faintest relics of a shrine
Of any worship wake some thoughts divine.

LXII

A mighty window, hollow in the centre,
Shorn of its glass of thousand colour-
ings,
Through which the deepen'd glories once could enter,
Streaming from off the sun like seraph's
wings,

Now yawns all desolate: now loud, now
fainter,

The gale sweeps through its fretwork,
and oft sings
The owl his anthem, where the silenced
quire

Lie with their hallelujahs quench'd like fire.

LXIII

But in the noontide of the moon, and when The wind is winged from one point of
heaven,

There moans a strange unearthly sound, which then

Is musical—a dying accent driven Through the huge arch, which soars and sinks again.

Some deem it but the distant echo given
Back to the night wind by the waterfall,
And harmonised by the old choral wall:

LXIV

Others, that some original shape, or form Shaped by decay perchance, hath given the power

(Though less than that of Memnon's statue, warm

In Egypt's rays, to harp at a fix'd hour)
To this grey ruin, with a voice to charm Sad, but serene, it sweeps o'er tree or
tower;

The cause I know not, nor can solve; but
such

The fact:—I've heard it,—once perhaps too much.

LXV

Amidst the court a Gothic fountain play'd, Symmetrical, but deck'd with carvings quaint—

Strange faces, like to men in masquerade,
And here perhaps a monster, there a saint:

The spring gush'd through grim mouths
of granite made,

And sparkled into basins, where it spent
Its little torrent in a thousand bubbles,
Like man's vain glory, and his vainer troubles.

LXVI

The mansion's self was vast and venerable,
With more of the monastic than has
been

Elsewhere preserved: the cloisters still were stable,

The cells, too, and refectory, I ween:
An exquisite small chapel had been able,
Still unimpair'd, to decorate the scene;
The rest had been reform'd, replaced, or
sunk,

And spoke more of the baron than the monk.

LXVII

Huge halls, long galleries, spacious chambers, join'd

By no quite lawful marriage of the arts, Might shock a connoisseur; but when combined,

Form'd a whole which, irregular in parts,
Yet left a grand impression on the mind,
At least of those whose eyes are in their hearts:

We gaze upon a giant for his stature,
Nor judge at first if all be true to nature.

LXVIII

Steel barons, molten the next generation
To silken rows of gay and garter'd earls, Glanced from the walls in goodly preservation:

And Lady Marys blooming into girls,
With fair long locks, had also kept their
station:

And countesses mature in robes and pearls:

Also some beauties of Sir Peter Lely, Whose drapery hints we may admire them freely.

LXIX

Judges in very formidable ermine
Were there, with brows that did not much invite

The accused to think their lordships would determine

His cause by leaning much from might to right:

Bishops, who had not left a single sermon;
Attorneys-general, awful to the sight,
As hinting more (unless our judgments warp us)

Of the 'Star Chamber' than of 'Habeas Corpus.'

LXX

Generals, some all in armour, of the old
And iron time, ere lead had ta'en the
lead;

Others in wigs of Marlborough's martial
fold,

Huger than twelve of our degenerate
breed:

Lordlings, with staves of white or keys of gold;
 Nimrods, whose canvas scarce contain'd the steed;
 And here and there some stern high patriot stood,
 Who could not get the place for which he sued.

LXXI

But ever and anon, to soothe your vision,
 Fatigued with these hereditary glories,
 There rose a Carlo Dolce or a Titian,
 Or wilder group of savage Salvatore's:
 Here danced Albano's boys, and here the sea shone
 In Vernet's ocean lights; and there the stories
 Of martyrs awed, as Spagnoletto tainted
 His brush with all the blood of all the sainted.

LXXII

Here sweetly spread a landscape of Lorraine;
 There Rembrandt made his darkness equal light,
 Or gloomy Caravaggio's gloomier stain
 Bronzed o'er some lean and stoic anchorite:—
 But, lo! a Teniers woos, and not in vain,
 Your eyes to revel in a livelier sight:
 His bell-mouth'd goblet makes me feel quite Danish
 Or Dutch with thirst—What, ho! a flask of Rhenish.

LXXIII

O reader! if that thou canst read,—and know,
 'Tis not enough to spell, or even to read,
 To constitute a reader; there must go
 Virtues of which both you and I have need.
 Firstly, begin with the beginning—(though That clause is hard); and secondly, proceed:
 Thirdly, commence not with the end—or, sinning
 In this sort, end at last with the beginning.

LXXIV

But reader, thou hast patient been of late,
 While I, without remorse of rhyme, or fear,
 Have built and laid out ground at such a rate,
 Dan Phœbus takes me for an auctioneer.
 That poets were so from their earliest date,
 By Homer's 'Catalogue of ships' is clear;
 But a mere modern must be moderate—
 I spare you then the furniture and plate.

LXXV

The mellow autumn came, and with it came
 The promised party, to enjoy its sweets.
 The corn is cut, the manor full of game;
 The pointer ranges, and the sportsman beats
 In russet jacket:—lynx-like is his aim;
 Full grows his bag, and wonderful his feats.
 Ah, nutbrown partridges! Ah, brilliant pheasants!
 And ah, ye poachers!—'Tis no sport for peasants.

LXXVI

An English autumn, though it hath no vines,
 Blushing with Bacchant coronals along
 The paths, o'er which the far festoon entwines
 The red grape in the sunny lands of song,
 Hath yet a purchased choice of choicest wines;
 The claret light, and the Madeira strong;
 If Britain mourn her bleakness, we can tell her,
 The very best of vineyards is the cellar.

LXXVII

Then, if she hath not that serene decline
 Which makes the southern autumn's day appear
 As if 'twould to a second spring resign
 The season, rather than to winter drear,—
 Of in-door comforts still she hath a mine,—
 The sea-coal fires, the 'earliest of the year';
 Without doors, too, she may compete in mellow,
 As what is lost in green is gain'd in yellow.

LXXVIII

And for the effeminate villeggiatura—
 Rife with more horns than hounds—she hath the chase,
 So animated that it might allure a Saint
 From his beads to join the jocund race;
 Even Nimrod's self might leave the plains of Dura,
 And wear the Melton jacket for a space:
 If she hath no wild boars, she hath a tame
 Preserve of bores, who ought to be made game.

LXXIX

The noble guests, assembled at the Abbey,
 Consisted of—we give the sex the pas—
 The Duchess of Fitz-Fulke; the Countess Crabby;
 The Ladies Scilly, Busey;—Miss Eclat,

Miss Bombazeen, Miss Mackstay, Miss O'Tabby,
And Mrs. Rabbi, the rich banker's squaw;
Also the honourable Mrs. Sleep,
Who look'd a white lamb, yet was a black sheep:

LXXX

With other Countesses of Blank—but
rank;
At once the 'lie' and the élite of
crowds;
Who pass like water filter'd in a tank,
All purged and pious from their native
clouds;
Or paper turn'd to money by the Bank:
No matter how or why, the passport shrouds
The passée and the past; for good society
Is no less famed for tolerance than piety,—

LXXXI

That is, up to a certain point; which point
Forms the most difficult in punctua-
tion.
Appearances appear to form the joint
On which it hinges in a higher station;
And so that no explosion cry 'Aroint
Thee, witch!' or each Medea has her Jason;
Or (to the point with Horace and with Pulci)
'Omne tulit punctum, quæ miscuit utile dulci.'

LXXXII

I can't exactly trace their rule of right,
Which hath a little leaning to a lottery.
I've seen a virtuous woman put down
quite
By the mere combination of a coterie;
Also a so-so matron boldly fight
Her way back to the world by dint of plottery,
And shine the very Siria of the spheres,
Escaping with a few slight, scarless sneers.

LXXXIII

I have seen more than I'll say:—but we will see
How our 'villeggiatura' will get on.
The party might consist of thirty-three Of highest caste—the Brahmins of the ton.
I have named a few, not foremost in degree,
But ta'en at hazard as the rhyme may
run,
By way of sprinkling, scatter'd amongst
these
There also were some Irish absentees.

LXXXIV

There was Parolles, too, the legal bully,
Who limits all his battles to the bar
And senate: when invited elsewhere, truly,
He shows more appetite for words than
war.
There was the young bard Rackrhyme, who had newly
Come out and glimmer'd as a six weeks'
star.
There was Lord Pyrrho, too, the great freethinker;
And Sir John Pottledeep, the mighty drinker.

LXXXV

There was the Duke of Dash, who was a—
duke,
'Ay, every inch a' duke; there were twelve peers
Like Charlemagne's—and all such peers in look
And intellect, that neither eyes nor ears
For commoners had ever them mistook.
There were the six Miss Rawbolds—pretty dears!
All song and sentiment; whose hearts were set
Less on a convent than a coronet.

LXXXVI

There were four Honourable Misters,
whose Honour was more before their names than after;
There was the preux Chevalier de la Ruse,
Whom France and Fortune lately
deign'd to waft here,
Whose chiefly harmless talent was to amuse;
But the clubs found it rather serious
laughter,
Because—such was his magic power to
please—
The dice seem'd charm'd, too, with his re-partees.

LXXXVII

There was Dick Dubious, the metaphysi-
cian,
Who loved philosophy and a good
dinner;
Angle, the soi-disant mathematician;
Sir Henry Silvercup, the great race-
winner.
There was the Reverend Rodomont Pre-
cisian,
Who did not hate so much the sin as
sinner;
And Lord Augustus Fitz-Plantagenet,
Good at all things, but better at a bet.

LXXXVIII

There was Jack Jargon, the gigantic guardsman;
And General Fireface, famous in the
field,
A great tactician, and no less a swordsman,
Who ate, last war, more Yankees than he kill'd.
There was the waggish Welsh Judge,
Jefferies Hardsman,
In his grave office so completely skill'd,
That when a culprit came for condemna-
tion,
He had his judge's joke for consolation.

LXXXIX

Good company's a chess-board—there are kings,
Queens, bishops, knights, rooks, pawns;
the world's a game;
Save that the puppets pull at their own
strings,
Methinks gay Punch hath something of the same.
My Muse, the butterfly hath but her wings,
Not stings, and flits through ether without aim,
Alighting rarely:—were she but a hornet, Perhaps there might be vices which would mourn it.

XC

I had forgotten—but must not forget—
An orator, the latest of the session,
Who had deliver'd well a very set Smooth speech, his first and maidenly
transgression
Upon debate: the papers echoed yet
With his début, which made a strong impression,
And rank'd with what is every day dis-
play'd—
'The best first speech that ever yet was made.'

XCI

Proud of his 'Hear hims!' proud, too, of his vote
And lost virginity of oratory,
Proud of his learning (just enough to quote),
He revell'd in his Ciceronian glory:
With memory excellent to get by rote,
With wit to hatch a pun or tell a story,
Graced with some merit, and with more effrontery,
'His country's pride,' he came down to the country.

XCII

There also were two wits by acclamation, Longbow from Ireland, Strongbow
from the Tweed,
Both lawyers and both men of education;
But Strongbow's wit was of more polish'd breed;

Longbow was rich in an imagination
As beautiful and bounding as a steed,
But sometimes stumbling over a potato,— While Strongbow's best things might have come from Cato.

XCIII

Strongbow was like a new-tuned harpsichord;
But Longbow wild as an Æolian harp,
With which the winds of heaven can claim
accord,
And make a music, whether flat or sharp.
Of Strongbow's talk you would not change
a word:
At Longbow's phrases you might sometimes carp:
Both wits—one born so, and the other
bred,
This by his heart—his rival by his head.

XCIV

If all these seem a heterogeneous mass
To be assembled at a country seat,
Yet think, a specimen of every class
Is better than a humdrum tête-à-tête.
The days of Comedy are gone, alas!
When Congreve's fool could vie with Molière's bête:
Society is smooth'd to that excess,
That manners hardly differ more than dress.

XCV

Our ridicules are kept in the back ground—
Ridiculous enough, but also dull;
Professions, too, are no more to be found Professional; and there is nought to cull
Of folly's fruit; for though your fools abound,
They're barren, and not worth the pains to pull.
Society is now one polish'd horde,
Form'd of two mighty tribes, the Bores
and Bored.

XCVI

But from being farmers, we turn gleaners, gleaning
The scanty but right-well thresh'd ears
of truth;
And, gentle reader! when you gather
meaning,
You may be Boaz, and I—modest Ruth.
Further I'd quote, but Scripture intervening Forbids. A great impression in my
youth
Was made by Mrs. Adams, where she cries 'That Scriptures out of church are blas-phemies.'

XCVII

But what we can we glean in this vile age
Of chaff, although our gleanings be not grist.

I must not quite omit the talking sage,
Kit-Cat, the famous Conversationist,
Who, in his common-place book, had a
page

Prepared each morn for evenings.
'List, oh list!'

'Alas, poor ghost!'—What unexpected
woes

Await those who have studied their bons-mots!

XCVIII

Firstly, they must allure the conversation
By many windings to their clever clinch;
And secondly, must let slip no occasion,

Nor bate (abate) their hearers of an inch,
But take an ell—and make a great sensation,
If possible; and thirdly, never flinch

When some smart talker puts them to the test,

But seize the last word, which no doubt's
the best.

XCIX

Lord Henry and his lady were the hosts;
The party we have touch'd on were the guests.

Their table was a board to tempt even ghosts

To pass the Styx for more substantial feasts.

I will not dwell upon ragoûts or roasts,
Albeit all human history attests

That happiness for man—the hungry sinner!—

Since Eve ate apples, much depends on dinner.

C

Witness the lands which 'flow'd with milk and honey,'

Held out unto the hungry Israelites:
To this we have added since, the love of
money,

The only sort of pleasure which requites.
Youth fades, and leaves our days no longer sunny;

We tire of mistresses and parasites;
But oh, ambrosial cash! Ah! who would lose thee?

When we no more can use, or even abuse
thee!

CI

The gentlemen got up betimes to shoot,
Or hunt: the young, because they liked the sport—

The first thing boys like after play and fruit;
The middle-aged, to make the day more
short;

For ennui is a growth of English root, Though nameless in our language:—we retort

The fact for words, and let the French translate

That awful yawn which sleep cannot abate.

CII

The elderly walk'd through the library,
And tumbled books, or criticised the
pictures,

Or saunter'd through the gardens piteously,

And made upon the hot-house several strictures,

Or rode a nag which trotted not too high,
Or on the morning papers read their lectures,

Or on the watch their longing eyes would fix,
Longing at sixty for the hour of six.

CIII

But none were géné: the great hour of union

Was rung by dinner's knell; till then all
were

Masters of their own time—or in communion,

Or solitary, as they chose to bear
The hours, which how to pass is but to few
known.

Each rose up at his own, and had to
spare

What time he chose for dress, and broke his fast

When, where, and how he chose for that repast.

CIV

The ladies—some rouged, some a little
pale—

Met the morn as they might. If fine, they rode,

Or walk'd; if foul, they read, or told a tale, Sung, or rehearsed the last dance from
abroad;

Discuss'd the fashion which might next
prevail,

And settled bonnets by the newest code,
Or cramm'd twelve sheets into one little
letter,

To make each correspondent a new debtor.

CV

For some had absent lovers, all had friends.
The earth has nothing like a she epistle,
And hardly heaven—because it never ends.

I love the mystery of a female missal,
Which, like a creed, ne'er says all it intends,

But full of cunning as Ulysses' whistle,
When he allured poor Dolon:—you had better

Take care what you reply to such a letter.

CVI

Then there were billiards; cards, too, but no dice;—
 Save in the clubs no man of honour
 plays;—
 Boats when 'twas water, skating when
 'twas ice,
 And the hard frost destroy'd the scent-
 ing days:
 And angling, too, that solitary vice,
 Whatever Izaak Walton sings or says:
 The quaint, old, cruel coxcomb, in his gullet
 Should have a hook, and a small trout to pull it.

CVII

With evening came the banquet and the
 wine;
 The conversazione; the duet,
 Attuned by voices more or less divine (My heart or head aches with the memory yet).
 The four Miss Rawbolds in a glee would
 shine;
 But the two youngest loved more to be set Down to the harp—because to music's
 charms
 They added graceful necks, white hands and arms.

CVIII

Sometimes a dance (though rarely on field
 days,
 For then the gentlemen were rather tired)
 Display'd some sylph-like figures in its maze;
 Then there was small-talk ready when
 required;
 Flirtation—but decorous; the mere praise
 Of charms that should or should not be admired.
 The hunters fought their fox-hunt o'er
 again,
 And then retreated soberly—at ten.

CIX

The politicians, in a nook apart, Discuss'd the world, and settled all the spheres;
 The wits watch'd every loophole for their
 art,
 To introduce a bon-mot head and
 ears;
 Small is the rest of those who would be smart,
 A moment's good thing may have cost them years
 Before they find an hour to introduce it;
 And then, even then, some bore may make them lose it.

CX

But all was gentle and aristocratic In this our party; polish'd, smooth, and
 cold,
 As Phidian forms cut out of marble Attic.
 There now are no Squire Westerns as of old;
 And our Sophias are not so emphatic,
 But fair as then, or fairer to behold.
 We have no accomplish'd blackguards,
 like Tom Jones,
 But gentlemen in stays, as stiff as stones.

CXI

They separated at an early hour;
 That is, ere midnight—which is London's noon;
 But in the country ladies seek their bower
 A little earlier than the waning moon.
 Peace to the slumbers of each folded
 flower—
 May the rose call back its true colour
 soon!
 Good hours of fair cheeks are the fairest tinters,
 And lower the price of rouge—at least some winters.

CANTO THE FOURTEENTH

I

If from great nature's or our own abyss
 Of thought we could but snatch a certainty,
 Perhaps mankind might find the path they
 miss—
 But then 'twould spoil much good philosophy.
 One system eats another up, and this Much as old Saturn ate his progeny;
 For when his pious consort gave him stones
 In lieu of sons, of these he made no bones.

II

But System doth reverse the Titan's breakfast,
 And eats her parents, albeit the digestion
 Is difficult. Pray tell me, can you make fast, After due search, your faith to any question?
 Look back o'er ages, ere unto the stake fast
 You bind yourself, and call some mode
 the best one.
 Nothing more true than not to trust your
 senses;
 And yet what are your other evidences?

III

For me, I know nought; nothing I deny, Admit, reject, condemn; and what know
you,
 Except perhaps that you were born to die?
 And both may after all turn out untrue.

An age may come, Font of Eternity,
When nothing shall be either old or new.
Death, so call'd, is a thing which makes men weep,
And yet a third of life is pass'd in sleep.

IV

A sleep without dreams, after a rough day
Of toil, is what we covet most; and yet
How clay shrinks back from more quiescent
clay!

The very Suicide that pays his debt
At once without instalments (an old way
Of paying debts, which creditors regret),
Lets out impatiently his rushing breath, Less from disgust of life than dread of
death.

V

'Tis round him, near him, here, there,
everywhere,
And there's a courage which grows out
of fear,

Perhaps of all most desperate, which will dare

The worst to know it:—when the mountains rear
Their peaks beneath your human foot, and
there

You look down o'er the precipice, and drear

The gulf of rock yawns,—you can't gaze a minute,
Without an awful wish to plunge within it.

VI

'Tis true, you don't—but, pale and struck with terror,

Retire: but look into your past impression!

And you will find, though shuddering at the mirror

Of your own thoughts, in all their self-confession,

The lurking bias, be it truth or error,
To the unknown; a secret prepossession,

To plunge with all your fears—but where?
You know not,

And that's the reason why you do—or do not.

VII

But what's this to the purpose? you will say.
Gent. reader, nothing; a mere specula-
tion,

For which my sole excuse is—'tis my way;
Sometimes with and sometimes without
occasion,

I write what's uppermost, without delay;
This narrative is not meant for narra-
tion,

But a mere airy and fantastic basis,
To build up common things with common places.

VIII

You know, or don't know, that great Bacon saith,
'Fling up a straw, 'twill show the way
the wind blows;'

And such a straw, borne on by human
breath,

Is poesy, according as the mind glows;
A paper kite which flies 'twixt life and
death,

A shadow which the onward soul behind throws:

And mine's a bubble, not blown up for
praise,

But just to play with, as an infant plays.

IX

The world is all before me—or behind;
For I have seen a portion of that same,
And quite enough for me to keep in
mind;—

Of passions, too, I have proved enough to blame,

To the great pleasure of our friends, man-
kind,

Who like to mix some slight alloy with
fame;

For I was rather famous in my time,
Until I fairly knock'd it up with rhyme.

X

I have brought this world about my ears,
and eke

The other; that's to say, the clergy—
who

Upon my head have bid their thunders
break

In pious libels by no means a few.
And yet I can't help scribbling once a week,

Tiring old readers, nor discovering new.
In youth I wrote because my mind was full,

And now because I feel it growing dull.

XI

But 'why then publish?'—There are no
rewards,

Of fame or profit when the world grows weary.

I ask in turn,—Why do you play at cards?
Why drink? Why read?—To make some hour less dreary.

It occupies me to turn back regards
On what I've seen or ponder'd, sad or cheery;

And what I write I cast upon the stream,
To swim or sink—I have had at least my dream.

XII

I think that were I certain of success,
I hardly could compose another line:

So long I've battled either more or less,
That no defeat can drive me from the Nine.

This feeling 'tis not easy to express,
 And yet 'tis not affected, I opine.
 In play, there are two pleasures for your choosing—
 The one is winning, and the other losing.

XIII

Besides, my Muse by no means deals in fiction:
 She gathers a repertory of facts,
 Of course with some reserve and slight
 restriction,
 But mostly sings of human things and
 acts—
 And that's one cause she meets with contradiction;
 For too much truth, at first sight, ne'er attracts;
 And were her object only what's call'd
 glory,
 With more ease too she'd tell a different story.

XIV

Love, war, a tempest—surely there's variety:
 Also a seasoning slight of lucubration;
 A bird's-eye-view, too, of that wild,
 Society;
 A slight glance thrown on men of every
 station.
 If you have nought else, here's at least satiety,
 Both in performance and in prepara-
 tion;
 And though these lines should only line
 portmanteaus,
 Trade will be all the better for these Cantos.

XV

The portion of this world which I at
 present
 Have taken up to fill the following sermon,
 Is one of which there's no description recent:
 The reason why, is easy to determine:
 Although it seems both prominent and
 pleasant,
 There is a sameness in its gems and ermine,
 A dull and family likeness through all
 ages,
 Of no great promise for poetic pages.

XVI

With much to excite, there's little to exalt;
 Nothing that speaks to all men and all
 times;
 A sort of varnish over every fault;
 A kind of common-place, even in their
 crimes;

Factitious passions, wit without much salt,
 A want of that true nature which sublimes Whate'er it shows with truth; a smooth monotony
 Of character, in those at least who have got any.

XVII

Sometimes, indeed, like soldiers off parade,
 They break their ranks and gladly leave
 the drill;
 But then the roll-call draws them back afraid,
 And they must be or seem what they were: still
 Doubtless it is a brilliant masquerade:
 But when of the first sight you have had your fill,
 It palls—at least it did so upon me,
 This paradise of pleasure and ennui.

XVIII

When we have made our love, and gamed
 our gaming,
 Drest, voted, shone, and, may be, something more;
 With dandies dined; heard senators de-claiming;
 Seen beauties brought to market by the score,
 Sad rakes to sadder husbands chastely taming;
 There's little left but to be bored or
 bore.
 Witness those ci-devant jeunes hommes
 who stem
 The stream, nor leave the world which leaveth them.

XIX

'Tis said—indeed a general complaint—
 That no one has succeeded in describing
 The monde, exactly as they ought to paint:
 Some say, that authors only snatch, by bribing
 The porter, some slight scandals strange and quaint,
 To furnish matter for their moral gibing;
 And that their books have but one style in common—
 My lady's prattle, filter'd through her woman.

XX

But this can't well be true, just now; for writers
 Are grown of the beau monde a part potential:
 I've seen them balance even the scale with
 fighters,
 Especially when young, for that's essential.

Why do their sketches fail them as inditers
Of what they deem themselves most consequential,
The real portrait of the highest tribe?
'Tis that, in fact, there's little to describe.

XXI

'Haud ignara loquor;' these are Nugæ,
'quarum
Pars parva fui,' but still art and part.
Now I could much more easily sketch a
harem,
A battle, wreck, or history of the heart,
Than these things; and besides, I wish to spare 'em,
For reasons which I choose to keep
apart.
'Vetabo Cereris sacrum qui vulgarit'—
Which means, that vulgar people must not share it.

XXII

And therefore what I throw off is ideal—Lower'd, leaven'd, like a history of freemasons
Which bears the same relation to the real,
As Captain Parry's voyage may do to Jason's.
The grand arcanum's not for men to see
all;
My music has some mystic diapasons;
And there is much which could not be appreciated
In any manner by the uninitiated.

XXIII

Alas! worlds fall—and woman, since she fell'd
The world (as, since that history, less polite
Than true, hath been a creed so strictly held),
Has not yet given up the practice quite.
Poor thing of usages! coerced, compell'd, Victim when wrong, and martyr oft when right,
Condemn'd to child-bed, as men for their sins
Have shaving too entail'd upon their chins,—

XXIV

A daily plague, which in the aggregate
May average on the whole with parturi-
tion.
But as to women, who can penetrate
The real sufferings of their she condition?
Man's very sympathy with their estate
Has much of selfishness, and more suspicion.
Their love, their virtue, beauty, education,
But form good housekeepers, to breed a nation.

XXV

All this were very well, and can't be better;
But even this is difficult, Heaven knows,
So many troubles from her birth beset her,
Such small distinction between friends
and foes,
The gilding wears so soon from off her
fetter,
That—but ask any woman if she'd
choose (Take her at thirty, that is) to have been Female or male? a schoolboy or a queen?

XXVI

'Petticoat influence' is a great reproach,
Which even those who obey would fain be thought
To fly from, as from hungry pikes a roach;
But since beneath it upon earth we are
brought,
By various joltings of life's hackney coach,
I for one venerate a petticoat—
A garment of a mystical sublimity,
No matter whether russet, silk, or dimity.

XXVII

Much I respect, and much I have adored,
In my young days, that chaste and goodly veil,
Which holds a treasure, like a miser's
hoard,
And more attracts by all it doth conceal—
A golden scabbard on a Damasque sword,
A loving letter with a mystic seal,
A cure for grief—for what can ever rankle
Before a petticoat and peeping ankle?

XXVIII

And when upon a silent, sullen day,
With a sirocco, for example, blowing,
When even the sea looks dim with all its
spray,
And sulkily the river's ripple's flowing,
And the sky shows that very ancient gray,
The sober, sad antithesis to glowing,—
'Tis pleasant, if then anything is pleasant,
To catch a glimpse even of a pretty peasant.

XXIX

We left our heroes and our heroines
In that fair clime which don't depend on climate,
Quite independent of the Zodiac's signs, Though certainly more difficult to rhyme at,
Because the sun, and stars, and aught that
shines,
Mountains, and all we can be most sublime at,
Are there oft dull and dreary as a dun—
Whether a sky's or tradesman's is all one.

XXX

An in-door life is less poetical;
 And out-of-door hath showers, and mists, and sleet,
 With which I could not brew a pastoral.
 But be it as it may, a bard must meet
 All difficulties, whether great or small,
 To spoil his undertaking, or complete,
 And work away like spirit upon matter, Embarrass'd somewhat both with fire and water.

XXXI

Juan—in this respect, at least, like saints—
 Was all things unto people of all sorts,
 And lived contentedly, without complaints,
 In camps, in ships, in cottages, or courts—
 Born with that happy soul which seldom
 faints,
 And mingling modestly in toils or sports.
 He likewise could be most things to all
 women,
 Without the coxcombry of certain she
 men.

XXXII

A fox-hunt to a foreigner is strange;
 'Tis also subject to the double danger
 Of tumbling first, and having in exchange
 Some pleasant jesting at the awkward
 stranger;
 But Juan had been early taught to range
 The wilds, as doth an Arab turn'd avenger,
 So that his horse, or charger, hunter, hack,
 Knew that he had a rider on his back.

XXXIII

And now in this new field, with some applause,
 He clear'd hedge, ditch, and double post, and rail,
 And never craned, and made but few 'faux pas,'
 And only fretted when the scent 'gan
 fail.
 He broke, 'tis true, some statutes of the
 laws
 Of hunting—for the sagest youth is
 frail;
 Rode o'er the hounds, it may be, now and
 then,
 And once o'er several country gentlemen.

XXXIV

But on the whole, to general admiration
 He acquitted both himself and horse:
 the squires
 Marvell'd at merit of another nation;
 The boors cried 'Dang it! who'd have thought it?'—Sires,

The Nestors of the sporting generation, Swore praises, and recall'd their former
 fires;
 The huntsman's self relented to a grin,
 And rated him almost a whipper-in.

XXXV

Such were his trophies—not of spear and
 shield,
 But leaps, and bursts, and sometimes foxes' brushes;
 Yet I must own,—although in this I yield
 To patriot sympathy a Briton's blushes,—
 He thought at heart like courtly Chester-
 field,
 Who, after a long chase o'er hills, dales,
 bushes,
 And what not, though he rode beyond all
 price,
 Ask'd next day, 'If men ever hunted twice?'

XXXVI

He also had a quality uncommon
 To early risers after a long chase,
 Who wake in winter ere the cock can summon
 December's drowsy day to his dull
 race,—
 A quality agreeable to woman,
 When her soft, liquid words run on
 apace,
 Who likes a listener, whether saint or sinner,—
 He did not fall asleep just after dinner;

XXXVII

But, light and airy, stood on the alert,
 And shone in the best part of dialogue,
 By humouring always what they might assert,
 And listening to the topics most in vogue,—
 Now grave, now gay, but never dull or pert;
 And smiling but in secret—cunning rogue!—
 He ne'er presumed to make an error clearer;—
 In short, there never was a better hearer.

XXXVIII

And then he danced,—all foreigners excel
 The serious Angles in the eloquence Of pantomime,—he danced, I say, right
 well,
 With emphasis, and also with good
 sense—
 A thing in footing indispensable;
 He danced without theatrical pretence,
 Not like a ballet-master in the van
 Of his drill'd nymphs, but like a gentleman.

XXXIX

Chaste were his steps, each kept within due bound,
And elegance was sprinkled o'er his
figure;
Like swift Camilla, he scarce skimm'd the
ground,
And rather held in than put forth his
vigour;
And then he had an ear for music's sound,
Which might defy a crotchet critic's
rigour.
Such classic pas—sans flaws—set off our
hero,
He glanced like a personified Bolero;

XL

Or, like a flying Hour before Aurora,
In Guido's famous fresco, which alone
Is worth a tour to Rome, although no more a Remnant were there of the old world's sole throne.
The 'tout ensemble' of his movements were a
Grace of the soft ideal, seldom shown,
And ne'er to be described; for to the dolour
Of bards and prozers, words are void of colour.

XLI

No marvel then he was a favourite;
A full-grown Cupid, very much admired;
A little spoilt, but by no means so quite;
At least he kept his vanity retired.
Such was his tact, he could alike delight
The chaste, and those who are not so much inspired.
The Duchess of Fitz-Fulke, who loved tracasserie,
Began to treat him with some small agacerie.

XLII

She was a fine and somewhat full-blown blonde,
Desirable, distinguish'd, celebrated
For several winters in the grand, grand monde.
I'd rather not say what might be related
Of her exploits, for this were ticklish
ground;
Besides there might be falsehood in
what's stated;
Her late performance had been a dead set
At Lord Augustus Fitz-Plantagenet.

XLIII

This noble personage began to look
A little black upon this new flirtation;
But such small licences must lovers brook,
Mere freedoms of the female corporation.

Woe to the man who ventures a rebuke!
'Twill but precipitate a situation
Extremely disagreeable, but common
To calculators when they count on woman.

XLIV

The circle smiled, then whisper'd, and then sneer'd;
The misses bridled, and the matrons
frown'd;
Some hoped things might not turn out as they fear'd;
Some would not deem such women
could be found;
Some ne'er believed one half of what they
heard;
Some look'd perplex'd, and others look'd profound;
And several pitied with sincere regret Poor Lord Augustus Fitz-Plantagenet.

XLV

But what is odd, none ever named the duke,
Who, one might think, was something in the affair:
True, he was absent, and, 'twas rumour'd,
took
But small concern about the when, or
where,
Or what his consort did: if he could brook
Her gaities, none had a right to stare:
Theirs was that best of unions, past all
doubt,
Which never meets, and therefore can't fall
out.

XLVI

But, oh! that I should ever pen so sad a line!
Fired with an abstract love of virtue, she,
My Dian of the Ephesians, Lady Adeline,
Began to think the duchess' conduct free;
Regretting much that she had chosen so bad a line,
And waxing chiller in her courtesy, Look'd grave and pale to see her friend's fragility,
For which most friends reserve their sensibility.

XLVII

There's nought in this bad world like sympathy;
'Tis so becoming to the soul and face,
Sets to soft music the harmonious sigh,
And robes sweet friendship in a Brussels lace.
Without a friend, what were humanity,
To hunt our errors up with a good grace?
Consoling us with—'Would you had thought twice!
Ah! if you had but follow'd my advice!'

XLVIII

O Job! you had two friends: one's quite enough,
 Especially when we are ill at ease;
 They're but bad pilots when the weather's rough,
 Doctors less famous for their cures than fees.
 Let no man grumble when his friends fall off,
 As they will do like leaves at the first breeze:
 When your affairs come round, one way or t'other,
 Go to the coffee-house, and take another.

XLIX

But this is not my maxim: had it been,
 Some heart-aches had been spared me:
 yet I care not—
 I would not be a tortoise in his screen
 Of stubborn shell, which waves and weather wear not;
 'Tis better on the whole to have felt and seen
 That which humanity may bear, or bear not;
 'Twill teach discernment to the sensitive,
 And not to pour their ocean in a sieve.

Of all the horrid, hideous notes of woe,
 Sadder than owl-songs or the midnight blast,
 Is that portentous phrase, 'I told you so,'
 Utter'd by friends, those prophets of the past,
 Who, 'stead of saying what you now should do,
 Own they foresaw that you would fall at last,
 And solace your slight lapse 'gainst bonos mores,
 With a long memorandum of old stories.

LI

The Lady Adeline's serene severity
 Was not confined to feeling for her friend,
 Whose fame she rather doubted with posterity,
 Unless her habits should begin to mend:
 But Juan also shared in her austerity,
 But mix'd with pity, pure as e'er was penn'd:
 His inexperience moved her gentle ruth,
 And (as her junior by six weeks) his youth.

LII

These forty days' advantage of her years—
 And hers were those which can face calculation,
 Boldly referring to the list of peers
 And noble births, nor dread the enumeration—

Gave her a right to have maternal fears
 For a young gentleman's fit education;
 Though she was far from that leap year,
 whose leap,
 In female dates, strikes Time all of a heap.

LIII

This may be fix'd at somewhere before thirty—
 Say seven-and-twenty; for I never knew
 The strictest in chronology and virtue Advance beyond, while they could pass for new.
 O Time! why dost not pause? Thy scythe, so dirty
 With rust, should surely cease to hack and hew.
 Reset it: shave more smoothly, also slower,
 If but to keep thy credit as a mower.

LIV

But Adeline was far from that ripe age,
 Whose ripeness is but bitter at the best:
 'Twas rather her experience made her sage,
 For she had seen the world and stood its test,
 As I have said in—I forget what page;
 My Muse despises reference, as you have guess'd
 By this time;—but strike six from seven-and-twenty,
 And you will find her sum of years in plenty.

LV

At sixteen she came out; presented,
 vaunted,
 She put all coronets into commotion:
 At seventeen, too, the world was still enchanted
 With the new Venus of their brilliant ocean:
 At eighteen, though below her feet still panted
 A hecatomb of suitors with devotion,
 She had consented to create again
 That Adam, call'd 'the happiest of men.'

LVI

Since then she had sparkled through three glowing winters,
 Admired, adored; but also so correct,
 That she had puzzled all the acutest hinters,
 Without the apparel of being circum-spect:
 They could not even glean the slightest splinters
 From off the marble, which had no defect.
 She had also snatch'd a moment since her marriage
 To bear a son and heir—and one miscarriage.

LVII

Fondly the wheeling fire-flies flew around
her,
Those little glitterers of the London night;
But none of these possess'd a sting to wound her—

She was a pitch beyond a coxcomb's
flight.

Perhaps she wish'd an aspirant pro-founder;

But whatsoe'er she wish'd, she acted right;
And whether coldness, pride, or virtue, dignify

A woman, so she's good, what does it signify?

LVIII

I hate a motive, like a lingering bottle
Which with the landlord makes too long a stand,

Leaving all claretless the unmoisten'd
throttle,

Especially with politics on hand;
I hate it, as I hate a drove of cattle,

Who whirl the dust as simooms whirl
the sand;

I hate it, as I hate an argument,
A laureate's ode, or servile peer's 'content.'

LIX

'Tis sad to hack into the roots of things,
They are so much intertwined with the
earth;

So that the branch a goodly verdure flings,
I reckon not if an acorn gave it birth.

To trace all actions to their secret springs
Would make indeed some melancholy
mirth;

But this is not at present my concern,
And I refer you to wise Oxenstiern.

LX

With the kind view of saving an éclat,
Both to the duchess and diplomatist,
The Lady Adeline, as soon's she saw

That Juan was unlikely to resist—
(For foreigners don't know that a faux pas

In England ranks quite on a different list
From those of other lands unblest with juries,

Whose verdict for such sin a certain cure
is;—)

LXI

The Lady Adeline resolved to take Such measures as she thought might best impede

The further progress of this sad mistake.
She thought with some simplicity indeed;

But innocence is bold even at the stake,
And simple in the world, and doth not
need

Nor use those palisades by dames erected,
Whose virtue lies in never being detected.

LXII

It was not that she fear'd the very worst:
His Grace was an enduring, married
man,

And was not likely all at once to burst
Into a scene, and swell the clients' clamour
Of Doctors' Commons: but she dreaded
first

The magic of her Grace's talisman,
And next a quarrel (as he seem'd to fret)
With Lord Augustus Fitz-Plantagenet.

LXIII

Her Grace, too, pass'd for being an intrigante,

And somewhat méchante in her amorous sphere:

One of those pretty, precious plagues, which haunt

A lover with caprices soft and dear,
That like to make a quarrel, when they can't Find one, each day of the delightful year; Bewitching, torturing, as they freeze or

glow,

And—what is worst of all—won't let you
go;

LXIV

The sort of thing to turn a young man's
head,

Or make a Werter of him in the end.
No wonder then a purer soul should dread

This sort of chaste liaison for a friend;
It were much better to be wed or dead,

Than wear a heart a woman loves to rend.

'Tis best to pause, and think, ere you rush
on,

If that a 'bonne fortune' be really 'bonne.'

LXV

And first, in the o'erflowing of her heart,
Which really knew or thought it knew

no guile,
She call'd her husband now and then apart,

And bade him counsel Juan. With a
smile

Lord Henry heard her plans of artless art
To wean Don Juan from the siren's wile;

And answer'd, like a statesman or a prophet,

In such guise that she could make nothing
of it.

LXVI

Firstly, he said, 'he never interfered
In anybody's business but the king's':

Next, that 'he never judged from what
appear'd,

Without strong reason, of those sort of
things':

Thirdly, that 'Juan had more brain than
beard,

And was not to be held in leading-
strings';

And fourthly, what need hardly be said
twice,
'That good but rarely came from good advice.'

LXVII

And, therefore, doubtless to approve the
truth

Of the last axiom, he advised his spouse
To leave the parties to themselves, for-
sooth—

At least as far as bienséance allows:
That time would temper Juan's faults of
youth;

That young men rarely made monastic
vows;

That opposition more attaches—
But here a messenger brought in despatches:

LXVIII

And being of the council call'd 'the Privy,'
Lord Henry walk'd into his cabinet,
To furnish matter for some future Livy
To tell how he reduced the nation's
debt;

And if their full contents I do not give ye,
It is because I do not know them yet;
But I shall add them in a brief appendix,
To come between mine epic and its index.

LXX

But ere he went, he added a slight hint,
Another gentle common-place or two,
Such as are coin'd in conversation's mint,
And pass, for want of better, though not new:

Then broke his packet, to see what was
in't,

And having casually glanced it through,
Retired: and, as he went out, calmly kiss'd
her,

Less like a young wife than an aged sister.

LXX

He was a cold, good, honourable man, Proud of his birth, and proud of every-
thing;

A goodly spirit for a state divan,
A figure fit to walk before a king;

Tall, stately, form'd to lead the courtly van On birthdays, glorious with a star and string;

The very model of a chamberlain—
And such I mean to make him when I
reign.

LXXI

But there was something wanting on the whole—

I don't know what, and therefore cannot tell—

Which pretty women—the sweet souls!—
call soul.

Certes it was not body; he was well

Proportion'd, as a poplar or a pole,
A handsome man, that human miracle;
And in each circumstance of love or war
Had still preserved his perpendicular.

LXXII

Still there was something wanting, as I've
said—

That undefinable 'Je ne sais quoi,' Which, for what I know, may of yore have led

To Homer's Iliad, since it drew to Troy
The Greek Eve, Helen, from the Spartan's
bed;

Though on the whole, no doubt, the Dardan boy

Was much inferior to King Menelaüs:—
But thus it is some women will betray us.

LXXIII

There is an awkward thing which much perplexes,

Unless like wise Tiresias we had proved
By turns the difference of the several sexes; Neither can show quite how they would be loved.

The sensual for a short time but connects
us—

The sentimental boasts to be unmoved;
But both together form a kind of centaur,
Upon whose back 'tis better not to venture.

LXXIV

A something all-sufficient for the heart

Is that for which the sex are always seeking:
But how to fill up that same vacant part?

There lies the rub—and this they are but weak in.

Frail mariners afloat without a chart,
They run before the wind through high seas breaking;

And when they have made the shore
through every shock,

'Tis odd, or odds, it may turn out a rock.

LXXV

There is a flower call'd 'Love in Idleness,'
For which see Shakespeare's ever-blooming garden;—

I will not make his great description less,
And beg his British godship's humble
pardon,

If, in my extremity of rhyme's distress,
I touch a single leaf where he is warden;—

But though the flower is different, with the French

Or Swiss Rousseau, cry 'Voilà la Pervenche!'

LXXVI

Eureka! I have found it! What I mean

To say is, not that love is idleness,
But that in love such idleness has been

An accessory, as I have cause to guess.

Hard labour's an indifferent go-between;
Your men of business are not apt to express
Much passion, since the merchant-ship,
the Argo,
Convey'd Medea as her supercargo.

LXXVII

'Beatus ille procul!' from 'negotiis,' Saith Horace: the great little poet's
wrong;
His other maxim, 'Noscitur à sociis,'
Is much more to the purpose of his song;
Though even that were sometimes too ferocious,
Unless good company be kept too long;
But, in his teeth, whate'er their state or
station,
Thrice happy they who have an occupation!

LXXVIII

Adam exchanged his Paradise for plough-
ing,
Eve made up millinery with fig leaves—
The earliest knowledge from the tree so
knowing,
As far as I know, that the church receives:
And since that time it need not cost much
showing,
That many of the ills o'er which man
grieves,
And still more women, spring from not employing
Some hours to make the remnant worth enjoying.

LXXIX

And hence high life is oft a dreary void,
A rack of pleasures, where we must invent
A something wherewithal to be annoy'd.
Bards may sing what they please about Content;
Contented, when translated, means but cloy'd;
And hence arise the woes of sentiment,
Blue-devils, and blue-stockings, and romances
Reduced to practice, and perform'd like dances.

LXXX

I do declare, upon an affidavit, Romances I ne'er read like those I have
seen;
Nor, if unto the world I ever gave it,
Would some believe that such a tale had
been:
But such intent I never had, nor have it;
Some truths are better kept behind a
screen,
Especially when they would look like lies;
I therefore deal in generalities.

LXXXI

'An oyster may be cross'd in love,'—and
why?
Because he mopeth idly in his shell,
And heaves a lonely subterraqueous sigh
Much as a monk may do within his cell
And à-propos of monks, their piety
With sloth hath found it difficult to
dwell;
Those vegetables of the Catholic creed
Are apt exceedingly to run to seed.

LXXXII

O Wilberforce! thou man of black renown Whose merit none enough can sing or
say,
Thou hast struck one immense Colossus
down,
Thou moral Washington of Africa!
But there's another little thing, I own,
Which you should perpetrate some summer's day,
And set the other half of earth to rights;
You have freed the blacks—now pray shut up the whites.

LXXXIII

Shut up the bald-coot bully Alexander!
Ship off the Holy Three to Senegal; Teach them that 'sauce for goose is sauce for gander,'
And ask them how they like to be in thrall?
Shut up each high heroic salamander,
Who eats fire gratis (since the pay's be-small);
Shut up—no, not the King, but the Pavilion
Or else 'twill cost us all another million.

LXXXIV

Shut up the world at large, let Bedlam out
And you will be perhaps surprised to find
All things pursue exactly the same rout
As now with those of soi-disant sound
mind.
This I could prove beyond a single doubt
Were there a jot of sense among man-
kind;
But till that point d'appui is found, alas!
Like Archimedes, I leave earth as 'twas.

LXXXV

Our gentle Adeline had one defect—
Her heart was vacant, though a splendid mansion;
Her conduct had been perfectly correct,
As she had seen nought claiming its expansion.
A wavering spirit may be easier wreck'd Because 'tis frailer, doubtless, than stanch one;
But when the latter works its own undoing
Its inner crash is like an earthquake's ruin.

LXXXVI

She loved her lord, or thought so; but that
 love
 Cost her an effort, which is a sad toil,
 The stone of Sysiphus, if once we move
 Our feelings 'gainst the nature of the soil.
 She had nothing to complain of, or re-
 prove,
 No bickerings, no connubial turmoil:
 Their union was a model to behold,
 Serene and noble,—conjugal, but cold.

LXXXVII

There was no great disparity of years, Though much in temper; but they never clash'd:
 They moved like stars united in their
 spheres,
 Or like the Rhone by Leman's waters
 wash'd,
 Where mingled, and yet separate appears
 The river from the lake, all blueely dash'd
 Through the serene and placid glassy
 deep,
 Which fain would lull its river-child to sleep.

LXXXVIII

Now when she once had ta'en an interest
 In anything, however she might flatter Herself that her intentions were the best,
 Intense intentions are a dangerous
 matter:
 Impressions were much stronger than she
 guess'd,
 And gather'd as they run like growing
 water
 Upon her mind: the more so, as her breast
 Was not at first too readily impress'd.

LXXXIX

But when it was, she had that lurking demon
 Of double nature, and thus doubly named—Firmness yclept in heroes, kings, and sea-
 men,
 That is, when they succeed; but greatly blamed
 As obstinacy, both in men and women, Whene'er their triumph pales, or star is tamed:—
 And 'twill perplex the casuist in morality
 To fix the due bounds of this dangerous quality.

XC

Had Buonaparte won at Waterloo,
 It had been firmness; now 'tis pertinacity:
 Must the event decide between the two?
 I leave it to your people of sagacity

To draw the line between the false and
 true,
 If such can e'er be drawn by man's capacity:
 My business is with Lady Adeline,
 Who in her way too was a heroine.

XCI

She knew not her own heart; then how
 should I?
 I think not she was then in love with Juan:
 If so, she would have had the strength to fly
 The wild sensation, unto her a new one:
 She merely felt a common sympathy
 (I will not say it was a false or true one)
 In him, because she thought he was in danger,—
 Her husband's friend, her own, young,
 and a stranger.

XCII

She was, or thought she was, his friend—
 and this Without the farce of friendship, or romance
 Of platonism, which leads so oft amiss Ladies who have studied friendship but in France,
 Or Germany, where people purely kiss.
 To thus much Adeline would not advance;
 But of such friendship as man's may to man be
 She was as capable as woman can be.

XCIII

No doubt the secret influence of the sex
 Will there, as also in the ties of blood,
 An innocent predominance annex,
 And tune the concord to a finer mood.
 If free from passion, which all friendship
 checks,
 And your true feelings fully understood,
 No friend like to a woman earth discovers,
 So that you have not been nor will be lovers.

XCIV

Love bears within its breast the very germ
 Of change; and how should this be otherwise?
 That violent things more quickly find a term
 Is shown through nature's whole analogies;
 And how should the most fierce of all be
 firm?
 Would you have endless lightning in the
 skies?
 Methinks Love's very title says enough:
 How should 'the tender passion' e'er be tough?

XCV

Alas! by all experience, seldom yet (I merely quote what I have heard from many)
 Had lovers not some reason to regret
 The passion which made Solomon a zany.
 I've also seen some wives (not to forget
 The marriage state, the best or worst of any)
 Who were the very paragons of wives,
 Yet made the misery of at least two lives.

XCVI

I've also seen some female friends ('tis odd,
 But true—as, if expedient, I could prove)
 That faithful were through thick and thin,
 abroad,
 At home, far more than ever yet was
 Love—
 Who did not quit me when Oppression trod
 Upon me; whom no scandal could re-
 move;
 Who fought, and fight, in absence, too,
 my battles,
 Despite the snake Society's loud rattles.

XCVII

Whether Don Juan and chaste Adeline
 Grew friends in this or any other sense,
 Will be discuss'd hereafter, I opine:
 At present I am glad of a pretence
 To leave them hovering, as the effect is fine,
 And keeps the atrocious reader in suspense:
 The surest way for ladies and for books
 To bait their tender or their tenter hooks.

XCVIII

Whether they rode, or walk'd, or studied
 Spanish,
 To read Don Quixote in the original,
 A pleasure before which all others vanish;
 Whether their talk was of the kind call'd
 'small,'
 Or serious, are the topics I must banish
 To the next Canto; where perhaps I shall Say something to the purpose, and display
 Considerable talent in my way.

XCIX

Above all, I beg all men to forbear
 Anticipating aught about the matter:
 They'll only make mistakes about the fair,
 And Juan too, especially the latter.
 And I shall take a much more serious air
 Than I have yet done, in this epic satire.
 It is not clear that Adeline and Juan
 Will fall; but if they do, 'twill be their ruin.

But great things spring from little:—
 Would you think,
 That in our youth, as dangerous a passion

As e'er brought man and woman to the brink
 Of ruin, rose from such a slight occasion,
 As few would ever dream could form the link
 Of such a sentimental situation?
 You'll never guess, I'll bet you millions,
 millions—
 It all sprung from a harmless game at billiards.

CI

'Tis strange,—but true; for truth is always
 strange;
 Stranger than fiction: if it could be told,
 How much would novels gain by the exchange!
 How differently the world would men-
 behold!
 How oft would vice and virtue places change!
 The new world would be nothing to the
 old,
 If some Columbus of the moral seas Would show mankind their souls' antipodes.

CII

What 'antres vast and deserts idle' then
 Would be discover'd in the human soul!
 What icebergs in the hearts of mighty men,
 With self-love in the centre as their pole!
 What Anthropophagi are nine or ten
 Of those who hold the kingdoms in control!
 Were things but only call'd by their right
 name,
 Cæsar himself would be ashamed of fame.

CANTO THE FIFTEENTH

I

AH!—What should follow slips from my reflection;
 Whatever follows ne'ertheless may be
 As à-propos of hope or retrospection,
 As though the lurking thought had follow'd free.
 All present life is but an interjection,
 An 'Oh!' or 'Ah!' of joy or misery,
 Or a 'Ha! ha!' or 'Bah!'—a yawn, or 'Pooh!'
 Of which perhaps the latter is most true.

II

But, more or less, the whole's a syncope;
 Or a singultus—emblems of emotion,
 That grand antithesis to great ennui, Wherewith we break our bubbles on the
 ocean,
 That watery outline of eternity,
 Or miniature at least, as is my notion,
 Which ministers unto the soul's delight,
 In seeing matters which are out of sight.

III

But all are better than the sigh suppress,
 Corroding in the cavern of the heart,
 Making the countenance a masque of rest,
 And turning human nature to an art.
 Few men dare show their thoughts of worst or best;
 Dissimulation always sets apart
 A corner for herself; and therefore fiction
 Is that which passes with least contradiction.

IV

Ah! who can tell? Or rather, who cannot Remember, without telling, passion's
 errors?
 The drainer of oblivion, even the sot,
 Hath got blue devils for his morning
 mirrors:
 What though on Lethe's stream he seem to float,
 He cannot sink his tremours or his terrors;
 The ruby glass that shakes within his hand
 Leaves a sad sediment of Time's worst sand.

V

And as for love—O love!—We will proceed.
 The Lady Adeline Amundeville,
 A pretty name as one would wish to read,
 Must perch harmonious on my tuneful quill.
 There's music in the sighing of a reed;
 There's music in the gushing of a rill;
 There's music in all things, if men had
 ears:
 Their earth is but an echo of the spheres.

VI

The Lady Adeline, right honourable,
 And honour'd, ran a risk of growing less
 so;
 For few of the soft sex are very stable
 In their resolves—alas! that I should say so;
 They differ as wine differs from its label,
 When once decanted;—I presume to guess so,
 But will not swear: yet both upon occasion,
 Till old, may undergo adulteration.

VII

But Adeline was of the purest vintage,
 The unmingled essence of the grape;
 and yet
 Bright as a new napoleon from its mintage,
 Or glorious as a diamond richly set;
 A page where Time should hesitate to print age,
 And for which Nature might forego her debt—
 Sole creditor whose process doth involve
 in't
 The luck of finding everybody solvent.

VIII

O Death! thou dunnest of all duns! thou
 daily Knockest at doors, at first with modest tap,
 Like a meek tradesman when, approaching palely,
 Some splendid debtor he would take by
 sap:
 But oft denied, as patience 'gins to fail, he Advances with exasperated rap,
 And (if let in) insists, in terms unhandsome,
 On ready money, or 'a draft on Ransom.

IX

Whate'er thou takest, spare awhile poor
 Beauty!
 She is so rare, and thou hast so much
 prey.
 What though she now and then may slip from duty,
 The more's the reason why you ought to
 stay;
 Gaunt Gourmand! with whole nations for your booty,
 You should be civil in a modest way:
 Suppress, then, some slight feminine diseases,
 And take as many heroes as Heaven pleases.

X

Fair Adeline, the more ingenuous
 Where she was interested (as was said),
 Because she was not apt, like some of us,
 To like too readily, or too high bred
 To show it—(points we need not now discuss)—
 Would give up artlessly both heart and
 head
 Unto such feelings as seem'd innocent,
 For objects worthy of the sentiment.

XI

Some parts of Juan's history, which Rumour,
 That live gazette, had scatter'd to dis-
 figure,
 She had heard; but women hear with more good humour
 Such aberrations than we men of rigour:
 Besides, his conduct, since in England, grew more Strict, and his mind assumed a manlier
 vigour;
 Because he had, like Alcibiades,
 The art of living in all climes with ease.

XII

His manner was perhaps the more seduc-tive, Because he ne'er seem'd anxious to seduce;
 Nothing affected, studied, or constructive
 Of coxcomby or conquest: no abuse

Of his attractions marr'd the fair perspective,
 To indicate a Cupidon broke loose,
 And seem to say, 'Resist us if you can'—
 Which makes a dandy while it spoils a man.

XIII

They are wrong—that's not the way to set about it;
 As, if they told the truth, could well be shown.
 But, right or wrong, Don Juan was without it;
 In fact, his manner was his own alone:
 Sincere he was—at least you could not doubt it,
 In listening merely to his voice's tone.
 The devil hath not in all his quiver's choice
 An arrow for the heart like a sweet voice.

XIV

By nature soft, his whole address held off
 Suspicion; though not timid, his regard
 Was such as rather seem'd to keep aloof,
 To shield himself than put you on your guard:
 Perhaps 'twas hardly quite assured enough,
 But modesty's at times its own reward,
 Like virtue; and the absence of pretension
 Will go much farther than there's need to mention.

XV

Serene, accomplish'd, cheerful but not loud;
 Insinuating without insinuation;
 Observant of the foibles of the crowd,
 Yet ne'er betraying this in conversation;
 Proud with the proud, yet courteously proud,
 So as to make them feel he knew his station
 And theirs:—without a struggle for priority,
 He neither brook'd nor claim'd superiority—

XVI

That is, with men: with women he was what They pleased to make or take him for;
 and their Imagination's quite enough for that:
 So that the outline's tolerably fair,
 They fill the canvas up—and 'verbum sat.'
 If once their phantasies be brought to bear
 Upon an object, whether sad or playful,
 They can transfigure brighter than a Raphael.

XVII

Adeline, no deep judge of character,
 Was apt to add a colouring from her own:

'Tis thus the good will amiably err,
 And eke the wise, as has been often shown.
 Experience is the chief philosopher,
 But saddest when his science is well known;
 And persecuted sages teach the schools
 Their folly in forgetting there are fools.

XVIII

Was it not so, great Locke? and greater Bacon?
 Great Socrates? And thou, Diviner still,
 Whose lot it is by man to be mistaken,
 And thy pure creed made sanction of all ill?
 Redeeming worlds to be by bigots shaken,
 How was thy toil rewarded? We might fill Volumes with similar sad illustrations,
 But leave them to the conscience of the nations.

XIX

I perch upon an humbler promontory,
 Amidst life's infinite variety:
 With no great care for what is nicknamed glory,
 But speculating as I cast mine eye
 On what may suit or may not suit my story,
 And never straining hard to versify,
 I rattle on exactly as I'd talk
 With anybody in a ride or walk.

XX

I don't know that there may be much ability
 Shown in this sort of desultory rhyme;
 But there's a conversational facility,
 Which may round off an hour upon a time.
 Of this I'm sure at least, there's no servility
 In mine irregularity of chime,
 Which rings what's uppermost of new or hoary,
 Just as I feel the Improvisatore.

XXI

'*Omnia vult belle Matho dicere—dic aliquando quando
 Et bene, dic neutrum, dic aliquando male.*'
 The first is rather more than mortal can do;
 The second may be sadly done or gaily;
 The third is still more difficult to stand to;
 The fourth we hear, and see, and say too, daily:
 The whole together is what I could wish
 To serve in this conundrum of a dish.

XXII

A modest hope—but modesty's my forte,
 And pride my feeble:—let us ramble on.
 I meant to make this poem very short,
 But now I can't tell where it may not run.

No doubt, if I had wish'd to pay my court
To critics, or to hail the setting sun
Of tyranny of all kinds, my concision
Were more;—but I was born for opposition.

XXIII

But then 'tis mostly on the weaker side;
So that I verily believe if they Who now are basking in their full-blown
pride
Were shaken down and 'dogs had had their day,'
Though at the first I might perchance deride
Their tumble, I should turn the other
way,
And wax an ultra-royalist in loyalty,
Because I hate even democratic royalty.

XXIV

I think I should have made a decent spouse,
If I had never proved the soft condition;
I think I should have made monastic vows,
But for my own peculiar superstition:
'Gainst rhyme I never should have knock'd
my brows,
Nor broken my own head, nor that of Priscian,
Nor worn the motley mantle of a poet,
If some one had not told me to forego it.

XXV

But laissez aller—knights and dames I
sing,
Such as the times may furnish. 'Tis a
flight
Which seems at first to need no lofty wing,
Plumed by Longinus or the Stagyrte:
The difficulty lies in colouring
(Keeping the due proportions still in sight)
With nature manners which are artificial,
And rend'ring general that which is especial.

XXVI

The difference is, that in the days of old Men made the manners; manners now make men—
Pinn'd like a flock, and fleeced too in their
fold,
At least nine, and a ninth beside of ten.
Now this at all events must render cold
Your writers, who must either draw again
Days better drawn before, or else assume
The present, with their common-place costume.

XXVII

We'll do our best to make the best on't:—
March!
March, my Muse! If you cannot fly,
yet flutter;
And when you may not be sublime, be arch,
Or starch, as are the edicts statesmen utter.

We surely may find something worth research:

Columbus found a new world in a
cutter,
Or brigantine, or pink, of no great tonnage,
While yet America was in her non-age.

XXVIII

When Adeline, in all her growing sense
Of Juan's merits and his situation,
Felt on the whole an interest intense,— Partly perhaps because a fresh sensa-
tion,
Or that he had an air of innocence,
Which is for innocence a sad tempta-
tion—
As women hate half measures, on the whole,
She 'gan to ponder how to save his soul.

XXIX

She had a good opinion of advice,
Like all who give and eke receive it gratis,
For which small thanks are still the market
price,
Even where the article at highest rate is:
She thought upon the subject twice or thrice,
And morally decided, the best state is For morals, marriage; and this question carried,
She seriously advised him to get married.

XXX

Juan replied, with all becoming deference,
He had a predilection for that tie;
But that, at present, with immediate reference
To his own circumstances, there might
lie
Some difficulties, as in his own preference,
Or that of her to whom he might apply:
That still he'd wed with such or such a lady,
If that they were not married all already.

XXXI

Next to the making matches for herself,
And daughters, brothers, sisters, kith or
kin,
Arranging them like books on the same
shelf,
There's nothing women love to dabble in
More (like a stock-holder in growing pelf)
Than match-making in general: 'tis no
sin
Certes, but a preventative, and therefore That is, no doubt, the only reason wherefore.

XXXII

But never yet (except of course a miss
Unwed, or mistress never to be wed,
Or wed already, who object to this)
Was there chaste dame who had not in
her head

Some drama of the marriage unities, Observed as strictly both at board and
bed
As those of Aristotle, though sometimes
They turn out melodrames or pantomimes

XXXIII

They generally have some only son
Some heir to a large property, some
friend
Of an old family, some gay Sir John,
Or grave Lord George, with whom perhaps might end
A line, and leave posterity undone,
Unless a marriage was applied to mend
The prospect and their morals: and besides,
They have at hand a blooming glut of brides.

XXXIV

From these they will be careful to select,
For this an heiress, and for that a
beauty;
For one a songstress who hath no defect,
For to'ther one who promises much duty;
For this a lady no one can reject, Whose sole accomplishments were quite
a booty;
A second for her excellent connexions;
A third, because there can be no objections.

XXXV

When Rapp the Harmonist embargo'd
marriage
In his harmonious settlement—(which flourishes
Strangely enough as yet without mis-
carriage,
Because it breeds no more mouths than
it nourishes,
Without those sad expenses which dis-
parage
What Nature naturally most encourages)—
Why call'd he 'Harmony' a state sans wedlock?
Now here I have got the preacher at a dead
lock.

XXXVI

Because he either meant to sneer at harmony
Or marriage, by divorcing them thus oddly.
But whether reverend Rapp learn'd this in Germany
Or no, 'tis said his sect is rich and godly,
Pious and pure, beyond what I can term
any
Of ours, although they propagate more broadly.
My objection's to his title, not his ritual,
Although I wonder how it grew habitual.

XXXVII

But Rapp is the reverse of zealous matrons Who favour, malgré Malthus, generation—
Professors of that genial art, and patrons
Of all the modest part of propagation Which after all at such a desperate rat-runs,
That half its produce tends to emigra-
tion,
That sad result of passions and potatoes—
Two weeds which pose our economi-Catos.

XXXVIII

Had Adeline read Malthus? I can't tell;
I wish she had: his book's the eleventh commandment,
Which says, 'Thou shalt not marry,' unless well:
This he (as far as I can understand
meant.
'Tis not my purpose on his views to dwell
Nor canvass what 'so eminent a hand
meant;
But certes it conducts to lives ascetic,
Or turning marriage into arithmetic.

XXXIX

But Adeline, who probably presumed
That Juan had enough of maintenances
Or separate maintenance, in case 'twas
doom'd—
As on the whole it is an even chance
That bridegrooms, after they are fair-groom'd,
May retrograde a little in the dance
Of marriage—(which might form
painter's fame,
Like Holbein's 'Dance of Death'—but
'tis the same);—

XL

But Adeline determined Juan's wedding;
In her own mind, and that's enough for
woman;
But then, with whom? There was the sage Miss Reading,
Miss Raw, Miss Flaw, Miss Showman
and Miss Knowman,
And the two fair co-heiresses Giltbedding;
She deem'd his merits something more than common:
All these were unobjectionable matches,
And might go on, if well wound up, like watches.

XLI

There was Miss Millpond, smooth as summer's sea,
That usual paragon, an only daughter
Who seem'd the cream of equanimity, Till skimm'd—and then there was some milk and water,

With a slight shade of blue too, it might be Beneath the surface; but what did it
 matter?
 Love's riotous, but marriage should have quiet,
 And being consumptive, live on a milk diet.

XLII

And then there was the Miss Audacia Shoestring,
 A dashing demoiselle of good estate,
 Whose heart was fix'd upon a star or blue
 string;
 But whether English dukes grew rare of
 late,
 Or that she had not harp'd upon the true
 string,
 By which such sirens can attract our great,
 She took up with some foreign younger
 brother,
 A Russ or Turk—the one's as good as t'other.

XLIII

And then there was—but why should I go
 on,
 Unless the ladies should go off?—there
 was Indeed a certain fair and fairy one,
 Of the best class, and better than her
 class,—
 Aurora Raby, a young star who shone O'er life, too sweet an image for such
 glass,
 A lovely being, scarcely form'd or moulded,
 A rose with all its sweetest leaves yet folded;

XLIV

Rich, noble, but an orphan; left an only Child to the care of guardians good and
 kind;
 But still her aspect had an air so lonely!
 Blood is not water; and where shall we
 find Feelings of youth like those which overthrown lie
 By death, when we are left, alas! behind,
 To feel, in friendless palaces, a home
 Is wanting, and our best ties in the tomb?

XLV

Early in years, and yet more infantine
 In figure, she had something of sublime
 In eyes which sadly shone, as seraphs'
 shine.
 All youth—but with an aspect beyond
 time;
 Radiant and grave—as pitying man's decline;
 Mournful—but mournful of another's
 crime,
 She look'd as if she sat by Eden's door,
 And grieved for those who could return no
 more.

XLVI

She was a Catholic, too, sincere, austere,
 As far as her own gentle heart allow'd,
 And deem'd that fallen worship far more
 dear
 Perhaps because 'twas fallen: her sires were proud
 Of deeds and days when they had fill'd the
 ear
 Of nations, and had never bent or bow'd
 To novel power; and as she was the last,
 She held their old faith and old feelings fast.

XLVII

She gazed upon a world she scarcely knew,
 As seeking not to know it; silent, lone,
 As grows a flower, thus quietly she grew,
 And kept her heart serene within its
 zone.
 There was awe in the homage which she
 drew;
 Her spirit seem'd as seated on a throne Apart from the surrounding world, and
 strong
 In its own strength—most strange in one so young!

XLVIII

Now it so happen'd, in the catalogue
 Of Adeline, Aurora was omitted, Although her birth and wealth had given her vogue,
 Beyond the charmers we have already cited;
 Her beauty also seem'd to form no clog
 Against her being mention'd as well fitted,
 By many virtues, to be worth the trouble
 Of single gentlemen who would be double.

XLIX

And this omission, like that of the bust
 Of Brutus at the pageant of Tiberius, Made Juan wonder, as no doubt he must.
 This he express'd half smiling and half
 serious;
 When Adeline replied with some disgust,
 And with an air, to say the least, imperious,
 She marvel'd 'd 'what he saw in such a baby
 As that prim, silent, cold Aurora Raby?'

L

Juan rejoin'd—'She was a Catholic,
 And therefore fittest, as of his persuasion;
 Since he was sure his mother would fall
 sick,
 And the Pope thunder excommunication,
 If——' But here Adeline, who seem'd to pique
 Herself extremely on the inoculation
 Of others with her own opinions, stated—
 As usual—the same reason which she late did.

LI

And wherefore not? A reasonable reason,
If good, is none the worse for repetition;
If bad, the best way's certainly to tease on,
And amplify: you lose much by con-
cision,
Whereas insisting in or out of season
Convinces all men, even a politician;
Or—what is just the same—it wearies out.
So the end's gain'd, what signifies the route?

LII

Why Adeline had this slight prejudice—
For prejudice it was—against a creature
As pure as sanctity itself from vice,
With all the added charm of form and
feature,
For me appears a question far too nice,
Since Adeline was liberal by nature;
But nature's nature, and has more caprices
Than I have time, or will, to take to pieces.

LIII

Perhaps she did not like the quiet way
With which Aurora on those baubles
look'd,
Which charm most people in their earlier
day:
For there are few things by mankind less brook'd,
And womankind too, if we so may say,
Than finding thus their genius stand rebuked,
Like 'Antony's by Cæsar,' by the few
Who look upon them as they ought to do.

LIV

It was not envy—Adeline had none;
Her place was far beyond it, and her
mind.
It was not scorn—which could not light on
one Whose greatest fault was leaving few to
find.
It was not jealousy, I think: but shun
Following the ignes fatui of mankind.
It was not—but 'tis easier far, alas!
To say what it was not than what it was.

LV

Little Aurora deem'd she was the theme Of such discussion. She was there a
guest;
A beauteous ripple of the brilliant stream
Of rank and youth, though purer than
the rest,
Which flow'd on for a moment in the beam
Time sheds a moment o'er each sparkling crest.
Had she known this, she would have calmly smiled—
She had so much, or little, of the child.

LVI

The dashing and proud air of Adeline Imposed not upon her: she saw her
blaze
Much as she would have seen a glow-worm shine,
Then turn'd unto the stars for loftier rays
Juan was something she could not divines
Being no sibyl in the new world's ways
Yet she was nothing dazzled by the meteor
Because she did not pin her faith on feature.

LVII

His fame too,—for he had that kind of fame
Which sometimes plays the deuce with
womankind,
A heterogeneous mass of glorious blame:
Half virtues and whole vices being combined;
Faults which attract because they are no
tame;
Follies trick'd out so brightly that they
blind:—
These seals upon her wax made no impression,
Such was her coldness or her self-possession.

LVIII

Juan knew nought of such a character—
High, yet resembling not his lost Haidée;
Yet each was radiant in her proper sphere:
The island girl, bred up by the lone sea,
More warm, as lovely, and not less sincere,
Was Nature's all: Aurora could not be,
Nor would be thus:—the difference in
them
Was such as lies between a flower and gem.

LIX

Having wound up with this sublime comparison,
Methinks we may proceed upon our
narrative,
And, as my friend Scott says, 'I sound my warison';
Scott, the superlative of my comparative—
Scott, who can paint your Christian knight or Saracen,
Serf, lord, man, with such skill as none would share it, if There had not been one Shakspeare and Voltaire,
Of one or both of whom he seems the heir.

LX

I say, in my slight way I may proceed
To play upon the surface of humanity.
I write the world, nor care if the world
read,
At least for this I cannot spare its vanity.

My Muse hath bred, and still perhaps may breed
 More foes by this same scroll: when I began it, I Thought that it might turn out so—now
 I know it,
 But still I am, or was, a pretty poet.

LXI

The conference or congress (for it ended
 As congresses of late do) of the Lady
 Adeline and Don Juan rather blended
 Some acids with the sweets—for she was heady;
 But, ere the matter could be marr'd or mended,
 The silvery bell rang, not for 'dinner
 ready,'
 But for that hour, call'd half-hour, given to dress,
 Though ladies' robes seem scant enough for less.

LXII

Great things were now to be achieved at table,
 With massy plate for armour, knives and forks
 For weapons; but what Muse since Homer's able (His feasts are not the worst part of his works)
 To draw up in array a single day-bill
 Of modern dinners? where more mystery lurks,
 In soups or sauces, or a sole ragoût,
 Than witches, b—ches, or physicians, brew.

LXIII

There was a goodly 'soupe à la bonne femme,' Though God knows whence it came from; there was, too,
 A turbot for relief of those who cram,
 Relieved with 'dindon à la Périgieux.'
 There also was—the sinner that I am!
 How shall I get this gourmand stanza
 through?
 'Soupe à la Beauveau,' whose relief was
 dory,
 Relieved itself by pork, for greater glory.

LXIV

But I must crowd all into one grand mess,
 Or mass; for should I stretch into detail,
 My Muse would run much more into excess,
 Than when some squeamish people deem her frail;
 But though a 'bonne vivante,' I must confess
 Her stomach's not her peccant part;
 this tale
 However doth require some slight refec-
 tion,
 Just to relieve her spirits from dejection.

LXV

Fowls 'à la Condé,' slices eke of salmon,
 With 'saucés Gênévoises,' and haunch
 of venison;
 Wines, too, which might again have slain young Ammon—
 A man like whom I hope we sha'n't see many soon;
 They also set a glazed Westphalian ham
 on,
 Whereon Apicius would bestow his benison;
 And then there was champagne with foaming whirls,
 As white as Cleopatra's melted pearls.

LXVI

Then there was God knows what 'à l'Alle-mande,'
 'A l'Espagnole,' 'timballe,' and 'salpicon'—
 With things I can't withstand or understand,
 Though swallow'd with much zest upon
 the whole;
 And 'entremets' to piddle with at hand,
 Gently to lull down the subsiding soul;
 While great Lucullus' Rome triumphal
 muffles—(There's fame)—young partridge fillets, deck'd with truffles.

LXVII

What are the fillets on the victor's brow
 To these? They are rags or dust. Where is the arch
 Which nodded to the nation's spoils below?
 Where the triumphal chariots' haughty
 march?
 Gone to where victories must like dinners
 go.
 Farther I shall not follow the research:
 But oh! ye modern heroes with your cartridges,
 When will your names lend lustre e'en to partridges?

LXVIII

Those truffles too are no bad accessories, Follow'd by 'petits puits d'amour'—a dish
 Of which perhaps the cookery rather varies,
 So every one may dress it to his wish,
 According to the best of dictionaries,
 Which encyclopedise both flesh and fish;
 But even sans confitures, it no less true is,
 There's pretty picking in those petits puits.

LXIX

The mind is lost in mighty contemplation
 Of intellect expanded on two courses;
 And indigestion's grand multiplication
 Requires arithmetic beyond my forces

Who would suppose, from Adam's simple
ration,
That cookery could have call'd forth
such resources,
As form a science and a nomenclature
From out the commonest demands of nature?

LXX

The glasses jingled, and the palates tingled;
The diners of celebrity dined well;
The ladies with more moderation mingled
In the feast, pecking less than I can tell;
Also the younger men too: for a springald
Can't, like ripe age, in gourmandise excel,
But thinks less of good eating than the whisper
(When seated next him) of some pretty lisper.

LXXI

Alas! I must leave undescribed the gibier,
The salmi, the consommé, the purée,
All which I use to make my rhymes run glibber
Than could roast beef in our rough
John Bull way:
I must not introduce even a spare rib here,
'Bubble and squeak' would spoil my liquid lay,
But I have dined, and must forego, alas!
The chaste description even of a 'bécasse;'

LXXII

And fruits, and ice, and all that art refines
From nature for the service of the goût—
Taste or the gout,—pronounce it as inclines
Your stomach? Ere you dine, the French will do;
But after, there are sometimes certain signs Which prove plain English truer of the two.
Hast ever had the gout? I have not had it—
But I may have, and you too, reader, dread it.

LXXIII

The simple olives, best allies of wine,
Must I pass over in my bill of fare?
I must, although a favourite plat of mine
In Spain, and Lucca, Athens, every-
where:
On them and bread 'twas oft my luck to dine,
The grass my table-cloth, in open air,
On Sunium or Hymettus, like Diogenes,
Of whom half my philosophy the progeny is.

LXXIV

Amidst this tumult of fish, flesh, and fowl,
And vegetables, all in masquerade,
The guests were placed according to their
roll,
But various as the various meats dis-
play'd:

Don Juan sat next an 'à l'Espagnole'—
No damsel, but a dish, as hath been said
But so far like a lady, that 'twas drest
Superbly, and contain'd a world of zest.

LXXV

By some odd chance too, he was plac'd
between Aurora and the Lady Adeline—
A situation difficult, I ween,
For man therein, with eyes and heart, to dine.
Also the conference which we have seen
Was not such as to encourage him to
shine,
For Adeline, addressing few words to him:
With two transcendent eyes seem'd to look through him.

LXXVI

I sometimes almost think that eyes have
ears:
This much is sure, that, out of earshot
things
Are somehow echoed to the pretty dears.
Of which I can't tell whence their knowledge springs.
Like that same mystic music of the spheres,
Which no one hears, so loudly though it rings,
'Tis wonderful how oft the sex have heard Long dialogues—which pass'd without a word!

LXXVII

Aurora sat with that indifference
Which piques a preux chevalier—as it
ought:
Of all offences that's the worst offence,
Which seems to hint you are not worth a thought.
Now Juan, though no coxcomb in pretence,
Was not exactly pleased to be so caught;
Like a good ship entangled among ice,
And after so much excellent advice.

LXXVIII

To his gay nothings, nothing was replied,
Or something which was nothing, as urbanity
Required. Aurora scarcely look'd aside,
Nor even smiled enough for any vanity.
The devil was in the girl! Could it be
pride?
Or modesty, or absence, or inanity?
Heaven knows! But Adeline's malicious
eyes
Sparkled with her successful prophecies,

LXXIX

And look'd as much as if to say, 'I said it'.
A kind of triumph I'll not recommend Because it sometimes, as I have seen or read it,
Both in the case of lover and of friend.

Will pique a gentleman, for his own credit,
To bring what was a jest to a serious end:
For all men prophesy what is or was,
And hate those who won't let them come to pass.

LXXX

Juan was drawn thus into some attentions, Slight but select, and just enough to
express,
To females of perspicuous comprehen-
sions,
That he would rather make them more than less.
Aurora at the last (so history mentions,
Though probably much less a fact than guess)
So far relax'd her thoughts from their sweet prison,
As once or twice to smile, if not to listen.

LXXXI

From answering she began to question:
this
With her was rare; and Adeline, who
as yet
Thought her predictions went not much
amiss,
Began to dread she'd thaw to a co-quette—
So very difficult, they say, it is To keep extremes from meeting, when once set
In motion; but she here too much refined—
Aurora's spirit was not of that kind.

LXXXII

But Juan had a sort of winning way,
A proud humility, if such there be,
Which show'd such deference to what females say,
As if each charming word were a decree.
His tact, too, temper'd him from grave to
gay,
And taught him when to be reserved or
free;
He had the art of drawing people out,
Without their seeing what he was about.

LXXXIII

Aurora, who in her indifference Confounded him in common with the
crowd
Of flatterers, though she deem'd he had more sense
Than whispering foplings, or than witlings loud—Commenced (from such slight things will great commence)
To feel that flattery which attracts the proud
Rather by deference than compliment,
And wins even by a delicate dissent.

LXXXIV

And then he had good looks;—that point was carried Nem. con. amongst the women, which I
grieve
To say leads oft to crim. con. with the married—
A case which to the juries we may leave, Since with digressions we too long have tarried.
Now though we know of old that looks
deceive,
And always have done, somehow these good looks
Make more impression than the best of books.

LXXXV

Aurora, who look'd more on books than
faces,
Was very young, although so very sage,
Admiring more Minerva than the Graces,
Especially upon a printed page.
But Virtue's self, with all her tightest laces,
Has not the natural stays of strict old
age;
And Socrates, that model of all duty, Own'd to a penchant, though discreet, for beauty.

LXXXVI

And girls of sixteen are thus far Socratic,
But innocently so, as Socrates;
And really, if the sage sublime and Attic
At seventy years had phantasies like
these,
Which Plato in his dialogues dramatic Has shown, I know not why they should displease
In virgins—always in a modest way,
Observe; for that with me's a sine quâ.

LXXXVII

Also observe, that, like the great Lord Coke (See Littleton), whene'er I have ex-
press'd
Opinions two, which at first sight may look
Twin opposites, the second is the best.
Perhaps I have a third too, in a nook,
Or none at all—which seems a sorry jest:
But if a writer should be quite consistent,
How could he possibly show things existent?

LXXXVIII

If people contradict themselves, can I
Help contradicting them, and everybody,
Even my veracious self?—But that's a lie:
I never did so, never will—how should I?
He who doubts all things nothing can
deny:
Truth's fountains may be clear—her streams are muddy,
And cut through such canals of contradiction,
That she must often navigate o'er fiction.

LXXXIX

Apologue, fable, poesy, and parable,
Are false, but may be render'd also true,
By those who sow them in a land that's arable.

'Tis wonderful what fable will not do!
'Tis said it makes reality more bearable:
But what's reality? Who has its clue?
Philosophy? No; she too much rejects.
Religion? Yes; but which of all her sects?

XC

Some millions must be wrong, that's pretty clear;
Perhaps it may turn out that all were
right.

God help us! Since we have need on our career

To keep our holy beacons always bright,
'Tis time that some new prophet should
appear,

Or old indulge man with a second sight.
Opinions wear out in some thousand
years,

Without a small refreshment from the spheres.

XCI

But here again, why will I thus entangle Myself with metaphysics? None can hate

So much as I do any kind of wrangle;
And yet, such is my folly, or my fate, I always knock my head against some angle

About the present, past, or future state.
Yet I wish well to Trojan and to Tyrian,
For I was bred a moderate Presbyterian.

XCII

But though I am a temperate theologian,
And also meek as a metaphysician,
Impartial between Tyrian and Trojan

As Eldon on a lunatic commission,
In politics my duty is to show John Bull something of the lower world's condition.

It makes my blood boil like the springs of Hecla,
To see men let these scoundrel sovereigns break law.

XCIII

But politics, and policy, and piety,
Are topics which I sometimes introduce,
Not only for the sake of their variety,
But as subservient to a moral use;

Because my business is to dress society,
And stuff with sage that very verdant
goose.

And now, that we may furnish with some matter all

Tastes, we are going to try the supernatural.

XCIV

And now I will give up all argument;
And positively henceforth no tempta-
tion

Shall 'fool me to the top up of my bent';—
Yes, I'll begin a thorough reformation

Indeed, I never knew what people meant
By deeming that my Muse's conversa-
tion

Was dangerous;—I think she is as harm-
less

As some who labour more and yet may charm less.

XCV

Grim reader! did you ever see a ghost?
No; but you have heard—I understand —be dumb!

And don't regret the time you may have
lost,

For you have got that pleasure still to
come:

And do not think I mean to sneer at mos-
Of these things, or by ridicule benumb

That source of the sublime and the mysterious:—

For certain reasons my belief is serious.

XCVI

Serious? You laugh;—you may. that will
I not;

My smiles must be sincere or not at all
I say I do believe a haunted spot

Exists—and where? That shall I no
recall,

Because I'd rather it should be forgot,
'Shadows the soul of Richard' may
appal.

In short, upon that subject I've some qualms very

Like those of the philosopher of Malmsbury.

XCVII

The night—(I sing by night—sometimes an owl,

And now and then a nightingale)—is dim
And the loud shriek of sage Minerva's fowl

Rattles around me her discordant hymn Old portraits from old walls upon me scowl—

I wish to heaven they would not look so grim;

The dying embers dwindle in the grate—
I think too that I have sat up too late:

XCVIII

And therefore, though 'tis by no means my way

To rhyme at noon—when I have other
things

To think of, if I ever think—I say
I feel some chilly midnight shudderings

And prudently postpone, until mid-day,
Treating a topic which, alas! but brings Shadows;—but you must be in my condition
Before you learn to call this superstition.

XCIX

Between two worlds life hovers like a star,
Twixt night and morn, upon the hori-zon's verge.

How little do we know that which we are!
How less what we may be! The eternal surge

Of time and tide rolls on, and bears afar
Our bubbles; as the old burst, new emerge, Lash'd from the foam of ages; while the graves

Of empires heave but like some passing
waves.

CANTO THE SIXTEENTH

I

THE antique Persians taught three useful
things,

To draw the bow, to ride, and speak the
truth.

This was the mode of Cyrus, best of
kings—

A mode adopted since by modern youth.
Bows have they, generally with two strings, Horses they ride without remorse or ruth;

At speaking truth perhaps they are less
clever,

But draw the long bow better now than
ever.

II

The cause of this effect, or this defect,—
'For this effect defective comes by
cause,'—

Is what I have not leisure to inspect;
But this I must say in my own applause,
Of all the Muses that I recollect,

Whate'er may be her follies or her flaws,
In some things, mine's beyond all contradiction

The most sincere that ever dealt in fiction.

III

And as she treats all things, and ne'er retreats

From anything, this epic will contain
A wilderness of the most rare conceits, Which you might elsewhere hope to find in vain.

'Tis true there be some bitters with the sweets,

Yet mix'd so slightly, that you can't complain,

But wonder they so few are, since my tale is
'De rebus cunctis et quibusdam aliis.'

IV

But of all truths which she has told, the most

True is that which she is about to tell.
I said it was a story of a ghost—

What then? I only know it so befell.
Have you explored the limits of the coast,
Where all the dwellers of the earth must
dwell?

'Tis time to strike such puny doubters dumb as

The sceptics who would not believe Columbus.

Some people would impose now with authority,

Turpin's or Monmouth Geoffry's
Chronicle;

Men whose historical superiority

Is always greatest at a miracle.

But Saint Augustine has the great priority,
Who bids all men believe the impossible,
Because 'tis so. Who nibble, scribble, quibble, he

Quiets at once with 'quia impossibile.'

VI

And therefore, mortals, cavil not at all;
Believe:—if 'tis improbable, you must,
And if it is impossible, you shall:

'Tis always best to take things upon
trust.

I do not speak profanely, to recall
Those holier mysteries which the wise and just

Receive as gospel, and which grow more rooted,

As all truths must, the more they are disputed:

VII

I merely mean to say what Johnson said,
That in the course of some six thousand
years,

All nations have believed that from the
dead

A visitant at intervals appears;
And what is strangest upon this strange
head,

Is, that whatever bar the reason rears
'Gainst such belief, there's something stronger still

In its behalf, let those deny who will.

VIII

The dinner and the soirée too were done,
The supper too discuss'd, the dames
admired,

The banqueteers had dropp'd off one by
one—

The song was silent, and the dance expired:

The last thin petticoats were vanish'd, gone
 Like fleecy clouds into the sky retired,
 And nothing brighter gleam'd through the saloon
 Than dying tapers—and the peeping moon.

IX

The evaporation of a joyous day
 Is like the last glass of champagne,
 without
 The foam which made its virgin bumper
 gay;
 Or like a system coupled with a doubt;
 Or like a soda bottle when its spray
 Has sparkled and let half its spirit out;
 Or like a billow left by storms behind,
 Without the animation of the wind;

X

Or like an opiate, which brings troubled
 rest,
 Or none; or like—like nothing that I
 know
 Except itself;—such is the human breast;
 A thing, of which similitudes can show
 No real likeness,—like the old Tyrian vest Dyed purple, none at present can tell
 how,
 If from a shell-fish or from cochineal.
 So perish every tyrant's robe piece-meal!

XI

But next to dressing for a rout or ball, Undressing is a woe; our robe de chambre
 May sit like that of Nessus, and recall Thoughts quite as yellow, but less clear than amber.
 Titus exclaim'd, 'I've lost a day!' Of all The nights and days most people can
 remember,
 (I have had of both, some not to be dis-dain'd,)
 I wish they'd state how many they have gain'd.

XII

And Juan, on retiring for the night, Felt restless, and perplex'd, and com-
 promised:
 He thought Aurora Raby's eyes more
 bright
 Than Adeline (such is advice) advised;
 If he had known exactly his own plight,
 He probably would have philosophised;
 A great resource to all, and ne'er denied
 Till wanted; therefore Juan only sigh'd.

XIII

He sigh'd;—the next resource is the full
 moon,
 Where all sighs are deposited; and now
 It happen'd luckily, the chaste orb shone
 As clear as such a climate will allow;

And Juan's mind was in the proper tone
 To hail her with the apostrophe—'C
 thou!'

Of amatory egotism the Tuism,
 Which further to explain would be a truism.

XIV

But lover, poet, or astronomer, Shepherd, or swain, whoever may be-
 hold,
 Feel some abstraction when they gaze on
 her;
 Great thoughts we catch from thence (besides a cold
 Sometimes, unless my feelings rather
 err);
 Deep secrets to her rolling light are
 told;
 The ocean's tides and mortals' brains she
 sways,
 And also hearts, if there be truth in lays.

XV

Juan felt somewhat pensive, and disposed For contemplation rather than his pil-
 low:
 The Gothic chamber, where he was en-
 closed,
 Let in the rippling sound of the lake's
 billow,
 With all the mystery by midnight caused:
 Below his window waved (of course) a
 willow;
 And he stood gazing out on the cascade
 That flash'd and after darken'd in the shade.

XVI

Upon his table or his toilet,—which
 Of these is not exactly ascertain'd,—
 (I state this, for I am cautious to a pitch
 Of nicety, where a fact is to be gain'd,)
 A lamp burn'd high, while he leant from a niche,
 Where many a Gothic ornament re-
 main'd,
 In chisell'd stone and painted glass, and
 all
 That time has left our fathers of their hall.

XVII

Then, as the night was clear though cold, he threw
 His chamber door wide open—and went forth
 Into a gallery, of a sombre hue, Long, furnish'd with old pictures of great worth,
 Of knights and dames heroic and chaste too,
 As doubtless should be people of high
 birth.
 But by dim lights the portraits of the dead
 Have something ghastly, desolate, and dread.

XVIII

The forms of the grim knight and pictured saint Look living in the moon; and as you turn Backward and forward to the echoes faint
 Of your own footsteps—voices from the urn
 Appear to wake, and shadows wild and quaint
 Start from the frames which fence their aspects stern,
 As if to ask how you can dare to keep
 A vigil there, where all but death should sleep.

XIX

And the pale smile of beauties in the grave,
 The charms of other days, in starlight gleams,
 Glimmer on high; their buried locks still wave
 Along the canvas; their eyes glance like dreams
 On ours, or spars within some dusky cave,
 But death is imaged in their shadowy beams.
 A picture is the past; even ere its frame
 Be gilt, who sate hath ceased to be the same.

XX

As Juan mused on mutability,
 Or on his mistress—terms synonymous—
 No sound except the echo of his sigh
 Or step ran sadly through that antique house;
 When suddenly he heard, or thought so, nigh,
 A supernatural agent—or a mouse,
 Whose little nibbling rustle will embarrass
 Most people as it plays along the arras.

XXI

It was no mouse, but lo! a monk, array'd
 In cowl and beads, and dusky garb, appear'd,
 Now in the moonlight, and now lapsed in shade,
 With steps that trod as heavy, yet unheard;
 His garments only a slight murmur made;
 He moved as shadowy as the sisters weird,
 But slowly; and as he passed Juan by,
 Glanced, without pausing, on him a bright eye.

XXII

Juan was petrified; he had heard a hint
 Of such a spirit in these halls of old,
 But thought, like most men, there was nothing in't
 Beyond the rumour which such spots unfold,

Coin'd from surviving superstition's mint,
 Which passes ghosts in currency like gold,
 But rarely seen, like gold compared with paper.

And did he see this? or was it a vapour?

XXIII

Once, twice, thrice pass'd, repass'd—the thing of air,
 Or earth beneath, or heaven, or t'other place;
 And Juan gazed upon it with a stare,
 Yet could not speak or move; but, on its base
 As stands a statue, stood: he felt his hair
 Twine like a knot of snakes around his face;
 He tax'd his tongue for words, which were not granted,
 To ask the reverend person what he wanted.

XXIV

The third time, after a still longer pause,
 The shadow pass'd away—but where? the hall
 Was long, and thus far there was no great cause
 To think his vanishing unnatural:
 Doors there were many, through which, by the laws
 Of physics, bodies whether short or tall
 Might come or go; but Juan could not state
 Through which the spectre seem'd to evaporate.

XXV

He stood—how long he knew not, but it seem'd
 An age—expectant, powerless, with his eyes
 Strain'd on the spot where first the figure gleam'd,
 Then by degrees recall'd his energies,
 And would have pass'd the whole off as a dream,
 But could not wake; he was, he did surmise,
 Waking already, and return'd at length
 Back to his chamber, shorn of half his strength.

XXVI

All there was as he left it: still his taper
 Burnt, and not blue, as modest tapers use,
 Receiving sprites with sympathetic vapour;
 He rubb'd his eyes, and they did not refuse
 Their office; he took up an old newspaper;
 The paper was right easy to peruse;
 He read an article the king attacking,
 And a long eulogy of 'patent blacking.'

XXVII

This savour'd of this world; but his hand
shook:

He shut his door, and after having read
A paragraph, I think about Horne Tooke, Undrest, and rather slowly went to bed.
There, couch'd all snugly on his pillow's
nook,

With what he had seen his phantasy he fed;
And though it was no opiate, slumber
crept
Upon him by degrees, and so he slept.

XXVIII

He woke betimes; and, as may be supposed,

Ponder'd upon his visitant or vision,
And whether it ought not to be disclosed,
At risk of being quizz'd for superstition.
The more he thought, the more his mind
was posed;

In the mean time, his valet, whose precision
Was great, because his master brook'd no
less,
Knock'd to inform him it was time to dress.

XXIX

He dress'd; and like young people he was
wont

To take some trouble with his toilet,
but

This morning rather spent less time upon 't;
Aside his very mirror soon was put;

His curls fell negligently o'er his front,

His clothes were not curb'd to their usual cut,

His very neckcloth's Gordian knot was tied

Almost an hair's breadth too much on one side.

XXX

And when he walk'd down into the saloon,

He sate him pensive o'er a dish of tea,
Which he perhaps had not discover'd
soon,

Had it not happen'd scalding hot to be,
Which made him have recourse unto his spoon;

So much distrain'd he was, that all could see
That something was the matter—Adeline
The first—but what she could not well
divine.

XXXI

She look'd, and saw him pale, and turn'd as pale

Herself; then hastily look'd down, and mutter'd

Something, but what's not stated in my tale.
Lord Henry said, his muffin was illbutter'd;

The Duchess of Fitz-Fulke play'd with her
veil,

And look'd at Juan hard, but nothing
utter'd.

Aurora Raby with her large dark eyes
Survey'd him with a kind of calm surprise.

XXXII

But seeing him all cold and silent still,
And everybody wondering more or
less,

Fair Adeline inquired 'If he were ill?'
He started, and said, 'Yes—no—rather
—yes.'

The family physician had great skill,
And being present, now began to express

His readiness to feel his pulse and tell The cause, but Juan said, 'He was quite well.'

XXXIII

'Quite well; yes,—no.'—These answers were mysterious,

And yet his looks appear'd to sanction
both,

However they might savour of delirious;
Something like illness of a sudden
growth

Weigh'd on his spirit, though by no means
serious:

But for the rest, as he himself seem'd
loth

To state the case, it might be ta'en for granted

It was not the physician that he wanted.

XXXIV

Lord Henry, who had now discuss'd his chocolate,

Also the muffin whereof he complain'd,
Said, Juan had not got his usual look elate,

At which he marvell'd, since it had not rain'd;

Then ask'd her Grace what news were of the duke of late?

Her Grace replied, his Grace was rather
pain'd

With some slight, light, hereditary twinges
Of gout, which rusts aristocratic hinges.

XXXV

Then Henry turn'd to Juan, and address'd
A few words of condolence on his state:

'You look,' quoth he, 'as if you had had your rest

Broke in upon by the Black Friar of late.'
'What Friar?' said Juan; and he did his
best

To put the question with an air sedate,
Or careless; but the effort was not valid

To hinder him from growing still more pallid.

XXXVI

'Oh! have you never heard of the Black Friar?

The spirit of these walls?'—'In truth not I.'

'Why Fame—but Fame you know's sometimes a liar—

Tells an odd story, of which by and by: Whether with time the spectre has grown shyer,

Or that our sires had a more gifted eye For such sights, though the tale is half believed,

The Friar of late has not been oft perceived.

XXXVII

'The last time was——'—'I pray,' said Adeline—

(Who watch'd the changes of Don Juan's brow,

And from its context thought she could divine

Connexions stronger than he chose to avow

With this same legend)—'if you but design To jest, you'll choose some other theme just now,

Because the present tale has oft been told, And is not much improved by growing old.'

XXXVIII

'Jest!' quoth Milor; 'why, Adeline, you know

That we ourselves—'twas in the honey-moon—

Saw——'—'Well, no matter, 'twas so long ago;

But, come, I'll set your story to a tune.' Gracious as Dian when she draws her bow,

She seiz'd her harp, whose strings were kindled soon

As touch'd, and plaintively began to play The air of 'Twas a Friar of Orders Gray.'

XXXIX

'But add the words,' cried Henry, 'which you made;

For Adeline is half a poetess,'

Turning round to the rest, he smiling said. Of course the others could not but express

In courtesy their wish to see display'd By one three talents, for there were no less—

The voice, the words, the harper's skill, at once,

Could hardly be united by a dunce.

XL

After some fascinating hesitation,— The charming of these charmers, who seem bound,

I can't tell why, to this dissimulation,— Fair Adeline, with eyes fix'd on the ground

At first, then kindling into animation,

Added her sweet voice to the lyric sound,

And sang with much simplicity,—a merit Not the less precious, that we seldom hear it.

I

Beware! beware! of the Black Friar,

Who sitteth by Norman stone,

For he mutters his prayer in the midnight air,

And his mass of the days that are gone. When the Lord of the Hill, Amundeville,

Made Norman Church his prey,

And expell'd the friars, one friar still Would not be driven away.

2

Though he came in his might, with King Henry's right,

To turn church lands to lay,

With sword in hand, and torch to light Their walls, if they said nay;

A monk remain'd, unchased, unchain'd, And he did not seem form'd of clay,

For he's seen in the porch, and he's seen in the church,

Though he is not seen by day.

3

And whether for good, or whether for ill, It is not mine to say;

But still with the house of Amundeville He abideth night and day.

By the marriage-bed of their lords, 'tis said, He flits on the bridal eve;

And 'tis held as faith, to their bed of death He comes—but not to grieve.

4

When an heir is born, he's heard to mourn, And when aught is to befall

That ancient line, in the pale moonshine He walks from hall to hall.

His form you may trace, but not his face, 'Tis shadow'd by his cowl;

But his eyes may be seen from the folds between,

And they seem of a parted soul.

5

But beware! beware! of the Black Friar, He still retains his sway,

For he is yet the Church's heir, Whoever may be the lay.

Amundeville is lord by day,

But the monk is lord by night;

Nor wine nor wassail could raise a vassal To question that friar's right.

6

Say nought to him as he walks the hall, And he'll say nought to you;

He sweeps along in his dusky pall, As o'er the grass the dew.

Then grammery! for the Black Friar;
 Heaven sain him! fair or foul,
 And whatsoe'er may be his prayer,
 Let ours be for his soul.

XLI

The lady's voice ceased, and the thrilling wires
 Died from the touch that kindled them
 to sound;
 And the pause follow'd, which when song
 expires
 Pervades a moment those who listen
 round;
 And then of course the circle much admires,
 Nor less applauds, as in politeness bound,
 The tones, the feeling, and the execution,
 To the performer's diffident confusion.

XLII

Fair Adeline, though in a careless way,
 As if she rated such accomplishment
 As the mere pastime of an idle day,
 Pursued an instant for her own content,
 Would now and then, as 'twere without
 display,
 Yet with display in fact, at times relent
 To such performances with haughty smile,
 To show she could, if it were worth her while.

XLIII

Now this (but we will whisper it aside)
 Was—pardon the pedantic illustration—Trampling on Plato's pride with greater
 pride,
 As did the Cynic on some like occasion:
 Deeming the sage would be much mortified,
 Or thrown into a philosophic passion,
 For a spoilt carpet—but the 'Attic bee'
 Was much consoled by his own repartee.

XLIV

Thus Adeline would throw into the shade
 (By doing easily, whene'er she chose,
 What dilettanti do with vast parade)
 Their sort of half profession; for it grows
 To something like this when too oft display'd;
 And that it is so, everybody knows,
 Who have heard Miss That or This, or Lady T'other, Show off—to please their company or mother.

XLV

Oh! the long evenings of duets and trios!
 The admirations and the speculations;
 The 'Mamma Mia's!' and the 'Amor Mio's!'
 The 'Tanti palpiti's' on such occasions:

The 'Lasciami's,' and quavering 'Addio's!'
 Amongst our own most musical na-
 tions;
 With 'Tu mi chamas's' from Portingale,
 To soothe our ears, lest Italy should fail.

XLVI

In Babylon's bravuras—as the home
 Heart-ballads of Green Erin or Gray Highlands,
 That bring Lochaber back to eyes that
 roam
 O'er far Atlantic continents or islands,
 The calestures of music which o'ercome
 All mountaineers with dreams that they are high lands,
 No more to be beheld but in such visions—
 Was Adeline well versed, as compositions.

XLVII

She also had a twilight tinge of 'Blue,'
 Could write rhymes, and compose more than she wrote,
 Made epigrams occasionally too
 Upon her friends, as everybody ought.
 But still from that sublimer azure hue,
 So much the present dye, she was remote;
 Was weak enough to deem Pope a great
 poet,
 And what was worse, was not ashamed to show it.

XLVIII

Aurora—since we are touching upon taste,
 Which now-a-days is the thermometer
 By whose degrees all characters are class'd—
 Was more Shakspearian, if I do not err.
 The worlds beyond this world's perplexing waste
 Had more of her existence, for in her
 There was a depth of feeling to embrace Thoughts, boundless, deep, but silent too as Space.

XLIX

Not so her gracious, graceful, graceless
 Grace,
 The full-grown Hebe of Fitz-Fulke, whose mind,
 If she had any, was upon her face,
 And that was of a fascinating kind.
 A little turn for mischief you might trace
 Also thereon,—but that's not much;
 we find
 Few females without some such gentle leaven,
 For fear we should suppose us quite in heaven.

L

I have not heard she was at all poetic,
 Though once she was seen reading the Bath Guide,
 And Hayley's Triumphs, which she deem'd
 pathetic,

Because she said her temper had been tried
 So much, the bard had really been prophetic
 Of what she had gone through with—since a bride.
 But of all verse, what most insured her
 praise
 Were sonnets to herself, or bouts rimés.

LI

'Twere difficult to say what was the object
 Of Adeline, in bringing this same lay
 To bear on what appear'd to her the subject
 Of Juan's nervous feelings on that day.
 Perhaps she merely had the simple project
 To laugh him out of his supposed dismay;
 Perhaps she might wish to confirm him
 in it,
 Though why I cannot say—at least this minute.

LII

But so far the immediate effect
 Was to restore him to his self-propriety,
 A thing quite necessary to the elect,
 Who wish to take the tone of their
 society:
 In which you cannot be too circumspect,
 Whether the mode be persiflage or piety,
 But wear the newest mantle of hypocrisy,
 On pain of much displeasing the gynocracy.

LIII

And therefore Juan now began to rally
 His spirits, and without more explanation
 To jest upon such themes in many a sally.
 Her Grace, too, also seized the same
 occasion,
 With various similar remarks to tally,
 But wish'd for a still more detail'd
 narration
 Of this same mystic friar's curious doings,
 About the present family's deaths and wooings.

LIV

Of these few could say more than has been
 said;
 They pass'd as such things do, for superstition
 With some, while others, who had more in dread
 The theme, half credited the strange tradition;
 And much was talk'd on all sides on that
 head:
 But Juan, when cross-question'd on the
 vision,
 Which some supposed (though he had not avow'd it)
 Had stirr'd him, answer'd in a way to cloud it.

LV

And then, the mid-day having worn to
 one,
 The company prepared to separate;
 Some to their several pastimes, or to none,
 Some wondering 'twas so early, some so late.
 There was a goodly match too, to be run Between some greyhounds on my lord's
 estate,
 And a young race-horse of old pedigree, Match'd for the spring, whom several went to see.

LVI

There was a picture-dealer who had brought
 A special Titian, warranted original,
 So precious that it was not to be bought,
 Though princes the possessor were besieging all.
 The king himself had cheapen'd it, but
 thought
 The civil list he deigns to accept (obliging all
 His subjects by his gracious acceptation)—
 Too scanty, in these times of low taxation.

LVII

But as Lord Henry was a connoisseur,—
 The friend of artists, if not arts,—the owner,
 With motives the most classical and pure,
 So that he would have been the very donor,
 Rather than seller, had his wants been fewer,
 So much he deem'd his patronage an
 honour,
 Had brought the capo d'opera, not for sale,
 But for his judgment—never known to fail.

LVIII

There was a modern Goth, I mean a Gothic
 Bricklayer of Babel, call'd an architect, Brought to survey these grey walls, which though so thick,
 Might have from time acquired some slight defect;
 Who, after rummaging the Abbey through thick
 And thin, produced a plan whereby to erect
 New buildings of correctest conformation,
 And throw down old, which he call'd restoration.

LIX

The cost would be a trifle—an 'old song,' Set to some thousands ('tis the usual burden
 Of that same tune, when people hum it
 long)—
 The price would speedily repay its worth in

An edifice no less sublime than strong,
 By which Lord Henry's good taste would go forth in
 Its glory, through all ages shining sunny,
 For Gothic darings shown in English money.

LX

There were two lawyers busy on a mortgage
 Lord Henry wish'd to raise for a new
 purchase;
 Also a lawsuit upon tenures burgage,
 And one on tithes, which sure are Discord's torches,
 Kindling Religion till she throws down
 her gage,
 'Untying' squires 'to fight against the
 churches';
 There was a prize ox, a prize pig, and ploughman,
 For Henry was a sort of Sabine showman.

LXI

There were two poachers caught in a steel
 trap,
 Ready for gaol, their place of convalescence;
 There was a country girl in a close cap
 And scarlet cloak (I hate the sight to see, since—
 Since—since—in youth, I had the sad mishap—
 But luckily I have paid few parish fees
 since):
 That scarlet cloak, alas! unclosed with
 rigour
 Presents the problem of a double figure.

LXII

A reel within a bottle is a mystery,
 One can't tell how it e'er got in or out;
 Therefore the present piece of natural history
 I leave to those who are fond of solving
 doubt;
 And merely state, though not for the consistory,
 Lord Henry was a justice, and that Scout
 The constable, beneath a warrant's banner,
 Had bagg'd this poacher upon Nature's manor.

LXIII

Now justices of peace must judge all pieces
 Of mischief of all kinds, and keep the
 game
 And morals of the country from caprices
 Of those who have not a licence for the
 same;
 And of all things, excepting tithes and leases,
 Perhaps these are most difficult to tame:
 Preserving partridges and pretty wenches
 Are puzzles to the most precautions benches.

LXIV

The present culprit was extremely pale,
 Pale as if painted so; her cheek being red.
 By nature, as in higher dames less hale
 'Tis white, at least when they just rise from bed.
 Perhaps she was ashamed of seeming frail,
 Poor soul! for she was country borne and bred,
 And knew no better in her immorality Than to wax white—for blushes are for quality.

LXV

Her black, bright, downcast, yet espiegles
 eye,
 Had gather'd a large tear into its corner,
 Which the poor thing at times essay'd too
 dry,
 For she was not a sentimental mourner
 Parading all her sensibility, Nor insolent enough to scorn the
 scorn,
 But stood in trembling, patient tribula-
 tion,
 To be call'd up for her examination.

LXVI

Of course these groups were scatter'd here
 and there,
 Not nigh the gay saloon of ladies gent.
 The lawyers in the study; and in air
 The prize pig, ploughman, poachers;
 the men sent
 From town, viz. architect and dealer, were Both busy (as a general in his tent Writing despatches) in their several stations,
 Exulting in their brilliant lucubrations.

LXVII

But this poor girl was left in the great hall, While Scout, the parish guardian of the
 frail,
 Discuss'd (he hated beer yclept the
 'small')
 A mighty mug of moral double ale.
 She waited until Justice could recall
 Its kind attentions to their proper pale,
 To name a thing in nomenclature rather Perplexing for most virgins—a child's father.

LXVIII

You see here was enough of occupation
 For the Lord Henry, link'd with dogs and horses.
 There was much bustle too, and preparation
 Below stairs on the score of second courses;
 Because, as suits their rank and situation,
 Those who in counties have great land resources

Have 'public days,' when all men may
carouse,
Though not exactly what's call'd 'open house.'

LXIX

But once a week or fortnight, uninvited
(Thus we translate a general invitation), All country gentlemen, esquired or
knighted,
May drop in without cards, and take their station
At the full board, and sit alike delighted With fashionable wines and conversa-
tion;
And, as the isthmus of the grand con-
nexion,
Talk o'er themselves the past and next election.

LXX

Lord Henry was a great electioneerer, Burrowing for boroughs like a rat or rabbit.
But county contests cost him rather dearer,
Because the neighbouring Scotch Earl of Giftgabbit
Had English influence, in the self-same sphere here;
His son, the Honourable Dick Diced-
rabbit,
Was member for the 'other interest'
(meaning
The same self-interest, with a different leaning).

LXXI

Courteous and cautious therefore in his county,
He was all things to all men, and dispensed
To some civility, to others bounty,
And promises to all—which last commenced
To gather to a somewhat large amount,
he
Not calculating how much they condensed;
But what with keeping some, and breaking others,
His word had the same value as another's.

LXXII

A friend to freedom and freeholders—yet
No less a friend to government—he held,
That he exactly the just medium hit
'Twixt place and patriotism—albeit
compell'd,
Such was his sovereign's pleasure, (though
unfit,
He added modestly, when rebels rail'd,)
To hold some sinecures he wish'd abolish'd,
But that with them all law would be demolish'd.

LXXIII

He was 'free to confess'—(whence comes this phrase?
Is't English? No—'tis only parliamentary)
That innovation's spirit now-a-days
Had made more progress than for the last century.
He would not tread a factious path to
praise,
Though for the public weal disposed to venture high;
As for his place, he could but say this of it,
That the fatigue was greater than the profit.

LXXIV

Heaven, and his friends, knew that a private life
Had ever been his sole and whole ambition;
But could he quit his king in times of
strife,
Which threaten'd the whole country
with perdition?
When demagogues would with a butcher's
knife
Cut through and through (oh! damnable incision!)
The Gordian or the Geordi-an knot, whose strings
Have tied together commons, lords, and kings.

LXXV

Sooner 'come Place into the Civil List
And champion him to the utmost—'
he would keep it,
Till duly disappointed or dismiss'd:
Profit he cared not for, let others reap
it;
But should the day come when place
ceased to exist,
The country would have far more cause
to weep it:
For how could it go on? Explain who
can!
He gloried in the name of Englishman.

LXXVI

He was as independent—ay, much more—Than those who were not paid for independence,
As common soldiers, or a common—
shore,
Have in their several arts or parts ascendancy
O'er the irregulars in lust or gore,
Who do not give professional attendancy.
Thus on the mob all statesmen are as eager
To prove their pride, as footmen to a beggar.

LXXVII

All this (save the last stanza) Henry said,
And thought. I say no more—I've said
too much;
For all of us have either heard or read—
Off—or upon the hustings—some slight
such
Hints from the independent heart or head
Of the official candidate. I'll touch
No more on this—the dinner-bell hath rung.
And grace is said; the grace I should have sung—

LXXVIII

But I'm too late, and therefore must make
play.
'Twas a great banquet, such as Albion
old
Was wont to boast—as if a glutton's tray
Were something very glorious to behold.
But 'twas a public feast and public day,— Quite full, right dull, guests hot, and dishes cold,
Great plenty, much formality, small cheer,
And everybody out of their own sphere.

LXXIX

The squires familiarly formal, and My lords and ladies proudly con-
descending;
The very servants puzzling how to hand
Their plates—without it might be too much bending
From their high places by the sideboard's
stand—
Yet, like their master's, fearful of offending.
For any deviation from the graces Might cost both man and master too—their places.

LXXX

There were some hunters bold, and coursers keen,
Whose hounds ne'er err'd, nor greyhounds deign'd to lurch;
Some deadly shots too, Septembrizers, seen Earliest to rise, and last to quit the search Of the poor partridge through his stubble
screen.
There were some massy members of the church,
Takers of tithes, and makers of good
matches,
And several who sung fewer psalms than catches.

LXXXI

There were some country wags too—and,
alas!
Some exiles from the town, who had been driven
To gaze, instead of pavement, upon grass,
And rise at nine in lieu of long eleven.

And lo! upon that day it came to pass,
I sate next that o'erwhelming son of
heaven,
The very powerful parson, Peter Pith,
The loudest wit I e'er was deafen'd with.

LXXXII

I knew him in his livelier London days,
A brilliant diner-out, though but a curate;
And not a joke he cut but earn'd its praise,
Until preferment, coming at a sure rate,
(O Providence! how wondrous are thy ways!
Who would suppose thy gifts sometimes obdurate?)
Gave him, to lay the devil who looks o'er Lincoln,
A fat fen vicarage, and nought to think on.

LXXXIII

His jokes were sermons, and his sermons jokes;
But both were thrown away amongst the fens;
For wit hath no great friend in aguish folks.
No longer ready ears and short-hand pens
Imbided the gay bon-mot, or happy hoax:
The poor priest was reduced to common sense,
Or to coarse efforts very loud and long,
To hammer a hoarse laugh from the thick throng.

LXXXIV

There is a difference, says the song, 'between
A beggar and a queen,' or was (of late
The latter worse used of the two we've
seen—
But we'll say nothing of affairs of
state);
A difference "twixt a bishop and a dean,"
A difference between crockery ware and
plate,
As between English beef and Spartan broth—
And yet great heroes have been bred by both.

LXXXV

But of all nature's discrepancies, none Upon the whole is greater than the difference
Beheld between the country and the town,
Of which the latter merits every preference
From those who have few resources of
their own,
And only think, or act, or feel, with reference
To some small plan of interest or ambition—
Both which are limited to no condition.

LXXXVI

But En avant! The light loves languish
 o'er
 Long banquets and too many guests,
 although
 A slight repast makes people love much
 more,
 Bacchus and Ceres being, as we know,
 Even from our grammar upwards, friends
 of yore
 With vivifying Venus, who doth owe To these the invention of champagne and truffles:
 Temperance delights her, but long fasting ruffles.

LXXXVII

Dully pass'd o'er the dinner of the day;
 And Juan took his place, he knew not
 where,
 Confused, in the confusion, and distract,
 And sitting as if nail'd upon his chair:
 Though knives and forks clang'd round
 as in a fray,
 He seem'd unconscious of all passing
 there,
 Till some one, with a groan, exprest a wish (Unheeded twice) to have a fin of fish.

LXXXVIII

On which, at the third asking of the banns,
 He started; and perceiving smiles around Broadening to grins, he colour'd more
 than once,
 And hastily—as nothing can confound
 A wise man more than laughter from a dunce—
 Inflicted on the dish a deadly wound,
 And with such hurry, that, ere he could curb it,
 He had paid his neighbour's prayer with half a turbot.

LXXXIX

This was no bad mistake, as it occur'd,
 The supplicator being an amateur;
 But others, who were left with scarce a third,
 Were angry—as they well might, to be
 sure.
 They wonder'd how a young man so absurd
 Lord Henry at his table should endure;
 And this, and his not knowing how much oats
 Had fall'n last market, cost his host three votes.

XC

They little knew, or might have sympa-
 thised,
 That he the night before had seen a
 ghost,
 A prologue which but slightly harmonised
 With the substantial company engross'd

By matter, and so much materialised,
 That one scarce knew at what to marvel
 most
 Of two things—how (the question rather odd is)
 Such bodies could have souls, or souls such bodies.

XCI

But what confused him more than smile or
 stare,
 From all the 'squires and 'squiresses
 around,
 Who wonder'd at the abstraction of his air,
 Especially as he had been renown'd
 For some vivacity among the fair,
 Even in the country circle's narrow
 bound—
 (For little things upon my lord's estate
 Were good small talk for others still less great)—

XCII

Was, that he caught Aurora's eye on his,
 And something like a smile upon her
 cheek.
 Now this he really rather took amiss;
 In those who rarely smile, their smile
 bespeaks
 A strong external motive; and in this Smile of Aurora's there was nought to
 pique,
 Or hope, or love, with any of the wiles
 Which some pretend to trace in ladies'
 smiles.

XCIII

'Twas a mere quiet smile of contempla-
 tion,
 Indicative of some surprise and pity;
 And Juan grew carnation with vexation,
 Which was not very wise, and still less
 witty,
 Since he had gain'd at least her observa-
 tion,
 A most important outwork of the city—
 As Juan should have known, had not his senses
 By last night's ghost been driven from their defences.

XCIV

But what was bad, she did not blush in
 turn,
 Nor seem embarrass'd—quite the contrary;
 Her aspect was as usual, still—not stern—
 And she withdrew, but cast not down,
 her eye,
 Yet grew a little pale—with what? concern?
 I know not; but her colour ne'er was
 high—Though sometimes faintly flush'd—and always clear,
 As deep seas in a sunny atmosphere.

XCV

But Adeline was occupied by fame
 This day; and watching, witching, con-
 descending
 To the consumers of fish, fowl, and game,
 And dignity with courtesy so blending,
 As all must blend whose part it is to aim (Especially as the sixth year is ending)
 At their lord's, son's, or similar con-
 nexion's
 Safe conduct through the rocks of reelections.

XCVI

Though this was most expedient on the
 whole,
 And usual—Juan, when he cast a glance
 On Adeline while playing her grand rôle,
 Which she went through as though it were a dance,
 Betraying only now and then her soul
 By a look scarce perceptibly askance
 (Of weariness or scorn), began to feel Some doubt how much of Adeline was real;

XCVII

So well she acted all and every part
 By turns—with that vivacious versatility, Which many people take for want of
 heart.
 They err—'tis merely what is call'd mobility,
 A thing of temperament and not of art,
 Though seeming so, from its supposed facility;
 And false—though true; for surely they're sincerest
 Who are strongly acted on by what is nearest.

XCVIII

This makes your actors, artists, and romancers,
 Heroes sometimes, though seldom—sages never:
 But speakers, bards, diplomatists, and dancers,
 Little that's great, but much of what is clever;
 Most orators, but very few financiers,
 Though all Exchequer chancellors endeavour,
 Of late years, to dispense with Cocker's
 rigours,
 And grow quite figurative with their figures.

The poets of arithmetic are they Who, though they prove not two and two to be Five, as they might do in a modest way,
 Have plainly made it out that four are
 three,

Judging by what they take, and what they
 pay.

The Sinking Fund's unfathomable seas
 That most unliquidating liquid, leaves
 The debt unsunk, yet sinks all it receivess

C

While Adeline dispensed her airs and
 graces,
 The fair Fitz-Fulke seem'd very much
 at ease;
 Though too well bred to quiz men to their
 faces,
 Her laughing blue eyes with a glance could seize
 The ridicules of people in all places—
 That honey of your fashionable bees—
 And store it up for mischievous enjoy-
 ment;
 And this at present was her kind employment.

CI

However, the day closed, as days must
 close;
 The evening also waned—and coffee
 came.
 Each carriage was announced, and ladies
 rose,
 And curtsying off, as curtsies countried
 dame,
 Retired: with most unfashionable bows
 Their docile esquires also did the same Delighted with their dinner and their hos-
 But with the Lady Adeline the most.

CII

Some praised her beauty: others her great
 grace;
 The warmth of her politeness, whose sincerity
 Was obvious in each feature of her face;
 Whose traits were radiant with the rays of verity.
 Yes: she was truly worthy her high place;
 No one could envy her deserved prosperity.
 And then her dress—what beautiful simplicity
 Draperied her form with curious felicity!

CIII

Meanwhile sweet Adeline deserved the praises,
 By an impartial indemnification
 For all her past exertion and soft phrase:
 In a most edifying conversation,
 Which turn'd upon their late guests
 miens and faces,
 And families, even to the last relation Their hideous wives, their horrid selves and dresses,
 And truculent distortion of their tresses:

CIV

True, she said little—'twas the rest that broke Forth into universal epigram;
 But then 'twas to the purpose what she spoke:
 Like Addison's 'faint praise,' so wont to damn,
 Her own but served to set off every joke,
 As music chimes in with a melodrame.
 How sweet the task to shield an absent friend!
 I ask but this of mine, to——not defend.

CV

There were but two exceptions to this keen Skirmish of wits o'er the departed; one Aurora, with her pure and placid mien;
 And Juan, too, in general behind none
 In gay remark on what he had heard or seen,
 Sate silent now, his usual spirits gone:
 In vain he heard the others rail or rally,
 He would not join them in a single sally.

CVI

'Tis true he saw Aurora look as though
 She approved his silence; she perhaps mistook
 Its motive for that charity we owe
 But seldom pay the absent, nor would look Farther; it might or it might not be so.
 But Juan, sitting silent in his nook,
 Observing little in his reverie,
 Yet saw this much, which he was glad to see.

CVII

The ghost at least had done him this much good,
 In making him as silent as a ghost,
 If in the circumstances which ensued
 He gain'd esteem where it was worth the most;
 And certainly Aurora had renew'd
 In him some feelings he had lately lost,
 Or harden'd; feelings which, perhaps ideal,
 Are so divine, that I must deem them real:—

CVIII

The love of higher things and better days;
 The unbounded hope, and heavenly ignorance
 Of what is call'd the world, and the world's ways;
 The moments when we gather from a glance
 More joy than from all future pride or praise,
 Which kindle manhood, but can ne'er entrance
 The heart in an existence of its own,
 Of which another's bosom is the zone.

CIX

Who would not sigh Αἶ αἶ τῶν Κυθέρειαν
 That hath a memory, or that had a heart?
 Alas! her star must fade like that of Dian:
 Ray fades on ray, as years on years depart.
 Anacreon only had the soul to tie an Unwithering myrtle round the un-blunted dart
 Of Eros: but though thou hast play'd us
 many tricks,
 Still we respect thee, 'Alma Venus Gene-trix!'

CX

And full of sentiments, sublime as billows
 Heaving between this world and worlds
 beyond,
 Don Juan, when the midnight hour of pillows
 Arrived, retired to his; but to despond
 Rather than rest. Instead of poppies, willows
 Waved o'er his couch; he meditated, fond
 Of those sweet bitter thoughts which banish sleep,
 And make the worldling sneer, the young-ling weep.

CXI

The night was as before: he was undrest, Saving his night-gown, which is an undress;
 Completely sans culotte, and without
 vest;
 In short, he hardly could be clothed with
 less:
 But apprehensive of his spectral guest,
 He sate with feelings awkward to
 express
 (By those who have not had such visita-
 tions),
 Expectant of the ghost's fresh operations.

CXII

And not in vain he listen'd;—Hush!
 what's that?
 I see—I see—Ah, no!—'tis not—yet 'tis—Ye powers! it is the—the—the—Pooh!
 the cat!
 The devil may take that stealthy pace of his!

So like a spiritual pit-a-pat,
 Or tiptoe of an amatory Miss,
 Gliding the first time to a rendezvous,
 And dreading the chaste echoes of her shoe.

CXIII

Again—what is't? The wind? No, no,— this time
 It is the sable Friar as before,
 With awful footsteps regular as rhyme,
 Or (as rhymes may be in these days)
 much more.

Again through shadows of the night sub-
lime,
When deep sleep fell on men, and the world wore
The starry darkness round her like a girdle Spangled with gems—the monk made his blood curdle.

CXIV

A noise like to wet fingers drawn on glass,
Which sets the teeth on edge; and a slight clatter
Like showers which on the midnight gusts will pass,
Sounding like very supernatural water,
Came over Juan's ear, which throb'd, alas!
For immaterialism's a serious matter;
So that even those whose faith is the most
great
In souls immortal, shun them tête-à-tête.

CXV

Were his eyes open?—Yes! and his mouth
too.
Surprise has this effect—to make one
dumb,
Yet leave the gate which eloquence slips
through
As wide, as if a long speech were to
come.
Nigh and more nigh the awful echoes
drew,
Tremendous to a mortal tympanum:
His eyes were open, and (as was before Stated) his mouth. What open'd next?— the door.

CXVI

It open'd like a most infernal creak,
Like that of hell. 'Lasciate ogni speranza Voi ch' entrate!' The hinge seem'd to speak,
Dreadful as Dante's rima, or this stanza;
Or—but all words upon such themes are
weak:
A single shade's sufficient to entrance a Hero—for what is substance to a spirit?
Or how is't matter trembles to come near
it?

CXVII

The door flew wide, not swiftly,—but, as
fly
The sea-gulls, with a steady, sober
flight—
And then swung back; nor close—but stood awry,
Half letting in long shadows on the
light,
Which still in Juan's candlesticks burn'd
high,
For he had two, both tolerably bright,

And in the doorway, darkening darkness,
stood
The sable Friar in his solemn hood.

CXVIII

Don Juan shook, as erst he had been shaken
The night before; but being sick of shaking,
He first inclined to think he had been mistaken;
And then to be ashamed of such mistaking;
His own internal ghost began to awaken Within him, and to quell his corporal quaking—
Hinting that soul and body on the whole
Were odds against a disembodied soul.

CXIX

And then his dread grew wrath, and his wrath fierce,
And he arose, advanced—the shade
retreated;
But Juan, eager now the truth to pierce, Followed, his veins no longer cold, but heated,
Resolved to thrust the mystery carte and tierce,
At whatsoever risk of being defeated:
The ghost stopp'd, menaced, then retired,
until
He reach'd the ancient wall, then stood stone still.

CXX

Juan put forth one arm—Eternal powers'
It touch'd no soul, nor body, but the
wall,
On which the moonbeams fell in silvery
showers,
Chequer'd with all the tracery of the
hall;
He shudder'd, as no doubt the bravest
cowers
When he can't tell what 'tis that doth
appal.
How odd, a single hobgoblin's nonentity
Should cause more fear than a whole host's identity!

CXXI

But still the shade remain'd: the blue eyes
glared,
And rather variably for stony death;
Yet one thing rather good the grave had
spared,
The ghost had a remarkably sweet
breath:
A straggling curl show'd he had been fairhair'd;
A red lip, with two rows of pearls beneath Gleam'd forth, as through the casement' ivy shroud
The moon peep'd, just escaped from a grey cloud.

CXXII

And Juan, puzzled, but still curious, thrust

His other arm forth—Wonder upon
wonder!

It press'd upon a hard but glowing bust,
Which beat as if there was a warm heart under.

He found, as people on most trials must,
That he had made at first a silly blunder,

And that in his confusion he had caught

Only the wall, instead of what he sought.

CXXIII

The ghost, if ghost it were, seem'd a sweet
soul

As ever lurk'd beneath a holy hood:

A dimpled chin, a neck of ivory, stole

Forth into something much like flesh and blood;

Back fell the sable frock and dreary cowl,

And they reveal'd—alas! that e'er they should!

In full, voluptuous, but not o'ergrown
bulk,

The phantom of her frolic Grace—Fitz-Fulke!

NOTES

Page 2, col. 1.

‘ON THE DEATH OF A YOUNG LADY.’] The author claims the indulgence of the reader more for this piece than, perhaps, any other in the collection; but as it was written at an earlier period than the rest (being composed at the age of fourteen), and his first essay, he preferred submitting it to the indulgence of his friends in its present state, to making either addition or alteration.

‘On Marston.’] The battle of Marston Moor, where the adherents of Charles I. were defeated.

Page 3, col. 2.

‘With Rupert, ’gainst traitors contending.’] Son of the Elector Palatine, and nephew to Charles I. He afterwards commanded the fleet in the reign of Charles II.

Page 9, col. 1.

TO THE DUKE OF DORSET.] In looking over my papers to select a few additional poems for this second edition, I found the above lines, which I had totally forgotten, composed in the summer of 1805, a short time previous to my departure from Harrow. They were addressed to a young school-fellow of high rank, who had been my frequent companion in some rambles through the neighbouring country: however, he never saw the lines, and most probably never will. As, on a re-perusal, I found them not worse than some other pieces in the collection, I have now published them, for the first time, after a slight revision.

‘Bade thee obey, and gave me to command.’] At every public school the junior boys are completely subservient to the upper forms till they attain a seat in the higher classes. From this state of probation, very properly, no rank is exempt; but after a certain period, they command in turn those who succeed.

‘Though passive tutors, fearful to dispraise.’] Allow me to disclaim any personal allusions, even the most distant. I merely mention generally what is too often the weakness of preceptors.

‘Oh! could Le Sage’s demon’s gift.’] The Diable Boiteux of Le Sage, where Asmodeus, the demon, places Don Cleofas on an elevated situation, and unroofs the houses for inspection.

‘Who reads false quantities in Seale.’] Seale’s publication on Greek Metres displays considerable talent and ingenuity, but, as might be expected in so difficult a work, is not remarkable for accuracy.

Page 11, col. 1.

‘In barbarous Latin doom’d to wrangle.’] The Latin of the schools is of the canine species, and not very intelligible.

‘The square of the hypothenuse.’] The discovery of Pythagoras, that the square of the hypothenuse is equal to the squares of the other two sides of a right-angled triangle.

Page 11, col. 1.

‘A numerous crowd, array’d in white.’] On a saint’s day the students wear surplices in chapel.

‘I fancied that Mossop himself was outshone.’] Mossop, a contemporary of Garrick, famous for his performance of Zanga.

Page 12, col. 2.

‘Would twinkle dimly through their sphere.’]

‘Two of the fairest stars in all the heaven,
Having some business, do intreat her eyes
To twinkle in their spheres till they return.’

SHAKESPEARE.

‘Woman, thy vows are traced in sand.’] The last line is almost a literal translation from a Spanish proverb.

Page 13, col. 2.

‘And hurtling o’er thy lovely head.’] This word is used by Gray in his poem to the Fatal Sisters:—

‘Iron-sleet of arrowy shower
Hurries in the darken’d air.’

Page 14, col. 2.

‘In law an infant, and in years a boy.’] In law every person is an infant who has not attained the age of twenty-one.

‘To form the place of assignation.’] In the above little piece the author has been accused by some candid readers of introducing the name of a lady: from whom he was some hundred miles distant at the time this was written; and poor Juliet, who has slept so long in ‘the tomb of all the Capulets,’ has been converted, with a trifling alteration of her name, into an English damsel walking in a garden of their own creation, during the month of December, in a village where the author never passed a winter. Such has been the candour of some ingenious critics. He would advise these liberal commentators on taste and arbiters of decorum to read Shakespeare.

‘But curse my fate for ever after.’] Having heard that a very severe and indelicate censure has been passed on the above poem, I beg leave to reply in a quotation from an admired work, ‘Carr’s Stranger in France:—’As we were contemplating a painting on a large scale, in which, among other figures, is the uncovered whole length of a warrior, a prudish-looking lady, who seemed to have touched the age of desperation, after having attentively surveyed it through her glass, observed to her party, that there was a great deal of indecorum in that picture. Madam S. shrewdly whispered in my ear "that the indecorum was in the remark."

'OSCAR OF ALVA.'] The catastrophe of this tale was suggested by the story of 'Jeronyme and Lorenzo,' in the first volume of Schiller's 'Armenian, or the Ghost-Seer.' It also bears some resemblance to a scene in the third act of 'Macbeth.'

Page 21, col. 2.

'Creusa's style but wanting to the dame.'] The mother of Iulus, lost on the night when Troy was taken.

Page 24, col. 2.

'Ah! hapless dame! no sire bewails.'] Medea, who accompanied Jason to Corinth, was deserted by him for the daughter of Creon, king of that city. The chorus, from which this is taken, here addresses Medea; though a considerable liberty is taken with the original, by expanding the idea, as taken in some other parts of the translation.

Page 24, col. 2.

'Who ne'er unlocks with silver key.'] The original is 'Καθάρην ἀνοίξαντι κλεῖ ἥρα φρενῶν,' literally 'disclosing the bright key of the mind.'

Page 24, col. 2.

'MAGNUS his ample front sublime uprears.'] No reflection is here intended against the person mentioned under the name of Magnus. He is merely represented as performing an unavoidable function of his office. Indeed, such an attempt could only recoil upon myself; as that gentleman is now as much distinguished by his eloquence, and the dignified propriety with which he fills his situation, as he was in his younger days for wit and conviviality.

'Th' ATHENIAN's glowing style, or Tully's fire.'] Demosthenes.

'Yet prizing Bentley's, Brunck's, or Porson's note.'] The present Greek professor at Trinity College, Cambridge; a man whose powers of mind and writings may, perhaps, justify their preference.

Page 25, col. 2.

'Whether 'tis Pitt or Petty rules the hour.'] Since this was written, Lord Henry Petty [now Marquis of Lansdowne] has lost his place, and subsequently (I had almost said consequently) the honour of representing the University. A fact so glaring requires no comment.

Page 28, col. 1.

'Sweet scene of my youth! seat of Friendship and Truth.'] Harrow.

Page 29, col. 2.

'LACHIN Y GAIR.'] Lachin y Gair, or, as it is pronounced in the Erse, Loch na Garr, towers proudly pre-eminent in the Northern Highlands, near Invercauld. One of our modern tourists mentions it as the highest mountain, perhaps, in Great Britain. Be this as it may, it is certainly one of the most sublime and picturesque amongst our 'Caledonian Alps.' Its appearance is of a dusky hue, but the summit is the seat of eternal snows. Near Lachin y Gair I spent some of the early part of my life, the recollection of which has given birth to these stanzas.

'My cap was the bonnet, my cloak was the plaid.'] This word is erroneously pronounced plad: the proper pronunciation (according to the Scotch) is shown by the orthography.

Page 29, col. 2.

'Ill-starr'd, though brave, did no visions foreboding.'] I allude here to my maternal ancestors, 'the Gordons,' many of whom fought for the unfortunate Prince Charles, better known by the name of the Pretender. This branch was nearly allied by blood, as well as attachment, to the Stuarts. George, the second Earl of Huntley, married the Princess Annabella Stuart, daughter of James I. of Scotland. By her he left four sons: the third, Sir William Gordon, I have the honour to claim as one of my progenitors.

'Ah! were you destined to die at Culloden.'] Whether any perished in the battle of Culloden, I am not certain; but, as many fell in the insurrection, I have used the name of the principal action, 'pars pro toto.'

Page 29, col. 2.

'You rest with your clan in the caves of Braemar.'] A tract of the Highlands so called. There is also a Castle of Braemar.

Page 30, col. 1.

'A Pylades in every friend?'] It is hardly necessary to add, that Pylades was the companion of Orestes, and a partner in one of those friendships which, with those of Achilles and Patroclus, Nisus and Euryalus, Damon and Pythias, have been handed down to posterity as remarkable instances of attachments, which in all probability never existed beyond the imagination of the poet, or the page of an historian, or modern novelist.

Page 31, col. 1.

'ELEGY ON NEWSTEAD ABBEY.'] As one poem on this subject is already printed, the author had, originally, no intention of inserting the following. It is now added at the particular request of some friends.

Page 31, col. 1.

'Religion's shrine! repentant HENRY's pride!'] Henry II. founded Newstead soon after the murder of Thomas à Becket.

Page 31, col. 2.

'No mail-clad serfs, obedient to their lord.'] This word is used by Walter Scott, in his poem, 'The Wild Huntsman;' synonymous with vassal.

Page 31, col. 2.

'In grim array the crimson cross demand.'] The red cross was the badge of the Crusaders.

Page 31, col. 2.

'Soon as the gloaming spreads her waning shade.'] As 'gloaming,' the Scottish word for twilight, is far more poetical, and has been recommended by many eminent literary men, particularly by Dr. Moore in his Letters to Burns, I have ventured to use it on account of its harmony.

NOTES TO HOURS OF IDLENESS

Page 31, col. 2.

'Or matin orisons to Mary paid.'] The priory was dedicated to the Virgin.

Page 32, col. 1.

'Another HENRY the kind gift recalls.'] At the dissolution of the monasteries, Henry VIII. bestowed Newstead Abbey on Sir John Byron.

Page 32, col. 1.

'An abbey once, a regal fortress now.'] Newstead sustained a considerable siege in the war between Charles I. and his parliament.

Page 32, col. 1.

'Trembling she snatch'd him from th' unequal strife.'] Lord Byron and his brother Sir William held high commands in the royal army. The former was general-in-chief in Ireland, lieutenant of the Tower, and governor to James, Duke of York, afterwards the unhappy James II.; the latter had a principal share in many actions.

Page 32, col. 1.

'To lead the band where godlike FALKLAND fell.'] Lucius Cary, Lord Viscount Falkland, the most accomplished man of his age, was killed at the Battle of Newbury, charging in the ranks of Lord Byron's regiment of Cavalry.

Page 32, col. 2.

'Loathing the offering of so dark a death.'] This is an historical fact. A violent tempest occurred immediately subsequent to the death or internment of Cromwell, which occasioned many disputes between his partisans and the cavaliers: both interpreted the circumstance into divine interposition; but whether as approbation or condemnation, we leave to the casuists of that age to decide. I have made such use of the occurrence as suited the subject of my poem.

Page 33, col. 1.

'The legal ruler now resumes the helm.'] Charles II.

Page 35, col. 1.

'PROBUS, the pride of science, and the boast.'] Dr. Drury. This most able and excellent man retired from his situation in March, 1805, after having resided thirty-five years at Harrow; the last twenty as head-master; an office he held with equal honour to himself and advantage to the very extensive school over which he presided. Panegyric would here be superfluous; it would be useless to enumerate qualifications which were never doubted. A considerable contest took place between three rival candidates for his vacant chair: of this I can only say,

*Si mea cum vestris valuisse vota, Pelasgi?
Non foret ambiguus tanti certaminis hæres.*

Page 37, col. 2.

'As speakers each supports an equal name.'] This alludes to the public speeches delivered at the school where the author was educated.

Page 38, col. 2.

'And Love, without his pinion, smiled on Youth.'] 'L'Amitié est l'Amour sans ailes,' is a French proverb.

Page 38, col. 2.

ENTITLED 'THE COMMON LOT.'] Written by

James Montgomery, author of the 'Wanderer in Switzerland,' &c.

Page 38, col. 2.

'The hero rolls the tide of war.'] No particular hero is here alluded to. The exploits of Bayard, Nemours, Edward the Black Prince, and, in more modern times, the fame of Marlborough, Frederick the Great, Count Saxe, Charles of Sweden, &c., are familiar to every historical reader, but the exact places of their birth are known to a very small proportion of their admirers.

Page 40, col. 1.

'AN IMITATION OF MACPHERSON'S OSSIAN.'] It may be necessary to observe, that the story, though considerably varied in the catastrophe, is taken from 'Nisus and Euryalus,' of which episode a translation is already given in the present volume.

Page 41, col. 2.

'Tears of the storm.'] I fear Laing's late edition has completely overthrown every hope that Macpherson's Ossian might prove the translation of a series of poems complete in themselves; but, while the imposture is discovered, the merit of the work remains undisputed, though not without faults—particularly, in some parts, turgid and bombastical diction.—The present humble imitation will be pardoned by the admirers of the original as an attempt, however inferior, which evinces an attachment to their favourite author.

Page 42, col. 1.

'Seat of my youth! thy distant spire.'] Harrow.

Page 44, col. 2.

'The cumbrous pomp of Saxon pride.'] Sassenach or Saxon, a Gaelic word, signifying either Lowland or English.

Page 45, col. 1.

'To flee away, and be at rest.'] 'And I said, Oh that I had wings like a dove; for then would I fly away and be at rest.'—Psalms lv. 6. This verse also constitutes a part of the most beautiful anthem in our language.

Page 45, col. 1.

'And climb'd thy steep summit, oh Morven on snow!'] Morven, a lofty mountain in Aberdeenshire. 'Gormal of snow' is an expression frequently to be found in Ossian.

Page 45, col. 1.

'Or the mist of the tempest that gather'd below.'] This will not appear extraordinary to those who have been accustomed to the mountains. It is by no means uncommon, on attaining the top of Ben-e-vis, Ben-y-bourd, &c., to perceive, between the summit and the valley, clouds pouring down rain, and occasionally accompanied by lightning, while the spectator literally looks down upon the storm perfectly secure from its effects.

Page 45, col. 1.

'I breasted the billows of Dee's rushing tide.'] The Dee is a beautiful river, which rises near Maa Lodge, and falls into the sea at New Aberdeen.

Page 45, col. 2.

'I think of the rocks that o'ershadow Colbleen.'] Colbleen is a mountain near the verge of the Highlands, not far from the ruins of Dee Castle.

Page 46, col. 2.

'As void of wit and moral.'] These stanzas were written soon after the appearance of a severe critique in a northern review on a new publication of the British Anacreon.

Page 47, col. 1.

'I really will not fight them.'] A bard [Moore] (horresco referens) defied his reviewer [Jehirey] to mortal combat. If this example becomes prevalent, our periodical censors must be dipped in the river Styx: for what else can secure them from the numerous host of their enraged assailants?

Page 48, col. 1.

'Adieu, thou Hill! where early joy.'] Harrow.

Page 51, col. 2.

'ON REVISITING HARROW.'] Some years ago, when at Harrow, a friend of the author engraved on a particular spot the names of both, with a few additional words, as a memorial. Afterwards, on receiving some real or imagined injury, the author destroyed the frail record before he left Harrow. On revisiting the place in 1807, he wrote under it these stanzas.

'WRITTEN AFTER SWIMMING FROM SESTOS TO ABYDOS.'] On the 3rd of May, 1810, while the Salsette (Captain Bathurst) was lying in the Dardanelles, Lieutenant Ekenhead, of that frigate, and the writer of these rhymes, swam from the European shore to the Asiatic—by the by, from Abydos to Sestos would have been more correct. The whole distance, from the place whence we started to our landing on the other side, including the length we were carried by the current, was computed by those on board the frigate at upwards of four English miles, though the actual breadth is barely one. The rapidity of the current is such that no boat can row directly across, and it may, in some measure be estimated from the circumstance of the whole distance being accomplished by one of the parties, in an hour and five, and by the other in an hour and ten minutes. The water was extremely cold, from the melting of the mountain snows. About three weeks before, in April, we had made an attempt; but, having ridden all the way from the Troad the same morning, and the water being of an icy chillness, we found it necessary to postpone the completion till the frigate anchored below the castles, when we swam the straits, as just stated, entering a considerable way above the European, and landing below the Asiatic, fort. Chevalier says that a young Jew swam the same distance for his mistress; and Oliver mentions its having been done by a Neapolitan; but our consul, Tarragona, remembered neither of these circumstances, and tried to dissuade us from the attempt. A number of the Salsette's crew were known to have accomplished a greater distance; and the only thing that surprised me was that, as doubts had been entertained of the truth of Leander's story, no traveller had ever endeavoured to ascertain its practicability.

'Ζῶν μοῖ, σὺς ἀγαπᾷ.'] Romaic expression of tenderness: If I translate it, I shall affront the gentlemen, as it may seem that I supposed they could not; and if I do not, I may affront the ladies.

For fear of any misconstruction on the part of the latter, I shall do so, begging pardon of the learned. It means, 'My life, I love you!' which sounds very prettily in all languages, and is as much in fashion in Greece at this day as, Juvenal tells us, the two first words were amongst the Roman ladies, whose erotic expressions were all Hellenised.

'By all the token-flowers that tell.'] In the East (where ladies are not taught to write, lest they should scribble assignations) flowers, cinders, pebbles, &c. convey the sentiments of the parties by that universal deputy of Mercury—an old woman. A cinder says, 'I burn for thee;' a bunch of flowers tied with hair, 'Take me and fly;' but a pebble declares—what nothing else can.

Page 60, col. 1.

'Though I fly to Istambol.'] Constantinople.

Page 60, col. 2.

'Δεῦτε παῖδες τῶν Ἑλλήνων.'] The song Δεῦτε παῖδες, &c. was written by Riga, who perished in the attempt to revolutionise Greece. This translation is as literal as the author could make it in verse. It is of the same measure as that of the original.

Page 60, col. 2.

'And the seven-hill'd city seeking.'] Constantinople, 'Ἑπτάλοφος.'

Page 61, col. 2.

'Ωραῖα τῇ Χάρῃ, &c.'] The song from which this is taken is a great favourite with the young girls of Athens of all classes. Their manner of singing it is by verses in rotation, the whole number present joining in the chorus. I have heard it frequently at our 'χόροι,' in the winter of 1810–11. The air is plaintive and pretty.

'From soaring Southey down to grovelling Stott.'] Stott, better known in the 'Morning Post' by the name of Hafiz. This personage is at present the most profound explorer of the bathos. I remember, when the reigning family left Portugal, a special Ode of Master Stott's, beginning thus:—(Stott loquitur quoad Hibernia)—

'Princely offspring of Braganza,
Erin greets thee with a stanza,' &c.

Also a Sonnet to Rats, well worthy of the subject, and a most thundering Ode, commencing as follows:—

'Oh! for a Lay! loud as the surge
That lashes Lapland's sounding shore.'

Lord have mercy on us! the 'Lay of the Last Minstrel' was nothing to this.

Page 115, col. 2.

'Thus Lays of Minstrels—may they be the last!'] —See the 'Lay of the Last Minstrel,' passim. Never was any plan so incongruous and absurd as the groundwork of this production. The entrance of Thunder and Lightning, prologuising to Bayes' tragedy, unfortunately takes away the merit of originality from the dialogue between Messieurs the Spirits of Flood and Fell in the first canto. Then we have the amiable William of Deloraine, 'a stark moss-trooper,' videlicet, a happy compound of poacher, sheep-stealer, and highwayman. The propriety of his magical lady's injunction not to read can only be equalled by his candid acknowledgment of his independence of the trammels of spelling, although, to use his own elegant phrase, 'twas his neck-verse at Harribee,' i.e. the gallows. —The biography of Gilpin Horner, and the marvellous pedestrian page, who travelled twice as fast as his master's horse, without the aid of seven-leagued boots, are chefs-d'œuvre in the improvement of taste. For incident we have the invisible, but by no means sparing, box on the ear bestowed on the page, and the entrance of a knight and charger into the castle, under the very natural disguise of a wain of hay. Marmion, the hero of the latter romance, is exactly what William of Deloraine would have been, had he been able to read and write. The poem was manufactured for Messrs. Constable, Murray, and Miller, worshipful booksellers, in consideration of the receipt of a sum of money; and truly, considering the inspiration, it is a very creditable production. If Mr. Scott will write for hire, let him do his best for his paymasters, but not disgrace his genius, which is undoubtedly great, by a repetition of black-letter ballad imitations.

'And bid a long "good night to Marmion."'] 'Good night to Marmion'—the pathetic and also prophetic exclamation of Henry Blount, Esquire, on the death of honest Marmion.

Page 116, col. 1.

'The single wonder of a thousand years.'] As the Odyssey is so closely connected with the story of the Iliad, they may almost be classed as one grand historical poem. In alluding to Milton and Tasso, we consider the 'Paradise Lost,' and 'Giesusalemme Liberata,' as their standard efforts; since neither the 'Jerusalem Conquered' of the Italian, nor the 'Paradise Regained' of the English bard, obtained a proportionate celebrity to their former poems. Query: Which of Mr. Southey's will survive?

Page 116, col. 1.

'Next see tremendous Thalaba come on.'] 'Thalaba,' Mr. Southey's second poem, is written in open defiance of precedent and poetry. Mr. S. wished to produce something novel, and succeeded to a miracle. 'Joan of Arc' was marvellous enough, but 'Thalaba' was one of those poems 'which,' in the words of Porson, 'will be read when Homer and Virgil are forgotten, but—not ill then.'

Page 116, col. 2.

'Oh! Southey! Southey! cease thy varied song!'] We beg Mr. Southey's pardon: 'Madoc disdains the degrading title of epic.' See his preface. Why is epic degraded? and by whom? Certainly the late romancers of Masters Cottle, Laureat Pye, Ogilvy, Hole, and gentle Mistress Cowley, have not exalted the epic muse; but, as Mr. Southey's poem 'disdains the appellation,' allow us to ask—has he substituted anything better in its stead? or must he be content to rival Sir Richard Blackmore in the quantity as well as quality of his verse?

Page 116, col. 2.

'Thou wilt devote old women to the devil.'] See 'The Old Woman of Berkeley,' a ballad, by Mr. Southey, wherein an aged gentlewoman is carried away by Beelzebub, on a 'high-trotting horse.'

Page 116, col. 2.

"God help thee," Southey, and thy readers too.'] The last line, 'God help thee,' is an evident plagiarism from the Anti-jacobin to Mr. Southey, on his Dactyls.

'And quit his books, for fear of growing double.'] Lyrical Ballads, p. 4.—'The Tables Turned.' Stanza 1.

Or surely you'll grow double.'

Page 116, col. 2.

'And, like his bard, confounded night with day.'] Mr. W. in his preface labours hard to prove, that prose and verse are much the same; and certainly his precepts and practice are strictly conformable:—

'And thus to Betty's questions he Made answer, like a traveller bold,
The cock did crow, to-who, to-who,
And the sun did shine so cold,' &c. &c.,

'Hibernian Strangford! with thine eyes of blue.'] The reader, who may wish for an explanation of this, may refer to 'Strangford's Camoëns,' p. 127, note to p. 56, or to the last page of the Edinburgh Review of Strangford's Camoëns.

By dressing Camoëns in a suit of lace?'] It is also to be remarked, that the things given to the public as poems of Camoëns are no more to be found in the original Portuguese than in the Song of Solomon.

Page 117, col. 2.

'That luckless music never triumph'd there.'] Hayley's two most notorious verse productions are 'Triumphs of Temper,' and 'The Triumph of Music.' He has also written much comedy in rhyme, epistles, &c. &c. As he is rather an elegant writer of notes and biography, let us recommend Pope's advice to Wycherley to Mr. H's consideration, viz. 'to convert poetry into prose,' which may be easily done by taking away the final syllable of each couplet.

NOTES TO ENGLISH BARDS AND SCOTCH REVIEWERS

'Awake a louder and a loftier strain.'] 'Awake a louder,' &c., is the first line in Bowles's 'Spirit of Discovery;' a very spirited and pretty dwarf-epic. Among other exquisite lines we have the following

—'A kiss

Stole on the list'ning silence, never yet
Here heard; they trembled even as if the power,'
&c. &c.

That is, the woods of Madeira trembled to a kiss; very much astonished, as well they might be, at such a phenomenon.

Page 118, col. 1.

'The bard sighs forth a gentle episode.'] The episode above alluded to is the story of 'Robert à Machin' and 'Anna d' Arfet,' a pair of constant lovers, who performed the kiss above mentioned, that startled the woods of Madeira.

Page 118, col. 1.

'Consult Lord Fanny, and confide in Curll.'] Curll is one of the heroes of the Dunciad, and was a bookseller. Lord Fanny is the poetical name of Lord Hervey, author of 'Lines to the Imitator of Horace.'

Page 118, col. 1.

'And do from hate what Mallet did for hire.'] Lord Bolingbroke hired Mallet to traduce Pope after his decease, because the poet had retained some copies of a work by Lord Bolingbroke—the 'Patriot King,'—which that splendid but malignant genius had ordered to be destroyed.

'And link'd thee to the Dunciad for thy pains.'] See Bowles's late edition of Pope's works, for which he received three hundred pounds. Thus Mr. B. has experienced how much easier it is to profit by the reputation of another, than to elevate his own.

'Had Cottle still adorn'd the counter's side.'] Mr. Cottle, Amos, Joseph, I don't know which, but one or both, once sellers of books they did not write, and now writers of books they do not sell, have published a pair of epics—'Alfred,' (poor Alfred! Pye has been at him too!)—'Alfred,' and the 'Fall of Cambria.'

Page 118, col. 2.

'Dull Maurice all his granite weight of leaves.'] Mr. Maurice hath manufactured the component parts of a ponderous quarto, upon the beauties of 'Richmond Hill,' and the like:—it also takes in a charming view of Turnham Green, Hammersmith, Brentford, Old and New, and the parts adjacent.

Page 118, col. 2.

'May no rude hand disturb their early sleep!'] Poor Montgomery, though praised by every English Review, has been bitterly reviled by the Edinburgh. After all, the bard of Sheffield is a man of considerable genius. His 'Wanderer of Switzerland' is worth a thousand 'Lyrical Ballads,' and at least fifty 'degraded epics.'

Page 119, col. 1.

'Nor hunt the blood-hounds back to Arthur's seat?'] Arthur's Seat; the hill which overhangs Edinburgh.

Page 119, col. 1.

'When Little's leadless pistol met his eye.'] In 1806, Messrs. Jeffrey and Moore met at Chalk-Farm. The duel was prevented by the interference of the magistracy; and, on examination, the balls of the pistols were found to have evaporated. This incident gave occasion to much waggery in the daily prints.

Page 119, col. 2.

'The other half pursued its calm career.'] The Tweed here behaved with proper decorum; it would have been highly reprehensible in the English half of the river to have shown the smallest symptom of apprehension.

Page 119, col. 2.

'If Jeffrey died, except within her arms.'] This display of sympathy on the part of the Tolbooth (the principal prison in Edinburgh), which truly seems to have been most affected on this occasion, is much to be commended. It was to be apprehended, that the many unhappy criminals executed in the front might have rendered the edifice more callous. She is said to be of the softer sex, because her delicacy of feeling on this day was truly feminine, though, like most feminine impulses, perhaps a little selfish.

'The travell'd thane, Athenian Aberdeen.'] His lordship has been much abroad, is a member of the Athenian Society, and reviewer of 'Gell's Topography of Troy.'

'Herbert shall wield Thor's hammer, and sometimes.'] Mr. Herbert is a translator of Icelandic and other poetry. One of the principal pieces is a 'Song on the Recovery of Thor's Hammer:' the translation is a pleasant chant in the vulgar tongue, and endeth thus:—

'Instead of money and rings, I wot,
The hammer's bruises were her lot.
Thus Odin's son his hammer got.'

Page 119, col. 2.

'Smug Sydney too thy bitter page shall seek.'] The Rev. Sydney Smith, the reputed author of Peter Plymley's Letters, and sundry criticisms.

Page 119, col. 2.

'And classic Hallam, much renown'd for Greek.'] Mr. Hallam reviewed Payne Knight's 'Taste,' and was exceedingly severe on some Greek verses therein. It was not discovered that the lines were Pindar's till the press rendered it impossible to cancel the critique, which still stands an everlasting monument of Hallam's ingenuity.—Note added to second edition. The said Hallam is incensed because he is falsely accused, seeing that he never dined at Holland House. If this be true, I am sorry—not for having said so, but on his account, as I understand his lordship's feasts are preferable to his compositions. If he did not review Lord

Holland's performance, I am glad; because it must have been painful to read, and irksome to praise it. If Mr. Hallam will tell me who did review it, the real name shall find a place in the text; provided, nevertheless, the said name be of two orthodox musical syllables, and will come into the verse: till then, Hallam must stand for want of a better.

'And paltry Pillans shall traduce his friend.'] Pillans is a tutor at Eton.

'While gay Thalia's luckless votary, Lambe.'] The Hon. George Lambe reviewed 'Beresford's Miseries,' and is, moreover, author of a farce enacted with much applause at the Priory, Stanmore; and damned with great expedition at the late theatre, Covent Garden. It was entitled, 'Whistle for it.'

Page 120, col. 1.

'Beware lest blundering Brougham destroy the sale.'] Mr. Brougham, in No. XXV of the Edinburgh Review, throughout the article concerning Don Pedro de Cevallos, has displayed more politics than policy; many of the worthy burgesses of Edinburgh being so incensed at the infamous principles it evinces, as to have withdrawn their subscriptions.—Here followed in the first edition, —'The name of this personage is pronounced Broom in the south, but the truly northern and musical pronunciation is BROUGH-AM, in two syllables;' but for this, Lord B. substituted in the second edition:—'It seems that Mr. Brougham is not a Pict, as I supposed, but a Borderer, and his name is pronounced Broom from Trent to Tay:—so be it.'

Page 120, col. 1.

'Her son, and vanish'd in a Scottish mist.'] I ought to apologise to the worthy deities for introducing a new goddess with short petticoats to their notice: but, alas! what was to be done? I could not say Caledonia's genius, it being well known there is no such genius to be found from Clackmannan to Caithness; yet, without supernatural agency, how was Jeffrey to be saved? The national 'kelpies' are too unpoetical, and the 'brownies' and 'gude neighbours' (spirits of a good disposition) refused to extricate him. A goddess, therefore, has been called for the purpose; and great ought to be the gratitude of Jeffrey, seeing it is the only communication he ever held, or is likely to hold, with anything heavenly.

'This scents its pages, and that gilds its rear.'] See the colour of the back binding of the Edinburgh Review.

'Declare his landlord can at least translate!'] Lord Holland has translated some specimens of Lope de Vega, inserted in his life of the author. Both are bepraised by his disinterested guests.

Page 120, col. 2.

'Reforms each error, and refines the whole.'] Certain it is, her ladyship is suspected of having displayed her matchless wit in the Edinburgh Review. However that may be, we know from good authority that the manuscripts are submitted to her perusal—no doubt, for correction.

'Puns, and a prince within a barrel pent.'] In the melo-drama of Tekeli, that heroic prince is clapt into a barrel on the stage; a new asylum for distressed heroes.

'While Reynolds vents his "dammes!" "poohs!" and "zounds!"'] All these are favourite expressions of Mr. Reynolds, and prominent in his comedies, living and defunct.

Page 120, col. 2.

'A tragedy complete in all but words?'] Mr. T. Sheridan, the new manager of Drury Lane theatre, stripped the tragedy of Bonduca of the dialogue, and exhibited the scenes as the spectacle of Caracatus. Was this worthy of his sire? or of himself?

'Her flight to garnish Greenwood's gay designs.'] Mr. Greenwood is, we believe, scene-painter to Drury Lane theatre—as such, Mr. Skeffington is much indebted to him.

'In five facetious acts comes thundering on.'] Mr. [afterwards Sir Lumley] Skeffington is the illustrious author of the 'Sleeping Beauty;' and some comedies, particularly 'Maids and Bachelors;' Baccalaurii baculo magis quam lauro digni.

'And worship Catalani's pantaloons.'] Naldi and Catalani require little notice; for the visage of the one, and the salary of the other, will enable us long to recollect these amusing vagabonds. Besides, we are still black and blue from the squeeze on the first night of the lady's appearance in trousers.

'Of vice and folly, Greville and Argyle!'] To prevent any blunder, such as mistaking a street for a man, I beg leave to state that it is the institution, and not the Duke of that name, which is here alluded to. A gentleman, with whom I am slightly acquainted, lost in the Argyle Rooms several thousand pounds at backgammon. It is but justice to the manager in this instance to say, that some degree of misapprobation was manifested: but why are the implements of gaming allowed in a place devoted to the society of both sexes? A pleasant thing for the wives and daughters of those who are blest or cursed with such connexions, to hear the billiard-tables rattling in one room, and the dice in another! That this is the case I myself can testify, as a late unworthy member of an institution which materially affects the morals of the higher orders, while the lower may not even move to the sound of a tabor and fiddle without a chance of indictment for riotous behaviour.

'To live like Clodius, and like Falkland fall.'] I knew the late Lord Falkland well. On Sunday night I beheld him presiding at his own table, in all the honest pride of hospitality; on Wednesday morning, at three o'clock, I saw stretched before me all that remained of courage, feeling, and a host of passions. He was a gallant and successful officer: his faults were the faults of a sailor [those of dissipation]—as such, Britons will forgive them. He died like a brave man in a better cause; for had he fallen in like manner on the deck of the frigate to which he was just appointed, his last moments would have been held up by his countrymen as an example to succeeding heroes.

'From silly Hafiz up to simple Bowles.'] What would be the sentiments of the Persian Anacreon, Hafiz, could he rise from his splendid sepulchre at Sheeraz (where he reposes with Ferdousi and Sadi, the oriental Homer and Catullus), and behold his name assumed by one Stott of Dromore, the most impudent and execrable of literary poachers for the daily prints?

Page 122, col. 2.

'Lord, rhymester, petit-maitre, and pamphlet-cer!'] The Earl of Carlisle has lately published an eighteenpenny pamphlet on the state of the stage, and offers his plan for building a new theatre. It is to be hoped his lordship will be permitted to bring forward anything for the stage—except his own tragedies.

Lord Carlisle's works, most resplendently bound, form a conspicuous ornament to his bookshelves:—

'The rest is all but leather and prunella.'

'Leave wondering comprehension far behind.']

This lovely little Jessica, the daughter of the noted Jew King, seems to be a follower of the Della Crusca school, and has published two volumes of very respectable absurdities in rhyme, as times go; besides sundry novels in the style of the first edition of the Monk.

'Recall the pleasing memory of the past.'] It would be superfluous to recall to the mind of the reader the authors of 'The Pleasures of Memory' and 'The Pleasures of Hope,' the most beautiful didactic poems in our language, if we except Pope's 'Essay on Man;' but so many poetasters have started up, that even the names of Campbell and Rogers are become strange.

'Unhappy White! while life was in its spring.'] Henry Kirke White died at Cambridge, in October, 1806, in consequence of too much exertion in the pursuit of studies that would have matured a mind which disease and poverty could not impair, and which death itself destroyed rather than subdued. His poems abound in such beauties as must impress the reader with the liveliest regret that so short a period was allotted to talents which would have dignified even the sacred functions he was destined to assume.

'Wright! 'twas thy happy lot at once to view.'] Walter Rodwell Wright, late consul-general for the Seven Islands, is author of a very beautiful poem, just published: it is entitled 'Horæ Ionicae,' and is descriptive of the isles and the adjacent coast of Greece.

'And you, associate bards! who snatch'd to light.'] The translators of the Anthology, Bland and Merivale, have since published separate poems, which evince genius that only requires opportunity to attain eminence.

'False glare attracts, but more offends the eye.'] The neglect of the 'Botanic Garden' is some proof of returning taste. The scenery is its sole recommendation.

'And thou, too, Scott! resign to minstrels rude.] By the bye, I hope that in Mr. Scott's next poem, his hero or heroine will be less addicted to 'Gramarye,' and more to grammar, than the Lady of the Lay and her bravo, William of Deloraine.

'Let Stott, Carlisle, Matilda, and the rest.'] It may be asked, why I have censured the Earl of Carlisle, my guardian and relative, to whom I dedicated a volume of puerile poems a few years ago?—The guardianship was nominal, at least as far as I have been able to discover; the relationship I cannot help, and am very sorry for it; but as his lordship seemed to forget it on a very essential occasion to me, I shall not burden my memory with the recollection. I do not think that personal differences sanction the unjust condemnation of a brother scribbler; but I see no reason why they should act as a preventive, when the author, noble or ignoble, has, for a series of years, beguiled a 'discerning public' (as the advertisements have it) with divers reams of most orthodox, imperial nonsense. Besides, I do not step aside to vituperate the earl: no—his works come fairly in review with those of other patrician literati. If, before I escaped from my teens, I said anything in favour of his lordship's paper books, it was in the way of dutiful dedication, and more from the advice of others than my own judgment, and I seize the first opportunity of pronouncing my sincere recantation. I have heard that some persons conceive me to be under obligations to Lord Carlisle: if so, I shall be most particularly happy to learn what they are, and when conferred, that they may be duly appreciated and publicly acknowledged. What I have humbly advanced as an opinion on his printed things, I am prepared to support, if necessary, by quotations from elegies, eulogies, odes, episodes, and certain facetious and dainty tragedies bearing his name and mark:—

'What can ennoble knaves, or fools, or cowards?
Alas! not all the blood of all the Howards.'

So says Pope. Amen!

Page 125, col. 2.

'Requires no sacred theme to bid us list.'] The 'Games of Hoyle,' well known to the votaries of whist, chess, &c., are not to be superseded by the vagaries of his poetical namesake, whose poem comprised, as expressly stated in the advertisement, all the 'plagues of Egypt.'

'Himself a living libel on mankind.'] This person, who has lately betrayed the most rabid symptoms of confirmed authorship, is writer of a poem denominated the 'Art of Pleasing,' as 'lucus a non lucendo,' containing little pleasantry and less poetry. He also acts as monthly stipendiary and collector of calumnies for the 'Satirist.' If this unfortunate young man would exchange the magazines for the mathematics, and endeavour to take a decent degree in his university, it might eventually prove more serviceable than his present salary.

'Oh! dark asylum of a Vandal race!'] 'Into Cambridgeshire the Emperor Probus transported a considerable body of Vandals.'—Gibbon's Decline and Fall, vol. ii. p. 83. There is no reason to doubt the truth of this assertion; the breed is still in high perfection.

'So lost to Phœbus, that nor Hodgson's verse.'] This gentleman's name requires no praise: the man who in translation displays unquestionable genius may be well expected to excel in original composition, of which, it is to be hoped, we shall soon see a splendid specimen.

'Gell.'] Mr. Gell's Topography of Troy and Ithaca cannot fail to insure the approbation of every man possessed of classical taste, as well for the information Mr. Gell conveys to the mind of the reader, as for the ability and research the respective works display.

'Or low Dubost—as once the world has seen.']—In an English newspaper, which finds its way abroad wherever there are Englishmen, I read an account of this dirty dauber's caricature of Mr. H— as a 'beast,' and the consequent action, &c. The circumstance is, probably, too well known to require further comment.

'But coats must claim another artisan.'] Mere common mortals were commonly content with one tailor and with one bill, but the more particular gentlemen found it impossible to confide their lower garments to the makers of their body clothes. I speak of the beginning of 1809: what reform may have since taken place I neither know, nor desire to know.

'As Pitt has furnish'd us a word or two.'] Mr. Pitt was liberal in his additions to our parliamentary tongue; as may be seen in many publications, particularly the Edinburgh Review.

Page 129, col. 2.

'True, some decay, yet not a few revive.'] Old ballads, old plays, and old women's stories, are at present in as much request as old wine or new speeches. In fact, this is the millennium of black letter; thanks to our Hebers, Webers, and Scotts!

'You doubt—see Dryden, Pope, St. Patrick's dean,'] 'Mac Flecknoe,' the 'Dunciad,' and all Swift's lampooning ballads. Whatever their other works may be, these originated in personal feelings, and angry retort on unworthy rivals; and though the ability of these satires elevates the poetical, their poignancy detracts from the personal character of the writers.

'Difficile est proprie communia dicere: tuque.'] Mde. Dacier, Mde. de Sévigné, Boileau, and others, have left their dispute on the meaning of this passage in a tract considerably longer than the poem of Horace. It is printed at the close of the eleventh volume of Madame de Sévigné's Letters, edited by Grouvelle, Paris, 1806. Presuming that all who can construe may venture an opinion on such subjects, particularly as so many who can not have taken the same liberty, I should have held my 'farthing candle' as awkwardly as another, had not my respect for the wits of Louis the Fourteenth's Augustan siècle induced me to subjoin these illustrious authorities. 1st, Boileau: 'Il est difficile de traiter des sujets qui sont à la portée de tout le monde d'une manière qui vous les rende propres, ce qui s'appelle s'approprier un sujet par le tour qu'on y donne.' 2ndly, Batteux: 'Mais il est bien difficile de donner des traits propres et individuels aux êtres purement possibles.' 3rdly, Dacier: 'Il est difficile de traiter convenablement ces caractères que tout le monde peut inventer.' Mde. de Sévigné's opinion and translation, consisting of some thirty pages, I omit, particularly as M. Grouvelle observes, 'La chose est bien remarquable, aucune de ces diverses interprétations ne paraît être la véritable.' But, by way of comfort, it seems, fifty years afterwards, 'Le lumineux Dumasais' made his appearance, to set Horace on his legs again, 'dissiper tous les nuages, et concilier tous les dissentimens; and some fifty years hence, somebody, still more luminous, will doubtless start up and demolish Dumasais and his system on this weighty affair, as if he were no better than Ptolemy and Tycho, or his comments of no more consequence than astronomical calculations on the present comet. I am happy to say, 'la longueur de la dissertation' of M. D. prevents M. G. from saying any more on the matter. A better poet than Boileau, and at least as good a scholar as Sévigné, has said,

'A little learning is a dangerous thing.' And by this comparison of comments, it may be perceived how a good deal may be rendered as perilous to the proprietors.

'Beware—for God's sake, don't begin like Bowles!'] About two years ago a young man, named Townsend, was announced by Mr. Cumberland, in a review (since deceased) as being engaged in an epic poem to be entitled 'Armageddon.' The plan and specimen promise much; but I hope neither to offend Mr. Townsend, nor his friends, by recommending to his attention the lines of Horace to which these rhymes allude. If Mr. Townsend succeeds in his undertaking, as there is reason to hope, how much will the world be indebted to Mr. Cumberland for bringing him before the public! But, till that eventful day arrives, it may be doubted whether the premature display of his plan (sublime as the ideas confessedly are) has not,—by raising expectations too high, or diminishing curiosity, by developing his argument,—rather incurred the hazard of injuring Mr. Townsend's future prospects. Mr. Cumberland (whose talents I shall not depreciate by the humble tribute of my praise) and Mr. Townsend must not suppose me actuated by unworthy motives in this suggestion. I wish the author all the success he can wish himself, and shall be truly happy to see epic poetry weighed up from the bathos where it lies sunken with Southey, Cottle, Cowley (Mrs. or Abraham), Ogilvy, Wilkie, Pye, and all the 'dull of past and present days.' Even if he is not a Milton, he may be better than Blackmore; if not a Homer, an Antimachus. I should deem myself presumptuous, as a young man, in offering advice, were it not addressed to one still younger. Mr. Townsend has the greatest difficulties to encounter: but in conquering them he will find employment; in having conquered them, his reward. I know too well 'the scribbler's scoff, the critic's contumely;' and I am afraid time will teach Mr. Townsend to know them better. Those who succeed, and those who do not, must bear this alike, and it is hard to say which have most of it. I trust that Mr. Townsend's share will be from envy; he will soon know mankind well enough not to attribute this expression to malice.

'O'er Virgil's devilish verses and his own.'] Harvey, the circulator of the circulation of the blood, used to fling away Virgil in his ecstacy of admiration and say, 'the book had a devil.' Now, such a character as I am copying would probably fling it away also, but rather wish that the devil had the book; not from dislike to the poet, but a well-founded horror of hexameters. Indeed, the public school penance of 'Long and Short' is enough to beget an antipathy to poetry for the residue of a man's life, and, perhaps, so far may be an advantage.

'Unlucky Tavell! doom'd to daily cares.'] 'Infandum, regina, jubes renovare dolorem.' I dare say Mr. Tavell (to whom I mean no affront) will understand me; and it is no matter whether any one else does or no.—To the above events, 'quæque ipse miserrima vidi, et beatum pars magna fui,' all times and terms bear testimony.

'Whose postscripts prate of dyeing "heroines blue"?' In the postscript to the 'Castle Spectre,' Mr. Lewis tells us, that though blacks were unknown in England at the period of his action, yet he has made the anachronism to set off the scene: and if he could have produced the effect 'by making his heroine blue,'—I quote him—'blue he would have made her!'

'Ere scenes were play'd by many a reverend clerk.'] 'The first theatrical representations, entitled "Mysteries and Moralities," were generally enacted at Christmas, by monks (as the only persons who could read), and latterly by the clergy and students of the universities. The dramatic personæ were usually Adam, Pater Cælestis, Faith, Vice,' &c. &c.—See Warton's History of English Poetry.

Page 133, col. 2.

'Tis strange Benvolio suffers such a show.'] Benvolio does not bet: but every man who maintains race-horses is a promoter of all the concomitant evils of the turf. Avoiding to bet is a little pharisaical. Is it an exculpation? I think not. I never yet heard a bawd praised for chastity, because she herself did not commit fornication.

Page 134, col. 1.

'But find in thine, like pagan Plato's bed.'] Under Plato's pillow a volume of the Mimes of Sophron was found the day he died.—Vide Barthélemi, De Pauw, or Diogenes Laertius, if agreeable. De Pauw calls it a jest-book. Cumberland, in his Observer, terms it moral, like the sayings of Publius Syrus.

'And double-barrels (damn them!) miss their mark.'] As Mr. Pope took the liberty of damning Homer, to whom he was under great obligations—'And Homer (damn him!) calls'—it may be presumed that anybody or anything may be damned in verse by poetical license; and, in case of accident, I beg leave to plead so illustrious a precedent.

'Let Havard's fate o'ertake him, who, for once.'] For the story of Billy Havard's tragedy, see 'Davies's Life of Garrick.' I believe it is 'Regulus,' or 'Charles the First.' The moment it was known to be his the theatre thinned, and the bookseller refused to give the customary sum for the copyright.

'Or mild Eclectics, when some, worse than Turks.'] To the Eclectic or Christian Reviewers I have to return thanks for the fervour of that charity which, in 1809, induced them to express a hope that a thing then published by me might lead to certain consequences, which, although natural enough, surely came but rashly from reverend lips. I refer them to their own pages, where they congratulated themselves on the prospect of a tilt between Mr. Jeffrey and myself, from which some great good was to accrue, provided one or both were knocked on the head. Having survived two years and a half those 'Elegies' which they were kindly preparing to review, I have no peculiar gusto to give them 'so joyful a trouble,' except indeed 'upon compulsion, Hal;' but if, as David says in the 'Rivals,' it should come to 'bloody sword and gun fighting,' we 'won't run, will we, Sir Lucius?' I do not know what I had done to these Eclectic gentlemen: my works are their lawful perquisite, to be hewn in pieces like Agag, if it seem meet unto them: but why they should be in such a hurry to kill off their author, I am ignorant. 'The race is not always to the swift, nor the battle to the strong:' and now, as these Christians have 'smote me on one cheek, I hold them up the other; and, in return for their good wishes, give them an opportunity of repeating them. Had any other set of men expressed such sentiments, I should have smiled, and left them to the 'recording angel;' but from the pharisees of Christianity decency might be expected. I can assure these brethren, that, publican and sinner as I am, I would not have treated 'mine enemy's dog thus.' To show them the superiority of my brotherly love, if ever the Reverend Messrs. Simeon or Ramsden should be engaged in such a conflict as that in which they requested me to fall, I hope they may escape with being 'winged' only, and that Heavyside may be at hand to extract the ball.

'And hark 'ye, Southey! pray—but don't be vex'd.'] Mr. Southey has lately tied another canister to his tail in the 'Curse of Kehama,' mangle the neglect of Madoc, &c., and has in one instance had a wonderful effect. A literary friend of mine, walking out one lovely evening last summer, on the eleventh bridge of the Paddington canal, was alarmed by the cry of 'one in jeopardy:' he rushed along, collected a body of Irish haymakers (sipping on butter-milk in an adjacent paddock), procured three rakes, one eel-spear, and a landing-net, and at last (horresco referens) pulled out—his own publisher. The unfortunate man was gone for ever, and so was a large quarto wherewith he had taken the leap, which proved, on inquiry, to have been Mr. Southey's last work. Its 'alacrity of sinking' was so great, that it has never since been heard of; though some maintain that it is at this moment concealed at Alderman Birch's pastry premises, Cornhill. Be this as it may, the coroner's inquest brought in a verdict of 'Felo de bibliopolâ' against a 'quarto unknown;' and circumstantial evidence being since strong against the 'Curse of Kehama' (of which the above words are an exact description), it will be tried by its peers next session, in Grub-street—Arthur, Alfred, Davideis, Richard Cœur de Lion, Exodus Exodia, Epigoniad, Calvary, Fall of Cambria, Siege of Acre, Don Roderick, and Tom Thumb the Great, are the names of the twelve jurors. The judges are Pye, Bowles, and the bellman of St. Sepulchre's. The same advocates, pro and con, will be employed as are now engaged in Sir F. Burdett's celebrated cause in the Scotch courts. The public anxiously await the result, and all live publishers will be subpoenaed as witnesses.—But Mr. Southey has published the 'Curse of Kehama,'—an inviting title to quibblers. By-the-by, it is a good deal beneath Scott and Campbell, and not much above Southey, to allow the booby Ballantyne to entitle them, in the Edinburgh Annual Register (of which, by-the-by, Southey is editor), 'the grand poetical triumvirate of the day.' But, on second thoughts, it can be no great degree of praise to be the one-eyed leaders of the blind, though they might as well keep to themselves 'Scott's thirty thousand copies sold,' which must sadly discomfit poor Southey's unsaleables. Poor Southey, it should seem, is the 'Lepidus' of this poetical triumvirate. I am only surprised to see him in such good company.

'Such things, we know, are neither rich nor rare, But wonder how the devil he came there.' The trio are well defined in the sixth proposition of Euclid:—'Because, in the triangles D B C, A C B, D B is equal to A C, and B C common to both; the two sides D B, B C, are equal to the two A C, C B, each to each, and the angle D B C is equal to the angle A C B: therefore, the base D C is equal to the base A B, and the triangle D B C (Mr. Southey) is equal to the triangle A C B, the less to the greater, which is absurd,' &c.—The editor of the Edinburgh Register will find the rest of the theorem hard by his stabling; he has only to cross the river; 'tis the first turnpike t'other side 'Pons Asinorum.'

'Though "Madoc," with "Pucelle," instead of punk.'] Voltaire's 'Pucelle' is not quite so immaculate as Mr. Southey's 'Joan of Arc,' and yet I am afraid the Frenchman has both more truth and poetry too on his side—(they rarely go together)—than our patriotic minstrel, whose first essay was in praise of a fanatical French strumpet, whose title of witch would be correct with the change of the first letter.

'The cobbler-laureats.'] I beg Nathaniel's pardon: he is not a cobbler; it is a tailor, but begged Capel Loftt to sink the profession in his preface to two pair of panta—psa!—of cantos, which he wished the public to try on; but the sieve of a patron let it out, and so far saved the expense of an advertisement to his country customers.—Merry's 'Moorfields whine' was nothing to all this. The 'Della Crusicans' were people of some education, and no profession; but these Arcadians ('Arcades ambo'—bumpkins both) send out their native nonsense without the smallest alloy, and leave all the shoes and smallclothes in the parish unrepaired, to patch up Elegies on Enclosures, and Poems to Gunpowder. Sitting on a shopboard, they describe the fields of battle, when the only blood they ever saw was shed from the finger; and an 'Essay on War' is produced by the ninth part of a 'poet.'

* This Latin has sorely puzzled the University of Edinburgh. Ballantyne said it meant the 'Bridge of Berwick,' but Southey claimed it as half English; Scott swore it was the 'Brig o' Stirling;' he had just passed two king Jameses and a dozen Douglasses over it. At last it was decided by Jeffrey that it meant nothing more nor less than the 'counter of Archy Constable's shop.'

'And own that nine such poets made a Tate.'
Did Nathan ever read that line of Pope? and if he did, why not take it as his motto?

'Sing to Capel Loffit!'] This well-meaning gentleman has spoiled some excellent shoemakers, and been accessory to the poetical undoing of many of the industrious poor. Nathaniel Bloomfield and his brother Bobby have set all Somersetshire singing; nor has the malady confined itself to one county. Pratt too (who once was wiser) has caught the contagion of patronage, and decoyed a poor fellow named Blackett into poetry; but he died during the operation, leaving one child and two volumes of 'Remains' utterly destitute. The girl, if she don't take a poetical twist, and come forth as a shoe-making Sappho, may do well; but the 'tragedies' are as rickety as if they had been the offspring of an Earl or a Seatonian prize poet. The patrons of this poor lad are certainly answerable for his end; and it ought to be an indictable offence. But this is the least they have done: for, by a refinement of barbarity, they have made the (late) man posthumously ridiculous, by printing what he would have had sense enough never to print himself. Certes these rakers of 'Remains' come under the statute against 'resurrection men.' What does it signify whether a poor dear dead dunce is to be stuck up in Surgeons' or in Stationers' Hall? Is it so bad to unearth his bones as his blunders? Is it not better to gibbet his body on a heath, than his soul in an octavo? 'We know what we are, but we know not what we may be;' and it is to be hoped we never shall know, if a man who has passed through life with a sort of éclat is to find himself a mountebank on the other side of Styx, and made, like poor Blackett, the laughing-stock of purgatory. The plea of publication is to provide for the child; now, might not some of this 'Sutor ultra Crepidam's' friends and seducers have done a decent action without inveigling Pratt into biography? And then his inscription split into so many modicums!—'To the Duchess of So-much, the Right Hon. So-and-So, and Mrs. and Miss Somebody, these volumes are,' &c. &c.—why, this is doling out the 'soft milk of dedication' in gills,—there is but a quart, and he divides it among a dozen. Why, Pratt, hadst thou not a puff left? Dost thou think six families of distinction can share this in quiet? There is a child, a book, and a dedication: send the girl to her grace, the volumes to the grocer, and the dedication to the devil.

'There's plenty of the sort.'—Here will Mr. Gifford allow me to introduce once more to his notice the sole survivor, the 'ultimus Romanorum,' the last of the Cruscanti—'Edwin' the 'profound,' by our Lady of Punishment! here he is, as lively as in the days of 'well said Baviad the Correct.' I thought Fitzgerald had been the tail of poesy; but, alas! he is only the penultimate.

A FAMILIAR EPISTLE TO THE EDITOR OF THE MORNING CHRONICLE.

'What reams of paper, floods of ink,'
Do some men spoil, who never think!
And so perhaps you 'll say of me,
In which your readers may agree.

Still I write on, and tell you why;
Nothing's so bad, you can't deny,
But may instruct or entertain
Without the risk of giving pain, &c. &c.

ON SOME MODERN QUACKS AND REFORMERS.

In tracing of the human mind
Through all its various courses,
Though strange, 'tis true, we often find
It knows not its resources:
And men through life assume a part
For which no talents they possess,
Yet wonder that, with all their art,
They meet no better with success, &c. &c.

'As yawning waiters fly.'] And the 'waiters' are the only fortunate people who can 'fly' from them; all the rest, viz. the sad subscribers to the 'Literary Fund,' being compelled, by courtesy, to sit out the recitation without a hope of exclaiming, 'Sic' (that is, by choking Fitz. with bad wine, or worse poetry) 'me servavit Apollo!'

'"To die like Cato," leapt into the Thames!'
On his table were found these words: 'What Cato did, and Addison approved, cannot be wrong.' But Addison did not 'approve;' and if he had, it would not have mended the matter. He had invited his daughter on the same water-party; but Miss Budgell, by some accident, escaped this last paternal attention. Thus fell the sycophant of 'Atticus,' and the enemy of Pope.

'Dosed with vile drams on Sunday ne was found.'] If 'dosed with,' &c. be censured as low, I beg leave to refer to the original for something still lower; and if any reader will translate 'Minxerit in patrios cineres,' &c. into a decent couplet, I will insert said couplet in lieu of the present.

'On Hounslow's heath to rival Wellesley's fame.'] To rival Lord Wellesley's, or his nephew's, as the reader pleases!—the one gained a pretty woman, whom he deserved, by fighting for, and the other has been fighting in the Peninsula many a long day, 'by Shrewsbury clock,' without gaining anything in that country but the title of 'the Great Lord,' and 'the Lord;' which savours of profanation, having been hitherto applied only to that Being to whom 'Te Deums' for carnage are the rankest blasphemy.—It is to be presumed the general will one day return to his Sabine farm: there

'To tame the genius of the stubborn plain,
Almost as quickly as he conquer'd Spain!'

The Lord Peterborough conquered continents in a summer; we do more—we contrive both to conquer and lose them in a shorter season. If the 'Great Lord's' Cincinnatian progress in agriculture be no speedier than the proportional average of time in Pope's couplet, it will, according to the farmer's proverb, be 'ploughing with dogs.'

By-the-by—one of this illustrious person's new titles is forgotten—it is, however, worth remembering—'Salvador del mundo!' credite, posteri! If this be the appellation annexed by the inhabitants of the Peninsula to the name of a man who has not yet saved them—query—are they worth saving, even in this world? for, according to the mildest modifications of any Christian creed, those three words make the odds much against them in the next—'Saviour of the world,' quotha!—it were to be wished that he, or any one else, could save a corner of it—his country. Yet this stupid misnomer, although it shows the near connexion between superstition and impiety, so far has its use, that it proves there can be little to dread from those Catholics (inquisitorial Catholics too) who can confer such an appellation on a Protestant. I suppose next year he will be entitled the 'Virgin Mary;' if so, Lord George Gordon himself would have nothing to object to such liberal bastards of our Lady of Babylon.

'While unburnt Moscow yet had news to send.'] The patriotic arson of our amiable allies cannot be sufficiently commended—nor subscribed for. Amongst other details omitted in the various despatches of our eloquent ambassador, he did not state (being too much occupied with the exploits of Colonel C——, in swimming rivers frozen, and galloping over roads impassable) that one entire province perished by famine in the most melancholy manner, as follows:—In General Rostopchin's consummate conflagration, the consumption of tallow and train oil was so great, that the market was inadequate to the demand; and thus one hundred and thirty-three thousand persons were starved to death, by being reduced to wholesome diet! The lamplighters of London have since subscribed a pint (of oil) a piece, and the tallow-chandlers have unanimously voted a quantity of best moulds (four to the pound), to the relief of the surviving Scythians;—the scarcity will soon, by such exertions, and a proper attention to the quality rather than the quantity of provision, be totally alleviated. It is said, in return, that the untouched Ukraine has subscribed sixty thousand beeves for a day's meal to our suffering manufacturers.

'Goats in their visage, women in their shape.'] It cannot be complained now, as in the Lady Baussière's time, of the 'Sieur de la Croix,' that there be 'no whiskers;' but how far these are indications of valour in the field, or elsewhere, may still be questionable. Much may be, and hath been, avouched on both sides. In the olden time philosophers had whiskers, and soldiers none—Scipio himself was shaven—Hannibal thought his one eye handsome enough without a beard; but Adrian, the emperor, wore a beard (having warts on his chin, which neither the Empress Sabina nor even the courtiers could abide)—Turenne had whiskers, Marlborough none—Buonaparte is unwhiskered, the Regent whiskered; 'argal' greatness of mind and whiskers may or may not go together; but certainly the different occurrences, since the growth of the last mentioned, go further in behalf of whiskers than the anathema of Anselm did against long hair in the reign of Henry I.—Formerly red was a favourite colour. Monsieur C., are you related to that Chateaubriand who—who—who has written something?' (écrit quelque chose!) It is said that the author of Atala repented him for a moment of his legitimacy.

'Taffeta. Now for a wager—What coloured beard comes next by the window?

There is 'nothing new under the sun;' but red, then a favourite, has now subsided into favourite's colour.

'The court, the Regent, like herself were new.'] An anachronism—Waltz and the battle of Austerlitz are before said to have opened the ball together; the bard means (if he means anything), Waltz was not so much in vogue till the Regent attained the acmé of his popularity. Waltz, the comet, whiskers, and the new government, illuminated heaven and earth, in all their glory, much about the same time: of these the comet only has disappeared; the other three continue to astonish us still.—Printer's Devil.

'Mrs. Ford. What have you to do whither they bear it?—you were best meddle with buck-washing.'

'So saith the muse: my —, what say you?'] The gentle, or ferocious, reader may fill up the blank as he pleases—there are several dissyllabic names at his service (being already in the Regent's); it would not be fair to back any peculiar initial against the alphabet, as every month will add to the list now entered for the sweepstakes;—a distinguished consonant is said to be the favourite, much against the wishes of the knowing ones.

Page 149, col. 1.

'That spot where hearts were once supposed to be.'] 'We have changed all that,' says the Mock Doctor—'tis all gone—Asmodeus knows where. After all, it is of no great importance how women's hearts are disposed of; they have nature's privilege to distribute them as absurdly as possible. But there are also some men with hearts so thoroughly bad, as to remind us of those phenomena often mentioned in natural history; viz. a mass of solid stone—only to be opened by force—and when divided, you discover a toad in the centre, lively, and with the reputation of being venomous.

'Yes! sigh'd o'er Delphi's long deserted shrine.'] The little village of Castri stands partly on the site of Delphi. Along the path of the mountain, from Chryso, are the remains of sepulchres hewn in and from the rock:—"One," said the guide, 'of a king who broke his neck hunting.' His majesty had certainly chosen the fittest spot for such an achievement. A little above Castri is a cave, supposed the Pythian, of immense depth; the upper part of it is paved, and now a cowhouse. On the other side of Castri stands a Greek monastery; some way above which is the cleft in the rock, with a range of caverns difficult of ascent, and apparently leading to the interior of the mountain; probably to the Corycian Cavern mentioned by Pausanias. From this part descend the fountain and the 'Dews of Castalie.'

'And rest ye at "Our Lady's house of woe."'] The convent of 'Our Lady of Punishment,' Nossa Senhora de Pena, on the summit of the rock. Below, at some distance, is the Cork Convent, where St. Honorius dug his den, over which is his epitaph. From the hills, the sea adds to the beauty of the view.—Note to 1st Edition. Since the publication of this poem, I have been informed [by Walter Scott] of the misapprehension of the term Nossa Senhora de Pena. It was owing to the want of the tilde or mark over the ñ, which alters the signification of the word; with it, Peña signifies a rock; without it, Pena has the sense I adopted. I do not think it necessary to alter the passage; as though the common acceptation affixed to it is 'Our Lady of the Rock,' I may well assume the other sense from the severities practised there.—Note to 2nd Edition.

'Throughout this purple land, where law secures not life.'] It is a well-known fact, that in the year 1809, the assassinations in the streets of Lisbon and its vicinity were not confined by the Portuguese to their countrymen; but that Englishmen were daily butchered: and so far from redress being obtained, we were requested not to interfere if we perceived any compatriot defending himself against his allies. I was once stopped in the way to the theatre at eight o'clock in the evening, when the streets were not more empty than they generally are at that hour, opposite to an open shop, and in a carriage with a friend: had we not fortunately been armed, I have not the least doubt that we should have 'adorned a tale' instead of telling one.

'Twixt him and Lusian slave, the lowest of the low.'] As I found the Portuguese, so I have charac-

He has, indeed, done wonders: he has, perhaps, changed the character of a nation, reconciled rival superstitions, and baffled an enemy who never retreated before his predecessors.—1812.

'No! as he speeds, he chants "Vivá el Rey!"'] 'Vivá el Rey Fernando!' Long live King Ferdinand! is the chorus of most of the Spanish patriotic songs. They are chiefly in dispraise of the old King Charles, the Queen, and the Prince of Peace. I have heard many of them: some of the airs are beautiful. Godoy, the Príncipe de la Paz, of an ancient but decayed family, was born at Badajoz, on the frontiers of Portugal, and was originally in the ranks of the Spanish guards; till his person attracted the queen's eyes, and raised him to the dukedom of Alcudia, &c. &c. It is to this man that the Spaniards universally impute the ruin of their country.

I had known him ten years, the better half of his life, and the happiest part of mine. In the short space of one month I have lost her who gave me being, and most of those who had made that being tolerable. To me the lines of Young are no fiction:

'Insatiate archer! could not one suffice?

Thy shaft flew thrice, and thrice my peace was slain,

And thrice ere thrice yon moon had fill'd her horn.'

I should have ventured a verse to the memory of the late Charles Skinner Matthews, Fellow of Downing College, Cambridge, were he not too much above all praise of mine. His powers of mind, shown in the attainment of greater honours, against the ablest candidates, than those of any graduate on record at Cambridge, have sufficiently established his fame on the spot where it was acquired; while his softer qualities live in the recollection of friends who loved him too well to envy his superiority.

'That thoughts of thee and thine on polish'd breasts bestow.'] We can all feel, or imagine, the regret with which the ruins of cities, once the capitals of empires, are beheld: the reflections suggested by such objects are too trite to require recapitulation. But never did the littleness of man, and the vanity of his very best virtues, of patriotism to exalt, and of valour to defend, his country, appear more conspicuous than in the record of what Athens was, and the certainty of what she now is. This theatre of contention between mighty factions, of the struggles of orators, the exaltation and deposition of tyrants, the triumph and punishment of generals, is now become a scene of petty intrigue and perpetual disturbance, between the bickering agents of certain British nobility and gentry. 'The wild foxes, the owls and serpents in the ruins of Babylon,' were surely less degrading than such inhabitants. The Turks have the plea of conquest for their tyranny, and the Greeks have only suffered the fortune of war, incidental to the bravest; but how are the mighty fallen, when two painters contest the privilege of plundering the Parthenon, and triumph in turn, according to the tenor of each succeeding firman! Sylla could but punish, Philip subdue, and Xerxes burn Athens; but it remained for the paltry antiquarian, and his despicable agents, to render her contemptible as himself and his pursuits. The Parthenon, before its destruction, in part, by fire during the Venetian siege, had been a temple, a church, and a mosque. In each point of view it is an object of regard: it changed its worshippers; but still it was a place of worship thrice sacred to devotion: its violation is a triple sacrifice. But—

Plays such fantastic tricks before high Heaven

'Far on the solitary shore he sleeps.'] It was not always the custom of the Greeks to burn their dead; the greater Ajax, in particular, was interred entire. Almost all the chiefs became gods after their decease; and he was indeed neglected, who had not annual games near his tomb, or festivals in honour of his memory by his countrymen, as Achilles, Brasidas, &c., and at last even Antinous, whose death was as heroic as his life was infamous.

'To rive what Goth, and Turk, and Time hath spared.'] At this moment (January 3, 1810), besides what has been already deposited in London, an Hydriot vessel is in the Pyræus to receive every portable relic. Thus, as I heard a young Greek observe, in common with many of his countrymen—for, lost as they are, they yet feel on this occasion—thus may Lord Elgin boast of having ruined Athens. An Italian painter of the first eminence, named Lusieri, is the agent of devastation; and like the Greek finder of Verres in Sicily, who followed the same profession, he has proved the able instrument of plunder. Between this artist and the French Consul Fauvel, who wishes to rescue the remains for his own government, there is now a violent dispute concerning a car employed in their conveyance, the wheel of which—I wish they were both broken upon it!—has been locked up by the Consul, and Lusieri has laid his complaint before the Waywode. Lord Elgin has been extremely happy in his choice of Signor Lusieri. During a residence of ten years in Athens, he never had the curiosity to proceed as far as Sunium (now Cape Colonna), till he accompanied us in our second excursion. However, his works, as far as they go, are most beautiful; but they are almost all unfinished. While he and his patrons confine themselves to tasting medals, appreciating cameos, sketching columns, and cheapening gems, their little absurdities are as harmless as insect or fox-hunting, maiden speechifying, barouche-driving, or any such pastime; but when they carry away three or four shiploads of the most valuable and massy relics that time and barbarism have left to the most injured and most celebrated of cities: when they destroy, in a vain attempt to tear down, those works which have been the admiration of ages, I know no motive which can excuse, no name which can designate, the perpetrators of this dastardly devastation. It was not the least of the crimes laid to the charge of Verres, that he had plundered Sicily, in the manner since imitated at Athens. The most unblushing impudence could hardly go further than to affix the name of its plunderer to the walls of the Acropolis; while the wanton and useless defacement of the whole range of the basso-relievos, in one compartment of the temple, will never permit that name to be pronounced by an observer without execration.

On this occasion I speak impartially: I am not a collector or admirer of collections, consequently no rival; but I have some early prepossession in favour of Greece, and do not think the honour of England advanced by plunder, whether of India or Attica.

Another noble Lord has done better, because he has done less: but some others, more or less noble, yet 'all honourable men,' have done best, because, after a deal of excavation and execration, bribery to the Waywode, mining and countermining, they have done nothing at all. We had such ink-shed, and wine-shed, which almost ended in bloodshed! Lord E.'s 'prig'—see Jonathan Wild for the definition of 'priggism'—quarrelled with another *Gropius by name (a very good name too for his business), and muttered something about satisfaction, in a verbal answer to a note of the poor Prussian: this was stated at table to Gropius, who laughed, but could eat no dinner afterwards. The rivals were not reconciled when I left Greece. I have reason to remember their squabble, for they wanted to make me their arbitrator.

'Yet felt some portion of their mother's pains.'] I cannot resist availing myself of the permission of my friend Dr. Clarke, whose name requires no comment with the public, but whose sanction will add tenfold weight to my testimony, to insert the following extract from a very obliging letter of his to me, as a note to the above lines:—'When the last of the Metopes was taken from the Parthenon, and, in moving of it, great part of the superstructure with one of the triglyphs was thrown down by the workmen whom Lord Elgin employed, the Disdar, who beheld the mischief done to the building, took his pipe from his mouth, dropped a tear, and, in a

* This Sr. Gropius was employed by a noble Lord for the sole purpose of sketching, in which he excels; but I am sorry to say, that he has, through the abused sanction of that most respectable name, been treading at humble distance in the steps of Sr. Lusieri.—A shipful of his trophies was detained, and I believe confiscated, at Constantinople, in 1810. I am most happy to be now enabled to state, that 'this was not in his bond,' that he was employed solely as a painter, and that his noble patron disavows all connexion with him, except as an artist. If the error in the first and second edition of this poem has given the noble Lord a moment's pain, I am very sorry for it: Sr. Gropius has assumed for years the name of his agent; and though I cannot much condemn myself for sharing in the mistake of so many, I am happy in being one of the first to be undeceived. Indeed, I have as much pleasure in contradicting this as I felt regret in stating it.—Note to third edition.

'Land of Albania! let me bend mine eyes.'] Albania comprises part of Macedonia, Illyria, Chaonia, and Epirus. Iskander is the Turkish word for Alexander; and the celebrated Scanderbeg (Lord Alexander) is alluded to in the third and fourth lines of the thirty-eighth stanza. I do not know whether I am correct in making Scanderbeg the countryman of Alexander, who was born at Pella in Macedonia, but Mr. Gibbon terms him so, and adds Pyrrhus to the list, in speaking of his exploits.

Of Albania Gibbon remarks that a country 'within sight of Italy is less known than the interior of America.' Circumstances, of little consequence to mention, led Mr. Hobhouse and myself into that country before we visited any other part of the Ottoman dominions; and with the exception of Major Leake, then officially resident at Joannina, no other Englishmen have ever advanced beyond the capital into the interior, as that gentleman very lately assured me. Ali Pacha was at that time (October, 1809) carrying on war against Ibrahim Pacha, whom he had driven to Berat, a strong fortress, which he was then besieging: on our arrival at Joannina we were invited to Tepaleni, his highness's birthplace, and favourite Serai, only one day's distance from Berat; at this juncture the Vizier had made it his head-quarters. After some stay in the capital, we accordingly followed; but though furnished with every accommodation, and escorted by one of the Vizier's secretaries, we were nine days (on account of the rains) in accomplishing a journey which, on our return, barely occupied four. On our route we passed two cities, Argyrocastro and Libochabo, apparently little inferior to Yanina in size; and no pencil or pen can ever do justice to the scenery in the vicinity of Zitza and Delvinachi, the frontier village of Epirus and Albania Proper.

On Albania and its inhabitants I am unwilling to descant, because this will be done so much better by my fellow-traveller, in a work which may probably precede this in publication, that I as little wish to follow as I would to anticipate him. But some few observations are necessary to the text. The Arnauts, or Albanese, struck me forcibly by their resemblance to the Highlanders of Scotland, in dress, figure, and manner of living. Their very mountains seemed Caledonian, with a kinder climate. The kilt, though white; the spare, active form; their dialect, Celtic in its sound, and their hardy habits, all carried me back to Morven. No nation are so detested and dreaded by their neighbours as the Albanese; the Greeks hardly regard them as Christians, or the Turks as Moslems; and in fact they are a mixture of both, and sometimes neither. Their habits are predatory—all are armed; and the red-shawled Arnauts, the Montenegrins, Chimariots, and Gegdes, are treacherous; the others differ somewhat in garb, and essentially in character. As far as my own experience goes, I can speak favourably. I was attended by two, an Infidel and a Mussulman, to Constantinople and every other part of Turkey which came within my observation; and more faithful in peril, or indefatigable in service, are rarely to be found. The Infidel was named Basilius, the Moslem, Dervish Tahiri; the former a man of middle age, and the latter about my own. Basili was strictly charged by Ali Pacha in person to attend us; and Dervish was one of fifty who accompanied us through the forests of Acarnania to the banks of Achelous, and onward to Messolonghi in Ætolia. There I took him into my own service, and never had occasion to repent it till the moment of my departure.

When, in 1810, after the departure of my friend Mr. Hobhouse for England, I was seized with a severe fever in the Morea, these men saved my life by frightening away my physician, whose throat they threatened to cut if I was not cured within a given time. To this consolatory assurance of posthumous retribution, and a resolute refusal of Dr. Romanelli's prescriptions, I attributed my recovery. I had left my last remaining English servant at Athens; my dragoman was as ill as myself, and my poor Arnauts nursed me with an attention which would have done honour to civilisation. They had a variety of adventures; for the Moslem, Dervish, being a remarkably handsome man, was always squabbling with the husbands of Athens; inasmuch that four of the principal Turks paid me a visit of remonstrance at the Convent, on the subject of his having taken a woman from the bath—whom he had lawfully bought, however—a thing quite contrary to etiquette. Basili also was extremely gallant amongst his own persuasion, and had the greatest veneration for the church, mixed with the highest contempt of churchmen, whom he cuffed upon occasion in a most heterodox manner. Yet he never passed a church without crossing himself; and I remember the risk he ran in entering St. Sophia, in Stambol, because it had once been a place of his worship. On remonstrating with him on his inconsistent proceedings, he invariably answered, 'Our church is holy, our priests are thieves;' and then he crossed himself as usual, and boxed the ears of the first 'papas' who refused to assist in any required operation, as was always found to be necessary where a priest had any influence with the Cogia Bashi of his village. Indeed, a more abandoned race of miscreants cannot exist than the lower orders of the Greek clergy.

When preparations were made for my return, my Albanians were summoned to receive their pay. Basili took his with an awkward show of regret at my intended departure, and marched away to his quarters with his bag of piastres. I sent for Dervish, but for some time he was not to be found; at last he entered, just as Signor Logotheti, father to the ci-devant Anglo-consul of Athens, and some other of my Greek acquaintances, paid me a visit. Dervish took the money, but on a sudden dashed it to the ground; and claspings his hands, which he raised to his forehead, rushed out of the room weeping bitterly. From that moment to the hour of my embarkation, he continued his lamentations, and all our efforts to console him only produced this answer, 'Μ'ἀφαιρει,' 'He leaves me.' Signor Logotheti, who never wept before for anything less than the loss of a para (about the fourth of a farthing), melted; the padre of the convent, my attendants, my visitors—and I verily believe that even Sterne's 'foolish fat scullion' would have left her 'fishkettle' to sympathise with the unaffected and unexpected sorrow of this barbarian.

For my own part, when I remembered that, a short time before my departure from England, a noble and most intimate associate had excused himself from taking leave of me because he had to attend a relation 'to a milliner's,' I felt no less surprised than humiliated by the present occurrence and the past recollection. That Dervish would leave me with some regret was to be expected; when master and man have been scrambling over the mountains of a dozen provinces together, they are unwilling to separate; but his present feelings, contrasted with his native ferocity, improved my opinion of the human heart. I believe this almost feudal fidelity is frequent amongst them. One day, on our journey over Parnassus, an Englishman in my service gave him a push in some dispute about the baggage, which he unluckily mistook for a blow; he spoke not, but sat down leaning his head upon his hands. Foreseeing the consequences, we endeavoured to explain away the affront, which produced the following answer:—'I have been a robber: I am a soldier: no captain ever struck me: you are my master, I have eaten your bread, but by that bread! (a usual oath,) had it been otherwise, I would have stabbed the dog, your servant, and gone to the mountains.' So the affair ended, but from that day forward he never thoroughly forgave the thoughtless fellow who insulted him. Dervish excelled in the dance of his country, conjectured to be a remnant of the ancient Pyrrhic; be that as it may, it is manly, and requires wonderful agility. It is very distinct from the stupid Romaika, the dull round-about of the Greeks, of which our Athenian party had so many specimens.

The Albanians in general (I do not mean the cultivators of the earth in the provinces, who have also that appellation, but the mountaineers) have a fine cast of countenance; and the most beautiful women I ever beheld, in stature and in features, we saw levelling the road broken down by the torrents between Delvinachi and Libochabo. Their manner of walking is truly theatrical; but this strut is probably the effect of the capote, or cloak, depending from one shoulder. Their long hair reminds you of the Spartans, and their courage in desultory warfare is unquestionable. Though they have some cavalry amongst the Gegdes, I never saw a good Arnaut horseman; my own preferred the English saddles, which, however, they could never keep. But on foot they are not to be subdued by fatigue.

In the valley the river Kalamas (once the Acheron) flows, and, not far from Zitza, forms a fine cataract. The situation is perhaps the finest in Greece, though the approach to Delvinachi and parts of Acarnania and Ætolia may contest the palm. Delphi, Parnassus, and, in Attica, even Cape Colonna and Port Rapti, are very inferior: as also every scene in Ionia, or the Troad: I am almost inclined to add the approach to Constantinople; but, from the different features of the last, a comparison can hardly be made.

'While thus in concert they this lay half sang, half scream'd.'] As a specimen of the Albanian or Arnaut dialect of the Illyric, I here insert two of their most popular choral songs, which are generally chanted in dancing by men or women indiscriminately. The first words are merely a kind of chorus without meaning, like some in our own and all other languages.

10. Make not so much dust to destroy your embroidered hose.

The last stanza would puzzle a commentator; the men have certainly buskins of the most beautiful texture, but the ladies (to whom the above is supposed to be addressed) have nothing under their little yellow boots and slippers but a well-turned and sometimes very white ankle. The Arnaout girls are much handsomer than the Greeks, and their dress is far more picturesque. They preserve their shape much longer also, from being always in the open air. It is to be observed, that the Arnaout is not a written language: the words of this song, therefore, as well as the one which follows, are spelt according to their pronunciation. They are copied by one who speaks and understands the dialect perfectly, and who is a native of Athens.

1. I am wounded by thy love, and have loved but to scorch myself.
2. Thou hast consumed me! Ah, maid! thou hast struck me to the heart.
3. I have said I wish no dowry, but thine eyes

6. I have loved thee, maid, with a sincere soul, but thou hast left me like a withered tree.
7. If I have placed my hand on thy bosom, what have I gained? my hand is withdrawn, but

I believe the two last stanzas, as they are in a different measure, ought to belong to another ballad. An idea something similar to the thought in the last lines was expressed by Socrates, whose arm having come in contact with one of his 'ἐποκάλπτου,' Critobulus or Cleobulus, the philosopher complained of a shooting pain as far as his shoulder for some days after, and therefore very properly resolved to teach his disciples in future without touching them.

'Fair Greece! sad relic of departed worth!'] Before I say anything about a city of which everybody, traveller or not, has thought it necessary to say something, I will request Miss Owenson, when she next borrows an Athenian heroine for her four volumes, to have the goodness to marry her to somebody more of a gentleman than a 'Disdar Aga' (who by the by is not an Aga), the most impolite of petty officers, the greatest patron of larceny Athens ever saw (except Lord E.), and the unworthy occupant of the Acropolis, on a handsome annual stipend of 150 piastres (eight pounds sterling), out of which he has only to pay his garrison, the most ill-regulated corps in the ill-regulated Ottoman Empire. I speak it tenderly, seeing I was once the cause of the husband of 'Ida of Athens' nearly suffering the bastinado; and because the said 'Disdar' is a turbulent husband, and beats his wife; so that I exhort and beseech Miss Owenson to sue for a separate maintenance in behalf of 'Ida.' Having premised thus much, on a matter of such import to the readers of romances, I may now leave Ida, to mention her birthplace.

Setting aside the magic of the name, and all those associations which it would be pedantic and superfluous to recapitulate, the very situation of Athens would render it the favourite of all who have eyes for art or nature. The climate, to me at least, appeared a perpetual spring; during eight months I never passed a day without being as many hours on horseback; rain is extremely rare, snow never lies in the plains, and a cloudy day is an agreeable rarity. In Spain, Portugal, and every part of the East which I visited, except Ionia and Attica, I perceived no such superiority of climate to our own; and at Constantinople, where I passed May, June, and part of July (1810), you might 'damn the climate, and complain of spleen,' five days out of seven.

The air of the Morea is heavy and unwholesome, but the moment you pass the isthmus in the direction of Megara the change is strikingly perceptible. But I fear Hesiod will still be found correct in his description of a Boeotian winter.

We found at Livadia an 'esprit fort' in a Greek bishop, of all free-thinkers! This worthy hypocrite rallied his own religion with great intrepidity (but not before his flock), and talked of a mass as a 'coglioneria.' It was impossible to think better of him for this; but, for a Boeotian, he was brisk with all his absurdity. This phenomenon (with the exception indeed of Thebes, the remains of Charonea, the plain of Platea, Orchomenus, Livadia, and its nominal cave of Trophonius) was the only remarkable thing we saw before we passed Mount Cithæron.

The fountain of Dirce turns a mill: at least my companion (who, resolving to be at once cleanly and classical, bathed in it) pronounced it to be the fountain of Dirce, and anybody who thinks it worth while may contradict him. At Castri we drank of half a dozen streamlets, some not of the purest, before we decided to our satisfaction which was the true Castalian, and even that had a villainous twang, probably from the snow, though it did not throw us into an epic fever, like poor Dr. Chandler.

From Fort Phyle, of which large remains still exist, the Plain of Athens, Pentelicus, Hymettus, the Ægean, and the Acropolis, burst upon the eye at once; in my opinion, a more glorious prospect than even Cintra or Istambul. Not the view from the Troad, with Ida, the Hellespont, and the more distant Mount Athos, can equal it, though so superior in extent.

I heard much of the beauty of Arcadia, but excepting the view from the Monastery of Megaspelion (which is inferior to Zitza in a command of country), and the descent from the mountains on the way from Tripolitza to Argos, Arcadia has little to recommend it beyond the name.

'Sternitur, et dulces moriens reminiscitur Argos.' Virgil could have put this into the mouth of none but an Argive, and (with reverence be it spoken) it does not deserve the epithet. And if the Polyneices of Statius, 'In mediis audit duo litora campis,' did actually hear both shores in crossing the isthmus of Corinth, he had better ears than have ever been worn in such a journey since.

'Athens,' says a celebrated topographer, 'is still the most polished city of Greece.' Perhaps it may of Greece, but not of the Greeks; for Joannina in Epirus is universally allowed, amongst themselves, to be superior in the wealth, refinement, learning, and dialect of its inhabitants. The Athenians are remarkable for their cunning; and the lower orders are not improperly characterised in that proverb, which classes them with the 'Jews of Salonica, and the Turks of the Negropont.'

Among the various foreigners resident in Athens, French, Italians, Germans, Ragusans, &c., there was never a difference of opinion in their estimate of the Greek character, though on all other topics they disputed with great acrimony.

M. Fauvel, the French consul, who has passed thirty years principally at Athens, and to whose talents as an artist, and manners as a gentleman, none who have known him can refuse their testimony, has frequently declared in my hearing, that the Greeks do not deserve to be emancipated; reasoning on the grounds of their 'national and individual depravity!' while he forgot that such depravity is to be attributed to causes which can only be removed by the measure he reprobates.

M. Roque, a French merchant of respectability long settled in Athens, asserted with the most amusing gravity, 'Sir, they are the same canaille that existed in the days of Themistocles!' an alarming remark to the 'Laudator temporis acti.' The ancients banished Themistocles; the moderns cheat Monsieur Roque; thus great men have ever been treated!

In short, all the Franks who are fixtures, and most of the Englishmen, Germans, Danes, &c. of passage, came over by degrees to their opinion, on much the same grounds that a Turk in England would condemn the nation by wholesale, because he was wronged by his lacquey, and overcharged by his washerwoman.

Certainly it was not a little staggering when the Sieurs Fauvel and Lusieri, the two greatest demagogues of the day, who divide between them the power of Pericles and the popularity of Cleon, and puzzle the poor Waywode with perpetual differences, agreed in the utter condemnation, 'nulla virtute redemptum,' of the Greeks in general, and of the Athenians in particular.

For my own humble opinion, I am loth to hazard it, knowing as I do, that there be now in MS. not less than five tours of the first magnitude and of their most threatening aspect, all in typographical array by persons of wit and honour, and regular commonplace books: but, if I may say this without offence, it seems to me rather hard to declare so positively and pertinaciously, as almost everybody has declared, that the Greeks, because they are very bad, will never be better.

Eton and Sonnini have led us astray by their panegyrics and projects: but, on the other hand, De Pauw and Thornton have debased the Greeks beyond their demerits.

The Greeks will never be independent: they will never be sovereigns as heretofore, and God forbid they ever should! but they may be subjects without being slaves. Our colonies are not independent, but they are free and industrious, and such may Greece be hereafter.

At present, like the Catholics of Ireland and the Jews throughout the world, and such other cudgelled and heterodox people, they suffer all the moral and physical ills that can afflict humanity. Their life is a struggle against truth; they are vicious in their own defence. They are so unused to kindness, that when they occasionally meet with it they look upon it with suspicion, as a dog often beaten snaps at your fingers if you attempt to caress him. 'They are ungrateful, notoriously, abominably ungrateful!'—this is the general cry. Now, in the name of Nemesis! for what are they to be grateful? Where is the human being that ever conferred a benefit on Greek or Greeks? They are to be grateful to the Turks for their fetters, and to the Franks for their broken promises and lying counsels. They are to be grateful to the artist who engraves their ruins, and to the antiquary who carries them away; to the traveller whose janissary flogs them, and to the scribbler whose journal abuses them. This is the amount of their obligations to foreigners.

II.

FRANCISCAN CONVENT, ATHENS, January 23, 1811.

Amongst the remnants of the barbarous policy of the earlier ages, are the traces of bondage which yet exist in different countries; whose inhabitants, however divided in religion and manners, almost all agree in oppression.

The English have at last compassionated their negroes, and under a less bigoted government, may probably one day release their Catholic brethren; but the interposition of foreigners alone can emancipate the Greeks, who, otherwise, appear to have as small a chance of redemption from the Turks, as the Jews have from mankind in general.

Of the ancient Greeks we know more than enough; at least the younger men of Europe devote much of their time to the study of the Greek writers and history, which would be more usefully spent in mastering their own. Of the moderns, we are perhaps more neglectful than they deserve; and while every man of any pretensions to learning is tiring out his youth, and often his age, in the study of the language and of the harangues of the Athenian demagogues in favour of freedom, the real or supposed descendants of these sturdy republicans are left to the actual tyranny of their masters, although a very slight effort is required to strike off their chains.

To talk, as the Greeks themselves do, of their rising again to their pristine superiority, would be ridiculous: as the rest of the world must resume its barbarism, after re-asserting the sovereignty of Greece; but there seems to be no very great obstacle, except in the apathy of the Franks, to their becoming an useful dependency, or even a free state, with a proper guarantee;—under correction, however, be it spoken, for many and well-informed men doubt the practicability even of this.

The Greeks have never lost their hope, though they are now more divided in opinion on the subject of their probable deliverers. Religion recommends the Russians; but they have twice been deceived and abandoned by that power, and the dreadful lesson they received after the Muscovite desertion in the Morea has never been forgotten. The French they dislike; although the subjugation of the rest of Europe will, probably, be attended by the deliverance of continental Greece. The islanders look to the English for succour, as they have very lately possessed themselves of the Ionian republic, Corfu excepted. But whoever appear with arms in their hands will be welcome; and when that day arrives, Heaven have mercy on the Ottomans; they cannot expect it from the Giaours.

But instead of considering what they have been, and speculating on what they may be, let us look at them as they are.

And here it is impossible to reconcile the contrariety of opinions: some, particularly the merchants, decrying the Greeks in the strongest language; others, generally travellers, turning periods in their eulogy, and publishing very curious speculations grafted on their former state, which can have no more effect on their present lot, than the existence of the Incas on the future fortunes of Peru.

One very ingenious person terms them the 'natural allies of Englishmen;' another, no less ingenious, will not allow them to be the allies of anybody, and denies their very descent from the ancients; a third, more ingenious than either, builds a Greek empire on a Russian foundation, and realises (on paper) all the chimeras of Catherine II. As to the question of their descent, what can it import whether the Mainotes are the lineal Laconians or not? or the present Athenians as indigenous as the bees of Hymettus, or as the grasshoppers, to which they once likened themselves? What Englishman cares if he be of a Danish, Saxon, Norman, or Trojan blood? or who, except a Welshman, is afflicted with a desire of being descended from Caractacus?

The poor Greeks do not so much abound in the good things of this world, as to render even their claims to antiquity an object of envy; it is very cruel, then, in Mr. Thornton to disturb them in the possession of all that time has left them; viz. their pedigree, of which they are the more tenacious, as it is all they can call their own. It would be worth while to publish together, and compare, the works of Messrs. Thornton and De Pauw, Eton and Sonnini; paradox on one side, and prejudice on the other. Mr. Thornton conceives himself to have claims to public confidence from a fourteen years' residence at Pera; perhaps he may on the subject of the Turks, but this can give him no more insight into the real state of Greece and her inhabitants, than as many years spent in Wapping into that of the Western Highlands.

The Greeks of Constantinople live in Fanal; and if Mr. Thornton did not oftener cross the Golden Horn than his brother merchants are accustomed to do, I should place no great reliance on his information. I actually heard one of these gentlemen boast of their little general intercourse with the city, and assert of himself, with an air of triumph, that he had been but four times at Constantinople in as many years.

As to Mr. Thornton's voyages in the Black Sea with Greek vessels, they gave him the same idea of Greece as a cruise to Berwick in a Scotch smack would of Johnny Groat's house. Upon what grounds then does he arrogate the right of condemning by wholesale a body of men, of whom he can know little? It is rather a curious circumstance that Mr. Thornton, who so lavishly dispraises Pouqueville on every occasion of mentioning the Turks, has yet recourse to him as authority on the Greeks, and terms him an impartial observer. Now, Dr. Pouqueville is as little entitled to that appellation as Mr. Thornton to confer it on him.

The fact is, we are deplorably in want of information on the subject of the Greeks, and in particular their literature, nor is there any probability of our being better acquainted, till our intercourse becomes more intimate, or their independence confirmed. The relations of passing travellers are as little to be depended on as the invectives of angry factors; but till something more can be attained, we must be content with the little to be acquired from similar sources.*

However defective these may be, they are preferable to the paradoxes of men who have read superficially of the ancients, and seen nothing of the moderns, such as De Pauw; who, when he asserts that the British breed of horses is ruined by Newmarket, and that the Spartans were cowards in the field, betrays an equal knowledge of English horses and Spartan men. His 'philosophical observations' have a much better claim to the title of 'poetical.' It could not be expected that he who so liberally

* A word en passant with Mr. Thornton and Dr. Pouqueville, who have been guilty between them of sadly clipping the Sultan's Turkish.

Dr. Pouqueville tells a long story of a Moslem who swallowed corrosive sublimate in such quantities that he acquired the name of 'Suleyman Yeyen,' i.e. quoth the Doctor, 'Suleyman, the eater of corrosive sublimate.' 'Aha,' thinks Mr. Thornton, (angry with the Doctor for the fiftieth time,) have I caught you?—Then, in a note twice the thickness of the Doctor's anecdote, he questions the Doctor's proficiency in the Turkish tongue, and his veracity in his own.—'For,' observes Mr. Thornton (after inflicting on us the tough participle of a Turkish verb), 'it means nothing more than "Suleyman the eater," and quite cashiers the supplementary 'sublimate.' Now both are right, and both are wrong. If Mr. Thornton, when he next resides 'fourteen years in the factory,' will consult his Turkish dictionary, or ask any of his Stambouli acquaintance, he will discover that 'Suleyman'yeyen,' put together discreetly, mean the 'Swallower of sublimate,' without any 'Suleyman' in the case: 'Suleyman' signifying 'corrosive sublimate,' and not being a proper name on this occasion, although it be an orthodox name enough with the addition of n. After Mr. Thornton's frequent hints of profound Orientalism, he might have found this out before he sang such paeans over Dr. Pouqueville.

After this, I think 'Travellers versus Factors' shall be our motto, though the above Mr. Thornton has condemned 'hoc genus omne,' for mistake and misrepresentation. 'Ne Sutor ultra crepidam.' 'No merchant beyond his bales.' N.B. For the benefit of Mr. Thornton 'Sutor' is not a proper name.

condemns some of the most celebrated institutions of the ancient, should have mercy on the modern Greeks; and it fortunately happens, that the absurdity of his hypothesis on their forefathers refutes his sentence on themselves.

Let us trust, then, that in spite of the prophecies of De Pauw, and the doubts of Mr. Thornton, there is a reasonable hope of the redemption of a race of men, who, whatever may be the errors of their religion and policy, have been amply punished by three centuries and a half of captivity.

III.

ATHENS, FRANCISCAN CONVENT, March 17, 1811.

'I must have some talk with this learned Theban.'

Some time after my return from Constantinople to this city I received the thirty-first number of the Edinburgh Review as a great favour, and certainly at this distance an acceptable one, from the captain of an English frigate off Salamis. In that number, Art. 3, containing the review of a French translation of Strabo, there are introduced some remarks on the modern Greeks and their literature, with a short account of Coray, a co-translator in the French version. On those remarks I mean to ground a few observations; and the spot where I now write will, I hope, be sufficient excuse for introducing them in a work in some degree connected with the subject. Coray, the most celebrated of living Greeks, at least among the Franks, was born at Scio (in the Review, Smyrna is stated, I have reason to think, incorrectly), and besides the translation of Beccaria and other works mentioned by the Reviewer, has published a lexicon in Romain and French, if I may trust the assurance of some Danish travellers lately arrived from Paris; but the latest we have seen here in French and Greek is that of Gregory Zolikhogloou.* Coray has recently been involved in an unpleasant controversy with M. Gail,† a Parisian commentator and editor of some translations from the Greek poets, in consequence of the Institute having awarded him the prize for his version of Hippocrates 'Περὶ ὕδρατος,' &c., to the disparagement, and consequently displeasure, of the said Gail. To his exertions, literary and patriotic, great praise is undoubtedly due; but a part of that praise ought not to be withheld from the two brothers Zosimado (merchants settled in Leghorn), who sent him to Paris, and maintained him, for the express purpose of elucidating the ancient, and adding to the modern, researches of his countrymen. Coray, however, is not considered by his countrymen equal to some who lived in the two last centuries; more particularly Dorotheus of Mitylene, whose Hellenic writings are so much esteemed by the Greeks, that Meletius terms him 'Μετὰ τὸν Θουκυδίδην καὶ Ξενοφῶντα ἄριστος Ἕλληνας.' (P. 224, Ecclesiastical History, vol. iv.)

Panagiotis Kodrikas, the translator of Fonte-

* I have in my possession an excellent lexicon 'ῥη- γλωσσόν,' which I received in exchange from S. G.— Esq. for a small gem: my antiquarian friends have never forgotten it, or forgiven me.

† In Gail's pamphlet against Coray, he talks of 'throwing the insolent Hellenist out of the windows.' On this a French critic exclaims, 'Ah, my God! throw an Hellenist out of the window! what sacrilege!' It certainly would be a serious business for those authors who dwell in the attics: but I have quoted the passage merely to prove the similarity of style among the controversialists of all polished countries; London or Edinburgh could hardly parallel this Parisian ebullinelle, and Kamarases, who translated Ocellus Lucanus on the Universe into French, Christodoulus, and more particularly Psalida, whom I have conversed with in Joannina, are also in high repute among their literati. The last-mentioned has published in Romain and Latin a work on 'True Happiness,' dedicated to Catherine II. But Polyzois, who is stated by the Reviewer to be the only modern except Coray who has distinguished himself by a knowledge of Hellenic, if he be the Polyzois Lampanitziotis of Yanina, who has published a number of editions in Romain, was neither more nor less than an itinerant vender of books; with the contents of which he had no concern beyond his name on the title page, placed there to secure his property in the publication; and he was, moreover, a man utterly destitute of scholastic acquirements. As the name, however, is not uncommon, some other Polyzois may have edited the Epistles of Aristanetus.

It is to be regretted that the system of continental blockade has closed the few channels through which the Greeks received their publications, particularly Venice and Trieste. Even the common grammars for children are become too dear for the lower orders. Amongst their original works the Geography of Meletius, Archbishop of Athens, and a multitude of theological quartos and poetical pamphlets, are to be met with; their grammars and lexicons of two, three, and four languages are numerous and excellent. Their poetry is in rhyme. The most singular piece I have lately seen is a satire in dialogue between a Russian, English, and French traveller, and the Waywode of Wallachia (or Black-bey, as they term him), an archbishop, a merchant, and Cogia Bachi (or primate), in succession; to all of whom under the Turks the writer attributes their present degeneracy. Their songs are sometimes pretty and pathetic, but their tunes generally displeasing to the ear of a Frank; the best is the famous 'Δεῦτε παῖδες τῶν Ἑλλήνων,' by the unfortunate Riga. But from a catalogue of more than sixty authors, now before me, only fifteen can be found who have touched on any theme except theology.

I am intrusted with a commission by a Greek of Athens named Marmarotouri to make arrangements, if possible, for printing in London a translation of Barthelemi's Anacharsis in Romain, as he has no other opportunity, unless he despatches the MS. to Vienna by the Black Sea and Danube.

The Reviewer mentions a school established at Hecatonesi, and suppressed at the instigation of Sebastiani: he means Cidonies, or, in Turkish, Haivali; a town on the continent, where that institution for a hundred students and three professors still exists. It is true that this establishment was disturbed by the Porte, under the ridiculous pretext that the Greeks were constructing a fortress instead of a college: but on investigation, and the payment of some purses to the Divan, it has been permitted to continue. The principal professor, named Ueniamin, (i.e. Benjamin), is stated to be a man of talent, but a freethinker. He was born in Lesbos, studied in Italy, and is master of Hellenic, Latin, and some Frank languages: besides a smattering of the sciences.

Though it is not my intention to enter farther on this topic than may allude to the article in question, I cannot but observe that the Reviewer's lamentation over the fall of the Greeks appears singular, when he closes it with these words: 'The change is to be attributed to their misfortunes rather than to any "physical degradation."' It may be true that the Greeks are not physically degenerated, and that Constantinople contained on the day when it changed masters as many men of six feet and upwards as in the hour of prosperity; but ancient history and modern politics instruct us that something more than physical perfection is necessary to preserve a state in vigour and independence; and the Greeks, in particular, are a melancholy example of the near connexion between moral degradation and national decay.

The Reviewer mentions a plan 'we believe' by Potemkin for the purification of the Greeks; and I have endeavoured in vain to procure any tidings or traces of its existence. There was an academy in St. Petersburg for the Greeks; but it was suppressed by Paul, and has not been revived by his successor.

There is a slip of the pen, and it can only be a slip of the pen, in p. 58, No. 31 of the 'Edinburgh Review,' where these words occur:—'We are told that when the capital of the East yielded to Solyman.'—It may be presumed that this last word will, in a future edition, be altered to Mahomet II.* The 'ladies of Constantinople,' it seems, at that period spoke a dialect, 'which would not have disgraced the lips of an Athenian.' I do not know how that might be, but am sorry to say the ladies in general, and the Athenians in particular, are much altered; being far from choice either in their dialect or expressions, as the whole Attic race are barbarous to a proverb:—

Ω 'Αθήνα, πρώτη χώρα, Τι γαῖδάρους τρέφεις τώρα.

In Gibbon, vol. x. p. 161, is the following sentence:—'The vulgar dialect of the city was gross and barbarous, though the compositions of the church and palace sometimes affected to copy the purity of the Attic models.' Whatever may be asserted on the subject, it is difficult to conceive that the 'ladies of Constantinople,' in the reign of the last Cæsar, spoke a purer dialect than Anna Comnena wrote three centuries before: and those royal pages are not esteemed the best models of composition, although the princess γλῶτται εἶχεν 'AKPIBΣΣ 'Αττικίζουσαν. In the Fanal, and in Yanina, the best Greek is spoken: in the latter there is a flourishing school under the direction of Psalida.

There is now in Athens a pupil of Psalida's, who is making a tour of observation through Greece: he is intelligent, and better educated than a fellow-commoner of most colleges. I mention this as a proof that the spirit of inquiry is not dormant among the Greeks.

* In a former number of the Edinburgh Review, 1808, it is observed: 'Lord Byron passed some of his early years in Scotland, where he might have learned that pibroch does not mean a bagpipe, any more than duet means a fiddle.' Query,—Was it in Scotland that the young gentlemen of the Edinburgh Review learned that Solyman means Mahomet II. any more than criticism means infallibility?—but thus it is,

'Cædimus inque vicem præbamus crura sagittis.'
The mistake seemed so completely a lapse of the pen (from the great similarity of the two words, and the total absence of error from the former pages of the literary lieviathan) that I should have passed it over as in the text, had I not perceived in the Edinburgh Review much facetious exultation on all such detections, particularly a recent one, where words and syllables are subjects of disquisition and transposition; and the above-mentioned parallel passage in my own case irresistibly propelled me to hint how much easier it is to be critical than correct. The gentlemen, having enjoyed many a triumph on such victories, will hardly begrudge me a slight ovation for the present.

The Reviewer mentions Mr. Wright, the author of the beautiful poem 'Horæ Ionice,' as qualified to give details of these nominal Romans and degenerate Greeks; and also of their language: but Mr. Wright, though a good poet and an able man, has made a mistake where he states the Albanian dialect of the Romaic to approximate nearest to the Hellenic; for the Albanians speak a Romaic as notoriously corrupt as the Scotch of Aberdeenshire, or the Italian of Naples. Yanina, (where, next to the Fanal, the Greek is purest,) although the capital of Ali Pacha's dominions, is not in Albania, but Epirus; and beyond Delvinachi in Albania Proper up to Argyrocastro and Tepaleen (beyond which I did not advance) they spoke worse Greek than even the Athenians. I was attended for a year and a half by two of these singular mountaineers, whose mother tongue is Illyric, and I never heard them or their countrymen (whom I have seen, not only at home, but to the amount of twenty thousand in the army of Vely Pacha) praised for their Greek, but often laughed at for their provincial barbarisms.

I have in my possession about twenty-five letters, amongst which some from the Bey of Corinth, written to me by Notaras, the Cogia Bachi, and others by the dragoman of the Caimacam of the Morea (which last governs in Vely Pacha's absence), are said to be favourable specimens of their epistolary style. I also received some at Constantinople from private persons, written in a most hyperbolic style, but in the true antique character.

The Reviewer proceeds, after some remarks on the tongue in its past and present state, to a paradox (page 59) on the great mischief the knowledge of his own language has done to Coray, who, it seems, is less likely to understand the ancient Greek, because he is perfect master of the modern! This observation follows a paragraph, recommending, in explicit terms, the study of the Romaic, as 'a powerful auxiliary,' not only to the traveller and foreign merchant, but also to the classical scholar; in short, to everybody except the only person who can be thoroughly acquainted with its uses; and by a parity of reasoning, our old language is conjectured to be probably more attainable by 'foreigners' than by ourselves! Now, I am inclined to think, that a Dutch Tyro in our tongue, (albeit himself of Saxon blood) would be sadly perplexed with 'Sir Tristrem,' or any other given 'Auchinleck MS.,' with or without a grammar or glossary; and to most apprehensions it seems evident, that none but a native can acquire a competent, far less complete, knowledge of our obsolete idioms. We may give the critic credit for his ingenuity, but no more believe him than we do Smollet's Lismahago, who maintains that the purest English is spoken in Edinburgh. That Coray may err is very possible; but if he does, the fault is in the man rather than in his mother tongue, which is, as it ought to be, of the greatest aid to the native student.—Here the Reviewer proceeds to business on Strabo's translators, and here I close my remarks.

Sir W. Drummond, Mr. Hamilton, Lord Aberdeen, Dr. Clarke, Captain Leake, Mr. Gell, Mr. Walpole, and many others now in England, have all the requisites to furnish details of this fallen people. The few observations I have offered I should have left where I made them, had not the article in question, and above all the spot where I read it, induced me to advert to those pages, which the advantage of my present situation enabled me to clear, or at least to make the attempt.

I have endeavoured to waive the personal feelings which rise in despite of me in touching upon any part of the Edinburgh Review; not from a wish to conciliate the favour of its writers, or to cancel the remembrance of a syllable I have formerly published, but simply from a sense of the impropriety of mixing up private resentments with a disquisition of the present kind, and more particularly at this distance of time and place.

Amongst an enslaved people, obliged to have recourse to foreign presses even for their books of religion, it is less to be wondered at that we find so few publications on general subjects than that we find any at all. The whole number of the Greeks, scattered up and down the Turkish empire and elsewhere, may amount, at most, to three millions; and yet, for so scanty a number, it is impossible to discover any nation with so great a proportion of books and their authors as the Greeks of the present century. 'Ay,' but say the generous advocates of oppression, who, while they assert the ignorance of the Greeks, wish to prevent them from dispelling it, 'ay, but these are mostly, if not all, ecclesiastical tracts, and consequently good for nothing.' Well! and pray what else can they write about? It is pleasant enough to hear a Frank, particularly an Englishman, who may abuse the government of his own country; or a Frenchman, who may abuse every government except his own, and who may range at will over every philosophical, religious, scientific, sceptical, or moral subject, sneering at the Greek legends. A Greek must not write on politics, and cannot touch on science for want of instruction; if he doubts, he is excommunicated and damned; therefore his countrymen are not poisoned with modern philosophy; and as to morals, thanks to the Turks! there are no such things. What then is left him, if he has a turn for scribbling? Religion and holy biography: and it is natural enough that those who have so little in this life should look to the next. It is no great wonder, then, that in a catalogue now before me of fifty-five Greek writers, many of whom were lately living, not above fifteen should have touched on anything but religion. The catalogue alluded to is contained in the twenty-sixth chapter of the fourth volume of Meletius' Ecclesiastical History.

'Trembling beneath the scourge of Turkish hand.'] The difficulties of travelling in Turkey have been much exaggerated, or rather have considerably diminished, of late years. The Mussulmans have been beaten into a kind of sullen civility very comfortable to voyagers.

It is hazardous to say much on the subject of Turks and Turkey; since it is possible to live amongst them twenty years without acquiring information, at least from themselves. As far as my own slight experience carried me, I have no complaint to make; but am indebted for many civilities (I might also say for friendship), and much hospitality, to Ali Pacha, his son Veli Pacha of the Morea, and several others of high rank in the provinces. Suleyman Aga, late Governor of Athens, and now of Thebes, was a bon vivant, and as social a being as ever sat cross-legged at a tray, or a table. During the carnival, when our English party were masquerading, both himself and his successor were more happy to 'receive hisks,' than any dowager in Grosvenor-square.

On one occasion of his supping at the convent, his friend and visitor, the Cadi of Thebes, was carried from table perfectly qualified for any club in Christendom; while the worthy Waywode himself triumphed in his fall.

In all money transactions with the Moslems, I ever found the strictest honour, the highest disinterestedness. In transacting business with them, there are none of those dirty peculations, under the name of interest, difference of exchange, commission, &c. &c., uniformly found in applying to a Greek consul to cash bills, even on the first houses in Pera.

With regard to presents, an established custom in the East, you will rarely find yourself a loser; as one word acceptance is generally returned by another of similar value—a horse, or a shawl.

In the capital and at court the citizens and courtiers are formed in the same school with those of Christianity; but there does not exist a more honourable, friendly, and high-spirited character than the true Turkish provincial Aga, or Moslem country gentleman. It is not meant here to designate the governors of towns, but those Agas who, by a kind of feudal tenure, possess lands and houses, of more or less extent, in Greece and Asia Minor.

The lower orders are in as tolerable discipline as the rabble in countries with greater pretensions to civilization. A Moslem, in walking the streets of our country-towns, would be more incommode in England than a Frank in a similar situation in Turkey. Regimentals are the best travelling dress.

The best accounts of the religion and different sects of Islamism, may be found in D'Osson's French; of their manners, &c. perhaps in Thornton's English. The Ottomans, with all their defects, are not a people to be despised. Equal, at least, to the Spaniards, they are superior to the Portuguese. If it be difficult to pronounce what they are, we can at least say what they are not; they are not treacherous, they are not cowardly, they do not burn heretics, they are not assassins, nor has any enemy advanced to their capital. They are faithful to their sultan till he becomes unfit to govern, and devout to their God without an inquisition. Were they driven from St. Sophia to-morrow, and the French or Russians enthroned in their stead, it would become a question whether Europe would gain by the exchange. England would certainly be the loser.

With regard to that ignorance of which they are so generally, and sometimes justly, accused, it may be doubted, always excepting France and England, in what useful points of knowledge they are excelled by other nations. Is it in the common arts of life? In their manufactures? Is a Turkish sabre inferior to a Toledo? or is a Turk worse clothed, lodged, or fed and taught, than a Spaniard? Are their Pachas worse educated than a Grandee? or an Effendi than a Knight of St. Jago? I think not.

I remember Mahmoud, the grandson of Ali Pacha, asking whether my fellow-traveller and myself were in the upper or lower House of Parliament. Now, this question from a boy of ten years old proved that his education had not been neglected. It may be doubted if an English boy at that age knows the difference of the Divan from a College of Dervises; but I am very sure a Spaniard does not. How little Mahmoud, surrounded, as he had been, entirely by his Turkish tutors, had learned that there was such a thing as a Parliament, it were useless to conjecture, unless we suppose that his instructors did not confine his studies to the Koran.

In all the mosques there are schools established, which are very regularly attended; and the poor are taught without the church of Turkey being put into peril. I believe the system is not yet printed (though there is such a thing as a Turkish press, and books printed on the late military institution of the Nizam Gediddi); nor have I heard whether the Mufti and the Mollas have subscribed, or the Caimacan and the Teftendar taken the alarm, for fear the ingenuous youth of the turban should be taught not to 'pray to God their way.' The Greeks also—a kind of Eastern Irish papists—have a college of their own at Maynooth,—no, at Haivali; where the heterodox receive much the same kind of countenance from the Ottomans as the Catholic college from the English legislature. Who shall then affirm that the Turks are ignorant bigots, when they thus evince the exact proportion of Christian charity which is tolerated in the most prosperous and orthodox of all possible kingdoms? But though they allow all this, they will not suffer the Greeks to participate in their privileges; no, let them fight their battles, and pay their haratch (taxes), be drubbed in this world, and damned in the next. And shall we then emancipate our Irish Helots? Mahomet forbid! We should then be bad Mussulmans, and worse Christians; at present we unite the best of both—jesuitical faith, and something not much inferior to Turkish toleration.

Mecca and Medina were taken some time ago by the Wahabees, a sect yearly increasing.

'Colonna's cliff, and gleams along the wave.'
In all Attica, if we except Athens itself and Marathon, there is no scene more interesting than Cape Colonna. To the antiquary and artist, sixteen columns are an inexhaustible source of observation and design; to the philosopher, the supposed scene of some of Plato's conversations will not be unwelcome; and the traveller will be struck with the beauty of the prospect over 'Isles that crown the Ægean deep;' but, for an Englishman, Colonna has yet an additional interest, as the actual spot of Falconer's shipwreck. Pallas and Plato are forgotten, in the recollection of Falconer and Campbell:—

'Here in the dead of night by Lonna's steep,
The seaman's cry was heard along the deep.'

This temple of Minerva may be seen at sea from a great distance. In two journeys which I made, and one voyage to Cape Colonna, the view from either side, by land, was less striking than the approach from the isles. In our second land excursion, we had a narrow escape from a party of Mainotes, concealed in the caverns beneath. We were told afterwards, by one of their prisoners, subsequently ransomed, that they were deterred from attacking us by the appearance of my two Albanians: conjecturing very sagaciously, but falsely, that we had a complete guard of these Arnauts at hand, they remained stationary, and thus saved our party, which was too small to have opposed any effectual resistance. Colonna is no less a resort of painters than of pirates; there

'The hireling artist plants his paltry desk,
And makes degraded nature picturesque.'

(See Hodgson's Lady Jane Grey, &c.)

But there Nature, with the aid of Art, has done that for herself. I was fortunate enough to engage a very superior German artist; and hope to renew my acquaintance with this and many other Levantine scenes, by the arrival of his performances.

'When Marathon became a magic word.'
'Siste Viator—heroa calcas!' was the epitaph on the famous Count Merci;—what then must be our feelings when standing on the tumulus of the two hundred (Greeks) who fell on Marathon? The principal barrow has recently been opened by Fauvel: few or no relics, as vases, &c. were found by the excavator. The plain of Marathon was offered to me for sale at the sum of sixteen thousand piastres, about nine hundred pounds! Alas! —'Expende—quot libras in duce summo—invenies!'—was the dust of Miltiades worth no more? It could scarcely have fetched less if sold by weight.

'I turn'd from all she brought to those she could not bring.'] My guide from Mount St. Jean over the field seemed intelligent and accurate. The place where Major Howard fell was not far from two tall and solitary trees (there was a third cut down, or shivered in the battle), which stand a few yards from each other at a pathway's side. Beneath these he died and was buried. The body has since been removed to England. A small hollow for the present marks where it lay, but will probably soon be effaced; the plough has been upon it, and the grain is. After pointing out the different spots where Picton and other gallant men had perished, the guide said, 'Here Major Howard lay: I was near him when wounded.' I told him my relationship, and he seemed then still more anxious to point out the particular spot and circumstances. The place is one of the most marked in the field, from the peculiarity of the two trees above mentioned. I went on horseback twice over the field, comparing it with my recollection of similar scenes. As a plain, Waterloo seems marked out for the scene of some great action, though this may be mere imagination: I have viewed with attention those of Platea, Troy, Mantinea, Leuctra, Chæronea, and Marathon: and the field around Mount St. Jean and Hougoumont appears to want little but a better cause, and that undefinable but impressive halo which the lapse of ages throws around a celebrated spot, to vie in interest with any or all of these, except, perhaps, the last mentioned.

'For sceptred cynics earth were far too wide a den.'] The great error of Napoleon, 'if we have writ our annals true,' was a continued obtrusion on mankind of his want of all community of feeling for or with them; perhaps more offensive to human vanity than the active cruelty of more trembling and suspicious tyranny. Such were his speeches to public assemblies as well as individuals; and the single expression which he is said to have used on returning to Paris after the Russian winter had destroyed his army, rubbing his hands over a fire, 'This is pleasanter than Moscow,' would probably alienate more favour from his cause than the destruction and reverses which led to the remark.

'The castled crag of Drachenfels.'] The castle of Drachenfels stands on the highest summit of 'the Seven Mountains, over the Rhine banks; it is in ruins, and connected with some singular traditions. It is the first in view on the road from Bonn, but on the opposite side of the river; on this bank, nearly facing it, are the remains of another, called the Jew's Castle, and a large cross, commemorative of the murder of a chief by his brother. The number of castles and cities along the course of the Rhine on both sides is very great, and their situations remarkably beautiful.

The whiteness of his soul, and thus men o'er him wept.'] The monument of the young and lamented General Marceau (killed by a rifle-ball at Alterkirchen, on the last day of the fourth year of the French republic) still remains as described. The inscriptions on his monument are rather too long, and not required: his name was enough; France adored, and her enemies admired; both wept over him. His funeral was attended by the generals and detachments from both armies. In the same grave General Hoche is interred, a gallant man also in every sense of the word; but though he distinguished himself greatly in battle, he had not the good fortune to die there: his death was attended by suspicions of poison. A separate monument (not over his body, which is buried by Marceau's) is raised for him near Andernach, opposite to which one of his most memorable exploits was performed, in throwing a bridge to an island on the Rhine. The shape and style are different from that of Marceau's, and the inscription more simple and pleasing:—'The Army of the Sambre and Meuse to its Commander-in-Chief Hoche.' This is all, and as it should be. Hoche was esteemed among the first of France's earlier generals, before Buonaparte monopolised her triumphs. He was the destined commander of the invading army of Ireland.

'Here Ehrenbreitstein, with her shatter'd wall.]] Ehrenbreitstein, i.e. 'the broad stone of honour,' one of the strongest fortresses in Europe, was dismantled and blown up by the French at the truce of Leoben. It had been, and could only be, reduced by famine or treachery. It yielded to the former, aided by surprise. After having seen the fortifications of Gibraltar and Malta, it did not much strike by comparison; but the situation is commanding. General Marceau besieged it in vain for some time, and I slept in a room where I was shown a window at which he is said to have been standing observing the progress of the siege by moonlight, when a ball struck immediately below it.

Unsepulchred they roam'd, and shriek'd each wandering ghost.'] The chapel is destroyed, and the pyramid of bones diminished to a small number by the Burgundian legion in the service of France; who anxiously effaced this record of their ancestors' less successful invasions. A few still remain, notwithstanding the pains taken by the Burgundians for ages (all who passed that way removing as bone to their own country), and the less justifiable larcenies of the Swiss postillions, who carried them off to sell for knife-handles; a purpose for which the whiteness imbibed by the bleaching of years had rendered them in great request. Of these relics I ventured to bring away as much as may have made a quarter of a hero, for which the sole excuse is, that if I had not, the next passer-by might have perverted them to worse uses than the careful preservation which I intend for them.

'And held within their urn one mind, one heart, one dust.'] Julia Alpinula, a young Aventian priestess, died soon after a vain endeavour to save her father, condemned to death as a traitor by Aulus Cæcina. Her epitaph was discovered many years ago;—it is thus:—'Julia Alpinula: Hic jaceo. Infelices patris, infelix proles. Deæ Aventiæ Sacerdos. Exorare patris necem non potui: Male mori in fatis ille erat. Vixi annos xxiii.'—I know of no human composition so affecting as this, nor a history of deeper interest. These are the names and actions which ought not to perish, and to which we turn with a true and healthy tenderness, from the wretched and glittering detail of a confused mass of conquests and battles, with which the mind is roused for a time to a false and feverish sympathy, from whence it recurs at length with all the nausea consequent on such intoxication.

'In the sun's face, like yonder Alpine snow.'] This is written in the eye of Mont Blanc (June 3rd, 1816), which even at this distance dazzles mine.—(July 20th.) I this day observed for some time the distinct reflection of Mont Blanc and Mont Argentièr in the calm of the lake, which I was crossing in my boat; the distance of these mountains from their mirror is sixty miles.

'This hallow'd, too, the memorable kiss.'] This refers to the account in his 'Confessions' of his passion for the Comtesse d'Houdetot (the mistress of St. Lambert), and his long walk every morning, for the sake of the single kiss which was the common salutation of French acquaintance. Rousseau's description of his feelings on this occasion may be considered as the most passionate, yet not impure, description and expression of love that ever kindled into words; which, after all, must be felt, from their very force, to be inadequate to the delineation; a painting can give no sufficient idea of the ocean.

'Of earth-o'ergazing mountains, and thus take.'] It is to be recollected, that the most beautiful and impressive doctrines of the divine Founder of Christianity were delivered, not in the Temple, but on the Mount. To waive the question of devotion, and turn to human eloquence,—the most effectual and splendid specimens were not pronounced within walls. Demosthenes addressed the public and popular assemblies. Cicero spoke in the forum. That this added to their effect on the mind of both orator and hearers, may be conceived from the difference between what we read of the emotions then and there produced, and those we ourselves experience in the perusal in the closet. It is one thing to read the Iliad at Sigæum and on the tumuli, or by the springs with Mount Ida above, and the plain and rivers and Archipelago around you; and another to trim your taper over it in a snug library—this I know. Were the early and rapid progress of what is called Methodism to be attributed to any cause beyond the enthusiasm excited by its vehement faith and doctrines (the truth or error of which I presume neither to canvass nor to question), I should venture to ascribe it to the practice of preaching in the fields, and the unstudied and extemporaneous effusions of its teachers. The Mussulmans, whose erroneous devotion (at least in the lower orders) is most sincere, and therefore impressive, are accustomed to repeat their prescribed orisons and prayers, wherever they may be, at the stated hours—of course, frequently in the open air, kneeling upon a light mat (which they carry for the purpose of a bed or cushion as required); the ceremony lasts some minutes, during which they are totally absorbed, and only living in their supplication: nothing can disturb them. On me the simple and entire sincerity of these men, and the spirit which appeared to be within and upon them, made a far greater impression than any general rite which was ever performed in places of worship, of which I have seen those of almost every persuasion under the sun; including most of our own sectaries, and the Greek, the Catholic, the Armenian, the Lutheran, the Jewish, and the Mahometan. Many of the negroes of whom there are numbers in the Turkish empire, are idolaters, and have free exercise of their belief and its rites; some of these I had a distant view of at Patras; and, from what I could make out of them, they appeared to be of a truly Pagan description, and not very agreeable to a spectator.

'The sky is changed!—and such a change! Oh night.'] The thunder-storm to which these lines refer occurred on the 13th of June, 1816, at midnight. I have seen, among the Acroceraunian mountains of Chimari, several more terrible, but none more beautiful.

'And sun-set into rose-hues sees them wrought.'] Rousseau's Héloïse, Lettre 17, Part IV., note. 'Ces montagnes sont si hautes qu'une demi-heure après le soleil couche, leurs sommets sont éclairés de ses rayons; dont le rouge forme sur ces cimes blanches une belle couleur de rose, qu'on aperçoit de fort loin.'—This applies more particularly to the heights over Meillerie. 'J'allai à Vevay loger à la Clef, et pendant deux jours que j'y restai sans voir personne, je pris pour cette ville un amour qui m'a suivi dans tous mes voyages, et qui m'y a fait établir enfin les héros de mon roman. Je dirais volontiers à ceux qui ont du goût et qui sont sensibles: Allez à Vevay—visitez le pays, examinez les sites, promenez-vous sur le lac, et dites si la Nature n'a pas fait ce beau pays pour une Julie, pour une Claire, et pour un St. Preux; mais ne les y cherchez pas.'—Les Confessions, livre iv. p. 306, Lyon, ed. 1796.—In July, 1816, I made a voyage round the Lake of Geneva; and, as far as my own observations have led me in a not uninterested nor inattentive survey of all the scenes most celebrated by Rousseau in his 'Héloïse,' I can safely say, that in this there is no exaggeration. It would be difficult to see Clarens (with the scenes around it, Vevay, Chillon, Boveret, St. Gingo, Meillerie, Eivan, and the entrances of the Rhone) without being forcibly struck with its peculiar adaptation to the persons and events with which it has been peopled. But this is not all; the feeling with which all around Clarens, and the opposite rocks of Meillerie, is invested, is of a still higher and more comprehensive order than the mere sympathy with individual passion; it is a sense of the existence of love in its most extended and sublime capacity, and of our own participation of its good and of its glory: it is the great principle of the universe, which is there more condensed, but not less manifested; and of which, though knowing ourselves a part, we lose our individuality, and mingle in the beauty of the whole.—If Rousseau had never written, nor lived, the same associations would not less have belonged to such scenes. He has added to the interest of his works by their adoption; he has shown his sense of their beauty by the selection; but they have done that for him which no human being could do for them.—I had the fortune (good or evil as it might be) to sail from Meillerie (where we landed for some time) to St. Gingo during a lake storm, which added to the magnificence of all around, although occasionally accompanied by danger to the boat, which was small and overloaded. It was over this very part of the lake that Rousseau has driven the boat of St. Preux and Madame Wolmar to Meillerie for shelter during a tempest. On gaining the shore at St. Gingo, I found that the wind had been sufficiently strong to blow down some fine old chestnut trees on the lower part of the mountains. On the opposite height of Clarens is a château. The hills are covered with vineyards, and interspersed with some small but beautiful woods; one of these was named the 'Bosquet de Julie;' and it is remarkable that, though long ago cut down by the brutal selfishness of the monks of St. Bernard (to whom the land appertained), that the ground might be enclosed into a vineyard for the miserable drones of an execrable superstition, the inhabitants of Clarens still point out the spot where its trees stood, calling it by the name which consecrated and survived them. Rousseau has not been particularly fortunate in the preservation of the 'local habitation;' he has given to 'airy nothings.' The Prior of Great St. Bernard has cut down some of his woods for the sake of a few casks of wine, and Buonaparte has levelled part of the rocks of Meillerie in improving the road to the Simplon. The road is an excellent one; but I cannot quite agree with a remark which I heard made, that 'La route vaut mieux que les souvenirs.'

The celebrated letter of Servius Sulpicius to Cicero, on the death of his daughter, describes as it then was, and now is, a path which I often traced in Greece, both by sea and land, in different journeys and voyages. 'On my return from Asia, as I was sailing from Ægina towards Megara, I began to contemplate the prospect of the countries around me: Ægina was behind, Megara before me; Piræus on the right, Corinth on the left: all which towns, once famous and flourishing, now lie overturned and buried in their ruins. Upon this sight, I could not but think presently within myself, Alas! how do we poor mortals fret and vex ourselves if any of our friends happen to die or be killed, whose life is yet so short, when the carcases of so many noble cities lie here exposed before me in one view.'—See Middleton's Cicero, vol. ii, p. 371.

The lower view is far to be preferred, if the traveller has time for one only; but in any point of view, either from above or below, it is worth all the cascades and torrents of Switzerland put together: the Staubach, Reichenbach, Pisse Vache, fall of Arpenaz, &c. are rills in comparative appearance. Of the fall of Schaffhausen I cannot speak, not yet having seen it.

'An Iris sits, amidst the infernal surge.'] Of the time, place, and qualities of this kind of iris, the reader will see a short account in a note to Manfred. The fall looks so much like 'the hell of waters,' that Addison thought the descent alluded to by the gulf in which Alecto plunged into the infernal regions. It is singular enough, that two of the finest cascades in Europe should be artificial—this of the Velino, and the one at Tivoli. The traveller is strongly recommended to trace the Velino, at least as high as the little lake called Pie' di Lup. The Reatine territory was the Italian Tempe (Cicer. Epist. ad Attic. xv. lib. iv.), and the ancient naturalists (Plin. Hist. Nat. lib. ii. cap. lxii), amongst other beautiful varieties, remarked the daily rainbows of the lake Velinus. A scholar of great name has devoted a treatise to this district alone. 'The drill'd dull lesson, forced down word by word.'] These stanzas may probably remind the reader of Ensign Northerton's remarks, 'D—n Homo, &c.; but the reasons for our dislike are not exactly the same. I wish to express, that we become tired of the task before we can comprehend the beauty; that we learn by rote before we can get by heart; that the freshness is worn away, and the future pleasure and advantage deadened and destroyed, by the didactic anticipation, at an age when we can neither feel nor understand the power of compositions which it requires an acquaintance with life, as well as Latin and Greek, to relish, or to reason upon. For the same reason, we never can be aware of the fullness of some of the finest passages of Shakespeare ('To be, or not to be,' for instance), from the habit of having them hammered into us at eight years old, as an exercise, not of mind, but of memory: so that when we are old enough to enjoy them, the taste is gone, and the appetite

palled. In some parts of the continent, young persons are taught from more common authors, and do not read the best classics till their maturity. I certainly do not speak on this point from any pique or aversion towards the place of my education. I was not a slow, though an idle boy; and I believe no one could, or can be, more attached to Harrow than I have always been, and with reason;—a part of the time passed there was the happiest of my life; and my preceptor, the Rev. Dr. Joseph Drury, was the best and worthiest friend I ever possessed, whose warnings I have remembered but too well, though too late, when I have erred,—and whose counsels I have but followed when I have done well or wisely. If ever this imperfect record of my feelings towards him should reach his eyes, let it remind him of one who never thinks of him but with gratitude and veneration—of one who would more gladly boast of having been his pupil, if, by more closely following his injunctions, he could reflect any honour upon his instructor.

opinion entertained of Britain by that orator and his contemporary Romans, has the following eloquent passage:—'From their raileries of this kind, on the barbarity and misery of our island, one cannot help reflecting on the surprising fate and revolutions of kingdoms; how Rome, once the mistress of the world, the seat of arts, empire, and glory, now lies sunk in sloth, ignorance, and poverty, enslaved to the most cruel as well as to the most contemptible of tyrants, superstition and religious imposture; while this remote country, anciently the jest and contempt of the polite Romans, is become the happy seat of liberty, plenty, and letters; flourishing in all the arts and refinements of civil life; yet running, perhaps, the same course which Rome itself had run before it, from virtuous industry to wealth; from wealth to luxury; from luxury to an impatience of discipline, and corruption of morals: till, by a total degeneracy and loss of virtue, being grown ripe for destruction, it falls a prey at last to some hardy oppressor, and, with the loss of liberty, losing everything that is valuable, sinks gradually again into its original barbarism.' 'Yet let us ponder boldly—'tis a base.'] 'At all events,' says the author of the 'Academical Questions,' 'I trust, whatever may be the fate of my own speculations, that philosophy will regain that estimation which it ought to possess. The free and philosophic spirit of our nation has been the theme of admiration to the world. This was the proud distinction of Englishmen, and the luminous source of all their glory. Shall we then forget the manly and dignified sentiments of our ancestors, to prate in the language of the mother or the nurse about our good old prejudices? This is not the way to defend the cause of truth. It was not thus that our fathers maintained it in the brilliant periods of our history. Prejudice may be trusted to guard the outworks for a short space of time, while reason slumbers in the citadel; but if the latter sink into a lethargy, the former will quickly erect a standard for herself. Philosophy, wisdom, and liberty support each other: he who will not reason is a bigot; he who cannot is a fool; and he who dares not is a slave.'—Vol. i, pref., pp. 14, 15.

'Like laurels on the bald first Cæsar's head.'] Suetonius informs us that Julius Cæsar was particularly gratified by that decree of the senate which enabled him to wear a wreath of laurel on all occasions. He was anxious, not to show that he was the conqueror of the world, but to hide that he was bald. A stranger at Rome would hardly have guessed at the motive, nor should we without the help of the historian.

'While stands the Coliseum, Rome shall stand.'] This is quoted in the 'Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire,' as a proof that the Coliseum was entire, when seen by the Anglo-Saxon pilgrims at the end of the seventh, or the beginning of the eighth, century. A notice on the Coliseum may be seen in the 'Historical Illustrations,' p. 263.

'From Jove to Jesus—spared and blest by time.'] 'Though plundered of all its brass, except the ring which was necessary to preserve the aperture above; though exposed to repeated fires; though sometimes flooded by the river, and always open to the rain, no monument of equal antiquity is so well preserved as this rotundo. It passed with little alteration from the Pagan into the present worship; and so convenient were its niches for the Christian altar, that Michael Angelo, ever studious of ancient beauty, introduced their design as a model in the Catholic church.'—Forsyth's Italy, p. 137, 2nd edit.

'Their eyes on honour'd forms, whose busts around them close.'] The Pantheon has been made a receptacle for the busts of modern great, or, at least, distinguished men. The flood of light which once fell through the large orb above on the whole circle of divinities, now shines on a numerous assemblage of mortals, some one or two of whom have been almost deified by the veneration of their countrymen. For a notice of the Pantheon, see 'Historical Illustrations,' p. 287.

'There is a dungeon, in whose dim drear light.'] This and the three next stanzas allude to the story of the Roman daughter, which is recalled to the traveller by the site, or pretended site, of that adventure, now shown at the church of St. Nicholas in Carcere. The difficulties attending the full belief of the tale are stated in 'Historical Illustrations,' p. 295.

'Turn to the mole which Hadrian rear'd on high.'] The castle of St. Angelo. See 'Historical Illustrations.'

'But lo! the dome—the vast and wondrous dome.'] This and the six stanzas have a reference to the church of St. Peter's. For a measurement of the comparative length of this basilica and the other great churches of Europe, see the pavement of St. Peter's, and the 'Classical Tour through Italy,' vol. ii. p. 125 et seq., chap. iv.

Page 250, col. 1.

'Nations have arm'd in madness, the strange fate.'] Mary died on the scaffold; Elizabeth of a broken heart; Charles V. a hermit; Louis XIV. a bankrupt in means and glory; Cromwell of anxiety and, 'the greatest is behind,' Napoleon lives a prisoner. To these sovereigns a long but superfluous list might be added of names equally illustrious and unhappy.

Page 250, col. 1.

'Lo, Nemi! navell'd in the woody hills.'] The village of Nemi was near the Arician retreat of Egeria, and, from the shades which embosomed the temple of Diana, has preserved to this day its distinctive appellation of The Grove. Nemi is but an evening's ride from the comfortable inn of Albano.

'That tomb which, gleaming o'er the cliff.'] A tomb above the rocks on the promontory, by some supposed the sepulchre of Themistocles.

'Sultana of the Nightingale.'] The attachment of the nightingale to the rose is a well-known Persian fable. If I mistake not, the 'Bulbul of a thousand tales' is one of his appellations.

'Till the gay mariner's guitar.'] The guitar is the constant amusement of the Greek sailor by night; with a steady fair wind, and during a calm, it is accompanied always by the voice, and often by dancing.

'Ay, but to die and go we know not where,
To lie in cold obstruction?'

Measure for Measure, Act iii. sc. 1.

'The first, last look by death reveal'd!'] I trust that few of my readers have ever had an opportunity of witnessing what is here attempted in description; but those who have will probably retain a painful remembrance of that singular beauty which pervades, with few exceptions, the features of the dead, a few hours, and but for a few hours, after 'the spirit is not there.' It is to be remarked in cases of violent death by gun-shot wounds, the expression is always that of languor, whatever the natural energy of the sufferer's character; but in death from a stab the countenance preserves its traits of feeling or ferocity, and the mind its bias, to the last.

Page 254, col. 1.

'Slaves—nay, the bondsmen of a slave.'] Athens is the property of the Kislár Aga (the slave of the seraglio and guardian of the women), who appoints the Waywode. A pander and eunuch—these are not polite, yet true appellations—now governs the governor of Athens!

Page 254, col. 2.

'In echoes of the far tophaike.'] 'Tophaike,' musket. The Bairam is announced by the cannon at sunset: the illumination of the mosques, and the firing of all kinds of small arms, loaded with ball, proclaim it during the night.

Page 254, col. 2.

'Swift as the hur'd on high jerreed.'] Jerreed, or Djerrid, a blunted Turkish javelin, which is darted from horseback with great force and precision. It is a favourite exercise of the Mussulmans; but I know not if it can be called a manly one, since the most expert in the art are the Black Eunuchs of Constantinople. I think, next to these, a Mamlouk at Smyrna was the most skilful that came within my observation.

Page 255, col. 1.

'He came, he went, like the simoom.'] The blast of the desert, fatal to every thing living, and often alluded to in eastern poetry.

Page 255, col. 2.

'To bless the sacred "bread and salt.]" To partake of food, to break bread and salt with your host, insures the safety of the guest: even though an enemy, his person from that moment is sacred.

Page 255, col. 2.

'Since his turban was cleft by the infidel's sabre!'] I need hardly observe, that Charity and Hospitality are the first duties enjoined by Mahomet; and to say truth, very generally practised by his disciples. The first praise that can be bestowed on a chief is a panegyric on his bounty; the next, on his valour.

Page 255, col. 2.

'And silver-sheathed ataghan.'] The ataghan, a long dagger worn with pistols in the belt, in a metal scabbard, generally of silver; and, among the wealthier, gilt, or of gold.

Page 255, col. 2.

'An Emir by his garb of green.'] Green is the privileged colour of the prophet's numerous pretended descendants; with them, as here, faith (the family inheritance) is supposed to supersede the necessity of good works: they are the worst of a very indifferent brood.

Page 255, col. 2.

""Ho! who art thou?"—"This low salam.]" 'Salam aleikoum! aleikoum salam!' peace be with you; be with you peace—the salutation reserved for the faithful:—to a Christian, 'Urliarula,' a good journey; or 'saban hiresem, saban serula;' good morn, good even; and sometimes, 'may your end be happy;' are the usual salutes.

'The insect queen of eastern spring.'] The blue-winged butterfly of Kashmeer, the most rare and beautiful of the species.

'Is like the Scorpion girt by fire.'] Alluding to the dubious suicide of the scorpion, so placed for experiment by gentle philosophers. Some maintain that the position of the sting, when turned towards the head, is merely a convulsive movement; but others have actually brought in the verdict 'Felo de se.' The scorpions are surely interested in a speedy decision of the question; as, if once fairly established as insect Catos, they will probably be allowed to live as long as they think proper, without being martyred for the sake of an hypothesis.

'Bright as the jewel of Giamschid.'] The celebrated fabulous ruby of Sultan Giamschid, the embellisher of Istakhar; from its splendour, named Schebgerag, 'the torch of night;' also 'the cup of the sun,' &c. In the first edition, 'Giamschid' was written as a word of three syllables; so D'Herbelot has it; but I am told Richardson reduces it to a dissyllable, and writes 'Jamshid.' I have left in the text the orthography of the one with the pronunciation of the other.

'Though on Al-Sirat's arch I stood.'] Al-Sirat, the bridge of breath, narrower than the thread of a famished spider, and sharper than the edge of a sword, over which the Mussulmans must skate into Paradise, to which it is the only entrance; but this is not the worst, the river beneath being hell itself, into which, as may be expected, the unskilful and tender of foot contrive to tumble with a 'facilis descensus Avernus,' not very pleasing in prospect to the next passenger. There is a shorter cut downwards for the Jews and Christians.

Page 257, col. 1.

'A soulless toy for tyrant's lust?'] A vulgar error; the Koran allots at least a third of Paradise to well-behaved women; but by far the greater number of Mussulmans interpret the text their own way, and exclude their moieties from heaven. Being enemies to Platonics, they cannot discern 'any fitness of things' in the souls of the other sex, conceiving them to be superseded by the Houris.

Page 257, col. 1.

'The young pomegranate's blossoms strew.'] An oriental simile, which may, perhaps, though fairly stolen, be deemed 'plus Arabe qu'en Arabie.'

Page 257, col. 1.

'Her hair in hyacinthine flow.'] Hyacinthine, in Arabic 'Sunbul;' as common a thought in the eastern poets as it was among the Greeks.

Page 257, col. 2.

'Then curl'd his very beard with ire.'] A phenomenon not uncommon with an angry Mussulman. In 1809, the Capitan Pacha's whiskers at a diplomatic audience were no less lively with indignation than a tiger cat's, to the horror of all the dragomans; the portentous mustachios twisted, they stood erect of their own accord, and were expected every moment to change their colour, but at last condescended to subside, which, probably, saved more heads than they contained hairs.

Page 258, col. 1.

'Nor raised the craven cry, Amaun!'] 'Amaun,' quarter, pardon.

Page 258, col. 1.

'I know him by the evil eye.'] The 'evil eye,' a common superstition in the Levant, and of which the imaginary effects are yet very singular on those who conceive themselves affected.

Page 258, col. 2.

'A fragment of his palampore.'] The flowered shawls generally worn by persons of rank.

Page 259, col. 1.

'His calpac rent—his caftan red.'] The calpac is the solid cap or centre part of the head-dress; the shawl is wound round it, and forms the turban.

Page 259, col. 1.

'A turban carved in coarsest stone.'] The turban, pillar, and inscriptive verse, decorate the tombs of the Osmanlies, whether in the cemetery or the wilderness. In the mountains you frequently pass similar mementos; and on inquiry you are informed that they record some victim of rebellion, plunder, or revenge.

'At solemn sound of "Alla Hu!"'] 'Alla Hu!' the concluding words of the Muezzin's call to prayer from the highest gallery on the exterior of the Minaret. On a still evening, when the Muezzin has a fine voice, which is frequently the case, the effect is solemn and beautiful beyond all the bells in Christendom.

Page 259, col. 1.

'They come—their kerchiefs green they wave.'] The following is part of a battle song of the Turks:—'I see—I see a dark-eyed girl of Paradise, and she waves a handkerchief, a kerchief of green; and cries aloud, "Come, kiss me, for I love thee," &c.

Page 259, col. 1.

'Beneath avenging Monkir's scythe.'] Monkir and Nekir are the inquisitors of the dead, before whom the corpse undergoes a slight noviciate and preparatory training for damnation. If the answers are none of the clearest, he is hauled up with a scythe and thumped down with a red-hot mace till properly seasoned, with a variety of subsidiary probations. The office of these angels is no sinecure; there are but two, and the number of orthodox deceased being in a small proportion to the remainder, their hands are always full. See Relig. Ceremon. and Sale's Koran.

Page 259, col. 1.

'To wander round lost Eblis' throne.'] Eblis, the Oriental Prince of Darkness.

Page 259, col. 1.

'But first, on earth as Vampire sent.'] The Vampire superstition is still general in the Levant. Honest Tournefort tells a long story, which Mr. Southey, in the notes on Thalaba, quotes, about these 'Vroucolochas,' as he calls them. The Romaic term is 'Vardoulacha.' I recollect a whole family being terrified by the scream of a child, which they imagined must proceed from such a visitation. The Greeks never mention the word without horror. I find that 'Broucolokas' is an old legitimate Hellenic appellation—at least is so applied to Arsenius, who, according to the Greeks, was after his death animated by the Devil. The moderns, however, use the word I mention.

Page 259, col. 2.

'Thy gnashing tooth and haggard lip.'] The freshness of the face, and the wetness of the lip with blood, are the never-failing signs of a Vampire. The stories told in Hungary and Greece of these foul feeders are singular, and some of them most incredibly attested.

Page 261, col. 1.

'It is as if the desert bird.'] The pelican is, I believe, the bird so libelled, by the imputation of feeding her chickens with her blood.

'Deep in whose darkly boding ear.'] This superstition of a second-hearing (for I never met with downright second-sight in the East) fell once under my own observation. On my third journey to Cape Colonna, early in 1811, as we passed through the defile that leads from the hamlet between Keratia and Colonna, I observed Dervish Tahiri riding rather out of the path, and leaning his head upon his hand, as if in pain. I rode up and inquired. 'We are in peril,' he answered. 'What peril? we are not now in Albania, nor in the passes to Ephesus, Messalunghi, or Lepanto; there are plenty of us, well armed, and the Choriates have not courage to be thieves.'—'True, Affendi, but nevertheless the shot is ringing in my ears.'—'The shot! not a top-hat is being fired this morning.'—'I hear it notwithstanding—Bom—Bom—as plainly as I hear your voice.'—'Psha!'—'As you please, Affendi; if it is written, so will it be.'—I left this quick-eared predestinarian, and rode up to Basili, his Christian compatriot, whose ears, though not at all prophetic, by no means relished the intelligence. We all arrived at Colonna, remained some hours, and returned leisurely, saying a variety of brilliant things, in more languages than spoiled the building of Babel, upon the mistaken seer. Romaic, Arnaout, Turkish, Italian, and English, were all exercised, in various conceits, upon the unfortunate Mussulman. While we were contemplating the beautiful prospect, Dervish was occupied about the columns. I thought he was deranged into an antiquarian, and asked him if he had become a 'Palaoastro' man? 'No,' said he, 'but these pillars will be useful in making a stand; and added other remarks, which at least evinced his own belief in his troublesome faculty of forehearing. On our return to Athens we heard from Leoné (a prisoner set ashore some days after) of the intended attack of the Mainotes, mentioned, with the cause of its not taking place, in the notes to Childe Harold, Canto 2nd. I was at some pains to question the man, and he described the dresses, arms, and marks of the horses of our party so accurately, that, with other circumstances, we could not doubt of his having been in 'villainous company,' and ourselves in a bad neighbourhood. Dervish became a soothsayer for life, and I dare say is now hearing more musketry than ever will be fired, to the great refreshment of the Arnaouts of Berat, and his native mountains.—I shall mention one trait more of this singular race. In March, 1811, a remarkably stout and active Arnaout came (I believe the fiftieth on the same errand) to offer himself as an attendant, which was declined: 'Well, Affendi,' quoth he, 'may you live!—you would have found me useful. I shall leave the town for the hills to-morrow; in the winter I return, perhaps you will then receive me.'—Dervish, who was present, remarked as a thing of course, and of no consequence, 'in the mean time he will join the Klephtes' (robbers), which was true to the letter. If not cut off, they come down in the winter, and pass it unmolested in some town, where they are often as well known as their exploits.

'Looks not to priesthood for relief.'] The monk's sermon is omitted. It seems to have had so little effect upon the patient, that it could have no hopes from the reader. It may be sufficient to say, that it was of a customary length (as may be perceived from the interruptions and uneasiness of the patient), and was delivered in the usual tone of all orthodox preachers.

Page 263, col. 2.

'And shining in her white symar.'] 'Symar,' a shroud.

'Or stay the passing pilgrim's tread.'] The circumstance to which the above story relates was not very uncommon in Turkey. A few years ago the wife of Muchtart Pacha complained to his father of his son's supposed infidelity; he asked with whom, and she had the barbarity to give in a list of the twelve handsomest women in Yanina. They were seized, fastened up in sacks, and drowned in the lake the same night! One of the guards who was present informed me, that not one of the victims uttered a cry, or showed a symptom of terror, at so sudden a 'wrench from all we know, from all we love.' The fate of Phrosine, the fairest of this sacrifice, is the subject of many a Romaic and Arnaout ditty. The story in the text is one told of a young Venetian many years ago, and now nearly forgotten. I heard it by accident recited by one of the coffee-house story-tellers who abound in the Levant, and sing or recite their narratives. The additions and interpolations by the translator will be easily distinguished from the rest, by the want of Eastern imagery; and I regret that my memory has retained so few fragments of the original. For the contents of some of the notes I am indebted partly to D'Herbelot, and partly to that most Eastern, and, as Mr. Weber justly entitles it, 'sublime tale,' the 'Caliph Vathek.' I do not know from what source the author of that singular volume may have drawn his materials; some of his incidents are to be found in the 'Bibliothèque Orientale;' but for correctness of costume, beauty of description, and power of imagination, it far surpasses all European imitations; and bears such marks of originality, that those who have visited the East will find some difficulty in believing it to be more than a translation. As an Eastern tale, even Rasselas must bow before it; his 'Happy Valley' will not bear a comparison with the 'Hall of Eblis.'

'The mind, the Music breathing from her face.'] This expression has met with objections. I will not refer to 'Him who hath not Music in his soul,' but merely request the reader to recollect, for ten seconds, the features of the woman whom he believes to be the most beautiful; and, if he then does not comprehend fully what is feebly expressed in the above line, I shall be sorry for us both. For an eloquent passage in the latest work of the first female writer of this, perhaps of any age, on the analogy (and the immediate comparison excited by that analogy) between 'painting and music,' see vol. iii. cap. 10, DE L'ALLEMAGNE. And is not this connexion still stronger with the original than the copy? with the colouring of Nature than of Art? After all, this is rather to be felt than described; still I think there are some who will understand it, at least they would have done had they beheld the countenance whose speaking harmony suggested the idea; for this passage is not drawn from imagination but memory, that mirror which Affliction dashes to the earth, and looking down upon the fragments, only beholds the reflection multiplied!

Page 266, col. 2.

'But yet the line of Carasman.'] Carasman Oglou, or Kara Osman Oglou, is the principal land-holder in Turkey; he governs Magnesia: those who, by a kind of feudal tenure, possess land on condition of service, are called Timariots: they serve as Spahis, according to the extent of territory, and bring a certain number into the field, generally cavalry.

Page 266, col. 2.

'And teach the messenger what fate.'] When a Pacha is sufficiently strong to resist, the single messenger, who is always the first bearer of the order for his death, is strangled instead, and sometimes five or six, one after the other, on the same errand, by command of the refractory patient; if, on the contrary, he is weak or loyal, he bows, kisses the Sultan's respectable signature, and is bowstrung with great complacency. In 1810, several of these presents were exhibited in the niche of the Seraglio gate; among others the head of the Pacha of Bagdat, a brave young man, cut off by treachery, after a desperate resistance.

Page 266, col. 2.

'Thrice clapp'd his hands, and call'd his steed.'] Clapping of the hands calls the servants. The Turks hate a superfluous expenditure of voice, and they have no bells.

Page 266, col. 2.

'Resign'd his gem-adorn'd chibouque.'] 'Chibouque,' the Turkish pipe, of which the amber mouth-piece, and sometimes the ball which contains the leaf, is adorned with precious stones, if in possession of the wealthier orders.

'With Maugrabee and Mamaluke.'] 'Maugrabee,' Moorish mercenaries.

'Careering cleave the folded felt.'] A twisted fold of felt is used for scimitar practice by the Turks, and few but Mussulman arms can cut through it at a single stroke: sometimes a tough turban is used for the same purpose. The jerreed is a game of blunt javelins, animated and graceful.

Page 267, col. 1.

'Nor heard their Ollahs wild and loud.'] 'Ollahs,' Alla il Allah, the 'Leilies,' as the Spanish poets call them, the sound is Ollah; a cry of which the Turks, for a silent people, are somewhat prone to abuse, particularly during the jerreed, or in the chase, but mostly in battle. Their animation in the field, and gravity in the chamber, with their pipes and combolios, form an amusing contrast.

Page 267, col. 1.

'The Persian Atar-gul's perfume.'] 'Atar-gul,' attar of roses. The Persian is the finest.

Page 267, col. 1.

'The pictured roof and marble floor.'] The ceiling and wainscots, or rather walls, of the Mussulman apartments are generally painted, in great houses, with one eternal and highly-coloured view of Constantinople, wherein the principal features is a noble contempt of perspective; below, arms, scimitars, &c., are, in general, fancifully and not inelegantly disposed.

Page 267, col. 2.

'A message from the Bulbul bears.'] It has been much doubted whether the notes of this 'Lover of the rose' are sad or merry; and Mr. Fox's remarks on the subject have provoked some learned controversy as to the opinions of the ancients on this subject. I dare not venture a conjecture on this point, though a little inclined to the 'errare male lem,' &c., if Mr. Fox was mistaken.

'Ah! yonder see the Tchocadar.'] 'Tchocadar'—one of the attendants who precedes a man of authority.

'Thine own "broad Hellespont" still dashes.'] The wrangling about this epithet, 'the broad Hellespont' or the 'boundless Hellespont,' whether it means one or the other, or what it means at all, has been beyond all possibility of detail. I have even heard it disputed on the spot; and not foreseeing a speedy conclusion to the controversy, amused myself with swimming across it in the mean time; and probably may again, before the point is settled. Indeed, the question as to the truth of 'the tale of Troy divine' still continues, much of it resting upon the talismanic word δωρεος: probably Homer had the same notion of distance that a coquette has of time; and when he talks of boundless, means half a mile; as the latter, by a like figure, when she says eternal attachment simply, specifies three weeks.

'Which Ammon's son ran proudly round.'] Before his Persian invasion, and crowned the altar with laurels, &c. He was afterwards imitated by Caracalla in his race. It is believed that the last also poisoned a friend, named Festus, for the sake of new Patroclan games. I have seen the sheep feeding on the tombs of Æsietes and Antilochus: the first is in the centre of the plain.

Page 270, col. 1.

'O'er which her fairy fingers ran.'] When rubbed, the amber is susceptible of a perfume, which is slight, but not disagreeable.

Page 270, col. 1.

'Her mother's sainted amulet.'] The belief in amulets engraved on gems, or enclosed in gold boxes, containing scraps from the Koran, worn round the neck, wrist, or arm, is still universal in the East. The Koorsee (throne) verse in the second cap. of the Koran describes the attributes of the Most High, and is engraved in this manner, and worn by the pious, as the most esteemed and sublime of all sentences.

Page 270, col. 1.

'And by her comboloio lies.'] 'Comboloio'—a Turkish rosary. The MSS., particularly those of the Persians, are richly adorned and illuminated. The Greek females are kept in utter ignorance; but many of the Turkish girls are highly accomplished, though not actually qualified for a Christian coterie. Perhaps some of our own 'blues' might not be the worse for bleaching.

Page 270, col. 2.

'In him was some young Galiongée.'] 'Galiongée'—or Galiongi, a sailor, that is, a Turkish sailor; the Greeks navigate, the Turks work the guns. Their dress is picturesque; and I have seen the Capitan Pacha, more than once, wearing it as a kind of incog. Their legs, however, are generally naked. The buskins described in the text as sheathed behind with silver are those of an Arnaut robber, who was my host (he had quitted the profession, at his Pyrgo, near Gastouni in the Morea; they were plated in scales one over the other, like the back of an armadillo).

'So may the Koran verse display'd.'] The characters on all Turkish scimitars contain sometimes the name of the place of their manufacture, but more generally a text from the Koran, in letters of gold. Amongst those in my possession is one with a blade of singular construction: it is very broad, and the edge notched into serpentine curves like the ripple of water, or the wavering of flame. I asked the Armenian who sold it, what possible use such a figure could add; he said, in Italian, that he did not know; but the Mussulmans had an idea that those of this form gave a severer wound; and liked it because it was 'piu feroce.' I did not much admire the reason, but bought it for its peculiarity.

'But like the nephew of a Cain.'] It is to be observed, that every allusion to any thing or personage in the Old Testament, such as the Ark, or Cain, is equally the privilege of Mussulman and Jew: indeed, the former profess to be much better acquainted with the lives, true and fabulous, of the patriarchs, than is warranted by our own sacred writ; and not content with Adam, they have a biography of Pre-Adamites. Solomon is the monarch of all necromancy, and Moses a prophet inferior only to Christ and Mahomet. Zuleika is the Persian name of Potiphar's wife; and her amour with Joseph constitutes one of the finest poems in their language. It is, therefore, no violation of costume to put the names of Cain, or Noah, into the mouth of a Moslem.

Ali Pacha, while I was in the country, married the daughter of his victim, some years after the event had taken place at a bath in Sophia, or Adrianople. The poison was mixed in the cup of coffee, which is presented before the sherbet by the bath keeper, after dressing.

MILTON.

For a belief that the souls of the dead inhabit the form of birds, we need not travel to the East. Lord Lyttelton's ghost story, the belief of the Duchess of Kendal, that George I. flew into her window in the shape of a raven (see 'Orford's Reminiscences'), and many other instances, bring this superstition nearer home. The most singular was the whim of a Worcester lady, who, believing her daughter to exist in the shape of a singing bird, literally furnished her pew in the cathedral with cages full of the kind; and as she was rich, and a benefactress in beautifying the church, no objection was made to her harmless folly. For this anecdote, see 'Orford's Letters.'

'Hope withering fled, and Mercy sigh'd farewell!'] That Conrad is a character not altogether out of nature, I shall attempt to prove by some historical coincidences which I have met with since writing 'The Corsair.'

'Eccelin prisonnier,' dit Rolandini, 's'enfermoit dans un silence menaçant, il fixoit sur la terre son visage féroce, et ne donnoit point d'essor à sa profonde indignation. De toutes partes cependant les soldats et les peuples accouroient; ils vouloient voir cet homme, jadis si puissant, et la joie universelle éclatoit de toutes partes. * * * * Eccelin étoit d'une petite taille; mais tout l'aspect de sa personne, tous ses mouvemens, indiquoient un soldat.—Son langage étoit amer, son déportement superbe—et par son seul égard, il faisoit trembler les plus hardis.'—Sismondi, tome iii. p. 219.

Again, 'Gizericus (Genserik, king of the Vandals, the conqueror of both Carthage and Rome), saturâ mediocris, et equi casu claudicans, animo profundus, sermone rarus, luxuriæ contemptor, irâ turbidus, habendi cupidus, ad sollicitandas gentes providentissimus,' &c. &c.—Jornandes de Rebus Geticis, c. 33.

I beg leave to quote these gloomy realities to keep in countenance my Giaour and Corsair.

'Escaped, is here—himself would tell the rest.'] It has been observed, that Conrad's entering disguised as a spy is out of nature. Perhaps so. I find something not unlike it in history.—'Anxious to explore with his own eyes the state of the Vandals, Majorian ventured, after disguising the colour of his hair, to visit Carthage in the character of his own ambassador; and Genserik was afterwards mortified by the discovery, that he had entertained and dismissed the Emperor of the Romans. Such an anecdote may be rejected as an improbable fiction: but it is a fiction which would not have been imagined unless in the life of a hero.'—See GIBBON'S Decline and Fall, vol. vi. p. 180.

'Link'd with one virtue, and a thousand crimes.'] That the point of honour which is represented in one instance of Conrad's character has not been carried beyond the bounds of probability, may perhaps be in some degree confirmed by the following anecdote of a brother buccaneer in the year 1814:—'Our readers have all seen the account of the enterprise against the pirates of Barrataria; but few, we believe, were informed of the situation, history, or nature of that establishment. For the information of such as were unacquainted with it, we have procured from a friend the following interesting narrative of the main facts, of which he has personal knowledge, and which cannot fail to interest some of our readers:—Barrataria is a bay, or a narrow arm, of the Gulf of Mexico; it runs through a rich but very flat country, until it reaches within a mile of the Mississippi river, fifteen miles below the city of New Orleans. The bay has branches almost innumerable, in which persons can lie concealed from the severest scrutiny. It communicates with three lakes which lie on the south-west side, and these, with the lake of the same name, and which lies contiguous to the sea, where there is an island formed by the two arms of this lake and the sea. The east and west points of this island were fortified, in the year 1811, by a band of pirates, under the command of one Monsieur La Fitte. A large majority of these outlaws are of that class of the population of the state of Louisiana who fled from the island of St. Domingo

during the troubles there, and took refuge in the island of Cuba; and when the last war between France and Spain commenced, they were compelled to leave that island with the short notice of a few days. Without ceremony they entered the United States, the most of them the state of Louisiana, with all the negroes they had possessed in Cuba. They were notified by the Governor of that State of the clause in the constitution which forbade the importation of slaves; but, at the same time, received the assurance of the Governor that he would obtain, if possible, the approbation of the General Government for their retaining this property.—The island of Barrataria is situated about lat. 29 deg. 15 min., lon. 92. 30.; and is as remarkable for its health as for the superior scale and shell fish with which its waters abound. The chief of this horde, like Charles de Moor, had, mixed with his many vices, some virtues. In the year 1813, this party had, from its turpitude and boldness, claimed the attention of the Governor of Louisiana; and to break up the establishment he thought proper to strike at the head. He therefore offered a reward of 500 dollars for the head of Monsieur La Fitte, who was well known to the inhabitants of the city of New Orleans, from his immediate connexion, and his once having been a fencing-master in that city of great reputation, which art he learnt in Buonaparte's army, where he was a captain. The reward which was offered by the Governor for the head of La Fitte was answered by the offer of a reward from the latter of 15,000 for the head of the Governor. The Governor ordered out a company to march from the city to La Fitte's island, and to burn and destroy all the property, and to bring to the city of New Orleans all his banditti. This company, under the command of a man who had been the intimate associate of this bold Captain, approached very near to the fortified island, before he saw a man, or heard a sound, until he heard a whistle, not unlike a boatswain's call. Then it was he found himself surrounded by armed men who had emerged from the secret avenues which led into Bayou. Here it was that the modern Charles de Moor developed his few noble traits; for to this man, who had come to destroy his life and all that was dear to him, he not only spared his life, but offered him that which would have made the honest soldier easy for the remainder of his days; which was indignantly refused. He then, with the approbation of his captor, returned to the city. This circumstance, and some concomitant events, proved that this band of pirates was not to be taken by land. Our naval force having always been small in that quarter, exertions for the destruction of this illicit establishment could not be expected from them until augmented: for an officer of the navy, with most of the gun-boats on that station, had to retreat from an overwhelming force of La Fitte's. So soon as the augmentation of the navy authorized an attack, one was made; the overthrow of this banditti has been the result: and now this almost invulnerable point and key to New Orleans is clear of an enemy, it is to be hoped the government will hold it by a strong military force.'—American Newspaper.

In Noble's continuation of 'Granger's Biographical History' there is a singular passage in his account of Archbishop Blackbourne; and as in some measure connected with the profession of the hero of the foregoing poem, I cannot resist the temptation of extracting it.—'There is something mysterious in the history and character of Dr.

NOTES TO LARA

Blackbourne. The former is but imperfectly known; and report has even asserted he was a buccaneer; and that one of his brethren in that profession having asked, on his arrival in England, what had become of his old chum, Blackbourne, was answered, he is Archbishop of York. We are informed that Blackbourne was installed sub-dean of Exeter in 1694, which office he resigned in 1702; but after his successor Lewis Barnet's death, in 1704, he regained it. In the following year he became dean; and in 1714 held with it the archdeaconry of Cornwall. He was consecrated bishop of Exeter, February 24, 1716; and translated to York, November 28, 1724, as a reward, according to court scandal, for uniting George I. to the Duchess of Munster. This, however, appears to have been an unfounded calumny. As archbishop he behaved with great prudence, and was equally respectable as the guardian of the revenues of the see. Rumour whispered he retained the vices of his youth, and that a passion for the fair sex formed an item in the list of his weaknesses; but so far from being convicted by seventy witnesses, he does not appear to have been directly criminated by one. In short, I look upon these aspersions as the effects of mere malice. How is it possible a buccaneer should have been so good a scholar as Blackbourne certainly was? He who had so perfect a knowledge of the classics (particularly of the Greek tragedians), as to be able to read them with the same ease as he could Shakespeare, must have taken great pains to acquire the learned languages; and have had both leisure and good masters. But he was undoubtedly educated at Christ-church College, Oxford. He is allowed to have been a pleasant man; this, however, was turned against him, by its being said, "he gained more hearts than souls."

'The only voice that could soothe the passions of the savage (Alphonso III.) was that of an amiable and virtuous wife, the sole object of his love; the voice of Donna Isabella, the daughter of the Duke of Savoy, and the grand-daughter of Philip II. King of Spain.—Her dying words sunk deep into his memory; his fierce spirit melted into tears; and, after the last embrace, Alphonso retired into his chamber to bewail his irreparable loss, and to meditate on the vanity of human life.'—Gibbon's Miscellaneous Works, vol. iii. p. 473.

LARA

'The Serfs are glad through Lara's wide domain.] The reader is apprised, that the name of Lara being Spanish, and no circumstance of local and natural description fixing the scene or hero of the poem to any country or age, the word 'Serf,' which could not be correctly applied to the lower classes in Spain, who were never vassals of the soil, has nevertheless been employed to designate the followers of our fictitious chieftain.

'A Serf that cross'd the intervening vale.'] The event in this section was suggested by the description of the death, or rather burial, of the Duke of Gandia. The most interesting and particular account of it is given by Burchard, and is in substance as follows:—"On the eighth day of June, the Cardinal of Valenza and the Duke of Gandia, sons of the pope, supped with their mother, Vanozza, near the church of S. Pietro ad vincula; several other persons being present at the entertainment. A late hour approaching, and the cardinal having reminded his brother that it was time to return to the apostolic palace, they mounted their horses or mules, with only a few attendants, and proceeded together as far as the Palace of Cardinal Ascanio Sforza, when the duke informed the cardinal that, before he returned home, he had to pay a visit of pleasure. Dismissing therefore all his attendants, excepting his staffiero, or footman, and a person in a mask, who had paid him a visit whilst at supper, and who, during the space of a month or thereabouts, previous to this time, had called upon him almost daily at the apostolic palace, he took this person behind him on his mule, and proceeded to the street of the Jews, where he quitted his servant, directing him to remain there until a certain hour; when, if he did not return, he might repair to the palace. The duke then seated the person in the mask behind him, and rode, I know not whither; but in that night he was assassinated, and thrown into the river. The servant, after having been dismissed, was also assaulted and mortally wounded; and although he was attended with great care, yet such was his situation, that he could give no intelligible account of what had befallen his master. In the morning, the duke not having returned to the palace, his servants began to be alarmed; and one of them informed the pontiff of the evening excursion of his sons, and that the duke had not yet made his appearance. This gave the pope no small anxiety; but he conjectured that the duke had been attracted by some courtesan to pass the night with her, and not choosing to quit the house in open day, had waited till the following evening to return home. When, however, the evening arrived, and he found himself disappointed in his expectations, he became deeply afflicted, and began to make inquiries from different persons, whom he ordered to attend him for that purpose. Amongst these was a man named Giorgio Schiavoni, who, having discharged some timber from a bark in the river, had remained on board the vessel to watch it; and being interrogated whether he had seen any one thrown into the river on the night preceding, he replied, that he saw two men on foot, who came down the street, and looked diligently about, to observe whether any person was passing. That seeing no one, they returned, and a short time afterwards two others came, and looked around in the same manner as the former: no person still appearing, they gave a sign to their companions, when a man came, mounted on a white horse, having behind him a dead body, the head and arms of which hung on one side, and the feet on the other side of the horse; the two persons on foot supporting the body, to prevent its falling. They thus proceeded towards that part where the filth of the city is usually discharged into the river, and turning the horse, with his tail towards the water, the two persons took the dead body by the arms and feet, and with all their strength flung it into the river. The person on horseback then asked if they had thrown it in; to which they replied, Signor si (yes, Sir). He then looked towards the river, and seeing a mantle floating on the stream, he inquired what it was that appeared black, to which they answered, it was a mantle; and one of them threw stones upon it, in consequence of which it sunk. The attendants of the pontiff then inquired from Giorgio, why he had not revealed this to the governor of the city; to which he replied, that he had seen in his time a hundred dead bodies thrown into the river at the same place, without any inquiry being made respecting them; and that he had not, therefore, considered it as a matter of any importance. The fishermen and seamen were then collected, and ordered to search the river, where, on the following evening, they found the body of the duke, with his habit entire, and thirty ducats in his purse. He was pierced with nine wounds, one of which was in his throat, the others in his head, body, and limbs. No sooner was the pontiff informed of the death of his son, and that he had been thrown, like filth, into the river, than, giving way to his grief, he shut himself up in a chamber, and wept bitterly. The Cardinal of Segovia, and other attendants on the pope, went to the door, and after many hours spent in persuasions and exhortations, prevailed upon him to admit them. From the evening of Wednesday till the following Saturday the pope took no food; nor did he sleep from Thursday morning till the same hour on the ensuing day. At length, however, giving way to the entreaties of his attendants, he began to restrain his sorrow, and to consider the injury which his own health might sustain by the further indulgence of his grief.'—ROSCOE'S Leo Tenth, vol. i. p. 265.

He died of his wounds next day. His last order was the decapitation of General Breuner, and some other German prisoners; and his last words, 'Oh that I could thus serve all the Christian dogs!' a speech and act not unlike one of Caligula. He was a young man of great ambition and unbounded presumption: on being told that Prince Eugene, then opposed to him, 'was a great general,' he said, 'I shall become a greater, and at his expense.'

'Sent that soft and tender moan?'] I must here acknowledge a close, though unintentional, resemblance in these twelve lines to a passage in an unpublished poem of Mr. Coleridge, called 'Christabel.' It was not till after these lines were written that I heard that wild and singularly original and beautiful poem recited; and the MS. of that production I never saw till very recently, by the kindness of Mr. Coleridge himself, who, I hope, is convinced that I have not been a wilful plagiarist. The original idea undoubtedly pertains to Mr. Coleridge, whose poem has been composed above fourteen years. Let me conclude by a hope that he will not longer delay the publication of a production, of which I can only add my mite of approbation to the applause of far more competent judges.

'Parisina.' This turned out a calamitous year for the people of Ferrara, for there occurred a very tragical event in the court of their sovereign. Our annals, both printed and in manuscript, with the exception of the unpolished and negligent work of Sardi, and one other, have given the following relation of it,—from which, however, are rejected many details, and especially the narrative of Bandelli, who wrote a century afterwards, and who does not accord with the contemporary historians.

'By the above-mentioned Stella dell' Assassino, the Marquis, in the year 1405, had a son called Ugo, a beautiful and ingenious youth. Parisina Malatesta, second wife of Niccolo, like the generality of step-mothers, treated him with little kindness, to the infinite regret of the Marquis, who regarded him with fond partiality. One day she asked leave of her husband to undertake a certain journey, to which he consented, but upon condition that Ugo should bear her company; for he hoped by these means to induce her, in the end, to lay aside the obstinate aversion which she had conceived against him. And indeed his intent was accomplished but too well, since, during the journey, she not only divested herself of all her hatred, but fell into the opposite extreme. After their return, the Marquis had no longer any occasion to renew his former reproofs. It happened one day that a servant of the Marquis, named Zoese, or, as some call him, Giorgio, passing before the apartments of Parisina, saw going out from them one of her chamber-maids, all terrified and in tears. Asking the reason, she told him that her mistress, for some slight offence, had been beating her; and giving vent to her rage, she added, that she could easily be revenged, if she chose to make known the criminal familiarity which subsisted between Parisina and her step-son. The servant took note of the words, and related them to his master. He was astounded thereat, but, scarcely believing his ears, he assured himself of the fact, alas! too clearly, on the 18th of May, by looking through a hole made in the ceiling of his wife's chamber. Instantly he broke into a furious rage, and arrested both of them, together with Aldobrandino Rangoni, of Modena, her gentleman, and also, as some say, two of the women of her chamber, as abettors of this sinful act. He ordered them to be brought to a hasty trial, desiring the judges to pronounce sentence, in the accustomed forms, upon the culprits. This sentence was death. Some there were that bestirred themselves in favour of the delinquents, and amongst others, Ugoccion Contrario, who was all-powerful with Niccolo, and also his aged and much-deserving minister Alberto dal Sale. Both of these, their tears flowing down their cheeks, and upon their knees, implored him for mercy; adducing whatever reasons they could suggest for sparing the offenders, besides those motives of honour and decency which might persuade him to conceal from the public so scandalous a deed. But his rage made him inflexible, and, on the instant, he commanded that sentence should be put in execution.

'It was, then, in the prisons of the castle, and exactly in those frightful dungeons which are seen at this day beneath the chamber called the Aurora, at the foot of the Lion's tower, at the top of the street Giovecca, that on the night of the 21st of May were beheaded, first Ugo, and afterwards Parisina. Zoese, he that accused her, conducted the latter under his arm to the place of punishment. She, all along, fancied that she was to be thrown into a pit, and asked at every step, whether she was yet come to the spot? She was told that her punishment was the axe. She inquired what was become of Ugo, and received for answer, that he was already dead; at the which, sighing grievously, she exclaimed, "Now, then, I wish not myself to live;" and, being come to the block, she stripped herself with her own hands of all her ornaments, and, wrapping a cloth round her head, submitted to the fatal stroke, which terminated the cruel scene. The same was done with Rangoni, who, together with the others, according to two calendars in the library of St. Francesco, was buried in the cemetery of that convent. Nothing else is known respecting the women.

'The Marquis kept watch the whole of that dreadful night, and, as he was walking backwards and forwards, inquired of the captain of the castle

if Ugo was dead yet? who answered him, Yes. He then gave himself up to the most desperate lamentations, exclaiming, "Oh that I too were dead, since I have been hurried on to resolve thus against my own Ugo!" And then gnawing with his teeth a cane, which he had in his hand, he passed the rest of that night in sighs and in tears, calling frequently upon his own dear Ugo. On the following day, calling to mind that it would be necessary to make public his justification, seeing that the transaction could not be kept secret, he ordered the narrative to be drawn out upon paper, and sent it to all the courts of Italy.

'On receiving this advice, the Doge of Venice, Francesco Foscari, gave orders, but without publishing his reasons, that stop should be put to the preparations for a tournament, which, under the auspices of the Marquis, and at the expense of the city of Padua, was about to take place, in the square of St. Mark, in order to celebrate his advancement to the ducal chair.

'The Marquis, in addition to what he had already done, from some unaccountable burst of vengeance, commanded that as many of the married women as were well known to him to be faithless, like his Parisina, should, like her, be beheaded. Amongst others, Barberina, or, as some call her, Laodamia Romei, wife of the court judge, underwent this sentence at the usual place of execution; that is to say, in the quarter of St. Giacomo, opposite the present fortress, beyond St. Paul's. It cannot be told how strange appeared this proceeding in a prince, who, considering his own disposition, should, as it seemed, have been in such cases most indulgent. Some, however, there were who did not fail to commend him.*

On its left are the entrances of the Rhone, and opposite are the heights of Meillerie and the range of Alps above Boveret and St. Gingo. Near it, on a hill behind, is a torrent: below it, washing its walls, the lake has been fathomed to the depth of 800 feet French measure: within it are a range of dungeons, in which the early reformers, and subsequently prisoners of state, were confined. Across one of the vaults is a beam black with age, on which we were informed that the condemned were formerly executed. In the cells are seven pillars, or, rather, eight, one being half merged in the wall; in some of these are rings for the fetters and the fettered: in the pavement the steps of Bonnivard have left their traces. He was confined here several years. It is by this castle that Rousseau has fixed the catastrophe of his Héloïse, in the rescue of one of her children by Julie from the water; the shock of which, and the illness produced by the immersion, is the cause of her death. The château is large, and seen along the lake for a great distance. The walls are white.

'And then there was a little isle.' Between the entrances of the Rhone and Villeneuve, not far from Chillon, is a very small island; the only one I could perceive, in my voyage round and over the lake, within its circumference. It contains a few trees (I think not above three), and from its singleness and diminutive size has a peculiar effect upon the view.

'How pleasant were the songs of Toobonai.' The first three sections are taken from an actual song of the Tonga Islanders, of which a prose translation is given in 'Mariner's Account of the Tonga Islands.' Toobonai is not however one of them; but was one of those where Christian and the mutineers took refuge. I have altered and added, but have retained as much as possible of the original.

The consul Nero, who made the unequalled march which deceived Hannibal, and defeated Asdrubal; thereby accomplishing an achievement almost unrivalled in military annals. The first intelligence of his return, to Hannibal, was the sight of Asdrubal's head thrown into his camp. When Hannibal saw this, he exclaimed with a sigh, that 'Rome would now be the mistress of the world.' And yet to this victory of Nero's it might be owing that his imperial namesake reigned at all. But the infamy of the one has eclipsed the glory of the other. When the name of 'Nero' is heard, who thinks of the consul?—But such are human things!

'And Loch-na-gar with Ida look'd o'er Troy.' When very young, about eight years of age, after an attack of the scarlet fever at Aberdeen, I was removed by medical advice into the Highlands. Here I passed occasionally some summers, and from this period I date my love of mountainous countries. I can never forget the effect, a few years afterwards, in England, of the only thing I had long seen, even in miniature, of a mountain, in the Malvern Hills. After I returned to Cheltenham, I used to watch them every afternoon, at sunset, with a sensation which I cannot describe. This was boyish enough; but I was then only thirteen years of age, and it was in the holidays.

'Than breathes his mimic murmurer in the shell.' If the reader will apply to his ear the seashell on his chimney-piece, he will be aware of what is alluded to. If the text should appear obscure, he will find in 'Gebir' the same idea better expressed in two lines. The poem I never read, but have heard the lines quoted by a more recondite reader—who seems to be of a different opinion from the editor of the Quarterly Review, who qualified it, in his answer to the Critical Reviewer of his Juvenal, as trash of the worst and most insane description. It is to Mr. Landor, the author of 'Gebir,' so qualified, and of some Latin poems, which vie with Martial or Catullus in obscenity, that the immaculate Mr. Southey addresses his declamation against impurity!

“Right,” quoth Ben, “that will do for the marines.”] ‘That will do for the marines, but the sailors won’t believe it,’ is an old saying; and one of the few fragments of former jealousies which still survive (in jest only) between these gallant services.

'No less of human bravery than the brave!'] Archidamus, king of Sparta, and son of Agesilaus, when he saw a machine invented for the casting of stones and darts, exclaimed that it was the 'grave of valour.' The same story has been told of some knights on the first application of gunpowder; but the original anecdote is in Plutarch.

But few men have travelled without seeing something of the kind—on land, that is. Without adverting to Ellora, in Mungo Park's last journal, he mentions having met with a rock or mountain so exactly resembling a Gothic cathedral, that only minute inspection could convince him that it was a work of nature.

He enlisted and deserted at Schweidnitz; and after a desperate resistance was retaken, having killed an officer, who attempted to seize him after he was wounded, by the discharge of his musket loaded with a button of his uniform. Some circumstances on his court-martial raised a great interest amongst his judges, who wished to discover his real situation in life, which he offered to disclose, but to the king only, to whom he requested permission to write. This was refused, and Frederic was filled with the greatest indignation, from baffled curiosity or some other motive, when he understood that his request had been denied.

This lady, whose name was Gemma, sprung from one of the most powerful Guelph families named Donati. Corso Donati was the principal adversary of the Ghibellines. She is described as being 'Admodum morosa, ut de Xantippe Socratis philosophi conjuge scriptum esse legimus,' according to Giannozzo Manetti. But Lionardo Aretino is scandalised with Boccaccio, in his Life of Dante, for saying that literary men should not marry. 'Qui il Boccaccio non ha pazienza, e dice, le mogli esser contrarie agli studi; e non si ricorda che Socrate il più nobile filosofo che mai fosse, ebbe moglie e figliuoli e uffici della Repubblica nella sua Città; e Aristotele che, &c. &c., ebbe due mogli in varj tempi, ed ebbe figliuoli, e ricchezze assai.—E Marco Tullio—e Catone—e Varrone—e Seneca—ebbero moglie,' &c. &c. It is odd that honest Lionardo's examples, with the exception of Seneca, and, for anything I know, of Aristotle, are not the most felicitous. Tully's Terentia, and Socrates' Xantippe, by no means contributed to their husbands' happiness, whatever they might do to their philosophy—Cato gave away his wife—of Varro's we know nothing—and of Seneca's, only that she was disposed to die with him, but recovered and lived several years afterwards. But says Lionardo, 'L'uomo è animale civile, secondo piace a tutti i filosofi.' And thence concludes that the greatest proof of the animal's civism is 'la prima congiunzione, dalla quale moltiplicata nasce la Città.'

MARINO FALIERO, DOGE OF VENICE

APPENDIX

NOTE A

I am obliged for the following excellent translation of the old Chronicle to Mr. F. Cohen, to whom the reader will find himself indebted for a version that I could not myself—though after many years' intercourse with Italian—have given by any means so purely and so faithfully.

STORY OF MARINO FALIERO, DOGE XLIX. MCCCCLV

On the eleventh day of September, in the year of our Lord 1354, Marino Faliero was elected and chosen to be the Duke of the Commonwealth of Venice. He was Count of Valdemarino, in the Marches of Treviso, and a knight, and a wealthy man to boot. As soon as the election was completed, it was resolved in the Great Council, that a deputation of twelve should be despatched to Marino Faliero the Duke, who was then on his way from Rome; for when he was chosen, he was ambassador at the court of the Holy Father, at Rome,—the Holy Father himself held his court at Avignon. When Messer Marino Faliero the Duke was about to land in this city, on the 5th day of October, 1354, a thick haze came on and darkened the air: and he was enforced to land on the place of St. Mark, between the two columns, on the spot where evil-doers are put to death; and all thought that this was the worst of tokens.—Nor must I forget to write that which I have read in a chronicle. When Messer Marino Faliero was Podestà and Captain of Treviso, the Bishop delayed coming in with the holy sacrament, on a day when a procession was to take place. Now, the said Marino Faliero was so very proud and wrathful, that he buffeted the Bishop, and almost struck him to the ground: and, therefore, Heaven allowed Marino Faliero to go out of his right senses, in order that he might bring himself to an evil death.

When this Duke had held the dukedom during nine months and six days, he, being wicked and ambitious, sought to make himself Lord of Venice, in the manner which I have read in an ancient chronicle. When the Thursday arrived upon which they were wont to hunt the bull, the bull hunt took place as usual; and, according to the usage of those times, after the bull hunt had ended, they all proceeded unto the palace of the Duke, and assembled together in one of his halls; and they disported themselves with the women. And until the first bell tolled they danced, and then a banquet was served up. My Lord the Duke paid the expenses thereof, provided he had a Duchess, and after the banquet they all returned to their homes.

Now to this feast there came a certain Ser Michele Steno, a gentleman of poor estate and very young, but crafty and daring, and who loved one of the damsels of the Duchess. Ser Michele stood amongst the women upon the solajo; and he behaved indiscreetly, so that my Lord the Duke ordered that he should be kicked off the solajo; and the esquires of the Duke flung him down from the solajo accordingly. Ser Michele thought that such an affront was beyond all bearing; and when the feast was over, and all other persons had left the palace, he, continuing heated with anger, went to the hall of audience, and wrote certain unseemly words relating to the Duke and the Duchess upon the chair in which the Duke was used to sit; for in those days the Duke did not cover his chair with cloth of sendal, but he sat in a chair of wood. Ser Michele wrote thereon—Marin Falier, the husband of the fair wife; others kiss her, but he keeps her. In the morning the words were seen, and the matter was considered to be very scandalous; and the Senate commanded the Avogadori of the Commonwealth to proceed therein with the greatest diligence. A largess of great amount was immediately proffered by the Avogadori, in order to discover who had written these words. And at length it was known that Michele Steno had written them. It was resolved in the Council of Forty that he should be arrested; and he then confessed that in the fit of vexation and spite, occasioned by his being thrust off the solajo in the presence of his mistress, he had written the words. Therefore the Council debated thereon. And the Council took his youth into consideration, and that he was a lover; and therefore they adjudged that he should be kept in close confinement during two months, and that afterwards he should be banished from Venice and the state during one year. In consequence of this merciful sentence the Duke became exceedingly wroth, it appearing to him, that the Council had not acted in such a manner as was required by the respect due to his ducal dignity; and he said that they ought to have condemned Ser Michele to be hanged by the neck, or at least to be banished for life.

Now it was fated that my Lord Duke Marino was to have his head cut off. And as it is necessary when any effect is to be brought about, that the cause of such effect must happen, it therefore came to pass, that on the very day after sentence had been pronounced on Ser Michele Steno, being the first day of Lent, a gentleman of the house of Barbaro, a choleric gentleman, went to the arsenal, and required certain things of the masters of the galleys. This he did in the presence of the Admiral of the arsenal, and he, hearing the request, answered,—No, it cannot be done. High words arose between the gentleman and the Admiral, and the gentleman struck him with his fist just above the eye; and as he happened to have a ring on his finger, the ring cut the Admiral and drew blood. The Admiral, all bruised and bloody, ran straight to the Duke to complain, and with the intent of praying him to inflict some heavy punishment upon the gentleman of Cà Barbaro.—‘What wouldst thou have me do for thee?’ answered the Duke:—‘think upon the shameful gibe which hath been written concerning me: and think on the manner in which they have punished that ribald Michele Steno, who wrote it; and see how the Council of Forty respect our person.’—Upon this the Admiral answered,—‘My Lord Duke, if you would wish to make yourself a prince, and to cut all those cuckolded gentlemen to pieces, I have the heart, if you do but help me, to make you prince of all this state; and then you may punish them all.’ Hearing this, the Duke said,—‘How can such a matter be brought about?’—and so they discoursed thereon.

The Duke called for his nephew, Ser Bertuccio Faliero, who lived with him in the palace, and they communed about this plot. And without leaving the place, they sent for Philip Calendaro, a seaman of great repute, and for Bertuccio Israelo, who was exceedingly wily and cunning. Then taking counsel amongst themselves, they agreed to call in some others; and so, for several nights successively, they met with the Duke at home in his palace. And the following men were called in singly; to wit:—Niccolo Fagiuolo, Giovanni da Corfu, Stefano Fagiolo, Niccolo dalle Bende, Niccolo Biondo, and Stefano Trivisano.—It was concerted that sixteen or seventeen leaders should be stationed in various parts of the city, each being at the head of forty men, armed and prepared; but the followers were not to know their destination. On the appointed day they were to make affrays amongst themselves here and there, in order that the Duke might have a pretence for tolling the bells of San Marco; these bells are never rung but by the order of the Duke. And at the sound of the bells, these sixteen or seventeen, with their followers, were to come to San Marco, through the streets which open upon the Piazza. And when the noble and leading citizens should come into the Piazza, to know the cause of the riot, then the conspirators were to cut them in pieces; and this work being finished, my Lord Marino Faliero the Duke was to be proclaimed the Lord of Venice. Things having been thus settled, they agreed to fulfil their intent on Wednesday, the 15th day of April, in the year 1355. So covertly did they plot, that no one ever dreamt of their machinations.

But the Lord, who hath always helped this most glorious city, and who, loving its righteousness and holiness, hath never forsaken it, inspired one Beltramo Bergamasco to be the cause of bringing the plot to light, in the following manner. This Beltramo, who belonged to Ser Niccolo Lioni of Santo Stefano, had heard a word or two of what was to take place; and so, in the above-mentioned month of April, he went to the house of the aforesaid Ser Niccolo Lioni, and told him all the particulars of the plot. Ser Niccolo, when he heard all these things, was struck dead, as it were, with affright. He heard all the particulars; and Beltramo prayed him to keep it all secret; and if he told Ser Niccolo, it was in order that Ser Niccolo might stop at home on the 15th of April, and thus save his life. Beltramo was going, but Ser Niccolo ordered his servants to lay hands upon him, and lock him up. Ser Niccolo then went to the house of Messer Giovanni Gradenigo Nasoni, who afterwards became Duke, and who also lived at Santo Stefano, and told him all. The matter seemed to him to be of the very greatest importance, as indeed it was; and they two went to the house of Ser Marco Cornaro, who lived at San Felice; and, having spoken with him, they all three then determined to go back to the house of Ser Niccolo Lioni, to examine the said Beltramo; and having questioned him, and heard all that he had to say, they left him in confinement. And then they all three went into the sacristy of San Salvatore, and sent their men to summon the Councillors, the Avogadori, the Capi de' Dieci, and those of the Great Council.

When all were assembled, the whole story was told to them. They were struck dead, as it were, with affright. They determined to send for Beltramo. He was brought in before them. They examined him, and ascertained that the matter was true; and, although they were exceedingly troubled, yet they determined upon their measures. And they sent for the Capi de' Quarante, the Signori di Notte, the Capi de' Sestieri, and the Cinque della Pace; and they were ordered to associate to their men other good men and true, who were to proceed to the houses of the ringleaders of the conspiracy, and secure them. And they secured the foreman of the arsenal, in order that the conspirators might not do mischief. Towards nightfall they assembled in the palace. When they were assembled in the palace, they caused the gates of the quadrangle of the palace to be shut. And they sent to the keeper of the Bell-tower, and forbade the tolling of the bells. All this was carried into effect. The before-mentioned conspirators were secured, and they were brought to the palace; and, as the Council of Ten saw that the Duke was in the plot, they resolved that twenty of the leading men of the state should be associated to them, for the purpose of consultation and deliberation, but that they should not be allowed to ballot.

The counsellors were the following:—Ser Giovanni Mocenigo, of the Sestiero of San Marco; Ser Almo Veniero da Santa Marina, of the Sestiero of Castello; Ser Tomaso Viadro, of the Sestiero of Canaregio; Ser Giovanni Sanudo, of the Sestiero of Santa Croce; Ser Pietro Trivisano, of the Sestiero of San Paolo; Ser Pantalone Barbo il Grando, of the Sestiero of Ossoduro. The Avogadori of the Commonwealth were Zufredo Morosini, and Ser Orio Pasqualigo; and these did not ballot. Those of the Council of Ten were Ser Giovanni Marcello, Ser Tomaso Sanudo, and Ser Micheletto Dolfino, the heads of the aforesaid Council of Ten. Ser Luca da Legge, and Ser Pietro da Mosto, inquisitors of the aforesaid Council. And Ser Marco Polani, Ser Marino Veniero, Ser Lando Lombardo, and Ser Nicoletto Trivisano, of Sant' Angelo.

Late in the night, just before the dawning, they chose a junta of twenty noblemen of Venice from amongst the wisest, and the worthiest, and the oldest. They were to give counsel, but not to ballot. And they would not admit any one of Cà Faliero. And Niccolo Faliero, and another Niccolo Faliero, of San Tomaso, were expelled from the Council, because they belonged to the family of the Doge. And this resolution of creating the junta of twenty was much praised throughout the state. The following were the members of the junta of twenty:—Ser Marco Giustiniani, Procuratore, Ser Andrea Erizzo, Procuratore, Ser Lionardo Giustiniani, Procuratore, Ser Andrea Contarini, Ser Simone Dandolo, Ser Niccolo Volpe, Ser Giovanni Loredano, Ser Marco Diedo, Ser Giovanni Gradenigo, Ser Andrea Cornaro, Cavaliere, Ser Marco Soranzo, Ser Rinieri du Mosto, Ser Gazano Marcello, Ser Marino Morosini, Ser Stefano Belegno, Ser Niccolo Lioni, Ser Filippo Orio, Ser Marco Trivisano, Ser Jacopo Bragadino, Ser Giovanni Foscari.

These twenty were accordingly called in to the Council of Ten; and they sent for my Lord Marino Faliero, the Duke; and my Lord Marino was then consorting in the palace with people of great estate, gentlemen, and other good men, none of whom knew yet how the fact stood.

At the same time Bertuccio Israello, who, as one of the ringleaders, was to head the conspirators in Santa Croce, was arrested and bound, and brought before the Council. Zanello del Brin, Nicoletto di Rosa, Nicoletto Alberto, and the Guardiaga, were also taken, together with several seamen, and people of various ranks. These were examined, and the truth of the plot was ascertained.

On the 16th of April judgment was given in the Council of Ten, that Filippo Calendaro and Bertuccio Israello should be hanged upon the red pillars of the balcony of the palace, from which the Duke is wont to look at the bull hunt; and they were hanged with gags in their mouths.

The next day the following were condemned:—Niccolo Zuccuolo, Niccolo Biondo, Nicoletto Doro, Marco Giuda, Jacomello Dagolino, Nicoletto Fidele, the son of Filippo Calendaro, Marco Torello, called Israello, Stefano Trivisano, the money-changer of Santa Margherita, and Antonio dalle Bende. These were all taken at Chiozza, for they were endeavouring to escape. Afterwards, by virtue of the sentence which was passed upon them in the Council of Ten, they were hanged on successive days; some singly and some in couples, upon the columns of the palace, beginning from the red columns, and so going onwards towards the canal. And other prisoners were discharged, because, although they had been involved in the conspiracy, yet they had not assisted in it: for they were given to understand by some of the heads of the plot, that they were to come armed and prepared for the service of the state, and in order to secure certain criminals; and they knew nothing else. Nicoletto Alberto, the Guardiaga, and Bartolommeo Ciriolo and his son, and several others, who were not guilty, were discharged.

On Friday, the 16th day of April, judgment was also given in the aforesaid Council of Ten, that my Lord Marino Faliero, the Duke, should have his head cut off; and that the execution should be done on the landing-place of the stone staircase, where the Dukes take their oath when they first enter the palace. On the following day, the 17th of April, the doors of the palace being shut, the Duke had his head cut off, about the hour of noon. And the cap of estate was taken from the Duke's head before he came down-stairs. When the execution was over, it is said that one of the Council of Ten went to the columns of the palace over against the place of St. Mark, and that he showed the bloody sword unto the people, crying out with a loud voice—'The terrible doom hath fallen upon the traitor!'—and the doors were opened, and the people all rushed in, to see the corpse of the Duke, who had been beheaded.

It must be known that Ser Giovanni Sanudo, the councillor, was not present when the aforesaid sentence was pronounced; because he was unwell and remained at home. So that only fourteen balloted; that is to say, five councillors, and nine of the Council of Ten. And it was adjudged, that all the lands and chattels of the Duke, as well as of the other traitors, should be forfeited to the state. And as a grace to the Duke, it was resolved in the Council of Ten, that he should be allowed to dispose of two thousand ducats out of his own property. And it was resolved, that all the councillors, and all the Avogadori of the Commonwealth, those of the Council of Ten, and the members of the junta, who had assisted in passing sentence on the Duke and the other traitors, should have the privilege of carrying arms both by day and by night in Venice, and from Grado to Cavazere. And they were also to be allowed two footmen carrying arms, the aforesaid footmen living and boarding with them in their own houses. And he who did not keep two footmen might transfer the privilege to his sons or his brothers; but only to two. Permission of carrying arms was also granted to the four Notaries of the Chancery, that is to say, of the Supreme Court, who took the depositions; and they were, Amedeo, Nicoletto di Lorino, Steffanello, and Pietro de Compostelli, the secretaries of the Signori di Notte.

After the traitors had been hanged, and the Duke had had his head cut off, the state remained in great tranquillity and peace. And, as I have read in a Chronicle, the corpse of the Duke was removed in a barge, with eight torches, to his tomb in the church of San Giovanni e Paolo, where it was buried. The tomb is now in that aisle in the middle of the little church of Santa Maria della Pace which was built by Bishop Gabriel of Bergamo. It is a coffin of stone, with these words engraven thereon: 'Heic jacet Dominus Marinus Faletro Dux.'—And they did not paint his portrait in the hall of the Great Council;—but in the place where it ought to have been, you see these words:—'Hic est locus Marini Faletro, decapitati pro criminibus.'—And it is thought that his house was granted to the church of Sant' Apostoli; it was that great one near the bridge. Yet this could not be the case, or else the family bought it back from the church; for it still belongs to Cà Faliero. I must not refrain from noting, that some wished to write the following words in the place where his portrait ought to have been, as aforesaid:—'Marinus Faletro Dux, temeritas me cepit. Pœnas lui, decapitatus pro criminibus.'—Others, also, indited a couplet, worthy of being inscribed upon his tomb.

'Dux Venetum jacet heic, patriam qui prodere tentans, Sceptra, decus, censum perdidit, atque caput.'

NOTE B

PETRARCH ON THE CONSPIRACY OF MARINO FALIERO

'Al giovane Doge Andrea Dandolo succedette un vecchio, il quale tardi si pose al timone della repubblica, ma sempre prima di quel, che facea d' uopo a lui, ed alla patria: egli è Marino Faliero, personaggio a me noto per antica dimestichezza. Falsa era l' opinione intorno a lui, giacchè egli si mostrò fornito più di coraggio, che di senno. Non pago della prima dignità, entro con sinistro piede nel pubblico Palazzo: imperciocchè questo Doge dei Veneti, magistrato sacro in tutti i secoli, che dagli antichi fu sempre venerato qual nume in quella città, l' altr' jeri fù decollato nel vestibolo dell' stesso Palazzo. Discorrerei fin dal principio le cause di un tale evento, e così vario, ed ambiguo non ne fosse il grido. Nessuno però lo scusa, tutti affermano, che egli abbia voluto cangiar qualche cosa nell' ordine della repubblica a lui tramandato dai maggiori. Che desiderava egli di più? Io sona d' avviso, che egli abbia ottenuto ciò, che non si concedette a nessun altro: mentre adempiva gli uffici di legato presso il Pontefice, e sulle rive del Rodano trattava la pace, che io prima di lui avevo indarno tentato di conchiudere, gli fù conferito l' onore del Ducato, che ne chiedeva, ne s' aspettava. Tornato in patria, pensò a quello, cui nessuno non pose mente giammai, e soffrì quello che a niuno accadde mai di soffrire: giacchè in quel luogo, celebrissimo, e chiarissimo, e bellissimo infra tutti quelli, che io vidi, ove i suoi antenati avevano ricevuti grandissimi onori in mezzo alle pompe trionfali, ivi egli fù trascinato in modo servile, esposto alle insegne ducali, perdette la testa, e macchiò col proprio sangue le soglie del tempio, l' atrio del Palazzo, e le scale marmoree rendute spesso volte illustri o dalle solenni festività, o dalle ostili spoglie. Ho notato il luogo, ora noto il tempo: è l' anno del Natale di Cristo, 1355, fù il giorno 18 d' Aprile. Si alto è il grido sparso, che se alcuno esaminerà la disciplina, e le costumanze di quella città, e quanto mutamento di cose venga minacciato dalla morte di un sol uomo (quantunque molti altri, come narrano, essendo complici, od subirono l' stesso supplicio, o lo aspettano) si accorgerà, che nulla di più grande avvenne ai nostri tempi nella Italia. Tu forse qui attendi il mio giudizio: assolvo il popolo, se credere alla fama, benchè abbia potuto e castigare più mitemente, ed con maggior dolcezza vendicare il suo dolore: ma non così facilmente, si modera un' ira giusta insieme, e grande in un numeroso popolo principalmente, nel quale il precipitoso, ed instabile volgo aguzza gli stimoli dell' irracondia con rapidi, e sconsigliati clamori. Compatisco, e nell' istesso tempo mi adiro con quell' infelice uomo, il quale adorno di un' insolito onore, non so, che cosa si volesse negli estremi anni della sua vita: la calamità di lui divine sempre più grave, perchè dalla sen- tenza contra di esso promulgata aperirà, che egli fù non solo misero, ma insano, e demente, e che come vane arti si usurpò per tanti anni una falsa fama di sapienza. Ammonisco i Dogi, i quali gli succede- rano, che questo è un' esempio posto innanzi a loro occhi, quale specchio, nel quale veggano d' essere non Signori, ma Duci, anzi nemmeno Duci, ma onorati servi della Repubblica. Tu sta sano, e giacchè fluttuano le pubbliche cose, sforsiamoci di governar modestissimamente i privati nostri affari.'—LEVATI, Viaggi di Petrarca, vol. iv. p. 323.

The above Italian translation from the Latin epistles of Petrarca proves—1stly, That Marino Faliero was a personal friend of Petrarca's; 'antica dimestichezza,' old intimacy, is the phrase of the poet. 2ndly, That Petrarca thought that he had more courage than conduct, 'più di coraggio che di senno.' 3rdly, That there was some jealousy on the part of Petrarca; for he says that Marino Faliero was treating of the peace which he himself had 'vainly attempted to conclude.' 4thly, That the honour of the Dukedom was conferred upon him, which he neither sought nor expected, 'che ne chiedeva né aspettava,' and which had never been granted to any other in like circumstances, 'ciò che non si concedette a nessun altro,' a proof of the high esteem in which he must have been held. 5thly, That he had a reputation for wisdom, only forfeited by the last enterprise of his life, 'si usurpò per tanti anni una falsa fama di sapienza.'—H had usurped for so many years a false fame of wisdom,' rather a difficult task, I should think. People are generally found out before eighty years of age, at least in a republic.—From these, and the other historical notes which I have collected, it may be inferred, that Marino Faliero possessed many of the qualities, but not the success of a hero; and that his passions were too violent. The paltry and ignorant account of Dr. Moore falls to the ground. Petrarch says, 'that there had been no greater event in his times' (our times literally), 'nostri tempi,' in Italy. He also differs from the historian in saying that Faliero was 'on the banks of the Rhone,' instead of at Rome, when elected: the other accounts say, that the deputation of the Venetian senate met him at Ravenna. How this may have been, it is not for me to decide, and is of no great importance. Had the man succeeded, he would have changed the face of Venice, and perhaps of Italy. As it is, what are they both?

NOTE C

VENETIAN SOCIETY AND MANNERS

'Vice without splendour, sin without relief
Even from the gloss of love to smooth it o'er;
But, in its stead, coarse lusts of habitude,' &c.
[See p. 452.]

'To these attacks so frequently pointed by the government against the clergy,—to the continual struggles between the different constituted bodies, —to these enterprises carried on by the mass of the nobles against the depositaries of power,—to all those projects of innovation, which always ended by a stroke of state policy, we must add a cause not less fitted to spread contempt for ancient doctrines; this was the excess of corruption.

'That freedom of manners, which had been long boasted of as the principal charm of Venetian society, had degenerated into scandalous licentiousness: the tie of marriage was less sacred in that Catholic country, than among those nations where the laws and religion admit of its being dissolved. Because they could not break the contract, they feigned that it had not existed; and the ground of nullity, immodestly alleged by the married pair, was admitted with equal facility by priests and magistrates, alike corrupt. These divorces, veiled under another name, became so frequent that the most important act of civil society was discovered to be amenable to a tribunal of exceptions; and to restrain the open scandal of such proceedings became the office of the police. In 1782 the Council of Ten decreed, that every woman who should sue for a dissolution of her marriage should be compelled to await the decision of the judges in some convent, to be named by the court.* Soon afterwards the same council summoned all causes of that nature before itself.† This infringement on ecclesiastical jurisdiction having occasioned some remonstrance from Rome, the council retained only the right of rejecting the petition of the married persons, and consented to refer such causes to the holy office as it should not previously have rejected.‡

'There was a moment in which, doubtless, the destruction of private fortunes, the ruin of youth, the domestic discord occasioned by these abuses,

* Correspondence of M. Schick, French chargé d'affaires. Despatch of 24th August, 1782.

† Ibid. Despatch 31st August.

determined the government to depart from its established maxims concerning the freedom of manners allowed the subject. All the courtesans were banished from Venice; but their absence was not enough to reclaim and bring back good morals to a whole people brought up in the most scandalous licentiousness. Depravity reached the very bosom of private families, and even into the cloister; and they found themselves obliged to recall, and even to indemnify,§ women who sometimes gained possession of important secrets, and who might be usefully employed in the ruin of men whose fortunes might have rendered them dangerous. Since that time licentiousness has gone on increasing; and we have seen mothers, not only selling the innocence of their daughters, but selling it by a contract, authenticated by the signature of a public officer, and the performance of which was secured by the protection of the laws.||

'The parlours of the convents of noble ladies and the houses of the courtesans, though the police carefully kept up a number of spies about them, were the only assemblies for society in Venice; and in these two places, so different from each other, there was equal freedom. Music, collations, galantry, were not more forbidden in the parlours than at the casinos. There were a number of casinos for the purpose of public assemblies, where gaming was the principal pursuit of the company. It was a strange sight to see persons of either sex masked, or grave in their magisterial robes, round a table, invoking chance, and giving way at one instant to the agonies of despair, at the next to the illusions of hope, and that without uttering a single word.

'The rich had private casinos, but they lived incognito in them; and the wives whom they abandoned found compensation in the liberty they enjoyed. The corruption of morals had deprived them of their empire. We have just reviewed the whole history of Venice, and we have not once seen them exercise the slightest influence.'—DARU: Hist. de la Répub. de Venise, vol. v. p. 95.

'Doge. 'Tis with age, then.'] This was the actual reply of Bailli, maire of Paris, to a Frenchman who made him the same reproach on his way to execution, in the earliest part of their revolution. I find in reading over (since the completion of this tragedy), for the first time these six years, 'Venice Preserved,' a similar reply on a different occasion by Renault, and other coincidences arising from the subject. I need hardly remind the gentlest reader, that such coincidences must be accidental, from the very facility of their detection by reference to so popular a play on the stage and in the closet as Otway's chef-d'œuvre.

'Who shall despise her!—She shall stoop to be.'] Should the dramatic picture seem harsh, let the reader look to the historical, of the period prophesied, or rather of the few years preceding that period. Voltaire calculated their 'nostre bene merite Meretrici' at 12,000 of regulars, without including volunteers and local militia, on what authority I know not; but it is, perhaps, the only part of the population not decreased. Venice once contained two hundred thousand inhabitants: there are now about ninety thousand; and THESE! few individuals can conceive, and none could describe, the actual state into which the more than infernal tyranny of Austria has plunged this unhappy city. From the present decay and degeneracy of Venice under the Barbarians, there are some honourable individual exceptions. There is Pasqualigo, the last, and, alas! posthumous son of the marriage of the Doges with the Adriatic, who fought his frigate with far greater gallantry than any of his French coadjutors in the memorable action off Lissa. I came home in the squadron with the prizes in 1811, and recollect to have heard Sir William Hoste, and the other officers engaged in that glorious conflict, speak in the highest terms of Pasqualigo's behaviour. There is the Abbate Morelli. There is Alvise Querini, who, after a long and honourable diplomatic career, finds some consolation for the wrongs of his country, in the pursuits of literature with his nephew, Vittor Benzon, the son of the celebrated beauty, the heroine of 'La Biondina in Gondolletta.' There are the patrician poet Morosini, and the poet Lamberti, the author of the 'Biondina,' &c., and many other estimable productions; and, not least in an Englishman's estimation, Madame Micheli, the translator of Shakspeare. There are the young Dandolo and the improvisatore Carrer, and Giuseppe Albrizzi, the accomplished son of an accomplished mother. There is Aglietti, and, were there nothing else, there is the immortality of Canova. Cicognara, Mustoxithi, Bucati, &c. &c., I do not reckon, because the one is a Greek, and the others were born at least a hundred miles off, which, throughout Italy, constitutes, if not a foreigner, at least a stranger (forestière).

'Gainst which thou wilt not strive, and dar'st not murmur.'] If the Doge's prophecy seem remarkable, look to the following, made by Alamanni two hundred and seventy years ago:—'There is one very singular prophecy concerning Venice: "If thou dost not change," it says to that proud republic, "thy liberty, which is already on the wing, will not reckon a century more than the thousandth year." If we carry back the epocha of Venetian freedom to the establishment of the government under which the republic flourished, we shall find that the date of the election of the first Doge is 697; and if we add one century to a thousand, that is, eleven hundred years, we shall find the sense of the prediction to be literally this: "Thy liberty will not last till 1797." Recollect that Venice ceased to be free in the year 1796, the fifth year of the French republic; and you will perceive that there never was prediction more pointed, or more exactly followed by the event. You will, therefore, note as very remarkable the three lines of Alamanni addressed to Venice; which, however, no one has pointed out:—

"Se non cangi pensier, un secol solo Non conterà sopra l' millesimo anno Tua libertà, che va fuggendo a volo."

Many prophecies have passed for such, and many men have been called prophets for much less.—

'Thou den of drunkards with the blood of princes!'] Of the first fifty Doges, five abdicated—five were banished with their eyes put out—five were MASSACRED—and nine deposed—so that nineteen out of fifty lost the throne by violence, besides two who fell in battle: this occurred long previous to the reign of Marino Faliero. One of his more immediate predecessors, Andrea Dandolo, died of vexation. Marino Faliero himself perished as related. Amongst his successors, Foscari, after seeing his son repeatedly tortured and banished, was deposed, and died of breaking a blood-vessel, on hearing the bell of Saint Mark's toll for the election of his successor. Morosini was impeached for the loss of Candia; but this was previous to his dukedom, during which he conquered the Morea, and was styled the Peloponnesian. Faliero might truly say,—

'Thou den of drunkards with the blood of princes!'

'Eat, drink, and love; the rest's not worth a flip.'] 'For this expedition he took only a small chosen body of the phalanx, but all his light troops. In the first day's march he reached Anchialus, a town said to have been founded by the king of Assyria, Sardanapalus. The fortifications, in their magnitude and extent, still in Arrian's time, bore the character of greatness, which the Assyrians appear singularly to have affected in works of the kind. A monument representing Sardanapalus was found there, warranted by an inscription in Assyrian characters, of course in the old Assyrian language, which the Greeks, whether well or ill, interpreted thus: 'Sardanapalus, son of Anacyndaraxes, in one day founded Anchialus and Tarsus. Eat, drink, play; all other human joys are not worth a flip.' Supposing this version nearly exact (for Arrian says it was not quite so), whether the purpose has not been to invite to civil order a people disposed to turbulence, rather than to recommend immoderate luxury, may perhaps reasonably be questioned. What, indeed, could be the object of a king of Assyria in founding such towns in a country so distant from his capital, and so divided from it by an immense extent of sandy deserts and lofty mountains, and, still more, how the inhabitants could be at once in circumstances to abandon themselves to the intemperate joys which their prince has been supposed to have recommended, is not obvious; but it may deserve observation that, in that line of coast, the southern of Lesser Asia, ruins of cities, evidently of an age after Alexander, yet barely named in history, at this day astonish the adventurous traveller by their magnificence and elegance. Amid the desolation which, under a singularly barbarian government, has for so many centuries been daily spreading in the finest countries of the globe, whether more from soil and climate, or from opportunities for commerce, extraordinary means must have been found for communities to flourish there; whence it may seem that the measures of Sardanapalus were directed by juster views than have been commonly ascribed to him; but that monarch having been the last of a dynasty ended by a revolution, obloquy on his memory would follow of course from the policy of his successors and their partisans. The inconsistency of traditions concerning Sardanapalus is striking in Diodorus's account of him.'—MITFORD'S Greece, vol. ix. p. 311.

I hasten, however, to notice the coincidence, and to yield the originality of the phrase to her who first placed it before the public.

'O'er those they slew. I've heard of widows' tears.']—The Venetians appear to have had a particular turn for breaking the hearts of their Doges. The following is another instance of the kind in the Doge Marco Barbarigo: he was succeeded by his brother Agostino Barbarigo, whose chief merit is here mentioned.—'Le doge, blessé de trouver constamment un contradicteur et un censeur si amer dans son frère, lui dit un jour en plein conseil; "Messire Augustin, vous faites tout votre possible pour hâter ma mort; vous vous flattez de me succéder; mais, si les autres vous connaissent aussi bien que je vous connais, ils n'auront garde de vous élire." Là-dessus il se leva, ému de colère, rentra dans son appartement, et mourut quelques jours après. Ce frère, contre lequel il s'était emporté, fut précisément le successeur qu'on lui donna. C'était un mérite dont on aimait à tenir compte; surtout à un parent, de s'être mis en opposition avec le chef de la république.'—DARU, Hist. de Venise, t. ii. p. 533.

'Which make the reader envy his transgressions.'] See his Confessions, l. i. c. ix. By the representation which Saint Augustine gives of himself in his youth, it is easy to see that he was what we should call a rake. He avoided the school as the plague; he loved nothing but gaming and public shows; he robbed his father of everything he could find; he invented a thousand lies to escape the rod, which they were obliged to make use of to punish his irregularities.

'Her person if allow'd at large to run.'] This is no exaggeration: there were four women whom I remember to have seen, who possessed their hair in this profusion; of these, three were English, the other was a Levantine. Their hair was of that length and quantity, that, when let down, it almost entirely shaded the person, so as nearly to render dress a superfluity. Of these, only one had dark hair; the Oriental had, perhaps, the lightest colour of the four.

"Whom the gods love die young," was said of yore. See Herodotus (Cleobis and Biton). The sentiment is in a fragment of Menander.

"A vein had burst, and her sweet lips' pure dyes.]" This is no very uncommon effect of the violence of conflicting and different passions. The Doge Francis Foscari, on his deposition in 1457, hearing the bells of St. Mark announce the election of his successor, "mourut subitement d'une hémorragie causée par une veine qui s'éclata dans sa poitrine," (see Sismondi and Daru, vols. i. and ii.) at the age of eighty years, when "Who would have thought the old man had so much blood in him?" Before I was sixteen years of age, I was witness to a melancholy instance of the same effect of mixed passions upon a young person, who, however, did not die in consequence, at that time, but fell a victim some years afterwards to a seizure of the same kind, arising from causes intimately connected with agitation of mind.

"But sold by the impresario at no high rate.]" This is a fact. A few years ago a man engaged a company for some foreign theatre, embarked them at an Italian port, and carrying them to Algiers, sold them all. One of the women, returned from her captivity, I heard sing, by a strange coincidence, in Rossini's opera of 'L'Italiana in Algieri,' at Venice, in the beginning of 1817.

I have seen them take as many as six of raki before dinner, and swear that they dined the better for it: I tried the experiment, but fared like the Scotchman, who having heard that the birds called kittiwakes were admirable whetters, ate six of them, and complained that 'he was not hungrier than when he began.'

"A good deal practised here upon occasion.]" A few years ago the wife of Muchtar Pacha complained to his father of his son's supposed infidelity: he asked with whom, and she had the barbarity to give in a list of the twelve handsomest women in Yanina. They were seized, fastened up in sacks, and drowned in the lake the same night. One of the guards who was present informed me, that not one of the victims uttered a cry, or showed a symptom of terror at so sudden a 'wrench from all we know, from all we love.'

"Though on more thorough-bred or fairer fingers.]" There is nothing, perhaps, more distinctive of birth than the hand. It is almost the only sign of blood which aristocracy can generate.

Page 728, col. 2.

"Save Solyman, the glory of their line.]" It may not be unworthy of remark, that Bacon, in his essay on 'Empire,' hints that Solyman was the last of his line; on what authority, I know not. These are his words:—"The destruction of Mustapha was so fatal to Solyman's line, as the succession of the Turks from Solyman until this day is suspected to be untrue, and of strange blood; for that Selymus the second was thought to be supposititious." But Bacon, in his historical authorities, is often inaccurate. I could give half-a-dozen instances from his Apophthegms only.

Michael Angelo, the famous painter, painting in the Pope's chapel the portraiture of hell

This was not the portrait of a cardinal, but of the and damned souls, made one of the damned souls so like a cardinal that was his enemy, as everybody at first sight knew it: whereupon the cardinal complained to Pope Clement, humbly praying it might be defaced. The Pope said to him, Why, you know very well I have power to deliver a soul out of purgatory, but not out of hell.

Alexander, after the battle of Granicum, had very great offers made him by Darius. Consulting with his captains concerning them, Parmenio said, Sure, I would accept of these offers, if I were as Alexander. Alexander answered, So would I, if I were as Parmenio.

There was a philosopher that disputed with Adrian the Emperor, and did it but weakly. One of his friends that stood by afterwards said unto him, Methinks you were not like yourself last day, in argument with the Emperor: I could have answered better myself. Why, said the philosopher, would you have me contend with him that commands thirty legions?

There was one that found a great mass of money, digging underground in his grandfather's house, and being somewhat doubtful of the case signified it to the emperor that he had found such treasure. The emperor made a rescript thus: Use it. He writ back again, that the sum was greater than his state or condition could use. The emperor writ a new rescript thus: Abuse it.

This happened under Augustus Cæsar, and not during the reign of Adrian.

This happened to the father of Herodes Atticus, and the answer was made by the Emperor Nerva, who deserved that his name should have been stated by the 'greatest — wisest — meanest of mankind.'

This was said by Anacharsis the Scythian, and not by a Greek.

This was not said by Demosthenes,

There was a king of Hungary took a bishop in battle, and kept him prisoner; whereupon the Pope writ a monitory to him, for that he had broken the privilege of holy church, and taken his son: the king sent an embassy to him, and sent withal the armour wherein the bishop was taken, and this only in writing—Vide num hæc sit vestis filii tui? Know now whether this be thy son's coat?

Demetrius, king of Macedon, had a petition offered him divers times by an old woman, and answered he had no leisure; whereupon the woman said aloud, Why then give over to be king.

Having stated that Bacon was frequently incorrect in his citations from history, I have thought it necessary in what regards so great a name (however trifling), to support the assertion by such facts as more immediately occur to me. They are but trifles, and yet for such trifles a school-boy would be whipped (if still in the fourth form); and Voltaire for half-a-dozen similar errors has been treated as a superficial writer, notwithstanding the testimony of the learned Warton:—'Voltaire, a writer of much deeper research than is imagined, and the first who has displayed the literature and customs of the dark ages with any degree of penetration and comprehension.'^{*} For another distinguished testimony to Voltaire's merits in literary research, see also Lord Holland's excellent Account of the Life and Writings of Lope de Vega, vol. i. p. 215, edition of 1817.

Voltaire has even been termed a 'shallow fellow,' by some of the same school who called Dryden's Ode 'a drunken song';—a school (as it is called, I presume, from their education being still incomplete) the whole of whose filthy trash of Epics, Excursions, &c. &c. &c., is not worth the two words in Zaire, 'Vous pleurez,'† or a single speech of Tancréd:—a school, the apostate lives of whose renegadoes, with their tea-drinking neutrality of morals, and their convenient treachery in politics—in the record of their accumulated pretences to virtue can produce no actions (were all their good deeds drawn up in array) to equal or approach the sole defence of the family of Calas, by that great and unequalled genius—the universal Voltaire.

I have ventured to remark on these little inaccuracies of 'the greatest genius that England, or perhaps any other country, ever produced,'* merely to show our national injustice in condemning generally the greatest genius of France for such inadvertencies as these, of which the highest of England has been no less guilty. Query, was Bacon a greater intellect than Newton?

CAMPBELL

Being in the humour of criticism, I shall proceed, after having ventured upon the slips of Bacon, to touch upon one or two as trifling in the edition of the British Poets, by the justly celebrated Campbell. But I do this in good will, and trust it will be so taken. If anything could add to my opinion of the talents and true feeling of that gentleman, it would be his classical, honest, and triumphant defence of Pope, against the vulgar cant of the day, and its existing Grub Street.

The inadvertencies to which I allude are—

Firstly, in speaking of Anstey, whom he accuses of having taken 'his leading characters from Smollett.' Anstey's Bath Guide was published in 1766. Smollett's Humphrey Clinker (the only work of Smollett's from which Tabitha, &c. &c. could have been taken) was written during Smollett's last residence at Leghorn in 1770—'Argal,' if there has been any borrowing, Anstey must be the creditor, and not the debtor. I refer Mr. Campbell to his own data in his Lives of Smollett and Anstey.

Secondly, Mr. Campbell says in the Life of Cowper (note to page 358, vol. vii.) that he knows not to whom Cowper alludes in these lines,—

'Nor he who, for the bane of thousands born,
Built God a church, and laugh'd his word to scorn.'

The Calvinist meant Voltaire, and the church of Ferney, with its inscription 'Deo erexit Voltaire.'

Thirdly, in the Life of Burns, Mr. Campbell quotes Shakspeare thus,—

'To gild refined gold, to paint the rose,
Or add fresh perfume to the violet.'

This version by no means improves the original, which is as follows—

'To gild refined gold, to paint the lily,
To throw a perfume on the violet,' &c.—King John.

A great poet quoting another should be correct; he should also be accurate, when he accuses a Parnassian brother of that dangerous charge 'borrowing': a poet had better borrow anything (excepting money) than the thoughts of another—they are always sure to be reclaimed; but it is very hard, having been the lender, to be denounced as the debtor, as is the case of Anstey versus Smollett.

As there is 'honour amongst thieves,' let there be some amongst poets, and give each his due,—none can afford to give it more than Mr. Campbell himself, who, with a high reputation for originality, and a fame which cannot be shaken, is the only poet of the times (except Rogers) who can be reproached (and in him it is indeed a reproach) with having written too little.

'And so knowing?'] The advance of science and of language has rendered it unnecessary to translate the above true and good English, spoken in its original purity by the select mobility and their patrons. The following is a stanza of a song which was very popular, at least in my early days:—

'On the high toby-spice flash the muzzle,
In spite of each gallows old scout;
If you at the spellken can't hustle,
You'll be hobbled in making a Clout.

Then your Blowing will wax gallows haughty,
When she hears of your scaly mistake,
She'll surely turn snitch for the forty—
That her Jack may be regular weight.'

If there be any gemman so ignorant as to require a traduction, I refer him to my old friend and corporeal pastor and master, John Jackson, Esq., Professor of Pugilism; who, I trust, still retains the strength and symmetry of his model of a form, together with his good-humour and athletic as well as mental accomplishments.

'Spirit would name, and therefore even I won't anent.'] 'Anent' was a Scotch phrase meaning 'concerning'—'with regard to:' it has been made English by the Scotch novels; and, as the Frenchman said, 'If it be not, ought to be English.'

'The milliners who furnish "drapery Misses.]" 'Drapery Misses.'—This term is probably anything now but a mystery. It was, however, almost so to me when I first returned from the East in 1811–1812. It means a pretty, a high-born, a fashionable young female, well instructed by her friends, and furnished by her milliner with a wardrobe upon credit, to be repaid, when married, by the husband. The riddle was first read to me by a young and pretty heiress, on my praising the 'drapery' of the 'untouched' but 'pretty virginities' (like Mrs. Anne Page) of the then day, which has now been some years yesterday; she assured me that the thing was common in London; and as her own thousands, and blooming looks, and rich simplicity of array, put any suspicion in her own case out of the question, I confess I gave some credit to the allegation. If necessary, authorities might be cited; in which case I could quote both 'drapery' and the wearers. Let us hope, however, that it is now obsolete.

'And Mitford in the nineteenth century.'] See Mitford's Greece. 'Græcia Verax.' His great pleasure consists in praising tyrants, abusing Plutarch, spelling oddly, and writing quaintly; and what is strange, after all his is the best modern history of Greece in any language, and he is perhaps the best of all modern historians whatsoever. Having named his sins, it is but fair to state his virtues—learning, labour, research, wrath, and partiality. I call the latter virtues in a writer, because they make him write in earnest.

'A hazy widower turn'd of forty's sure.'] This line may puzzle the commentators more than the present generation.

Page 807, col. 2.

'Like Russians rushing from hot baths to snows.'] The Russians, as is well known, run out from their hot baths to plunge into the Neva; a pleasant practical antithesis, which it seems does them no harm.

Page 808, col. 2.

'Which flash'd as far as where the musk-bull browses.'] For a description and print of this inhabitant of the polar region and native country of the Auroræ Boreales, see Parry's Voyage in search of a North-west Passage.

'As Philip's son proposed to do with Athos.'] A sculptor projected to hew Mount Athos into a statue of Alexander, with a city in one hand, and, I believe, a river in his pocket, with various other similar devices. But Alexander's gone, and Athos remains, I trust ere long to look over a nation of freemen.

'That Scriptures out of church are blasphemies.'] Mrs. Adams answered Mr. Adams, that it was blasphemous to talk of Scripture out of church.
This dogma was broached to her husband—the best Christian in any book.—See Joseph Andrews.

'Should have a hook, and a small trout to pull
' It would have taught him humanity at least.
This sentimental savage, whom it is a mode to quote (amongst the novelists) to show their sympathy for innocent sports and old songs, teaches how to sew up frogs, and break their legs by way of experiment, in addition to the art of angling, the cruelest, the coldest, and the stupidest of pretended sports. They may talk about the beauties of nature, but the angler merely thinks of his dish of fish; he has no leisure to take his eyes from off the streams, and a single bite is worth to him more than all the scenery around. Besides, some fish bite best on a rainy day. The whale, the mark, and the tunny fishery have somewhat of the noble and perilous in them; even net fishing, trawling, &c., are more humane and useful. But angling!—No angler can be a good man.

'One of the best men I ever knew,—as humane, delicate-minded, generous, and excellent a creature as any in the world,—was an angler: true, he was angling with painted flies, and would have been incapable of the extravagances of I. Walton.'

The above addition was made by a friend in reading over the MS.:—"Audi alteram partem."— leave it to counterbalance my own observation.

'And never craned, and made but few "faux cranes."'] Craning.—"To crane" is, or was, an expression used to denote a gentleman's stretching out his neck over a hedge, to look before he stepped;—a pause in his 'vaulting ambition,' which in the field doth occasion some delay and recreation in those who may be immediately behind the equestrian sceptic. 'Sir, if you don't choose to take the leap, let me!—was a phrase which generally sent the aspirant on again; and of good purpose: for though "the horse and rider" might fall, they made a gap through which, and over him and his steed, the field might follow.

'Ask'd next day, "If men ever hunted twice?"']
See his Letters to his Son.

Page 827, col. 1.

'Go to the coffee-house, and take another.'] In Swift's or Horace Walpole's letters I think it is mentioned that somebody, regretting the loss of a friend, was answered by an universal Pyliades:
When I lose one, I go to the Saint James's Coffeehouse, and take another.' I recollect having heard an anecdote of the same kind. Sir W. D. was a great gamester. Coming in one day to the club of which he was a member, he was observed to look melancholy. 'What is the matter, Sir William?'
said Hare, of facetious memory. 'Ah!' replied

Sir W., 'I have just lost poor Lady D.'—'Lost!
What at? Quinze or Hazard?' was the consolatory rejoinder of the querist.

Page 828, col. 1.

'And I refer you to wise Oxenstiern.'] The famous Chancellor Oxenstiern said to his son, on the latter expressing his surprise upon the great effects arising from petty causes in the presumed mystery of politics: 'You see by this, my son, with how little wisdom the kingdoms of the world are governed.'

'Great Socrates? And thou, Diviner still.'] As it is necessary in these times to avoid ambiguity, I say that I mean, by 'Diviner still,' CHRIST. If ever God was man—or man God—he was both.
I never arraigned his creed, but the use, or abuse—made of it. Mr. Canning one day quoted Christianity to sanction negro slavery, and Mr. Wilberforce had little to say in reply. And was Christ crucified that black men might be scourged? If so, he had better been born a Mulatto, to give both colours an equal chance of freedom, or at least salvation.

Page 836, col. 1.

'When Rapp the Harmonist embargo'd marriage.'] This extraordinary and flourishing German colony in America does not entirely exclude matrimony, as the 'Shakers' do; but lays such restrictions upon it as prevents more than a certain quantum of births within a certain number of years; which births (as Mr. Hulme observes) generally arrive 'in a little flock like those of a farmer's lambs, all within the same month perhaps.' These Harmonists (so called from the name of their settlement) are represented as a remarkably flourishing, pious, and quiet people.
See the various recent writers on America.

Page 836, col. 2.

'Nor canvass what "so eminent a hand"
meant.'] Jacob Tonson, according to Mr. Pope, was accustomed to call his writers 'able pens,'
'persons of honour,' and especially 'eminent hands.' Vide Correspondence, &c. &c.

'Of Brutus at the pageant of Tiberius.'] See

Page 839, col. 2.

'(There's fame)—young partridge fillets, deck'd with truffles.'] A dish 'à la Lucullus.' This hero, who conquered the East, has left his more extended celebrity to the transplantation of cherries (which he first brought into Europe), and the nomenclature of some very good dishes:—and I am not sure that (barring indigestion) he has not done more service to mankind by his cookery than by his conquests. A cherry-tree may weigh against a bloody laurel; besides, he has contrived to earn celebrity from both.

'If from a shell-fish or from cochineal.'] The composition of the old Tyrian purple, whether from a shell-fish, or from cochineal, or from kermes, is still an article of dispute; and even its colour—some say purple, others scarlet: I say nothing.

Page 848, col. 1.

'Was much consoled by his own repartee.'] I think that it was a carpet on which Diogenes trod, with—'Thus I trample on the pride of Plato!'—'With greater pride,' as the other replied. But as carpets are meant to be trodden upon, my memory probably misgives me, and it might be a robe, or tapestry, or a tablecloth, or some other expensive and uncynical piece of furniture.

'To soothe our ears, lest Italy should fail.'] I remember that the mayoress of a provincial town, somewhat surfeited with a similar display from foreign parts, did rather indecorously break through the applauses of an intelligent audience—intelligent, I mean, as to music—for the words, besides being in recondite languages (it was some years before the peace, ere all the world had travelled, and while I was a collegian), were sorely disguised by the performers:—this mayoress, I say, broke out with, 'Rot your Italianos! for my part, I loves a simple ballat!' Rossini will go a good way to bring most people to the same opinion, some day. Who would imagine that he was to be the successor of Mozart? However, I state this with diffidence, as a liege and loyal admirer of Italian music in general, and of much of Rossini's; but we may say, as the connoisseur did of painting, in 'The Vicar of Wakefield,' 'that the picture would be better painted if the painter had taken more pains.'

'For Gothic daring shown in English money.']
'Ausu Romano ære Veneto' is the inscription (and well inscribed in this instance) on the sea walls between the Adriatic and Venice. The walls were a republican work of the Venetians; the inscription, I believe, imperial; and inscribed by Napoleon the First. It is time to continue to him that title—there will be a second by and by, 'Spes altera mundi,' if he live; let him not defeat it like his father. But, in any case, he will be preferable to Imbeciles. There is a glorious field for him, if he know how to cultivate it.—[Napoleon, Duke of Reichstadt, died at Vienna, July 22, 1832—to the disappointment of many prophets. He had just completed his twenty-first year.]

And champion me to the utterance.'—Macbeth.

'They err—'tis merely what is call'd mobility.']
In French 'mobilité.' I am not sure that mobility is English; but it is expressive of a quality which rather belongs to other climates, though it is sometimes seen to a great extent in our own. It may be defined as an excessive susceptibility of immediate impressions—at the same time without losing the past; and is, though sometimes apparently useful to the possessor, a most painful and unhappy attribute.
